We are sorry to hear that Mr. John Kemble, so long an ornament of the British stage, expired of an apoplectic fit, at Lausanne, on the 25th of February.

Just published, in 2 vols. 12mo. price 16s. boards,

HORTUS ANGLICUS; or, the Modern English Garden; containing a familiar Description of all the Plants which are cultivated in the climate of Great Britain, either for use or ornament, and of a Selection from the established favourites of the Stove and Green-house; arranged according to the System of Linnæus; with Remarks on the Properties of the more valuable Species.

"This work is calculated to diffuse a knowledge of ornamental Gardening and a taste for Botanical Studies, which, indeed, are now justly considered to form an essential part of an accomplished and scientific education. It is also written in an easy, intelligible, and compendious guide to an acquaintance with our native plants. The descriptions are clear, and the remarks on the different genera useful and interesting. Along with an account of each species, the time of flowering, the native country, and the date of its introduction into this kingdom, are stated."—Monthly Censor, Dec. 1822.

"The Hortus Anglicus is chiefly founded on the list of plants cultivated in the Royal Botanical Garden at Kew. The generalcharacters are extracted from Willdenow's Species Plantarum, and the place of each genus is inserted, both according to Linnæus and Jussieu. Many other works of acknowledged merit have been used to supply the remaining parts of this useful compilation, and the whole work is put together very clearly and methodically."—British Critic, Nov. 1822.

Also lately published, by the same Author,

THE BRITISH BOTANIST; or, a Familiar Introduction to the Science of Botany, explaining the Physiology of Vegetation, and the Principles both of the artificial and natural Systems of Linnæus, and also the arrangement of Jussieu; to which is added, a Synopsis, or View of the British Genera; in which the Derivation and Meaning of the Name of each Genus are given, the whole intended chiefly for the Use of Young Persons. With 15 Plates, 12mo. 7s. 6d. or with the Plates coloured, 10s. 6d.

"This work is one of the most simple and unpretending introductory manuals which has ever chanced to fall in our way. Besides an explanation of the classes and orders of Linnæus, which, after all, must be considered only as a dry Dictionary of Names, much information is also given as to the nature, uses, and cultivation of different Plants. Annexed to these also is a brief Analysis of the System of Jussieu, which, on the Continent, has already been able, in a great measure, to supersede the arrangement of his great Botanical predecessor. The whole is conveyed in plain terms, which, in a book of science, we hold to be the greatest of all possible recommendations."—British Critic, Nov. 1822.

"In this Treatise we have one of the most unexceptionable preliminary guides that has fallen within the range of our cognizance; for it is perspicuous without prolixity, correct without pedantic formality; and comprehensive without intricacy or irrelevant digression. Altogether, therefore, this publication promises to conduct the young Ladies and Gentlemen of our Island into the Temple of Flora, without a greater expenditure of trouble or effort than they often bestow on the most frivolous amusements."—Monthly Review for Dec. 1821.

In the volume for 1822 of "Time's Telescope" this work is also spoken of very favourably.

Printed for C. and J. Rivington, Waterloo-place and St. Paul's Church-yard.

SHAKESPEARE.—NEW EDITIONS.—Just published,
THE PLAYS of WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, with Notes, selected by A. CHALMERS, Esq. F.S.A. from the editions of [illegible], handsomely printed in Eight Volumes Octavo, with a Portrait, price 3l. 12s. boards.

2. The same Work, very neatly printed in Ten Pocket Volumes, with Glossarial Notes, and a Portrait, price 1l. 10s. in boards.

3. The same on royal paper, in Ten Volumes, price 2l. in boards.

Printed for C. and J. Rivington; T. Kerslake; J. Cuthell; J. Scatcherd and Co.; Cadell; J. and W. T. Clarke; J. Booker; J. Booker, Bond-street; J. M. Richardson; R. H. Evans; J. Mawman; R. Scholey; W. Boden; C. Brown; R. Pheney; Baldwin and Co.; Baynes and Son; Ogle and Co.; T. Hamilton; W. Wood; Whittaker and Treacher; Longman and Co.; T. Tegg; E. Edwards; W. Mason; G. Mackie; J. Hatchard; Wilkie; G. and W. B. Whittaker; Kingsbury and Co.; Hurst, Robinson and Co.; Simpkin and Co.; and R. Saunders: also by Deighton and Sons, Cambridge; Wilson and Sons, York; by Stirling and Slade, A. Black, P. Brown, and Fairbairn, Edinburgh. Of whom may be had,

A New and Complete Edition of the PLAYS and POEMS of WILLIAM SHAKESPEARE, with the Corrections and Illustrations of various Commentators; comprehending the Life of the Poet and an enlarged History of the Stage. By the late E. MALONE. Edited by the late Mr. Boswell. With Portraits. In 21 vols. 8vo. price 12l. 12s. in boards.

NEW EDITION of BISHOP MANT'S FAMILY COMMON PRAYER.—Just published, dedicated, by permission, to the most Rev. the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, price 11. 16s. in boards, on medium, and 2l. 12s. on royal paper,

THE BOOK of COMMON PRAYER, with NOTES, Explanatory, Practical, and Historical, from approved Writers of the Church of England, selected and arranged by the Right Rev. R. MANT, Lord Bishop of Killaloe and Kilfenora: printed for J. Parker; and C. and J. Rivington, Booksellers to the Church-yard, and Waterloo-place, London; and sold by all Booksellers in Oxford and country. ☞ This Work may still be had in Parts, for the convenience of purchasers; on medium paper, at 4s. and royal at 8s. each Part.

Just published, in 2 vols. 8vo. price 1l. 1s. in boards,

A TREATISE on the GENIUS and OBJECT of the PATRIARCHAL, the LEVITICAL, and the CHRISTIAN DISPENSATIONS. By the Rev. G. S. FABER, Rector of Long Newton.—Printed for F. C. and J. Rivington, St. Paul's Church-yard, and Waterloo-place, Pall-mall; of whom may be had, by the same Author,

1. The ORIGIN of PAGAN IDOLATRY, ascertained from History, Chronology, and circumstantial Evidence. With 3 Engravings, 3 vols. 12s.
2. DISSERTATIONS on the PROPHECIES, in 6 vols. 8vo. 3l. 3s.
3. SERMONS, in 2 vols. 8vo. 11.4s.
4. DISSERTATION on the MYSTERIES of the CABIRI; 2 vols. 12s.
5. HORÆ MOSAICÆ; or, a Dissertation on the Pentateuch, 8s. 11.4s.

To-morrow will be published, price 6d.

THE CRISIS of ENGLAND; an Appeal to the People of the COUNTRY GENTLEMAN.

"Who's here so base that does not love his country?"

Printed for Gosnling and Exley, New Bond-street.

Just published, by S. Highley, 174, Fleet-street,

PRACTICAL RESEARCHES on the NATURE, CURE, and PREVENTION of GOUT, in all its open and concealed forms. With Critical Examination of some Celebrated Remedies and Modes of Treatment employed in this disease. By J. JOHNSON, M.D. 8vo. 5s. 6d. boards.

A COMPLETE TREATISE on the NATURE, SYMPTOMS, and CURE of LUES VENEREA. By J. FOOT, Surgeon. A new edition, much corrected. 8vo 12s. boards.

NORWICH UNION FIRE INSURANCE SOCIETY.
CAPITAL £550,000.

Trustees.

Hon. Col. Wodehouse, M.P. Lieut. of the County of Norfolk
Sir Jacob Astley, Bart.
Thomas William Coke, Esq. M.P.
J. C. Curwen, Esq. M.P.
Richard H. Gurney, Esq.
Henry H. Henley, Esq.
George Cubitt, Esq.

Directors.

Jeremiah Ives, Esq. Norwich, Banker, President.
John Browne, Esq. Alderman, Norwich, Vice-President.
E. T. Booth, Esq. Alderman
T. S. Day, Esq. Alderman
Hammond Fisk, Esq.
John Harvey, Esq. Alderman
William Herring, Esq. Alderman
A. Hodgson, Esq. Banker
J. S. Patteson, Esq. Alderman
J. W. Robberds, Esq. Norwich
William Simpson, Esq.
Samuel Stone, Esq.

LONDON BOARD.

Charles Saville Onley, Esq. M. P. Great George-street, Westminster, Secretary of Norwich.
John Wright, Esq. Banker, Henrietta-street, Covent garden.
Wm. Berners, Esq. merchant, Queen Ann-street, Westminster.
Mr. R. J. Banyon, Waterloo place, Pall Mall.

The very decided preference which this Society receives, as evinced by the statement of duties, sufficiently marks the public approbation of the principles on which it is conducted. The Insured receive £60 per cent. of the profits at the end of every three or five years, with entire exoneration from all responsibility, the whole engagements of the Society being guaranteed by a capital of £550,000.

Insurances may be transferred to this Office without any expense.

Rates are the same as at other Offices.

STATEMENT of Duties paid by the London and principal Country Offices, for the year ending at the 29th September, 1822.

	£	s.	d.		£
Sun	113,924	3	5	Eagle	15,18
Phœnix	65,525	14	8	Albion	14,96
Norwich Union	62,954	12	2	Westminster	10,7
Royal Exchange	51,956	19	5	Hope	10,0
County	39,558	5	2	Hand in Hand	10,0
Imperial	33,453	3	10	British	12,7
Globe	29,192	2	11	Guardian	12,8
Union	16,662	11	5	London	13,9
Atlas	18,266	10	9	Beacon	6
West of England	15,203	5	1

The New Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society has its head Office in Surrey-street, Norwich, and transacts business in London at 16, Waterloo-place, Pall Mall, and 21, Birchin-lane, Cornhill.

It has no connection with an Office advertised under the same name in Bridge-street, Blackfriars.

STRATFIELDSAYE, HANTS.—TO BE SOLD, BY PRIVATE CONTRACT, a valuable FREEHOLD FARM and LAND, called Stratfieldsaye, in the county of Hants, in the centre of the Domain of the Duke of Wellington. Consisting of a very substantial built farm-house, with necessary agricultural buildings, good garden, orchard and yard, and 66 acres of arable meadow and pasture land, well stocked with timber and young timber. The Estate is capable of great improvement, abounds in game, and is in the immediate vicinity of Sir John Cope's, and Mr. Chute's hounds. For further particulars, an Abstract for the purchase, apply to Messrs. Hamilton and Twining, Solicitors, 31, Berwick-street, Soho; Mr. Isaac Beenham, and Mr. George Frankum, Woolhampton, Berks; or by letter addressed (post paid) to Mr. Thomas Frankum, Attorney at Law, Aldermaston, Berks.

SALE BY AUCTION.

HORSE BAZAAR, King street, Portman square, for the SALE of HORSES by AUCTION and COMMISSION, by GEORGE YOUNG, on Saturday next, (and each succeeding Saturday) precisely at Twelve o'clock.

SEVERAL LOTS of HORSES, many of them suitable for Saddle and Stage Masters.

N.B. A great variety of Horses in addition to the above, are constantly on Sale by Commission at the Bazaar, and amongst them are a considerable number of fine young Horses, consisting of superior Hunters, Hacks, and Coach Horses.

G. Young begs to inform Gentlemen that have Horses for Sale, that there is a considerable demand.

PRICES of the PUBLIC FUNDS.

STOCKS.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thur.	Fri
Bank Stock	236	236	—	—	—
3 per Cent. Reduced	73⅞	74⅛	—	—	—
3 per Cent. Consols	74⅛	73⅞	73⅞	73⅞	73⅞
3½ per Cent. Consols	85⅞	86⅛	86⅛	86⅛	—
Consols for Account	73⅞	73⅞	73⅞	73⅞	73⅞
4 per Cent. Consols	98⅛	—	—	—	—
New 4 per Cent.	92⅝	93⅛	93⅛	93⅛	93⅛
Bank Long Annuities	—	—	—	—	—
India Bonds	23 p	22 p	24 p	24 p	23 p
Exchequer Bills, 2d.	11 p	10 p	11 p	11 p	11 p
Ditto, 3d.	—	—	—	—	—
Columbian Bonds	—	—	—	—	—

MARRIED.

Yesterday, at St. Luke's, Chelsea, Robert Raymond Stewart, Esq. to Anne, eldest daughter of the late Rev. Thomas Scott, of Watton green, Herts.

March 6, H. R. Reynolds, jun. Esq. to Mary Anne, daughter of Sir E. Knatchbull, Bart.—On Monday last, John Leckmere, Esq. R. N. to Maria, youngest daughter of the late Hon. Andrew Foley, M. P.

DIED.

On Friday, after a lingering illness, Mr. John Willis, Villiers-street. On the 6th, at Hampton, the infant son of the Rev. Geo. Hemming. Park, Essex, aged 21, Wm. Harvey, Esq. only son of Admiral Sir E. M.P.—On Sunday, at Stoke Cottage, near Guildford, Lady Burnaby, Admiral Sir Wm. Burnaby, Bart.—March 5, 71, Lieut.-Gen. G. The very Rev. the Dean of Salisbury.—At Glasgow, Capt. Mackay, of Commander in the Navy.—Lady Lydia Turnour, daughter of Lord Winchilsea. Sir M. M. Sykes, Bart.—Lady Lilford.—Mr. Hewitt, the celebrated vocalist. In Stratton-street, Mrs. General Crauford, 48.—C. Drummond Esq. of Cross.—At Bath, Lady Blount.—Lord Ashburton.

LONDON: Printed and Published by E. SHACKELL, No. 11, JOHNSON'S-COURT FLEET-STREET, to whom only Communications to the Editor (post paid) are requested.

JOHN BULL.

" FOR GOD, THE KING, AND THE PEOPLE!"

No. 118. SUNDAY, MARCH 16, 1823. Price 7d.

WAR OFFICE, March 4, 1823.

THE ANNUAL ARMY LIST, with an INDEX, is in course of publication, and may be had of T. Egerton, bookseller to the Ordnance Military Library, Whitehall.

MR. T. COOKE most respectfully returns his grateful acknowledgments to the Nobility and Gentry, Subscribers to the " ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC," for the very obliging and effective support which has placed his Son at the head of the Poll for Boys, at the late Election of Students for the Foundation of that Institution. His Son, fully sensible of the honour he has received, will be ever anxious to render himself worthy of such exalted patronage.

10th March, 22, Manchester-street, Manchester-square.

NEW ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE.—MR. F. CRAMER most respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that his CONCERT will take place on MONDAY, MAY the 12th, at the above Rooms, particulars of which will be duly announced.

MESSRS. GREATOREX, W. KNYVETT, and F. VAUGHAN, respectfully acquaint the Nobility, Gentry, and their Friends generally, that their respective CONCERTS take place this Season on the 25th of April, the 2d of May, and the 9th of May, at the King's Concert Rooms, Hanover-square. Particulars will be duly advertized.

OXFORD TRIENNIAL MUSICAL FESTIVAL.—The Public are respectfully informed by the Stewards of the Music Room, Oxford, that the Vice-Chancellor has consented that the COMMEMORATION CONCERTS shall take place in the SECOND WEEK in JUNE NEXT, and the Curators have granted the use of the Theatre for the occasion. Extensive Preparations are making upon the grandest scale to render the Orchestra as complete as possible in the Vocal as well as in the Instrumental Department. An arrangement has been adopted for regulating the Price of Lodgings during the Festival.—Oxford, March 9, 1823.

MOZART'S MUSIC.—In the press, and shortly will be published by CLEMENTI AND CO. 26, CHEAPSIDE.

MOZART'S celebrated Symphony, " THE JUPITER," newly adapted for the Piano Forte, Flute, Violin, and Violoncello, by Muzio Clementi. The other Symphonies of that great Master will follow in succession, with as little delay as possible, and the series is intended to correspond with Clementi's well known arrangement of Haydn's 12 Grand Symphonies. Also, in a few days, will be ready, a new Edition of the Single Pieces from Haydn's celebrated Oratorio, " THE CREATION," arranged with a Piano Forte accompaniment, by M. CLEMENTI.

☞ C. and Co.'s complete Catalogue of Vocal and Instrumental Music, for 1823, is now ready for delivery. Price 2s. 6d.

NEW MUSIC.—PIANO FORTE.—" Introduzione ed Aria all'Inglese," by J. B. Cramer, price 3s. 6d.; Rondo on the admired Duet in " Maid Marian," by F. Kalkbrenner, pr. 3s.; " Rondo on the popular Duet " As it fell upon a day," by T. Ries, pr. 3s.; Caledonian Fantasie, (originally by Boehm, for the Harp) with " Scots wha hae," by G. Kiallmark, price 3s.; a second French Air, varied by J. Jay, Mus. Doc. pr. 3s.; Airs in the " Beggars' Opera, as Duets, by J. F. Burrowes, in 3 books, pr. 3s. 6d. each; Airs in " Maid Marian," as Duets, by D. Bruguier, in books, pr. 4s. each.—HARP—Caledonian Fantasie, with " Scots wha hae," price 3s. 6d.; " Celle que j'aime tant," French air, with variations, pr. 3s. 6d.; fifteen brilliant and short preludes, price 4s. all by N. Ch. Bochsa.—VOCAL—The whole of the Music in " Maid Marian," composed by H. R. Bishop, pr. 18s. The Overture, Songs, Duets, and Glees may be had separate. " Young Ellen," Romance by H. R. Bishop, pr. 1s. 6d.—Published by Goulding, D'Almaine, Potter, and Co. 20, Soho-square.

NEW MUSIC.—Published by the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, The Night is Rainy, glee for three voices, sung by Mrs. Salmon and Messrs. Evans and Welsh, at the British Concerts, composed by T. Welsh, price 2s. 6d.; Sleep Baby Mine, sung by Miss Goodall, at the British Concerts, composed by W. Hawes, price 2s.; Lady, this Wilhier'd Rosebud take, ballad, composed by F. W. Crouch, price 2s. The following Songs and Duetts from the new Opera of La donna del Lago, composed by Rossini:—Aurora che Sorgeral, the favourite cavatina, sung by Carioni, price 1s.; Elena! oh ti n, ch'io Chiamo, cavatina, sung by Madame Vestris, price 2s.; Oh Mattutini albori! duett, sung by Madame Ronzi de Begnis and Signor Curioni, price 3s.; Vivere in non Potro, duett, sung by Madame Ronzi de Begnis and Madame Vestris, price 1s. 6d. First set of Scotch Quadrilles, (chiefly selected from Mr. Hawes's arrangement of Scottish Songs) adapted for the Piano-forte, by J. T. Craven, price 3s.; Rondoletto, on a favourite Notturno, by Paer, for the Piano-forte, composed by Ignace Moscheles, price 3s.; Air Martial, arranged as a Rondo for the Piano-forte, with an introduction, in which is introduced the favourite air of " The Death Song of the Cherokee Indian," composed by J. W. Holder, Mus. Bac. Oxon, price 3s.

NEW MUSIC, just published by Mayhew and Co. No. 17, Old Bond-street.

HART'S THIRD SET of SCOTCH QUADRILLES, including the celebrated and admired Airs of " The Campbells are coming," " Argyle is my name," " Corn rigge," " O whistle, and I'll come to you," and " Loch Erroch side," with entire new figures, composed and arranged for the Piano Forte or Harp, and respectfully dedicated to Lady Grey, by Joseph Hart. 3s.

The great success which attended the publication of Mr. Hart's First and Second Sets of Scotch Quadrilles, has induced him to offer a Third Set to the notice of the Nobility and Gentry, which he trusts will prove worthy their patronage.

Also just published, HART'S SIXTH SET of QUADRILLES, selected from Rossini's popular Opera of " La Gazza Ladra," as danced at Almack's and the Nobility's Balls. Arranged for the Piano Forte or Harp. Price 4s.

London: Mayhew and Co. Music-sellers to the Royal Family, 17, Old Bond-street, where may be obtained,

New Editions of Hart's Fifth Set, from " Il Turco in Italia;" also his Fourth Set, including, George the Fourth's Coronation Waltz," Celebrated Hussars," with the admired " La Cendrillon," and Irish Quadrilles, containing the Rose, Shamrock, Thistle, Emerald Isle, and the Sovereign, all of which are in constant demand.

SPANISH GUITAR.—Signior BERTIOLI, Teacher and Professor of the above Instrument and Singing, respectfully informs the Nobility and Gentry, that he gives LESSONS on both, on moderate terms, either at home or abroad. Signior B. has published several Sets of Ariettes, of his own composition, which may be had at Mitchell's Music-shop, 28, New Bond-street, or at his own residence, 3, Lower John street, Golden-square.

HEATHER on the PRESENT STATE of PIANO FORTE STUDY.—Just published, by H. Falkner, 3, Old Bond-street, a new edition of the above Work, price 10s. 6d.

" Mr. Heather sets out with a preface, which, we confess, strongly biassed us in his favour; it is not only well and sensibly written, but it also shews that the author thinks and feels rightly on the subject of which he treats. We regret that our limits prevent us from giving an extract of his judicious observations on practice, expression, &c.; they are eminently worthy of the serious attention of every Pupil that wishes to be a proficient in the art. In the work itself we met with many occasional remarks, which equally shewed the author's good sense, the justness of his views, and, we may add, considerable experience in the art of instruction."—Vide Musical Review.

GREAT ROOM, SPRING GARDENS.—NOVELTY.—MARSHALL'S Grand Historical Peristrephic PANORAMA of the CEREMONY of the CORONATION, the Coronation, Procession and the Banquet, painted on 10 000 square feet of canvas, displaying nearly 100,000 figures, upwards of 500 of the principal characters on the foreground the size of life. The movement of the Panorama gives such an imposing and striking illusion, that the spectators are led to believe themselves present at the different splendid ceremonies it represents; the whole accompanied by a full Military Band, assisted by a Finger Organ and Trumpets, who perform the Coronation Music.—WILL OPEN TO-MORROW.—Day Exhibitions to commence at 12, 1, 2, 3, and 4 o'clock; and in the Evening, brilliantly illuminated, at 7, 8, and 9 o'clock.—Admission, Boxes, 2s.; Gallery, 1s.; Descriptive Book, 6d.

BRITISH INSTITUTION, PALL-MALL.—The Gallery for the Exhibition and Sale of the Works of Modern Artists IS OPEN Daily, from Ten in the Morning until Five in the Evening.—Admission 1s. Catalogue 1s. (By Order) JOHN YOUNG, Keeper.

The Subscribers to the Print from Mr. West's picture of " Our Saviour healing the Sick in the Temple," who have not already received their impressions, may receive them, upon payment of the remainder of their subscriptions, at the British Institution daily.

CORONATION.—HENRY ASTON BARKER'S PANORAMA, Leicester square.—Now Open, a Grand Representation of the CORONATION PROCESSION, with Portraits of HIS MAJESTY, GEORGE the FOURTH, the ROYAL DUKES, and several others; particularly of the late Marquis of LONDONDERRY, in the full Habits of the Order of the Garter. The Panorama exhibits at least Thirty Thousand Figures!!!—A VIEW of LAUSANNE, with the LAKE of GENEVA, is also open.—Admittance to each Painting, 1s.

CHAPEAU DE PAILLE, by P. P. RUBENS. This celebrated Picture of the renowned Antwerp Beauty is now exhibiting at Mr. Stanley's Rooms, No. 21, Old Bond-street.—Admittance, One Shilling, Memorandum of the Picture, Sixpence.—Open from 9 till 5.—It is expected that no person will attempt to sketch or copy from the Picture.

MR. HAYDON'S GREAT PICTURE of LAZARUS, which has been nearly three years on the easel, is NOW OPEN at the Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, Ground Floor to the right. Admission, 1s.; Catalogue, 6d.

DRAWINGS by the Late BENJAMIN WEST, ESQ. P. R. A.—THE NEW GALLERY, 14, Newman-street, is NOW OPEN, with the addition of a Room appropriated to DRAWINGS by the late President of the Royal Academy. Open from Ten till Five.—Admission, 1s.; Catalogue, 1s.

MISS LINWOOD'S GALLERIES of PICTURES, in Leicester-square, are RE-OPENED with new DECORATIONS, ALTERATIONS, and ADDITIONS, and will continue open every day, (Sundays excepted) from nine o'clock in the morning until dark.—Admittance, 2s. Children, 1s.

THE GERMAN and FRENCH LANGUAGES TAUGHT, at home and abroad, and also at 155, Cheapside, by A. BERNAYS, a native of Germany, educated in a French Lycée, and a married man. To the efficacy of his plan of tuition, and respectability of character, Mr. B. can refer to the great number of respectable Pupils he has had the honour to teach since his arrival in this country. For particulars apply at his residence, 26, Hadlow-street, Brunswick-square, or as above.

TWO CLERGYMEN and SCHOOLMASTERS.—A GOOD SALARY is offered to a Gentleman of extensive and respectable connexions, who is able to bring with him, at Easter or Midsummer next, a few Pupils to an old established School, twelve miles from London. He must be fully qualified to teach the Greek and Latin Classics, and assume the direction of the School in the absence of the principal. To any Gentleman having views to succeed to the Establishment at such period as may be agreed upon, the present affords an opportunity rarely to be met with, as the situation and the premises are equal to the most favoured in the kingdom.—Letters, containing real name and address, and otherwise candid and explicit, post-paid, to B. B. Read's Coffee-house, Fleet-street, will be answered in the course of a few days, and an interview appointed.

Just published, by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London, price 2s. boards,

BLIGHTED AMBITION; or, THE RISE AND FALL OF SOMERSET.

A very popular critic, speaking of this work, says, " We were not only much pleased and interested by the work, but surprised at its vast superiority over the general run of similar publications—we might, perhaps, excite too much expectation, and even injure its effect, by mentioning the name of Sir Walter Scott, or any of his historical novels, in the same paragraph, because there is, in every thing he writes, the brilliant, outshining touch of the master, " unequalled and alone," but we have no hesitation in saying, that next after those talented works we should place the historical tale in question.—It contains the history of the " Rise and Fall of Somerset," and we lament that we cannot afford space for some extracts, which, we are quite sure, would justify our praise to our readers. Our sincere feeling when we had read the book was, that of regret that any thing so superior should be so little known, as it apparently is, and that an author (whoever he may be) so capable of enlightening and entertaining us, should, perhaps, be deterred from making valuable additions to the literature of our country, merely because his ambition might in truth be blighted by neglect in his outset. With this sentiment we again beg to recommend his volumes to the notice of the public."—JOHN BULL, March 9.

" We think very highly of this performance: the writer has practised habits of thinking; a correct and manly style of delivery; keen perceptions of character; with much of that most desirable quality in authorship—self-command; and he is in possession of one important requisite for a novelist—an extensive knowledge of localities and costume. Old boundaries are marked, old places and buildings are described, and old dresses, manners, and peculiarities painted, with a minuteness only equalled, and scarcely excelled, by that chronicler of chroniclers, the author of 'Waverley.'"—Literary Register.

NEW TRAGEDY.

To-morrow, will be published, by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave Maria-lane, JULIAN; a TRAGEDY, in Five Acts, as performing at Covent Garden Theatre.

Just published, price 21s. bds.

VALPERGA; or, the Life and Adventures of Castruccio, Prince of Lucca. By the Author of Frankenstein. In 3 vols. 12mo.

Printed for C. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

" Valperga is a work which only requires to be read, in order to be ardently admired; and we venture to prophecy that it will maintain its station upon the favourite shelf of every good library, when thousands of works of a similar description, that have had some popularity, shall have sunk into eternal oblivion."—Literary Chronicle, Feb. 22, 1823.

Just published, in 8vo. price 12s. bds. a new edition of INSTITUTES of LATIN GRAMMAR. By JOHN GRANT, A.M. Second Edition, enlarged.

Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

" The favourable reception which this work has experienced, is truly gratifying to the author, and has encouraged him to employ his best efforts to render the present edition more worthy of attention. It will be found to be augmented by a variety of information on interesting topics, to a much greater extent than is indicated by a mere number of additional pages."

Just published, in 12mo. price 3s. in boards.

CHRISTMAS STORIES; containing John Wildgoose, the Poacher; the Smuggler; and Good Nature, or Parish Matters.

Printed for C. and J. Rivington, St. Paul's Church-yard, and Waterloo-place, Pall mall; and J. Parker, Oxford.

The Three Tales may be had on inferior paper, separately, at 9d. each.

Just published, in 8vo. price 6s. in bds. the Fourteenth Edition of FAMILY WORSHIP; a Course of Morning and Evening Prayers for every Day in the Month; to which is prefixed, a Discourse on Family Religion. By the Rev. JAMES BEAN, M.A. one of the Librarians of the British Museum, and Minister of Welbeck Chapel.—Printed for C. and J. Rivington, St. Paul's Church-yard, and 3, Waterloo place, Pall-mall. Of whom may be had, by the same author,

1. The CHRISTIAN MINISTER'S ADVICE to a NEW MARRIED COUPLE. Sixth Edition. 3s. sewed.

2. EVIDENCES of CHRISTIANITY, stated to an ingenuous mind doubtful of its authority, in a Letter to a Gentleman. Price 1s.

Just published, price 5s. in boards, Vol. 3. of

THE VILLAGE PREACHER; a Collection of Short, Plain Sermons, partly original, partly selected, and adapted to Village Instruction. By a CLERGYMAN of the CHURCH of ENGLAND.—Printed for C. and J. Rivington, St. Paul's Church-yard and Waterloo place, Pall-mall. Of whom may be had, Vols. 1 and 2. price 5s. each.

Just published, in 8vo. price 8s. bound, the thirty-fifth edition of A COMPANION for the FESTIVALS and FASTS of the CHURCH of ENGLAND; with Collects and Prayers for each solemnity. By ROBERT NELSON, Esq.—Printed for C. and J. Rivington; J. Nunn; J. & W. T. Clarke; J. Scatcherd; J. Richardson; J. M. Richardson; Longman and Co.; R. Scholey; J. Booth; Baldwin and Co.; Ogles and Co; T. Hamilton; G. and W. B. Whittaker; and Simpkin and Marshall.

☞ An edition has also been lately printed in 12mo. price 5s. 6d. bound.

Of the same Bookseller may be had, The PRACTICE of TRUE DEVOTION, in relation to the End, as well as the Means, of Religion; with an Office for the Holy Communion.—Printed uniformly with the above. 8vo. price 7s. in boards. Also, in 12mo. price 3s. 6d. bound.

Just published, beautifully printed, in one vol. 12mo. with portrait price 5s. 6d.

THE LIFE and ADVENTURES of JOHN NICOL, Mariner. " My life, for a period of twenty-five years, was a continued succession of change. Twice I circumnavigated the globe; three times I was in China; twice in Egypt; and more than once sailed along the whole land-board of America, from Nootka Sound to Cape Horn."—Author's Introduction.

Printed for Wm. Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, Strand, London.

Just published, elegantly printed in post 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

THE TRIALS of MARGARET LYNDSAY. By the Author of " Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life."

In a few days will be published, in 8vo. price 4s. 6d.

The ITALIAN WIFE. A Tragedy.

Printed for Wm. Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, Strand, London.

PAROCHIAL PSALMODY.

Shortly will be published, dedicated, by permission, to His Majesty,

A COLLECTION of the most approved PSALM TUNES, newly harmonised for four voices, and adapted for Congregational Service. By THOMAS GREATOREX, conductor of His Majesty's Concerts of Antient Music, and Organist of Westminster Abbey.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

[This Gazette contains the appointment of Major-General Sir Edward Barnes, K.C.B. to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of the Island of Ceylon; and the Earl of Erroll to be one of the Lords of His Majesty's Bedchamber, in the room of Lord Amherst.]

Commissions signed by the Lord Lieutenant of the County of Radnor.

The Hon. W. Wilkins and J. H. Powell, Esq. to be Deputy Lieutenants.

Royal Radnorshire Militia: Lord Hatley to be Major-Commandant, vice the Earl of Oxford, res.; J. Barnes, Esq. to be Capt. vice J. Meredith, res.

Commission in the Western Regiment of Northumberland Local Militia.

W. Beaumont, Esq. to be Capt. vice Winship, dec.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

W. TURQUAND, Shorter's-court, Throgmorton-street, broker.

BANKRUPTS.

JAMES MAGNALL, Manchester, merchant—T. PARKER, Fawlett, Somersshire, coal-merchant—J. BYERS, Blackburn, chapman—J. CUZNER, Lullington, Somersetshire, fuller—W. CLEGHORN, Ratcliffe-highway, cheesemonger—T. MEREDITH, Sen. Bishopsgate-street without, leather-seller—A. AGNEW, Great Yarmouth, draper—J. GODFREY, Leicester, plumber—T. WELCHMAN, Rathbone-place, feather-maker—J. CHAMBERS, Wolverhampton, agricultural machine-maker.

BANKRUPTCIES ANNULLED.

JAMES MAGNALL, Manchester, merchant—T. PARKER, Fawlett, Somersshire, coal-merchant—J. BYERS, Blackburn, chapman—J. CUZNER, Lullington, Somersetshire, fuller—W. CLEGHORN, Ratcliffe-highway, cheesemonger—T. MEREDITH, Sen. Bishopsgate-street without, leather-seller—A. AGNEW, Great Yarmouth, draper—J. GODFREY, Leicester, plumber—T. WELCHMAN, Rathbone-place, feather-maker—J. CHAMBERS, Wolverhampton, agricultural machine-maker.

CHILE LOAN.—NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That the Second Half Yearly Dividend, due on the 31st March instant, will be paid on that and every subsequent Day (Sundays excepted) at our Counting-house, No. 102, Leadenhall-street, between the hours of 10 and 2 o'clock.—The Holders of Warrants are requested to leave them, with Lists in numerical order, for examination, on Saturday the 29th instant, or one day previous to the application for payment.—London, 6th March, 1823. HULLETT BROTHERS, and Co.

FOR PASSENGERS ONLY.—For BOMBAY Direct, to SAIL early in MARCH Next, the fine new teak Ship, CHARLES FORBES, Burthen 1000 Tons. THOMAS BRYDIN, Commander. Has excellent accommodations for Passengers, and carries a Surgeon.—Apply to Messrs. Inglis, Forbes, and Co. 2, Mansion House-place; or to William Abercrombie, 4, Birchin-lane.

TO BE DISPATCHED IMMEDIATELY, for POYAIS, the fine, fast-sailing, coppered Brig ALKNOMACK, N. WILLIAMS, Commander; burthen 200 tons, lying in the London Docks. For freight or passage apply to WM. WALKER and Co. Ship and Insurance Brokers, No. 5, Old Broad-street, Royal Exchange.

WESTERN PHILANTHROPIC INSTITUTION, for the RELIEF of the necessitous and deserving POOR.—The ANNUAL BENEFIT, in aid of the Funds of the above Institution, will take place at the THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN, on TUESDAY, the 18th inst. when will be presented the tragedy of Hamlet; the part of Hamlet by Mr. Macready, being his first appearance in that character for two years. To which will be added the Two Pages of Frederick the Great, and the Irish Tutor.

DESIRABLE PROFESSIONAL BUSINESS.—An opportunity now offers for an active Gentleman who may have a knowledge of the FINE ARTS, or of the BOOKSELLING Business, to establish himself in one of the oldest concerns in Bond-street. The principal is retiring from business. Apply personally, or, by letter, post-paid, to G. R. 64, New Bond-street, corner of Brook-street.

WANTED, by a Widow Lady of great respectability, aged 40, a SITUATION in a Nobleman or Gentleman's Family, as Nursery Governess, or as Superintendant of a Widower's House and Family, she having been long accustomed to the management and tuition of children, and only seeking this mode of employing her time from a combination of adverse circumstances, flatters herself she might be an acquisition in either of the above capacities. Address (post paid) to A. S., Mr. Souter's School Library, St. Paul's Church-yard. The most respectable references given.

OLD PORT 35s. Superior SHERRY 36s. and CAPE MADEIRA, 16s. per dozen.—One dozen of each of the above Wines, Bottles, Hampers, &c. included, will be forwarded by a remittance of 5l.; or one dozen Port, and one dozen Sherry, bottles, &c. for 4l.; or two dozen Cape Madeira, bottles, &c. 2l.—Champaignes, last landed, sparkling, creaming, Red and White, (Pris Sclons, Aviae growers,) 4l. 4s. per dozen.—Madeira, Teneriffe, Lisbon, Vidonia, Calcavella, 40s. per dozen.—Old Cognac Brandy, (Otard and Hennesie) 25s. 6d. per gall.—Particular Old Rum, 16s. 6d. per gall.—Old Cordial Gin and Shrub, 12s. per gall.—CHARLES WRIGHT, Wine Merchant to his Royal Highness the Duke of Clarence, next to the King's, and opposite the Haymarket, Theatre, Opera Colonnade, Haymarket, London, who pledges his honour and reputation that the above Wines are genuine as imported.—Fresh emptied Wine Pipes, 17s. each.—Postage to be paid.

Now landing, CHAMPAGNES, from the Duke of York, London Docks, first quality, 64s. per dozen.

CHARLES FOSTER, Wine Merchant, 128, High Holborn, (four doors from the corner of Southampton-street,) invites the attention of the Nobility, Gentry, and Public at large, but more particularly the Inhabitants of the adjoining squares, to his extensive STOCK of WINES, which from the superior advantages he derives by purchasing every thing for Ready Money, he is enabled to offer upon most eligible terms, and by Pledging himself to sell nothing but what is really genuine, flatters himself that a trial is only needed to give satisfaction. C. F. has made the qualities of his Wines his particular study, and confidently affirms they are not to be surpassed by any House in the trade. A single bottle may be had; one dozen sent free of expence, to any parts of town; and six dozen and upwards, to any part of England.

SPLENDID DRAWING-ROOM and DINING-ROOM CURTAINS and BED FURNITURE, at half their former prices, in Swiss Chintzes, Spanish Merino Damasks, Silk Tabborets, Merino Tabborets, Moreens, &c. With the astonishing advantages of an immense and superb assortment, just manufactured, for ready money, and a determination to persevere in their present system of doing business, MILES and EDWARDS challenge all attempts at competition from long established houses, who can only offer Goods which have been accumulating for many years, and which must have cost them full double what they are now worth. Families furnishing their Town and Country Residences, will find, by an inspection of the above matchless Stock, that between Miles and Edwards's prices, and the prices at which other Houses are now selling the same articles, there is a difference of at least 30 per Cent.—No. 134, Oxford-street, between Holles-street and Old Cavendish-street.

THE late WILLIAM SCOTT, Army and Navy Clothier, and Tailor, of Pall Mall, (who was lost in the Earl Moira Irish Packet in the month of August, 1821,) and JUDITH, his widow, who died the 3d inst. All Persons indebted to the Estates of the said William and Judith Scott, are requested to pay the same to the Executors and Executor of the said Judith Scott, widow, at No. 63, late 70, Pall Mall; and all Persons having any demand on the said Estates, are requested to transmit the same. M. and W. SCOTT respectfully beg leave to return their grateful acknowledgments to the Nobility, Gentry, and their Friends, for the liberal favours experienced by their deceased parents; and to inform them they intend to continue the business in all its branches, hoping to enjoy the support and patronage of a liberal Public, in their endeavours to provide for themselves, and their orphan sisters; to merit which, their best exertions shall not be wanting.—63, late 70, Pall Mall, March 15, 1823.

MONEY on EQUITABLE TERMS.—The Advertiser advances MONEY to any extent, at Moderate Interest, whether on Freehold, Copyhold, Leasehold, Lifehold, Funded, Church Livings, or other ample security; and assures those who may honour him with their confidence, that they will experience treatment the most candid, liberal, and explicit, though similar business to sometimes viewed with mistrust, from the mal-practices of disreputable people.—Letters (post-paid) to A. Z. care of Mr. Williams, Glover, Inner Temple-lane, Fleet street, will receive immediate attention; where also a card of address may be had. Reversions are purchased.

ALE, STOUT, CIDER, &c.—THOMAS FIELD and SON beg to acquaint their Friends and the Public, that their genuine Burton, Edinburgh, Taunton, and Welsh Ales, Dorchester Beer, Brown Stout, Cider, Perry, &c. are in fine order for use. They have also a very superior Stock of Foreign Wines, Cape Madeira, Brandy, Rum, Hollands, Geneva, and Orange Shrub; and they have been enabled to make a considerable reduction in the prices of several articles.—22, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—The rude and unskilful attempts constantly made to supply these substitutes for the masticatory organ, and the disgust which delicacy suffers from the unpleasantry attending them when permanently fixed, have deterred many from adopting the aid so comfortary a species of Dentistry, independent of the assistance they may contribute to digestion and consequent health. The ingenious application of mechanical science will enable us to obviate all these inconveniences, and allow the wearer at all times to keep the mouth in a state of perfect cleanliness, and to perform the functions of mastication, articulation, &c. with decided ease and comfort.—Mr. NICHOLLS begs to state, that he is in constant attendance from ten to four, and will be happy to give any demonstration of the comforts derived from his efforts, under every circumstance of simple and complicated deficiency.—115, Fleet-street.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

ORDNANCE OFFICE, March 7, 1823.

Royal Regt. of Artillery—Sec. Capts. J. Grant, vice Marlow, retired; and J. Gordon, vice Walsh, retired, to be Sec. Capts.—Corps of Royal Engineers—Sec. Lieut. J. Radcliff, to be Sec. Lieut. vice Burgess, retired.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

Johnson and Burgess, York-place, City-road—Atkinson and Price, Leeds, surgeons—T. Lowe and Co. Derby, common brewers, so far as respects H. and G. Lowe—M'Adam and Henderson, Shrewsbury, tea-dealers—Richards and Horden, Deepmoor Mills, millers—Crouch and Evcans, Wandsworth, wheelwrights—H. and M. Bidwell, Norwich, woollen drapers—Knowles and Shawcross, Manchester, linen-drapers.

BANKRUPTCY ENLARGED.

L. H. MARTELLY and J. DAYRIE, Finsbury-square, merchants, from March 15 to April 12.

BANKRUPTS.

T. and J. TAIT, Dover-road, Southwark, brewers—C. EICKE, Aldermanbury, dealer—L. THOMPSON, Hessle, Kingston-upon-Hull, miller.

DIVIDENDS.

At the Court of Commissioners of Bankrupts—April 5, J. Carey, Raquet-court, Fleet-street, merchant—April 19, G. Smeeton, St. Martin's-lane, printer—April 22, F. Forbes, Greenwich, druggist—April 12, W. F. A. Dufoir, Berners-street, Oxford-street, jeweller—April 5, J. Burgie, Mark-lane, carpenter—April 5, R. Barrett, Poultry, linen-draper—March 22, R. B. Roxby, Arbour-square, Commercial-road, merchant—April 1, W. D. Goodeve, Wimborne, Minster, Dorsetshire, brewer—April 16, S. Bulmer, Oxford-street, linen-draper—April 15, W. Dallas, Cushion-court, Old Broad-street, merchant.

April 12, R. Bowman, Manchester, grocer—April 1, R. Brown, Sheffield, draper—April 11, J. Boad, Mansley, Herefordshire, coppice-dealer—April 11, T. Hill, Ledbury, Herefordshire, surgeon.

CERTIFICATES—April 2.

J. Lee, Charles-street, Horsleydown, Bellerman—W. C. Dewsnop, St. Bride's-court, Blackfriars, painter—J. Giddens, Norwich, bombazine-manufacturer—T. Molyneux, Holborn, boot-maker—E. Woodward, Derby, innkeeper.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY.

THE DUKE OF MONTROSE reported His Majesty's most gracious answer to the Address of this House.

LORD REDESDALE presented a petition from Macclesfield, praying for the establishment of a Court for the Recovery of Small Debts.

In answer to a question from the EARL OF DARNLEY, (who wished to know what was intended to be the measures of Ireland, as to commutation of tithes,) the EARL OF LIVERPOOL observed, that he could not consistently, with the forms of the House, state the precise nature of the measure.

TUESDAY.

The Scotch Creditors' Bill was passed.

WEDNESDAY.

THE DUKE OF RICHMOND presented a petition from Lynn against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH, adverting to the present state of the Marriage Laws, reminded their Lordships, that besides the Bill for legalizing the marriages solemnized under licences ignorantly granted which had received the Royal Assent this Session, they had passed another to repeal the prospective parts of the Marriage Act, and to replace the country for a time under the old act, with the exception of the clause which abolished the nullity of marriages. This Bill had been sent down to the other House, where it had not obtained a second reading. He did not mean to complain of the conduct of the other House, but to call the attention of their Lordships to the real state of the case, and to let the country know that up to this period no alteration had taken place in the existing Marriage Act, and that until the Bill to which he had alluded should have passed through both Houses, and should have received the Royal Assent, all marriages must be had under that Act. Whatever inconvenience might accrue to the public, in consequence of the delay, their Lordships had done their duty, and were not responsible.

THURSDAY.

Petitions were presented from Oldham, Sunderland, Derby, and Monkwearmouth, against the Insolvent Act; and one from Derby against the Hawkers' Act.

FRIDAY.

The Assessed Taxes Reduction, the Irish Arms, and the Severn Bridge Bills, were read a first time.

A petition was presented from the Clerk of the Crown for Limerick, complaining of the late Act which reduced his fees of office.

Petitions were also presented from the Rev. W. Burgess against the Marriage Act, and from Wakefield against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY.

A petition was presented from the parish of Bethnal Green, against the Vestry Bill for that parish.

A new Writ was ordered for Corfe Castle, in the room of George Bankes, Esq. who has accepted the Chiltern Hundreds.

Petitions were presented from Ipswich, Monmouth, Darlington, Bursleem, and Newcastle, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.

MR. T. WILSON presented a petition from J. W. Parkins, Esq. complaining of an undue return for Arundel.—Ordered for consideration on the 17th of April.

Petitions were presented from Greenwich and Tavistock, against the Coal Duties; from Gloucester and Sussex, against the Hop Duty; from Hungerford, against the Beer Duty; from Somerset, against the New Turnpike Act; from Middlesex, against the Poor Rates; and from Liverpool, against the Window Tax.

LORD A. HAMILTON postponed his motion on the subject of Scotch Representation, until Tuesday se'nnight.

MR. ABERCROMBIE gave notice, that he would, on the 22d of April, bring forward a motion for altering the Trial by Jury in Criminal Cases in Scotland; also, that he would, on the 29th of the same month, bring forward a motion respecting William Murray Borthwick.

On presenting a petition from Ayr, complaining of the Export Duty on Scotch Coal, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said, he did not intend to make any alteration in the Duty on Coals.

MR. GRENFELL hoped, if any further remission of taxes was intended, the Duty on Coals would be considered.

Some further conversation arose on this subject, when MR. ALD. WOOD observed, the duty was but 6s. 9d. on coals, unladen beyond Gravesend, while it is 9s. on the City side; therefore, the City of London had most cause for complaint. SIR M. W. RIDLEY said, the Tyne Coal-owners often received but six shillings a chaldron for coals, which sold in London for sixty shillings—the highest price they ever obtained was fifteen shillings—the Coal-owners profit was but small.

MR. LITTLETON thought a remission of the duty would not benefit the public. The petition was ordered to be printed.

LORD PALMERSTON moved the Order of the Day for bringing up the Report of the Committee of Supply.

MR. HUME made several observations to prove that the expectations of economy held out in the King's Speech had not been fulfilled, those of last year amounted to 6,103,000l. while the present amount was 6,057,000l. He moved therefore an amendment to the question for bringing up the Report, "that so small a reduction as 15,000l. upon an expenditure of upwards of six millions, does not realize the expectation held out by the Speech from the Throne."

COLONEL DAVIES would not oppose the vote for the numerical amount of the Army, as he feared that war was inevitable, not only between France and Spain, but between France and England.

LORD PALMERSTON observed, that with regard to the Army Estimates, he had last year stated, there would probably be an increase in their amount this year of 50,000l. They were, however, reduced by 18,000l. for there was a misprint of 3,000l. He was therefore entitled to say, that the Army Estimates were substantially reduced by sixty-eight thousand pounds.—The amendment was negatived, and the Report was brought up.

On the Resolution, respecting the Recruiting Department, COLONEL DAVIES expressed himself dissatisfied with the present mode of recruiting; besides there was a charge for recruiting two Regiments of Cavalry. What has become of the old horses?

LORD PALMERSTON was convinced the present mode was the best for recruiting, the two regiments alluded to had just arrived from India, and the charge belonged to last year's account. The horses had been sold.

MR. HENRY GREY BENNET suggested the propriety of removing the most intolerable nuisance of the Life and Horse Guards being allowed to exercise in the Parks, to the great disturbance of persons riding there, and of those who lived within sound of their fire arms.—The Resolution was agreed to.

On the Resolution for a Vote of Supply for Public Departments,

MR. HUME thought the whole Establishment for the Audit of Old Accounts ought to be put an end to, the only effect of it being to give vexation to the persons on whom it operated. If Government had been negligent in passing public accounts, it was not fair to individuals to bring them in debtors after a lapse of upwards of twenty years.

LORD PALMERSTON admitted the hardship of the case. As to the expence of the department, it cost last year 8000l. and had recovered public money to the amount of 60,000l. The defalcations discovered in the Accounts of Agents were deducted from the issues due to them for the year in which the balances against them were struck. In this way 45,000l. had been recovered, and 15,000l. in addition had actually been paid into the Bank of England. He anticipated an early termination to the labours of this office.

On the Resolution for the Irish Volunteer Corps, MR. HUME renewed his objections to the Irish Yeomanry Corps. Many of these corps would not allow a Catholic to enter them, and thus it was that instead of maintaining the peace, they were the first disturbers of it. He asked the Attorney-General for Ireland, whether these men had not treated him, in effigy, with every indignity on account of his acting in a manner which marked his hostility towards Orange principles. He believed they were more opposed to the Government than not—He believed they were more opposed to the Government than not—He believed they were more opposed to the Government than not—and went on to the commission of crimes of a much deeper description. Twenty or thirty of these persons were often found in the same prison, and when they came out, they were prepared for the perpetration of any acts whatever.

Sir J. Shelley opposed the motion. A few years ago, the House had rejected a similar proposition by a large majority, and he was sorry that the Right Hon. Gentleman opposite had now consented to it. He believed that poaching arose from the want of employment, and not from the nature of existing laws.

Mr. Curwen considered the present to be an odious system of laws. It would be impossible to put an end to the sale of game, and the harder the laws were made, the higher would be the price. The only means of preventing poaching would be to allow game to come into the market.

Mr. Secretary Peel thought the question one of great importance, and which demanded the attention of the Secretary of State for the Home Department. He could not agree that poaching was to be attributed to the distress which now existed, because in the year 1817, which was comparatively prosperous, the number of committals was 200. The preservation of game ought to be attended to as much as possible, but he was still more anxious for the preservation of public tranquillity. With respect to the sale of game he had not made up his mind whether the permission would increase or lessen the number of poachers. A consolidation of these laws would be a very desirable object. They contained many anomalies which required correction.

Mr. R. Cooper said, he had the misfortune to have seen the bad effect of these laws upon the morals of the people. He thought the sale of game likely to increase poaching.

Colonel Wood congratulated the House upon the altered feeling with which this question had been received, in comparison to the manner in which it was met when he had some time ago brought it forward. He thought the thanks of the House and of the country were due to the Noble Lord for the perseverance with which he had followed up the subject.—The motion was then carried, and a Committee was appointed.

On bringing up the Report of the National Debt Reduction Bill,

Mr. Tierney observed, that the resolution now before the House, was formed upon one passed in 1819, declaring "that for the maintenance of public credit, it was necessary to preserve a clear surplus of revenue, over expenditure, of five millions." By adopting this resolution, he thought the House went the length of declaring, that in case of any deficiency of revenue, fresh taxes must be imposed, in order to keep up this five millions of surplus. All that he wanted to know was, whether by the word "surplus" the Chancellor of the Exchequer really meant an actual excess of income over expenditure.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer explained with respect to this assumed surplus, speaking in round numbers, the total of income was 50 millions, after deducting the two millions of taxes repealed. The annual expenditure, including the charge on the unfunded debt, was 47 millions, leaving a surplus of three millions. He was entitled to calculate on the benefit to be derived by the sale of annuities to discharge the half-pay pensions, and thus calculating the benefit in question, being two millions added to the three, would make five millions. If Parliament agreed with the individual holders of this half pay to pay them two millions and upwards, for 45 years certain, instead of now paying four millions and upwards, with the chance of paying less as the different lives dropped, how would the case stand? The four millions formed part of the 47 millions expenditure he had just mentioned; and therefore that 47 millions would be relieved of two millions of the agreement. This, then, would reduce the expenditure to 45 millions, which, deducted from the 50 millions of income, would still leave a surplus of five millions.

Mr. Hume, adverting to the Resolution of 1819, observed that the late Chancellor of the Exchequer had improperly added three millions of taxes, to make up the Sinking Fund of five millions. Two millions of the present Sinking Fund, in like manner, were made up by granting an annuity for forty-five years. The Chancellor of the Exchequer might just as well have made up the whole Sinking Fund in this way by granting the annuities for 60 years. He (Mr. H.) thought it was better to tie the Government down to a real actual surplus, and with this view, he moved as an Amendment to the Resolution, that the words "five millions annually" be struck out; and these words substituted: "The actual Surplus Revenue, not exceeding five millions, such actual Surplus to be ascertained by the Lords of His Majesty's Treasury."

Colonel Davies disapproved of the present Bill; the only part of which he approved, being that which declared that the Bill might be altered or repealed during the present Session. He thought that, although taxes might be nominally diminished, they had virtually increased since the war.

Sir H. Parnell and Mr. Maberley supported the amendment.

Sir F. Blake observed, that there were but three millions of the alleged five millions in existence. The other two millions were contingent only. What would be said of a married man, who had three children, and said, "I will have two children more." Would it not be said "he was counting his chickens before they were hatched?" Yet this was the case with the Chancellor of the Exchequer with regard to the Sinking Fund. He (Sir F.) should vote for the amendment. The House then divided, when there appeared—For the original resolution, 82—For the amendment, 38—Majority, 44.

On the third reading of the Assessed Taxes Reduction Bill,

Mr. Ald. Wood suggested the propriety of relieving shopkeepers from the hardship of paying one guinea per year for each person temporarily employed by them not selling goods. He proposed a clause to that effect, which was withdrawn. The Bill was then passed.

In a Committee on the Seamen's Apprentice Bill,

Mr. Huskisson stated, that the object of this Bill was to remedy the inconvenience arising from the unequal distribution of apprentices in the merchant service. His proposition was, that all vessels, engaged in whatsoever trade, should be obliged, according to size, to take apprentices, diminishing the number in those who at present were exclusively bound to do so, and adding to those who were exempt. Those above 80 tons and under 200, he proposed should take one apprentice, and so on in proportion. He also proposed to give greater protection to apprentices against impress.

Mr. H. Twiss obtained leave to bring in a Bill to enact the appointment of Assessors at Elections.

The Bill for re-building London Bridge was read a first time.

FRIDAY.

The Bill for appointing Assessors at Elections was read a first time. Second reading on Monday.

Sir J. Mackintosh gave notice of a motion for the 13th of May, on the subject of the Criminal Law.

The Irish Grand Jury Presentment and the Prisoners' Regulation Bills were committed for Monday.

On the motion for going into a Committee on the King's Property Bill, Mr. Henry Grey Bennet observed, that the King, so he believed the late Marquis of Londonderry to have said, had presented the freehold of Brighton to the public—he asked whether the repairs of that palace had been paid out of the Civil List, or out of the privy purse?

Mr. Secretary Peel was convinced the Hon. Member was in error in respect to the assertion of his late Noble Friend; such a measure was never in the contemplation of the King, though he had most liberally presented the library of his Royal Father to the public. The object of the present Bill was merely to enable his Majesty to dispose of his real property.

Dr. Lushington gave notice of a motion for Tuesday se'nnight, on the subject of forgery.

On the question for going into a Committee on the Mutiny Bill,

Col. Davies moved an instruction to the Committee to insert a clause for preventing the dismissal of any officer, and to prevent the infliction of a greater punishment on any officer than that awarded by sentence of court. He had no desire, he said, to attack the just prerogative of the Crown, he only wished to shew that the power of which he complained was neither just nor legal. He alluded to the dismissal of the Hon. Member (Sir R. Wilson,) which was in direct violation of the Mutiny Act. By the 35th section of the Mutiny Act, the Crown was enabled to make articles of war. The question then was, who was to be the judge of the violation of those articles? not the King surely; for that would be to make the King legislator, accuser, and judge. By a return made to the House, in consequence of a motion he had made for that purpose, he found that, since the year 1795, no less than 989 officers had been dismissed his Majesty's service, without the previous sentence of a court martial. Here there were, at once, 989 cases of injustice. He was entitled to call them, and should call them cases of injustice. The Honourable Member then named some other cases, that of Colonel Rose, Sir William Rawlins, Capt. Isaac Coffin, and an Officer of the Blues. In all these cases he wished to be understood as distinctly stating, that it was not the Sovereign personally whom he was charging with injustice, his complaint was against the advisers of the Crown. He next alluded to Sir Robert Wilson's case. Upon that case he would say, that he did not believe there was one man in the House who would say, upon his honour, that he believed Ministers had not acted upon false information which had been given them; and yet the House had, by a large majority, refused all inquiry, and had refused to call upon Ministers to state the grounds on which they had advised the dismissal of his Hon. and Gallant Friend.

Lord Palmerston objected to the motion, because it tended to abridge what had been a prerogative of the Crown from the earliest periods of English Monarchy, and which was necessary for the maintenance of the Constitution. He (Lord P.) would not accept a prerogative shackled with such conditions as the Hon. Member proposed with regard to a prerogative which was given for the benefit of the people. He need not go into any research to prove that the prerogative was derived from the earliest practice of the Monarchy. In the Statute Book of the Realm would be found an Act passed in the beginning of the reign of Charles the Second, which declared, "that the supreme government of the militia, and of the whole of the land and sea forces, is, by the laws of England, and ever was, the undoubted right of His Majesty;" and it further went on to say, "that neither House of Parliament, nor both, can pretend to the same." This was as clear as language could make the matter, that the power of commissioning and displacing had from ancient time been the right of the Crown. The Noble Lord, at some length, contended, that in many cases the exercise of the prerogative, by dismissal, in place of the sentence of the Court Martial, was on the side of mercy. When the Hon. Member said that the 989 officers who had been dismissed the service since 1795, had been the victims of injustice, he denied that that was a just assertion. The majority of those officers had been dismissed on account of being absent without leave—than which nothing was more common up to this day, nor more justifiable.

Mr. C. Hutchinson justified the conduct of his Hon. Friend, on the occasion which led to his dismissal from the army.

Mr. Hume was willing to admit that His Majesty, as had been contended, ought to have the power to dismiss all his servants: but he denied that the army was his army—it was the army of the State, and His Majesty was the Chief Magistrate of it, and held his powers over it for the benefit of the army.

After some observations from Mr. C. Wynne, Lord Hotham, and Sir T. Blake, in support of the prerogative of the Crown, the amendment of Col. Davies was negatived, and the House went into a Committee, and the report was ordered to be received on Monday.

In a Committee of Supply Sir John Osborne moved the remainder of the Navy Estimates. In the Ordinance department some items occurred which had now been brought into these estimates for the first time, for the purpose of simplifying the accounts. The wages of the labourers in the docks—the extras for timber would be here included, and the charges for pilotage and salvage which had heretofore been paid by the Treasurer of the Navy. Comparing the present estimates with those of last year, it would be seen that there was a reduction to the amount of 216,864l. He then moved his first resolution, which was a grant of 65,466l. for Contingent Expenses of the Admiralty.

Mr. Hume wished that two millions sterling had been taken from the estimates—he objected to a paymaster of marines, with a salary of 1000l. a year, also to a paymaster of widows' pensions, with their clerks, which amounted to 3,450l. per annum. He moved an amendment, deducting this sum from the vote.

Sir George Clerk contended for the necessity of retaining these officers, and contended that the office of Paymaster of Marines was one that could not be spared without great detriment to the public service, for he knew of no officer on whom greater labour and responsibility devolved. With respect to the Paymaster of Widows' Pensions, he, with his assistant, received but 680l. per annum, for paying away 100,000l. in quarterly payments.

Sir Joseph Yorke considered the situation of Secretary to the Admiralty afforded considerable facilities for carrying on the business of some of the situations referred to.

Mr. Hume said the Treasurer of the Navy, it appeared from the letter of Mr. Croker, had formerly been Paymaster of the Widows' Pensions, and what had been once might be again.

Mr. Croker entered into some explanations of the Offices in question, and said the Hon. Gentleman had spoken of his letter in answer to the Lords of the Treasury. It appeared that the Hon. Gentleman who had spoken of it had not read it himself. He had described it as sanctioning the idea that the office of Paymaster of Widows' Pensions had once been united with that of Treasurer of the Navy. It was not so; but it stated that the duties of that office had once been performed by the Paymaster of the Navy. He would pledge any credit he might have with the House, that in the whole range of his Majesty's service there was no situation more efficient and necessary than that of Paymaster of Marines, and no one from which greater benefit had been derived to the public.

Mr. Hume said he might have named the Treasurer of the Navy by a mistake for the Paymaster; but the situation of Paymaster of Widows' Pensions had been held by another Officer.

After some further conversation, the following resolutions were agreed to:—For the salaries and contingent expences of the Navy Pay Office, 32,454l.; for the Navy Office, 63,819l.; for the Victualling Office, 35,267l.; for the Deptford Yard, 18,687l.; for the Woolwich Yard, 31,509l.; for the Chatham Yard, 24,531l.; for the Sheerness Yard, 16,134l.; for the Portsmouth Yard, 36,211l.; for the Plymouth Yard, 30,905l.; for the Outports, 8,882l.; for the Wages of artificers and labourers in the yards at home, &c. 476,902l.

Sir G. Clerk stated that the different yards had been visited and inspected, with a view to reduce this estimate as low as possible.

Mr. Hume complained that the wages of labourers in the yards had been reduced 20 per cent. and the salaries of the clerks only five.

The following sums were then voted (after some observations,) for Timbers, Stores, &c. of Dock-yards, 524,364l.; for the charges for Pilotage, Maintenance for Distressed Seamen in foreign parts, and other contingences, 40,000l.; for the Foreign Yards, 62,188l.; for the Victualling Yards, 63,110l.; for Medical Establishments, 51,631l.; for the Wages of Officers, Ship-keepers, and Men in Ordinary, 105,284l.; for the expence of Victuals for the same, 53,253l.; for the Half-pay of Naval Officers, 933,400l.; for Superannuations, Pensions, &c. 137,635l.; for Bounty to Chaplains, 1,500l.; for deficiency in the Funds for the Relief of the Widows of Commission and Warrant Officers of the Royal Navy, 100,000l.; ditto for defraying the charge of the Out-pensioners of Greenwich Hospital, 300,000l.; for Superannuations, Pensions, &c. granted to Commissioners, Secretaries, Clerks, &c. formerly employed in the Civil Department of the Navy, 170,149l.

Sir J. Osborn then rose to move the Extra Estimate, upon which he had neglected to state that there was a reduction of 60,000l.;—For Ships of War building in the East Indies, 20,000l.; for defraying the expence of Improvements in the Yards, 124,000l.; for the purchase of Provisions for Troops and Garrisons upon Foreign Stations, &c. 205,000l.; for the Transport Service, 184,300l.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer moved a vote of 59,192l. to pay the remainder of a grant for the year 1817, upon the Consolidated Fund for Ireland; and 20,000l. to supply the deficiency for the maintenance of the poor Clergy in Scotland.

The National Debt Reduction Bill was postponed till Monday.

In a Committee of Ways and Means, the Chancellor of the Exchequer moved the following resolutions:—That the sum of 51,000l. be applied to satisfy certain grants outstanding; 469,000l. to be paid out of the Exchequer from the remaining grants of the preceding years; 4,800,000l. to be paid into the Exchequer for the Sinking Fund, according to the Act of last Session; the amount of the balances of unclaimed Dividends and Lottery Prizes remaining in the hands of the Bank of England; 8,700,000l. being the estimated surplus of the unappropriated produce of the Consolidated Fund for the year ending the 25th of April, 1824.—These resolutions were severally agreed to.

The Irish Yeomanry Bill was passed.

The Merchants' Vessels' Apprentice Bill was read a first time.

At the adjourned Worcester Sessions, John Harper, skinner, of Stourbridge, an insolvent debtor, was brought before the Court for his discharge. The insolvent swore that his debts amounted to upwards of 1200l. and that his assets did not amount to 1s. in the pound; but in the course of his examination, he proved himself to have been guilty of a gross fraud and concealment of property. He was immediately remanded for two years.

Last week, at Newcastle, a quack doctor, calling himself Geo. Cook, the seventh son of a seventh son, was convicted under the Vagrant Act of being a rogue and vagabond, he having imposed upon Ann Jennaway, a sailor's wife, by pretending that he could cure her of her lameness by means of certain mystic charms, and by a certain spurious medicine with which he furnished her, and for which she paid him 4s. 6d. A chemist gave it as his decided opinion that it was nothing but an infusion of some simple herb, and that it was not calculated to relieve any complaint whatever, and could not have cost him more than one halfpenny. The doctor was sentenced to be kept to hard labour upon the tread mill for two months.

Just published, 4to. in boards, price 1l. 1s.

ST. HELENA, as described by Major-General Beatson, in the Introductory Chapter to his Tracts relative to that Island; embellished with Six Views and a Map, to which is added, the late Dr. Roxburgh's Flora of the Island.—Sold by G. and W. Nicol, Pall Mall; and J. Booth, Duke street, Portland-place.

Just published, price 7s. in boards,

LOVE; a Poem, in Three Parts. To which is added, The GIAOUR, a Satirical Poem. By E. ELLIOTT, Author of "Night," a descriptive Poem; and "Peter Faultless to his Brother Simon," "Tales of Night, in Rhyme," and other Poems.—Published by Charles Stocking, Paternoster-row.

Just published, price 8s. boards,

THE SPIRIT of BUNCLE; or the Surprising Adventures of that Original and Extraordinary Character, John Buncle, Esq.

"O, Memory! celestial maid!
"Who glean'st the flow'rets crop'd by Time;
"And, suffering not a leaf to fade,
"Preserv'st the blossoms of our prime;
"Bring, bring those moments to my mind,
"When life was new, and beauty kind."

London: published by Charles Stocking, Paternoster-row.

NEALE'S GENTLEMEN'S SEATS.

Now publishing in Monthly Parts, in royal 8vo. price 4s. each Number, or in royal 4to. with Proof Impressions of the Plates on India paper, price 8s.

VIEWS of the SEATS of NOBLEMEN and GENTLEMEN, in ENGLAND, WALES, SCOTLAND, and IRELAND; from Drawings by J. P. NEALE, Author of the Illustrations of the History and Antiquities of Westminster Abbey, &c. engraved in the line manner, by the first Artists, and accompanied with Letter-press Descriptions of the Mansions, and a Genealogical Account of the Proprietors.

☞ The public are respectfully informed, that this very interesting Work is already extended to Sixty one Numbers, comprising 366 Views of some of the most splendid Mansions in the United Kingdom, each number containing Six highly-finished Engravings. The first 5 volumes may be had in boards, price 2l. 10s. each, royal 8vo. or in 4to. 5l. each. Subscribers are requested to make good their Sets directly, in order to ensure good impressions.

As it has not been found possible to include all the magnificent mansions within the original limits of 6 volumes, it is intended to publish a Second Series of Views immediately on the completion of the present volume.

London: Printed for Sherwood, Jones, and Co. Paternoster row.

NEALE'S NEW GUIDE TO BLENHEIM.

Just published, in royal 8vo. price 6s. in boards,

SIX VIEWS of BLENHEIM, Oxfordshire, the Seat of his Grace the Duke of Marlborough; with an Historical Account of that interesting Edifice; and a Catalogue of the Pictures, including those lately removed from Marlborough House. By J. P. NEALE.—London: printed for Sherwood, Jones, and Co. Paternoster-row.

THE PORT-FOLIO. Six Numbers (forming the first volume) of this cheap, elegant, and highly interesting Work are now published, and the Publication is continued in regular monthly Numbers, price only 2s. 6d. each, containing Eight beautiful Plates of Architectural, Antiquarian, and Topographical Subjects, &c. with Descriptions. An Edition is printed on large paper, at 4s. per No. and a very few Copies at 8s. per No. on royal 8vo. with India Paper Proofs of the Plates.—No. I. contains Interior Views of Fonthill Abbey, &c.—London: published by Normaville and Fell, Bond-street, and Sherwood, Jones, and Co. Paternoster-row.

☞ Gentlemen and Ladies who have Drawings suitable for this Work, and will favour the Proprietors with permission to copy them, are requested to address them to the Editor of the Port-Folio, at either of the above Publishers.—Drawings of Antiquities, newly discovered, in any part of Great Britain, will be thankfully received, and immediately inserted.

Just published, in 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

A TREATISE on INFLAMMATION of the MUCOUS MEMBRANE of the LUNGS. To which is prefixed, an Experimental Enquiry respecting the Contractile Power of the Blood-vessels, and the nature of Inflammation. By CHARLES HASTINGS, M.D. Physician to the Worcester Infirmary, &c. &c.—Printed for Thomas and George Underwood, 32, Fleet-street.

RICHERAND'S PHYSIOLOGY. Third Edition.

Just published, in 8vo. price 12s. boards.

ELEMENTS of PHYSIOLOGY. By A. RICHERAND, Professor of the Faculty of Medicine of Paris. Third Edition. Translated from the French, by G. J. M. DE LYS, M.D.—Printed for Thomas and George Underwood, 32, Fleet street.

Just published, handsomely printed in post 8vo. price 7s. 6d. boards,

ESSAYS, by FATHER FITZ-EUSTACE, a Mendicant Friar. Printed for Thomas and George Underwood, 32, Fleet street.

"His remarks on the present state of Dissent in England are particularly creditable to his head, and his account of the political character of James the First of Scotland has so agreeable an interest, that we should wish to see him engaged in more extensive researches on Scottish History."—New Monthly Magazine August, 1822.

SIR GILBERT BLANE ON MEDICAL SCIENCE.

Just published, in 8vo. price 12s. boards,

SELECT DISSERTATIONS on SEVERAL SUBJECTS of MEDICAL SCIENCE. By Sir GILBERT BLANE, Bart. F.R.S. Physician to the King, &c. &c.—Printed for Thomas and George Underwood, 32, Fleet-street.

This Volume contains, among other important Dissertations, the following:—On the Comparative Prevalence and Mortality of different Diseases in London—Remarks on the Comparative Health and Population of England at different periods—On the Comparative Health of the British Navy, from the year 1779 to 1814, with Proposals for its further improvement—On Infection—On the Effect of Medicinal Compression of the Urethra in certain Cases of Hydrocephalus—On the Use of Opium in different Diseases.

LARREY ON THE USE OF THE MOXA.—Just published, 8vo. price 7s. 6d.

ON the USE of the MOXA as a THERAPEUTICAL AGENT. By BARON D. J. LARREY, Surgeon in Chief to the Hospital de la Garde Royale, &c. &c. Translated from the French, with Notes and an Introduction containing a history of the substance, by ROBLEY DUNGLISON, Fellow of the Royal College of Surgeons, &c. &c.—Printed for T. and G. Underwood, Fleet-stre et.

"Mr. Dunglison can safely brings forward the Moxa to the notice of his countrymen, that it may be fairly tried and justly appreciated; and, that no means may be omitted which may lead to its useful in such intractable diseases as Consumption, Disease of the Spine, and Lumbar Abscess, we cannot recommend the little work of Mr. Dunglison in too strong terms to the notice of the Profession."—Edinburgh Medical and Surgical Journal, Jan. 1823.

PRITCHARD ON NERVOUS DISEASES.

Just published, in Octavo, price 12s. boards.

A TREATISE on DISEASES of the NERVOUS SYSTEM. Volume I. comprising Convulsive and Maniacal Affections.—The design of this Work is to illustrate, by numerous Cases of Epilepsy, Mania, Chorea, and the different Forms of Paralysis, the Connexion between Affections of this Class, and a variety of Disorders of the Natural Functions. By J. C. Prichard, M.D. F.L.S. &c., Physician to the Bristol Infirmary, &c.—Printed for Thomas and G. Underwood, 32, Fleet-street, London.

MEDICAL JURISPRUDENCE.

Just published, in Octavo, price 14s.

THE PRINCIPLES of FORENSIC MEDICINE, systematically arranged, and applied to British Practice; with numerous Illustrations and Examples; intended for the use of Barristers, Coroners, Magistrates, and Medical Practitioners. By JOHN GORDON SMITH, M.D.—Printed for Thomas and George Underwood, 32, Fleet-street.

DR. W. PHILIP ON FEBRILE DISEASES. Fourth Edition.

Just published, in 2 vols. 8vo. price 1l. 4s. bds.

A TREATISE on FEBRILE DISEASES, including the various Species of Fever, and all Diseases connected with Fever. By A. P. W. PHILIP, M.D. F.R.S.E.—Fourth Edition, corrected and improved.

Volume I. Simple and Eruptive Fevers.—Volume II. Symptomatic Fevers.—Each Volume sold separately.

Printed for Thomas and George Underwood, 32, Fleet-street.

GAS-LIGHTING.—Just published, in 8vo. illustrated with Fourteen Engravings of Gas Apparatus, price 21s. bds.

THE THEORY and PRACTICE of GAS LIGHTING: in which is exhibited an Historical Sketch of the Rise and Progress of the Science; and the Theories of Light, Combustion, and Formation of Coal; with Descriptions of the most approved Apparatus for generating, collecting, and distributing Coal-Gas for Illuminating Purposes. By T. S. PECKSTON, of the Chartered Gas Light and Coke Company's Establishment, Peter-street, Westminster.—Printed for Thomas and George Underwood, 32, Fleet-street; and Ogle, Duncan, and Co. Paternoster-row.

PLUMBE ON RINGWORM.—Just published,

A PRACTICAL ESSAY on RINGWORM of the SCALP, SCALLED HEAD, &c. in which the causes of the obstinacy of these diseases are satisfactorily explained, and successful methods of treatment copiously detailed. By SAMUEL PLUMBE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, of the Medical and Chirurgical Society, &c.—Published by T. and G. Underwood, 32, Fleet-street.

"This Essay is very creditable to the talents and humanity of its Author, and will be highly beneficial to his fellow-creatures, and useful to his professional brethren."—Medical and Physical Journal.

"We have, we hope, exhibited sufficient specimens of the matter of this Work, to induce our Readers to seek a more intimate acquaintance with the contents of the original."—Med. Chir. Review.

"We are happy in being able to say that we have perused the tract before us with no inconsiderable satisfaction, thinking, as we do, that attention to the precepts it enjoins, will be productive of much benefit in the diseases of which it treats." We may add, that it is penned in a pleasing style, and deserving every praise even as a literary performance."—Medical Repository.

Preparing for the press, a Critical Examination of Dr. Willan's Classification of Cutaneous Diseases, with descriptions of Plans of Treatment of some of them, founded on minute observations of their Pathology. By the same Author.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We beg to offer our thanks for the communication of which we have availed ourselves. It cannot fail to be gratifying in the highest degree to receive approbation from such a quarter.

We have received letters from Edinburgh, begging that if a Subscription for a Statue of His Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief is opened, an agent may be appointed in that city to receive contributions.

ARGUS is right—CODBIT certainly did dine there. A private reason is given for it, different from that which he mentions. The other part of the history which ARGUS encloses is equally correct as to fact.

If the writer of the letter dated March 13, will appoint an interview, the person to whom it is addressed will meet him any evening before Thursday. It would be quite impossible to adopt the measures alluded to without much and explicit conversation.

The VETERAN ACTOR, although his letter came too late for insertion, will perceive that we felt, and have expressed ourselves as he feels. We were quite glad to hear from him.

We are requested from authority to contradict the statement reported to have been made by Mr. HUME, on the subject of a deceased Irish Bishop—such statement being utterly void of foundation.

If MNEMONEUMENOS will authenticate his statement, we shall most readily give it a place.

All our other correspondents must remain unanswered till next week.

PRICE OF STOCKS AT THE CLOSE, SATURDAY.

The Money Market has been much agitated this week, and the fluctuations have been so great as to occasion a considerable decline, and Consols for the Account have gone down. They opened to-day at 73¼ ⅛, and fluctuated not more than ¼ per Cent. from the opening price. At the close they were 72⅝ ⅜. In the Foreign Market, the Spanish Bonds have fallen; to-day they were lower, being done as low as 27⅝ at one part of the day.

3 per Cent. Red. . .	India Bonds 23
3 per Cent. Consols 73¼	Exchequ. Bills, 2d 1000l. 11
3½ per Cent. ditto . .	Ditto . . . . . 500l.
4 per Cent.	Small . . . . .
New 4 per Cent. . . 93	Con. for Acc. 73¼ ⅛ 72⅝ ⅜
Long Annuities .

Letters from Paris quote the prices of French Stock as follow:—

FRENCH FUNDS, March 13.

5 per Ct. Con. 22 Sept. . 78	Bank Sh. Div. 1 July
Recon. Div. 22 Sept. . . .	Ex. Lond. 1mo. 25-50 3mo.

The Neapolitan 5 per Cents. Div. were at 66⅜

NEW THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.—Monday, The Merchant of Venice—Tuesday, The Marriage of Figaro—Wednesday, an Oratorio—Thursday, Siege of Belgrade—Friday, A Selection of Ancient and Modern Music—Saturday, The Haunted Tower.

A MONDAY'S EDITION, containing the LATEST NEWS, the STOCK LIST, the LONDON MARKETS, and the STATE OF THE COUNTRY MARKETS by that Morning's Post, is published at Three o'Clock.

JOHN BULL.

LONDON, MARCH 16.

THE outrageous and insulting conduct of FERDINAND'S Ministers to their King and master, cannot we think fail of exciting a feeling in the hearts of those who read the Spanish papers of the 2d and 3d instant somewhat different from that which has been attempted by every means to be created; a REGENCY is openly talked of, and the Monarch is to be removed from the capital—removed, we suspect, most effectually. For a view of the policy of the Whigs, upon this affair, we refer our readers to the following article:—

THERE is a waywardness in the character of the PSEUDO WHIGS, which more, even than the want of fixed principle, urges them on to inconsistencies which would disgrace the circle of goody gossips round a village tea-table. They seize upon circumstances and events, as children do upon toys, and are never satisfied till they have pulled them to pieces, or applied them to purposes to which they were never destined or adapted; and then, like their juvenile exemplars, they give vent to their disappointment in passionate invective, and unmeaning reproaches, against those who know and apply them to their proper purposes. If they happen to stumble upon a right opinion, or a sound principle, they are sure, by making it their own, to disfigure, or ultra-ize it, till it is rendered either mischievous or ridiculous, or probably both.

The policy upon which France is acting, is, we verily believe, fundamentally wrong; and the very object, the attainment of which they profess to seek, is more likely to be baffled than secured, by the measures they are about to adopt. Our Ministers have anxiously endeavoured to impress this, their own conviction, upon the minds of the French Monarch and his Ministers, and by every possible means of counsel and conciliation, to avert, if possible, the impolitic measure of re-kindling the European war.

The WHIGS could not condemn our Ministers on the score of a policy, so sound and so intelligible to every man of common sense in the country; they were therefore profuse and hyperbolical in their admiration, and put forth their best speakers to pronounce inflated eulogies upon Government, for having taken so "enlightened and liberal" a view of the question. We saw clearly what they were about.—

"Timeo Danaos, et dona ferentes."

We knew that, like MRS. CANDOUR, they had a "but" in reserve, to which all their extravagant and unusual approbation was to give increased effect; and that they only waited the opportunity of playing over again their old "fool's game" of ULTRA-ISM, and of throwing away, as usual, the only chance in their power of being in the right—that is, of according with men of sound, honest, and constitutional views and principles.

Because the French betray a want of good sense, and correct notions of policy, we are called upon, goaded by these shallow politicians, to rush headlong into measures which lead precisely to the same issue, with the certainty of involving Europe in a general war instead of a partial one, without a single national object, and without a pretext, as plausible even as that, put forth by the French, for engaging in it. The attempt to confound the circumstances and situation of the country at the commencement of the war, in 1793, with the present crisis, is too absurd to require comment; not only had the French Republic committed acts of decided hostility against us; not only had she raised the standard of Revolution in OUR COUNTRY, and received accredited agents as republican agents from the societies for "PARLIAMENTARY REFORM;" but she had, in the face of treaties, opened the Scheldt, which they knew and avowed to be tantamount to a declaration of war, independently of the direct overt act of laying an embargo on our ships in their Ports;—not a single act, word, or expression, on the part of the present French Government, can be distorted into the remotest intention of a hostile disposition towards this country, whilst, on the contrary, there is every reason to believe, that although she prefers to abide by her own policy, she received, without the slightest feeling of offence, our remonstrances and arguments against it.

But if we were to admit that black is white, which is a concession almost necessary if we would come to anything like close quarters in discussion with a WHIG, if we were to grant, for the sake of argument, our position to be precisely the same as in 1793, are the WHIGS, the partisans, successors, and sworn disciples of MR. FOX, the persons to urge us on to the adoption of measures, which they professed to believe the English language did not afford words strong enough to stigmatize as the most rash, unnecessary, and wanton that ever disgraced the country! MR. FOX, the parent and apostle of NEW WHIGGERY, admitted, that the "French had conducted themselves in such a manner as to induce him to believe that the power of France MIGHT be formidable to this country." Though without allies, and with almost ruined finances, she was more formidable than she ever had been; she was formidable now from her FREEDOM, the animating effects of which were beyond human calculation. All the inhabitants of Europe, who felt anything in the cause of FREEDOM, held a sympathy for them, and wished them success, regarding them as men, struggling with TYRANTS and DESPOTS, whilst they were endeavouring to form for themselves a FREE GOVERNMENT.

En passant, it may not be amiss to notice to our readers, in order to shew, in what a free Government really consists, according to the NEW WHIG CREED, that the exact period which SAINT FOX selected to make this declaration was December, 1792, a few short months from the exhibition of the MASSACRES of the 10th of AUGUST, and the 2d and 3d of SEPTEMBER, and whilst the dethroned Monarch, LOUIS XVI. and his family, were languishing under the demoniacal persecution of the wanton barbarians, ROBESPIERRE, DANTON, and MANUEL, the CHAMPIONS and DISPENSERS of THAT FREEDOM, "the animating effects of which," MR. FOX declares, "are beyond human calculation," and which were hailed by him, and his cheering partisans, in the House, and in the taverns of London, as the first fruits of that "NOBLEST MONUMENT of HUMAN WISDOM, the FRENCH REVOLUTION!!"

This by the bye: but what will the younger portion of our readers, who may not be so well informed upon the politics of the period attluded to—what will they think, was the inference drawn by MR. FOX from this FORMIDABLE STATE of the French power, and its increasing means of insulting and degrading his native country? He argued, "from the actual situation of Europe, but particularly from those Powers on whom we should look for aid, that WAR would be a very dangerous, if not ruinous measure for this country." He argued, "that if discontents did really exist (at home) the taxes which must be raised for the support of a war would certainly increase them, and urged an immediate negociation with the Executive Government of France, to prevent the approaching horrors of war." He moved an amendment to the Speech from the Throne, beseeching His Majesty "to employ every species of honourable negociation in order to prevent a war with France!" That is, to send a British statesman to men whose hands were yet reeking with the blood of thousands of their fellow-citizens! who, (singular coincidence!) on the very day on which the patriot Fox made his motion to this effect, passed a decree, "declaring as enemies ALL PEOPLE of ALL NATIONS desirous of preserving KINGS or PRIVILEGED CASTES, or entering even INTO ACCOMMODATION WITH THEM!" And who, whilst their armies were invading the RIGHTS, and trampling on the LIBERTIES of surrounding NATIONS, were debating the means of aggravating the miseries, and finally bringing to the block, an unoffending and virtuous MONARCH and HIS FAMILY!!!

Even all this, and more, which will, to all posterity, blacken the history of that eventful volume of European suffering—the scenes of ruin and devastation carrying on at home and abroad by what MR. FOX calls the "French Executive," were not sufficient to excite in the breasts of himself and his "little Senate" a sentiment to disturb that fixed principle of PHILANTHROPY, and a LOVE OF PEACE, which was in future to be the watch-word of the party, and which so continued to be as long as the triumphs of Britain resounded over the plains of Europe, and down to the period which terminated in the SECOND CAPTURE OF PARIS, and the glorious release of our loved and glorious country from all the canting, dastardly, prophetic, and annually repeated denunciations of ruin and disgrace by MR. FOX, and his yet more degraded disciples!

MR. CHARLES GREY may perhaps afford a lesson to my LORD GREY—somewhat in point in the present crisis, and we therefore quote that Gentleman's opinion on this memorable occasion in 1793, merely because it catches our eye at the moment, and may have slipt his Lordship's memory:—"We are "not to be hurried away by our feelings or our indignation "against the perpetrators of the crimes committed in France." —(How delicately the charge is shifted from the REGICIDE GOVERNMENT, then dragging the Monarch to the scaffold, to some straggling "perpetrators of crime.")—"WE ARE TO "DECIDE ON NATIONAL POLICY—NOT PERSONAL FEEL-"ING!" There! gentlemen WHIGS, "to breakfast—with what appetite you may!" Be it recollected, and let the WHIGS tremble at the retrospect, that it was on this great question that their commander and his skeleton regiment were thrown overboard by the sound CONSTITUTIONAL WHIGS. It was this fatal devotion to ANY cause or ANY principles which might aid in forcing a desperate faction into the Councils of the State; that carried the standard of the OLD WHIGS out of the FOXITE CAMP, and planted it on the side of GOVERNMENT and SOCIAL ORDER!

It is true, through intrigue, hard labour, and mutual sacrifice, the SPENCERS, the FITZWILLIAMS, and others of the old school, have, in the progress of years and circumstances, been induced to rejoin their ranks; and, it must be confessed, have rather yielded to the muddy current of the new policy, than succeeded, or perhaps attempted to direct it into its purer channel; but the GRENVILLES have again been revolted by their unprincipled policy, and flown from all contact with them.

But what would the spirit of the patriot PITT say, could he behold the man, whom he placed at the head of our Naval fading glory—committing himself to the counsels, and following in the train of a JOSEPH HUME, a GREY BENNET, and a to find the son of the illustrious Duke, who headed the noble band of seceders from revolutionary councils, selecting the office of tavern leader to a WHIG CABAL, congregated for the purpose of reviving the old jacobinical creed, and giving encouragement for the propagation of the system of KING KILLING!

Whatever may be the charitable virtues of my LORD WILLIAM BENTINCK—and we know him to be, in every relation of private life, an exemplary man—however strong may be his Lordship's motives for casting the veil of oblivion over the infamous and insulting conduct of the WHIG OPPOSITION towards him during the period of his services in Sicily, we do not—nor ought the country to forget, that these political hypocrites, so far from feeling sympathy in the misfortunes and grievous oppression of the Spanish people, under the usurpation of BUONAPARTE and his satellites—so far from urging the claims to protection from foreign invasion of their rights, and from an armed intervention in their internal policy—the spirit which animated our Councils, and spread through every rank and station in the country, was alone OPPOSED, STIGMATIZED, and REPROBATED, by these men—these WHIGS, who are now urging the country TO WAR, to which they have hitherto declared any peace preferable: and upon the principles, whose validity they denied, and whose tendency is made the subject of their diatribes against Government during the whole of the Peninsular war!

Nothing was spoken of but the impolicy of embarking in a contest, which could entail nothing but disgrace upon our own country, and defeat upon the "rash and quixotic attempts at resistance on the part of the Spanish Insurgents." The resistless WELLINGTON was lampooned by the WHIG LAUREATS, as the "gallant Baron of Douro," and Lord GREY declared in the House of Peers that "he saw much blame in the conduct of that commander, in a military point of view, (poor LORD GREY,) and with regard to the BATTLE OF TALAVERA, he condemned that unsaintlike calculation which presented it as a VICTORY gained over an enemy of double force!" So delicate and fastidious is your NEW WHIG who is never known to doubt the authentic details of a FRENCH CONSUL or an EMPEROR, whose armies were "covered with glory"—even when they were compelled to decamp with a beat of drum! Ministers were proclaimed "imbecile, weak, and puerile," in adopting the cause of the Spanish Patriots!

"What," (says MR. PONSONBY, the most moderate man of the Whigs) "has been published by the ENEMY—a constant Whig reference, which bespeaks a strange sympathy—what has been published by the enemy, on the subject of the last campaign, JUSTLY held up the BRITISH GOVERNMENT to the derision of Europe." The British Government, as MR. HUME would classically observe, "took their change out of that!" He goes on to shew what the WHIGS would have done: "if our forces had been concentrated in the north of Germany instead of being dispersed in SPAIN, Walcheren, and Sicily, AUSTRIA would have received effectual succour, and perhaps been delivered from her perils with glory!" What!—relieve a DESPOT from peril—and to cover him with GLORY: leave the PATRIOTS of SPAIN to shift for themselves! Fie, fie, gentlemen WHIGS! and yet, Britons, this is the noble policy which we should have been governed—this the love of freedom which would have inspired our councils had we been blessed with a WHIG CABINET at that period—and these are the men who have the unblushing effrontery to talk of their hatred of oppression, their indignation at foreign interference, and to call upon the country to join with them in involving us in a new war, to carry at the point of the sword the very principles—and among the very same people, whom they never ceased to hold out to contempt and obloquy, during the whole and entire period of their resistance against the usurpation of THE BUONAPARTES!

We only ask—and we ask it in truth and sincerity—if there is any one reason that can be assigned for this glaring inconsistency but the substitution of a LEGITIMATE MONARCH for a MILITARY USURPER? That FERDINAND may be a weak man makes nothing in their favour. We are discussing PRINCIPLES, not INDIVIDUALS—and they would gain little if the character of their idol BUONAPARTE were to be admitted into the consideration in its moral influence upon Constitutional Britons. But in this, nevertheless, consists the whole difference of the two periods as far as the general question is concerned—in the details—if we were to refer to the odious tyranny which forced a Queen to declare her child illegitimate—to decree by the basest falsehoods, the Monarch and his family out of his dominion, to incarcerate them in France—which placed a brother on the throne, thus vacated, at the point of the bayonet—and enforced an indiscriminate massacre of peaceful citizens, who did not yield immediate and implicit allegiance to him. The WHIGS would, we suspect, find it difficult to account for the "glow of indignant feeling, and that enthusiasm of abhorrence" which they profess to feel at the conduct of ROYAL FRANCE, or reconcile it with the cold and phlegmatic derision with which they formerly treated every attempt to disconcert the measures under the IMPERIAL GOVERNMENT!

What is all this in plain English? What was the love—that idolatry, with which the Whigs tracked every step of NAPOLEON, from the ranks of the REGICIDES to his death in exile,—but a covert hatred of the genuine establishments of civil liberty in their own country? Why do men change their principles, and, like the countryman in the fable, blow hot and cold in the same breath, but that they have a PARAMOUNT OBJECT in view, which they prefer even to an appearance of consistency? And what is THAT OBJECT in the present hour? To give aid, currency, and effect, to principles which have deluged Europe with blood for thirty years last past, without producing ONE SINGLE BENEFIT to human kind, and which in their full uninterrupted and most successful career ripened into that pestiferous and anti-social monster, a MILITARY DESPOTISM, whose effects were felt to the utmost limits of the earth! To hold out to the ignorant masses of society the illusory promises of LICENTIOUS FREEDOM, in order to direct their worst passions against KINGS and EXISTING GOVERNMENTS, which are made to appear the only barriers to their possession of the promised land, and to involve the country in NEW WARS, TROUBLES, and EMBARRASSMENTS, because Ministers have baffled their efforts to excite trouble at home; and because, with one temporary exception, which cannot long hold to their purpose, the country stands proudly on the elevation gained by the glory of her conquests and her fame abroad, RICHER, MORE POWERFUL, MORE FREE, and MORE TRULY GREAT and HAPPY, than any people of any country, in any period of history ANCIENT or MODERN!—

HINC ILLÆ LACRYMÆ!

and long, long may they flow, from the same combination of causes!

IN a recent Number we had occasion to remark upon the election of a preacher to Lincoln's Inn, and incidentally upon the sanctity of the REV. MR. CUNNINGHAM, the Vicar of Harlow, author of a "World without Souls," the "Velvet Cushion," and many other works, who was one of the candidates for that office.

We have received a letter from MR. CUNNINGHAM, informing us that he has withdrawn himself from the contest with

R. MALTBY, and expressing his anxiety to remove from our inds the impression which we appear to have taken, and to be eirous of making upon the public, with respect to his clerical aracter, and forwarding to us a volume of Sermons, where- the Reverend Gentleman wishes us to form a judgment of s religious opinions.

It is true enough that with the powerful influence we pos- ss we should be cautious of lightly or carelessly throwing t a word which might be injurious to the interests of an in- vidual, but the case of the election in question is different om most others—we considered it our duty to declare that e think it a matter of vital importance, at this particular me, that orthodoxy should be supported, and that the ightest dissent should be marked by public reprobation: it as because we think so, that we pointed out the difficulty of eciding between two persons, who, whatever their merits d excellence may be, are strongly suspected of entertaining ligious doctrines not exactly in accordance with those by law tablished.

We have not had time to read MR. CUNNINGHAM'S Ser- ons, but we will give them every attention: his preface we ve read, and nothing can be more diffident than its tone, or ore soothing than its language: with respect to his private rcumstances we know nothing, and in saying what we did y, we merely intended to advocate the cause of the Estab- shed Church, without any reference to the conduct of MR. UNNINGHAM'S private life, of which, at present, we know othing—to his published books and his public reputation we luded, when we spoke of his doctrines and principles; and e repeat, that at this juncture, when every effort is making every side to shake the establishment, it is an imperative ty in electors to clerical offices and patrons of Church pre- rment, to maintain the Constitutional Religion in its purity d vigour, by advancing those men whose doctrinal princi- es are known, and against whom no suspicion of dissent ists.

If we have contributed to MR. CUNNINGHAM'S relinquish- ent of his object at Lincoln's Inn, we have done part of our blic duty; if we should succeed in beating DR. MALTBY t of the field, we shall think we have completed it; and in ying this, we would have it understood that we have a high spect for DR. MALTBY and his talents—but there is a ubt with respect to the orthodoxy of his opinions. "He at is not with us, is against us;" and we confess that we ould feel pleased to see a situation so honourable as that of eacher to Lincoln's Inn filled by such a man as we before entioned (when speaking on this subject), who would add tural zeal to natural talent in support of the English urch as by law established.

If we needed any excuse for pressing a second time upon the ctors of Lincoln's Inn the name of MR. RENNELL, as a man ly worthy of their votes, the last and recent display of MR. ENNELL'S talents would of itself justify our earnestness on is head—to his able pen is attributed the Letter to MR. ROUGHAM on the Durham Speech, and on the three articles the Edinburgh Review; and, to adopt the words of one of r correspondents upon the subject, "a more triumphant re- ply to the malevolent attacks which have been so unceasingly made upon the Church, never was written. He grapples so manfully with the subject in all its bearings—he detects the errors and exposes the sophistry of the Reviewers with so much power and ability, that they cannot find a loop-hole whereby to escape."

We repeat it is by the efforts of such men that our Church to be supported and defended from the attacks of its various nemies—such men should fill responsible situations—such en should be rewarded.

MR. HUME on Friday outdid himself: he referred to a tter of MR. CROKER'S, in which he said, MR. CROKER de- ared that the office of Paymaster of Widows' Pensions was ld by the Treasurer of the Navy; and this the Hon. Member r Aberdeen stated as a reason why the office of Paymaster Widows' Pensions should be abolished. The document upon hich this reasoning was founded being referred to, it ap- ared, that MR. CROKER had said no such thing; and that oreover the document actually contained a positive decla- tion, "that any person was eligible to be Paymaster of idows' Pensions, always excepting one, and that one THE REASURER OF THE NAVY!"

THERE is no portion of society which does not feel at once miration and gratitude for the noble gift which HIS MA- STY has made of his Library to the public. MR. BENNET ems alone dissatisfied, and on Friday observed, in the House Commons, that he understood the KING was also going to ve his residence at BRIGHTON to the public. How MR. ENNET got this notion into his head it is quite impossible r us to imagine, nor does it much signify. To the actual ft of the books of the Sovereign we again recur, because the laises which it has called forth from all classes, have not been accompanied by a desire of rivalry on the part of those whose olitics, generally speaking, are hostile to the things that be.

We have been furnished with a Prospectus for establishing public library in the vicinity of Charing-cross, by the con- butions of WHIGS, RADICALS, and Independents—flattered o a hope of making a figure by the approaching annihilation the Surrey Reading-room near Blackfriars'-bridge, and mulated by the establishment of another thing of the same t in the neighbourhood of Fleet-street, the united forces of se who cannot praise without envying, nor envy without empting to imitate, have been mustered; and so much pro- ss has already been made, that the following persons have ually sent in their contributions.

At a meeting of the Chairman and Committee for establish- a public library, on Saturday, March 15, 1823, present—

H. R. H. THE DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, K. G. in the Chair.

LORD HOLLAND — EARL GREY
LORD DUNCANNON — SIR R. WILSON
Treasurer, SIR J. MACINTOSH
W. COBBETT, Esq. Registrar.

It was communicated to the Committee that the following ooks had been already received, as contributions, from the ubscribers:—

His R. H. the DUKE OF GLOUCESTER, CHANCELLOR of the University Cambridge! presents A Syllabus of Lectures on the Discovery of Longitude, to be written in Latin by himself.

LORD HOLLAND—"WEBSTER'S Companion to the Altar," and a rtuguese translation of "Rule a Wife and have a Wife." (scarce).

LORD DUNCANNON—BROOKES'S Gazetteer!

LORD GREY—BARON GRIMM!

SIR R. WILSON—BELISARIUS, (Imperial copy) and POOR ROBIN, unbound. Subscriber's edition.

LORD ERSKINE—BUCHAN'S Domestic Medicine.

LORD TANKERVILLE—TOM THUMB, and the Beauties of GRAMMONT.

MR. H. G. BENNET—The Newgate Calendar, and Walton's Complete Angler.

MR. CHAD—Curious MS. Life and Adventures of Cardinal Puff; or, "onne foole makyth manie."

LORD NUGENT—STERNE. Folio.

MR. HUME—COCKER. Foolscap copy.

MR. W. BANKES—HERVEY'S Meditations.

MR. H. BANKES—CUMBERLAND'S Memoirs of Himself.

SIR F. BURDETT—Miss-cellany from the Harleian MSS. with a striking likeness.

MR. WELLS (Huntingdon)—A Treatise on NOSOLOGY.

MR. PLUNKETT—POPE'S Essay on Man.

MR. MACKENZIE—Peregrine Pickle.

MR. CALCRAFT—History of Chester (MS.)

MR. MABERLEY, SEN.—"Strutt's Antiquities."

MR. R. GORDON—Voyage to Bombay.

EARL GROSVENOR—MOORE'S Fugitive works.

MR. MARRYATT—New edition of LLOYD'S Elocution.

ALDERMAN WOOD—"Blighted Ambition."

MR. SCARLETT—"The Touchstone of Modern Assurance."

MR. RICARDO—HEBREW MELODIES!

THE DUKE OF HAMILTON—"A Tale of Wonder."

MR. CREEVEY—Slang Dictionary—Grose: Tom I.

MR. E. ELLICE—THE SPY; a Tale of the Neutral Ground!

MR. LAMETON—"Le nain jaune," and Coleman's Vagaries.

MR. WAITHMAN—The Draper's Letters.

MR. COKE—Sheep Shearing, a Pastoral; the Pleasures of Memory, and a Series of Weekly Essays.

MR. M. A. TAYLOR—The Cook's Oracle, with Plates, and a Table of Contents.

COLONEL DAVIES—Fac-simile Copy of HUME'S Essays, Calf.

LORD BLESSINGTON—"BROWNE'S Vulgar Errors," and the Balance of Power.

SIR CHARLES VERNON—Chamberlain's Travels.

MR. HUGHES BALL—Rejected Addresses!

MR. BROUGHAM—"OLD NICK," and "YELLOWLY on Convulsions."

A Lady—(by the EARL OF ESSEX)—YOUNG'S Night Thoughts.

HON. B. CRAVEN—Clarissa, translated into French, beautiful edition (sheets.)

S. ROGERS, Esq.—JOE MILLER, and Paley's Philosophy, with a Coloured Portrait.

MR. BENNAL—Moses in Egypt, an Oratorio, and a Collection of Jeux-d'esprit; also a parcel of Sealing Wax, for the use of the Subscribers.

MR. N. FELLOWES—The Guardian.

LORD CLANMORRIS—CAIN, a Mystery—with Cuts.

LORD SEFTON—HUDIBRAS—GREY'S Folio Edition.

Several of the Irish Titular Bishops have contributed Roman Translations; and BROOKS'S Club have presented the Society with a splendid copy of "The Court and Parliament of Beasts," translated from the "Animali Parlanti of GIAMBATISTO CASTE."

We shall continue to announce any further contributions which may be made.

PUBLIC CORRUPTION.

IN the MORNING POST of yesterday, MR. ROBINS, of Covent-garden, announces the "sale of a nobleman of acknowledged taste and liberality." We have heard of venality in Governments, but we believe this is the first time that a Peer of the realm has been publicly put up to auction in the metropolis.

TO those who are still sceptical, even after the public denunciation of MR. PLUNKETT, the King's Attorney-General, and Catholic Advocate, we address the following copy of the Test of the Secret Societies established in IRELAND; it has been transmitted to us from extremely high authority, and its authenticity may be relied upon:—

THE ROYAL UNITED IRISHMAN'S TEST.

DEC. 26, 1822.

1st. I do, in the awful presence of God, solemnly swear on the Holy Evangelist, to keep secret of my committee-man, and all those here present, until death.

2d. That I will obey every awful summons from my committee-man, at any time that I am called upon by day or night, or when doing my lawful business, and no other's on earth of any rank or situation whatsoever in life, while ever any of my committee-men lives or is in Ireland.

3d. That I will not associate, join, aid, or assist, or be present, if possible, at any one act, that might coincide or come within the limits of the present patriotic system, prevailing at present in Ireland, without the consent of my committee-man, until death.

4th. That if I hear of any boon brother, or loyal brethren that will violate or break through the above vow, that is, by aiding, assisting, or being present at such act, without the consent of their committee-men, when I know them to be duly bound by the same, that said to go and make it known to my committee-men, and by transgressing against such vow, that I am content to suffer the punishment due to such crime—that is, to be shot, or hanged, or consumed to ashes, or any other punishment inflicted on me by the Central Committee.

5th. That I will never see a brother or brother's wife in distress, without relieving them as far forth as I can; and that I will not pay any such subscription to any member or members belonging to this Royal Society, but to my Committee, or to the Treasurer appointed by the Committee.

6th. That I will not have a carnal knowledge of a brother's wife, sister, or mother, when I know them to be so nearly connected, except by the awful sacrament of matrimony.

7th. That I will not rob, steal, or plunder, except fire, side-arms, or ammunition, or something belonging to them, but in time of an open rebellion.

8th. That I will join, aid, and assist to destroy all tyrants, kings' suppressors, and heretics, not of the true Roman Catholic and Apostolic Religion, until death.

9th. That I will not go before Judge or Jury, Court of Enquiry, Coroner's Inquest, or any other trial whatsoever in life, so as that any member or members, collectively or individually, might suffer the slightest hurt or harm thereby.

10th. That I will not wrong any brother or brother's wife to the value of one shilling, without making restitution therein.

11th. That I will not quarrel, brag, nor boast of the strength of our confederates to any living human being, except to a brother; and that I will not quarrel nor fight but against those who would do me or some of my Royal Brethren harm.

12th. That I will plant the Tree of Liberty in as many hearts as I can depend my life upon, and no others of any rank on earth, until death.

13th. That I will fight knee-deep in Orange or any other heretic's blood. That the crying of children, the moaning of women, or the groaning of men shall never terrify or undaunt me without fighting for the long-promised liberty of the Roman Catholic and Apostolic Church.

14th. That I will not hint, dint, write, post, engrave, cut, paint, nor print, in any one form or shape whatsoever, in life, so as to give information against any of my loyal brethren, or break any of my lawful vows until death.

SECOND LAST CATECHISM.

Dear Sir, or Gentlemen, I find myself very happy.—Question. In what respect?—Answer. On the visit of our late Sovereign; that's pleasing to all men.

QUARRELLING WORDS—Sir, or Gentlemen, I detest ye, or you; respect the law.

NIGHT WORDS—Your attempts are good, and God will prosper them.

COMMITTEE WORDS—There are but few in number, and their merit shall be rewarded.

Q. When will have full moon?—A. When the two ends will meet.

A GENERAL TOAST—Here is fortitude.—A. Perseverance; be it so.

LAST CATECHISM.

Q. Where is the oak stick you promised me?—A. It is not strengthened as yet.

Q. Where did it grow, that it's not straight?—A. It grew in Austria, flowered in England, and took root in Ireland.

Q. It's a gloomy day, or night, or it's a dark day, &c.—A. It's not so very dark or gloomy but that when two gay fellows or brothers meet they may know each other.

Q. What o'clock is it?—A. Twelve o'clock.

ORIGINAL POETRY.

THE GRAND REVOLUTION!

TUNE—"The Tight Little Island."

"YE Whigs now attend, and list to a friend,
"If you value a free Constitution,
"Ev'ry nerve let us strain for the Patriots of Spain,
"And cry up their brave Revolution.
"Huzza! for the brave Revolution!
"Success to the brave Revolution!
"We'll all to a man, bawl as loud as we can,
"Huzza! for the brave Revolution!

"When BONEY invaded their country, and waded
"Through oceans of blood to make JOE king,
"We ne'er made a push, and cared not a rush
"If Spain had a king, or had no king:
"But then there was no Revolution!
"No enlightening, wise Revolution!
"They only fought then, for their king back again,
"And not for a brave Revolution!

"We once made a rout, most valiant and stout,
"For Naples to throw off her yoke, Sirs,
"But Tories so wary, vowed base Carbonari
"Were thieves, and their valour all smoke, Sirs!
"To naught came their grand Revolution!
"Upset was their grand Revolution!
"Poor, thick-headed calves, they were rebels by halves,
"And made nought of their grand Revolution!

"Then we spouted for weeks, in aid of the Greeks,
"But they proved rather lax in their works, Sirs,
"For the brave Parguinotes, in cutting of throats,
"Excelled e'en the murderous Turks, Sirs;
"So we gave up the Greek Revolution,
"None thought of the Greek Revolution,
"Folks cared not a straw whether Turkish Bashaw
"Ruled the roast—or the Greek Revolution.

"But Spain, with true bravery—spurning her slavery,
"Vows she'll have freedom, or die now,
"And all that she'll need will be trifles indeed,
"Such as arms, ammunition, and rhino!
"Success to her brave resolutions!
"And just to collect contributions,
"At dinner we'll meet, in Bishopsgate-street,
"In aid of her brave resolutions!"

So to feasting they went, on a Friday in Lent,
And mustered what forces they cou'd, Sirs,
There was DUKE SAN LORENZO, with plenty of friends, O,
Great SUSSEX and ALDERMAN WOOD, Sirs!
The Spaniards pushed hard their petition
For money to buy ammunition,
But they met with a balk, for Whigs are all talk,
With nought else would they help their petition.

They didn't ask HUME, for fear, in a fume,
At the cost of the war he'd be nibbling,
So they left him to fight in the Commons all night,
With PALMERSTON'S estimates quibbling.
He there with much circumlocution,
Moved many a wise resolution,
While the still wiser Whigs were feasting like pigs,
In the cause of the grand Revolution!

DON HOLLAND, of Kensington, while his Whig friends in town,
Grand tavern speeches were planning,
Wrote a note just to tell the brave ARGUELLES
How much wiser the Whigs are, than CANNING.
"All England one feeling displays, Sir,
"Never mind what the Minister says, Sir!
"At him you may hoot—and the Council to boot,
"For England is all in a blaze, Sir!"

As the Whigs had for years rung peace in our ears,
When for war the whole nation did burn, Sirs,
'Twould surely be hard, if they now were debarred
From crying for war in their turn, Sirs!
So MACKINTOSH made an oration,
As bold as a war proclamation,
Then finished his boast, with this apposite toast,
"May peace be preserved to the nation!"

Then leave 'em to prate, and spout, and debate,
We all know there's nought but a show meant,
Let 'em blow hot and cold—be shy, or be bold,
As the humour prevails at the moment:
Let 'em cry up the grand Revolution!
The gallant and brave Revolution!
And all to a man—bawl as loud as they can,
Huzza! for the brave Revolution!

TO THE RIGHT HON. LORD GAMBIER.

St. Petersburgh, 11-23 Nov. 1822.

MY LORD—Your Lordship's well-known character, as a friend to truth, induces me to address the present letter to you, under the conviction, that the remarks which I shall have occasion to submit to your notice, will be favourably received, as being connected with the real interests of religion, and those of the Church of which we are members.

I once doubted the propriety of addressing your Lordship on the subject of certain events which have lately occurred in this city, and at the port of Cronstadt, and have been the occasion of deep and sincere regret to the most considerable and respectable portion of the British residents at these places; but my doubts were removed on seeing the Morning Herald of the 3d October, which professes to give an account of a Meeting of the Bethel Union Society, at which your Lordship presided.

It is not for me to pretend to enter into any discussion as to the propriety of giving public encouragement to the itinerant preaching of Laymen and Sectaries, more especially where there are regularly educated preachers of the Gospel, in the full discharge of their important duties; nor will I attempt to dwell upon the extreme caution which appears to me to be requisite, in entrusting the inculcation of divine truth, and the explanation of so important a subject as religion, to those, who, from their profession and education, can have had but little or no opportunity of paying to it that exclusive and serious attention which it demands. My more immediate concern, at present, is with our Church Establishment at Cronstadt, which has been attacked with all the art and subtilty that its opponents have now become masters of by constant practice. At the meeting above alluded to, a certain master of a merchant vessel, calling himself Captain Higgins, for the edification of his auditors, or the gratification of his own vanity, is stated to have indulged in the following remarks:—

"Would you believe it, Ladies and Gentlemen, our meetings excited the alarm of the Clergyman at Cronstadt. The Rev. Gentleman did me the honour to send a message to me, demanding by what authority I held these meetings. I replied, I knew no authority except that general one breathed into our hearts by the Almighty, to do all the good we can to our fellow-creatures. I thought it no harm to send a simple Sea Captain's compliments to him, to say that the seamen were anxious for a more intimate acquaintance with the life and conduct of our Lord. They had as yet but scraps; they wanted now to feed on the word; they were not so interested about the Gospel, when it was preached to them by men, whose lives and conversation were not suitable to its spirit and precepts."

If my Lord, I had been present at a meeting, where such language as that reported, and now quoted, had been used, feeling as I do, a warm attachment to our excellent Church as by law established, and a great anxiety for its respectability and security, I should have thought that this individual had not only been guilty of impertinent interference, but that the message which he had sent to the Clergyman in question, whose province he was thus deliberately invading, was gross and insulting in the extreme. Had the character and conduct of the "Rev. Gentleman" been as adverse to the spirit and precepts of the Gospel as he would wish to represent it, (and I can assure your Lordship that nothing can be further from the truth), it surely was the duty of every charity rather to have concealed the faults and failings of an erring brother, than to have thus unnecessarily obtruded them upon the notice of the public; and the fact, if true, when mentioned at a meeting of persons assembled for a professedly religious purpose, would, to my mind at least, have been a more fit subject for silent regret, than for "long and vehement applause," which the newspaper report asserts to have been the immediate effect of the statement in question. But your Lordship will, no doubt, be surprised to find, that the paragraph I have quoted, contains not a syllable of truth from beginning to end; and Mr. Blackmore has written to that effect to the editor, stating, that so far from any communication having taken place, either directly or indirectly, between this Captain Higgins and himself, he was not even aware of the existence of such a person, till he saw his name in the newspaper.

As your Lordship may not be aware of the circumstance, I think it right to state, that at the sea-port town of Cronstadt, most ample provision has been made for the religious worship of British seamen. There is a church expressly for their accommodation, not far distant from the shipping, and full service is regularly performed there.

It is undoubtedly the duty of every master of a vessel to attend to the moral and religious conduct of his crew. He is the head of the family, and they are his household; thus, if he privately instructs them in their duties, he is highly to be commended. But when in port, and within musket-shot of a convenient church, where all the sittings are free and open, and in which there is ample room for every sailor who is willing to attend, I feel persuaded your Lordship will agree with me in thinking that a self-appointed teacher, who collects men from different ships for the purpose of haranguing them, is actuated by motives of pride and vanity, more than by those of wishing to inculcate the great truths of the Christian religion—and thus may eventually be the cause of serious evil.

May not this practice be employed, or rather is it not, in many instances, by the political demagogue, and made the vehicle of propagating his "pernicious sentiments?" Is it not possible, nay probable, that the mask of religion may (as our own history proves,) be the pretence or cover for such a detested project? And in these eventful days, when so many hands are raised against the ALTAR and the THRONE, is it wise to incur the risk of such a momentous evil as that which I have thus ventured to deprecate?

Independently, however, of political motives, I cannot but think that the plan is not well calculated to serve the purposes of real and pure RELIGION, however well it may be planned to promote sectarian views. In the present instance it is absolutely unnecessary and uncalled for, and, IN ALL CASES, it is to be feared, will abet and encourage the cause of schism, and have a decidedly hostile effect upon the ESTABLISHED CHURCH.

Situated as we are, in a foreign country, political and religious concord is, in an especial degree, necessary to be preserved among the subjects of Great Britain; but it is my firm opinion, grounded, indeed, on what has already happened, that the BETHEL UNION "WILL BE THE CERTAIN PROMOTER OF DISU[illegible]ION.

It would be too long, and perhaps too disgusting, to trouble your Lordship with a detailed account of the manner in which the project has been endeavoured to be carried into effect. I will only assert, that the plan of establishing a Bethel Union here has been exclusively in the hands of the ENEMIES OF OUR CHURCH; and, I may fairly state, that it is entirely adverse to the wishes and views of almost every person of credit, honour, and respectability, both here and at CRONSTADT.

That there are, however, some of our countrymen residing in this country, who have the mischievous design to injure our Church, and who leave no stone unturned to effect their purpose, admits, unfortunately of no doubt; but I trust that the cause of truth will triumph, and our Church be unmoved by the attacks of her enemies, both by sea and by land.

I have already made this letter too long; when I commenced it was mainly with the view of shewing how your Lordship's name had been in a manner brought forward, to countenance a foul and wicked attack upon a most respectable clergyman. I shall conclude by begging your Lordship's attention to the enclosed copy of the REV. R. W. BLACKMORE'S LETTER, containing a denial of the whole story, as stated to have been delivered by CAPT. HIGGINS, at the Meeting at which your Lordship presided; at the same time informing you of my intention to cause this letter to be published in the English newspaper which has the greatest influence and circulation, in order that the above exposition of facts may be made as public as the story has been which has rendered it necessary.

AN ORTHODOX LAYMAN.

THEATRICALS.

WE had intended in this department of to-day's paper to have presented our readers with a plan for rendering dramatic performances strictly moral, with which we have been favoured, and to which we once before cursorily alluded; but an event has occurred in the theatrical world which calls for more immediate attention;—we mean, the death of KEMBLE!

It is true, that having retired from the stage, we have not now to regret his loss as an actor; but it is not only as an actor that one must lament such a man, for great as his acting WAS, the obligations under which the British public cannot fail to feel themselves, to his talents and genius, are due to him, as the conductor of the national stage, as the director of the national taste, and as the most luminous practical illustrator of our national bard, rather than as a mere performer!

To the refinement and acquirements of KEMBLE are attributable that splendid propriety, that classic dignity, that "second nature," with which our drama is now adorned and beautified. What would the immortal SHAKSPEARE have felt could he have seen his MACBETH as it was represented at the opening of the new Covent Garden Theatre? What would the age, in which he lived, have thought of his plays, had they seen them so acted, and so gotten up? Was there, we will ask the oldest theatrical critic living,—was there ever a more powerful combination of dramatic excellence presented to a British audience? We mention this play, because it united with the personal powers of him, who is gone, the gigantic talents of his unequalled sister, the wildest flights, the most magnificent poetry, of our SHAKSPEARE—the witching charms of music—the splendour of pageantry—the mimic power of magic. But it is useless to dwell upon his professional merits to the present generation—To those who are to follow us, we can give, from the inspired pencil of LAWRENCE, a faithful portraiture of his fine countenance, and of his magnificent figure—his powers of acting can only be conveyed traditionally to our children, as those of GARRICK have been handed down to us. But his genius, the classicality of his mind, the extent of his acquirements, and the excellence of his taste, can never be forgotten so long as the system he introduced and perfected continues to characterize, refine, and ornament our theatre.

There is, however, due to KEMBLE, and to his family, vast praise, for conduct not strictly professional, but which has given a tone to the profession, and raised it in the scale of society to a place which, till the predominance of their influence it most decidedly did not hold.

We shall not be thought to violate the sanctity of the grave, nor to speak with unnecessary harshness of theatrical men and women who are gone, when we say that fifty years since, with the exception of two or three "perfect miracles," actors were a different race of beings from what actors are now.

An actor in those days was generally a loose unprincipled person, unknown in society, except as a butt or a buffoon; his habits were intemperate, his manners low; his language immodest, his conduct licentious; his leisure hours were passed in the taverns and pot-houses round about the theatre, and his recreations were dicing or drinking, smoking, sotting, and dissipating.

What are the principal actors now?—The associates upon equal terms with our nobility and gentry. What are their pursuits—their manners—their habits?—Those of scholars, of artists, of gentlemen. We name no names, for that might be considered invidious, but it is quite impossible to look round in society and not perceive the vast improvement in the conduct and relative position of the players.

We have no hesitation in saying, that to the influence of the KEMBLE family this change is principally owing; and if any members of the profession were mean enough to shrink from the idea of following one of themselves, although we should be sorry if there existed any who possessed such feelings, we should still nevertheless attribute the change to the same influence.

The sight of so much talent and so much propriety united, the sight of so much attention as it produced, and so much respect as it excited, perpetually before the eyes of young and rising performers, would insensibly produce the effect, and the whole community be unconsciously and gradually elevated by the force of an example, which, if offered to them authoritatively, might have been disdainfully rejected, but being left open to their observation, could not fail of exciting in the well-dispositioned a desire of emulation;—perhaps, in the malevolent, an accompanying spirit of envy. Be that as it may, we believe, however varying professional opinions may be, as to the precise point of excellence to which KEMBLE had attained in his art, there will not be found, in the whole theatrical world, a being so unjust, or so insensible, as to deny to that great man the merit which we have just attributed to him;—at least, we trust not;—for by him not only has the art itself been improved, but the position of the artist. He has shewn it compatible to appreciate the actor on the stage, and esteem the man in society.

JOHN KEMBLE was born in the year 1757, at Prescott, in Lancashire: he was bred a Roman Catholic, and being, we believe, intended for the priesthood, was, after a suitable education at Sedgely Park, entered at the University of Douay.

He did not appear in London till after MRS. SIDDONS had made that indelible impression which remains as fresh as ever on the public mind. He performed HAMLET, for the first time, at Drury-lane, in September, 1783; in 1796 he became manager of that theatre, from which period until his secession, the energies of his mind and body were directed to the advancement of his art. The farewell dinner, which was given him on leaving the stage, where men of all parties and professions rallied round him to offer the tribute of national respect to exalted merit, is as an honourable testimony of public favour unequalled in the annals of our country.

MR. KEMBLE was the author of some light dramatic pieces; of some lectures, which he delivered before his appearance in London, at Edinburgh; and of several alterations from SHAKESPEARE.

In private life, MR. KEMBLE blended, with the acquirements of the scholar, the accomplishments of the gentleman—his manners were distinguished by a winning softness and mildness—his disposition was social and endearing—his smile was full of kindness and benevolence—and his mind, stored as it was, and active in pursuit of knowledge and of fame, was as single and as simple as that of a child.

His enemies have attributed failings to him, which were known to him only by name; and those who have seen him mingling with men of the world, or who have had occasion to touch him upon business, where even his own interests were vitally concerned, will bear testimony that he, who was counted by the envious few, a thing of art, was the most confiding, the most unsuspicious, and the most natural of human beings.

We could have wished that Covent Garden Theatre had been closed for the night on which the news of his death reached town: it was a mark of respect due to him, not only as the brightest ornament the stage possessed, but as a principal proprietor. Perhaps a sense of delicacy towards his partners, induced his brother not to press it. In mercantile speculations, feelings are never suffered to interfere with trade.

PORTSMOUTH, March 13.—Last night arrived the Success transport, Lieut. Church, R.N. Agent, from Barbadoes, which she left on the 13th February. Commodore Owen's squadron had been separated in a heavy gale of wind off Lisbon, in consequence of which the Forte, Sir Thomas Cochrane; Billette, Capt. Leith; Eden, Capt. Lawrence, and Valorous, Capt. Murray, arrived at Barbadoes before the Commodore, and immediately began refitting and watering. On the arrival of the Commodore the above ships, with the Surinam, Capt. Crole, and Icarus, Capt. Watkins, on the West India station, were ordered instantly to sea, with sealed orders, and at sunset they were nearly out of sight, steering different courses. The Commodore in the Gloucester, with the Phaeton, Capt. Sturt, were refitting in Carlisle Bay, Barbadoes.

OXFORD.—The Professor of Geology having presented to the University a large and valuable collection of specimens illustrative of that science, in a convocation holden on Tuesday last a vote of thanks for this liberal donation was unanimously passed; and also a grant of 300l. for providing cabinets, and making such alterations in the Museum as may be requisite for the due arrangement and preservation of the same. Wm. Howard was admitted Scholar of New College. The following degrees were conferred:—MASTERS OF ARTS—Rev. Stephen Reay, St. Alban Hall: Rev. Amos Crymes, Baliol College; J. S. Boone, Student of Christ Church; Rev. J. Birkett, Christ Church; Rev. Frederic Borradaile, Brasenose College.—BACHELOR OF ARTS—P. W. Mure, Christ Church.

HUNTING INTELLIGENCE.—H. Jolliffe, Esq.'s Fox Hounds meet to-morrow at Platt's Green; Wednesday, at Horse-hills; Saturday, at Capel.—The Surrey Fox Hounds, to-morrow, at Riddlesdown; Thursday, at Godstone; Saturday, at Farley Green.—The Sanderstead Harriers, to-morrow, Wednesday, and Saturday, at kennel.—The Oakley Hounds, Tuesday, at Clapham at Park; Thursday, at Marston Thrift; Saturday, at Swineshead.—The East Sussex Fox Hounds, to-morrow, at Hellingly; Thursday, at the Devil's Dyke; at half-past 10.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARIS, MARCH 12.—The departure of the Duke d'Angoulême appears to be fixed for Saturday next. The last part of his baggage was sent off some days ago. Marshal Oudinot (Duke of Reggio) left yesterday.

The Chamber of Deputies met on Saturday se'nnight, when fifteen Members of the Left Side attended. No business of importance was transacted, and an adjournment took place to Friday.

The Duke de Cornegliano (Marshal Moncey) took leave of His Majesty on Monday, previously to his departure on the following day for the Pyrenean army. We believe most, if not all, the superior officers have now set off to assume their commands, and it remains unpredicted that the Duke d'Angouleme himself would leave Paris on Saturday.

The Duke de Reggio, previously to his departure for the South army, resigned the command of the National Guard of Paris into the hands of Major-General the Duke de Clermont Tonnerre.

Count Bulgari, Ex-Chargé d'Affaires of Russia at Madrid, reached yesterday a courier from St. Petersburgh. His Excellency immediately afterwards went to the residence of Count Pozzo di Borgo, Ambassador of His Majesty the Emperor Alexander, at the French Court.

Count Amede d'Escars, Aide-de-Camp to the Duke d'Angoulême, set off this morning. The Prince Generalissimo will depart on Sunday. All the arrangements are made for commencing hostilities between the 1st and 5th of April. The Duchess d'Angoulême will set off, it is said, on Wednesday in Easter week.

Lieutenant-General Baron d'Eroles is very actively employed in organizing the troops of the Faith, who are in the department of the Eastern Pyrennees, and along the frontier line.

A letter from Stutgard, dated the 7th inst. states, "The Queen of Wurtemburg was yesterday, the 6th inst. delivered of a prince."

LISBON, Feb. 27.—Extraordinary Sitting of the Cortes.—The Letter of Justice said, a dispatch has just been received at his office, by the Governador du Justiça of Oporto, which, in truth, does contain agreeable news. His Majesty has ordered them to be communicated to the Sovereign Congress, that the Government was authorized to act in such form as the Cortes shall think advisable. The Conde de Amarante, after having traversed a great part of the province of Minho, went to Villa Real, and on the 21st, at the head of some militia and some countrymen, mounted his horse, and cried "Death to the Constitution, and all its followers." United with all of his party, he proposed to overthrow the constitutional system which happily governs us. In the city of Oporto, where the greatest tranquility and energy prevail, speedy measures were taken as soon as this was known, as well as in the province of Minho. This is when His Majesty orders to be signified to the Congress, that the measures to be adopted which the Government needs to remedy the evils that may arise from so fatal an event. The Minister of State, at the request of the President, read some of the documents received by the Government, and assured the assembly that Oporto was perfectly tranquil and devoted to the Constitution, and that Minho was protected by the arrival of the brave General Luiz de Rego.—A committee was appointed, which was declared permanent.

MADRID, MARCH 1.—A letter from Fernandez Gasco of this date from the Palace, addressed to one of the Ministers, signifies the King's Assent to the resignation of the Ministers, after expressing his satisfaction for their services. It is said, and we have it as certain, that His Majesty has appointed the following individuals as his new Ministry:—D. A. Florey Estrada, Secretary of State; D. Jose Maria Torre, Minister of War; D. J. Calvo de Royas, Minister of Finances; D. Jose Zorraquin, Minister of Grace and Justice; Brigadier Regato Romay, Minister of Marine; and Antonio Dias del Moral, Minister of the Colonies.

OPENING OF THE CORTES, MARCH 1.—The Session was opened this day. An official dispatch was read by the Secretary of Grace and Justice, stating, that as his Majesty's health did not permit his assisting at the opening of the Session, the Secretary of Dispatch would deliver to the President the Speech which his Majesty would have had the satisfaction of pronouncing. The Secretary of the Government delivered the said discourse to the President, who read it as follows:—"Gentlemen Deputies—The extraordinary circumstances under which the Session is opened, presents an immense field to the patriotism of the Representatives of the Spanish people, and will make it famous in national annals. Spain, now the object of attention to all nations, to solve the grand problem which occupies the minds of Kings and people. On the event are depending the hopes, the fears, the interests of humanity, and the caprices of ambition and arrogance.—The Continental Monarchies of the Holy Alliance have raised their voices against the political institutions of this country, which has obtained its independence and liberty at the price of its blood. Spain, answering the insidious intimations of those Potentates, has solemnly manifested to the world, that its fundamental laws must not be dictated but by itself. This principle, clear and luminous, can only be attacked by sophistry aided by arms, and those who appeal to this last reason, in the nineteenth century, give the highest testimony of the justice of her cause.—His Christian Majesty has said that 100,000 Frenchmen would come to arrange the domestic affairs of Spain, and to amend the errors of her institutions. When was it that the office was given to others to amend laws? In what code is it written that military invasions shall be the forerunners of happiness to any people?—It is a mockery of reason to combat such anti-social errors; and it is not becoming the Constitutional King of Spain to make any apology for the just national cause, especially when, to avoid all sentiments of shame, they cover themselves with the mantle of the most detestable hypocrisy.—I hope that the energy, firmness, and constancy of the Cortes will be the best answer to the Speech of his most Christian Majesty. I hope that, firm in their principles, and resolved to tread in the path of their duty, they will always be the Cortes of the 9th and 11th of January, and will prove themselves in every respect worthy of the nation which has confided to them its destinies. I hope that reason and justice will prove more strong as the spirit of oppression and slavery. The nation which capitulates with a foe, whose bad faith is notorious, is a nation already subjugated: to receive laws which an enemy wishes to impose by force of arms, is the greatest ignominy. If war is already the irreparable evil, the nation is magnanimous, and will again hasten to combat for its independence and rights. The road to glory is already known to the nation, and the sacrifices which this struggle may require will be trivial. Firmness and patriotism offer a thousand resources, which in the hands of Spaniards will always produce the happiest results. For my part, I again offer the National Congress to co-operate by my efforts towards realizing the hopes entertained by the friends of the liberal institutions in Spain, by putting in execution all the means in my power to repel force by force. My seasonable removal, and that of the Cortes, to a place less exposed to the influence of military operations, must paralyze the plans of the enemy, and avoid the suspension of the influence of active Government, which ought to be communicated to every corner of the monarchy.—The army, whose services in the present cause are so great, is in a state of organization, and is recruiting, according to the late decrees of the Cortes. The victories which they obtain against the factious will be the forerunners of other more interesting ones over foreign enemies.—The provinces display in general the best spirit. The misfortunes they have suffered from those who call themselves the Defenders of Religion, have dissipated the illusions of the Government, and convinced all that the Constitution is the true road.—The altercations in our diplomatic relations have not diminished the national spirit. The timid, who never calculate on their resources, and the wicked, who avail themselves of their weakness, will never alter the sentiments of illustrious nations that are not accustomed to sanction injustice.—In general the various branches of the public Administration present a prospect the most favourable. The Cortes will continue, with their usual zeal, the important tasks they have undertaken, and the national prosperity which they have in view will consolidate the Constitutional system, defended by valour and enthusiasm."

"Palace, 1st March, 1823."—(Signed) FERDINANDO.

A Committee was appointed to prepare an Address in answer, consisting of Arguelles, Valdes (D.C.), Salvato, Prado e Ieturi. The President concluded the Sitting, amidst the loudest acclamations of the spectators in the galleries.

CONSTANTINOPLE, JAN. 7.—Lord Strangford has now resumed negociations with the Porte, and not the smallest doubt is entertained that peace will be preserved in the East.

On Thursday, Mr. Hunter, the King's Messenger, arrived at the Foreign Office from Vienna.

Lord Amherst and family sailed from Plymouth on Thursday, in the Jupiter, for India.

Gen. Humbert, the French officer, who, at the commencement of the war, landed in Ireland with a small force, died lately at New Orleans.

The equinoctial gales of last week were extremely violent, and its effects were severely felt. Several ships were wrecked on different parts of the coast; and in many counties, trees, houses, and other buildings experienced considerable damage.

MISCELLANEOUS.

On Monday, at two o'clock, a Cabinet Council was held at the Foreign Office, Downing-street.

On Tuesday night, Mr. Jackson left the Foreign Office for Madrid.

Tuesday the Duke of York held his first Military Levee since his long and severe indisposition, at the Commander-in-Chief's Office, which was attended by the following distinguished Military Officers:—Generals Sir G. Nugent, N. Bulfour, Marquis of Huntly; Lieut.-Generals Sir W. Clinton, Sir J. Vandeleure; Majors-General Sir J. Byng, Sir G. Airey, Pigot, Turner, Blunt, and nearly thirty others.

On Sunday, arrived at Dover, His Majesty's packet the Arrow, with the Duke of Devonshire and suite, and about 100 other persons; the French packet Henri IV. with about 30; the Sovereign, with the Marquis of Sligo and suite; and the Dasher, Post Office packet, with 130 passengers and upwards.

Orders have been transmitted from the Admiralty to the different public dock yards, immediately to build thirty sail of gun brigs, and it is supposed they will be ready for sea in less than three months. A powerful squadron is also fitting for the Mediterranean. Twelve sail of the line, it is reported, are about to be put in commission.

Orders have been received at Portsmouth for the immediate equipment of the Queen Charlotte, 120 guns; Ramillies, 74 guns; the Albion, 74 guns, the three guard ships.

Lord Corry has been elected Member for Fermanagh.

On Wednesday, a respectable meeting, consisting of upwards of 300 Merchants, Planters, &c. was held at the City of London Tavern, for the purpose of petitioning Parliament against the adoption of a measure prayed for by the East India Company—namely, the equalization of Duties upon all Sugars imported into the United Kingdom.—Charles Ellis, Esq. in the Chair. A petition to that effect was adopted.

On Wednesday a Court of Directors was held at the East India House, when Capt. W. Hay, of the ship Charles Grant, took leave of the Court, previous to departing for China direct.

The East India Company's ship Berwickshire arrived off the Wight early on Thursday morning. She sailed from Macao the 21st of November, and from St. Helena the 27th of January. All the ships of the season had arrived in China except the Regent and Thames.

On Thursday a Court of Common Council was held at Guildhall. A petition was presented from a Mr. J. B. Benard, which stated, that the petitioner had presented a design for London Bridge. In the advertisement published by the Committee that body had expressed its determination to open only those letters which accompanied and corresponded with the motto upon the three best architectural designs; the design of the petitioner was returned to him, but he had strong ground for believing that it had been broken open and resealed; he therefore prayed to state at the bar of the Court the grounds upon which his suspicions were founded. The petitioner was heard, and his petition referred to the Committee of City Lands.

The Army.—It may not be unacceptable to our numerous readers of the Army generally, to inform them (particularly those Captains of the standing of the years 1808 and 1809) that, in the event of a Brevet taking place, as there are at present only thirty of that rank on the full pay of the year 1808 (independent of twelve for the Ordnance, and nine for the Marines) that those Captains of the standing of 1809 will fall into the List of Brevet Majors, viz.:—Dragoons, 2; Foot Regiments, 25; Artillery, 11; Engineers, 1; Marines, 9—51.

The Commander-in-Chief has approved of the undress of the Infantry, to consist in future—Short jacket, single breasted, with gold or silver lace, sash, &c. blue foragine cap, gray overalls, with red seams.

It is ordered, that in future all Yeomanry and Volunteer Regiments shall be out at least 14 days permanent duty; the remainder of the days, 28 in number, are to be divided in drills and parades, at the option of the Commanding Officers.

The Aberdeen Chronicle states that Mr. Hume has been elected, by a majority of the Students, Rector of Marischal College. The Professors were against such a proceeding, and supported the Earl of Fife. The numbers were—For Mr. Hume, 98—Lord Fife, 94—Majority, 4.

On Saturday se'nnight, a meeting of the inhabitants of Edinburgh was held in the Caledonian Theatre, to petition Parliament to confer the right of voting for the Member for the City on the householders, under such limitations as to Parliament shall seem proper.—Resolutions and a Petition to that effect were agreed to.

The Kent Assizes commence to-morrow. Notwithstanding the extra Assize in Dec. last, there are already no less than 77 persons for trial.

Cambridge.—Wednesday last, John Musgrove, Esq. M.A. one of the Junior Fellows of Caius College, was elected a Senior Fellow of that Society; and Charles Beauclerk, B.A. was elected a Junior Fellow of the same Society.

A woman, named Mary Edwards alias Brinkley, who recently escaped from St. Alban's Gaol, was taken to Hatton Garden, Saturday, charged with telling servants' fortunes, and exciting them to rob their masters. She was adjudged to three months' imprisonment, and afterwards to be sent to St. Alban's.

A few days since, as a lad in the service of Mr. Cramp, a butcher, in Whitechapel, was passing down the steps of the slaughter-house, a large meat-hook caught his arm, and he remained suspended by it until his master lifted him off. The poor lad was conveyed to the London Hospital, where the sinews of the arm were found to be so much injured, that immediate amputation was resorted to as the only method of preserving life.

Saturday se'nnight, one of the workmen at the lace manufactory, Kensington, named Fisher, being indisposed, incautiously drank four or five glasses of rum; on Sunday morning, his head was swelled to an unusual size, entirely closing up his eyes, in which dreadful situation he lingered insensibly till Friday morning, about four o'clock, when he expired.

Last week, a fine girl, about nine years of age, was found drowned in the river above Beeleigh Mills, near Maldon, Essex; and upon inquiry, she was found to belong to the parish of Woodham Walter.

A Carlisle paper says, that, during a storm last week, "a poor man of the name of John Sharp, while returning to his own house, about a mile from Thornhill, was blown into a ditch filled with water, where the next morning he was found a corpse."

Tuesday, late in the evening, as Mr. Fawcett, of St. John-street, was coming to town from Kingston in a single horse chaise, he was addressed on the road by a person of very gentlemanly appearance, who asked as a particular favour if he would give him a seat in the chaise. Mr. Fawcett complied; but some time after he had set him down at Smithfield bars, he discovered that the grateful stranger had picked his pocket of his watch, and a purse containing ten sovereigns and some silver.

The Paris Papers mention that a favourite actor had lately been killed at Berlin by a grandson of Prince Blucher. Count Blucher is a young man about 21 years of age: in the house of Stieb the actor a scuffle took place, which ended in the Count's stabbing him with a dirk. It is further said, that Stieb returned hastily home from the Theatre, in consequence of receiving a letter advising him to do so, and that he found the Count in the passage of his house, and immediately struck him several blows. On the Count's being seized, it is added, a loaded pistol was found upon him besides the dirk. He was then taken before the Commandant, who asked him why he had the dirk and pistol about him. He answered, "What would the world think if they heard that the grandson of Prince Blucher could be defeated, and suffer his insulter to escape with impunity?" He was then asked for what purpose he was there? He said he would answer that in the proper time and place. Mr. Stieb is not expected to live. Blucher has paid court to Mrs. Stieb for a year past; she is a very handsome woman, 28 years of age.

Destructive Fire at Chatham.—The fire began at the City-wall at half-past nine o'clock, on the evening of the 1st of November, and spreading with fury along the westward of the Creek, continued to rage without abatement until five o'clock in the morning of the 3d. The whole of the Company's and European factories at Canton are destroyed. The re-construction of the buildings is estimated at 12,700,000 dollars. The number of houses burnt is officially returned at 13,700, but it is supposed amounts to 16,000. Five hundred Chinese lost their lives during the fire. The Company's loss is estimated at one million sterling. Woollens, raw silk, nankeens, and 30,000 chests of young green tea, were the principal articles destroyed.—The fire began at a baker's, about one quarter of a mile from the factory, and spread along the extent of buildings from Manhope, the wind blowing a perfect gale. The Chinese would not assist in pulling down the houses to allow the Europeans to exert their benevolent efforts. It was some time before four fire-engines could be put in motion. The seamen belonging to the Company's ships exerted themselves to save the factories, but they could not prevent the destruction of the whole of the Company's warehouses. All the British woollens were burnt, with the exception of 600 bales of broad cloth, which have been saved. Many thousand of the inhabitants were wandering about houseless, having lost the whole of what they possessed. The loss of British private property was small, except what may hereafter be sustained by the Hong, or Security Merchants, not making good their engagements.

PRESENT STATE OF THE MOREA.

Just published, in 1 vol. 8vo. illustrated by Plates, Woodcuts, &c. price 15s. bds

NARRATIVE of a TOUR through the MOREA, giving an Account of the present state of that Peninsula and its Inhabitants. By SIR WILLIAM GELL.

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Early in April will be published, in one vol. 12mo.

FABLES for the HOLY ALLIANCE, with other POEMS, &c. By THOMAS BROWN, the Younger.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had, by the same Author, The FUDGE FAMILY IN PARIS. 9th Edit. foolscap 8vo. 7s. 6d. bds.

Just published, price 9s. a third volume of

THE REMAINS of HENRY KIRKE WHITE, selected with prefatory Remarks. By R. SOUTHEY, Esq.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had the first Two Volumes, price 11. 1s.

Just published, the second edition, in 8vo. price 14s. boards,

FIFTEEN YEARS in INDIA; or, Sketches of a Soldier's Life. Being an attempt to describe persons and things in various parts of Hindostan. From the Journal of an Officer in His Majesty's Service.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, in 12mo. price 9s. the second edition of

BODY and SOUL. Consisting of a Series of lively and pathetic Stories, calculated to excite the attention and interest of the Religious World. Contents:—The Town Rector—Philosophical Inquiry—Merchant's Family—Sick Penitent—Unitarian—Clerical Conference—Lunatic Asylum—Liturgy—Assizes—Athenasian Creed—Sea Captain—Domiciliary Visits.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. In the press, and shortly will be published,

BODY and SOUL. Volume the Second.

Just published, in 18mo. price 2s. 6d. half-bd.

AN EPITOME of the HISTORY of ENGLAND, equally adapted to Domestic and to School Education. By W. JILLARD HORT. Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

HORT'S COURSE OF EDUCATION, 22 vols. in a case. 3l. 13s. 6d.

Just published, in 18mo. price 3s. half-bd.

A GENERAL VIEW of the SCIENCES and ARTS, equally adapted to Domestic and to School Education. By W. JILLARD HORT. Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

HORT'S COURSE OF EDUCATION, 22 vols. in a case, 3l. 13s. 6d.

Just published, in 18mo. price 6s. half-bd.

AN INTRODUCTION to NATURAL HISTORY, illustrated with numerous Wood Cuts, equally adapted to Domestic and to School Education. By W. JILLARD HORT.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

HORT'S COURSE OF EDUCATION, 22 vols. in a case, 3l. 13s. 6d.

Just published,

AN EASY GRAMMAR of the FRENCH LANGUAGE. 4s.
2. EXERCISES adapted to the Grammar of the French Language. 3s. 6d.
3. KEY to the FRENCH EXERCISES. 2s. 6d.
4. ELEMENTS of FRENCH CONVERSATION, including Familiar Phrases and Easy Dialogues, each Subject being preceded by a Vocabulary. 2s. 6d.
5. LE NOUVEAU LECTEUR FRANCAIS à l'Usage des Mères de Famille qui veulent instruire leurs Enfans, et de tous ceux qui sont engagés dans les écoles. 4s. 6d

By W. JILLARD HORT.

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

HORT'S COURSE OF EDUCATION, 22 vols. in a case, 3l. 13s. 6d.

Just published, complete, in one large volume 8vo. of 1500 pages, closely printed, with Six Hundred Engravings on Wood, price 21. 10s.

A NEW CYCLOPÆDIA of GARDENING; comprising the Theory and Practice of Horticulture, Floriculture, Arboriculture, and Landscape Gardening; including all the latest Improvements, a general History of Gardening in all Countries, and a Statistical View of its present State, with Suggestions for its future Progress, in the British Isles. By J. C. LOUDON, F.L.S.H.S. &c. Author of "A Treatise on forming and improving Country Residences."

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, in one thick volume 8vo. price 11. 1s. bds.

THE SHIPMASTER'S ASSISTANT, and Owner's Manual; containing general Information necessary for Merchants, Owners, and Masters of Ships, Officers, and all other Persons concerned or employed in the Merchant Service, relative to the Mercantile and Maritime Laws and Customs. By DAVID STEEL, Esq. The Fifteenth Edition, revised throughout, and brought down to the present time. By WILLIAM DICKINSON, Esq.

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, in 8vo. price 6s. bds.

HISTORY and METHOD of CURE of the various species of EPILEPSY, being the Second Part of the Second Volume of a Treatise on Nervous Diseases. By JOHN COOKE, M.D. F.R.S. F.A.S. Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, &c. &c.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had, by the same Author,

1. A TREATISE on the PALSY. In 8vo. 6s. bds.
2. A TREATISE on APOPLEXY. 12s bds.

IN SIX EASY LESSONS OF ONE HOUR EACH.—MR. BRADBURY, Private Tutor at Westminster School, solicits the attention of Ladies and Gentlemen to his unrivalled and infallible system of beautiful PENMANSHIP, whereby he pledges himself to teach persons of all ages to write with ease, elegance, and expedition, (whatever may be the deformity of their present writing) in six progressive Lessons. This system, as it equally promotes the attainment of a rapid and masculine hand calculated for business, and of a light and graceful manuscript adapted to Ladies; also secures to the Pupil the certainty of writing straight, without lines, with wonderful dispatch and accuracy, and, moreover, will steady the hand of the most tremulous writer. Upwards of 2000 specimens, and numerous recommendatory letters may be seen, and references given to persons of the first distinction, some of whom are upwards of 50 years of age. Private tuition at home. Ladies and Gentlemen attended at their own residences. A new and practical system of Short Hand, taught in a few lessons, so as to enable the writer to decipher what he has written with inconceivable ease.—Apply, for direct, post paid, at the Academy, 464, Strand, near Charing Cross.

WRITING PAPER, of the best quality, made by the justly celebrated J. WHATMAN, of Turkey Mill, to be sold at the following low prices;—Excellent copy 7d. the quire, or 11s. the ream; good laid post 9d. superfine thick 9d. and 1s. the quire, or 12s. 13s. 6d. and 17s. 6d. the ream; superfine Bath 9d. ditto. hot pressed, 10d. and 1s. the quire, or 13s. 6d. 15s. and 17s. 6d. the ream; very best thick Bath gilt, 1s. 1d. the quire, or 20s. the ream; good foolscap 1s. the quire, superfine 1s. 2d. and 1s. 4d. a quire, or 21s. and 25s. the ream; superfine large bank post 1s. the quire, or 18s. the ream; best thick lined bank 1s. 4d. the quire, or 25s. the ream; very good copy bill 3s. 6d. per dozen; best sealing wax 4s. 6d. the lb. All of sale, the new-invented Steel Nib Pen; it has the elasticity of the quill, with the durability of the steel pen, price 1s. 4d. each. Strong brown 8d. 10d. and 1s. 6d. small hand 4d. the quire; at H. and W. SMITH'S, 192, Strand, Second House from the Crown and Anchor Tavern.—Account Books made to order, of any size or pattern; Drawing Paper, and Bristol Boards, equally low in price.

SHAWLS.—Five Thousand Pounds worth, just purchased, at little more than half their value, has induced the Proprietor to make this addition to his previous large Stock, forming the most stupendous and splendid collection of any house in the Kingdom, and such prices as were never before submitted to the public. The immense variety there are a great many at the most moderate prices, such as Cashemere, two yds square, at 9s. to 1l.; silk do. 10s. to 2l. 10s.; those at 30s. are beautiful, and the leading colours, viz. scarlet, crimson, blue, drab, green, and black grounds, at 50s. to 60s. are truly superb, positively worth from 3l. to 6l. The scarf shawls, which form an elegant square, are from 20s. to 4l.; those at 50s. are very beautiful, and such as are charged generally 5 or 6 guineas; many others of the most costly description, rarely to be met with, all equally cheap. China Crape Shawls and Scarfs—this beautiful article to be had in all colours. Cloth shawls, bound and tasseled, 9s.; crimonetta, seal wool, &c. in great variety, from 19s.; Braganza shawls, 10s.; Zamora do. 21s.; Angola do. 12s. &c &c.—To be had at ROBSON'S, 64, Oxford street, corner of Wells-street.

KENSINGTON LACE MANUFACTORY, to be viewed from 10 to 1 and from 2 to 5. Ladies purchasing, or leaving their card, at the Warehouse, 30, Southampton-street, Covent-garden, 14, Kensington square, are invited to inspect the machinery and process of this manufacture, in every article of elegant dress, having the gracious sanction of the Royal Family; and judges competent to decide universally assert they have reached that perfection deemed impossible as necessary to supersede even Foreign Laces, being fine, firm, durable, and transparently clear, without requiring starching to render them so. They are eagerly sought for on the continent, the proprietor having been sent for, and personally supplied, the whole of the French Royal Family and Court. A ticket is attached to each article, with the arms of her late Majesty Queen Charlotte and full address, and is the only be had genuine, at the wholesale prices, at the Manufactory, or Warehouse, as above.

URLING'S LACE.—DIXON, WILLSON, and CO. at No. 237, Regent street, adverting to a representation contained in Advertisements of Urling and Co. of 142, Strand, that Urling's Lace had been sent at their Houses, every other Shop in London, feel themselves called upon, in justice to the public and themselves, to state that they warrant to sell, and will continue to sell, upon the Terms of their Advertisements, the genuine Gassed Lace (tabered into the world as Urling's Lace) the same article as sold at 147, Strand, and in defiance of the puffs and boastings of that House, who thereby endeavour to appropriate to themselves the exclusive benefit of an article to which they have no right; and Dixon, Willson, and Co. are prepared to meet, and hereby challenge every strict investigation and competition. The truth is; there is no Patent for the exclusive sale of the Gassed or Urling's Lace, and Dixon Willson, and Co. obtain it from the same sources from which Urling and Co themselves have always been, and are now, supplied with the article.

DAMASK NAPKINS, 7s. 6d. per Dozen, and a Twenty Thousand Pounds Stock of RICH DAMASK and DOUBLE DAMASK TABLE LINEN, consisting of the richest and most superb patterns that can be produced amongst which are some curious Silesian damask of ancient designs, having been purchased quite out of the ordinary way, will be sold at nearly one half their real value, and yet leave the proprietor a small profit; and as FILLEY is determined to increase his extensive trade, he has procured to the public every possible advantage of this event. Damask table-cloths, yard and quarter long, 2s. 2d. each; do. yard and half long, 3s. 6d.; do. two yards long, 4s. 6d.; do. two yards and a half long, 8s. 6d.; do. double damask, 12s.; do. real German damask, 15s.; do. three yards long, 14s.; do. three yards and a half long, 18s.; do. four yards long, 22s. 6d.; do. four yards and a half long, 25s. 6d.; do. five yards long, 29s.; do. six yards long, 35s.; larger sizes equally cheap (all of the finest width), with damask napkins to match; 5,000 pieces of linens, the strongest and best fabrics Ireland produces, from 1s. to 3s. per yard, those at 19d. 20d. and 2s. are curiously fine for gentlemen's wear; unck Russia sheeting, 6s. 6d. per pair; real Russia do. 12s. 6d. per pair; strong Lancashire sheeting, 9d. per yard; very stout and fine do. 1s.; superior sheetings for families of distinction, from 22d. to 2s. 6d. per yard; real Russia sheeting, 2s. 9d. per yard, double width, which prevents the necessity of a seam; Irish sheeting, yard and quarter wide, 1s. 3d. per yard; fine do. 1s. 6d.; yard and half wide do. 2s. 4d. and 2s. 6d. per yard; real German Hollands, yard and half wide, 3s. 6d per yard (an article rarely to be met with, and sold at no other house lower than 7s. per yard.) Forty bales of Indidling cloth, containing 25 yards, for 16s.; a beautiful fine article, in real Madras cloth, 25 yards, for 20s.; fashionable gauze handkerchiefs, in all colours, and the last article really worth their notice; Marseilles quilts, three yards long, 15s.; each; counterpanes, 5s. and large size do. 6s. 6d. each; Witney blankets in every size, and fine Welch flannels at very reduced prices; fine calicoes 6d. per yd.; robe dresses, 2s. 6d. each; ditto two and three flounces, 6s. 6d. each; a matchless selection of Moravian worked dresses, from 18s. to 25s. each; those at 25s. are positively worth 2 guineas; cambric handkerchiefs with borders, 12s. per dozen, and very fine ditto, ditto, 21s. per dozen; 2,000 yards of the rich Grecian Staples, 3s. 6d. per yard; good sarsenets, French width, 2s. 9d. per yard; and every article in silk mercery equally cheap. No country orders executed, without a remittance; but a per centage will be allowed on all purchases amounting to 20l. and upwards, at RILEY'S, 118, Oxford-street.

BLANKETS, COUNTERPANES, SHEETINGS, DAMASK TABLE LINEN, Welch Flannel, India Long Cloth, Irish Linen, French Cambric, and General Linen Drapery, Haberdashery, and Silk Mercery Warehouse, 59, Oxford-street, next door to Binter's old established Fur Warehouse.—KINNING and CO. now offer to the Nobility and Families in general a new and singular Stock in the above branches of business, not at half prices, as advertisements generally puff, but at such low prices as K. and Co. can with confidence assert will meet their entire approbation, and ensure to them their future commands.—Real Witney Blankets at the following low prices, proved only by inspection—1¼ yds long, 4s. 9d.; 2 yds do. 5s. 6d.; 2¼ yds 7s. 6d.; 2½ yds, 11s.; 2¾ do. 14s. 6d.; 3 yds do. 17s. and in proportion to four yds: Counterpanes, 2 yds square, 6s.; 2¼ yds do. 7s.; 2½ yds do. 8s. 6d.; 2¾ yds do. 11s.; 3 yds do. 12s. 6d.; Marseilles Quilts, 2¼ yds square, 13s. 6d.; 2½ do. 15s.; 3 yds do. 18s.; 3½ yds do. 18s. 6d.; all warranted to measure as stated above; Servants' Sheetings, 8d. per yd.; the best made, 1s.; yd wide Russia, 11d. per yard; 1¼ wide do. 1s. 2d.; 1½ wide do. very stout, 1s. 8d.; 2¼ yds do. require no seam, 2s. 3d.; Table Linen, Damask Napkins, 7s. 6d. per dozen; Breakfast Cloths, 1¼ square, 1s. 10d.; 1¾ ditto, 2s. 3d.; 1¾ ditto, 4s. 9d.; 2 yards ditto, 6s. 6d.; 2¼ ditto, 8s. 3d.; double damask do. 11s. 6d.; 3 yds long 6s. 6d.; 3¼ yds long damask do. 11s.; 3½ yds do. 12s. 6d.; 4 yds do. 25s.; and in proportion to the largest made. Several boxes of Irish Linens, of the most approved makers, warranted, from 1s. per yard; a fine quality, for Gentlemen's wear, 1s. 8½d; Real Welch Flannels, very fine, 1s. 6d. and 1s 8d. per yard; India Long Cloths, perfectly free from dress 12½d. and the finest made 1s. 3d. per yard. Several boxes of French Cambric Handkerchiefs, the largest size 24s. per dozen; fine Irish sheetings, yard and quarter wide, 1s. 3d. per yard, will be very useful in family use for household purposes. Their Stock of plain, figured, and striped Grande Naples are now offered to the public at a great reduction in price; purchasers of these articles, and of washing Silks, will find an advantageous market. White Flounced Dresses of every description are still at their reduced prices, and some new Spring Patterns just purchased for trendy money will be sold at the same reduction. K. and Co. embrace this opportunity of informing the country friends and those who may in future honour them with their commands, that they have extended their Business by adding to it the general Haberdashery, Silk Mercery, Glove and Silk Hosiery departments, which they pledge themselves to offer upon the lowest possible terms, and to sell articles of the best manufacture. A per centage allowed upon all purchases amounting to 10l. and upwards at Kinning and Co. 59 Oxford-street.

SIR R. JEBB'S STOMACHIC APERIENT PILLS, for the Cure of BILIOUS and LIVER COMPLAINTS, violent Head-ache, Indigestion, &c. (prepared only by G. WATTS and Co. Chemists, No. 478, Strand, opposite Craven-street). These highly-estimated Anti-bilious Aperient Pills of the late Sir R. Jebb, Physician Extraordinary to the late King, are eminent in removing all indispositions of the stomach and bowels, arising from an excess of bile, indigestion, flatulence, &c. &c. Their action upon the stomach is mild and pleasant, and are extremely cooling. They are particularly calculated for preventing habitual costiveness, and will be found to possess those assistive qualities that will remove a long series of diseases which ultimately result from a confined state of the bowels; they correct a bad digestion, create an appetite, and are of distinguished excellence in removing giddiness, head-ache, and sickness, occasioned by biliary derangements, or by too free a use of wine.—Sold also, by their appointment, at the Taverns, Sutton and Co's. Bow Church Yard; by Mr. Edwards, St. Paul's Church-yard; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; and Messrs. Newbery and Sons, St. Paul's Church-yard; also of T. and C. Butler, No. 4, Cheapside, and Sackville-street, Dublin; in boxes at 2s. 9d., 4s. 6d., and 11s. 6d., duty included. There is ample allowance on the large boxes. These Pills are greatly approved of in the East and West Indies, where liver complaints are so prevalent and fatal. Where may be had the Effervescent Seidlitz Powder, possessing all the medicinal qualities of the Seidlitz Spring, in Germany. 4s. 6d. and 2s. 6d. per box.

EASE and COMFORT in SHAVING.—To those Gentlemen who find experience inconvenience in Shaving from a tender face or stiff beard, J. T. RIGGE most particularly recommends his celebrated MAGNETIC RAZOR TABLET, which, with its late improvement, he engages will produce so keen an edge as to supersede all grinding, honing, &c. and render the operation of shaving as easy and agreeable as it was before unpleasant and painful. Its use is simple, its effect certain; price 7s. 6d. J. T. Rigge's Aromatic Shaving Soap will also be found an invaluable addition. Manufactory, 65 Cheapside and 62, Park-street, Grosvenor-square.

PATRONISED by the ROYAL FAMILY, their Imperial Majesties the Emperor and Empress of Russia, his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of China, by their especial authority, and most of the Nobility throughout Europe, ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, (the original and genuine) which for many years has been universally admired, and is the best and cheapest article for nourishing the hair, preventing its falling off, or turning grey; preserves it to the latest period of life; promotes a luxuriant growth on the baldest places, whiskers, eye-brows, &c.—Curly Hair—It produces and makes the curl firm during exercise, or damp weather; renders hair that is harsh and dry as soft as silk, glossy, elegant, and beautiful.—Infantile Disposition, &c.—In short, during which this Oil should be regularly applied, as it prevents the hair being injured.—Children's Hair—A due attention to Children's Hair is of the greatest importance. This Oil is invaluable; it eradicates the scurf easy and pleasant, and is superior to combs, soaps, &c.; makes the hair firm in its roots, and fixes a stamina for a beautiful Head of Hair. Price 3s. 6d. 7s. 10s. 6d. and 11. 1s. per bottle.—Mustachio and Whiskers, Eye brows, Hair on the Head, effectually changed to Brown or Black, by the use of ROWLAND'S ESSENCE of TYRE. Price 4s. 7s. 6d. and 10s. 6d. per bottle.—Sold by the sole Proprietors, A. Rowland and Son, No. 20, Hattou-Garden, Holborn, London; and, by appointment, by all Perfumers and Medicine Venders.

☞ Ask for Rowland's Oil, or Rowland's Dye, and particularly observe the signature on the label to each bottle, as impostors sign their trash A. Rowland-son; the genuine is signed "A. Rowland and Son," with the address, No. 20, Hatton-garden.

THE ROYAL FAMILY, NOBILITY, GENTRY, and LADIES and GENTLEMEN may rely on it, they will not have a hair fall off or turn grey by now using Prince's celebrated Russia Oil, as it is so improved with an extra valuable ingredient, that, though much has been made this Oil the very nourisher and preserver to the hair in the Universe, will make it grow thick and long, and prevent its falling off, or ever turning grey, and by such a nourisher to the roots of the hair, that if it even has begun to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour, and if used often it will never turn grey again, and is sure to clear the scurf from infancy to old age, and when dressing with it, will always keep the Head and Hair clean and beautiful. Gentlemen on shaving their hair, and leave the edge of roots of hair receiving, by using regularly, for a few months, Prince's Improved Russia Oil, will, the extra valuable ingredient, will be sure to restore it, and produce a fine head of hair, which hundreds have experienced. Even Medical Gentlemen have published, in the Gazetteer of Health, that Prince's Russia Oil is superior to any oil for the hair; and will do, in cases of baldness and weak hair, what can possibly be done.

It is no wonder that Ladies and Gentlemen have complained of late of the Russia Oil not being of service to their hair, as they have found out that unprincipled persons have sold them counterfeits.

Ladies and Gentlemen will be particular, as impostors in Great Britain, France, and other different parts of the Continent, have made the covers of the Counterfeit Russia Oil so much like the genuine, and some more so deceive, falsely have printed on their counterfeit covers "the original," or "genuine Russia Oil," and some even are so daring, although they know it is painful to put the Original Proprietor's Name. Therefore purchasers should be cautious, and have it of the Proprietor, or of respectable Venders.

Ask for Prince's Improved Russia Oil, with the extra ingredient, and observe "Prince" on the wrapper and seals, and his address, "A. Prince, No. 8, Poland-street, Oxford-street, London," is on the cover of each bottle; without it is not genuine, and cannot answer the purpose. The purchase bottle five shillings, or a large bottle, containing five ounces, one pound, which is a saving.

Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. Prince, No. 8, Poland-street, Oxford-street, near the Pantheon, at No. 26, London-road, near the Floor-cloth Manufactory, Surrey, and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders.

Ladies and Gentlemen residing in the country, by sending a remittance to the Proprietor, and it will be forwarded immediately by coach.

Merchants and Captains will receive a liberal allowance for exportation.

LATEST NEWS.

Paris papers down to Friday have arrived. The Duke de Reggio set off for the army on Tuesday; on which day all the Ambassadors dispatched couriers to their respective Governments.—The Ordinary Cortes of Madrid, in their Sitting of the 2d, unanimously passed a Decree, in which they ordered the Ministry, within 24 hours, to report the execution of the Decree for the removal of the Government. A Proclamation, signed Ferdinand VIII. has been published throughout Madrid. It announces that war is definitively resolved upon, and that the Spanish Government will take all possible means to oppose the intended aggression. Another Decree orders the transfer of the Government, the Cortes, and the person of his Majesty to Badajoz. Mina remained but a few hours at Barcelona; he asked from the Municipality of that town 60,000 piastres—80,000 were supplied to him on the spot.—Great numbers of the English are quitting France; very few are now met with in the saloons of the capital. It continues to be asserted that the Duke of Angoulême will depart on Saturday the 15th for the army. It is reported that Count Mole will make a proposition in the Chamber of Peers on the exclusion of M. Manuel, and that a proposition for the re-admission of M. Manuel into the Chamber of Deputies will be debated on Saturday.

The Journal des Debats says, on the 19th, in the Council of Ministers, the King of Spain opposed the plan for the removal of the Government and Court to another city. The Ministers answered that they were responsible to the Cortes, and that it would not be in the power of the King to reject a measure of high policy decreed by the Cortes, conformably to the articles of the Constitution. "Then should I be taken away against my will?" said the Monarch. "Yes, if the Cortes order the removal of the Government." replied the Minister of Justice, "I will sign, without hesitation, the order to take you away bound, if it be absolutely necessary." The Ministry went away humming the Tragala, while the unfortunate King shed tears of indignation.—In the sitting of the 2d, a Deputy announced that the French troops, to the number of 35,000, would enter Spain on the 5th March at the latest.—The Ministers, in a Secret Sitting, declared that the invasion of 35,000 French is certain; that they had taken all measures in their power to repulse it, but that they find obstacles to the removal of the seat of the Government.

Mr. Secretary Canning, we are happy to state, is considerably recovered from his severe attack of the gout.

An additional number of artificers, of different denominations, have been put on at Deptford dock-yard. In consequence, Deptford assumes an air of bustle, &c. which has not been seen for some time.

In the Palace Court, on Friday, a person appeared as bail, who said he was a bankrupt two years and a quarter ago, but was now possessed of 1,500l. and a house worth 600l.—The dividend on his bankruptcy was a penny farthing, in the pound. The Court refused to accept him as bail, and advised him to be honest enough to make over some part of his large property to his poor creditors.

At Bow-street, yesterday, James Tooke, porter to Mr. Dollman, of Bond-street, was charged with robbing his master. During the time that Tooke was in Mr. Dollman's employment, the latter, and his foreman missed, from time to time, various new garments; the prisoner was watched, and it was discovered that he had purloined a new coat and several waistcoats, some of which he had pawned in a fictitious name. He was fully committed.—William Toms, a notorious thief, and Thomas Meadowbank, an accomplice, were apprehended while engaged in committing robberies in the parish of St. Giles's. They were committed as well-known characters.

At the Essex Assizes, Felix Reynolds was indicted for violating the person of Mary Totham, spinster, at Harwich, and Timothy Quilligan, Francis Fitzpatrick, and John Butcher, were indicted as accessaries to the same fact. In the evening of the 26th of February, she was walking with her lover on the Esplanade, when they were accosted by the prisoners, two of whom laid hold of her and hurried her off towards the barracks, leaving the others to secure Finch, who struggled to follow his sweetheart, and protect her from violence. The prosecutrix spoke with certainty as to the identity of Reynolds, and other evidence was adduced to show, that the remaining prisoners had been absent from the barracks at the time the transaction took place, and shortly afterwards returned and hurried to bed. The case in its details excited universal horror. The unhappy prosecutrix was deeply affected, and her situation produced general sympathy.—The Jury found the prisoners Guilty.—Death. The awful sentence of the law was immediately passed, and they were left for execution. At the close of the case, a liberal subscription was entered into by the bar, the magistracy, and the spectators, on behalf of the prosecutrix, it being understood that Finch, her lover, intends to marry her, notwithstanding the dreadful outrages to which she had been subjected.

The Oratorio on Friday night was excessively well attended to witness that masterpiece of composition the Creation of Haydn, which was got up in a style worthy the conductor. A pupil of Kalkbrenner (Mr. C. Wigley) performed a fantasia on the grand piano, in which was introduced the national air of "God save the King," which he executed in a masterly style, and produced an effect seldom surpassed.

Advertisement.] Grand Suite—Our readers may remember, early in the season we announced it was the intention of a "noble personage" to offer, during the Spring, a collection of articles, that for good taste and splendour, would equal any thing in the list of previous fashionable auctions. The time is at length fixed, and next week consigns to the hammer this rich melange of costly property. We are unable to give the wishes of such of our readers as may be "curious overmuch," by even hinting at the name; it is very properly kept a profound secret. All that can be inferred must be from the words of the announcement, which states it to be "the property of a noble personage, whose good taste and liberality have so long been proverbial in the fashionable circles;" and again, "that the most correct taste will be found to have presided in the selection of every item connected with this splendid exhibition;" beyond this we have no means of throwing light upon the subject, except, that having been favoured by a private view, we can with confidence assure our readers that the description is by no means overcharged. The tout ensemble is one mass of splendour and good taste combined. The public view commences to-morrow. Mr. George Robins presides over this sale.

ELEGANT GLASSES, FURNITURE, &c.—The Nobility and Gentry are invited to inspect the Warerooms of Cooper and Son, 93, Bishopsgate-street Within, where is exhibited a large Assortment of new and second-hand Plate Glasses, admirably suited to every description of drawing or dining-rooms. In the furniture department is comprised every new and elegant article of upholstery, cabinet, and chair work, the prices of which are reduced to such a scale of economy as to attract and ensure the patronage of rank and fashion.

The attention of youth of both sexes is particularly directed to that inestimable ornament of the human Hair, so fast attended in its youth by a scarce preservation, and fixes a stamina for a beautiful Head of Hair. The only article that really possesses nutricious virtues for promoting a luxuriant growth of Hair is Rowlands' Macassar Oil, which eradicates the scurf easy and pleasant, prevents the Hair falling off or turning grey, strengthens and produces beautiful flowing Curls, and renders Hair that is harsh and dry, as soft, smooth, and glossy as silk. As imposers purchase the empty bottles, and offer for sale a pernicious composition instead of the genuine, it is indispensably necessary to ask for "Rowlands'," and observe the prices are 3s. 6d.—7s.—10s. 6d. and 21s. and each genuine bottle is wrapped in a book, signed on the outside in red "A. Rowland and Son."

A candid examination of professional pretensions is only to be feared by those, who are conscious of incapacity. Messrs. Goss and Co. Members of the Royal College of Surgeons, confine their attention to the cure of those disorders as arise from nervous debility. Their works, "The Ægis of Life," and "Hygeiana," (the latter addressed to females) in full explanation of these subjects, may be had at No 20, Paternoster-row, London, Porter, 72, Grafton street, Dublin, or at any Booksellers. Medicines can be forwarded to any part, however distant, on receiving a Bank note.—11, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, and 7, Jermyn-street, St James's London.

ROBINSON'S PREPARED BARLEY, AND PREPARED GROATS.—These Preparations are entirely from the Finest Pearl Barley and Emden Groats, from which Barley Water and Water Gruel are made in ten minutes. Their superiority, and delicacy of flavour have obtained the most distinguished support from the Medical Profession of the first eminence, and the general satisfaction of all who have used them. The Inventor confidently recommends them to the Nobility and Gentry, and Merchants trading to the East and West Indies, &c. and to the Public in general. Warranted to keep in any climate.—The above articles are esteemed essentially beneficial as Food for Infants: the Barley is particularly fine for thickening Broths, and making an elegant Pudding.

Sold, wholesale and retail, by the sole inventor, M. Robinson, No. 64, Red Lion-street, Red Lion-square (the corner of Eagle-street,) in packages of 1lb. or 2 sailors 2lbs. each likewise by the following appointed Agents:—Hickson and Co. Italian Warehouse, No. 72, Welbeck-street: Hill's Italian Warehouse, No. 62, Tavistock-row; J. Wright, Grocer, the corner of Rathbone-place, Oxford-street: James Ball, oilman, 265, Oxford-street, near South Audley-street; Joseph Tomsey, grocer, Weymouth-street; Edward Withers, grocer, 26, ½ Bitesby Lane, C. Shuttleworth, chemist, 140, Leadenhall-street; H. Davies, oilman, 126, Leadenhall-street; T. Gilbert, grocer, Clifton-street, Finsbury square; Hale and Fenning, oilmen, Poultry; G. Colk, chemist, 29, Fleet street; Buttenshaw and Son, grocers, corner of Fleet-market, Holborn Bridge; and Mrs. Barry, 2, Bridge-street, Westminster.—As spurious imitations are now offering to the Public, M. R. begs families, &c. to desire their servants to be particular in asking for Robinson's Prepared Barley, or Prepared Groats, and to observe that the name of Matthias Robinson, with directions for use, is printed on every package.

Just published, price 12s. Dedicated by permission, to the Lord Bishop of London.

VOLUME VIII. of LIGHTFOOT'S WORKS. Edited throughout by the Rev. J. R. PITMAN, A.M.

The Edition of Dr. G. Bright and Strype forms the basis of the present Work. The eight volumes, already published, contain five hundred and fifty pages of original matter, not comprised in the English folio-edition. Among the original additions, which will enrich the subsequent volumes, will be found, Lightfoot's Journal of the Proceedings of the Assembly of Divines, convened for the work of Reformation in the Church, by the authority of both Houses of Parliament, Anno 1643, 1644.

Clergymen, subscribing before the first of June next, will be allowed twenty per cent.—Subscribers are requested to transmit their names and addresses to the Publisher.—Printing by J. F. Dove, St. John's-square, London.

Just published, price 16s. illustrated with Maps, and dedicated by permission to the Right Honourable the Viscount Melville, First Lord of the Admiralty, &c.

A STATISTICAL and COMMERCIAL HISTORY of the KINGDOM of GUATEMALA, in SPANISH AMERICA; containing Important Particulars relative to its Productions, Manufactures, Customs, &c. &c.; and an Account of its Conquest by the Spaniards, and a Narrative of the Principal Events down to the present time. From Original Records in the Archives, with an Account of its Conquest by the Spaniards, and a Narrative of the Principal Events down to the present time. From Original Records in the Archives, and other authentic sources. By DON DOMINGO JUARROS, a Native of the City of New Guatemala. Translated by J. BAILY, Lieut. R. M.—Printed for J. Hearne, 81, Strand.

In six Vols. price 10s. 6d. half-bound,

EVENINGS AT HOME; or, the Juvenile Budget Opened; consisting of a variety of Miscellaneous Pieces for the Instruction and Amusement of Young Persons. By Dr. AIKIN and MRS. BARBAULD. The Thirteenth Edition, carefully revised, and corrected throughout by Arthur Aikin, Esq. F.L.S. &c. and with some additional Pieces by the Authors.—Lucy

JOHN BULL.

" FOR GOD, THE KING, AND THE PEOPLE!"

No. 119. SUNDAY, MARCH 23, 1823. Price 7d.

NEW ARGYLL ROOMS; REGENT-STREET.—MR. MORI most respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that his FIRST BENEFIT CONCERT will take place on MONDAY, MAY 26, at the above Rooms, when will be performed a Selection of the most admired Vocal and Instrumental Music.—Further particulars will be duly announced.

MESSRS. GREATOREX, WM. KNYVETT, and VAUGHAN respectfully acquaint the Nobility, Gentry, and their Friends generally, that their respective CONCERTS will take place this Season, on the 25th of APRIL, the 2d of MAY, and the 9th of MAY, at the KING'S CONCERT ROOMS, Hanover square.—Particulars will be duly advertised.

KING'S CONCERT ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE.—MR. GREATOREX respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends generally, that his ANNUAL CONCERT is fixed for FRIDAY the 25th of APRIL next.—Tickets (Half a-Guinea each) to be had of Mr. Greatorex, No. 70, Upper Norton-street, Portland Place; at the Music Shops of Messrs. Birchall and Co. No. 133, New Bond street; Messrs. Clementi and Co. Cheapside; and at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Regent street.

NEW ARGYLL ROOMS, REGENT-STREET.—Mr. HAWES most respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that his CONCERT will take place on FRIDAY, APRIL 18, 1823, at the above Rooms, when will be performed a Selection of the most admired Vocal and Instrumental Music, Ancient and Modern. The following eminent Performers have already kindly promised their assistance:—Mrs. Salmon, Miss Stephens, Miss Vance, and Miss Goodall; Mr. Sapio, Mr. Terrail, Mr. J. Elliott, Mr. Evans, Mr. Goulden, Mr. Mullineux, Mr. Clark, Mr. Hawes, Mr. J. B. Sale, and Mr. Bellamy. Leader of the Band, Mr. Mori, who will perform a Solo on the Violin; Principal Violoncello, Mr. Lindley; Double Bass, Mr. Dragonetti; Conductor, Mr. Attwood. The Band will consist of nearly the whole of the Performers of the Opera, and the Philharmonic Concerts. A new Organ (built expressly for Mr. Hawes) will be opened on this occasion by Mr. Adams. The Orchestra will be enlarged to admit of a full and efficient Chorus, selected principally from the Concert of Ancient Music. The First Part from the Sacred Works of Handel, Haydn, Mozart, &c. commencing with the Four First Movements of the "Dettinger Te Deum;" and concluding with the Grand Coronation Anthem, composed by Attwood. A Miscellaneous Selection of Songs, Glees, &c. by Modern Composers, will form the Second Part. In the course of the evening, (by particular desire), Mozart's favourite Duet, "Dove sentre;" and the popular Trio called "Lessons of Love," by Paesiello, will be performed; now published by Miss Bartleman from her late Brother's manuscript. The Choral Department will be assisted by the Young Gentlemen of St. Paul's Cathedral and His Majesty's Chapels Royal.—Tickets, Half a-Guinea each, to be had at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Regent-street; Birchall's, and Chappell's, New Bond-street; Goulding's, Pall Mall-square; Preston's, Dean-street, Soho; Clementi's, Cheapside; Betts', Royal Exchange: and of Mr. Hawes, 7, Adelphi Terrace.—Parties of Six and upwards may be accommodated with Boxes by an early application to Mr. Hawes.—The Concert will commence at Eight o'Clock precisely. Further particulars in a few days.

Just published by Wessel and Stodart, Foreign Music Sellers to H. R. H. the Duchess of Kent.

MAYSEDER'S favourite POLONOISE, in E major, for the Violin, &c. as performed by Mr. Kesewetter, price 5s.; "Oh, mattutini albori," Cavatina in "La Donna del Lago," by Rossini, pr. 1s. 6d.; Overture to Paer's Opera "Sophonisbe," arr. for Flute, two V. T. and Vello, by C. R. Wesset, pr. 4.—W. and S. respectfully announce to the Public, that they have just received extensive additions to their former Collection of Foreign Music, comprising several new Compositions not yet known in this country, as well as elegant and correct editions of Operas by Mozart, Paer, Rossini, De Weber, Mercadante, &c. arr. for Pianoforte and Voice, which are offered on the most reasonable terms.—Catalogues may be had gratis, at their Foreign Music Warehouse; No. 1, Soho square, three Doors from the Bazaar.

MUSIC.—No. 162, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street. J. GOW and SON respectfully inform the Nobility and Gentry they have just published the under-mentioned new music:—La Donna del Lago, a favourite set of quadrilles from the above celebrated opera, composed by Rossini, 4s.—Overture and Introduction to ditto, 2s 6d.—"Oh, mattuni alborl," sung by Madame de Begnis, 1s. 6d. and the favourite song "Aurora! che Sorgerai," sung by Signor Curioni in the above opera, 1s.—A fourth set of Quadrilles from Scotch Airs, including "the Bonnie Rowe," "Cadid Kail in Aberdeen," and "the Campbells are Coming," &c. and where may be had all the original sets of Scotch quadrilles, and a favourite set of quadrilles by Spagnoletti, 4s.—J. G. and Son have just received from Edinburgh the following new music, viz. Gow's ancient curious collection of Scotland, consisting of genuine Scotch tunes, with their original variations, 8s.—The Vocal Melodies of Scotland, arranged for the flute, 4s.—The Sixth collection of Strathspeys, Reels, and Slow Tunes, by Niel Gow and Sons 8s. Instruments let on hire and tuned.

NEW FOREIGN MUSIC.—Just published, by T. Boosey and Co. Importers and Publishers of Foreign Music, 28, Holles-street, Oxford-street, (late 9, Broadwood's), A CATALOGUE of their own Publications of NEW and CLASSICAL MUSIC, by the most admired Foreign Composers, for the Pianoforte, Voice, Flute, Violin, Violoncello, &c. &c.: also, T. Boosey and Co.'s extensive Catalogue of Foreign Music, consisting of upwards of 6000 works, Vocal and Instrumental. All the Operas of Rossini and Mozart, (the best Foreign Editions) arranged for the Piano, with and without the Words, may also be had.

NEW MUSIC, just published by Mayhew and Co. No. 17, Old Bond-street.

HART'S THIRD SET of SCOTCH QUADRILLES, including the celebrated and admired Airs of "The Campbells are coming," "Argyle is my name," "Corn rigga," "O whistle, and I'll come to you," and "Loch Erroch side," with entire new figures, composed and arranged for the Piano Forte or Harp, and respectfully dedicated to Lady Grey, by Joseph Hart. 3s.

The great success which attended the publication of Mr. Hart's First and Second Sets of Scotch Quadrilles, has induced him to offer a Third Set to the notice of the Nobility and Gentry, which he trusts will prove worthy their patronage.

Also just published, HART'S SIXTH SET of QUADRILLES, selected from Rossini's popular Opera of "La Gazza Ladra," as danced at Almack's and the Nobility's Balls. Arranged for the Piano Forte or Harp. Price 4s.

London: Mayhew and Co. Music-sellers to the Royal Family, 17, Old Bond-street, where may be obtained,

New Editions of Hart's Fifth Set, from "Il Turco in Italia;" also his Fourth Set, including, George the Fourth's Coronation Waltz, "Celebrated Hussars," with the admired "Cossack Quadrille," and Irish Quadrilles, containing the Rose, Shamrock, Thistle, Emerald Isle, and the Sovereign, all of which are in constant demand.

NEW MUSIC, published by the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street.—Triumphal March, a duett for two performers on the piano-forte, composed by Ignace Moscheles, price 3s.—O'er the Water to Charlie, arranged as a rondo for the piano-forte, by J. W. Holder, Mus. Bac. Oxon, price 2s. 6d.—Indian Rondo, for the piano-forte, composed by J. N. Hummel, of Vienna, price 2s.—The Life, Pandore, and the French air of "Partant pour la Syrie," arranged for the piano-forte, with flute ad. lib. by T. A. Rawlings, No. V. price 2s 6d.—The Eglantine, Polacca, and the Italian air of "Fra tante angosche," arranged for the piano-forte, with flute ad. lib. by T. A. Rawlings, No. VI. price 2s. 6d.—The single songs, duets, &c. in the new opera of La Donna del Lago, composed by Rossini.—A selection of airs from the most favourite operas of Rossini, arranged for the piano-forte by Camille Pleyel, price 4s.

LOGIER'S SYSTEM of MUSICAL EDUCATION.—DR. ESSEX respectfully informs the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that his Academy, 18 NOW OPEN for the reception of Select Classes of Pupils on the above System, with the able assistance of MR. CLIFTON, as additional Lecturer, every Wednesday and Saturday during the Season. Playing from FIGURED BASES, and the ART of SINGING ITALIAN and ENGLISH at Sight, by a knowledge of Harmony, in parts of Duets, Trios, &c. will be Taught at the Academy, 5, Tenterden-street, Hanover-square, or at private residences.—Terms known by applying as above.

OPERA BOX.—AN EXCELLENT BOX, on the Ground, or First Tier, to be DISPOSED OF for the Season.—Boxes for the Night. —Hookham's Library, Old Bond-street.

MISS LINWOOD'S GALLERIES of PICTURES, in Leicester-square, are RE-OPENED with new DECORATIONS, ALTERATIONS, and ADDITIONS, and will continue open every day, (Sundays excepted) from nine o'clock in the morning until dusk. Admittance, 2s. Children, 1s.

MR. HAYDON'S Great Picture of LAZARUS RISING FROM THE DEAD is NOW OPEN.—Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, ground floor to the right.—Admission 1s. Catalogues 6d.

ZACHARIAH MACAULEY, ESQ.—The BRONZE STATUE of this eminent Philanthropist and disinterested friend of Africa and her Sons, may be inspected for a few days prior to its embarkation for Sierra Leone. —Apply for Tickets at No. 16, George-street, Mansion-house.

On the First of April, will be Published, Part I. of PICTURESQUE VIEWS on the SEVERN; (To be continued on the First of every succeeding Month until completed, in Eight Parts, Royal Quarto, and Royal Octavo) from Original Designs of the late MR. SAMUEL IRELAND, Author of Picturesque Views on the Thames, Avon, Medway, and Wye, with Illustrations, Historical and Topographical. By MR. HARRAL. This work, the intended publication of which was announced some years ago, and suspended only in consequence of the lamented death of the artist, has been long sought for, as a companion to the late Mr. Ireland's Thames, Medway, Avon, and Wye, and as completing the series of that gentleman's Picturesque Delineations of River Scenery. Mr. Ireland's Designs, in number, Fifty-two, embrace the Scenery of the Severn, from the source of that river, on Plynlimmon Hill, and in its progress through the counties of Montgomery, Salop, Worcester, and Gloucester, till it falls into the Atlantic Sea, at King Road, Bristol. These Views are now submitted to the public, coloured, or on tinted paper, in the first style of lithographic execution, so as to present perfect fac-similia of the original drawings. The respective Parts of the Publication (price Fifteen Shillings each, in Royal Quarto, coloured, or Seven Shillings and Sixpence, in Royal Octavo, plain) will alternately comprise Seven Views, with Seventy-two Pages of Letter-press, and, when finished, will form Eight Volumes of Letter-press, Price, the Plates, with their connected Historical and Topographical Illustrations, will form Two handsome Volumes, corresponding with Mr. Ireland's preceding works. The accompanying Text historically and topographically illustrative of the Cities, Towns, and Villages—of the Churches, Castles, Seats, and other distinguished Buildings—which enrich the natural Scenery of the Severn, will be arranged by Mr. Harral, from the Manuscript Notes of the late Mr. Ireland, taken in the course of his tour; from the original communications of resident individuals; and from various other sources of actual survey and literary research.—Orders are received by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London; and all Booksellers.

PUBLIC LIBRARY, CONDUIT-STREET, HANOVER-SQUARE. Encouraged by the success which has attended the great improvements recently introduced into this Library, for the more regular transmission of Books issuing from the press, Messrs. Colburn and Co. beg leave respectfully to acquaint their subscribers and the public, that they have now added to their former extensive and valuable collection, a complete series of splendidly engraved, and beautifully coloured, Picturesque Works, illustrative of the Scenery, Antiquities, and Manners of every age and country; the whole of which is reserved, together with the entire contents of the library, for the use of Subscribers only.—Cards of terms to be had on application.

THE NAPOLEON MEMOIRS.—The Second Edition of Napoleon's Own Memoirs, written at St. Helena, the publication of which has been unavoidably retarded, will appear on Saturday next.—Printed for M. Bossange and Co. and Henry Colburn and Co.

In the press, and speedily will be published,

MEMOIRS of WILLIAM HAYLEY, ESQ. the Friend and Biographer of Cowper. Written by Himself. And containing a variety of Letters and Anecdotes of the most eminent men of his time, extracts from his Private Correspondence, &c. &c.—Printed for Henry Colburn and Co. Conduit-street; and Simpkin and Marshall, Stationers'-hall-court.

On Saturday next, in 2 vols. post 8vo.

LETTERS ON ENGLAND. By the COUNT DE SOLIGNY. Published from the Original Manuscripts. Containing free Remarks on the present state of Society and Manners, Public Institutions and Amusements, the Arts, Literature of the Drama, &c. &c.

Printed for Henry Colburn and Co. Conduit-street.

On Saturday next, in 2 vols. post 8vo.

THE ETONIAN. Third Edition. A Series of Essays, Criticisms, and Delineations of Life and Manners.—Printed for Henry Colburn and Co. Conduit-street, and Charles Knight Pall-mall East.

Just published, the 3d and 4th Parts, in French. 9s. each, English, 10s. 6d.

COUNT LAS CASES' JOURNAL of the Private Life and Conversations of the Emperor Napoleon at Saint Helena.—Printed for Henry Colburn & Co. Conduit-street; and M. Bossange & Co. Great Marlborough-str.

Just published, price 6d.

THE CRISIS OF ENGLAND; an Appeal to the People. By a COUNTRY GENTLEMAN.

"Who's here so base that does not love his country?"

J. P. KEMBLE, ESQ.

IN the Third Number of the Improved Series of the LADY'S MAGAZINE (to be published April 1) will be given a Memoir of that celebrated Actor, accompanied with a Portrait, beautifully engraven from a Drawing of Sir Thomas Lawrence, P.R.A. in the possession of Charles Mathews, Esq.—London: printed for S. Hamilton; published by S. Robinson, Chapter-House-court, Paternoster row; and sold by, all the Booksellers of the United Kingdom.

Just published, price Two Shillings,

THE SPEECH of the Right Hon. F. J. ROBINSON, Chancellor of the Exchequer, delivered in the Committee of Ways and Means, on Friday, 21st of February, 1823, on the FINANCIAL SITUATION of the COUNTRY. To which is added, an Appendix, containing various Accounts referred to.—London: printed for J. Hatchard and Son, No. 187, Piccadilly.

In 8vo. price 2s. 6d.

NARRATIVE of an ASCENT to the SUMMIT of MONT BLANC, August 18th, 1822, with an Appendix upon the sensations experienced at great elevations. By FREDERICK CLISSOLD, Esq.—The profits of the sale to be applied to the benefit of the Guides of Chamouni.

Printed for Rivingtons and Cochran, 148, Strand: sold also by C. and J. Rivington, 3 Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, and 62, St. Paul's Church-yard.

Just published, price 6s. in bds.

CAT-O'-NINE-TAILS; Volume the First. By the Rev. J. DENNIS, B.C.L. Prebendary of the Collegiate Church of the Castle of Exeter.

"The cat's let out of the bag."—Old Proverb.

Exeter: printed by E. Woolmer, and sold by all the Booksellers; Cadell and Hatchard, London; Parker, Oxford: Deighton, Cambridge.

CLEMENZA; or, the Tuscan Orphan. A Tragic Drama, in Five Acts. By WHITELAW AINSLIE, M.D. M.A.S. F.L. Author of the Materia Medica of the Hindoos. To which are added, Lithographic Impressions of the Scene of the Lake of Geneva, the costume of the Swiss Peasants, and the Music of the Songs.—For Rodwell and Martin, New Bond-street, London; Manners and Miller, Edinburgh; and Upham, Bath.

Just published, in 8vo. with Eight Engravings, price 16s. boards,

JOURNAL of a VOYAGE to the NORTHERN WHALE FISHERY, including Researches and Discoveries on the Eastern Coast of West Greenland, made in the Summer of the Year 1822, in the ship Baffin, of Liverpool. By WILLIAM SCORESBY, Jun. F.R.S.E. Commander.—Printed for Archibald Constable and Co. Edinburgh; and Hurst, Robinson, and Co. 90, Cheapside, and 6, Pall-mall, London. Of whom may be had, by the same Author,

An ACCOUNT of the ARCTIC REGIONS, with a History and Description of the Northern Whale Fishery, 2 vols. 8vo. with twenty-four illustrative Engravings. Price 21. 2s. boards.

SUBSCRIPTION LIBRARY, 27, Old Bond-street, London.—MR. EBERS begs leave respectfully to announce that he has greatly extended the arrangements at his British and Foreign Library, so that the following superior accommodations are derived by Subscribers to his Establishment:—1st. They are entitled to the IMMEDIATE PERUSAL of the NEW PUBLICATIONS.—2d. The Proprietor engages to purchase for Subscribers any works of general interest that may not have been previously added to the Library.—3d. Subscribers have the right of choosing from a most extensive collection of the established works in the various branches of English, French, and Italian Literature.—And 4thly. Subscribers are admitted to the use of a costly series of Publications, embellished with highly finished and coloured Engravings, which illustrate in a beautiful manner the History, Antiquities, Costumes, Sports, Pastimes, &c of the Ancient and Modern World, together with Maps and Atlasses.—New Catalogues, with terms, to be had on application.—Books regularly forwarded to all parts of the United Kingdom, and the Continent.

CHEAP and FASHIONABLE CABINET, CHAIR, COUCH, and SOFA MANUFACTORY.—Fifty different Patterns, and from twenty to thirty dozen of well-seasoned mahogany, real rosewood, stained rosewood, cottage, and bed-room chairs, of all colours, ready for inspection. Real rosewood chairs nearly as cheap as stained; card sofas, and loo tables, and an assortment of mahogany patent dining tables of all sizes; sideboards, wardrobes, drawers, and all other articles of furniture, too numerous to mention. All manufactured on the premises, and warranted of the best quality, at ROBERT WALKINGTON'S, 214, High Holborn, opposite Southampton-street, Bloomsbury-square. All Goods sent free of expense within twelve miles of London.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

[This Gazette contains the appointments of Colonel James Russell to be Gentleman Usher to the Privy Chamber, and H. T. B. Mash, Esq. to be Assistant-Master of the Ceremonies to the King.]

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, March 21, 1823.

Ordnance Medical Establishment: First Ass.-Surg. R. Cooke to be Surgeon Sec. Ass.-Surg. R. Vowell, M.D. to be First Ass.-Surg.—Surg. E. Simpson to be Surg.; First Ass.-Surg. C. Inglis to be First Ass.-Surg.; Sec. Ass.-Surg. T. Whitelaw to be Sec. Ass.-Surg.

Commissions signed by the Lord Lieutenant of the County of Cardigan.

To be Deputy-Lieuts.: T. Lloyd, G. Jeffreys, P. D. Saunders, T. Bowen, Rev. T. Bowen, J. R. L. Lloyd, T. Powell, J. Jones.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

W. ARMSTRONG, Arundel-street, Strand, tailor.—J. WYCH, Ashton-under-Line, timber-merchant.—J. ISHERWOOD, Worsley, Yorkshire, cloth-manufacturer.

BANKRUPTS.

G. W. SAGE, Walcot, Somersetshire, timber-merchant.—A. WATSON, Warwick-place, Bedford street, carpet and floor-cloth dealer.—S. SCOTT, W. SCOTT, and J. SMITH, Ashford, Kent, grocers.—J. G. GRANT, Oxford, bookseller.—J. SMITH, Bath, wood-merchant.—W. GOOCH, Harlow, wine-merchant.—E. C. SOUTHBROOK, Covent-garden Chambers, merchant.—J. H. GARNONS, Newgate-street, silversmith.—B. WOOD, Liverpool, mathematical instrument maker.—J. HOPKINS Jun. Chalcot, Berkshire, farmer.—R. JOHNSON, Holy Oaks, Worcestershire, farmer.—C. MOSS, Cheltenham, fishmonger.—W. BROWN, Cannock, Staffordshire, miller.—R. NEWHOUSE, Huddersfield, plumber.—J. and T. POWELL, Bristol, malsters.—J. TAYLOR, Leominster, skinner.

BANK of ENGLAND, 20th March, 1823.—The Governor and Company of the Bank of England give Notice, that a GENERAL COURT will be held at the Bank on THURSDAY, the 27th inst. from Ten o'clock in the Forenoon till Four in the Afternoon, to take a Ballot in pursuance of the following demand, viz—

"We, the undersigned Proprietors, of more than Five Hundred Pounds Bank Stock, demand a Ballot, on the Amendment for a Dividend of Five per Cent.

"Nath. Gundry,	"P. Laurie,
"James Nisbett,	"W. Horton,
"Wm. Thwaytes,	"Thos. Courtenay,
"Jas. Pattinson,	"Thos. Butts."
"Geo. Reveley,	R. BEST, Secretary.

CHILE LOAN.—NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That the Second Half Yearly Dividend, due on the 31st March instant, will be paid on that and every subsequent Day (Sundays excepted) at our Counting house, No. 102, Leadenhall-street, between the hours of 10 and 2 o'clock.—The Holders of Warrants are requested to leave them, with Lists in numerical order, for examination, on Saturday the 29th instant, or one day previous to the application for payment.—London, 8th March, 1823. HULLETT, BROTHERS, and Co.

BRITISH INSTITUTION, PALL-MALL.—The Gallery for the Exhibition and Sale of the Works of Modern Artists IS OPEN Daily, from Ten in the Morning until Five in the Evening.—Admission 1s. Catalogue 1s.

(By Order) JOHN YOUNG, Keeper.

The Subscribers to the Print from Mr. West's Picture of "Our Saviour healing the Sick in the Temple," who have not already received their impressions, may receive them upon payment of the remainder of their subscriptions, at the British Institution daily.

GREAT ROOM, SPRING GARDENS.—NOVELTY.—MARSHALL'S Grand Historical Peristreptic PANORAMA of the CEREMONY of the CORONATION, the Coronation Procession, and the Banquet, painted on 10,000 square feet of canvas, and displaying nearly 100,000 figures, upwards of 500 of the principal characters on the foreground the size of life. The movement of the Panorama gives such an imposing and striking illusion, that the spectators are led to believe themselves present at the different splendid ceremonies it represents; the whole accompanied by a full Military Band, assisted by a Finger Organ and Trumpets, who perform the Coronation Music.—IS NOW OPEN.—Day Exhibitions at 12, 1, 2, 3, and 4 o'clock; and in the Evening, brilliantly illuminated, at 7, 8, and 9 o'clock.—Admission, Boxes, 2s. Gallery, 1s.; Descriptive Book, 6d.

TRIAL of the LATE QUEEN.—The Picture by Mr. George Hayter, Member of the Academy of St. Luke, &c. will be exhibited on Monday, the 31st of March next, at Mr. Canty's Great Rooms, 801, Pall Mall. As the limits of an advertisement prevent an adequate description being given of this extraordinary picture, it will therefore be simply stated, that it contains more than 300 figures; and that every peer or person of distinction in the picture has sat to Mr. Hayter, whose rank as a portrait painter will, it is trusted, excite public curiosity towards the exhibition.

FOR PASSENGERS ONLY.—For BOMBAY Direct, to SAIL early in MARCH the fine new teak Ship, CHARLES FORBES, Barthen 1000 Tons. THOMAS BRYDIN, Commander. Has excellent accommodations for Passengers, and carries a Surgeon.—Apply to Messrs. Inglis, Forbes, & Co. 2, Mansion House-place; or Wm. Abercrombie, 4 Birchin-lane.

WANTED, by a MEMBER of the ROYAL COLLEGE of SURGEONS, who has a retail Shop, a YOUNG GENTLEMAN, as APPRENTICE; he must be 16 years of age, and will be articled at the College for the term of six years; he will be treated in every respect as one of the family. Address, post paid, with real signatures, to J. H., Mr. Edwards, Druggist, &c. Aldgate.—A premium expected.

ORANGE and LEMON TREES, ARABIAN and CATALONIAN JESSAMINE PLANTS, and TUBEROSE ROOTS. The above in the most perfect state; the Trees from 5s. to 16s. each; the Arabian Jessamines 2s 6d. to 4s. each; the Catalonian 3s. to 4s. the bundle of four plants; the Tuberose Roots 6s. the doz. at C. BARRONS Foreign Warehouse, 19, Pall-mall (late partner with Mr. Barto Valle). White and Green Turkey Cucumber and Spiral Cypress Seed, 1s. the packet each; early and late Roman Broccoli and Malta Cauliflower Seeds, Egg Plant and Spanish Melon Seeds, 1s. 6d. the packet. Printed instructions for the management of all the above, as well as lists of these and many other recent importations, may be had. A supply of New Salad Oil, &c.

NEW INN BLACKBURN.—C. WILCOCK begs leave respectfully to inform his Friends, Gentlemen, Travellers, and others, that he has now fitted up the above Inn in a superior style, with additional new apartments, which he flatters himself will meet with general approbation; he has also laid in a choice selection of Wines and Spirits; and by kindness and attention to those who may please to honour him with their company, he hopes to ensure their future support. C. W. cannot but avail himself of the present opportunity of returning his sincere thanks for favours already received from his numerous friends.—N. B. Coaches daily from his house to and from the north and south.

New Inn, Blackburn, March 15, 1823.

CHARLES FOSTER, Wine Merchant, 128, High Holborn, (four doors from the corner of Southampton-street,) invites the attention of the Nobility, Gentry, and Public, but more particularly the Inhabitants of the adjoining squares, to his extensive STOCK of WINES, which from the peculiar advantages he derives by purchasing every thing for Ready Money, he is enabled to offer upon most eligible terms, and by Pledging himself to sell nothing but what is really genuine, flatters himself that a trial is only needed to give satisfaction. C. F. has made the qualities of his Wines his particular study, and confidently affirms they are not to be surpassed by any House in the trade. A single bottle may be had; one dozen sent, free of expence, to any part of town; and six dozen and upwards, to any part of England.

ALE, STOUT, CIDER, &c.—THOMAS FIELD and SON beg to acquaint their Friends and the Public, that their genuine Burton, Edinburgh, Taunton, and Weisl Ales, Dorchester Beer, Brown Stout, Cider, Perry, &c. are in fine order for sale. They have also a very superior Stock of Foreign Wines, Cape Madeira, Brandy, Rum, Hollands, Geneva, and Orange Shrub, and they have been enabled to make a considerable reduction in the prices of several articles.—22, Hearletta-street, Covent Garden.

DRAWING ROOM FURNITURE that must be SOLD, consisting of real Rosewood Chairs, Tables, and Sofas, with three of the handsomest Silk Damask Curtains in London; in addition, the property of a nobleman, a very superb Glass and Table, for the end of a large room; with them is a very superior town built Landaulet, to be sold for half the cost price, by Nias and Co. agents, 32, Berners-street, Oxford-street.

CABINET FURNITURE.—The Nobility, and Gentry, are requested to inspect the Warehouse of C. MILLS, 77, High-street, Marylebone, which will be found to contain a STOCK unrivalled by Houses of the first Denomination, and at less than two-thirds their prices, for Ready Money. To name only a few of the leading articles, it is hoped will be thought sufficient for the Dining-rooms are patent Tables, of large dimensions, Sideboards and Chairs, corresponding; Drawing rooms, are Loo, Writing, and Card Tables, Tea Trays, &c. But the most novel, and particularly deserving notice, is, the Zebra wood, consisting of about nine dozen Chairs, and two sets of Cottage and French Loo Tables, Couches, &c. of the same wood; Bed-room Chairs at 40s. per chair.—Please to observe, the No. is 77.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

ADMIRALTY OFFICE, March 17, 1820.

The King has been pleased to appoint his Royal Highness William Henry Duke of Clarence, K.G. K.T. and G.C.B. Admiral of the Fleet, to be General of His Majesty's Royal Marine Forces, in the room of the Earl of St. Vincent, dec.

CROWN OFFICE, March 18, 1820.

Member returned to serve in this present Parliament.

County of Fermanagh—Lord Viscount Corry, in the room of Sir G. L. Cole.

Commissions signed by the Lord Lieut. of the County of Renfrew.

Sir R. C. Pollock, Bart.; Major J. Marvey, to be Deputy Lieuts.

Commissions signed by the Lord Lieut. of the County of Kent.

West Kent Regiment of Militia.—P. H. Dyke the younger, Esq. to be Capt. vice Chapman, dec.—East Kent Regiment of Militia.—G. Bourne, Esq. to be Lieut.-Col vice Pemell, dec.; J. Brockman, Esq. to be Major, vice Bourne, promoted.

Commission in the 2d Somerset Regiment of Militia.

W. Newberry, Gent. to be Ensign.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

J. A. and J. Hunt, Southampton street, Bottars—J. J. and E. H. Echalaz, London, commission-agents—Spooner and Hunt, Kingsland-road, linen-drapers—Henry and Brown, Nottingham, drapers—S. and R. Frogcett, Sun-street, tailors—Fergusson and Lindsay, Greenock, merchants—Williams and Webb, Newport, brewers—Thackrey and Co. Leeds, dyers, so far as respects W. Haigh—Hatton and Bowker, Salford, iron-founders—Stable and Evans, Wood-street, whole-ale-druggists—Wollan and Jefferson, Watling-street, warehousemen.

BANKRUPTCY ENLARGED.

W. BROWN, Barton-upon-Humber, Lincolnshire, nursery-man, from March 22 to March 31.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

J. BROWN, London, army-clothier.

BANKRUPTS.

G. WHITE, Cherry Garden-street, Bermondsey, shipwright—G. NEWMAN, Kingsdown, Box, Wiltshire, victualler—J. TEE, Hemsworth, Yorkshire, shopkeeper—D. S. NORTON, Uxbridge, brewer—W. and G. Cook, Canterbury, wine-merchant—E. BUTLER, Alcester, fellmonger—D. HOLMES, Thrum Hall, Halifax, Yorkshire, merchant—J. WALKER, Great Smith-street, Westminster, carpenter—W. and J. W. and F. G. Hamilton, New City Chambers, London, and J. H. RIDSDALE, Leeds, merchants.

DIVIDENDS.

At the Court of Commissioners of Bankrupts—April 6, J. Drake, Lewisham, master-mariner—March 25, G. Otley, New Bond-street, tailor—April 12, C. Glover, Albemarle-street, upholsterer.

April 9, J. Wheeler, Abingdon, grocer—April 9, S. Moore, Ashby-de-la-Zouche, Leicestershire, milliner.

CERTIFICATES—April 6.

W. Young, Bernard-street, insurance-broker—S. Yonden, Dover, carpenter—J. Wiltshire, Wootton Bassett, Wiltshire, saddler—J. Wiltshire, Wootton Bassett, Wiltshire, draper—J. Pearson, Beeston Royds, Leeds, clothier—J. Birch, Birmingham, jeweller—F. Evans, Cirencester, Gloucestershire, corn dealer—C. Holly, Lancaster, twine-manufacturer.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY.

The General Turnpike Act Amendment, and the Irish Yeomanry Corps Bills, were read a first time.

Petitions were presented from Waterford, in Ireland, and Rugby, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.

TUESDAY.

Petitions were presented from Witney, and Plymouth, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.

The Bill for enabling the King to dispose of his private property, was brought up from the Commons, and read a first time.

The Assessed Taxes Reduction Bill was passed.

WEDNESDAY.

The Royal Assent was given by Commission to the Transfer of Aids, the Chancellor of the Exchequer of Ireland's Appointment, the Lanarkshire Roads and Bridges Act Rectification, the Haw Bridge, the Scotch Creditors, the Ireland Assessed Taxes Repeal, the England Assessed Taxes Reduction, and the Croydon Enclosure Bills.

Petitions were presented from Blackburn against the Hawkers and Pedlars; from Liverpool and Frome Selwood, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; from Romney, praying for the Reduction of the Hop Duties.

The Marquis of Lansdown wished the Noble Earl to lose no time in laying before the House documents which were supposed to be necessary, if not indispensable, to a right comprehension and understanding of our relations with Foreign Powers.

The Earl of Liverpool assured their Lordships, that at the very first convenient opportunity, it was the intention of His Majesty's Servants to lay ample information before their Lordships on the subject of the Noble Marquis's solicitude. With respect to the State of France and Spain, the hopes of accommodation, it was true, respecting those Powers, had abated; but the Noble Marquis was deceived if he concluded that, therefore, all hope of pacification was essentially lost.

Lord Ellenborough, in reference to the Bill concerning the disposal of the King's property, asked how far His Majesty was empowered by the existing law to dispose in any way of the library that devolved to him after the decease of the late King, who died without a will. He apprehended that under such circumstances the library fell under the designation of a jus coronæ, and was disposable like all other property so devolving to the throne.

The Lord Chancellor said, that had it pleased the Noble Baron to put his question as to whether His Majesty had any right to dispose of his personal chattels, the question might easily be answered.

The Earl of Liverpool was satisfied that His Majesty had an equitable and legal right to dispose of his Royal Father's Library in any manner he himself might deem proper.

Earl Grey said, if the argument of his Noble Friend had any weight, that the King had possessed this library as an inheritance of the Crown [From the Ministerial Bench—Personal property!]—and, if so, the question put by his Noble Friend was important. He was surprised that the Noble and Learned Lord upon the Woolsack had intimated a wish to take time to consider of the question.—His Majesty's Property Disposal Bill was read a second time.—The Arms (Ireland) Bill was passed, and messaged to the other House.

THURSDAY.

The General Turnpike Acts Amendments, and the Irish Yeomanry Corps Bills were passed—the Army and Marine Mutiny, and the National Reduction Bills were read a second time.

FRIDAY.

The Earl of Darnley, noticing the number of appeals before the House, suggested the propriety of adopting some remedial measure to forward the hearing—225 remained undecided. In 1821, only 36 were decided, and in the following year 35—the appeals from Scotland were five to one compared with those of England.

The Earl of Liverpool said, the House, to effect the object which the Noble Earl had in view, decided to sit three times a week to get rid of the arrears, still the evil existed—the Scotch appeals were a main cause, but he would early after the recess bring the subject before the House.

The Earl of Liverpool moved the House to go into a Committee on the National Debt Reduction Bill, and stated the general principles of the Bill, as detailed in the other House.

The Marquis of Lansdown approved of the Bill, which went to simplify the Sinking Fund, a measure which he had formerly recommended.

Lord King contended that the Bill was a delusion.

After some observations from Lords Ellenborough and Bexley, the Bill was committed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY.

Petitions were presented from St. George's, Middlesex, Whitchurch, and Chester, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; from Ilfracombe, and St. George's, Middlesex, praying for a repeal of the Coal Duties; from the City of London, for leave to bring in a Bill to amend the Sewers' Act; and from the Chambers of Commerce, in Dublin, and the City of Cork, against any alteration in the Coal Duties.

Mr. Whitmore postponed his motion respecting the Duties on West India Sugar, till the 21st of April.

The Division of Counties Bill was read a second time, and ordered to be committed for the 5th of April.

On the third reading of the National Debt Reduction Bill, Mr. Henry Grey Bennet deprecated the violation of Mr. Pitt's pledge, and contended that the Sinking Fund should be applied to the reduction of the debt, and should be placed beyond the power of Ministers. He moved, as an amendment, that the Bill be read this day six months.

The House divided on Mr. Henry Grey Bennet's amendment—Ayes, 59—Noes, 109—Majority against it, 50.—For Mr. Baring's amendment, 72—Against it, 100—Majority against it, 28.—The Bill was then passed.

On the question for going into a Committee of Supply, Mr. Creevey submitted his motion respecting the four and a half per cent. duties in the Island of Barbadoes (which he had annually submitted for several Sessions) for applying these funds to the original purpose, namely, reparation of the forts, and other charges of the Colonial Government. He proposed an Address to the King to that effect.

Mr. R. Ward contended, that the motion of the Hon. Member was out of season; there was no charge whatever connected with the Island of Barbadoes in the present Estimates.

Mr. Hume was willing to admit that those charges which were for the support of the naval station were of a different character; but some of the Estimates must be intended for public works. If this question had been brought forward year after year, ever since the reign of Anne, they would have had no occasion to bring it forward so long.

Sir Charles Long observed, that the Hon. Member had said that the subject should have been brought forward every year since the time of Queen Anne; and he had no doubt that if the life of the Hon. Member could have extended over that period, he would not have neglected to perform that duty.

The House divided—For the original motion, 80—For the amendment of Mr. Creevey, 56—Majority against it, 24.

In Committee, Mr. Ward brought forward the Ordnance Estimates. Under the head of Ordinaries, the sum required was 460,534l. being a diminution of 13,500l. on a comparison with the same head of expenditure last year. For the Extraordinaries, 269,464l. being a diminution of 21,375l. on a like comparison. Under the head of Unprovided, there was substantially a diminution of 10,761l. The whole amount of the Estimates was 1,199,000l.; and the whole substantial reduction would be found to be 130,000l. He concluded by proposing the first vote for 48,027l. for the salaries of the Master-General, Lieut.-General, and other officers of the establishments at Pall-mall and the Tower.

Mr. Hume disapproved of the Estimates altogether; the boasted reduction was absolutely trifling—it was not more than four per cent.—The vote was agreed to.

The next vote was for 7,025l. for salaries in respect of length of service on the Civil Establishments.

Mr. Hume alluded to the Gunpowder Mills at Faversham, which, he understood, were let to a private individual, and yet there was an establishment attending them which cost no less than ten thousand a year.

Mr. Ward said, the Hon. Gentleman laboured under a mistake respecting the mills at Faversham. Those at Waltham Abbey were preferred for the manufacture of powder, and on that account the mills at Faversham had been let. The establishments belonging to them, however, afforded certain local facilities which could not be dispensed with.

After a few words from Sir John Newport, Mr. Hume, Mr. Ward, and Mr. Bennet, the Vote was agreed to.

8,555l. were voted for Salaries on the Home and Foreign Stations, First Class: 12,227l. for the Second Class; 8195l. for the Third Class; 6561l. for Salaries and Allowances in the Store-keeper's Department; 10,829l. for Civil Contingencies; 40,829l. for the Corps of Engineers: 26,304l. for Sappers and Miners; 4,293l. for Master and other Gunners.

On the vote for 241,235l. for the Artillery,

Mr. Hume proposed, as an Amendment, a reduction of 15,000l. from this vote, not for the purpose of diminishing the numerical force, but that the staff expence might be saved.

Mr. Ward said it would be better to reduce the men than the officers. This was the opinion of the present Master-General, the Duke of Wellington.

Mr. Hume said, the Hon. Member had, last year, stated that the Duke had said not a single man could be spared; that he had gone over the Estimates man by man; and if his present opinion was what it had just been stated to be by the Hon. Member, and was advanced as authority, he (Mr. H.) would say, "a fig for such authority."—The House divided. The numbers were—For the amendment, 30—Against it, 69—Majority for the Vote, 39.

The sum of 29,435l. 17s. 7d. was voted for the Royal Horse Artillery.

On the question that 6,937l. be granted for the expence of the Medical Department,

Mr. Hume moved to reduce the sum to 5,842l. on the ground that the pay of the Director-General ought to be discontinued.—The House divided—Ayes, 27—Noes, 60—Majority for the Estimate, 33.

The following sums were then voted:—6,159l. for the Royal Academy at Woolwich; 6,466l. paid by the Treasury for Ordnance Estimates in the present year; 14,600l. for the Office of Ordnance, independent of extraordinaries of last year; 906,661l. 12s. 5d. for the Ordnance Land Service of Great Britain; 90,332l. 3s. 5d. for the Ordnance of Ireland.

The sum of 307,401l. for Superannuation allowances of officers in the Ordnance Service having been proposed,

Mr. Hume complained that the allowances made by the Board of Ordnance to superannuated officers was too great.

Mr. Ward said the Hon. Member made so many sweeping observations, that it was impossible to follow him. All his objections had been stated before, and refuted over and over again.

Mr. Hume could not admit his objections had been refuted. The whole of the superannuations were on a scale too large, with reference to the salaries of 1798.

Mr. Ward in reply, said it was impossible to combat with the Hon. Gentleman, intrenched as he was in errors. The Hon. Member brought forward against the Board of Ordnance the sins of the Whig Administration, and complained of the superannuation of the Storekeeper of Ireland, on a salary of 500l. per annum. The individual was superannuated by Lord Moira.

The estimate was then voted.—10,721l. was also voted for the Ordnance Superannuations in Ireland, Widows' Pensions, &c. in 1823; 43,817l. for Emoluments and Widows' Pensions in the Ordnance of Great Britain; 6,256l. Compensation to persons in the Ordnance Department of Ireland; 100,000l. for the Barrack Department in Great Britain for the present year; 107,985l. for Barracks in Ireland.

Mr. Brogden then reported progress.

TUESDAY.

Petitions were presented from Stourbridge, Liverpool, Ulverstone, Birmingham, Reading, &c. against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.—From Ipswich and St. Saviour's, Southwark, against the Duty on Coals. From Liverpool, against State Lotteries.—From Aryleshire, complaining of Agricultural Distress.

Mr. Secretary Canning laid on the table papers alluded to in the King's Speech, relative to the treaties entered into with Foreign Powers on the subject of the Slave Trade.

Sir J. Macintosh, adverting to the negociations, upon the issue of which depended the peace of Europe, asked whether there was any reason to hope that this Government would prevent, by negociations, the aggression of France upon Spain.

Mr. Secretary Canning said, that when the conduct of Government during as difficult and awful a crisis as ever any former Ministers were engaged in shall come to be decided on, he wished it to be judged by no other standard than those principles which sanction the sacred independence of nations, by the balance of power in Europe, by a reference to the faith of treaties, and by an attention, not only to the interests but both the honour and station of this country. Actuated by the same spirit of frankness which he trusted had ever marked the former communications of Government on the subject, he must state, unequivocally, that the hopes of averting war between France and Spain by an amicable adjustment, if not totally extinguished, are, at least, so far diminished as to leave no longer any reasonable expectation of peace. Unless, therefore, something should interpose to vary entirely the view which Government entertains of the affairs of Europe, it was intended on the first open day after the recess, to recommend to the King to communicate a message to Parliament respecting all the transactions during the late negociations, but without going to the extent of calling for an opinion from the House. However, the Right Hon. Gentleman observed, we might despond about the practicability of an appeal to arms on the part of governments of other countries, he did not see in present circumstances any thing specific which could lead to involve this country in hostilities.

Lord Althorpe asked, whether Government intended to erect a monument to the memory of Earl St. Vincent?

The Chancellor of the Exchequer answered in the affirmative, for it would be entirely in conformity with the course pursued by Parliament in respect of Lords Rodney, Howe, Nelson, and Collingwood. On looking to those precedents, he regretted that a motion in respect of Lord Duncan had not been made; he, therefore, should couple that distinguished Officer's name with Earl St. Vincent's, and thus render a tardy justice to the merits of a Commander whose services the country were bound to recognise.

Lord Althorpe gave notice of a motion for the 14th April, for repealing the Foreign Enlistment Bill.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer, adverting to the noble and munificent gift of the King to the nation, namely, his late Majesty's Library, said, though oppressed with most important cares, the late King, from the period of his accession to the Throne down to the moment when he experienced the most awful visitation with which evidence can afflict humanity, had been actively, zealously, and constantly engaged in collecting the works which formed this Library. His Illustrious Successor, with that acknowledged taste, liberality, position, and polished mind, which he was known to possess, had determined on bestowing it on the public. He should, therefore, move to refer the Correspondence and the Treasury minute relative to the donation of the King's Library, to a Select Committee.

Sir Charles Long seconded the motion, and observed that the Library, added to the British Museum, and to that of Sir J. Banks, would make one of the finest libraries in Europe. A large collection of medals, by the late King, formed part of the donation. The motion was agreed to, and a Committee appointed.

Mr. Maberley moved a variety of resolutions, consisting of a tax upon every head of Assessed Taxes, stating the amount, and contending that they should henceforward cease and determine. He then went into several calculations to shew that the land tax might be purchased saleable, that in two years the whole capital amounting to 40 might be redeemed, and a balance of 7,200,000l. would remain, which would give him a surplus revenue, which he expected would enable him to pay off the 4 per cents, and thus an annual saving of 2,000,000l. would be effected. He then described the taxes which he proposed to repeal, the first was the unrepealed Window Tax, which brought in 1,205,000l. In one parish the Window Tax and House Tax together amounted to 33 per cent. This operated as a partial Property Tax on the inhabited house tax amounted to eleven and a half per cent. The land tax was a partial one, and he should therefore propose to repeal it. The next tax which he desired to take off was that on male servants, including clerks and shopmen. He next proposed to take off the duties on four-wheeled carriages, two-wheeled carriages, taxed carts, and coachmen's licences. The total charge on a four-wheeled carriage, two horses, servants, and armorial bearings included, amounted to more than 36l. 5s. 6d. The next tax which he would repeal was that on horses and mules. The next resolution would be for a repeal of the Composition for Assessed Taxes, amounting to 35,000l.

Sir W. De Crespigny seconded the motion. He had a particular objection to the Window Tax; the collection of it was odious and unsupportable, owing to the visitation of Assessors and Surveyors. He had before mentioned a case to the House, in which a lady was rendered into fits by the intrusion of one of these persons into her private apartment.

Sir F. Blake wished the House had not in its wisdom passed the National Debt Reduction Bill.—The House divided upon the resolution—For it, 48—Against it, 94—Majority, 46.—The other Resolutions were then negatived without divisions.

Mr. Jones obtained leave to bring in a Bill to increase and extend the power of the Welch Judges, and to amend the laws relating to them.

Mr. P. Moore moved for leave to bring in a Bill for the better relief of the Insolvent Debtors' Act. The Hon. Gentleman said, he had described the Act as not meriting amendment, and others as not deserving it; and he had therefore come forward to destroy it altogether.

Lord Althorpe did not think that the petitions formed a sufficient foundation for repealing the Act altogether, and he could not, therefore, support the motion of his Hon. Friend. By the law as it stood before the enactment, debtors were liable to confinement for life, and the consequence was, that the prisons became so crowded that every one of them, a fresh Insolvent Act was necessary. The honest man and the dishonest and fraudulent debtor came out upon the same terms. Imprisonment under the present Act was far too short a time. There was another amendment of which he thought the law capable: that was power to the creditor, under certain circumstances, to allow the charge of the debtor.

Mr. C. Wynn was willing to admit that for one cruel creditor there were nine fraudulent debtors: but still, when the question of imprisonment came to be considered, he could not admit that the creditor was the proper judge of the degree.

Mr. Abercrombie was not friendly to the motion.

Mr. Hobhouse thought that, if the Hon. Mover really wished any alteration in the present law, he could not do better than leave it to be proposed by the Solicitor-General.

Sir R. Wilson was happy to say, that there was not one of the petitioners who did not approve of the principle of the Bill.

Mr. Bright wished to see a material alteration of the present Bill which appeared to be easy of evasion.

Mr. Sykes approved of the present Bill on the ground of principle.

The Solicitor-General collected that the feelings of the House were in favour of the principle of the Bill. He did not deny that abuses existed under the present law; but he believed they were much exaggerated. He thought that whenever a debtor appeared to have acted fairly, his person should be discharged. This was the principle on which he approved of the law. The debts discharged under the Act were stated to amount to ten millions; but this was a mistake. Every person legally educated was aware, that a person who had given bills of exchange, which had circulated among several persons, was compelled to put each of them in his schedule, lest he should not give the proper person to whom the money was due. This circumstance rendered necessary the insertion of many debts several times over, so that the nominal amount of debts appeared to be not unfrequently ten times more than their real amount. The deficiency of assets would be accounted for in the circumstance that persons discharged under the Insolvent Act were generally persons in an inferior situation of life, whereas those generally a person in an extensive business, and on a considerable capital. He could only assure the House that he had no desire to withdraw from the pledge he had given to direct his attention to the subject. He should do so most assiduously, and would, in due time, state to the House the result of his labours; and if he thought he could do so effectually, would suggest an improvement in the present law.

Mr. Peter Moore withdrew his motion.

Dr. Phillimore, referring to the New Marriage Act, observed that it contains a Clause, directing that it should be read by the officiating Clergyman in every Church at least four times a year, under penalty of 5l. He therefore proposed to bring in a Bill to repeal that part of the Act. The Hon. and Learned Member accordingly moved for leave to bring in the Bill.—Leave given.

Mr. Hume, adverting to the notice of motion which he had given for dispensing with the office of Lord Lieutenant, Chief Secretary, and other great officers of Ireland, stated that he wished for certain information upon various points, in order to support the case he intended to lay before the House. He therefore moved for several returns of the Income and Expenditure of Ireland for the year ending January 1823; his object being to shew that England had to contribute between two and three millions towards the expenditure, &c.

On the third reading of the Mutiny Bill,

Sir F. Burdett hoped Ministers had determined to put an end to the cruel practice of flogging soldiers of the English army; had an observation made on a former evening by a Noble Lord (Palmerston), relative to the dismissal of an Officer, he was induced, though reluctantly to give up his hope. He gave notice that, on the first open day, he should bring the subject before the House in the form of a substantive motion. The Hon. Baronet then alluded to the conduct of Government respecting the state of affairs between France and Spain. The pretence which long had been made for keeping up a standing army, was that Government might be enabled to preserve the balance of power. We had in fact allowed that balance to be destroyed: we had delivered Europe into the hands of two or three aggrandized coalesced Despots.

Mr. Secretary Peel deprecated discussion on the subject. The Right Hon. Friend (Mr. Secretary Canning) had given notice of his intention, early after the Recess, of laying full information before the House of the state of the question betwixt this Government and Foreign Powers, and also a connected statement of what had been done by His Majesty's Government.

Mr. Hobhouse defended the Hon. Bart. for the course he had taken, and said, if England permitted Spain to become a province of France, her name was blotted from the map of nations.

Mr. T. Courtenay maintained that the power of dismissal had been exercised invariably from the time of the Revolution. He defended the honour of England was compromised because she did not go to war in the war.

Sir Robert Wilson was of opinion, that the people of England would not be satisfied with this country remaining neuter in the contest between Spain and France. He was an unworthy Briton who could sit tamely by, and see France trample on the rights of Spain.

Mr. T. Wilson was not afraid of being charged with a chivalrous spirit because he was not anxious for war.

Sir F. Blake was of opinion that Ministers, to be entitled to the thanks, should act with an increased degree of liberality towards Spain.

Col. Davies expressed his surprise at what had fallen from the Hon. City Member. He was at the meeting which was convened by the making a sort of confession of faith with regard to Spain. Why, in the name of God, had that Hon. Gentleman, holding such opinions as he now professed, given his countenance and aid to that solemn ceremony? They were at liberty to call it a dinner, or whatever else might please them. The Hon. Member said he had regretted the recent illness of the Right Hon. Foreign Secretary, because he thought he was really concerned for the fate of Spain. If the object of that Right Hon. Person, in coming down this evening, was merely to damp the ardour and repress the energies of a brave and struggling nation, he wished to God that he were still confined to his bed.

Mr. Ricardo protested against the inference taken by his Hon. Friend, with respect to those (he having been one) who attended the dinner given to the Spanish Minister. He felt a deep sympathy with the Spanish people: but he was very far from intending by his attendance at that meeting to pledge himself to engage the nation in a war.

Mr. Denison said, that he had refused to attend the meeting, because he would not in any way be considered as pledging himself to support a war on behalf of the Spanish nation. His opinion was in favour of preserving the national honour, without the hazard of war, if that were practicable.

Sir J. Newport said, no man could feel greater disgust at the maxims and proceedings of the deputs; yet he could not forget the calamities of the late war—the vast increase of debt.

Mr. Jones expressed his astonishment at the sentiments of the Hon. Baronet.

Mr. W. Williams was present at the dinner given to the Spanish Ambassadors, but he did not therefore pledge himself to support a war on that account.

Mr. Hume called the Bill a mass of incongruities, and said it wanted reducing by one half. The Noble Lord (Palmerston) had asserted, in answer to a question he had put to him on a former evening, that the words respecting the preservation of the balance of power had always been inserted in the Mutiny Bills, from the Revolution to the present time. That assertion he had ascertained not to be quite correct.

Lord Palmerston was sorry that the Hon. Gentleman's memory did not serve him more correctly as to the question he had formerly put. He had stated that he (Lord Palmerston) had said in answer to his question, that the preamble of the Mutiny Bills had always contained the allusion to the maintenance of the balance of power from the time of King William. He could assure him he had said no such thing. The Hon. Gentleman had asked him to explain the reason of what he called an absurdity; and, in reply, he had said, that if it was an absurdity, it was one which the present Parliament shared in common with that of King William.—The Noble Lord added a clause subjecting officers in the East India Company's service, and who also held a commission from his Majesty, to the provisions of the Bill.—The Bill was then passed.

The Report on the Irish Grand Jury Presentment Bill was ordered to be considered on the 9th of April.—The Irish Tithe Commutation Bill was ordered to be read a second time on the 21st of April.—The Welch Judges Jurisdiction Bill was ordered to be read a second time on the 18th of April.

WEDNESDAY.

Petitions were presented from Blackburn, complaining of hawkers and pedlars—from Dumbarton, against the Cottage Tax—from the Armagh Potteries, praying for a repeal of the Union Duties—from St. Peter's Parish, Dublin, complaining of local taxation—from Dominica, against the equalisation of duties—from St. Vincent's, Virginia Islands, Antigua, Barbadoes, and Montserrat, complaining of mercantile distress—from Bridport, Plymouth, and the Proprietors of Coal Mines near the Forth, in Scotland, against the Duties on Coals—from Plymouth, Wakefield, &c. against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.

Mr. Goulburn brought in a Bill for facilitating the Commutation of Irish Tithes.—Ordered for a second reading on the 23d of April.

Mr. J. Smith asked whether it was intended to establish a packet to Corunna?

Mr. Secretary Canning had some doubts whether the establishment of a packet to Corunna would insure a more speedy communication; but some measure would be adopted to facilitate communication with Spain.

Mr. Wilberforce presented a petition from the Society of Friends praying for the gradual abolition of slavery throughout the British dominions. The Hon. Member made a variety of observations in furtherance of the prayer of the petition, and the necessity of a total abolition of slavery.

Mr. F. Buxton gave notice of a motion for the 22d of April to take into consideration the state of slavery in the British colonies.

On the motion of Mr. S. Rice the 9th and 11th reports of the Commissioners of Inquiry into the Irish Courts of Justice and the letter of Baron O'Grady, were referred to a Select Committee.

In a Committee of Supply Mr. Lushington moved that a sum of 620,000l. be granted for the army extraordinaries for the year 1823.

Mr. Hume admitted that the details of the present accounts were so clear as to do away with many of his objections, but still he objected to the heavy expense kept up in the colonies, particularly that of 2 or 300,000l. in constructing a harbour at Bermuda; the balance to be supplied for the Cape of Good Hope was 170,000l.—he thought the colony ought to support itself. He complained of the manner in which the Crown lands of Canada were disposed of to favoured individuals. In the Mediterranean establishment a reduction ought, in his opinion, to take place. With respect to the Ionian Islands, no colonies could be more unfortunate—no country was more cursed than were the Ionian Islands by the protection of Great Britain. The state in which the inhabitants of those islands were kept by the Lord High Commissioner, Sir Thomas Maitland, was hardly credible; but he congratulated the country upon the change that had taken place within these two or three months in our conduct respecting the unfortunate Greeks; and that happy alteration he could not but attribute to the accession of the Right Hon. Gentleman opposite to the situation of Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs. To that Right Hon. Gentleman he ascribed the liberal line of policy that we had followed since his entrance into office.

Mr. Wynn said, with respect to the Crown lands, he could assure him, that the subject had been for some time under the consideration of Government. With regard to the Cape, Mauritius, and Ceylon, a Commission had been appointed to inquire into the state of these colonies; and he would therefore only say, that there was no subject connected with those colonies into which the Commissioners had not been instructed to inquire. The Hon. Gent. expressed his surprize at the attack on Sir T. Maitland. With respect to the policy adopted towards the Greeks, he was bound in justice to say, that the only communication which had been made by this Government had enforced a system of neutrality. Before the Hon. Member attacked the character of the Officer who held the Administration of those Islands, he should state some distinct fact which might prove that neutrality had been departed from, instead of indulging in general observations. With regard to the general prosperity of the Ionian Islands, at no period had their prosperity been greater than that which they now enjoyed. The Resolution was agreed to, as was one for voting 253,000l. for the Commissariat Department of Great Britain for 1823.

On the Vote for 40,000l. for repairing Public Buildings,

Mr. Henry Grey Bennet was desirous upon this vote of calling the attention of the House to the neglected state of the Parks. They were left open during the night, and the scenes which frequently occurred within their walls were such as to baffle all description.

Mr. Secretary Peel admitted that it was very desirable that the Parks should be placed in a very different situation from that in which they were at present; and he was quite sure that the public would willingly incur the expense of placing them in a more suitable condition.

After some observations, the following sums were voted:—5000l. for the extraordinary expense incurred in the prosecutions for debasing the coin of the realm last year; 25,030l. for law expences of last year; 62,000l. for maintaining the convicts at home; 18,000l. for the Millbank Penitentiary; 3000l. for the National Vaccine Establishment; 40,000l. for the expense of Abolishing the Slave Trade; 22,650l. for making good the deficiencies of the Fee Fund from the Treasury Department; 15,000l. ditto the Exchequer; 26,000l. ditto the Foreign Department; 13,303l. ditto the Colonial Department; 16,386l. ditto the Privy Council Department; 10,000l. for the contingent expenses of Messengers and their Bills on the Treasury; 10,996l. for similar expences in the Home Secretary's Office; 39,026l. ditto the Foreign Secretary of State; 8276l. ditto the Colonial Secretary of State; 9277l. ditto the Board of Trade; 5870l. for the Salaries of Officers of the Court of Exchequer: 9040l. for the Salaries of the Commissioners' Clerks, and for the contingent expences of the Court for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors; 1058l. 5s. for paying the salaries of certain Professors in the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge; 15,440l. for the expences of the Houses of Lords and Commons; 23,237l. for the Salaries and Allowances of the Officers of the Houses of Lords and Commons; 4800l. for the Extraordinary Expences in the Office of the Lord Chamberlain of the Household; and for the furniture and fitting up of the two Houses of Parliament for the year 1823; 50,000l. for Foreign and Secret Service Money; 10,147l. 13s. 11d. for Printing Public Records; 17,000l. for Printing Acts of both Houses, and the Bills, Reports, and Evidence before the House of Lords, for 1823; 3500l. for printing 1750 copies of the 78th vol. of the Journals of the House of Commons; 3500l. for printing the Votes of the House of Commons; 881. 8s. for making good the deficiency of a grant for printing the Votes of the last Session of Parliament; 20,000l. for printing Bills, Papers, &c. by order of the House of Commons during the present Session of Parliament; 3000l. for reprinting Journals and Reports of the House of Commons; 16,150l. for the relief of Toulonese and Corsican emigrants, &c.; 7000l. for the relief of American Loyalists; 2300l. for the expence of confining and maintaining Criminal Lunatics; 6136l. 8s. 10d. for paying poor French Protestant Clergy and Laity, and for the poor of St. Martin-in-the-fields, &c.; 10,567l. 16s. 8d. for the allowances and compensations granted to persons retired from public offices and the public service.—The House resumed, and the Report was ordered to be received to-morrow.

THURSDAY.

At five o'clock only 35 Members being present, an adjournment, of course, took place.

FRIDAY.

Petitions from Waltham and Sudbury, against the Coal Duties; from Hereford, complaining of Hawkers and Pedlars; from Glamorgan, complaining of Agricultural Distress; from Southwark, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; and from the Forest of Dean, complaining of restrictions on the carriage of Coals up the river Severn.

On the motion of Sir J. Newport copies of all Letters and Reports transmitted from the Board of First Fruits in Ireland to the Irish Secretary, were ordered to be laid before the House.

A petition was presented by Sir Ronald Ferguson from the incorporated Weavers of Leith, complaining of injustice to John Hay from the Court of Session.

The Lord Advocate informed the Hon. Member that Mr. John Hay was unworthy his attention, nor was it the first time he had come before the House.

Mr. Hobhouse said the character of the individual had nothing to do with the question.

Mr. Hume defied the Lord Advocate to get better testimonials to character than Mr. Hay; these testimonials came from members of the Scotch Church.

The Lord Advocate, in alluding to Mr. Hay, merely pointed to the state of his head, and not to his moral character.

The Petition was laid on the table.

Mr. Hobhouse gave notice, that he would, on the 15th of May, move for a total repeal of the Window Tax.

On the question for going into Committee on the Warehousing Bill,

Mr. Robertson was of opinion, that the machinery of the Bill tended to destroy the efficacy of it; he wished it to be deferred, in order to make it more complete.

Mr. Bright, and Mr. S. Wortley, concurred in the same opinion.

The Bill was supported by Mr. Wallace, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. K. Douglas, Mr. Marryatt, Mr. Phillips, Sir H. Parnell, Mr. Hume, &c. The House divided—For going into Committee, 82—Against it, 8—Majority, 74.

In the Committee, on the clause for depriving Foreign Silks and Linens imported into this country of the benefit of the Bill,

Mr. S. Wortley proposed an amendment for the protection of the woollen trade.

Mr. Huskisson said the introduction of foreign wool would not affect the English wool trade.—The amendment was negatived. The clauses were agreed to, and the Report ordered for Monday.

In a Committee on the Beer Regulation Bill the Chancellor of the Exchequer proposed certain resolutions for giving to the poor a cheaper beverage; any person taking out a license for one guinea might sell beer of not better quality than six barrels of 36 gallons to one quarter of malt. The price was to be 27s. a barrel, subject to a duty of 8s. Any person taking out a license might sell it in shops as they sold sugar and coffee, then the publicans and brewers would not be injured by the measure.

Ald. Wood, Mr. Buxton, and Ald. Bridges opposed the Bill, chiefly on the ground that the new brewers would not be taxed so high as the old brewers.—The resolutions were agreed to.

The Marriage Bill was passed.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

Paris, March 17.—The Duke d'Angouleme set out on Saturday for the army; he left the Palace of the Tuileries about nine o'clock, after breakfasting with the King. He proceeds to Perpignan, and thence along the Pyrenees, and the different divisions of the army, to Bayonne. The Duke and his suite occupied two carriages, his servants and baggage had been sent away some days before. The Duke d'Orleans paid a visit to the Duke d'Angouleme on the morning of his departure; it is said the Duke de Belluno will not retain his place as War Minister, but will be succeeded either by the Duke de Ragusa, or Viscount Dijeon, Aide-de-Camp to Monsieur. In the Chamber of Peers, the vote of credit for 100 millions of francs was opened

A courier arrived on Saturday morning at the English Ambassador's at Paris from Madrid, which capital he left on the 7th. Every thing was then tranquil, and the Court was preparing to transfer itself to Seville.

Fire was set in several places to the arsenal and powder magazine at Toulon. It was perceived in time to prevent the infernal hopes of the tri-colour incendiaries from being realized.

In the Chamber of Peers on Wednesday, the first business on which it proceeded was, the project of law relative to veterans. Count Molee was the only name inscribed in opposition, and Baron Montalesubert, and Viscount Dijeon, the only names in support of the law. Having delivered their sentiments, the House divided, when there appeared 107 for, and 61 against it.—Baron Pasquier then submitted a proposition that the King might be entreated to present a law, relating to the taking from Councils of War, cognizance of the crime of seducing individuals—against all but military men. After a discussion, in which Count Jules de Polignac, Count Lanjuinais, the Duke of Albufera, and others, took part, the proposition was rejected, on a division of 88 to 56. The Chamber then adjourned sine die.

In the Chamber of Deputies, on Wednesday, the Chamber proceeded to the Order of the Day on the public accounts. The project was then read. On a division on the question, there appeared, for it 233—against it 17. At four o'clock the Sitting was adjourned to Friday.

Bayonne, March 11.—According to the detailed statements of the regiments and battalions, which have hitherto arrived at Bayonne, or which are to arrive by the 24th of April, the grand total is 47,420 infantry, and 9,310 cavalry.—As for the artillery and the train, as the organization takes place at Dax, Paw, and Orthez, we do not know their amount, but it may be taken at between 3 and 4,000 men, and 4,000 horses.—The household of the King, or of his Royal Highness the Duke of Angouleme, is stated at 300 men, and 500 horses, of which 100, belonging to his Royal Highness, are already in the city.—These troops are to form three corps, and a corps of reserve as follows:—First Corps, commanded by the Duke of Reggio. This corps is to enter Spain from Bayonne, proceeding to Vittoria, Burgos, and Madrid, leaning on the 2d and 3d corps, and preceded by a corps of troops of the faith, under Quesada.—Second Corps, commanded by Count Molitor. This corps will enter by St. Jean Pied-de-Port, Roncesvalles, Pampeluna, leaning on the 3d corps, by Sanguesa, Olite, and Tudela, on the Ebro.—Third Corps, commanded by the Prince of Hohenlohe. This corps will enter by Oleron and Jaca, Huesca, Balbastro, Saragossa, Calatayud, in communication with the first corps by Siguenza, and with the 4th by Lerida. The 4th corps is forming at Perpignan.—The division of reserve, composed of 3,000 infantry of the guard, and 2,000 cavalry of the same corps, will remain at Vittoria, Logrono, &c.

It appears that the Constitutionalists are determined not to oppose any resistance to the advance of the army to the Ebro. Torrijos, with his troops, has quitted Navarre, directing his march towards Madrid, as we learn by reports from that province.

Lisbon, March 1.—An intrigue has been undertaken sufficiently strong to subvert the Ministry. A list for a new Ministry was brought to the King, but he firmly rejected it. The change of the Ministry was intended to be the first act in the counter-revolutionary drama. The Conde de Amarante has since raised the standard of rebellion; but the troops under General Riego are full of zeal for the constitution, and the affair will soon be put down.

Madrid, March 8.—In the Sitting of the Cortes on the 7th inst. a communication from the Secretary of State for Grace and Justice stated, that his Majesty was still confined with the gout in the great toe of the left foot; and that her Majesty is somewhat relieved. Several dispatches from Abisbal detail the complete destruction of the insurgent bands that had approached Madrid. It appears that several of the leaders are negociating for the amnesty.

It is stated as a certain fact in private letters, that Mequinenza has been taken. Balleseros had arrived at Saragossa, and was on his way received with the greatest enthusiasm. It was the determination of Spaniards of all classes at Madrid and in the provinces to defend their country against foreign invasion.—The King, Court, and Cortes were to depart from Madrid between the 12th and 15th.—Count d'Abisbal was about to enter that city at the head of 2,500 men, and that with this force he was to accompany the King to Seville.—The factious chief Bessieres, has been entirely overthrown, and his bands dispersed.

The Cortes had returned an address to His Majesty's Speech, or rather, they had given an answer to themselves. In this address they do little more than echo the sentiments of the speech. "We do not doubt," say the Cortes, "that as the nation sustained with so much constancy, and so many sacrifices, the throne of your Majesty against the formidable legions, the chosen captains, and the military genius of the singular man who for a time humbled all the rest of Europe—so will the nation, in like manner, defend with the same courage and patriotism, the dignity of your Majesty and of your throne, the independence, the rights, and the glory of the country."

General Mina has made a rapid journey through Catalonia, where he has personally visited all the towns and villages; and in which the male inhabitants, from 18 to 40, have risen en masse.

Stutgard, March 10.—Letters from the North announce, that since his return to Petersburgh, the Count de Nesselrode has had several important conferences with Sir Charles Bagot, Minister of England in Russia, in consequence of a Note presented in the name of the English Cabinet. The rumour was generally spread that it related to the affairs of Spain and Portugal.

From Valentia we learn, that a great part of the Castle of Guardamar was shattered to pieces by a violent shock of an earthquake at the early part of last month.

Recent accounts state that the Greeks are complete masters of the Morea; that the Christians may be said to be without an enemy; and that the most perfect concord prevailed among the Chieftains.

MISCELLANEOUS.

On Tuesday, at three o'clock, a Cabinet Council was held at the Foreign Office, Downing-street, which continued in deliberation till about half-past four.

On Tuesday, a courier arrived at the Foreign Office, Downing-street, from Paris.

On Thursday, Mr. Canning came to town from Gloucester Lodge, Brompton, and transacted business at the Foreign Office. The Right Hon. Gentleman is still obliged to carry his right arm in a sling.

At a meeting of the Bank Proprietors, on Thursday, the Chairman, in proposing a half-yearly dividend of 4 per cent. accounted for the reduction of one per cent. by stating that there had been an important diminution of the usual profits of the Company. Mr. Goudrey proposed as an amendment, "That there be paid to the proprietors the usual half-yearly dividend of 5 per cent. on the 5th April next." The Court divided upon the amendment, when there were—For it, 43—Against it, 62—Majority, 19. The Court then proceeded to the consideration of a loan of ten millions, proposed to be advanced by the Bank to Government—to be paid in annual instalments of two millions, and for which the Bank is to receive an annuity amounting in the five years to 500,000l. It was finally resolved to confirm the loan.

On Wednesday, a Quarterly General Court of Proprietors of East India Stock, was held at the Company's House, in Leadenhall-street, for the purpose of submitting to the Proprietors, a resolution for granting to Col. J. R. Carnac the sum of 30,000 rupees, for his meritorious services; and secondly, for the purpose of entertaining a motion relative to the equalization of the duties on East and West India sugar. The grant was agreed to. After some debate, the sugar question was adjourned. Mr. D. Kinnaird gave notice that he would move that a Petition be presented to Parliament, for the repeal of the clause of the 53d of his late Majesty, which rendered it compulsory on young men who were about to proceed to India in a civil capacity, to continue at Haileybury College during four terms.

The late fire at Canton will not interrupt the commerce between China and the East India Company. The Select Committee had engaged several suites of rooms for warehousing, and three private factories. The Company's factories will not be rebuilt until plans and specifications are received from England. The tea destroyed was 13,000 chests of Congou.

It is understood that after the 5th of April next, poor persons occupying houses with less than seven windows, and having three children, are to be entirely exempted from the window duty. Every farm house occupied by a tenant for the purpose of husbandry only, is exempt from the inhabited house duty; as is also every farm-house occupied by the owner, and bona fide used for the purpose of husbandry only, which, with the household and offices, shall be valued (under the Act) at 10l. per annum, or any less sum.

On Monday, the anniversary of the Society of St. Patrick, was held at the City of London Tavern—the Duke of Buckingham was in the chair, supported by the Duke of Wellington, Marshal Beresford, Lord A. Hill, Lord Palmerston, &c. &c. A donation of 100gs. was announced from the King; and the subscription altogether amounted to 1180l. 7s.

On Monday his Majesty's stag-hounds met at Salt Hill, where a numerous field of sportsmen were waiting the day's diversion. A remarkably fine deer was turned out of the cart soon after ten o'clock. He went off with great swiftness across the fields towards Mr. Penn's, at Stoke, across the Common, leaving Bulstrode Park to the left, taking to the right of Uxbridge, where he ran across the country, and was taken at Hayes, to the left of Hounslow, after an excellent run.

On Tuesday, a Court of Aldermen was held at Guildhall, when the Rev. Dr. Pooah was sworn in Minister of St. James's, Duke's-place.

On Thursday, at a Court of Common Council, a division took place on a report of the Bridge-house Committee for purchasing the Ieeehold ground occupied by the Philanthropic Institution, in St. George's Fields. For agreeing to the report, 49—Against it, 20. The Court also agreed to the report for building an indictment sessions house, at the Old Bailey, to expedite the business, provided the expence does not exceed 450l.

The Navy.—Besides the orders given for fitting out the guard-ships at Portsmouth, similar orders have been issued to the guard-ships at the other ports, which constitute, together, a force of ten sail of the line. The following are their names and stations:—At Portsmouth, Queen Charlotte, 108, Admiral Sir J. H. Whitshed, K.C.B. Capt. B. Hay; Ramillies, 74, Capt. E. Brace, C.B.; Albion, 74, Sir W. Hoste, Bart. K.C.B.—At Plymouth, Britannia, 120, Admiral Hon. Sir A. Cochrane, G.C.B. Capt. Skeene; Windsor Castle, 74, Capt. C. Dashwood; Superb, 74, Capt. A. M'Kenzie; Bulwark, 74, Capt. T. Dundas.—At Chatham, Prince Regent, 120 (to be launched on the 16th of April,) Vice-Admiral Sir B. Hallowell, Capt. W. Parry.—At Sheerness, Genoa, 74, Sir T. Livingstone, Bart.; and Northumberland, 74, Capt. T. J. Malling.

A woman, a parish pauper at Selby, who has had two illegitimate children, and was pregnant with another, was found on Sunday se'nnight in the river. A man who cohabited with her has been taken up, and charged with murder.

Thursday se'nnight, as several of the workmen employed at the Methodist Chapel, in Cherry-street, Birmingham, were taking off the roof, the principal beam gave way, and precipitated a number of them to the ground. One man, named Green, was killed; another, called Moore, died of his wounds next morning, and two others were severely contused, but expected to recover.

On Saturday se'nnight, Mrs. Knight, an elderly widow lady, of Horsham, possessed of considerable property, put a period to her existence by hanging herself to the bed-post.—Verdict, "Insanity."

Friday se'nnight, one of the prisoners in Aylesbury Gaol met with a serious accident in leaving the tread-wheel; his head was so much injured by being jammed between the wheel and the post, that faint hopes are entertained of his recovery.

An awful instance of sudden death occurred at Waddesdon on Friday se'nnight. William Griffin, a butcher, was employed in his business, when he fell down and expired instantly. He has left a wife and three children.

A sad accident happened in the house of Mr. Biden, of Queen-street, Portsea. A few days since, a chimney-sweeper, named Thomas Gunner, aged about 37 years, having been employed to clean the chimney, ascended for that purpose, and was so completely jammed by the shoulders that he could neither get up nor down. A bricklayer was immediately employed to extricate the unfortunate man, but which, from the strength of the brickwork, it took him upwards of half an hour to effect, when Gunner was found quite dead.—A Coroner's inquest, which sat on the body, returned a verdict accordingly.

In the High Court of Justiciary, Edinburgh, on Friday se'nnight, Mary M'Kennon was found guilty of the murder of Wm. Howatt, who had strayed into a brothel kept by her, while in a state of intoxication. She was ordered to be hanged on the 16th of April, and her body to be dissected.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

The letter from a commercial traveller, complaining of innkeepers' charges, we cannot admit, because if he will inform us where he can get a dinner for half a crown, supper for two shillings, and his drink and bed for two shillings more, and find a waiter who will attend him civilly four-and-twenty hours for eight pence, or a man who will clean his boots and brush his clothes for two pence per diem, so far from publishing the inn's name reprovachfully, we will forthwith proceed to it, and live—upon a principle of economy.

All the jokes about Mr. Ball are waste of powder. Who cares one straw about a man because he happens to have tumbled into a large fortune? We have a respect for the aristocracy, but we always feel inclined to laugh at the display of wealth made by persons who have unexpectedly acquired it—it is like "golden embroidery upon a linsey-wolsey petticoat," making its possessor very absurd while it hangs on, and generally apt to tear away, and leave the old material worse than it was before it was ornamented. As to the facts of Mr. Balls' disappearance with Mercandotti, we are as sick of the subject as we are of all the precautions which the Herald yesterday tells us were taken to prevent a clue to the discovery of whither they are gone. Heavens bless us! what is the world come to? Who cares about it, and who did they think were going to dance after them?

We thought that Mr. Robins, the Auctioneer, lived so much with wits and wags that he could take a joke. We repeat what we said—and we repeat it from the very advertisement he sent to refute us. The top of the advertisement runs thus:—"Unusually splendid Sale of a Nobleman of undoubted taste," &c. Now, the truth is, that Mr. Robins did take the joke, but he wants to attract as much notice as possible to this very Sale. He need not use much trouble, for the rarity and beauty of the articles themselves must do that, without the aid of puffing.

Our other correspondents must stand over.

PRICE OF STOCKS AT THE CLOSE, SATURDAY.

During the past week the fluctuations in the British Securities have been but trifling. On Thursday a very important and unexpected measure took place at the meeting of the Proprietors of Bank Stock, in the reduction of the half-yearly interest from 5 to 4 per Cent. As this was entirely without notice, confusion took place, and Bank Stock fell immediately from 237½ to 210, being a decline of above 27 per Cent. and it has been done as low this day as 205. Consols for the Account opened this morning at 74⅜. At the close they were 74, buyers. The French Rentes at the close on Thursday were 78-45.

3 per Cent. Red. .	Indin Bonds 21 20
3 per Cent. Consols 74⅜ ⅜ ⅛ 73⅝ 74	Exchequ. Bills, 2d 1000l. 9 11 9
2½ per Cent. ditto . .	Ditto . . . . . 500l.
4 per Cent.	Small . . . . .
New 4 per Cent. . . 94⅛ ⅜	Con. for Acc. 74⅜ ⅜ ⅜ ⅛ 73⅝ 74
Long Annuities . .

Letters from Paris quote the prices of French Stock as follow:—

FRENCH FUNDS, March 20.

5 per Ct. Con. 22 Sept. . 78-40	Bank Sh. Div. 1 July
Recon. Div. 22 Sept. . . .	Ex. Lond. 1mo. 25-50 3mo.

The Neapolitan 5 per Cents. Div. were at 66⅞

Just published by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London, in 1 vol. 8vo. price 12s.

FRANCE FOR THE LAST SEVEN YEARS, containing many Facts, and much valuable information hitherto unknown, with Anecdotes, Bons d'Esprits, &c. &c.—By W. H. IRELAND, Member and Ancient of the Athenæum of Science and Arts, at Paris.

"One of the most honest books that has appeared for several years relative to France, is Mr. Ireland's volume, entitled, "France for the Last Seven Years; or, The Bourbons." He therein proves that his feelings are of the true old British School, and that he is not one of those base panders of power, who, for years past, have subsisted by ascribing the crimes of their patrons to the principles of liberty."—Monthly Magazine, Vol. 53, p. 162.

A Monday's Edition, containing the Latest News, the Stock List, the London Markets, and the State of the Country Markets by that Morning's Post, is published at Three o' Clock.

JOHN BULL.

LONDON. March 23.

Letters have been received from Madrid; that capital remained tranquil at the departure of the courier; every preparation was making with as much activity as possible for the removal of the Cortes, the Ministers, and the King. The church plate and other property of value, had already been sent off under a strong escort. It was suspected that some plot had been formed to prevent the King's departure, or to give it a different direction; but it was believed that there was no very strong Royalist corps near Madrid. The French army is concentrated on the frontiers. The engineers have pontoons sufficient for the construction of a bridge across the Bidassoa, which they can complete in less than twelve hours, which, it is said, will be thrown across on the evening previously to the French army's entering the Spanish territory. A very short time, we suppose, will elapse before we hear of that event having taken place.

It is difficult to rouse people to a sense of their danger, who judge only from the external aspect of affairs—or who consider events simply as they appear to interfere, favourably or otherwise, with the usual routine of their daily occupations. If the only effect of this indifference, or ignorance of what is passing beneath the immediate surface of society, were to limit the number of political quid-nuncs, and thus diminish the means and physical force of political intriguers, we doubt whether the evil would not be over-balanced by the general good resulting from it—but whilst men of sober views and habits of business are blinded to the ulterior objects of faction, the great masses of the people are left open to their vilest machinations, and their passions embarked in designs whose object and extent they have neither reason nor perception sufficient to fathom, or even to comprehend, when pointed out to them.

If it be answered—as it too frequently is—by saying, "this has always been the case, and yet we have weathered the storm whenever it has appeared ready to burst upon us"—we deny the fact generally, by a reference to our history—but we specifically deny it, as applicable to the existing state of public opinion—or rather the opinions which are daily making their way among the lower classes of people. Our laws have proscribed the writings of Paine and Carlile—but they are universally circulated, and the man who does not perceive their effect upon the minds of those who read them is little entitled to the character of a philosopher or a statesman!

Opinions are not what they have hitherto been—neither is their origin or foundation the same as formerly tended to divide political parties: Parliamentary leaders may carry on discussions touching this or that line of foreign and domestic policy, and we may find in them the ordinary modes of proceeding in other times, and matter for a second process of discussion over our eggs and roll, on the following morning, as our fathers did before us—but there is rising up an imperium in imperio—like the Jacobin and Landaburian clubs in France and Spain! They are not so obvious nor so prominent, because they are here multiplied into thousands of branches, acting under the established forms of a really free country, and have every facility at hand for conveying to every part and corner of the empire their crude notions of abstract right, constrved into plain, practical precepts, and calculated, in the result, to set parliament, laws, and monarch at open defiance!

When we see a weak, silly Nobleman, or prating coxcomb, pluming himself on Whiggery, and haranguing multitudes upon "the necessity of Reform," we can never divest ourselves of the prospective view presented to our imagination, of this same booby Lord or Esquire dangling at a rope's end, for the amusement of the very rabble he supposes he is duping, or making instruments for effecting his own stupid and narrow party views!

The principles which when displayed in their native hue and deformity during the progress of the French Revolution, revolted every honourable mind, and united this country in one common sentiment of horror and disgust, are now insinuated under other combinations, and received as part of the political creed which binds us to the Constitution of our forefathers. Every day, every hour is pregnant with the truth of our assertion, and even within the walls of Parliament, if we are to believe the published reports of them, these principles are now produced as the test or criterion of the fitness of every legislative enactment proposed for the government of the country. Why are not the same sentiments of national abhorrence expressed against the adoption of such principles now, as when Mr. Fox and his skeleton corps of apostate politicians sought accession of strength by an open alliance with Horne Tooke and the Corresponding Societies?—Why is the country acquiescent under the attempts now made to suppress every association which has the union, the conservation, and the integrity of the Constitution for its object—from the Constitutional Association in London to the Orange Societies of Ireland—when it so triumphantly repelled the insidious efforts of the new Whigs, in 1792 and 1793, to cast similar odium and suspicion upon Societies of the self-same origin and principles, and in whose suppression had they succeeded, as they now are doing, would have left our wretched country a naked and sure victim to the fury of Jacobinism, and the horrors of a sanguinary revolution?

Why was Mr. Fox, with all his eloquence, and the remnant of popularity which still stuck to the self-elected "man of the people," why was he expelled from all honourable intercourse with the statesmen of the country on both sides? For denying the existence of principles which were not even attempted to be concealed, and for decrying the association of honourable and constitutional men, whilst he defended and upheld combinations ramifying from the focus in Paris into every town and village of the country, and maintaining the regicide principles of French fraternization. Why, we ask, when such a man, having claims upon the admiration of the country for superiority of talents, however degraded by their employment, was not only unsuccessful, but exposed to public scorn for his efforts to deprive Government of its best and most legitimate resources in the hour of danger, should the puny race of Whiggamores in our day be suffered to obtrude their crude and mischievous theories, which are tending equally to subvert the main pillars of the Constitution, and debase the British character below that of the Jacobin incendiaries of Republican France?—Simply because intrigue more securely works its end than open hostility—because the system of sapping and undermining is carried on with less eclat, and the danger is less evident to casual and superficial observers, than overt acts upon the citadel of our Constitution—because the example of Revolutionary France is no longer before our eyes, nor operative upon the senses of the present generation;—and, lastly, because the principles of Jacobinism are concealed under the plausible veil of Reform, and the doctrines which open the avenues to anarchy and subversion are broached under the forms of a liberal and enlightened philosophy.

Every step—every advance on the part of the Whig Reformers, as well as of the Spanish Exaltados, in their present career, has its precedent in the progress of liberal and philosophical principles, promulgated as the harbingers of the French revolution. The same contempt for legitimate authority—the same hatred against old establishments—the same charges of general corruption—the same calumnies against the Church—the same system of enlightening and demoralizing the lower orders, are to be found in active operation at this moment, as they were in France, from the year 1770 up to the grand explosion in 1789!

Mr. Fox, and his new Whig Junto, in the full prospect of triumph, advised us to plunge into the volcano, whilst its eruption was at its height, but the nation at large revolted from Counsel which carried its own confutation with it; but his more subtle, though less able successors, would persuade us that the path is now secure over the "cooled ashes," and that fertility and the perfectability of human institutions are no where to be found, but in this new el dorado!

But still it will be asked, why have we gained so little by experience? why are we such dupes to principles? which, however disguised, must, to every man of common observation, betray their source—and thus submit ourselves to a monkey tribe of political experimentalists, when we spurned the heresy proffered by their comparatively giant predecessors? —We answer, that human nature is human nature, whether surrounded by the advantages of high culture, or left to the simple operation of external impressions. Every thing morsel of the best qualified, from self-knowledge, to discover our most vulnerable parts.

A free press is an instrument, in the hands of such men, more powerful than Cabinets or Legislative Bodies—more formidable than legions of armed men! By stigmatizing all who presume to oppose the career of revolutionary principles—by holding them up to contempt as bigots and narrow-minded zealots, they alarm and frighten into silence those who are of retired or unobtrusive habits, whilst, by dignifying with the title of patriots and philosophers, those who adopt their tenets, they hold out a bribe to the vanity—by far the weakest, the most general, and most vulnerable point in our nature—of those who are more known and avowed—as we shall, ere long, have occasion to shew—to be a covert term for revolution; and as such, professing to be the remedy for evils—of whose existence, by the bye, we never had a suspicion, from never having experienced their effects—the purification of existing establishments from the errors and corruptions which have engendered upon them by time, holds out something plausible, that if we could be made duly to feel the circumstances under which we labour, we might, indeed, consider it to be a duty to submit ourselves to the suggestion of a remedy short of what is called Reform! The prime object, therefore, of Whig and Jacobin agitators, is, to fix upon the existence of our actual state of suffering, and of universal corruption which has marked our career from the revolution downward—which, in our mistaken view of things we had, till very lately, made the constant theme of exultation and boast. In spite of our enlightened friends and Job-like zeal, we might still continue to entertain the opinion, from our existing station among the European Powers—from the vigour of our policy—the riches of the country and the universal prosperity which seems to distinguish it from every other people under the sun; but, although we are told, from what we yet deign to consider a high authority, that "men do not gather grapes from thorns," we are assured, by our practical Reformers, when they exclaim absolutely deny their existence, that these apparent advantages are mere accidental excrescences growing out of the heat and corruption of the soil,—and, like the deceptive feverish efforts of a dying man, are only the stronger indications of our approaching dissolution, unless the Parliament of Reform be immediately exhibited!

And do people really believe this? Verily, verily, they—and are converted by the mountebank politicians, by their fellow labourers in fanaticism, by thousands a year. And men—country gentlemen of education, who years ago would have dreaded to attend a meeting for Reform, as their fathers would have done a meeting for recalling Pope and the Pretender, are now ready at the summons of their London and Parliamentary leaders, to rasout sleeve folds and waggons, in order magnanimously to declare, that "they, too, are friendly to Reform!"

The process, as we have before observed, is easy,—and the transition almost imperceptible. Vanity—vanity, is undermining within, whilst public acclamations, and,—where it exists,—the power of stringing a few sentences, and having them in print afterwards, serves to pamper the abound craving appetite for distinction. Nothing, as is well kno is more calculated to please and gratify an Englishman, the assurance of "his having a grievance." This, strange may appear, may be reasonably accounted for, from his rent attachment to liberty, which is naturally tenacious jealous of incroachment, and is therefore apt to conjur shadows, or to catch at them if conjured up by others: what a field does this disposition open to the trading po cian—to the scheming revolutionist! What remedy will a man resort to, when he is made to believe, that his Go vernment is a mass of corruption—that Kings are useless tyrants, and that laws are no longer of force th they are agreeable to the notions or particular circumstances individuals! But if, in a moment of real privation and fering, though proceeding from natural causes, over wh the power of man has no control, this remedy be urge sure, certain, and infallible, can we be surprised that great mass of people, who cannot be brought to believe men of rank and education can be guilty of bearing money to barefaced falsehood, should join in clamo for the adoption of it, and swallow the hook, thus gil baited, for their destruction! It is, we repeat, the repetition—the starling-like cry of Reform—Reform—which sounded in men's ears, until they confound the meaning object of it, that has gained, and is gaining, proselytes to formidable and fearful extent.

Burke, in speaking of Jacobinism, and of its early progress in France, says,—

"The seeds are sown almost every where, chiefly by newspaper circulation, &c. They are part of the reading of all—they are the whole of the reading of the far greater number. The writers of these papers, indeed the greater part are either unknown or in contempt—but they are like a battery, in which the stroke of any one ball produces no great effect, but the amount of continual repetition is decisive. Let us only suffer any person to tell us his opinion morning and evening, for one twelvemonth, and he will become our master."

No government—no civil authority can stem the torrent of a corrupt press, determinately pursuing the object of demoralization, and the universal corruption of established principles—no law can meet it—no power resist or put it down and it is upon this conviction that Whigs and Radicals urge Ministers to prosecute for libels, whilst they stigmatize and run down every attempt to meet the enemy upon their own ground, either by individual efforts or the association of men united by an honest and patriotic attachment to their institutions of their fathers!

The inconsistent and contradictory conduct of the Whig upon the question of war is only part of the same system War against the Jacobinism of France was war against their newly-adopted principles;—war for revolutionary Spain must be in support of them; and if they can drag this country, at whatever cost—millions in money, or in blood —they will have gained their point of committing England upon the question of liberal principles! They will then only have to turn round upon Ministers, and demand for the people of this country, the rights which they had even gone to war to secure to the people of Spain! In all Whig policy—in all Radical morality, and in accordance with the "Monita Secreta" of the disciples of Loyola, part only of a scheme are to be developed beyond the line of demarcation for the initiated. Grattan, when he had wound up that curious passage in the history of Ireland which sent the volunteers home, and rewarded his patriotic labours with 50,000l. declared that no further concessions could ever be demanded, with justice, by the Irish Roman Catholics! and the pious Mr. Wilberforce, unless our memories egregiously fail us, did, when, some few years back, charged in the House with an intention of trying the hazardous experiment of emancipating the slaves in the West Indies, positively deny that his intentions exceeded the professed object he had in view, namely, that of abolishing the trade and traffic in slaves! and yet we not only perceive that this single hearted gentleman has announced his intention to originate a measure directly involving the question of slave emancipation, but that he has written a tract, no doubt to be dispersed, like the other manufactures of the Puritan Committees, throughout the "Christian world," to stir it up in its support.

This is all in the course of things with ultra professors and ultra politicians. What are massacres or revolutions to nem? KING WILBERFORCE may yet reign, with a Royal ROUGHAM at his right hand—good fellowship! and as he, a w years since, at a tavern dinner, gave the health of the MPEROR CHRISTOPHE, "as the Monarch the most legiti-ately placed on the throne of any crowned head in existence," e may yet live to see himself toasted by the same legitimate tle. Thousands of whites may indeed perish ere the con-mmation be perfect; but what are slave-owners and anters to a Psalm-singing Saint, following in the blessed eps of those "amis de noirs," PETION, ROBESPIERRE, and ANTON, who only half completed their work that a WIL-ERFORCE might claim the consummate glory of the final chievement!

We hate and detest humbug—of all humbugs, most, that hich would wind itself round society under the hypocritical aut of superior sanctity. A political party founded by the ader of a sect must always be a subject of jealousy and doubt a lover of the English Monarchy; and such a coalition annot subsist without motives which dare not face the open lare of day!

We see the WILBERFORCIANS forced into every public ody in the State, and forcing themselves to power in each; at we have more to say on this head than we can find time r space for to-day. This man's trusty agent for the SIERRA eone humbug (and a pretty profitable one we believe it was) among the subscribers to the call for a Court of Proprietors n the East India Sugar concern. Why could not the great hau sign his name with JOSEPH HUME, instead of sun-ti-hting his shadow—praise-God ZACHARIAH MACAULEY! le is not ashamed of sitting cheek by jowl with BROUGHAM, Committees of Saints and African purification.

HALF PAY.

THE following article on the subject of Foreign Half Pay, ppeared in Wednesday's CHRONICLE:—

"A Correspondent informs us that the Duc de GUICHE, who has mitted Paris with his Royal Highness of ANGOULEME, on the Holy rusade against the Spaniards, as Commander-in-Chief of the Light avalry of the Royal Guard, is at this very moment in the British rmy, and in the receipt of Half Pay as Captain of the Tenth Hussars."

"Another Correspondent expresses his astonishment that the item Foreign Half Pay was, in the debate on the Army Estimates, passed er without remark. He affirms (and no man has had better opportu-ties of informing himself on the subject), that one half of the officers mposing the French Guard receive English Half Pay, and every ree months, on the 25th and successive days, the British Consul's ffice is crowded with men who come to have their certificates signed, d whom you see the following day mounting guard at the Thuilleries. hese are the men to whom the Government look chiefly up for sup-rt in their iniquitous system, and who are now on their march to de-oy liberty in Spain."

Nothing can be more true than the information of the st correspondent of the CHRONICLE; nothing more natural an the surprize of the second. We also wonder that, while ch men as HUME and HENRY GREY BENNET sit in the ouse of Commons, such flagrant conduct on the part of e Ministers is passed over in silence.

We are certainly not so much surprized as the writers of the ove articles appear to be; and they will perhaps abate their tonishment when they know that this DUKE DE GUICHE, ho is on his march to destroy liberty in Spain, and to whom ir Government look for support in their iniquitous system, is e brother of the COUNTESS OF TANKERVILLE, the sister-in-w of MR. HENRY GREY BENNET. We wonder that the RONICLE did not know that—poor PERRY would not have ade such a blunder.

THE LORD RECTOR HUME, on Monday night last, when eaking of military matters, observed, "that he would not ve a FIG for such authority as the DUKE of WELLINGTON." The COURIER of Tuesday falls foul of his Lord-Rectorship, r having worded this opinion of the DUKE'S authority in nguage not technical, and blames him for not having made is estimate in apothecaries' weight. It must have been clear, e should have thought, to the COURIER, that his Lord-'ectorship! had got rid of all his scruples before he ventured adopt the grocer language.

We are extremely ashamed of having made this pun, but e COURIER set us the example, and the disease is terribly fectious. But while we are upon the subject of MR. JOSEPH UME and his fig-urativeness, we wish to congratulate the niversity of Aberdeen upon the high honour which it has ne itself by electing that exemplary person its Lord Rector. We thought till now that CAMBRIDGE was singular in the lvantages it possessed in a CHANCELLOR—but Aberdeen, e confess, may now lift up its head, and struggle for equality ith its sister University.

By the way, when his Royal Highness the DUKE of GLOUCES-ER—(who, by the way, also, we are happy to say, abuses BULL ost handsomely)—was elected to the high, honourable, and stinguished post, which he fills with so much credit to him-lf and satisfaction to Cambridge, he was a good deal puzzled ow to get through the arduous ceremony of installation, and herefore, on the evening previous to the day appointed for his evation, he made anxious enquiries what he was to do in the rformance.

His reverend councillor told him that there was not much r his Highness to do—that after he had reached the throne e Vice-Chancellor would leave it—and taking his Highness's nd induct him thereto—that then he would sit and hear e speeches of various professors, either touching upon the ppy event of his election, or upon the merits and virtues of ose to be presented for degrees, and that in all of these eeches, which would be in Latin, no doubt perpetual allu-ns would be made to his Highness personally, or to the il-strious family with which he is connected—"it will be ex-pected, Sir," said the Rev. Doctor, "that your Highness hould acknowledge these civilities by an inclination of the ead, or by one of those smiles which your Highness knows o graciously and so judiciously how to bestow."

"But, my dear Doctor," said his Royal Highness, "if hese speeches are all in Latin, how the deuce shall I know when to bow—or smile—if I don't understand the compli-ment—eh?"

The Doctor was not quite prepared for this; however, ter considering for a few moments, he told his Highness, that henever he or any of his Royal family were alluded to, he ould hear the words, 'Princeps,' or 'Principes,' or, perhaps, Principibus,' with such epithets as the orator might "feel it right to appropriate to them; and that, in short, when-ever his Highness heard the word Princeps in either of its numbers, or in any of its cases, he might safely bow, and smile."

Accordingly, my Highness made his procession, was re-ived by the Vice Chancellor, ascended the chair, and put his p upon his head—there was not much in that. In due course came the learned professors to pay their devotions and introduce their Doctors.

The speeches began—the words "Princeps" "Principis" "Principes" "Principibus" occurred, and occurred—and at every recurrence we saw the gracious bow, the winning smile from the Royal Chancellor: at length the Professor of Physic had the honour of haranguing his Highness, and all went on as usual, till having occasion to mention those two immortal personages GALEN and HIPPOCRATES, he designated them as "Omnium Medicorum Principes."

Whereupon his Highness bowed and smiled as usual, and the numerous congregation burst into a shout of laughter.—We mention this as a caution to the Lord Rector HUME in case there should be any body found even at Aberdeen silly enough to compliment him in a language which he does not understand.

AMONGST the Clerical Dignitaries in Ireland, enumerated by MR. HUME, as devourers of the public wealth, in virtue of their offices, are "Rural Deans." Now, Rural Deans in Ireland, are Rectors selected by their diocesans, previously to the Episcopal visitations, to inspect the Churches and Glebe houses of different parishes, and to report to their Bishops the condition of those buildings; and these Rural Deans, who, it seems, are, in consequence of their offices, devourers of the public wealth, enjoy no emolument whatever; unless personal inconvenience and trouble, and frequently expence, incurred in travelling, be considered in the light of emoluments!

THE CHRONICLE, after a three months' silence, which it perhaps considers a sufficient expiation for its former falsehoods against SIR THOMAS MAITLAND, ventures once more to the attack; but recollecting the unanswerable manner in which we exposed its untruths and blunders, it does it very prudently under the wing of MR. JOSEPH HUME, whose speech, on Wednesday, in the House of Commons, was pretty much on a par with the ebullitions of that paper.

He is reported to have said, that the frequent voyages of the Governor of the Ionian Islands to Malta, had destroyed all confidence in the neighbouring countries; that the rules of quarantine were not preserved as they ought to be. Now, the fact is, whenever SIR THOMAS MAITLAND has gone from Corfu to the ports of Italy direct, he has usually been permitted, by those Governments, whose confidence MR. HUME and the CHRONICLE assert he has so much shaken, to take pratique at as short a period of time as that imposed when he embarks for Malta.

It may also be remembered, that one of the serious charges against the General was, that he never went near Malta.

MR. HUME tells us of a Greek agent, who was so frightened by the conduct of the Lord High Commissioner in the Ionian Islands, that he dare not even come to England, for fear he should be put in prison; and yet this Grecian must have known, that when the disturbances first broke out in the Morea, hundreds of families came over to Zante, leaving their husbands and sons to combat the Turks; and it is more than probable some of his own relatives were among the number. He also knows that the destitute were housed and fed by this terrible Ionian Government; and that many of them remain to this day in the Islands.

That the British soldiery are employed to keep down the rising spirit of freedom among the people, is equally untrue; for the Ionians are perfectly aware, that had it not been for their presence, the possessions of many would, at this moment, have presented a spectacle of desolation similar to that of the unfortunate Scio, and other ill-fated islands of the Archipelago.

The proof of the melancholy effects of British protection, is oddly exemplified in the building of houses, the making of roads, the cultivation of land, the establishment of public schools for all classes—the security of shipping, that now fearlessly plough the sea, bearing the British union in the corner of their standard—and the increasing riches of the natives: they have not been oppressed by additional taxes; their principal exports have increased in price nearly 300 per cent. while their imports in grain have decreased almost 200 per cent.

MR. HUME states their present revenue at near 800,000 dollars, and yet, when he was among them, it did not reach 400,000 dollars. The expence of the islands to Great Britain is gradually decreasing—the mass of the people are satisfied—and so far from an Englishman being viewed with detestation, as MR. HUME asserts, he is often selected by the Ionians themselves, as the umpire in their arbitration cases.

The conduct of SIR THOMAS MAITLAND has been, throughout, such as fully to warrant the reply of MR. WILMOT, who explicitly stated to the House, that no new instructions have been sent out to him, and that the insinuations of MR. HUME are not founded in fact. We have no doubt the credulity of the worthy Member for Aberdeen has been imposed upon; for the Greeks are great deceivers, and for a time may obtain belief; but truth at last finds its way, and the public begin to be convinced, that the more the conduct of SIR T. MAITLAND is inquired into, the more satisfactory is the result. That his measures have been shamefully misrepresented—that the Ionians are at this moment elevated to a degree of opulence and comfort they never before enjoyed, and that those who were foremost in raising the clamour against him, are now endeavouring to hedge out of their dilemma by the equally untounded and ridiculous assertion, that things are changed.

Alderman WOOD in the Common Council supported the proposed measure of opening an additional Court in the Sessions House, Old Bailey, so that while the Judges are trying the heavy cases, the Recorder and Common Serjeant may be disposing of the lighter ones.—The Worthy Alderman spoke with great gravity on the subject, which he observed was one towards which he had for fourteen years directed his attention.

The following is an extract from the MORNING CHRONICLE report of a debate in the House of Commons, on Wednesday evening last:—

"The next resolution was for the expences of the Insolvent Court and Clerks 9,040l.

"Mr. Alderman Wood reprobated that enormous expence.—The expences of four Courts in the City did not exceed 70l. And yet the Committee were called upon to vote the present enormous grant for a Court, by which he would say the country was robbed ["No, no," from many Members]. He repeated what the numerous Petitions from various parts of the country asserted.

Mr. Secretary PEEL recommended the worthy Alderman to look more accurately at the papers in his hand, he would then find that the 70l. which he stated to be the total, was the mere charge for coals and candles (a laugh). The mistake was this—"for coals and candles," was at the head of one line—while the next was, "for the Four Courts, 70l." The worthy Alderman confined his reading and his argument to the last line (laughter), and thereon founded his comparative statement."

Considering that the "City Courts" have received the benefit of the Worthy Alderman's [illegible] years, the mistake is humorous enough to attention for 12 Lords Rectors than one in Parliament. There are more

WE seldom review books; we have no space for it—yet there are times when we feel it necessary to find room for an article on literature. At the present moment, we are under the influence of that feeling.

Many people have written and made books about BUONAPARTE; much of their contents must have been hearsay—much guess-work, and a still greater proportion invention; but at length, a person has published a work, upon which, reliance—implicit reliance may be placed: MR. LAS CASES has published four volumes of his residence at St. Helena; which every body should read; because, in them, BUONAPARTE is represented to the life. LAS CASES was his follower—his State Councillor—his amanuensis—his friend; had mingled with his Court—had attended him in his greatness, had abandoned him, and shared the misfortunes of his fall: in all the intercourse with LAS CASES, we have BUONAPARTE en dishabille—in his bath—in his bed-room—in his dressing-gown—in his retirement; he talks confidentially, throughout, to a man, who (to be sure, it was after having been an emigrant loyalist) absolutely worshipped him; the one, therefore, spoke candidly, and the other, perfectly delighted with the talents and virtues of his Imperial master, noted down, and has published every thing he said during four years.

Now, out of these four volumes, we will, in M. LAS CASES' own words, prove to our readers more against BUONAPARTE than his bitterest foes ever advanced.

It will be the shortest (which with us is the best) way, to go to the matter at once; and we will begin with an anecdote illustrative of BUONAPARTE'S regard for truth, and high sense of honour.

"It is well known," (says LAS CASES) "that SIR SIDNEY SMITH did every thing in his power to corrupt our army; false intelligence from Europe—the slander of the General-in-Chief—the peaceful bribes held out to the officers and soldiers—were all approved by him; the documents are published—his proclamations are known; at one time, they created sufficient alarm in the French general to induce him to seek to put a stop to them, which he did by forbidding all communication with the English, and stating, in the Order of the Day, that their Commodore has gone mad; this assertion was believed in the French army; and it so much enraged SIR SIDNEY SMITH, that he sent NAPOLEON a challenge! The General replied, that 'he had business of 'too great importance on his hands, to think of troubling himself about 'such a trifle!—Had he received a challenge from the Great MARL-'BOROUGH!!! then indeed, he might have thought it worth while to 'consider of it.'"

—We should think so—particularly as his Grace, at that period, had been dead some eighty years.

"But if the English seaman really felt inclined to amuse himself at a tilting match, he would send him a tall bullying grenadier, and neutralise a few yards of the sea-coast, where the mad Commodore might come ashore and enjoy his heart's content of it."—Vol. I. part I. p. 203.

Considering that the "mad Commodore" was somewhat of the same relative rank with the General, the answer does not appear in better taste than the LIE which the said General chose to publish, in the order of the day, to an army which had an implicit reliance upon him. But, considering that this mad Commodore utterly defeated this lying General, upon that very occasion, we think it injudiciously brought forward by M. LAS CASES—more especially as in a subsequent part of the work, BUONAPARTE attributes the loss of the East Indies and other incalculable advantages, from this particular failure at St. Jean d'Acre!

LAS CASES proceeds to give his readers, as it seems he gave BUONAPARTE, some proofs of his Majesty's great popularity in France.

"I saw, Sire," (says LAS CASES to BUONAPARTE), "in front of the residence of the Emperor of Russia, (in Paris), men distinguished by their rank, and calling themselves Frenchmen, exerting their utmost endeavours to induce the rabble to call out, 'Long live ALEXANDER, our deliverer.' I saw, Sire, your monument, on the Place Vendome, resist thee efforts of a few wretches," &c.—"In one of the corners of the Place Vendome, before the hotel of the commandant of the place, I saw one of the officers of your household, trying to prevail on young conscripts to enter another service than yours."—"It may with justice be affirmed," (says LAS CASES), "that the acts of baseness which then disgraced France did not originate with the rabble!"

But mark what follows:—

"At length the King arrived. He was henceforth our Sovereign. He appointed a day for the reception of those individuals who had been presented to LOUIS XVI. I proceeded to the Thuilleries to await myself of this prerogative. What were my reflections on entering those apartments which had so lately been filled with your glory and power! —and yet I presented myself to the King sincerely and in good faith. MY FORESIGHT NEVER LED ME EVEN TO THINK OF YOUR RETURN!"—pp. 357, 358, idem.

We care very little, however, about M. LAS CASES, our business is with his idol; but, after this speech to his Emperor, the following angry answer of the old Gentleman's to SIR HUDSON LOWE, mentioned in a subsequent volume, appears mighty comical.

SIR HUDSON LOWE complimented LAS CASES upon his "Atlas," a work which he mentions about one hundred and fifty times in the book, as we will presently shew, but told him he never suspected he was the Author; because, "he had been forcibly struck by some equivocal passages, which seemed to breathe hostility or reproach to the individual who then governed (France;) and thought it a singular contradiction to see him in the suite of that individual at St. Helena."

LAS CASES, replies, somewhat sharply to SIR HUDSON—"that they" (the equivocal expressions) "could not have any "reference to NAPOLEON."—Why? "Because," says LAS CASES, "I am now attached to his person." It was, as he is kind enough to mention, no fault of his, that he had not been attached to the person of LOUIS XVIII.

To recur to BUONAPARTE'S popularity, hear his own words. —Part III. p. 16.

"All our dangers did not come from without, the worst existed in our internal discord."

LAS CASES' eternal toadying we omit; but BUONAPARTE says—

"The measure I pursued (running away) was, I think, most advisable. Friends and enemies—the good and the evil disposed were all against me!"—Ibid.

This, it will be observed, is the confidential statement of the man, for whom the whole French nation are said, in five pages after, to be grieving, and weeping, and tearing their hair.

We might, perhaps, account for this hatred of BUONAPARTE, of the existence of which his dear friend has thought fit to satisfy the world, by many facts, recorded by the same affectionate hand. We take one which first occurs at p. 39. p. III.

The story is about FOUCHE, not material to the developement of character. BUONAPARTE discovered some underhand manœuvres of FOUCHE, and had the agent employed in them arrested, and brought to him as he was walking in the garden of the Elysee.

"'Do you know me?' said the Emperor. This commencement, and the feelings which the Emperor's presence inspired, greatly startled the stranger. 'I am acquainted with all your proceedings,' continued NAPOLEON, in a tone of severity, at this moment, "you will be taken from this garden TO BE SHOT!!!"—and "laws!—constitutional government!" This is a considerable share of complacency. Good God! Of all the wretched, weakest, wickedest Englishman that ever lived, if such were to be treated thus in our country, what would the WATSONS, the HOBHOUSES, the WADDINGTONS, and the WILSONS say?

There is a naïveté about the following speech of BUONAPARTE which is exquisitely exciting to other feelings:—

"What a fatality, (he said) that my return from the Isle of Elba was not accompanied in; that every one did not perceive that my reign was desirable, and necessary for the balance and repose of Europe." p. 305, p. III.

"I was wanting in consistency, (says BUONAPARTE) or rather, in confidence in the French, because many of them no longer placed any in me."

In short, every page is a confession—a declaration that his popularity, except amongst a certain class, which infests all nations, was gone. Indeed, we candidly confess, that we had no idea how ill the mass of people thought of BUONAPARTE till M. LAS CASES was kind enough to publish the fact so clearly.

BUONAPARTE'S public policy few men can doubt, few now care about: although we must, in the course of this article, recur to that, we will here proceed to matter, which, though of less real consequence, is of more general temporary interest, as having, in his exile, created a spirit of enquiry.

First we will shew what BUONAPARTE said of the climate of St. Helena and of SIR HUDSON LOWE, then what he said of MARIE LOUISE, of JOSEPHINE, of the morals of women, of religion, and of himself; and, out of his own mouth, we will shew him to have been one of the greatest hypocrites—the worst husband—the worst man—no Christian—and the vainest mortal, that ever existed; and nothing more will we do than use his own words, as M. LAS CASES has kindly recorded them.

"The Emperor," (says LAS CASES) "observed, as we were walking with him in the garden, that after all as a place of exile, perhaps St. HELENA was THE BEST THAT COULD BE.—(Mark this on reader.)—In high latitudes we should have suffered greatly from cold, and in any other Island of the Tropic we should have dragged out a miserable existence under the scorching rays of the sun. This rock, continued he, is wild and barren no doubt: the climate monotonous and unwholesome! BUT, the temperature it must be confessed is mild and agreeable!!!"—p. II. p. 216.

The next memorandum of LAS CASES goes to illustrate SIR HUDSON LOWE'S temper.—SIR HUDSON LOWE had visited Longwood on a particular day, and BUONAPARTE referred upon that occasion to his own conduct to SIR HUDSON upon a former interview: these are his words,—

"I behaved very ill to him, no doubt, and nothing but my present situation could excuse me, but I was out of humour and could not help it. I SHOULD BLUSH for it in any other situation, had such a scene taken place at the Tuilleries I should have felt myself bound in conscience to make some atonement: never during the period of my power did I speak harshly to any one, without afterwards saying something to make amends for it, but here I uttered not a syllable of conciliation, and I had no wish to do so."

So far for BUONAPARTE'S disposition—now mark—

"However, the Governor proved himself very insensible to my severity, his delicacy did not seem wounded by it. I should have liked for his sake to have seen him evince a LITTLE anger or pull the door violently after him when he went away: this would at least have shewn there was some spring and elasticity about him, but I found nothing of the kind!"—p. III. p. 367, 368.

And this is BUONAPARTE'S own account of the conduct of SIR HUDSON LOWE—the passionate, violent, indecorous, dreadfully tempered tyrant—that all the outrageous violence which his prisoner purposely used towards him, and of which he confesses himself ashamed, did not even ruffle him sufficiently to make him forget his respect for the fallen Emperor, or to induce him to leave his presence in an ungracious manner!

In the plenitude of his power, and when, we are taught to believe, he was adored, he was somewhat differently treated—at least so his friend LAS CASES obligingly informs us—that in a discussion in the Council of State GENERAL GASSENDI broached some opinion disagreeable to the Emperor, who said, "'Go, General, you must have fallen asleep in your office, and dreamed all this.' GASSENDI, who was rather irascible, replied, 'As for falling asleep in our offices, SIRE! I defy any one to do that with you, you plague us too much for that!'"

En passant, LAS CASES gives a capital account of this Council of State, of which he was one—and of all its gold chairs, and tables, and stools, and its lemonades, and its eau sucré, and its bonbons, and refreshments; and tells us, moreover, that he once tried to make a speech there, and could not.—p. IV. p. 237. But the following paragraphs are certainly not among the worst things in his work:—

"It was in that place that for nearly eighteen months I enjoyed the inestimable advantage, the unparalleled satisfaction of—attending twice a week, sittings so interesting by their special objects, and rendered still more so by the constant presence of the Emperor, who seemed to be the soul and life of their deliberations. It was there that I have seen him protract the discussions from eleven in the morning until nine at night.—(Charming!)—and display at the conclusion as much activity, copiousness and freshness of mind and understanding, as he did in the beginning, while we were ready to sink down with weariness and fatigue."—p. IV. p. 229.

We must confess that we do not exactly see what "inestimable advantage" or "unparalleled satisfaction" could arise from sitting in a place from eleven in the morning till nine at night, nor were we aware that "weariness and fatigue" were the usual symptoms of "unparalleled satisfaction," whatever their "inestimable advantage" may be. But our readers will hardly believe, with all the copiousness and freshness of mind and understanding which M. LAS CASES attributes to BUONAPARTE, that His Majesty, not only frequently took refreshment during the Council, but that he went out and dined, and subsequently had the "unparalleled satisfaction" of taking a comfortable doze, which, if all the orators in the Council were equally talented with M. LAS CASES (by his own account) must have been indeed an "inestimable advantage."

"Sometimes," says M. LAS CASES (p. IV. p. 231) "when the Emperor entered the Council, as soon as his dinner was ended, and after having undergone great fatigue during the morning, he would fold his arms upon the table, lay down his head and FALL ASLEEP!

But BUONAPARTE was never to be surprised by a nap, although LAS CASES was, for it appears that the "Arch Chancellor proceeded with the deliberations without interruption (great men never snore), and the Emperor on awakening immediately caught up the thread of the discussion, though the previous subject might have been ended and another introduced."

This, we should think, will appear to MR. MANNERS SUTTON a most enviable faculty. That Right Honourable Gentleman is the only man who can duly appreciate it—and we think he would consider the possession of it, a most "inestimable advantage." But it is nothing for BUONAPARTE to do when compared with the traits which M. LAS CASES has recorded of him—our readers will hardly believe it, but they cannot doubt M. LAS CASES, when he informs the world that BUONAPARTE has DIED more than once.

The first instance occurred at St. Cloud,—

"He wished to drive his calash six in hand: the horses were startled by aid-de-camp Caffarelli inadvertently crossing in front of them; before the Emperor had time to recover the reins the horses set off at full speed, and the calash, which rolled along with extreme velocity, struck against a railing, the Emperor was thrown out to the distance of eight or ten feet, and lay stretched with his face downwards—he was said dead for a few seconds, he felt the moment at which life became extinct, which he called the negative moment."—p. III. p. 324.

The truth is that he was stunned—but, forsooth, it was Napoleon, and it must be a miracle.

"He was in 1786 also drowned and felt life escape him and 'even 'heard his comrades call out that he was drowned, and saw them go 'for boats to drag for his body;' by a miracle, LAS CASES says, he was saved, 'and having dressed himself, got home while his friends (on the 'spot we presume, or else they were fools) were still in search of his 'body!!!'"—p. 325.

Few things can be better than these, because, by the way, M. LAS CASES has put them down, it is clear that BUONAPARTE thought they were interpositions of a divine providence, [in which, by the way, he did not himself affect to believe!—(of his religion hereafter)—and that this poor old ratted royalist chose to think them so too.

But, as a mere matter of natural curiosity, the following feat of the Emperor, gravely recorded by his admirer, will, perhaps, be found still more interesting:—

"The most remarkable instance of the Emperor's activity and exertion was his ride without stirrups, from Valladolid to Burgos (a distance of thirty-five Spanish leagues) in five hours and a half, that is to say, upwards of seven leagues an hour."—p. I. p. 367.

That BUONAPARTE rode, taking the English league, one and twenty miles an hour for five hours and a half, we certainly believe, because he was a great man, and because M. Las Cases says he did—but why he should have chosen to ride without stirrups he does not mention—perhaps His Majesty could not use such articles when he had gotten his seven league boots on!!

We will now proceed to mention what M. LAS CASES says of BUONAPARTE'S feelings about women in general, and his wives in particular; or rather, what BUONAPARTE himself says.

In the first place, the Emperor fixes upon the two MISSES BALCOMBE, the daughters of a St. Helena shopkeeper—natives of the wretched desert to which he felt he had been sent out of the world, as standards whereby to judge and criticise English women; and LAS CASES tells a story of one of these Yamstocks, full of ignorance, as if it were a reproach to our women.

THANK GOD, the women of ENGLAND are above the calumny of BUONAPARTE or his editors; and it is only when they forget their national virtues and their national character, and mingle in political cabals and intrigues, that they become unamiable and deserve censure. We have never spared those who have chosen to publish themselves as political partizans in a most disgraceful cause; but we never can submit to have the women of our country sneered at, because a tradesman's daughter at St. Helena, did not happen to know who GASTON DE FOIX was, while reading FLORIAN'S ESTELLE. The other part of the same history is too ridiculous for the credulity of any human being.

"Speaking of MADAME COTTIN'S MATHILDE, an Englishman, with a great round face, to all appearance a true vacuum plenum, who had been listening earnestly, in order to turn his little knowledge of French to the best account, modestly ventured to ask the Emperor! whether the Princess, the friend of MATHILDE, whose character he particularly admired, was still living? The Emperor, with a very solemn air, replied, 'No, Sir, she is dead and buried.'"

Had the story stopped here, we should have been inclined to think that a guest of MR. BALCOMBE'S might have been sufficiently uninformed in French literature to have asked the question; but the joke is carried too far—the falsehood is overdone.

"The Emperor (says LAS CASES) was almost tempted to believe himself hoaxed, when he found that the melancholy tidings drew tears from the great staring eyes of the Englishman."

M. LAS CASES should know that Englishmen are not apt to cry upon such trifling impulses. To the crime of not being well versed in a flimsy fly-away French novel, we dare say MASTER BALCOMBE'S round-faced friend might plead guilty; but if BONEY was NOT hoaxed, then "am I a soused gurnet." The low-lived English are particularly shrewd.

It may not be amiss to observe how ready BUONAPARTE was to associate with these people, and how rigidly he declined an intercourse with the Governor and his family—that, by the way—those who know the sequel will not be at all surprised.

However, as the English women may now perceive the opinion BUONAPARTE had of them, we will take his opinion of all women, which his excellent friend, M. LAS CASES, has been so good as to deliver to the world.

"Woman—said he—(the ladies were present)—is given to man, to bear children to him; but one woman cannot suffice to one man for that purpose."

Another great character, (we mean CAPTAIN MACHEATH,) expresses himself nearly in the same terms.

"The man who loves money, might as well be contented with one guinea, as I with one woman."

But we shall see that the feelings of the highwayman are the more natural of the two.

"A woman," says BUONAPARTE, "cannot fulfil the duties of a wife, during the period of her gestation, whilst she suckles her child, or while she is ill; and (Oh! mark this, ye English readers!) she ceases altogether to be a wife, when she is no longer able to bear children!!! To man, on the contrary, nature has opposed no such obstacles at any period of his existence. A man should therefore have several wives."

This, BUONAPARTE said, and poor M. LAS CASES has repeated!—Part IV. p. 109, 110.

(To be continued in our next.)

THEATRICALS.

COVENT GARDEN, last Saturday, put forth one of those Melo-drames, which, in these degenerate days, are called Tragedies—under the title of JULIAN.

It is from the pen of a Lady, of the name of MITFORD, known to her publisher and her particular friends as the Authoress of some poems; and the very mention of this fact, would have induced us to have overlooked the sundry absurdities with which the performance is sprinkled, had she not, with a rashness, wholly unaccountable, published it.

This publishing, "with malice prepense and aforethought," is a widely different measure from making a melo-drame; for, though, as we will presently shew, it is impossible to suffer such a published work to pass unnoticed, there are, in the representation, pantomimic effects produced by sudden starts, shakings of fingers, partings of curls, rubbings of eyes, sprawlings, staggerings, groanings, and grimacings, sufficiently powerful to have dazzled and blinded us to the nonsensical stuff which the "poor players" have to utter; and we should have no more cared about MISS MITFORD'S dialogue, if MR. MACREADY made us shudder, than we should about the stage direction of a pantomime, by virtue of which the immortal GRIMALDI knocks his nose against a door or the up Pantaloon.

The construction of the plot is extremely inartificial, and not very probable, as our readers may perhaps believe, when we inform them that the story runs thus:—

A personage, called the DUKE OF MELFI, is obstructed in his passage to the throne of Sicily by his nephew ALPHONSO, which nephew, in a mode by no means unusual in novels, determines to kill, and much after the fashion of the Tragedy, he is about to exterminate the young Monarch in a wood, but in a valley—when his own son, happening to have been riding at the rate of "a mile a minute" in the neighbourhood, interposes, like WALTER in MORTON'S admirable after-piece, stabs his father, and rescues the Prince.

This having happened, and Sicily being without a king, and all the nobility and the people (curious unanimity) be of one mind, and anxious that the young ALPHONSO should be their sovereign, JULIAN, who has saved his life, brings him to MESSINA, where the Prince assumes the character of a boy in his family, during a week's space, in which Jul has never woke; but when he does wake, at the beginning the play, he tells his wife the story, as we have told to readers.

Having been mad, as well as asleep, during these h eight days, at the thought of having killed his father, wife says, when he gets up, that she does not exactly k but she rather thinks, that his father is come to town. LIAN is a good deal surprised at this, and does not believe it; but his wife informs him that she thinks her CONSTANCE knows more about it than she does; and call CONSTANCE, and sure enough the old gentleman stead of being food for what JULIAN calls turns out to be as well as could be expected, after a good of stabbing, and actually in town on purpose to be crowned

"Birds obscene, and wolf, and ravening fox,"

Very shortly after his arrival JULIAN goes and calls him, and is extremely well received—they differ about shall be king, and MELFI, having procured an archbi proceeds to his coronation, but the crown is so little prelate (who is of an age to which all bishops live) cann it on his head—upon which the DUKE, who is undergoing sacred ceremony, calls the said archbishop an "old dotard," and would try and thrust it on himself, but JULIAN at the moment produces the real king, whose head—His Majesty but a lad—is of a proper and suitable size for the diadem for this reason, in addition to the other cogent one, his the lawful heir, it is settled that he shall wear it.

This enrages the old Duke, who endeavours to throw assassination on his son—their manœuvres, however, ar unsuccessful, and as the play wears on the principal cha are all banished, and afterwards murdered, together with or two subordinate personages, and this terrible mortality duces the young king to conclude the tragedy, with th natural and pathetic observation—

——"He's gone!"—

says LEANTE, meaning JULIAN, who (the then present company excepted) was the last survivor in the tragic tableau, upon which, his pretty Majesty, says,—

——"And I am left in the wide world and the curtain drops.
"Alone—my JULIAN!"

MACREADY, as is usual in these cases, made the play; and as we feel how much, how entirely the piece depended upon him, we will use the words of MISS MITFORD herself, which she addresses to him in her dedication, and say that we say him perform JULIAN.

"With high esteem for those endowments which have cast new lustre on his art—with warm admiration for those powers which have ravished and that taste which has fostered the tragic dramatists of his age with heartfelt gratitude for the zeal with which he befriended the production of a stranger, for the judicious alterations which he suggested and for the energy, the pathos, and the skill with which he more than embodied its principal character."

In an advertisement—besides all this—MISS MITFORD, after lauding the talents of MISS LACY, MR. ABBOTT, MISS FOOTE and MR. BENNETT, without one syllable of special acknowledgment either to MR. LEY or MR. MEARS—or to their excellent droll who enacted the Archbishop—thanks MR. MACREADY—oh, beyond all, that her play has been honoured by particular approbation of such a judge, and has given occasion to one of the most splendid exertions of such an actor as "MIHI BEATI MARTINE," &c. &c.

In the advertisement, however, MISS MITFORD, who evidently means to shew off her blue lights in the midst of the rejoicings, informs us that the caution contained in the first scene, given by a lady to her foot-boy, not to make a noise and wake his master, "will be recognized by the classical reader as borrowed from the fine opening of the ORESTES of EURIPIDES," and—that the "incident of uncovering one of the dead bodies which accumulate towards the end of the piece, is taken from the ELECTRA of SOPHOCLES.

In the first place, with respect to the language of the drama we have no hesitation in saying, that the frequent, irreverent and unnecessary mention of the name of the DIVINITY is not only repugnant to the feelings, but absolutely appalling. We are by no means over-scrupulous, and have not a grain of Hum-fumism in our composition; but when we hear the walls of the Theatre ringing with the most sacred word, and with the most solemn appeals to the Creator, we are at a loss, while the more to be surprized at—the temerity of the writer—the supineness of the licenser.

We defended the stage against the Saints of Sheffield, upon principle and upon the conviction that in these days one might go to any play and run no risque of hearing that which cannot fail to shock and disgust. We are sorry to find one of the tragic dramatists, who have been fostered and inspired by Mr. MACREADY, affording so strong a plea for the enemies of the Theatrical profession.

In her descriptions MISS MITFORD is surely unnecessarily coarse, she seems to have an idea similar to that, which we once heard entertained by a simpler person than herself, that perspiration is a very important characteristic of men and animals—for alludes to it repeatedly, by a shorter name.—D'ALBA when going to execution says,

"——" If I were not weary
" Of a world that sweats under a load of fools,
" Old creaking vanes that turn as the wind changes,
" Lords I'd defy ye now!"— —and speaking of her husband, or his horse, which we cannot divine, JULIAN'S wife says—

"——" He on foot
" Thrun on the o'er-travelled horse, slow, yet all stained
" With sweat!"—

Shakespeare uses, it is true—but—we beg pardon for mentioning his name.

It is not to be supposed, that an unmarried lady should know any thing of the conduct of what our authoress calls—

" Small prattling pretty ones:"

but she displays a want of knowledge about children, quite curious—

D'Alba says to Julian, Act III. S. 1:—

" Can't thou not utter No?—'tis short and easy,
" The first sound that a stuttering babe will lisp
" To its fond nurse."

Now—important as is the use of the monosyllable NO to ladies in later life, it certainly is the last acquired by a child; the difficulty of pronouncing it is extremely great; and at all events, if the ordinary run of children were able to " lisp it to their nurses," a stuttering babe, which Miss MITFORD has unfortunately fixed upon, would make very comical work of it indeed.

In another place she indicates an opinion that children are born ready dressed to their nurses hands, perhaps she means to confine it to royal infants as a special privilege—D'ALBA says, speaking of Julian—

"——" Aye, there he lies in the ermined cloak
" Of royalty, his haughty shroud—six ells
" Of rude uncostly linen serves to wrap
" Your common corse:—but this man was born swathed
" In regal purple."

This is certainly new to us as a matter of natural history.

In an earlier part of the play, one VALORE says, that he has heard a tale which—

" Puts lead into men's heels."

Peas into shoes the pilgrims put, as Peter Pindar says, by way of penance, but unless Miss MITFORD is prepared to shew that PARIS hit ACHILLES with a pistol bullett, we are not aware that such an operation has been performed, or why a gentleman with a tale should walk slower than any other person—it is generally supposed that the tale-bearer is a great gadder-about.

Miss MITFORD frequently uses quaintnesses which savour much of affectation, and the perpetual substitution of adjectives for substantives is commonly absurd—a man says to his wife " yes, my beautiful,"—and a father to his son—" up you unmanly," &c.

In personal descriptions the authoress fails most completely—she seems to think a white hand the perfection of all excellence: all of the characters talk of beautiful hands—and delicate hands, and snowy hands—with respect to the size of the hand, we must judge for ourselves, for in the third act our friend D'ALBA says—

" He doth not clasp that loveliest hand which nature
" Fashioned to gather roses, or to hold
" Bunches of bursting grapes."

In scenic description she is equally at fault: in the fifth act, there is a pretty bit of this sort of writing, where JULIAN recalls to his wife—an evening by the sea side; but it is copied so closely from MOORE'S last poem, " the Loves of the Angels," as to be evident to the dullest capacity.

In short, a more flimsy affair never was produced, and we lament to see that such a school of writing can be made endurable by acting. Most certainly MACREADY is strikingly great in such characters—and the effect is not a little heightened by the subdued colouring of the rest of the group. EGERTON should have played the DUKE—(judging by his figure, perhaps CALVI would have suited him better.) MR. BENNETT made but a botch of it. ABBOTT was, as he always is—in ALBA; and the sweet FOOT-BOY KING looked handsome enough for a queen. MISS LACY is not despicable. But we do not know why MISS MITFORD, in publishing the play, has withheld from us the name of the gentleman who enacted the Archbishop. It is a great injustice; and moreover we do not see why, in her dramatis personæ, the excellent prelate should take rank after an old huntsman.

There is a Prologue—and an Epilogue—suitable in every respect to the rest of the performance.

We have received some Theatrical intelligence, in a letter dated Arundel, touching the conduct of the manager of the playhouse there, which seems to require investigation, and we will thank our correspondent to authenticate the information with which he has favoured us, in order that we may bring the matter before the provincial public.

COURT OF CHANCERY.—TUESDAY.

Mr. Hart stated, that a petition had been filed by W. Skirrow, Esq. praying that Mr. Draper Coombe should be appointed provisional committee of the person of Lord Portsmouth, until the Master's report was received, upon the order of reference made by his Lordship, on the 10th of March, to inquire who were the fittest persons to be the permanent committees of his Lordship's person and estate. In February, 1822, the Lord Chancellor appointed Mr. Coombe referee; and he had resided since July last in his Lordship's family. Mr. Coombe, at present, found it necessary to exclude some persons from having access to the Earl, in order to prevent the discussion of topics calculated to disturb his Lordship's mind; but not having his (the Lord Chancellor's) sanction to take upon himself this authority, he felt a degree of responsibility attaching to his conduct, which made him unwilling to act any farther in this character without the protection of an order from his Lordship. The petitioner thought, as Mr. Coombe's conduct was both mild and firm, he was the fittest person to be appointed provisional committee. The petitioner further stated, that as auditor and chief steward of the Earl's estates, there was a considerable sum of money in his hands, which he prayed he might be allowed to apply to the maintenance and support of the Earl.—The Lord Chancellor observed, that as, during the eight months before the Jury, and since the moment when it became necessary that some care should be taken of him, Lord Portsmouth had been in the custody of Mr. Coombe, and as the Noble Earl was supposed to be peculiarly attached to that Gentleman, he thought it right to order that Lord P. be removed by Mr. Coombe to Hurstbourn, where he begged every indulgence and attention might be shewn him. With respect to money matters, he felt that the regulation of those expences should be postponed until a permanent Committee should be appointed; he would, however, intimate to Mr. Skirrow, that all money advanced by him for the comfortable support of Lord Portsmouth, until such committee should be named, would be reimbursed to him, whether the proceedings in the Master's Office were or were not attended with delay.

At Oxford last week, the Rev. A. Briscoe and the Rev. T. Bradley, Masters of Arts, of Queen's College, were elected Fellows of that Society on the old foundation.—The Rev. E. J. Parker was admitted Fellow of Pembroke College.—The following degrees were conferred:—MASTERS OF ARTS—Rev. T. W. Cockell, Wadham College; Rev. T. P. Michells, Merton College; C. H. Bosanquet, and the Rev. H. Stree, Baliol College.—BACHELOR OF ARTS—A. Rowlandson, Brasenose College.

Just published, in 12mo. price 9s. the second edition of

BODY and SOUL. Consisting of a Series of lively and pathetic Stories, calculated to excite the attention and interest of the Religious World. Contents:—The Town Rector—Philosophical Painter—Merchant's Family—Sick Penitent—Unitarian—Clerical Conference—Lunatic Asylum—Liturgy—Assizes—Athanasian Creed—Sea Captain—Domiciliary Visits—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. In the press, and shortly will be published,

BODY and SOUL. Volume the Second.

In the press, and immediately will be published, in 1 vol. 8vo.

RECOLLECTIONS of the PENINSULA, containing Sketches of the Manners and Character of the Spanish Nation. By the Author of "Sketches of India."—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, price 8s. 6d.

THE TRAGEDIES of SOPHOCLES; literally translated into English Prose, from the Greek Text of Brunck; with Notes. Vol. I. containing the first four Plays. Vol. II. will be ready in a few days.—Oxford: Printed for D. A. Talboys; and Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Where may be had, lately published,

1. ÆSCHYLUS, literally translated into English Prose, with Notes, 8vo. boards, 10s. 6d.
2. EURIPIDES. The Hecuba, Orestes, Phœnician Virgins, and Medea, literally translated into English Prose, from Porson, 8vo. boards, 8s.
3. ——. The Hippolytus and Alcestes, from the Text of Monk. 8vo. sewed. 4s. 6d.
4. ARISTOTLE'S RHETORIC, with Notes; and an Analysis by Thomas Holbeus of Malmesbury. 8vo. boards, 12s.
5. ARISTOPHANES. The Comedies of Plutus and the Frogs, literally translated into English Prose, with Notes from the Scholia and other Commentaries. 8vo. boards. 8s.

On Thursday next, the 27th inst. will be published, in 3 vols. 12mo.

OTHER TIMES; or, the Monks of Lendenhall. A Romance. By the author of the "Lollards." "Calthorpe," &c.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

1. CALTHORPE; or, Fallen Fortunes, 3 vols. 12mo. 11. 1s.
2. The LOLLARDS. A Tale of the 15th Century. 3 vols. 11. 1s.

On Tuesday, April 15th, 1823, will be published, in 8vo. 11. 5s.

THE ROYAL NAVAL BIOGRAPHY, Vol. I. Parts I. and II. containing Memoirs of all the Flag Officers living at the commencement of the present year. By JOHN MARSHALL, Esq. Lieut. R.N.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, Paternoster-row.

Vols. II. and III. containing Memoirs of the Captains and Commanders, will appear shortly.

NEW TRAGEDY.—Just published, in 8vo. price 4s. stitched, as performing at Covent Garden Theatre, Second Edition of JULIAN, a Tragedy, in Five Acts. By MARY RUSSELL MITFORD.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

NEW NOVELS.—Just published, in Four Vols. price 24s. bds.

THE HOUSE GRAVENSPUR. A Romance. By the Author of "Blighted Ambition,"—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane. Of whom may be had, by the same author.

1. SUCH IS THE WORLD: a Novel, in three volumes 12mo. price 21s. bds.
2. The VILLAGE COQUETTE; a Novel, in three vols. 12mo. price 18s. bds.
3. BLIGHTED AMBITION; or, the Rise and Fall of Somerset. In three vols. price 21s. bds.

Just published, price 4s. 6d. bound, the Third Edition of

THE SCHOOL ORATOR; or, Exercises in Elocution, theoretically arranged; from which, aided by short Practical Rules to be committed to memory, and repeated after the manner of reciting the Rules in the Latin Syntax, Students may learn to articulate every word with propriety; be taught to modulate the voice and speak with accuracy or inflection, from the easiest to the most difficult specimens of English Oratorical Composition. By JAMES WRIGHT, Author of the Philosophy of Elocution, Reading of the Liturgy, &c.

"We are so much pleased with the arrangement of this work, which is truly scientific in its principles, that we desire to offer the Author our best praise.—We cannot sufficiently express the satisfaction with which we have perused this work."—Critical Review.

Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, 13, Ave-Maria-lane.

Just published, in Two Volumes 12mo. price 15s. bds.

A HISTORY of ANCIENT INSTITUTIONS, CUSTOMS, and INVENTIONS; selected and abridged from the Beytrage zur Geschichte der Erndungen of Professor BECKMANN, of the University of Gottingen. With various important additions.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

"These two little volumes present such a mass of the useful and entertaining, that we should be puzzled to name their parallel. Beckmann's great work is a rich mine of intelligence on almost every possible subject of research, curiosity, or amusement; and the Editor of this English abridgment has not confined himself to a mere transcription of original, but has superadded much interesting information of his own."—Literary Gazette. March 8, 1823.

Just published, with a striking Likeness of General Riego, 8vo. price 7s. 6d. bds.

ANECDOTES of the SPANISH and PORTUGUESE REVOLUTIONS. By COUNT PECCHIO, an Italian Exile. With an Introduction and Notes. By EDWARD BLAQUIERE, Esq. Author of "Letters from the Mediterranean," an "Historical Review of the Spanish Revolution," &c.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

☞ Proof Impressions of the Portrait may be had separate, price 2s. 6d.

"This work appears to be the offspring of an elegant, ardent, and sprightly mind; they are distinguished by perfect impartiality, or bias not, rather than by depth of view or seriousness of reflection. The well-wishers to the cause of constitutional Spain, will be glad to find Count Pecchio as authority for very considerable resources against foreign interference, contained in the national character of that country."—Literary Register, March 15, 1823.

CATON ON NERVOUS DEBILITY, INDIGESTION, ERUPTIVE DISEASES OF THE FACE AND SKIN, &c.

Just published, price 3s. 6d.

POPULAR REMARKS, Medical and Literary, on NERVOUS DEBILITY, HYPOCHONDRIASIS, and HYSTERICAL DISEASES, containing an Inquiry into the Nature, Prevention, and Treatment of those Diseases called Nervous, Bilious, Stomachic, and Liver Complaints; with Observations on Low Spirits, and the Influence of Imagination on these acute and distressing Diseases, &c. By T. M. CATON, Surgeon, 6, Norfolk-street, Strand, late of the United Hospitals of St. Thomas and Guy.—Printed for Messrs. Sherwood and Co. 20, Paternoster-row. Neely, 22, Change-alley, Cornhill; and Hatchard, 187, Piccadilly; and Bower, 318 Oxford-street; where may be had, CATON on INDIGESTION, SCROFULA, & CUTANEOUS DISEASES; with Observations on Eruptive and Scorbutic Pimples of the Face and Skin price 3s.

On FEMALE DISEASES, 3s. 6d.

Just published, in 8vo. with a Map of Barcelona, price 10s. 6d. bds.

REMARKS on the YELLOW FEVER of the South and East Coasts of Spain; comprehending Observations made on the Spot, by actual Survey of Localities, and Rigorous Examination at Post at original Sources of Information; illustrated with Cases and Dissections. By THOMAS O'HALLORAN, M.D. Member of the Medical Academies of Madrid and Barcelona.—Printed for Callow and Wilson, Princes-street, Soho.

URLING'S LACE.—COURT OF KING'S BENCH.—The validity of Uriing and Co.'s Patent for the EXCLUSIVE MANUFACTURE of this celebrated article being fully established by the late successful verdict for the infringement of the name, the King's Letters Patent, under the Great Seal of Great Britain, may be seen at Uriing and Co.'s ONLY WAREHOUSE IN LONDON, 147, Strand, near Somerset House. It is presumed that five years' increasing favour with the British and Foreign Nobility, will elevate this extensive concern beyond the simplified which any accompany unfixed pretensions. Uriing and Co. have obtained a Patent, Royal Foreign Warrant, on its introduction to the Court, which is held in London as Foreign Lace, by advertisers, at double the price for which the same article may be procured in the Strand. A matchless variety of novelties prepared for the season. The real Point and Brussels work will bear comparison with foreign lace, being rendered superior as to clearness by the patent principle. Tambured goods, with veils and sets of every kind at the reduced wholesale prices. Manufactory, Sanford, Notts.

N.B. Court dresses, lappets, veils, &c. in great perfection.

A NEW SYSTEM of OFFERING LINEN DRAPERY.—Every piece of goods marked the lowest price, in plain figures, from which no abatement is made. BISHOPWELL and Co. (late Jones,) No. 39, Bishopsgate-street Within, near St. Helens, beg leave to offer to the public an extensive stock of Irish linens of the most approved fabrics; Mambro, Scotch, and Irish table linen of allsizes; Russia, Scotch, Irish, and patent shirtings, huckabacks, blankets, counterpanes, quilts, furnitures, flannels, and muslins of every description; printed cambrics and muslins, shawls in great variety, French cambrics, cambric handkerchiefs, nankeens, and every other article of family linen drapery, silk mercery, hosiery, &c. In addition to the above they beg particularly to recommend their unbleached Guilx Holland for shirts, a most superior linen for strength and durability. R. H. and Co. feel confident that on an inspection of their goods, the very low prices, and the liberal principle on which their business is carried on, they are certain of insuring the purchaser's approbation, as they are determined to sell none but the best goods, for the smallest profit possible, for Ready Money only. R. H. and Co. have also to call the attention of their friends to a large quantity of real East India Muslins, which are become very scarce, and rarely to be obtained in the same variety at any other house. An assortment of British lace, veils, collars, caps, cuffs, &c.

SMOKY FIRE-PLACES REMEDIED.—W. and M. FEETHAM, No. 9, Ludgate-hill, and 296, Oxford-street, beg leave to inform the Public, that they undertake to remedy the above evil, and by long practice and attention to this important object, with experienced and careful workmen, they can effectually Remedy every description of Smoky Rooms, with little or no inconvenience to the family during the process. W. and M. F. beg the Public's attention to their Warm Air Stoves, with an increased draft, for halls, large rooms, &c. Likewise Warm Baths, on a convenient and approved plan, and their Atemperating Shower Bath, by the King's Patent.

IN SIX EASY LESSONS OF ONE HOUR EACH.—MR. BRADBURY, Private Tutor, Westminster School, solicits the attention of Ladies and Gentlemen to his unrivalled and infallible system of writing 1000 PENMANSHIP, whereby he pledges himself to teach persons of all ages to write with ease, elegance, and expedition, (whatever may be the deformity of their present writing) in six progressive Lessons. This system, as it equally promotes the attainment of a bold and masculine hand, calculated for business, and of a light and graceful manuscript adapted to Ladies; also secures to the Pupil the certainty of writing straight, without lines, with wonderful dispatch and accuracy, and, moreover, will study the hand of the most illegible writer. Upwards of 3000 specimens, and numerous recommendatory letters may be seen, and references given to persons of the first distinction, some of whom are upwards of 50 years of age. Private tuition at home. Ladies and Gentlemen attended at their own residences. A new and practical system of Short Hand, taught in a few lessons, so as to enable the writer to decipher what he has written with inconceivable ease.—Apply, (or direct, post paid) at the Academy, 464, Strand, near Charing Cross.

WRITING PAPER, of the best quality, made by the justly celebrated J. WHATMAN, of Turkey Mill, to be sold at the following low prices:—Excellent copy 7d. the quire, or 1s. the ream: good laid post 8d. superfine thick 9d. and 1s. the quire, or 12s. 13s. 6d. and 17s. 6d. the ream; superfine Bath 9d. ditto. hot pressed. 10d. and 1s. the quire. or 13s. 6d. 15s. and 17s. 6d. the ream; very best thick Bath gilt, 1s. 1d the quire, or 20s. the ream; good foolscap 1s. the quire, superfine 1s. 2d. and 1s. 4d. a quire, or 21s. and 25s. the ream: superfine large bank post 1s. the quire, or 18s. the ream; best thick lined brief 1s. 4d. the quire, or 25s. the ream; very good copy books 3s. 6d. per dozen; best sealing wax 4s. 6d. the lb. Also for sale, price one shilling, Steel Nib Pen; it has the elasticity of the quill, with the durability of the steel pen, price 1s. 4d. each. Strong brown 8d. 10d and 1s. 6d. small hand 4d. the quire; at H. and W. SMITH'S, 192, Strand, Second House from the Crown and Anchor Tavern.—Account Books made to order, of any size or pattern; Drawing Paper, and Bristol Boards, equally low in price.

DREADFUL FIRE at CANTON in CHINA.—An immense quantity of TEA and other Property having been destroyed by that awful calamity, there is no doubt of TEAS being dearer, as the East India Company have not a sufficient assortment for Sale.—FREDERICK and ROBERT SPARROW and Co. in announcing to their Friends the removal of their original Warehouse from No. 6. to those very extensive Premises No. 8, Ludgate Hill, feel much pleasure in stating, that at the East India Company's Sale, which ended on the 13th inst. there was a much greater proportion than usual of strong full-flavoured TEAS, which, selling at most favourable prices, induced them to purchase very largely, thereby enabling them to offer, not only on advantageous terms, from either of their Warehouses in London, or through the medium of their Country Agents, good Genuine Teas, cheaper and of better qualities at their respective prices than any other house in the kingdom. At the same time they request their Friends to be particular in the Direction, viz. No. 8, Ludgate Hill, (nearly opposite the Belle Sauvage), No. 138, Oxford street, (between Hollesstreet and Old Cavendish-street), and No. 6, Charing-cross, (Second House from Northumberland House), and to see that all Teas from these Warehouses are wrapped in Printed Papers, with Name, Address, and Price per lb. thereon, and those for the Country in Lead, free of expence.—Country Agents, Dealers, Families, Proprietors of Inns, Taverns, Coffee houses, and large Establishments supplied upon most favourable terms, according to Advertising to F. and R. Sparrow and Co. at their principal Warehouse, No. 8, Ludgate Hill, inclosing Cash Notes, Bankers' Bills, or Orders upon London for Payment, when the Change, if any, shall be inclosed in the Goods.—N.B. Two or Three clever Shopmen and Porters wanted.

LEVANTINE SILKS, FRENCH WIDTH, 28. 30. per yard, and a 15,000l. Stock of the newest and most fashionable SILKS and SHAWLS, both Foreign and British, that can be produced, in every novel and brilliant colour; also a most splendid selection of Parisian Silk Cloaks, trimmed in the most admired and prevailing fashion; fine habit Cloths, and foreign Cashmere ditto for Ladies' dresses, &c. at one half their real value, viz. Crape Dresses, 14s. 6d. each; Velvets, 5s. 6d. per yard; very rich ditto, 10s. 6d.; ditto the richest made, 12s. 6d.; Lapland Cords, 4s. 8d. per yard; Gros de Naples, 3s. 6d. and 3s. 9d. per yard; very rich ditto, 4s. 6d.; rich Gros de Tours, 4s. 9d. per yard; Norwich Crapes, the widest made, 1s. 3d. per yard; rich Satins for dresses, 2s. per yard; Poplins and Lustres, 1s. 6d.; rich ditto, 2s.; Irish ditto, 2s. 6d.; figured Poplins, 1s. 6d.; ditto, 2s. 2d.; three yards wide figured Bombasins, the Black ditto, 1s. 2d.; fine ditto, 1s. 6d.; wide Sarsenets, 3s.; rich twilled ditto, 4s. 6d.; elegant Flounce Robes, 15s.; India worked Muslins, 2s. per yard; fine Jacconot ditto, 19s. the piece of 20 yards; white and coloured Trimmings, &c. unusually cheap; Shawls and Scarfs of the most chaste and elegant patterns, and scarcely to be known from the original Cashmere, from one guinea to five guineas each; those at 2l. 50s. and three guineas, are most superb pattern; Norwich Shawls, 12s. and 16s. each; Bombazine Shawls, the largest size, 5s. each; 400 Cloth Shawls, bound, &c. 7s. 6d. each; Seal and Erminet Shawls, 21s. each; every fashionable Article for the season, with a superior Stock of Family Linen Drapery.—The fullest value for India Shawls, Turbans, and Birds of Paradise, at RILEY'S India Warehouse, No. 118, Oxford-street.

GLOUCESTER HOUSE, 37, Piccadilly, FASHIONABLE SILK, SHAWL, MUSLIN, and LACE WAREHOUSE, W. EDGINTON, from Swan and Edgar's, most respectfully begs to acknowledge the many favours and the very liberal patronage he has experienced from the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public since his commencement in the above establishment, and at the same time begs to recommend to their notice an extensive and choice collection of the most fashionable Silks, consisting of rich figured, plain, and shaded stripe Gros de Naples, Levantines, figured, stripe, and plain Sarsnets, Tabinets, Poplins, and Lustres, with a great variety of that new article for dress Crystal Gauze, so universally admired for the beauty and delicacy of its fabric; a large assortment of Lace Dresses, Lace Veils and Scarfs, long and square, Norwich and Scotch Shawls; Muslins of every kind, and Muslin Robes at very reduced prices, together with every article connected with the haberdashery, hosiery, glove, and lace trade.—The whole of the stock which he now offers to the public is, without an exception, of the very best manufacture, and will be offered at such prices as will convince him that it is his interest to make it the cheapest as well as the best respectfully solicits. The few following prices must at once convince every impartial observer of the decided cheapness, bearing in mind that they are in reality such goods as are advertised, and not of that inferior description by which such impositions are practised upon the public. Good stripe sarsnets from 2s. 6d. to 3s. 3d. per yard; white and coloured satin, from 3s. to 6s.; lace dresses from 2 to 5 guineas each; lace veils and scarfs from 7s. 6d. to 2 guineas; all-wide cambric muslins 9s. the piece 12 yards; muslin flounced robes from 4s. 3d. to 50s. each, and every other article proportionably cheap.

URLING'S LACE.—DIXON, WILLSON, and CO. at No. 237, Regent street, adverting to a representation contained in Advertisements of Urling and Co. of 147, Strand, that Urling's Lace is only to be had genuine at their House, and at no other Shop in London, feel themselves called upon in justice to the public and themselves, to state that they warrant to sell, and will continue to sell, upon the Terms of their Advertisements, the genuine Gassed Lace (introduced into the world as Urling's Lace) the same article as sold at 147, Strand, and in defiance of the puffs and boastings of that House, who thereby endeavour to appropriate to themselves the exclusive benefit of an article to which they have no right; and Dixon, Willson, and Co. are prepared to meet, and hereby challenge every investigation and competition. The truth is, there is no Patent for the exclusive sale of the Gassed or Urling's Lace, and Dixon, Willson, and Co. obtain it from the same source from which Urling and Co. themselves have always been, and are now, supplied with the article.

BURGESS'S NEW SAUCE for general purposes, having given such great approbation, and the demand for it continuing to increase, JOHN BURGESS and SON beg most respectfully to offer this their best acknowledgments to the Public for their liberal patronage of the same: its utility and great convenience in all climates, has recommended it to the most distinguished foreign connexions, who have all spoken highly in its recommendation.—It is prepared by them ONLY; and to prevent disappointments to families, all possible care has been resorted to, by each bottle being sealed with their Arms, Name, and address, as well as each label having their signature, without which it cannot be genuine.

JOHN BURGESS & SON'S long established and much-esteemed ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, continues to be prepared by them after the same manner that has given the greatest satisfaction for many years.—Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy-steps, London.—The original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

THE ROYAL FAMILY, NOBILITY, GENTRY, and LADIES and GENTLEMEN may rely on it, they will not have a hair fall off or turn grey by using Prince's celebrated Russia Oil, after it has been improved with an extra valuable ingredient; through which it has made the Russia Oil the greatest nourisher and preserver to the hair in the Universe, will make it grow thick and long, and prevent its falling off or ever turning grey, and is such a nourisher to the roots of the hair, that if it even has begun to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour, and if used often it will never turn grey again, and is sure to clear the system from Scurf and Scurvy, and when used with the Genuine Patent Shaving Cream, will keep the Head and Face free from Scurf. Gentlemen who have lost their hair, and have the least spot of roots of hair remaining, by using regularly, for a few months, Prince's improved Russia Oil, with the extra valuable ingredient, will be sure to restore it, and produce a fine head of hair, which hundreds have experienced. Even Medical Gentlemen have published, in the Gazettes of Health, that Prince's Russia Oil is superior to any other for the hair; and will do, in cases of baldness and weak hair, what else possibly be done.

It is no wonder that Ladies and Gentlemen have complained of late of the Russia Oil not being of service to the hair, as they have found out that unprincipled persons have sold them counterfeits.

Ladies and Gentlemen will be particular, as Impostors in Great Britain, France, and other different parts of the Continent, have made the covers of the Counterfeit Russia Oil as much like the genuine, and some, more to deceive, falsely have printed on their counterfeit covers "the original," or "genuine Russia Oil," and some even are so daring, although they know it is punishable, to put the Original Proprietor's Name. Therefore purchasers should be cautious, and have it of the Proprietor, or of respectable Venders.

Ask for Prince's improved Russia Oil, with the extra ingredient, and observe "Prince" on the wrapper and label, and observe, A. Prince, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street, London." is on the cover of each bottle; without, it is not genuine, and cannot answer the purpose. The ounce bottle five shillings, or a large bottle, containing five ounces, one pound, which is a saving.

Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. Prince, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street near the Pantheon, at No. 26, London-road, near the Floor-cloth Manufactory, Surrey, and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders.

Ladies and Gentlemen residing in the country, by sending a remittance to the Proprietor, and it will be forwarded immediately by coach.

LATEST NEWS.

Letters from Madrid mention that the state of the King's health interposed a serious obstacle to his removal. It was even alleged that an immediate removal would be attended with fatal consequences. The gout, which had hitherto been confined to his foot, was flying about from one part of his body to another. The Queen's health is also represented as being much worse.

Bayonne and German Papers, the former to the 14th inst. and the latter to the 16th, arrived yesterday.

Letters from Saragossa of the 5th say, that General Ballesteros was expected there every moment with 100 horsemen; and that orders had been received by the contractor for the supply of the army, to have provisions ready for two thousand horse and ten thousand foot. General O'Donnel had set out for St. Jean-Pied-de-Port, to organize the division of the vanguard of the French army which is to enter Spain by that road. O'Donnel is to command the troops of Juannito and Santos Ladron, who lately sent their refusal and formal protest against this nomination. General Quesada also goes backwards and forwards between this and St. Jean de Luz, proposing to organize his division; at present he has only one hundred and twenty officers, and an equal number of soldiers; the troops of Goroslidi and that of Zabala, having hitherto refused to assemble on the banks of the Bidassoa.

An article from Constantinople, dated Feb. 10, says—That Lord Strangford is on the point of issuing a declaration in the Greek language, that the Greeks are "not to expect assistance from the Christian Powers."

Both Houses of Parliament met yesterday for the purpose of giving the Royal Assent, by Commission, to the Mutiny Bill, there being no other business whatever before them. The time appointed for the Commission was a quarter before four, and previous to that time the Lord Chancellor, the Duke of Montrose, and Lord Shaftesbury were robed, and waiting in readiness to sit as Commissioners. The Speaker and several Members of the other House were also expected to be summoned by the Black Rod. Four o'clock arrived, and there being no appearance of a summons, the Right Hon. Gentleman was under the necessity of taking the Chair and proceeding to count the House, when it appearing that there were no more than 11 Members present, the House adjourned. This circumstance was immediately announced to their Lordships, who also immediately adjourned. It then appeared that owing to some circumstances, not yet accounted for, the Commission had not arrived in town from Brighton.

Mr. Secretary Canning, though considerably recovered, is still obliged to carry his right arm in a sling.

On Saturday, his Royal Highness the Duke of Gloucester honoured the Panorama of the Coronation at Spring Gardens with a visit.

The Duke of York is arrived in town from Brighton, where his Royal Highness had been on a visit to the King.

On Friday the adjourned General Court of Proprietors was held at the East India House, when the Chair having been taken, the consideration of the subject of East India Sugars was resumed. After some discussion a ballot was fixed for the 8th of April.

Yesterday morning, about seven o'clock, a fire broke out in a carpenter's shop in Whetstone Park, which communicated with the houses in Gate-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields. Several houses, with their contents, have been entirely consumed.

At the Maidstone Assizes, on Friday, John Coleman was indicted for the wilful murder of Mr. James Smith, at Lewisham, on the 22d of Dec. last, by shooting him with a pistol. The House of Mr. Smith had been attacked on the night of his death by several fellows, and Mr. Smith, being alarmed, rose from his bed, and was shot dead by them at his bed-chamber window. On the following morning, a carpenter's stock and centre-bit were found under the window, which were traced to have been in the prisoner's possession, who was committed for trial. After he was in prison he confessed that he was one of a party of five or six men who made the attack, two of whom were Mr. Smith's nephews, one of whom actually discharged the pistol. A reward of 300l. was offered for the discovery of the murderers, and promising pardon to any who made the discovery, except the actual murderer. On this it was contended that the prisoner was protected by the King's Proclamation, but the Judge said that must be matter for future deliberation, and the Jury found the prisoner Guilty.—The sentence was respited.

At the Exeter Assizes, John Bolt, was indicted for shooting at Jane Jusline, with intent to murder her. The unfortunate girl, aged about 20, and the prisoner were fellow servants in the family of Mr. Arundel, of Sefton Park; the former was groom, and the latter nursery maid, she had rejected his addresses repeatedly; and on the 22d Dec. he inveigled her into his bed-room, asked her if she would have him, on her saying no, and attempting to get away, said he would shoot her; and as she was running away, he took a pistol from the foot of the bed and shot her. The right side of her face was dreadfully mangled, her right eye nearly shot out, three fingers of her right hand nearly shot off, and were afterwards amputated. Several shots were extracted from the neck, fingers, and upper jaw. He was found Guilty.

At Bow-street, yesterday, Elias Lousarda, a Turkish Jew, appeared with his attorney and interpreter to a peace warrant granted at the suit of Mr. Edward Charles Southbrook, of Covent Garden Chambers, merchant, for threatening to do the said Southbrook some bodily harm. Lousarda arrived in this country about two months ago, and sold to Mr. Southbrook an assortment of French perfumery, value 200l. which was paid for by bills at short dates. A few days before the first bill for 40l. became due Mr. Southbrook sent word to Lousarda that unless he received 5l. 10s. in cash the bill would be returned unpaid. Lousarda paid the sum demanded, and got a receipt for the amount—but the bill was dishonoured. Mr. Lousarda went then to Mr. Southbrook's counting-house, and used some threatening language.—Lousarda was ordered to find bail, himself in 100l. and two sureties in 50l. each, which he did.—Southbrook was ordered to account for having, in addition to the goods above-mentioned, obtained the 5l. 10s. by a fraud upon Lousarda, and he not being able to explain the circumstances of the transaction, was remanded.

William Serson was charged with robbing his master, —— Gardner, Esq. of Drayton Green, near Ealing. Serson had advertised for a situation as a footman, and Mr. G. engaged him. The prisoner had charge of the whole of the silver plate, and two days (Feb. 28) after he entered into his new situation, while Mr. Gardner was in town, he decamped with the plate and other valuable property. On his person was found 3l. 18s. 6d. in gold and silver, and a mask concealed in his hat. In his lodgings was found a pair of loaded pistols, with powder-flask full, and balls, and some property belonging to the prosecutor, which he and his servants identified.—The prisoner was remanded for a week.

CARROLL has the honour of announcing to the Public the Scheme of the New Lottery, which will commence Drawing on the 9th of next Month. A Grand Prize of 20,000l; Two of 2000l.; Four of 1000l.; Six of 500l. &c.; making, in the whole, a Grand Total of Fifty-three Capital Prizes, must be Drawn on the First Day in the first half hour. The Scheme contains Three Prizes of 20,000l. and every Ticket Drawn a Prize above 10l. on the First Day, will have a New Ticket for the Second Day; Shares in proportion. Carroll sold in the last Contract Two Prizes of 20,000l.; One of 10,000l.; and Fourteen other Capitals of 1000l. 500l. &c. at his fortunate Offices, No. 19, Cornhill, and 26, Oxford-street.

We understand the forthcoming "Letters on England," from the pen of a foreign nobleman, include, among a great variety of other subjects, an elaborate critical estimate of all our distinguished living Poets; and likewise a distinct notice of most of our Painters, Sculptors, Actors, &c.

NEW WEEKLY MEDICO CHIRURGICAL and PHILOSOPHICAL MAGAZINE, published yesterday (Saturday, 22d) 32 columns 8vo. price 4d.—Contents: Sir A. Cooper on Injuries of the Spine, &c.—Interesting Memoir of the late Dr. Gordon, Edinburgh—Magendie on Vomiting—Granger's Oration on Injuries of the Brain, &c. concluded—Hospital Reports—Operations at St. George's, the London, and St. Thomas's Hospitals—Case of Cataleptsy in the Edinburgh Infirmary—On Uterine Hæmorrhage, by Dr. Good—Trials of Tar Vapour— various cases of supposed Pregnancy, &c. with a variety of other miscellaneous and interesting Medical Intelligence.—Published at Cox's Medical Library, St. Thomas's street, Southwark, every Saturday forenoon; by John Cox, Berner's street, Oxford-street; of whom may be had the First Part, containing six numbers, price 2s.; and of all booksellers.

A candid examination of professional pretensions is only to be feared by those, who are conscious of incapacity. Messrs. Goss and Co. Members of the Royal College of Surgeons, confine their studies to the treatment of such disorders as arise from nervous debility. Their works, "The Ægis of Life," and "Hygeiana," (the latter addressed to females) in full explanation of these subjects, may be had at No. 20, Fetter-lane-row, London, Porter, 72, Grafton-street, Dublin, or at new booksellers. Medicine can be forwarded to any part, however distant, on receiving a Bank note.—11, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

EUROPEAN LIFE INSURANCE and ANNUITY COMPANY, No. 10, Chatham-place, Blackfriars.—Persons effecting Insurances with this Company, for the whole period of life, are immediately entitled to participate in whatever division of profit shall take place, which, with the reduced rate of Premium demanded, will enable all descriptions of persons to make a provision calculated by which the Premiums may be paid Quarterly, Half-Yearly, or Annually, at the option of the insured. No charge is made for Entrance or for Policy, except the stamp. The insured are permitted to go in steam, or other decked vessels, to and from any part of the united kingdom, and in time of peace to and from any part of the Continent, situated between the Elbe and Brest, without being required to pay additional Premium, or to procure a licence from the Directors. This Company continues to advance Money on Annuity, secured on Freehold, Copyhold, or long Leasehold Property, or Money in the Funds. JOHN CLARK, Managing Director.

No. 1, Cornhill.

TO THE PUBLIC.—PIDDING and Co. pledge their reputation that whoever makes a purchase at their Office, will now decidedly have a better chance of gaining Money by the Lottery than ever existed before; this is an absolute fact, for no less than 53 Capitals will be determined by the first 53 Prizes on the 9th of April, viz. with the first 5,000 Numbers of the Spring Lottery.

JOHN BULL.

" FOR GOD, THE KING, AND THE PEOPLE!'

No. 120. SUNDAY, MARCH 30, 1823. Price 7d.

KING'S THEATRE. Under the immediate Patronage of His Majesty.—The Nobility, Gentry, Subscribers to the Royal Academy of Music, and the Public in general, are respectfully informed, that A GRAND CONCERT of Antient and Modern Music will take place in the above Theatre, on THURSDAY, APRIL 24, 1823, for the Benefit of this Institution. The Sub-Committee of the Royal Academy of Music is happy to announce, that the following eminent Professors and Honorary Members of this Institution have, on this occasion, kindly consented to give their valuable assistance:—Mrs. Salmon, Madame Vestris, Miss Goodall, Miss Paton, Miss Stephens, Miss Travis, Miss M. Tree, Madame Camporese, Madame Ronzi De Begnis, Signora Caradori, Mr. Braham, Mr. Vaughan, Mr. W. Knyvett, Mr. Terrail, Mr. Hawes, Mr Durrnset, Mr. Penc, Mr. Elliott, Mr. Evans, Mr. Smith, Mr. Sale, Mr. Sale, Jun. Mr. Kellner, Signior Curioni, Signor Begrez, Signor Placci, Signor De Begnis, and Signor Porto. Harp, Mr. Bochsa; Flute, Mr. Nicholson; Horn, Mr. Puzzi; Double Bass Mr. Dragonetti; Leaders, Mr. Cramer, Mr. Spagnoletti, and Mr. Mori; Dr. Crotch, Principal of the Royal Academy, will conduct the Performance, and preside at the Organ. The Band will be on the most extensive scale. The Choruses, under the superintendence of Mr. Watson, will be selected from the Antient Concerts, the King's Theatre, the Oratorios, and assisted by the Young Gentlemen of His Majesty's Chapel Royal, St. Paul's Cathedral, and Westminster Abbey, the whole consisting of upwards of Two Hundred Performers.—Applications for Boxes and Tickets to be made at the Royal Academy, Tenterden-street, Hanover-square. Pit 10s. 6d. Gallery 5s.—The Doors will be opened at Seven o'Clock, and the Performances will commence at Eight precisely.

KING'S CONCERT ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE.—Messrs. GRESATOREX respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends generally, that his ANNUAL CONCERT is fixed for FRIDAY the 25th of APRIL next.—Tickets (Half a Guinea each) to be had of Mr. Greatorex, No. 70, Upper Norton-street, Portland Place; at the Music Shops of Messrs. Birchall and Co. No. 133, New Bond street; Messrs. Clementi and Co. Cheapside; and at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Regent street.

KING'S CONCERT ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE.—Messrs. W. KNYVETT and VAUGHAN respectfully acquaint the Nobility, Gentry, and their Friends generally, that their respective CONCERTS will take place on the 2d of MAY and the 9th of MAY next, at the above Rooms, on the grand scale of former years.—Particulars will be duly announced.

MR. SPAGNOLETTI has the honour to announce to the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that his ANNUAL CONCERT will take place at the ARGYLL ROOMS, on THURSDAY the 15th of MAY next; and that it will be on the same grand scale as the Philharmonic Concerts. On which occasion he is promised the assistance of the most eminent Vocal and Instrumental Performers.—Further particulars will be speedily announced.

NEW HARP MUSIC, by N. C. BOCHSA,—Published by the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street, 'Cease your fanning, with variations, price 4s.; the Fall of Paris, a celebrated Russian air, arranged as a Rondo, price 3s.; My lodging is on the cold ground, a favorite Irish air, with introduction and variations, price 3s. 6d.; Se a casa madama, a favourite Duet in Mozart's Opera of Le Nozze di Figaro, arranged as a rondo, (Flute ad. lib.) price 4s.; Di Placer mi balzil cor, Rossini's favorite Cavatina, arranged with an introduction and variations, price 4s.

NEW QUADRILLES.—Just published, by CLEMENTI and CO. 26, Cheapside, Weippert's 4th Set, selected from the Opera of "Le Nozze di Figaro," and dedicated to H. R. H. Princess Feodore, of Leinengen, price 4s.; "Les Gendarmes," by Levien, price 3s.; where may be had, lately published, Weippert's favorite Sets, Nos. 1, 2, 3, each 4s.

C. and Co.'s complete Catalogue of Vocal and Instrumental Music, for 1823, is now ready for delivery, price 2s. 6d.

MUSIC.—No. 162, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street. J. GOW and SON respectfully inform the Nobility and Gentry they have just published the ninth number of their NEW SET.—La Donna del Lago, a favourite set of quadrilles from the above celebrated opera, composed by Rossini, 4s.—Overture and Introduction to ditto, 2s. 6d.—" Oh, mattuni albori," sung by Madame de Begnis, 1s. 6d. and the favourite song "Aurora che Sorgerai," sung by Signor Curioni in the above opera, 1s.—A fourth set of Quadrilles from Scotch Airs, including "the Boatie Rows," "Auld Rail in Aberdeen," and "the Campbells are Coming," for the first time; they are the original sets of Scotch quadrilles, and a favourite set of quadrilles by Spagnoletti, 4s.—J. G. and Son have just received from Edinburgh the following new music, viz. Gow's ancient curious collection of Scotland, consisting of genuine Scotch tunes, with their original variations, 8s.—The Vocal Melodies of Scotland, arranged for the flute, 4s.—The Sixth collection of Strathspeys, Reels, and Slow Tunes, by Niel Gow and Sons 8s. Instruments let on hire and tuned.

THE MONTHLY MUSICAL WORK.

On the 1st of April will be published, with a Portrait, No. IV. price 2s. 6d. to be continued Monthly, of the HARMONICON. Contents:—March, by Ferdinand Ries—II. "Lesbia live to love," Canzonet, by Vincenzo Righini, the Poetry by Dr. Langhorne—III. An Irish Melody, sung by Miss Stephens—IV. Duet, by Dr. Nares, (very rare)—V. Riego's March, the popular Spanish National Air, with Spanish and English words—VI. Divertimento for Piano Forte, containing a Spanish, a Russian, and a German Air—VII. "Ah non lasciarmi," by Anioli. Literary Department:—Life of Mozart—On the Italian Opera in England—History of Music in Germany—Royal Academy of Music—The German Musical Drama. Review of Music:—Critical Notices of the British, Ancient, and Philharmonic Concerts; the Theatres; Oratorios, &c.; Correspondence, comprising the Musical Intelligence of the Continent, &c. &c.—London: published by W. Pinnock, 267, Strand (by whom communications will be received); and sold by all Book and Music sellers.

Nos. I. II. and III. contain new compositions by Mr. Attwood, Mr. Braham, and Mr. Cramer; and an extensive collection of chaste and classical Music from British and Foreign composers.

HEATHER on the PRESENT STATE of PIANO FORTE STUDY.—Just published, by H. Falkner, 3, Old Bond-street, a new edition of the above Work, price 10s. 6d.

"Mr. Heather sets out with a preface, which, we confess, strongly blassed us in his favour; it is not only well and sensibly written, but it also shews that the author thinks and feels rightly on the subject of which he treats. We regret that our limits prevent us from giving an extract of his judicious observations on practice, expression, &c.; they are eminently worthy of the serious attention of every Pupil that wishes to be a proficient in the art. In the work itself we met with many occasional remarks, which equally shewed the author's good sense, the justness of his views, and, we may add, considerable experience in the art of instruction."—Vide Musical Review.

PAROCHIAL PSALMODY.—Shortly will be published, and dedicated, by permission, to his Majesty, a COLLECTION of the most approved PSALM TUNES, newly harmonized for four Voices, and adapted for Congregational Service, by THOMAS GREATOREX, Conductor of His Majesty's Concerts of Ancient Music, and Organist of Westminster Abbey.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.—Monday, Wallace, with the Vision of the Sun, or the Orphan of Peru—Tuesday, The Marriage of Figaro—Wednesday, the new Tragedy, Julian—Thursday, The Rivals—Friday, Julian—Saturday, the Comedy of Errors.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.—Monday, The Castle Spectre, with the Chinese Sorcerer, or the Emperor and his Three Sons—Tuesday, The Way to Get Married—Wednesday, Pizarro—Thursday, Wild Oats—Friday, Alexander the Great—Saturday, The Siege of Belgrade.

HIGH-METTLED RACER.

DAVIS'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE, Westminster Bridge, WILL OPEN TO-MORROW, Easter Monday, March 31, 1823, with the HIGH-METTLED RACER. Mr. Gray, the celebrated and most extraordinary Leaper, after the manner of his relation Mr. Ireland. Monsieur Lonquemare, from Paris, the first Rope Dancer in the World. Mr. Kemp, the distinguished Equestrian. A new Equestrian Melo Drama, with other Entertainments.

MISS LINWOOD'S GALLERIES of PICTURES, in Leicester-square, are RE-OPENED with new DECORATIONS, ALTERATIONS, and ADDITIONS, and will continue open every day, (Sundays excepted) from nine o'clock in the morning until dusk. Admittance, 2s. Children, 1s.

MR. HAYDON'S Great Picture of LAZARUS RISING FROM THE DEAD is NOW OPEN.—Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, ground door to the right.—Admission 1s. Catalogues 6d.

THE magnificent EXHIBITION of His Majesty's Coronation Armour, with a costly and unique collection of Military Antiquities of every age and nation, including the much admired Equestrian figure of an Arab Chief, the rich Armour of Henry Quatre, Knights mounted on their barbed steeds for a Tournament, a suit of Plate Armour of gigantic size, the Fire Arms of Napoleon, Trophies from the Field of Waterloo, the rich pistols captured from Joseph Bonaparte by the Duke of Wellington, &c. &c. is NOW OPEN in the New Gallery adjoining the Haymarket Theatre.—Admittance One Shilling.

GREAT ROOM, SPRING GARDENS.—NOVELTY.—MARSHALL'S Grand Historical Peristrephic PANORAMA of the CHREMONY of the CORONATION, the Coronation Procession, and the Banquet, painted on 10,000 square feet of canvas, and displaying nearly 100,000 figures, upwards of 500 of the principal characters on the foreground the size of life. The movement of the Panorama gives such an imposing and striking illusion, that the spectators are led to believe themselves present at the different splendid ceremonies it represents; the whole accompanied by a full Military Band, assisted by a Pinger Organ and Trumpets, who perform the Coronation Music.—IS NOW OPEN.—Day Exhibitions at 12, 1, 2, 3, and 4 o'clock; and in the Evening, brilliantly illuminated, at 7, 8, and 9 o'clock.—Admission, Boxes, 2s. Gallery, 1s.; Descriptive Book, 6d.

CHAPEAU DE PAILLE, by P. P. RUBENS.—The Exhibition of this universally admired Picture, known as the Chapeau de Paille, and acknowledged to be the chef-d'œuvre of Rubens in Portraiture, is now on view at Mr. Stanley's Rooms, No. 21, Old Bond-street. Admittance, 1s. Memorandum of the Picture, 6d.—It is expected that no person will attempt to take sketch or copy from the Picture.—Open from Nine till Five.

BRITISH INSTITUTION, PALL-MALL.—The Gallery for the Exhibition and Sale of the Works of Modern Artists IS OPEN Daily, from Ten in the Morning until Five in the Evening.—Admission 1s. Catalogue 1s. (By Order) JOHN YOUNG, Keeper.

The Subscribers to the Print from Mr. West's Picture of "Our Saviour healing the Sick in the Temple," who have not already received their impressions, may receive them upon payment of the remainder of their subscriptions, at the British Institution daily.

CORONATION.—HENRY ASTON BARKER'S PANORAMA, Leicester-square.—Now Open, a Grand Representation of the CORONATION PROCESSION, with Portraits of His MAJESTY, GEORGE the FOURTH, the ROYAL DUKES, and several others; particularly of the late Marquis of LONDONDERRY, in the full Habit of the Order of the Garter. The Panorama exhibits at least Thirty Thousand Figures!!!—A VIEW of LAUSANNE, with the LAKE of GENEVA, is also open.—Admittance to each Painting, 1s.

COSMORAMA.—A CHANGE will take place on MONDAY, the 7th of APRIL, when the Views of the Convent of Batalha, in Portugal; the Mosque of Abou Maudaw, on the Nile, in Egypt; and the Palace of Akbar, in India, will be removed. The other Views now exhibiting are the Tagus, from Bellem Castle; Two of Lyons; and the Exterior and Interior of St. Peter's at Rome, (lately put up again at the general desire of the Visitors of the Cosmorama, though already seen by many thousands of them several times over.)—This exhibition being lighted by artificial light, is totally independent of the weather.—Admittance One Shilling.—26, St. James's-street.

THE PICTURE of the TRIAL of the QUEEN, by Mr. George Hayter, Member of the Academy of St. Luke, in Rome, &c. &c. &c. Mr. T. H. Caute respectfully notifies, that having paid a large sum of money for the right to exhibit this great Historical Picture, the same WILL OPEN to the Public, at his Rooms, 80½, Pall Mall, from and after MONDAY NEXT, the 31st day of March, from ten till dusk.—As the limits of an advertisement prevent an adequate description being given of this extraordinary Picture, it will here be simply stated that it contains upwards of 300 figures, of which 199 are portraits, those Princes of the Royal Family, and every Peer and person of distinction in the Kingdom having sat to Mr. George Hayter, whose rank as a portrait-painter will, it is trusted, excite public curiosity towards the exhibition.

SUBSCRIPTION LIBRARY, 27, Old Bond-street, London.—MR. EBERS begs leave respectfully to announce that he has greatly extended the arrangements at his British and Foreign Library, so that the following superior accommodations are derived by Subscribers to his Establishment:—1st. They are entitled to the IMMEDIATE PERUSAL of the NEW PUBLICATIONS.—2d. The Proprietor engages to purchase for Subscribers any works of general interest that may not have been previously added to the Library.—3d. Subscribers have the right of choosing from the most extensive collection of the established works in the various branches of English, French, and Italian Literature.—And 4thly. Subscribers are admitted to the use of a costly series of Publications, embellished with highly finished and coloured Engravings, which illustrate in a beautiful manner the History, Antiquities, Costumes, Sports, Pastimes, &c. of the Ancient and Modern World, together with Maps and Atlasses.—New Catalogues, with terms, to be had on application.—Books regularly forwarded to all parts of the United Kingdom and the Continent.

Just published,

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE, No. LXXIV. For March 1823.—Contents:—I. The Candid. No. 2—II. There is a tongue in every leaf—III. Letters from Italy. Nos. 5 and 6—IV. Valperga—V. Clibber's Apology—VI. Mr. Rose's translation of the Orlando Innamorato—VII. Time's Whispering Gallery. No. 2; King James and the Sleeping Preacher—VIII. The Shepherd's Calendar, Class Second; Deaths, Judgements, and Providences—IX. Above a poem, &c. By Z. Edinburgh:—X. The Dalt Days. No. 2. Tale Second. The Old Man's Tale; or, Kilspindy Castle—XI. Analysis of Tucker's Vision—XII. Remarks on Mr. Owen's Plan—XIII. Nugæ Lyricæ. Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6—XIV. Lockhart's Spanish Ballads—XV. Public Affairs—XVI. Patriotic Ode. From the Spanish Gazette of Madrid, 1st March, 1823—XVII. Irish Affairs—XVIII. On the Scotch Character. By a Flunky—XIX. Edinburgh Pantomime—XX. Notes, Ambitious. No. 7. Printed for William Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, Strand, London.

Just published, price 10s. 6d. in boards,

DISCOURSES principally on Subjects of SCRIPTURE HISTORY. By the Rev. CHARLES FORSTER, B.D. Domestic Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Limerick.—Printed for T. Cadell, in the Strand; W. Blackwood, Edinburgh; and R. Milliken, Dublin.

Just published, price 4s. 6d.

THE ITALIAN WIFE; a Tragedy.
Printed for W. Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, Strand, London.

Just published, in post 8vo. price 10s. 6d. The Third Edition, of

LIGHTS and SHADOWS of SCOTTISH LIFE. By the Author of the Trials of Margaret Lyndsay.—Printed for Wm. Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, Strand, London. Of whom may be had,
The TRIALS of MARGARET LYNDSAY. Post 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

Just published, in post 8vo. price 9s. 6d.

THE ORLANDO INNAMORATO; abridged in Prose, from the Italian of Berni; and interspersed with Stanzas in the same metre as the original. By W. STEWART ROSE.

It is curious that the Orlando Innamorato, though necessary to the understanding of the story of the Orlando Furioso, which is a continuation of it, has never been translated into English; if we except a mere outline of the main action, which gives little notion of its innumerable episodes, and none of its poetry, or the spirit in which it is conceived. The present translation is an attempt to supply such a deficiency.
—Printed for William Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, Strand, London.

J. P. KEMBLE, ESQ.

On the first of April, price Two Shillings, embellished with—1. Portrait of Mr. Kemble, from a Drawing of Sir Thomas Lawrence; 2. Second Illustration of Loves of the Angels; 3. A Lady in a Morning Visiting Dress; 4. A Lady in an Evening Dress: both in colours,

THE Third Number of the Improved Series of THE LADY'S MAGAZINE; or, Mirror of the Belles Lettres, Fine Arts, Music, Drama, Fashions, &c. containing, besides the usual variety of interesting articles on various subjects, a Memoir, interspersed with Anecdotes, of the late celebrated Mr. Kemble.—A Review of, with Extracts from, Miss Mitford's new Tragedy of Julian.—Report of Music.—Fine Arts.—Drama.—Fashions.—The Letter-Box; or, Answers to Correspondents, &c.—London: printed for S. Hamilton; published by S. Robinson, Chapter-house-court, Paternoster-row; and sold by all the Booksellers of the United Kingdom.

Just published, price 2s. 6d. with two octavo plates, No. XVI. of

THE TECHNICAL REPOSITORY, for April, 1823, containing Practical Information on subjects connected with Discoveries and Improvements in the Useful Arts. By THOMAS GILL, a Chairman of the Committee of Mechanics, in the Society for the Encouragement of Arts, Manufactures, and Commerce, Adelphi.—Printed for Cadell, Strand; and Blackwood, Edinburgh.

N.B. Vols. I. and II. are now ready for delivery, price 15s. each, in bds.

MEDICAL SCIENCES, for 1823.

Just published, price 4s. 6d. No XVII. of

THE QUARTERLY JOURNAL of FOREIGN and BRITISH MEDICINE and SURGERY and of the Sciences connected with them; containing extensive Reviews of fourteen highly interesting Publications; and an arranged Quarterly History of the latest Discoveries and Improvements, both at home and abroad (upwards of sixty articles); and Critical Characteristics of New Books; forming a cheap and useful Library of reference to all classes of Practitioners.—London: printed for John Anderson, Medical Bookseller, 49, West Smithfield; Adam Black, Edinburgh; and Hodges and M'Arthur, Dublin.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

[This Gazette contains the elevation of the Marquis of Londonderry, to be an English Earl by the title of Earl Vane and Viscount Seaham; and of Lord Beresford to be Viscount Beresford.]

WAR OFFICE, March 28, 1823.

11th Reg. of Light Drags.: Capt. T. P. Barlow to be Capt. vice White, who exch.—14th Ditto: Capt. Sir T. Ormsby, Bart. to be Capt. vice Ward, who exch. —2d Reg. of Foot: Lieut. L. F. Jones to be Adj. and Lieut. vice Nunn, who exch.—19th Ditto: Capt. N. Farewell to be Paymaster, vice Wildey, who exch. —21st Ditto: Serj.-Major A. Young to be Adj. with the rank of Sec. Lieut. vice Keane, dec.—28th Reg. of Foot: Ensign G. Berkeley to be Ensign, vice Stewart, who exch.—40th Ditto: Lieut. C. Hibbert to be Capt. vice Bowen, who retires; Ensign H. Master to be Lieut. vice Hibbert; J. A. Robertson, Gent. to be Ensign, vice Master.—41st Ditto: Capt. J. A. Macleod to be Capt. vice Lord Bentinck, who retires.—44th Ditto: Lieut. H. Donnithorne to be Lieut. vice Dunlevie, who exch.—47th Ditto: Lieut. J. Peach to be Lieut. vice Macdonell, who exch.—59th Ditto: Lieut. J. Nunn to be Lieut. vice Jones, who exch.—61st Ditto: Lieut. C. Dunlevie to be Lieut. vice Donnithorne, who exch.—68th Ditto: Lieut. W. Bristow to be Capt. vice Richards, who retires.—99th Ditto: Lieut.-Gen. Sir R. Macfarlane, K.C.B. and G.C.H. to be Col. vice Gen. Sir G. Beckwith, dec.—Royal Staff Corps: Lieut. T. Harriott to be Capt.—To be Lieuts.: Ensign H. Cole; E. Wilford; Lieut. E. J. Cleather, vice Harriot.—To be Ensigns: R. M. Westmacott, Gent.; P. Shearman, Gent. vice Cole; Gent. Cadet C. Stoddart, vice Wilford.—2d, West India Reg.: Lieut. W. P. Cartwright to be Lieut.—1st Ceylon Reg.: Lieut. S. Braybrooke to be Capt. vice Abbey, who retires.—Cape Corps: Capt. C. Ward to be Capt. of a Company, vice Ormsby, who exch.—1st Royal Vet. Batt.: Capt. H. B. Hyde to be Capt. vice Macleod, app. to the 41st Foot.—East India Volunteers—To be Lieuts.: Ensigns P. Cameron, vice Richardson; F. F. Thompson, vice Carter.—To be Ensigns: W. E. Powell, Gent. vice Cameron; Edward F. Danvers, Gent. vice Thompson. Staff-Surg. Hastle to be Dep. Inspector of Hosps. by Brevet.—To be Hosp. Ass. to the Forces: Hosp. Ass. D. Mularky, vice Barry, super.; J. Carter, vice Dempster; J. O'Donel, vice Butler; A. Munkittrick, vice Dixon.—J. Frost, Fort Adj. at Fort Wellington, to be Town Major at Quebec, vice Lewlin, dec.

Commission signed by the Lord Lieut. of the County of Lincoln.—R. Marriott to be Dep.-Lieut.

Commission in the Royal Eastern Regt. of Middlesex Militia, signed by the Lord Lieut. of the County of Middlesex.—J. Phillips, Gent. to be Surgeon

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

W. ARMSTRONG, Great Queen-street, auctioneer.

BANKRUPTS.

H. BERTHOUD, jun. Regent's Quadrant, Piccadilly, bookseller—W. NAIL, Lisson-street, Mary-le-Bone, ironmonger—C. BRANDT, Jermyn-street, watchmaker—J. OLIVER, Broad-street, woollen-draper—E. W. HENZELL, Upper Thames-street, corn-dealer—J. FROST, Newport, grocer—D. JONES, Brighthelmstone, stone-mason—R. LYNEY, Fore street, timeclouse, coal merchant—A. W. SHIELDS, St. John-street, cheese-monger—W. PIPER, Hammersmith, barge builder—W. FREELOVE, Brightheline on, grocer—F. CLEMENTS, Norwich, coach-maker—J. SINCLAIR, Bow lane, warehouseman—J. CUNNINGHAM, Birmingham, linen-draper.

CHILE LOAN.—NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN, That the Second Half Yearly Dividend, due on the 31st March instant, will be paid on that and every subsequent Day (Sundays excepted) at our Counting-house, No. 102, Leadenhall-street, between the hours of 10 and 2 o'clock.—The Holders of Warrants are requested to leave them, with Lists in numerical order, for examination, on Saturday the 29th instant, or one day previous to the application for payment.—London, 8th March, 1823. HULLETT, BROTHERS, and Co.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—The rude and unskilful attempts constantly made to supply those substitutes for the masticatory organ, and the disgust which delicacy suffers from the unpleasantry attending them when permanently fixed, have deterred many from adopting the aid and comfort they are capable of affording, independent of the assistance they may contribute to digestion and consequent health. The ingenious application of mechanical science will enable us to obviate all these inconveniences, and allow the wearer at all times to keep the mouth in a state of perfect cleanliness, and to perform the functions of mastication, articulation, &c. with decided ease and comfort.—Mr. NICHOLLES begs to state, that the continued attendance from ten to four, and will be happy to give any gentleman the comforts derived from his efforts under every circumstance of simple and complicated deficiency.—115, Fleet-st.

PARLIAMENTARY INTEREST.—Any Member of either of the Houses of Parliament (Ministerial) or other Nobleman or Gentleman with powerful Parliamentary connexions, may have an exposé laid before him of a plan by which considerable benefit must accrue to Government, with scarcely any expence and undoubted personal advantage to the proposer. The want of interest is the sole cause of this advertisement; and to prevent the possibility of misconception, it is here at once stated that the affair will be treated as one of honour between gentlemen, no remuneration being thought of, unless Government should accede to the proposal. Gentlemen will be waited on who send their real name and address to A. B. at Mr. Sainsbury's, Literary Agent, Bell's buildings, Salisbury-square.

NEWINGTON, SURREY.—NEW CHURCHES.—All Persons desirous of contracting to perform the whole, or any part, of the Works in the intended NEW CHURCH, near Beckford-row, in Walworth, in the Parish of St. Mary, Newington, Surrey, are requested to deliver their Proposals (sealed up, and indorsed "St. Peter's Church, Walworth, Tender for work," (as the case may be), addressed to the Trustees for Building New Churches in Newington,) to the said Trustees, at a Meeting to be held at the Committee Room of the Parochial Schools, near the Fishmongers' Alms-house, at Newington aforesaid, (being the Committee Room of the said Trustees,) on MONDAY, the 28th day of APRIL next, at Six o'clock in the Evening precisely, (and not on Wednesday, the 16th, as before advertised). Each Tender must contain the names of two responsible Persons as Sureties, and a list of prices at which the same is made. The Trustees do not pledge themselves to accept the lowest, or any other Tender, unless the same shall be considered satisfactory to them, and to His Majesty's Commissioners for Building New Churches in populous Parishes.—The drawings, specifications, and form of contract, may be seen any day, Sundays excepted, between the hours of Eight in the Forenoon and Six in the Afternoon, by applying at the office of John Soane, Esq. the Architect, in Lincoln's-inn-fields, of whom all necessary information may be obtained. JOHN CLUTTON, Clerk to the Trustees.

48, High-street, South-wark, 27th March, 1823.

MONEY on EQUITABLE TERMS.—The Advertiser advances Money to any extent, at moderate interest, whether on Freehold, Copyhold, Leasehold, Lifehold, Funded, or other ample Security; and assures those who may honour him with their confidence, that they will experience treatment the most candid, liberal, and explicit, though similar business is sometimes viewed with mistrust, from the mal-practices of disreputable people.—Letters, post-paid, to A. B. care of Mr. Mallows, glover, Exeter 'Change, Strand, will receive immediate attention; where also a card of address may be had.—Reversions are purchased.

A FAMILY, about to quit England immediately, wish to recommend a LADY, who has been living with them in the capacity of GOVERNESS. She is above thirty, of superior manners and connexions, but in misfortune and reduced circumstances. Any lady in high life, desiring an intelligent and confidential companion, or a young family requiring maternal care and instruction, or an elderly gentleman wishing for a gentlewoman to superintend his domestic affairs, would find this advertisement well worth attention. The lady's references are of the first respectability, and her address, Y. R. S. General Post-office, Piccadilly.

A STEADY YOUNG MAN, aged 24, of obliging disposition, and urbanity of manners, understands French and Italian, and speaks Spanish, with a general knowledge of Commercial affairs, having been seven years in a respectable mercantile house, in which he filled a confidential situation, and has left in consequence of the Gentleman giving up business, offers his services to any Gentleman in want of such a person, either in the above capacity, or as Secretary. Can produce an excellent recommendation.—Address to Q. Mr. By, Stationer, George-yard, Lombard-street.

SPLENDID DRAWING-ROOM and DINING-ROOM CURTAINS and BED FURNITURE, at half their former prices, in Swiss Chintzes, Spanish Merino Damasks, Silk Tabborets, Merino Tabborets, Moreens, &c. With the astonishing advantages of an immense and superb assortment, just manufactured, for ready money, and a determination to persevere in their present system of doing business, MILES and EDWARDS challenge all attempts at competition from long established houses, who can only offer goods which have been accumulating for many years, and which must have cost them full double what they are now worth. Families furnishing their Town and Country Residences, will find, by an inspection of the above matchless Stock, that between Miles and Edwards's prices, and the prices at which other Houses are now selling the same articles, there is a difference of at least 20 per Cent.—No. 134, Oxford-street, between Holles-street and Old Cavendish-street.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

CROWN OFFICE, March 23.

Members returned to serve in the present Parliament.

Borough of Corfe Castle—John Bond the younger, Esq. in the room of George Bankes, Esq. who has accepted the Chiltern Hundreds.—Borough of Newport (Cornwall)—Jonathan Blaine, of Bedford-row, in the county of Middlesex, Esq.

WAR OFFICE, March 24.

2d Reg. of Life Guards: Capt. Lord J. Bentinck, to be Capt. vice S. R. Jarvis, who exch.—3d Reg. of Drag. Guards: Capt. T. R. Swinburne, to be Capt. vice F. Prosser, who exch.—7th Ditto: Lieut. J. Bennett to be Capt. vice Davis, who retires: Cornet J. L. Pennyfather to be Lieut. vice Bennett: C. Cochrane, Gent. to be Cornet, vice Pennyfather.—4th Reg. of Light Drag.: Surg. R. Todd, M.D. to be Surg. vice O'Donel, sec.—10th Ditto: Cornet W. Battier to be Cornet, vice T. Hardwicke, who exch.—17th Ditto: Cornet and Sub-Lieut. C. Hall to be Lieut. vice Graham, prom.—Coldstream Reg. of Foot Guards: Capt. W. L. Walton to be Capt. and Lieut.-Colonel, vice Gore, who retires; Captain R. Bowen to be Lieut. and Capt. vice Rous, who exch.; Lieut. Hon. W. Forbes to be Lieut. and Capt. vice Walton; Ensign Hon. H. St. Clair Erskine to be Ensign and Lieut. vice Forbes.—7th Reg. of Foot: Lieut. A. Fraser to be Lieut. vice Bloomfield.—11th Ditto: Lieut. H. K. Bloomfield to be Lieut. vice Amyatt, who retires.—13th Ditto: Ensign A. G. Slacke to be Ensign, vice Suckling, who exch.—16th Ditto: Lieut.-General W. C. Lord Beresford, G.C.B. to be Colonel, vice Lieut.-General Gordon, dec.—27th Ditto: M. C. Johnstone, Gent. to be Ensign, vice Rundle, prom.—30th Ditto: Super. Ass.-Surg. J. Campbell, M.D. to be Ass.-Surg. vice Piper, prom.—32d Ditto: Ensign N. Sutherland to be Ensign, vice Slacke, who exch.—35th Ditto: Capt. Hon. W. R. Rous, to be Capt. vice Bowen, who exch.—60th Ditto: Lieut. H. Cornwall to be Lieut. vice Stopford. 69th Ditto: Lieut.-General Sir J. Hamilton, Bart. to be Colonel, vice Lord Beresford; Ensign H. Moore to be Lieut. vice Peppard, dec.: Ensign C. Johnstone to be Ensign, vice Moorsom, who exch.—79th Ditto: Ensign W. S. Moorsom to be Ensign, vice Johnstone, who exch.—93d Ditto: Lieut.-General John Hodgson to be Colonel, vice General Balfour, dec.; Ass.-Surg. S. A. Piper to be Surgeon, vice Todd.—95th Ditto: P. Maitland, Gent. to be Ensign, vice Erskine. —96th Ditto: Capt. J. Hogg to be Capt. vice R. Bunney, who exch.—91st Ditto: Lieut. J. Marshall to be Capt. vice M'Lachlan, dec.; Ensign R. Duke to be Lieut. vice Marshall; Ensign D. Campbell to be Ensign vice Duke.—1st West India Reg.: Ensign W. Montgomery to be Lieut.; A. Macintyre, Gent. to be Ensign, vice Montgomery; Lieut. J. Delamel to be Adj. vice Plucket, dec.—2d Ditto: Lieut. Stopford to be Lieut. vice Adams, 3d Corps: Lieut. H. B. Astell to be Lieut. vice Cornwall.—1st Royal Vet. Batt.: Lieut. S. Sargent to be Lieut. vice Munro.—2d Royal Vet. Batt.: Ensign P. N. Daly to be Ensign, vice Crombie.—HOSPITAL STAFF: Ass.-Surg. R. Lowder, M.D. to be Ass.-Surg. to the Forces, vice Gow, who resigns.—GARRISONS: General Sir R. Brownrigg, Bart. G.C.B. to be Governor of Landguard Fort, vice General Lieter, dec.

Commissions signed by the Lord Lieut. of the West Riding of Yorkshire.

3d West York Militia: W. Duncombe, Esq. to be Major, vice Daere, prom.—Yorkshire Hussar Yeomanry: E. York, Gent. to be Lieut. vice Taylor; T. D. Ikin, Gent. to be Cornet, vice Craddock, prom.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

M. and A. Redmayne, Selby, Yorkshire, millners.—H. and M. Wheatley, Great Gard-street, Whitechapel-road, silk-dyers.—Boarsdale and Robinson, Bolton-le-Moors, Lancashire, cotton-manufacturers.—J. B. and P. Foxwell, and Williams, Dye-house-mills, Gloucestershire, and Lothbury, London, clothiers, so far as respects J. B. Foxwell—Ames, Stourport, and Ames, Bristol, wharfingers—Waud, Bury St. Edmund's, and Waud, Lower John street, Golden-square, drapers—Perrin and Vander Sluys, Sweetings-alley—M. and E. Sparks, Allhurstone, Warwickshire, milliners—Stunt and Barnard, Wellington-street, Goswell-street, dyers—Erdes and Southall, Blackman-street, linen-drapers—Adam and Schweitzer, Brownlow-street, Drury-lane, cabinet-makers—Greenwood and Unwin, New-road, St. George's in the East, tobacconists—J. and W. Hanham, Bath, drapers—Allen and Kendall, Nottingham, lace-manufacturers—Jullion, Brentford, and Gee, Salisbury-street, Strand, solicitors—Sutcliffe and Lee, jun. Stansfield-mill, Yorkshire—J. and W. Roberts, Bramley, Yorkshire, stonemasons—Hope and Bright, Bristol, potters—W. and D. Stubbing, Leadenhall-market, salesmen—Creswill and Moore, Hamer-place, Lancashire, woollen-manufacturers—Colley, Hargreaves, and Colley, Sheffield, merchants, so far as respects R. Colley—Le Tavernier and Hill, Mount-street, Grosvenor-square, wine-merchants—Breminidge, Tardrew, and Linnington, Barnstaple, Devonshire, wine-merchants, so far as respects T. Tardrew—Bromley and Wand, Commercial-road, auctioneers.

BANKRUPTCY ENLARGED.

A. THOMSON, Liverpool, merchant, from April 1 to April 12.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

W. JONES, Handsworth, Staffordshire, farmer.

BANKRUPTS.

J. CARPENTER, Wellington, Somersetshire, banker—J. COLVIN, Abchurch-lane, merchant—D. GRAHAM, Sandbury, cotton-manufacturer—J. and H. BIRD, Poultry, jewellers—M. BARRY, Minories, chart-seller.

DIVIDENDS.

At the Court of Commissioners of Bankrupts.—April 15, W. Reynolds, of the ship Orient, master-mariner—April 15, J. S. Smith, Brightlhelmstone, druggist—April 15, J. Whitebrook, Chester, shoemaker—April 15, D. Gerrard, Old Cavendish-street, auctioneer—April 15, R. Lee, Great Winchester-street, underwriter—April 15, J. James, Wood-street, Cheapside, tea-dealer—April 19, T. and D. Asquith, Dermondsey, and T. Mellish, New Kent-road, ship-owners—April 15, F. Fisher, jun. Leicester-square, surgeon—April 12, E. Brown, Saracen's Head, Friday-street, corn-dealer—April 13, J. M. de Queiros, Size-lane, merchant—April 19, H. Deane, Sydenham, Surrey, stock-broker.

April 16, J. Linsley, jun. Leeds, merchant—April 5, D. Jermyn, Great Yarmouth, merchant—April 15, J. Leech, Birmingham, brush-maker—April 18, W. Baker, Ticehurst, Sussex, blacksmith—April 17, W. H. Tollervey, Portsea, brewer—April 17, G. C. Staples, Halifax, Yorkshire, woolstapler—April 14, W. Barraston, Worcester, hop-merchant—April 19, S. Hardwick, Birmingham, builder—April 16, G. Brammall, Sheffield, merchant.

CERTIFICATES—April 15.

A. Shiell, High-street, Wapping, baker—C. R. Sandderer, Lime-street-square, insurance-broker—J. Haughton, Liverpool, merchant—H. Gibbons, Islington, dealer.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

The Royal Assent was given, by Commission, to the Mutiny, Marine Mutiny, Irish Yeomanry, General Turnpike Amendment, Ireland Arms, Severn Bridge, Darlington Watch, Plymouth Gas, Peterborough Road, Cornwall and Devon Road, and Portman-square Improvement, Bills.

Petitions were presented from St. Vincents, Nevis, and the Virgin Island, complaining of Colonial Distress; from Cornwall, against the Coal Duties; from Honiton and Shrewsbury, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; and from Plymouth, against the Plymouth Breakwater Bill.

EARL DARNLEY, adverting to the state of the Navy, coincided with Ministers, in reducing the inactive expences, but wished that the active department had been augmented, for if that had been the case, we should, backed by a considerable naval armament, have not made remonstrances in vain at Verona.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL doubted the policy of increasing what the Noble Earl called the active expences to a greater extent. The true policy of England was, to be prepared with a large fleet for war, if necessary; the preparation for such a state was nearly accomplished.

On the third reading of the National Debt Reduction Bill, the MARQUIS OF LANSDOWNE, to record his opinion, that the alleged surplus was not so much as the Bill stated, moved that the word "three" be inserted, instead of five millions.

EARL DARNLEY recommended to apply three millions out of the surplus to the Sinking Fund, and the other two to the public relief.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL maintained that, there is actually a surplus of five millions, and that the arrangement with the Bank of England was a plain and simple transaction.

LORD KING was not satisfied with the reason for taking five millions as the surplus.

LORD BEXLEY said, the present Bill was a return to the principles of Mr. Pitt's system.

The amendment was negatived, and the Bill passed.

On the third reading of the King's property regulation Bill, the LORD CHANCELLOR, in answer to some questions put by Lord Ellenborough, on a former night, said, that certainly His Majesty might dispose of his personal chattels, without a Bill, but if money were wanted on the part of the trustees of the British Museum, to take the benefit of the donation, then a Bill would be wanted. Generally His Majesty had the power of giving his personals away, and but for the Act of the 39th and 40th of the late King, it would be doubtful whether he might not will them away. In the reign of Queen Anne, a change had been made, when certain portions of land had been set apart for the support of the Crown; but previously the doctrine was, that the Crown might dispose of every thing it had, jus Coronæ.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH entered into a history of several of the ancient Kings, to shew that the Sovereign was not proprietor, but merely guardian of the property of the Crown. The present Bill he considered as a declaration, that the King intended to separate his private property from that of the Crown. And when another Bill in the other House informed him, that His Majesty was giving away his library without an Act of Parliament, it struck him that it might be done in order that the King might have equal power to dispose, in the same manner, of all other personal property of the Crown. His Majesty had, for eight years, applied the revenues of the Crown to the improvement of his personal property. To him (Lord E.) it appeared, that the Crown ought to be considered an equivalent for the loss of all other property.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL said, it was due to the Government and to the Sovereign that he should repel the idea started by the Noble Baron, that there was some trick between the liberal gift made by His Majesty to his people, and the Bill now on their Lordships' table. He should ask his Noble and Learned Friend on the Woolsack, whether he did not know, that His Majesty had been anxious to have the power conferred by this Bill three years ago, whilst the gift of the library had only been thought of within the last few months. He should not enter into the question, whether the 39th and 40th of his late Majesty had been a wise measure; but he should ask whether his present Majesty, when Prince of Wales, having acquired property as a subject, of which he had a right to dispose, the House would deprive him of that right because he had ascended the Throne? He put it on the ground of strict justice—he wished for no favour—no liberality—liberality, in this instance, was all on the side of the Throne.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR would declare, upon his honour, that he had not the least notion that any such connection existed between the two measures. On the contrary, having been consulted on the principle of the Bill, he happened to know, it was not till years after the question had been raised with respect to the King's property, that he had heard any thing about the library.

LORD REDESDALE contended, that until the Act of Queen Anne, the power of the Crown to grant land had been unlimited. It was true, that when those grants were not approved of, the Ministers, by whose advice they had been made, had been impeached, but even then the grants had not been revoked.—The Bill was passed.

TUESDAY.

A petition was presented from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.

On the motion of the EARL of KINGSTON, a return of the number of convictions in Ireland, under the Insurrection Act, was ordered to be laid before the House.

WEDNESDAY.

The Royal Assent was given, by Commission, to the National Debt Reduction, the King's Property, and the Marriage Act Repeal, Bills.

Petitions were presented from Sligo, complaining of Excessive Tolls, and from Reading, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.

THE LORD CHANCELLOR intimated to the House, that it was intended to introduce a Bill to amend the Bankrupt Laws, shortly after the recess.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL stated his intention on Monday fortnight, to lay such papers on the table as related to the war between France and Spain; and to state what had been the conduct of the British Government in regard to Foreign Powers.

EARL GREY hoped no engagement had been entered into with those Powers, of which the British public were not already in possession; but if any engagements had been entered into with the rulers in France, and a new revolution was to ensue, by their rash, and he would say, iniquitous conduct, he trusted Ministers would not protect them against the evils which such rash conduct might create.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL stated that, except the treaty which provided for the exclusion of the late Emperor of France, this country was under no obligations of any kind, but those mentioned in the public treaty.

In answer to a question from the Earl of Darnley respecting the application of the augmented force, LORD MELVILLE said, it was intended to complete the crews of the guard-ships, and to put some vessels of smaller class into commission.—The House adjourned to the 10th of April.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY.

THE SPEAKER went to the House of Peers, to hear the Royal Assent.

Petitions were presented from Strathmore, complaining of Agricultural Distress; from Falmouth, Truro, and Leicester, complaining of Hawkers and Pedlars; and from St. Ives and Penzance, complaining of the Duties on Coals.

SIR T. LETHBRIDGE gave notice that he should, on the 1st of May, move certain Resolutions on Agricultural Distress.

MR. HENRY GREY BENNET presented a petition from Richard Carlile, complaining of the practice of flogging in Dorset Gaol, and for a law to enact the abolition of that system. The Hon. Member said, he should introduce a Bill to prevent the infliction of corporal punishment. The petition was ordered to be printed.

On bringing up the Report of the Army Extraordinaries, MR. HUME contended, that the salaries paid to the agents for the Cape of Good Hope, Malta, the Mauritius, and Ceylon, amounting to 2,900l. threw additional expense on this country. He was of opinion that the duties of the Treasurer of the Navy were inconsistent with those of the Agent at Ceylon; and he considered that the services of the four Agents he had mentioned might be dispensed with altogether; and, therefore, he should move to reduce the vote by 2,900l. He accordingly moved, "That the sum of 620,900l. in the resolution, should be altered to 617,100l."

MR. WILMOT maintained that the vote of Parliament, two years ago, had declared that colonial agents were necessary. It was physically impossible for any man in his office to perform the duties of these situations. The Hon. Gent. then adverted to a statement made by Mr. Hume on a former night, viz. that Mr. R. Gourlay had been ignominously expelled Canada, merely for having detected some abuses of Government, in relation to some fees received by the Governor. Now this was not the fact. He had looked over the publication of Mr. Gourlay, and could not find that he had ever made any such accusation against SIR PEREGRINE MAITLAND, who had not, in truth, ever received any such fees.

Mr. Creevey and Sir J. Yorke supported the amendment. The House divided—For the Amendment, 43—For the original grant, 74. The resolution was then carried.

On the vote for 62,405l. for necessaries and support of the convicts at home, MR. HUME asked whether the contracts for supplying the convicts with clothes, bedding, and other necessaries, were made by public advertisement or not? As to Mr. Gourlay, who had received 1000l.—what he complained of was, that a part of this 1000l. had been taken from him as fees, and had been misapplied. For complaining of this he had been sent out of Canada. As for the allegations which he had made against Sir Thomas Maitland, he would repeat them, and he could support them. It was the duty of the Government not to allow Sir T. Maitland to remain as Governor of the Ionian Islands; for no man had ever, by his conduct, brought such hatred on the English name.

MR. DAWSON replied to Mr. Hume's question, that the contracts for supplying the convicts were all publicly made, and by advertisements in the public papers.

MR. WILMOT complained of his having been attacked in his absence from the House by the Hon. Member for Aberdeen.—As to Mr. Gourlay he denied that he had been injured. If Mr. Hume would present a petition from that individual, and make out a case for him, he (Mr. W.) pledged himself to refute it.

MR. HENRY GREY BENNET said, that some way or other Sir T. Maitland had contrived to make the British character (which had formerly been the most popular) the most hateful and detestable in the Ionian Islands.

MR. SECRETARY PEEL defended the character of Sir T. Maitland, when he (Mr. P.) had filled the office now held by his Hon. Friend (Mr. Wilmot). Sir T. Maitland had been Governor of Ceylon; and from a knowledge of his proceedings at that time he could say, that there was no man more sincerely desirous of promoting the honour of the British name.

LORD A. HAMILTON thought that the accusations of his Hon. Friend (Mr. Hume) were to be taken rather as against the Government than against the individual.

MR. C. WYNN said, if the Hon. Member believed that there was any foundation for the charges which he had made, let him bring them forward by making a distinct motion on the subject.

On the Report of the Beer Trade Bill being brought up,

MR. H. SUMNER expressed his doubt that abuses might be practised under the provisions of the Bill. A brewer making the new description of beer might keep a house in which persons could drink it, and so in fact maintain a public-house without holding a license.

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER said, that no man keeping a public-house would be allowed to brew the new beer on his premises. There was a clause in the Act, providing that a publican who wished to brew the new beer must not brew within a certain distance of the house which he used as a public-house.

MR. GRATTAN wished to extend the plan to Ireland, where a good beer, sold at a reasonable price, might probably supersede the use of spirits.

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER thought the sale of beer without a licence in Ireland worth consideration.

MR. W. WILLIAMS suggested the advantage of having an ad valorem tax upon beer generally.

On the Report of the Merchants' Vessels' Appreticing Bill being read, MR. RICARDO proposed an amendment, "that all the words after the word 'repeal,' should be left out of the clause," being to remove that compulsory condition for taking a certain number of apprentices from the Bill.—For the amendment, 6—Against it, 85.—Majority, 79.

On the Order of the Day for bringing up the Report on the Watchhousing Bill being read, MR. WALLACE was desirous that the subject should be fully discussed, and proposed that the Bill should be read a third time on the 21st of April.—After a short discussion, the Bill was ordered to be read a third time on Monday, the 21st of April.

Leave was given to Mr. W. Williams to bring in a Bill "to Regulate the Right of Voting at Borough Elections, arising from real property, and to prevent occasionality;" to Mr. Cripps, to bring in a Bill to increase the power of magistrates in cases of apprenticeship; and to Mr. Sykes to bring in a Bill to amend the Act of 7 Geo. 3, c. 21, relative to quorum Magistrates in cities and towns corporate.

COLONEL BARRY moved for "copies of information on which the commitments of certain persons to the goal of Newgate, Dublin, on a conspiracy to murder the Lord Lieutenant were founded." The Hon. Member stated the facts connected with the trials of those persons, and said, if the Government of Ireland had been deceived in the transaction, and had now altered their opinion, in bringing the subject before Parliament he was doing them a service. Not a person existed who believed in the existence of a conspiracy for the atrocious purpose of assassinating the Lord Lieutenant, and some papers which had been moved for, would throw some light upon it.

MR. PLUNKETT could assure the House, that he was desirous that every thing should be known, and every document brought before the House and the public; but, whatever individual feelings he might entertain, he must not submit to the establishment of a precedent subversive of the ends of justice. The Right Hon. Member then stated all the facts, of which a great many in the House were in possession from the trials. On the 14th of December last, before the Lord Lieutenant went to the theatre, the intention was announced of exciting a riot at the theatre, and it was communicated to the Lord Lieutenant that his person would be in danger. Measures were taken (which proved ineffectual) for preserving the public peace, and for protecting the person of his Excellency. On the night of his visit to the theatre great tumult prevailed; and immediately the Lord Lieutenant appeared, a sentiment of approbation was expressed by that part of the House which were unbiassed; it was attempted to drown the expression of approbation, not by extemporaneous groans and hisses, but hand bills were dropped in different parts of the theatre containing the words, "No Popery," and the like. Expressions personally insulting to the Lord Lieutenant were loudly uttered; and between the persons in the pit and gallery, a system of signals and concert was established. The persons in the gallery were armed with bludgeons, and shouted and hissed unceasingly. Matters remained in a state of tumult till after the play was over, when the cry of "God save the King" was called for, his Excellency advanced to the front of the box where he could be seen and reached from the pit part of the house. A bottle was then thrown from the gallery, and hit the drop scene close to the place where his Excellency stood. As the bottle was thrown, a person who had been observed with a cane in his hand for the purpose of making a noise, broke it, and on part of it was thrown, it was aimed at his Excellency; the piece of cane struck on the next box, and cut the cushion, it then rebounded, and struck the box in which his Excellency was, and fell upon the stage. When he (Mr. Plunkett) was first consulted, he was free to say, his first impression was, that the transaction involved nothing more than a misdemeanour, and should be proceeded against as such. The investigation continued seven days, during which the Solicitor-General and himself attended most assiduously; and it appeared that Forbes, went, after he was released, to a tavern in Essex-street, and took part in a conversation about the bottle being thrown, and the riot. That there was sufficient evidence to go to a Jury on the capital charge, he thought no man could doubt; but he had no hesitation in saying, that he did not think there was a conspiracy to murder the Lord Lieutenant; and on his oath, had he been one of the Jury, he would have acquitted them. The Right Honourable Gentleman then went on to state, that the Lord Lieutenant had directed that putting down the Orange Anniversary. Subscriptions were made for the purpose of packing the theatre, and filling it with persons from the Orange Lodges. They accordingly met, but deliberately formed this plan. Parties from a particular lodge were to go to the pit door, and seize that part of the theatre, near which the Lord Lieutenant sat. Three persons, members of this Lodge, went to the theatre on the Saturday morning, and purchased a sufficiency of pit tickets to admit 50 or 60 persons to the pit gallery. There had been a conspiracy, and it appeared to him that the principal object was to compel the Lord Lieutenant to change the measures of his Government, and injury to his person was only consequential: therefore the bills of indictment were for the minor offence, and not for the capital charge. Under these circumstances, he gave his advice to counsel, having conspired against the life of the Lord Lieutenant, though at the time he had not made up his mind whether he should proceed on the minor or the capital charge. With respect to the motion he resisted it, because he thought it would be a violation of the constitution, and a course without a precedent.

DR. LUSHINGTON thought that the papers moved for were material to the full understanding and satisfactory discussion of the subject.

MR. SEC. PEEL said, the question was, whether the magistrates had exercised a proper discretion in committing the parties. It was contended these informations might be produced; but he (Mr. P.) answered, that they were not necessary for the purposes of the present motion. If they were not, was it desirable, on any other grounds, that this information should be laid before the House?

MR. ABERCROMBIE supported the motion.

SIR J. NEWPORT was of opinion, that unless a very strong case was made out, the papers which had been moved for ought not to be produced, because their production might tend to obstruct the course of justice.

MR. SPRING RICE said, if the House wished to rescue that country from the unfortunate state of division in which it had been placed, it ought not, directly or indirectly, to countenance the party in Ireland which considered itself aggrieved.

MR. GRATTAN felt bound to express his gratitude to the Attorney-General for Ireland, for the line of conduct which he had pursued, and for his endeavours to destroy the faction which had been governing Ireland for the last 15 years.

DR. PHILLIMORE opposed the motion, and characterised the conduct of the Hon. Member in bringing forward without notice as unfair and clandestine towards the Chief Secretary and the Attorney-General for Ireland.

MR. LAMBTON trusted that the Right Hon. and Learned Gent. would be able to clear his conduct for the honour of the laws and of those principles of justice which he had once so eloquently supported.

LORD HOWARD, not having been convinced by any thing which had passed during the debate, that the granting of the motion would create any inconvenience, said he would vote in support of it.

COL. TRENCH considered Orange Societies destructive in themselves, and prejudicial to the peace of Ireland. He supported the original motion.—The House divided. For the motion, 32—Against it, 81.

COL. BARRY moved for the production of a copy of the recognizance into which the prisoners had entered; and also of the rule of court calling upon them to enter into such recognizance.

The motion was carried, as was also a motion for a list of the witnesses examined on the late state trials at Dublin.

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER obtained leave to bring in a bill to empower trustees of naval and military pensions to confirm an agreement with the Bank of England for the sale of part of the annuities in them vested.

A petition was presented from Mr. Joseph Wilfred Parkins, praying for leave to extend the time for putting in recognizances to prosecute his petition against the return of T. R. Kemp for Arundel, on the ground that a person named Harris, one of his sureties, had absconded himself. The petition was laid on the table, but no Member seconded the motion for extending the time, and it fell to the ground; the order for entering into the necessary recognizances was rescinded.

TUESDAY.

A new Writ was ordered for Lymington in the room of Sir H. Neale.

COL. WOOD postponed his motion respecting the settlement of papers from the 23d to the 30th of April.

The Parish Apprentice Regulation Bill was read a first time. Second reading on the 14th of April.

Petitions were presented from Blackburn against the licensing system, and from the Island of Antigua against any alteration in the Sugar Duties.

MR. HUME presented a Petition from the inhabitants of the town of Sydney, in Cape Breton. In 1783, when Governor Parr received instructions from the King, he was prohibited from introducing any laws but those of England; and it was distinctly stated, that the Act of the General Assembly of Nova Scotia should have no force in that settlement. On this assurance the population increased to 20,000 souls. But, in 1820, it was made a county of Nova Scotia by proclamation of the Governor-General, Sir James Kemp. The Hon. Gentleman contended that, on the authority of Chief Justice Mansfield, this was an usurpation of the power of Parliament.

Mr. WILMOT observed that in truth no remonstrance had reached the Colonial Offices against the change which had taken place; besides, the petition was got up by a few individuals; at the instance of a Mr. Gibbon. The Hon. Gentleman contended that the meaning of the Proclamations had been misunderstood; the inhabitants had originally understood their island to be represented in the General Assembly of Nova Scotia. Cape Breton had no claim to a legislative assembly, founded upon promise or any other right.

Mr. BERNAL considered the question adverted to by this Petition as one of the highest importance. He denied that there had been an acquiescence of three years by the people of Cape Breton under the present system.

Mr. BRIGHT thought this subject called for the attention of all who took an interest in the welfare of the Colonies; for if one colony was deprived of its Legislature, it was highly probable that attempts would be made to deprive other colonies in the same manner.

The Petition was laid on the table.

LORD J. RUSSELL asked, whether there was any, and what treaty, by which this country could be called upon to act with foreign Powers, in the event of any alteration in the state of things in France.

Mr. SECRETARY CANNING said, the question was of the gravest nature, and an answer to it must be one of construction rather than of positive fact. Whatever relations there were between France and this country were to be found in a mass of papers laid before Parliament at the close of the late war. Those papers related to the late Usurper; but the parties to them, in the event of a revolution in France, were bound merely to meet and concert as to the measures necessary to be taken.

LORD J. RUSSELL considered that the invasion of Spain by the Bourbons totally altered our relations with France. Great Britain had spent, fruitlessly, no less than 1000 millions, in the hope that the re-establishment of that family would secure the blessings of peace to Europe. He trusted that, in the result, Government would be able to clear themselves from the construction of their being parties to any treaty binding this country to the expenditure of a single shilling in support of that family.

SIR ROBERT WILSON said he had put a question similar to that of his Noble Friend, to the predecessor of the Hon. Secretary; and had received an answer from that Noble Person stating distinctly that this country was not bound by treaty to guarantee the Throne of France to the House of Bourbon.

Mr. LENNARD moved, "That an humble Address be presented to his Majesty, praying, that he will be graciously pleased to direct that there be laid before this House a Return, shewing the decrease which had taken place in the Expenditure in respect of the third Class of Ministers to Foreign Courts, and whether that decrease was in the number or rank of the Mission, or how otherwise."

Mr. SECRETARY CANNING had no wish to withhold substantial information; but he should oppose the present motion, because he objected to the practice of always bringing the Crown to account for individual appointments.—Lord J. Russell and Mr. Hume supported the motion.

Mr. HUSKISSON said Mr. Fox had laid it down as a principle, that the House ought not to inquire into the particulars of the Civil List, unless there were reasons to know that it was in debt.

SIR F. BURDETT contended, that the utmost Mr. Fox had ever said upon the Civil List was, that Parliament would unwillingly bring under its review any expences of the Royal Family, but he had no reference to the third branch of the Civil List. He (Sir Francis Burdett) wished to know what fair objection could be urged to regularly laying before Parliament an account of the expenditure in this department?—The House divided—For the motion, 24—Against it, 50.

Mr. HENRY GREY BENNETT moved for a copy of the Minutes of Evidence taken by the Court of Inquiry assembled on Lieut.-Col. Home, of the Third Regiment of Guards. The Hon. Member entered into a very lengthened statement of the case of Lieut.-Col. Home, accompanied by observations, in the course of which he said, though he should fail of succeeding with the House of Commons, he had no doubt of making an adequate impression on the country. In 1803 Col. Home entered the army, and from that time was present with his regiment, the 3d Foot-Guards, in all the great actions fought in the Peninsula. He then stated certain transactions which Col. Home had with Messrs. Salisbury, Dumergue, and Keate, and some other persons, in a mining concern, of which he was a partner, the result was that the Colonel took legal advice, which was, that his brother should draw bills which he should accept, with a view of bringing the whole concern to a full and equitable settlement of their affairs. Upon one of the bills thus drawn being presented for payment, a placard was stuck up about the streets; it drew the attention of the officers of his regiment. On the 26th of January a Court of Inquiry assembled, and on the 30th they put forth certain resolutions, stating "that Lieut.-Col. Home was a partner in the firm of Salisbury and Co." that he, had taken measures to avoid receiving personally the injunction of the Court of Chancery, and that Quarter-Master Weston did receive it as his representative. He met this charge as he had done the others, by saying that there was not a shadow of evidence in support of it. The next letter in order of time that he received was to acquaint him that the Commander-in-Chief, having taken the King's opinion, had to communicate, that His Majesty thought he could not be allowed to remain in the army. His commissions were sold—that was, his ensign's and lieutenant's, which he had purchased, yielding only 1,600l. but he received no consideration for the loss of his company. "This," said the Hon. Member, "was the termination of those strange proceedings, by which, after eighteen years of constant, hard, and glorious services, this officer was stripped of his profession, deeply injured in his fortune, and as far as the Crown could do, it deprived him of his character!"

LORD PALMERSTON, in reply to the motion and statements of the Hon. Member, observed that it was a most unusual thing to call on the House to interfere, in any way, with the proceedings of a court of inquiry. Col. Home had become a partner in a certain mining concern in 1814, by purchasing a number of shares; he undoubtedly made himself responsible for all the engagements of the firm. He found, some time after, that the speculation was not likely to be a profitable one, and he then endeavoured to extricate himself from it. The Noble Lord understood that Col. Home was perfectly aware of the mode he was pursuing; by employing his brother to draw bills, he virtually drew them himself. They were placed in the hands of umbrella-makers, comb-makers, sellers of cloth, &c. and brought into the market without any valuable consideration being given for them. At length these comb-makers, umbrella-makers, and cloth-sellers, fearful that the assets of the firm would be over-run, and that their bills would not be paid, applied to the Court of Chancery for an injunction, to restrain Colonel Home from giving further acceptances. The first notice the Commander-in-Chief had of these transactions was through the medium of a placard, posted about the streets, accusing Colonel Home of various facts. How was this answered? By a counter-placard—a singular mode of justification for a Lieut.-Colonel in the Guards. It was, in the first instance, the resolution of the Commander-in-Chief to bring him to a Court-martial; but when the Judge Advocate was applied to, he found the case so involved with other questions, and therefore he advised a Court of Inquiry. The Noble Lord was of opinion the King was well advised in the course which had been taken, and that there was not the slightest ground for the charges which the Hon. Gentleman had brought against the Court of Inquiry; he had therefore made out no sufficient case in support of his motion.

The motion was negatived.

Leave was given to Mr. WILMOT to bring in a Bill to amend the law respecting fisheries, and to improve the system of the Courts of Justice of the Colony of Newfoundland;—to Dr. LUSHINGTON to bring in a Bill to amend the criminal laws as it related to forgery of wills;—and to the LORD ADVOCATE to bring in a Bill for the better regulation of Sheriffs' Courts in Scotland.

GENERAL GASCOYNE moved for a copy of the warrant dated March 6, 1820, directing officers on half-pay, and widows and orphans of officers receiving allowances in Ireland, to be paid in Irish currency. Surely the residence of an intelligent and respectable community like naval and military officers on half-pay, and their families, in that country, was the very last reason that could excuse so serious a deduction from their incomes.

LORD PALMERSTON said, the reason of the individuals in question being paid in Irish currency was, that in the estimates for all the charge and services for Ireland, a deduction was made on this very account of difference between English and Irish currency.—The Noble Lord submitted a similar motion for copies of warrants, dated severally the 25th of October, 1812, and the 16th of May, 1815, relating to half-pay pensions.—Ordered.

On the motion of the CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER, leave was given to bring in a Bill to consolidate the Boards of Customs and Excise in Great Britain and Ireland.—The Prisons' Bill was passed.

WEDNESDAY.

The Speaker and the House attended in the other House to hear the Commission.

Petitions were presented from the Archdeacon and Clergy of St. Albans, against the Catholic Claims; from Kingston-upon-Hull, against Shop-rates.

THE LORD MAYOR presented a petition, signed by 1600 Bankers and other Inhabitants of London, against the Insolvent Act.

Mr. CROKER postponed his notice of motion, respecting the British Museum, until after the Easter holidays.

Mr. HUME presented a petition from Mary Anne Carlile, confined in Ilchester Jail. She had been prosecuted by a conspiracy of certain individuals calling themselves the Society for the Suppression of Vice. He was of opinion, that this Society was, in effect, one for the promotion rather than the suppression of vice; and he pledged himself to make good his assertion when he brought the subject forward upon a specific motion. The petitioner was convicted, without having been heard in the whole of her defence. He (Mr. H.) was not aware of any law by which people were to be put down in their defence by Judges, merely because the Christian religion was a part of the law of the land. He had read many Books of Controversy; on Deism, Atheism, and other topics; but he had found no one written in language so temperate as that of the Defence of Mary Anne Carlile; and he thought the Judges had treated her with a severity not warranted by the principles of English justice. The Hon. Member then said, she was unable to pay the fine (1000l.) and she prayed to be released.

SIR THOMAS ACLAND defended the Society, of which he was a Member, from the observations of the Hon. Gent. With respect to Mary Anne Carlile, he saw no repentance in her conduct, which was only a part of the systematic course of blasphemy, which had long been pursued by her family, of whom Richard Carlile was the chief.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL defended the conduct of the Judges. He had to complain of the manner in which Judges and Courts were attacked in that House upon the presentation of petitions.

Mr. RICARDO had looked at the Practice of the Courts of Law with great dissatisfaction, as to the manner in which it treated religious subjects. The very first question that was asked a witness was, whether he believed in a future state? and if he said no, he was incapacitated from giving evidence, because he was an honest man.

Mr. SECRETARY PEEL said, the real question was, whether they should allow a system to go on which had for its object the undermining of Christianity. The Hon. Member (Mr. Ricardo) had complained of those forms of our Courts which required a witness to declare his belief in a future state. What were they to depend upon, if he were not bound by that belief?

SIR F. BURDETT thought the case one of most gross and monstrous oppression.

Mr. WILBERFORCE contended, that the Society had rendered much service to mankind.—The petition was laid on the table and ordered to be printed.

Mr. SECRETARY CANNING made a similar explanation to that of the Earl of Liverpool, on the subject of Foreign treaties.

LORD A. HAMILTON obtained leave to bring in a Bill to abolish the inferior Commissary Courts in Scotland. The Noble Lord, afterwards moved an humble Address to His Majesty, praying that he would be graciously pleased to give directions that there should be laid before the House a copy of any warrant issued by the Crown in the year 1822, authorizing any person or persons to act as Magistrates in the borough of Inverness, in the room of those recently displaced by process of law.—The motion was opposed by the LORD ADVOCATE, on the ground that the conduct of the present Magistrates had been in every respect most exemplary.—The House divided—For the motion, 31—Against it, 49.

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER moved "That an humble Address be presented, praying His Majesty would be graciously pleased to give directions for raising a monument in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, to John, Earl of St. Vincent, in honour of his distinguished exertions in the service of his country, and as a memorial of his glorious and immortal victories over the Spanish fleet, on the 14th of February, 1797, off Cape St. Vincent;" and also, for a monument in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, to Adam Viscount Duncan, in testimony of his distinguished exertions in the service of the country, and as a memorial of his victory gained over the Dutch fleet in October, 1797."—Agreed to, nem. dis.

On the motion of the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER, the Military and Naval Pensions Bill was read a second time, and ordered to be committed on Thursday the 10th of April.

THURSDAY.

Petitions were presented from Sunderland, and from the Vestry of Marylebone and St. Pancras parishes, praying for the repeal of the Duty on Coals carried coastwise. Sir J. Graham, Mr. Curwen, Col. Bagwell, Lord W. Fitzgerald, Sir J. Newport, Mr. Alderman Smith, Mr. F. Lewis, Mr. Wilson, and Mr. Phillips, supported the prayer for the repeal. Mr. Littleton contended that the repeal would be highly injurious to persons having large property in coal mines.

The Irish Counties Treasurer's Bill was ordered for further consideration on the 14th of April.

Mr. COURTENAY brought in a Bill to amend the Laws relating to the maintenance and employment of the poor.—Ordered to be read a second time on the 28th of April.

Mr. SYKES brought in a Bill to amend the Act relating to Magistrates.—Ordered to be read a second time on the 14th of April.

SIR R. WILSON presented a petition from certain individuals resident in the Borough, expressing their opinion in favour of the Abolition of Slavery.—The petition was laid on the table.

Mr. SECRETARY CANNING moved that the House do adjourn to the 10th of April.

LORD A. HAMILTON moved an amendment, by proposing it should adjourn to the 7th of April. The Noble Lord was induced to propose such amendment in consideration of the state of Europe, and because the adjournment moved by the Right Hon. Secretary was an extraordinary proposition. He did not wish to participate with his Hon. Friends in the compliments they had paid to Ministers for their change of policy. The Holy Alliance was per se a public nuisance, exciting the disgust of all free men, and laying the seeds of civil war in the countries they pretend to pacify. He wished to know in what situation was our Representative placed with regard to the Alliance of Verona, in respect of Spain.

Mr. J. Macdonald and Mr. Warre expressed similar opinions.

Mr. SECRETARY CANNING did not think the House would expect him to be tempted into a premature discussion. As to the question put to him on a former occasion, his answer was, that there did exist stipulations, by which the contracting parties were bound to exclude the family of Buonaparte from the Throne of France. Another case had been supposed, that of a revolutionary movement. In this case the Allies had bound themselves to communicate and consult with each other, but without any anticipation of the result of such communication. These stipulations were contained in the Treaty of November, 1815. It had been thought right on the part of His Majesty's Plenipotentiary, to sign a declaration, which was forwarded to the Allied Powers, and which set forth that the stipulation which bound his Britannic Majesty to resist with arms the return of Buonaparte to the throne of France, was not to be understood as binding His Majesty to concur in imposing any other Government on the French people.

The motion was carried.

The Land-Tax Commissioners' Names Bill, was committed for the 10th of April.

The Report of the Committee on the Addresses to the Crown for Monuments to the memory of Earl of St. Vincent and Lord Duncan, was brought up.

Mr. HUME complained of the practice of extorting money for viewing Westminster Abbey. The Report was agreed to.

On the third reading of the Innkeepers' Bill,

Mr. BERNAL inquired if it was intended that the Venders of the New Beer should be liable to have Soldiers billetted upon them, and wished to know whether their lower windows was to be exempted from the duty?

Mr. LUSHINGTON said the Venders of the New Beer would not be liable to have Soldiers billetted on them. It was not proposed to allow them any exemption from the Window Tax.

THE LORD ADVOCATE OF SCOTLAND gave notice, that shortly after the recess he would bring in a Bill for the more perfect regulation of Parish Registers in Scotland.

The Report of the Beer Duties Bill was ordered to be received on April 10.

The Grants of Aids Bill was passed.

Mr. LUSHINGTON brought in a Bill to amend the laws respecting Forgery.—Ordered to be read a second time on the 17th of April.

The House then adjourned till the 10th of April.

Valuable Standard Works on Gardening, Botany, &c. published by Longman Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

AN ENCYCLOPÆDIA OF GARDENING; comprising the Theory and Practice of Horticulture, Floriculture, Arboriculture, and Landscape-Gardening; including all the latest improvements, a general History of Gardening in all Countries; and a Statistical View of its present State, with suggestions for its future progress, in the British Isles. By J. C. LOUDON, F.L.S. H.S. &c. In 1 large volume, 8vo. of 1500 pages, closely printed, with 600 engravings on wood, price 2l. 10s.

2. SYLVA FLORIFERA, the SHRUBBERY: containing an Historical and Botanical Account of the Flowering Shrubs and Trees, which now ornament the Shrubbery, the Park, and Rural Scenes in general. By Henry Phillips, F.H.S. Author of the History of Fruits, known in Great Britain, and the History of Cultivated Vegetables. In 2 vols. 8vo. 1l. 1s. To appear early in April.

3. The DIFFERENT MODES of Cultivating the PINE APPLE, from its first introduction into Europe, to the late improvements of T. A. Knight, Esq. By a Member of the Horticultural Society. 8vo. 9s. boards, with 74 wood-engravings, exhibiting the best plans of pine-stoves and pits.

4. LECTURES on the ELEMENTS of BOTANY. Containing the Descriptive Anatomy of those Organs, on which the Growth and Preservation of Vegetable depend. By Anthony Todd Thomson, F.L.S. Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, &c. &c. In 8vo. price 11. 8s. boards, illustrated with plates and numerous wood-cuts, vol. I.

5. A TREATISE ON THE CULTURE AND MANAGEMENT OF FRUIT TREES, in which a new method of Pruning and Training is fully described. To which is added, a new and improved edition of the Observations on the Diseases, Defects, and Injuries in all Kinds of Fruit and Forest Trees; with an Account of a particular Method of Cure. Published by Order of Government. With references to Figures of the Fruit. By William Forsyth, F.A.S. and F.S.A. In 8vo. sixth edition, corrected and improved, with plates and a portrait, 13s. bds.

6. ELEMENTS of AGRICULTURAL CHEMISTRY, in a Course of Lectures for the Board of Agriculture, delivered between 1802 and 1812. By Sir H. Davy, Bart. F.R.S. M.P.A. &c. In 8vo. the third edition, with 10 engravings, 15s. boards.

7. A TREATISE on the CULTURE of the VINE; with new Hints on the formation of Vineyards in England. Also, A TREATISE on the CULTURE of the PINE-APPLE, and the management of the Hot House. By W. Speechly. In 8vo. the third edition, with plates, price 18s. boards.

8. The GARDENER'S REMEMBRANCER; exhibiting the Nature of Vegetable Life and the Effects of Vegetation; and containing practical methods of Gardening, both in the natural way, and in the artificial forcing scheme; adapted either to small or large gardens, and to every climate and soil. By James Maephail, upwards of 20 years Gardener and Steward to the Earl of Liverpool. In 12mo. price 7s. 6d. boards, the second edition.

9. The GARDENER'S KALENDAR; or, Monthly Directory of Operations in every Branch of Horticulture. By Walter Nicol. The fourth edition, in one large vol 8vo. price 14s. boards.

10. The PLANTER'S KALENDAR; or, the Nurseryman and Forester's Guide. By the late Walter Nicol. Edited and completed by Edward Sang, Nurseryman. Second edition, in 1 large vol. 8vo. price 15s. boards.

11. The VILLA GARDENER DIRECTORY; or, Monthly Index of Work to be done in Town and Villa Gardens, Parterres, &c. By Walter Nicol. The third edition, in foolscap 8vo. price 7s. 6d. boards.

12. A GRAMMAR of BOTANY, illustrative of artificial, as well as natural classification, with an explanation of Jussieu's System. By Sir J. E. Smith, M.D. F.L.S. &c. President of the Linnean Society. In 8vo. with 21 plates, containing 277 figures of Plants, besides many of their various parts and organs, price 12s. plain; or coloured impressions, price 1l. 6s. boards.

13. An INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of PHYSIOLOGICAL and SYSTEMATICAL BOTANY. By Sir J. E. Smith, M.D. F.R.S. &c. &c. In 8vo. the fourth edition, with 15 plates, price 14s. boards, coloured 11. 8s. boards.

14. COMPENDIUM FLORÆ BRITANNICÆ. Auctore Jacobo Edvardo Smith, Equ. Aur. M.D. Societatis Linnæanæ Præside, &c. &c. The third edition, corrected, and continued to the end of the third volume of the Flora Britannica, with all new-discovered plants from the last English Botany, and references to that work throughout. In 12mo. price 7s. 6d boards.

15. CONVERSATIONS on BOTANY. With 21 engravings. the fourth edition enlarged; in 1 vol. 12mo. price 7s. 6d. plain, or 10s. 6d. coloured.

16. A TREATISE on the CULTURE of the APPLE and PEAR, and on the Manufacture of Cider and Perry. With an Appendix. By T. A. Knight, Esq. F.R.S. and P.S. President of the Horticultural Society of London. In 12mo. the fifth edition price 4s. boards.

Just published, in 22 vols. 18mo. sold together, in a case, price 3l. 13s. 6d. or separately,

AN EASY COURSE of DOMESTIC EDUCATION; comprising a Series of Elementary Treatises on the various Branches of Juvenile instruction; together with Advice to Parents and Tutors for conducting the Education of Children. Designed for the Use of Families and of Schools. By WILLIAM JILLARD HOLT, Author of the New Pantheon, &c. London: printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown. Paternoster-row.

The Course comprises the following Works, which are sold separately:

	s. d.		s. d.
1. Advice to Parents and Tutors	3 0	13. Universal History	4 6
2. English Spelling Book	1 6	14. History of England	2 6
3. Introductory Reading Book	2 6	15. Sciences and Arts, 2 vols.	3 0
4. English Reading Book, Prose	3 6	16. Natural History	6 0
5. ——, Verse	3 0	17. French Grammar	4 0
6. English Grammar	2 6	18. —— Exercises	3 6
7. Exercises to ditto	2 0	19. —— Key to ditto	2 6
8. Key to ditto	2 6	20. —— Conversations and Vocabulary	2 6
9. English Dictionary	2 6	21. —— Reading Book, Prose and Verse	4 6
10. Epitome of the Holy Bible	2 6
11. Geography	2 6
12. Arithmetic	2 6

Just published, in 4to. with numerous plates, from drawings made under the Author's inspection, price 3l. in bds. Part I. of NUMISMATA ORIENTALIA ILLUSTRATA.—The ORIENTAL COINS, Ancient and Modern, of his Collection, described and historically illustrated. By WILLIAM MARSDEN, F.R.S. &c. &c.—Printed for the Author, and sold by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London; and Parbury, Allen, and Leadenhall-street.

ANNUAL BIOGRAPHY FOR 1823.—Just published, in 8vo. 15s. boards,

THE ANNUAL BIOGRAPHY and OBITUARY for the Year 1823. Containing Memoirs of celebrated Men who have died in 1821-22. Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had, Vols. I to 6 of the above Work, price 15s. each.

It is requested that early applications may be made for complete Sets, as several of the Volumes are nearly out of print, and a few Copies only remain for sale.

THE FOURTH EDITION.—Ornamented with an elegantly Engraved Title, Price 3s. 6d. Bound in Black,

THE NEW DEVOUT COMMUNICANT, according to The Church of England: containing an Account of the Institution; Prayers and Meditations before and after the Administration, and a Companion at the Lord's Table. By the Rev. JAMES FORD, B.D. Minister of St. Lawrence, Ipswich.—Printed for and sold by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane; Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; G. and J. Robinson; and Hatchard and Son, London; and H. Mozley, Derby. Where may be had,

An inferior Edit. on 3od, on common Paper, Price 2s. in Sheep.

This Edition has been printed at the request of several Clergymen, who are desirous of distributing this little Work among their poorer Parishioners.

A Century of CHRISTIAN PRAYERS, on Faith, Hope, and Charity; with a Morning and Evening Devotion. By the same Author. Price 8s. in boards.

NEW TRAGEDY.—Just published, in 8vo. price 4s. stitched, as performing at Covent Garden Theatre, Second Edition of JULIAN, a Tragedy, in Five Acts. By MARY RUSSELL MITFORD.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

NEW GUIDE TO PARIS.

Just published, embellished with a Map of Paris, and Eight Engravings, price 9s. boards, or 10s. 6d neatly bound, a New Edition of GALIGNANI'S PARIS GUIDE; or, Stranger's Companion through the French Metropolis; containing a full and accurate Description of every object of interest in the capital, &c. To which is prefixed, a Plan for viewing Paris in a week; also a Comparative Scale of Weights and Measures, and Value of Coins; a Directory of Parisian Tradesmen, &c.—Tenth Edition.—Published by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London.—Also, lately published, NOUVEAU MANUEL DU VOYAGEUR; or, The Traveller's Pocket Companion: containing Copious and Familiar Conversations in English, French, and Italian; together with a complete Vocabulary, &c. By Mr. Boldoni, Secretary Interpreter to the Royal Court of Cassation, &c. Third Edition, price 6s. 6d. half-bound.

DR. JOHNSON'S RASSELAS TRANSLATED INTO ITALIAN.

Just published, in 12mo. price 6s. 6d. boards,

RASSELAS, PRINCIPE D'ABISSINIA: Tradotto dall' Inglese del Signor Dottor JOHNSON.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

"We have no doubt that "Rasselas, Principe d'Abissinia" will not only afford an agreeable and a beneficial amusement to the Italian scholar in England, but that it will be received in Italy as a valuable accession to the literature of that country."—Literary Gazette, March 22, 1823.

Just published, in 8vo. price 12s. boards,

THE LUCUBRATIONS OF HUMPHREY RAVELIN, Esq. late Major of the * * Regiment of Infantry.

"We'll e'en to't like French falconers, fly at any thing we see."—Shakspeare.

Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

"The best papers in the volume are unquestionably those of a general character. The Essays on Modern Extravagance and Charity are evidently the work of a man who has read life with an eye of wisdom. The observations are faithful to fact, and the remarks either ingenious or sound."—Literary Gazette, March 22, 1823.

Just published, in 2 vols. 8vo. price 21s. boards,

JOURNAL of a TOUR in FRANCE, SWITZERLAND, and ITALY, during the years 1819, 20, and 21. By MARIANNE COLSTON. Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane. Also, by the same Author, FIFTY LITHOGRAPHIC PRINTS, illustrative of the above Tour, from Original Drawings, taken in Italy, the Alps, and the Pyrenees. Large folio price 21. boards.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

M.B. will see next week that we have attended to his wish. Upon any other point touching the same subject generally, we shall be most ready to meet his inclinations, both from a sense of duty as public journalists, and from our personal feelings of esteem and regard.

The curious papers and correspondence with respect to Mr. P. are safely received; but it must have been extraordinary carelessness in that quarter, which could have suffered such very confidential matters to have got wind.

All our other correspondents must remain unanswered.

PRICE OF STOCKS AT THE CLOSE, SATURDAY.

There has been a good deal doing in the Money Market during the past week, and the fluctuations have been considerable. The reduction of the Bank Stock Interest has thrown a considerable sum of money into the market, and caused a demand for Government Stock. Spanish Bonds have been fluctuating. To-day Consols for the Account opened at 74¼, and closed at 74¼.

3 per Cent. Red. . .	India Bonds 24
3 per Cent. Consols 74¼ ¾ ¼	Exchequ. Bills, 2d 1000l. 9 11
3½ per Cent. ditto . .	Ditto . . . . . 500l.
4 per Cent.	Small . . . . .
New 4 per Cent. . . 94¼ ¾ ¼	Con. for Acc. 74¾ ¾ ¼
Long Annuities .

Letters from Paris quote the prices of French Stock as follow:—

FRENCH FUNDS, March 27.

5 per Ct. Con. 22 Sept. .	78-40	Bank Sh. Div. 1 July
Recon. Div. 22 Sept. . . .		Ex. Lond. 1mo.	25-50 3mo.

The Neapolitan 5 per Cents. Div. were at 66¾

On the First of April, will be Published, Part I. of PICTURESQUE VIEWS on the SEVERN: (To be continued on the First of every succeeding Month until completed, in Eight Parts, Royal Quarto, and Royal Octavo) from Original Designs of the late MR. SAMUEL IRELAND, Author of Picturesque Views on the Thames, Avon, Medway and Wye, with Illustrations, Historical and Topographical. By MR. HARRAL. This work, the intended publication of which was announced some years ago, and suspended only in consequence of the lamented death of the artist, has been long sought for, as a companion to the late Mr. Ireland's Thames, Medway, Avon, and Wye, and as completing the series of that gentleman's Picturesque Delineations of River Scenery. Mr. Ireland's Designs, in number, Fifty-two, embrace the Scenery of the Severn, from the source of that river, on Plynlimmon Hill, and in its progress through the counties of Montgomery, Salop, Worcester, and Gloucester, till it falls into the Atlantic Sea, at King Road, Bristol. These Views are now submitted to the public, coloured, or on tinted paper, in the first style of lithographic execution, so as to present perfect fac-similia of the original drawings. The respective Parts of the Publication (price Fifteen Shillings each, in Royal Quarto, coloured, or Seven Shillings and Sixpence, in Royal Octavo, plain) will alternately comprise Seven Views, with Seventy-two Pages of Letter-press, and Six Views, with Eighty Pages of Letter-press. Thus, the Plates, with their connected Historical and Topographical Illustrations, will form Two handsome Volumes, corresponding with Mr. Ireland's preceding works. The accompanying Text, historically and topographically illustrative of the Cities, Towns, and Villages—of the Churches, Castles, Seats, and other distinguished Buildings—which enrich the natural Scenery of the Severn, will be arranged by Mr. Harral, from the Manuscript Notes of the late Mr. Ireland, taken in the course of his tour: from the original communications of resident individuals: and from various other sources of actual survey and literary research.—Orders are received by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Marin-lane, London; and all Booksellers.

JOHN BULL.

LONDON, MARCH 30.

THE admirers of revolutions will perceive that it is not the cause of liberty in Spain, which animates the English Radicals, Liberals, Carbonari, Descamisados, and Landaburians—deep laid plots are partly developing themselves, and on the eve of exploding, when the nation, at least that part of it which has been lending itself to the plausible cries of LIBERTY and FREEDOM, will be undeceived as to the real intentions of the friends of the people—all over the world.

It would ill become us, to publish, at the present moment, information which we have received upon this subject; but we are inclined to believe that the denouement now in progress, will disclose to the world, scenes and actors, which will cause the greatest surprise to those, who take tavern orators for Patriots, and waggon spouters for Philanthropists.

The COURIER of Friday has an observation, touching one part of the affairs to which we allude, which, although we ourselves decline making the slightest remark upon it, we take leave to quote.

Speaking of the existence of a general confederacy to destroy legitimate Governments, and of the sailing from London of the brig FANNY, laden with tri-coloured flags, and cockades, and conspirators, and of the fact, that at the same period carriages laden with similar commodities left Paris—the COURIER adds—

"There is one remarkable occurrence which has attended the disclosure of these circumstances, and we shall advert to it without comment: it is this—that at the very moment when it was apparent that conspiracies were on foot to foment a rebellion in France for the purpose of bringing about a change of dynasty in that country, questions were pertinaciously pressed in the British Parliament to ascertain whether we, in conjunction with our Allies, were pledged by the faith of treaties to maintain the Bourbon family on the throne."

Another week may do much in the way of disclosure. In the mean time we have only to remark, that the unfortunate KING OF SPAIN has left his capital, amidst the mockery of acclamations—guarded by six thousand men.

IT is with feelings of the deepest regret we announce to our readers the fact, that JOSEPH HUME, ESQ. M.D. and A.S.S. is not the new LORD RECTOR of the University of Aberdeen. He calculated upon the certainty of his election; and, as usual, was mistuken in HIS CALCULATION!

A CASE OF UNDOUBTED WHIGGERY.

Our readers may remember that last Sunday the following article and quotation appeared in this paper:—

"HALF PAY.

"The following article on the subject of Foreign Half Pay, appeared in Wednesday's CHRONICLE:—

'A Correspondent informs us that the DUC DE GUICHE, who has quitted Paris with his Royal Highness of ANGOULEME, on the Holy 'Crusade against the Spaniards, as Commander-in-Chief of the Light 'Cavalry of the Royal Guard, is at this very moment in the British 'Army, and in the receipt of Half Pay as Captain of the Tenth Hussars.

'Another Correspondent expresses his astonishment that the item of 'Foreign Half-pay was, in the debate on the Army Estimates, passed 'over without remark. He affirms (and no man has had better opportunities of informing himself on the subject,) that one half of the officers 'composing the French Guard receive English Half Pay, and every 'three months, on the 25th and successive days, the British Consul's 'Office is crowded with men who come to have their certificates signed, 'and whom you see the following day mounting guard at the Tuileries. These are the men to whom the Government look chiefly up 'for support in their iniquitous system, and who are now on their 'march to destroy liberty in Spain.'

"Nothing can be more true than the information of the first Correspondent of the CHRONICLE; nothing more natural than the surprise of the second. We also wonder that, while such men as HUME and HENRY GREY BENNET sit in the House of Commons, such flagrant conduct on the part of the Ministers is passed over in silence.

"We are certainly not so much surprized as the writers of the above articles appear to be; and they will perhaps abate their astonishment when they know that this DUC DE GUICHE, who is on his march to destroy liberty in Spain, and to whom our Government look for support in their iniquitous system, is the brother of the COUNTESS OF TANKERVILLE, the sister-in-law of MR. HENRY GREY BENNET. We wonder that the CHRONICLE did not know that—poor PERRY would not have made such a blunder."

IN the CHRONICLE of Friday appears the following:

"On Wednesday, the 19th, we observed that we had been informed, by a correspondent, 'that the DUC DE GUICHE, who has quitted Paris with his Royal Highness of ANGOULEME, on the Holy Crusade against the Spaniards, as Commander-in-Chief of the light cavalry of the royal guard, is at this very moment in the British army, and in the receipt of half-pay as Captain of the 10th Hussars.' The John Bull of Sunday last laid hold of this notion, and in its usual tone of personal abuse and malignant falsehood, made it the foundation of a calumny against Mr. GREY BENNET, who was referred to by name as having been induced to keep silence, when the subject of Foreign Half-pay came before the House, because the above officer is brother to the COUNTESS OF TANKERVILLE. We have authority to state, that the DUC DE GUICHE does not receive, and never has received, one shilling from the Half-pay List in the English Establishment, and that the whole story is a matter of pure invention. In justice, however, to the correspondent whose communication we noticed, we subjoin a passage in his letter, which qualified his statement respecting the half-pay, but which want of room compelled us to omit:—'It is a notorious fact, and proveable to any one who will take the trouble to consult an Army List, that this same DUC DE GUICHE is at this very moment in the British army, that in fact he is in the receipt of half-pay as Captain of the 10th Hussars. The Captain may or may not have drawn of late for his half-pay. I rather think it will be found, on inspection, he has not, but legally he is not on that account the less entitled to it.'"

This is indeed a melancholy exposure of the CHRONICLE. BENNETT, foaming with rage at the idea, that the DUKE de GUICHE, his near connection, should in his present situation be receiving English half-pay, insists upon the contradiction of the CHRONICLE'S statement; to soothe his feelings and gratify their own, the people of the CHRONICLE lug in a stale allusion to our "personal abuse" and "malignant falsehood," being—let it be observed—compelled to shew themselves up, not only as the circulators of a "malignant falsehood," but, as suppressors of the latter part of a communication, which at least qualified, if it did not entirely destroy, the value of the former part.

When we alluded to BENNETT—much as we hate and despise his politics and hypocrisy—we certainly never meant, that the paltry half-pay of a Captain in the Army could actuate him in his conduct in Parliament; and as to the DUKE de GUICHE himself, a more amiable, unassuming nobleman, a more kind-hearted, good-natured person does not exist; his manners and conduct during his stay in the 10th, were such as endeared him to every body who knew him, and he quitted the English service universally regretted.

It is not our fault that the CHRONICLE people did not know his connection with the TANKERVILLES; they laid hold of him as a connection of the BOURBONS, as one of the ancient legitimate nobility, and inserted just so much of a communication as stated him to be in the receipt of English half-pay; which they not only are compelled by BENNETT to declare false, but in justice to their Correspondent on the other hand, they are obliged to add that his communication contained this passage—"The Captain may or may not have "drawn of late for his half-pay—I rather think it will be "found on inspection, that HE HAS NOT."

Be it observed, that the CHRONICLE says it omitted this passage for want of room. If the reader will turn to the CHRONICLE in which the article appeared, it will be found in the very largest type used by that paper; and that all which is omitted for want of room, consists of three lines and five words over; and this wretched exposed paper is that which upon this special occasion calls its "information" "a notion," and charges us with "personal abuse" and "malignant falsehood."

We say, as we say to all such calumnious aspersions—shew us either the one or the other?

Is it personal abuse to say that the DUKE de GUICHE—one of the "Flowers of France" is the brother of the COUNTESS of TANKERVILLE—is it personal abuse, to say that the lovely COUNTESS of TANKERVILLE is the sister of the DUKE de GUICHE?—we confess that mentioning the connexion of the House of GRAMMONT with the BENNETTS may be ungenerous to the former, but it certainly is not "malignant"—that it is a "falsehood" it is most false to say—for it is the TRUTH and nothing but the truth.

We feel for the CHRONICLE, as we do for all people who write under controul, for we think the exposure of such a trick as cancelling one half of a communication to give validity to the other half is not likely to bolster up their sinking Journal—we feel for the CHRONICLE too, that it is obliged to declare, that, which it stated in large letters, and with great importance, as fact, a little week before to be "a matter of pure invention"—and we feel for the CHRONICLE that to please the man who has forced them into this exposure, they should endeavour to charge us with "personal abuse" in a case where it does not exist, merely to atone for the "malignant falsehoods" which in their ignorance of decent society they have levelled at the family of one of their Patrons.

While we are on this subject,—we have no desire to speak of ourselves more than seems necessary,—but we cannot help noticing an observation said to have been made (in the CHRONICLE'S report of debates of last Wednesday) by MR. CHARLES WYNNE, in allusion to our trial with MR. GREY BENNETT.

MR. WYNNE is made to have said that "MR. BENNETT "very properly came forward to vindicate the character of "a female against one of these unmanly calumniators."

If MR. WYNNE chuses to butter up MR. BENNETT he has a perfect right to do so; but we should have thought, under all the circumstances, and knowing society as well as MR. WYNNE does, the less said the better—we will simply quote upon MR. WYNNE the opinion of MR. O'MEARA, one of MR. GREY BENNETT'S party, upon a particular subject, which is somewhat apposite:—

"He had two courses open to him" (says O'MEARA speaking of another person) "in a Court of Law; one by a civil action against me for defamation, by which the truth would be told; the other by a criminal proceeding, which excludes all proof of the truth. He has chosen the latter. The public will perceive why! What must that man be who is afraid of the truth? What must that man be who skulks even from a Grand Jury and resorts to a criminal information?"—Vide MR. O'MEARA'S Letter, Morning Chronicle, March 2, 1823.

We make no observation upon this doctrine, but we certainly feel that MR. WYNNE'S volunteer attack upon us seemed not quite necessary—It is the cant of all the Ministers and their creatures, down to MR. MURRAY, the bookseller, to disown us—God help them.—We have, from the day we started this Paper, most carefully and most strenuously disowned them—we support them because we have faith in them, and shall continue to do so as long as their conduct pleases us, and no longer—but we do not see why MR. WYNNE should go out of his way to join in a cry, set up by a party which he has left—and we can tell MR. WYNNE that our conduct is founded on principle; that we are TORIES at heart, and have been, ever since we knew the distinction of parties—that we have never changed sides, nor ever shall—although, as he perhaps may know, strong inducements have recently been held out to us to do so.

We are not very surprised at the virulence of the CHRONICLE—its writhings and twistings are natural enough—but we scorn (and we are backed in our feelings by some of the highest and noblest of our countrymen) that system of "Conciliation" and "Liberality" which temporizes with the bitterest enemies of the KING and CONSTITUTION, by affecting to depreciate the exertions of the warmest, purest, and most active of their friends.

WE read last week an account in the newspapers of [illegible] men who rode their horses to death in a race of inconsiderable length, and of a chace, wherein several horses were also killed; particularly that on which the whipper-in rode, and we read with disgust that it was called a glorious day's sport. The following paragraph, which has appeared in all the daily papers, seems, however, to transcend those, which we before noticed, and we feel it a duty to point it out to the attention of those who summon carmen and hackney-coachmen to answer charges of cruelty to animals:—

"The Berkeley Stag Hounds threw off on Saturday at Hillingdon heath, near Uxbridge, when a very whimsical occurrence took place with the Stag. After a burst of about half an hour, the timid animal crossed the river, and returned to nearly the spot from whence he started, when finding himself hard pressed by the hounds, he leaped over the wall of a gentleman's garden, near Hillingdon, and sprung into the dining-room window open, sprung into the room, where two ladies were sitting at work. Their alarm was so great that one of them went into fits, and fears were entertained lest premature labour would have been the consequence, the lady being in the family way. The stag took his place under the sideboard, and was dislodged thence with considerable great difficulty. LORD BERKELEY and one of his sons, LORD CLANWILLIAM, the Hon. DOUGLAS KINNAIRD, MR. TOWNLEY and upwards of 100 gentlemen, many of them of distinction, were in at the hunt."

We are very far from insinuating, (as indeed nobody can suppose we intend to do)—that men, hunting, have the power to direct the course of a stag, but we certainly do mean to say, that after such a run was over, the publication of an account of it, in which the terror of two helpless women, and the probable death of one of them, as well as that of the child, is called a whimsical occurrence, reflects nothing but discredit and disgrace upon its author.

There is a heartlessness, a levity, a want of feeling, in the whole affair, which excites the strongest possible sentiments. That London newspapers, having a character to lose, should have given place to such a statement, we are surprized to say, and we find it has actually been in other papers than the MORNING CHRONICLE, whence we copy it.

MR. KEMBLE.

"WE are happy to find that a meeting of Noblemen and Gentlemen has been held, at which it was resolved that a monument to that actor and accomplished Gentleman shall be erected either in St. Paul's or Westminster Abbey. The EARL of ABERDEEN presided at the meeting, and among the names of the Committee who are appointed to superintend the management of the thing, we observe the following:

"DUKE of BEDFORD, DUKE of DEVONSHIRE, DUKE of NORTHUMBERLAND, MARQUIS of HERTFORD, EARL of ABERDEEN, Lord HOLLAND, Right Hon. G. CANNING, SIR C. LONG, SIR J. MACINTOSH, THOMAS LAWRENCE, R. HEBER, ESQ. &c. &c.

"Subscriptions are received at COUTTS' and DRUMMOND'S, and 'in consequence,' it is observed in one of the Resolutions, 'that a great number of individuals who may probably be desirous of uniting in a last tribute to the memory of one from whose exertions they have so often experienced instruction and delight, it is proposed, with a view of rendering this concurrence as general as possible, that the amount of each subscription should be as low as may be consistent with the attainment of the object.'"

We have no doubt but that the country will give unequivocal testimony of its feeling upon the occasion.

WHAT fellows those reporters are! only conceive, that in the Debates of Wednesday night, they have got MR. RICARDO'S name stuck to a speech about Christianity!

EAST INDIA COLLEGE.

All the nonsense and absurdity which have been broached upon the subject of this Institution, by the silly folks who have spoiled children have suffered the penalty of their undisciplined and ungentlemanly conduct, and by such liberal supporters of our national establishments, as MESSRS. HUME, DOUGLAS KINNAIRD and Co., now stand officially exposed by the following Document, which has just been placed in our hands.

It will be perceived, that the Episcopal visitor—who wholly unconnected with the establishment, except in cases of appeal—does not confine himself to the mere breach of the statutes, which the Students of this particular College are sworn to obey, but extends his observation to the delinquents as being guilty of "misconduct, totally inconsistent WITH AN "ACADEMICAL DISCIPLINE and SUBORDINATION, and CONSEQUENTLY SUBVERSIVE THEREOF; and that they have CONSEQUENTLY "INCURRED THE PENALTY OF EXPULSION!"

Is it then to be endured that a body of men—the elite of our Universities—no less distinguished by their intellectual and scientific pre-eminence than by their knowledge of the world and general character, should be banded about in public meetings, and through a hired press, as oppressive, ignorant tyrants, incapable of discerning right from wrong, and as acting with capricious violence against "innocent and well-"offending young men?" We have more consideration for the character of those who have embarked in this shameful system of writing down a public Institution, in order to screen their own want of judgment in the previous education of their children, than they appear to have for it themselves, when they traffic with the hirelings of the press, and commit themselves to measures, which would entail upon them disgrace, if laid open to the world. We shall content ourselves with this hint, even to a certain Baronet, intimating to him, that we are fully possessed of all his literary haltings upon this occasion; and that it would be as well for him to reflect, that had he entertained or broached the principles which he has recently hacknied through pamphlets and newspapers—his EXTRAORDINARY elevation would have been more than problematical!

With respect to HUME, we can only despise the vulgar and ignorant prejudice entertained by the man against every species of literature, or mode of attaining it. But there is something so ludicrous in such a being setting himself up as Candidate for the Rector's Chair, of even a SCOTCH UNIVERSITY, where degrees are bought and sold, that, if the thing had not actually occurred, and some witless "red-shanked lads—future candidates probably for expulsion from Haileybury College—"hurled up their greasy caps" in his favour, we could not, even in these times of NIL ADMIRARI, have given credit to so monstrous and gross a piece of folly.

The Directors are playing a low, shabby, and intriguing game; but they may be assured we have our eyes upon them, and in duty bound to the public, shall suffer NO HUMBUG to be played off, without a proper accompaniment.

"The BISHOP of LONDON, appointed Visitor of the East India College by the Statutes thereof, has received the Appeals of FLINT, LAWRENCE, ROWLEY, TAYLOR, and WATTS, late students of the said College, complaining of sentences of expulsion therefrom, pronounced against them by the College Council. He has likewise received the Answers of the College Council to the said Appeals and Complaints, and also the Replies of the Appellants to the said Answers.

"Having duly weighed and considered these several documents, his Visitor finds himself compelled to declare his conviction, founded in no small degree upon the admissions of the Appellants themselves, that they have all of them been parties to a conspiracy, originating in the most erroneous and unwarrantable notions respecting their own relative situations in the College, and pursued by a series of gross and contumelious outrages, committed against the governing members of the Society, for the express purposes of annoyance and intimidation.

"The Visitor, attending to the general nature of the institution, and likewise to the particular body of statutes, under the authority and observance of which it is to be conducted, pronounces his judgment, that the several Appellants have, by a course of misconduct totally inconsistent with all academical discipline and subordination, and utterly subversive thereof, justly incurred the penalty of expulsion; and he therefore affirms the sentences pronounced to that effect by the Principal and Professors.

"He directs the College Council to insert a copy of this his decree in their proper Registry. (Signed) W. LONDON, Visitor.

Attested by me,

(Signed) CHRISTOPHER HODGSON, Notary Public.

London-House, March 18, 1823."

REVIEW OF LAS CASES' JOURNAL.

(Continued from our last.)

"You aim," says this BUONAPARTE to the ladies, "at equality, but that is madness—woman is our property, we are not hers; for, it is she that gives us children, and (curious philosophy) 'not we to her.' She is, therefore, the property of man, in the same manner as the fruit tree is the property of the gardener."

Oh! WOMEN! WOMEN! and was this the opinion of the EMPEROR NAPOLEON? We have, a saying here, that a tyrannical unsentimental husband reduces his wife to a mere animal; but BUONAPARTE went further, and degraded woman into a mere vegetable.

We cannot now wonder at what BUONAPARTE said of his two wives—whenever he happened to speak of them.

We shall not repeat, because we wish the public to read the whole book, a story of an intrigue, and of his having two natural children, during the time he was the husband of JOSEPHINE; (noticed at pp. 330, 331, Part I.) because the practical part of the thing is not half so bad as the deliberate recurrence to his wives at St. Helena.

He says—(part III, p. 298)—that "JOSEPHINE was jealous of him," (he had had two natural children, as we before said, since his marriage)—but says BUONAPARTE, "it was more the offspring of policy than of sentiment;—and she was so extravagant."

The horrid story of the divorce of this woman, devoted to him, (of which devotion innumerable instances are given by himself) is painted with all the political colouring likely to dazzle, but it stands out gross, infamous, disgusting, and appalling.

Part II, p. 302, we have this passage:—

"Another of these evenings, the Emperor was holding forth against the caprice of women—'Nothing' (said he) 'more clearly indicates 'rank, education, and good breeding among them, than evenness of 'temper, and the constant desire to please.' He added, that 'they 'were bound, by circumstances, to shew themselves, at all times, mistresses of themselves, and to be always attending to their parts upon the stage—HIS TWO WIVES' (he observed) 'had always been so.'"

"Some one ventured to observe, however, that MARIA LOUISA boasted that, 'whenever she desired any thing, however difficult, she 'had only to weep.' The Emperor laughed, and said, 'this was new 'to him—he might have suspected it of JOSEPHINE, but had no idea of 'it in MARIA LOUISA,'" &c.

MR. LEWIS GOLDSMITH, it appears, has recorded some story about a young lady, which we happen never to have seen, nor are we anxious to do so while we have BUONAPARTE to tell it his own way:—

"He recollected well, he said, that being at Bayonne, at the Chateau de Marach, when the city of Bourdeaux gave him a fete, he saw by the side of the Empress Josephine a charming countenance, of the most perfect beauty, with which he was forcibly struck. The impression she had made did not pass unperceived. She had been instructed and prepared beforehand, by some one nearly related to her, and GOD knows, said the Emperor, with what intentions."—"She was a MISS ——, afterwards MADAME ——, a new reader to the EMPRESS JOSEPHINE, whom she attended to the Chateau de Marach, and might very possibly have had great success. She already occupied NAPOLEON'S thoughts, when M. DE LAVALETTE, who was at the head of the secret department of the Post-office, destroyed the charm—he sent direct to the Emperor a letter addressed to this young lady—it was from her mother or her aunt," &c.—"On perusal of this, said the Emperor, all illusion vanished—the style, the hand, and, above all, her being a foreigner, produced an immediate disgust, and the pretty little Irish girl, as GOLDSMITH says, was in fact put into a post-chaise, and suddenly packed off to Paris," &c.—"Here I find," continued NAPOLEON, "a libel, imputing this to me as a crime, when in fact it was rather a virtue in me—an act of continence, of which I might perhaps boast with much more reason than the famous SCIPIO—but this is the way in which history is written."—P. IV. p. 298.

This anecdote, related thus by BUONAPARTE, contains in itself matter sufficient for volumes.

The coarseness of the declaration, that a pretty face by the side of his wife won his affections from her—the occupation of his thoughts by that pretty face—and the prospect of "the young woman's success," in the first part—the fact that a Postmaster General should divert the course of a letter, sent to an individual by her mother, or her aunt, or by anybody else, and convey it "direct to the Emperor"—and that that Postmaster should be, of all men in the world, the excellent, admirable, and amiable M. LAVALETTE, in the second part; and that BUONAPARTE should take credit to himself, and liken himself to SCIPIO, because he did not carry on an intrigue after he had been disgusted with the object in the last part of this story, are, we think, sufficient at one glance to proclaim the morals and the modesty of the man, the nature of his government, and the character of his ministers.

The descriptions BUONAPARTE gives of JOSEPHINE'S attachment to him—her unceasing care of him, and attention to his comforts, form striking contrasts to this explanation and refutation of MR. GOLDSMITH'S calumny!

Talking of JOSEPHINE, (P. III. p. 305)—

"The Emperor said, he was well convinced that he was the individual whom JOSEPHINE loved best in all the world; and he added, with a smile, that he was sure she would have RELINQUISHED ANY ASSIGNATION to attend him!"

The delicacy of his conduct to MARIA LOUISA is remarkable:—

"I wished, one day, to talk her to Malmaison (where JOSEPHINE was living)" said the Emperor, "but she burst into tears when I made the proposal. She said she did not object to my visiting JOSEPHINE, only she did not wish to know it. There was no stratagem she did not employ for the sake of annoying me; she never left me; and as these visits seemed to vex her exceedingly, I did violence to my own feelings, and scarcely ever went to Malmaison."—Part III. p. 304.

Admirable forbearance!!

BUONAPARTE, in various places, tells us, through his friend LAS CASES, that MARIA LOUISA was in perpetual fear of him, and the account of her accouchement, where the impression on her mind was, that she was to be sacrificed, and during which her illustrious husband "held her firmly down," will be read with much interest, as a proof of the great misery which must have been caused to both parties by their separation.

There have been difficulties started about the religious opinions of BUONAPARTE, and one of the things said to be remarkable in his parting requests was, his forgetfulness of spiritual assistance. When this omission was noised about, a Priest was required, and, we believe, furnished to the establishment at Longwood: whatever doubts one might have entertained upon this point, M. LAS CASES has generously removed, by telling us precisely what his exemplary Emperor felt and said upon the subject himself.

Of suicide, he says—(part I, p. 305.)

"He consoled himself with the thought, that if, in imitation of the ancients, he should ever feel inclined to escape from the disgusts and vexations of life, his moral opinions were not of a nature to prevent him."

After having given his political reasons for re-establishing religion in France—

—"Somebody having ventured to say to him"—(part IV. p. 130)—"that he might possibly, in the end, become devout, the Emperor answered, with an air of conviction, 'I fear not!' and that it was with regret he said it, for it was no doubt a great source of consolation; but that his incredulity did not proceed from perverseness or licentiousness of mind, but from the strength of his reason!"

His Majesty, after having eulogized himself, and after exclaiming in allusion to his own virtues, "What then would be "my happiness if the bright prospect of futurity presented it-"self to crown the last moments of my existence?" further observes, that if he had had any religion while he was Emperor he could not have reigned.

"How, asks he, could I have preserved the independence of my thoughts, or of my actions under the control of a confessor, who would have governed me by the dread of hell."—p. 133.

If it were so necessary to his Government not to fear future punishment, we cannot perceive why he should have been so certain of happiness, if there were (as HIS MAJESTY says) a future state.——At p. 315, part III, we have this passage,—

"After dinner the Emperor asked what we would read, and we all decided for the Bible! This is certainly very edifying, said the Emperor, it would never be guessed in Europe."

"He read to us the book of Joshua, observing at almost every town or village that he named, I encamped there—I carried that place by assault—I gave battle here," &c.

But if his infidelity is perfectly established out of his own declarations, there is another trait still more glaring, which is the blasphemy of his personal vanity. We merely quote his own words:—

"Liberal ideas" (says his Majesty; p. III. p. 29) "flourish in Great Britain, they enlighten America, and they are nationalized in France; and this may be called the tripod whence issues the light of the world. Liberal opinions will rule the universe; they will become the faith, the RELIGION, the MORALITY of all nations; and, in spite of all that may be advanced to the contrary, this memorable era will be inseparably connected with my name—for, after all, it cannot be denied that I kindled the torch and consecrated the principle, and now persecution renders ME the MESSIAH!—Friends and enemies, all must acknowledge me to be the first soldier, the grand representative of the age. Thus I shall for ever remain the leading star!!"

At page 87, Part III. we find that

"He turned to his proclamations to the army of Egypt, and joked much about the one in which he represented himself as inspired and sent by GOD. 'This was quackery, (said he) but it was quackery of the highest order. * * * * My French troops merely laughed at it; and such was their disposition in this respect, that in order to induce them to listen to the bare mention of religion, I was myself obliged to speak VERY LIGHTLY ON THE SUBJECT.'"

Speaking of his changing his—religion!—

"After all (continued he, gaily) it would not have been so very extraordinary even though circumstances had induced me to embrace ISLAMISM! * * * But I must have had good reasons for my conversion. I must have been secure of advancing as far as the Euphrates, at least. Change of religion for private interest, is inexcusable, but it may be pardoned in consideration of immense political results. HENRY IV. said, 'Paris was well worth a Mass.' Will it then be said that the dominion of the East, and perhaps the subjugation of all Asia, were not worth a turban and a pair of trousers," &c. &c. &c.

His own blasphemy was equalled, however, by that of the Grand Marshall—

"Who told us (page 244, Part II.) that some Algerine ships being anchored off Elba, caused great alarm to the inhabitants, who questioned the pirates with regard to their intentions, and ended by asking them plainly whether they came with hostile views? 'Against the great NAPOLEON,' said the Algerines, 'oh—never—we do not wage war on GOD!!!'"

Speaking in another place (Part I. page 339) of his being abandoned in France, he says—

"Besides, I was forsaken rather than betrayed, there was more of weakness than of perfidy around me—it was the denial of St. Peter!"

His praise of the Whigs, and his enthusiasm about FOX, are quite comical—and if any thing can be wanting to satisfy the country of the prudence which has dictated the TORY line of conduct, beyond the present state of affairs, and this unnatural praise, it will be found in the following paragraphs:—

He declares at page 248, Part III. that he had long meditated an attack upon India by sea after his hopes that way had been frustrated by the mad Commodore of St. Jean D'Acre.

He says—(p. 275, Part II.)

"If he had enjoyed a few years peace, imagination can scarcely fix limits to what he would have accomplished."

He—(Part II. p. 260)—enquires what the English thought of his invading England.

"I cannot inform you, Sire," says LAS CASES, "I had then returned to France, but in the Saloons of Paris, we laughed at the idea of an invasion of England, and the English, who were there at the time, did so too."

"I," says BUONAPARTE, "had taken measures to preclude the possibility of failure in my landing. I had the best army in the world. I need only say, it was the Army of Austerlitz. In four days I should have been in London. I should have entered the English capital—not as a conqueror, but as—a liberator."

"We should have presented ourselves not as conquerors, but as brothers, who came to restore them their rights and liberties. I would have assembled the Citizens. I would have declared—I should have, and I must have, &c. &c."

What was the use of the man's blustering to his amanuensis, at St. Helena, in this strain? Why DID NOT HE do all this? Because he could not; and the inanity of the braggadocia is only equalled by the stupidity of publishing it, an act which at once betrays the character of BUONAPARTE himself, and his desperate ignorance of that of the British nation.

These designs, however, were still alive in his mind at St. Helena; and when one hears of the over-strictness with which he was confined there, one should compare the alleged facts of coercion on the part of the Governor, with the energetic application of BUONAPARTE to the study of English, (which LAS CASES tells us he considered a most important acquisition) and to such speeches as the following:—P. II. p. 304.

"Look (says BUONAPARTE) at what is going on there (in France); read the papers; you will find it so in every line; let me once more set my foot there, and they will see what France is, and what I can do."

All these views and intentions BUONAPARTE disclaims in Part IV. p. 258; where, after having, in other places, eulogized the Whigs as usual, and admired their policy, (naturally enough) he says that the impressions made upon the English mind by PITT, against him, are too strong to be overcome; and concludes by imagining what the Whigs would do if they came into office, and removed him from St. Helena, and placed him on the throne of France.

"I can suppose (says the Emperor)—p. 259—LORD HOLLAND as Prime Minister of England!!! writing to me at Paris, "If you do so and so I shall be ruined. * * * * * * At these words I should stop short; they would arrest me in my career more effectually than armies."

The supposition of LORD HOLLAND'S being Prime Minister of England is enough of itself to put one in a fever; but the supposition that it would be the policy of the Whigs to re-establish the throne of a despot—our bitterest enemy—our determined invader—merely to have the pleasure of writing to him, to beg him to be merciful to us, shews, that if BUONAPARTE was not aware of the specific plans of the Whigs upon this particular subject, he had made a very fair estimate of their wisdom and talents in general.

It is, however, curious to observe the policy which these persons must have expressed an intention of having acted upon, if unfortunately they had had the opportunity.

But he gives a more unqualified mark of his approbation at p. 163, Part IV.—where, speaking of MR. FOX and LORD CORNWALLIS! he says—

"Half-a-dozen such men as FOX and CORNWALLIS would be sufficient to establish the MORAL character of a nation; with such men I should have agreed—we should soon have settled our differences—we should have done great things together."

As his Majesty has declared, that imagination could not fix limits to what he would have done had he been at peace with us, and as he had pictured to himself that we were to have been dependent upon him, perhaps the line of policy which has been taken will be found to be as judicious as that which the followers of MR. FOX appear to have been disposed to have adopted.

The MORNING CHRONICLE and the STATESMAN were the papers specially patronised by BUONAPARTE at St. Helena; and the opinions and observations expressed or made upon his character and captivity, which he prized most, were those of LIEUT.-COLONEL WILKES, of the Hon. E. I. Company's service, and a MR. and MRS. SKELTON. These individuals, highly amiable and respectable as we have no doubt they are, are quoted by LAS CASES and his Emperor as persons upon whose fiat the fate of empires depended. It is not to be attributed to their obscurity that these often quoted persons are unknown to us, or to our readers, nor is it any reproach to them—but it does appear extraordinary, that while BUONAPARTE resolutely refused any communication with the best families in the island, that he not only should associate readily with those we have just mentioned—and not only associate with them, but feel proud of their approbation, and record their sentiments.

With respect to MR. O'MEARA, two singular conversations are stated—one (P. II p. 122) where he is represented leaving Longwood, quite astonished at "the gaiety, indifference, and good nature of NAPOLEON"—and the other somewhat the more remarkable of the two.

As in our notice of this book we profess to do nothing more than convict BUONAPARTE out of his own mouth, so in the case of MR. O'MEARA we shall merely quote the following passage, p. 210. P. III.

The EMPEROR enquires of MR. O'MEARA—

"Was he to consider him as his own physician personally, or merely as a prison doctor, appointed by the English Government? Was he his confessor or his inspector? Had he made his reports respecting him, or was it his intention so to do, if called on?—In the one case the Emperor said he would readily continue to receive his attendance, and was grateful for the services he had already received.

"The Doctor replied with great firmness, and in a tone of feeling; he said that his appointment was entirely professional, and had no connection with politics. He conceived himself the Emperor's personal medical attendant, and was a stranger to every other consideration. That he had made no report respecting the Emperor, and that none had yet been demanded of him;—that he could not imagine any instance in which he might be induced to make a report, except in case of serious illness," &c.

This conversation took place on the 6th of May, 1816—now, the published notes of MR. O'MEARA, giving every minute detail of the proceedings at Longwood—attributing all sorts of designs to BUONAPARTE—declaring that he has every reason to believe "some plot is hatching"—designating MONTHOLON "as a coward and a liar"—ridiculing and abusing LAS CASES, and shewing up every movement of BUONAPARTE and his family, bear a date of little more than one month subsequent to this interview, when, so far from any "report having been demanded of him," MR. O'MEARA volunteers his information to SIR T. READE, and begs that SIR HUDSON LOWE may not be told that it comes from him!

But lest we should be supposed to do an act of injustice, or take a partial view of this part of the subject, we will refer our readers, not to any one of the notes written by MR. O'MEARA for the information of the local Government, and which have been published in the Quarterly Review, but to the notes which MR. O'MEARA has himself published in the MORNING CHRONICLE, written to him by MR. FINLAISON, which acknowledge the receipt of a "report" of the proceedings of BUONAPARTE, so minute in detail, so extremely interesting, as to have been thought worthy of transmission to the Cabinet Ministers, and even to higher authority. When it is recollected that this letter of MR. O'MEARA'S, to which he himself refers in the CHRONICLE, was dated MARCH 16, 1816; and that the conversation which "Old LAS CASES" describes, in which MR. O'MEARA shewed feeling and indignant firmness, took place on the 6*th of May following*. We think a word of observation will be needless.

Very much has been said, not only by M. LAS CASES, but by many other persons, about the splendour and magnificence of the Tuilleries under BUONAPARTE'S reign; perhaps, one instance of the taste of the Imperial Court may not be uneuntertaining.—(Part III. p. 107.)

"At a concert given one day by the EMPRESS JOSEPHINE, ASKER KAN (the Persian Ambassador,) with his long painted beard, was one of the company—he seemed to be heartily tired of the music, and fell asleep standing with his back against a wall, with his feet thrust forward, and resting against an arm-chair which stood in the corner by the fire-place. Some one, by way of joke, drew the chair softly away, so that his Excellency had well nigh fallen down his whole length on the floor, and being thus roused from his slumber he roared out lustily!!!"

It appears that the Empress laughed and scolded us a good deal, &c. &c.

But this is not equal as a characteristic trait to an anecdote of the Emperor himself—suspecting that his upholsterer had overcharged him for some window curtains in the Tuilleries; but let LAS CASES tell it for him.—(p. 77, Part III.)

"On one occasion, when he returned to the Tuilleries, which had been magnificently fitted up during his absence, the individuals who attended him eagerly drew his attention to all the new furniture and decorations; after expressing his satisfaction at every thing he saw, he walked up to a window overhung with a rich curtain, and asking for a pair of scissors, cut off a superb gold acorn which was suspended from the drapery, and coolly putting it into his pocket, he continued his inspection, to the great astonishment of all present, who were unable to guess his motion; some days afterwards, at his levee, he drew the acorn from his pocket, and gave it to the individual who superintended the furnishing of the palace. 'Here,' said he, 'Heaven forbid that I should think you rob me, but some one has doubtless robbed you—you have paid for this at the rate of one-third above its value—they have dealt with you as though you had been the steward of a great nobleman—you would have made a better bargain if you had not been known.'

"The fact was that NAPOLEON having walked out one morning in disguise (as he was often in the habit of doing) visited some of the shops in the Rue St. Denis, where he priced ornaments similar to that which he had cut from the curtain, and enquired the value of various articles of furniture like those provided for the palace, and thus, he said, he arrived at the result in his simplest form. * * * * * * These, he said, were his grand plans for ensuring domestic economy."

And here for the present we must leave him; want of room prevents our concluding the article as we had intended in this Number. (To be continued in our next.)

THEATRICALS.

We have once or twice alluded to a scheme (forwarded to us by the Author) for rendering theatrical entertainments strictly moral; and, it appears to us, that no season can be better suited to its developement than the present.

The gentleman, to whose exertions in the behalf of virtue and decency, the public are even now greatly indebted, and whose plan, if carried into effect, will entitle him to the gratitude of the nation at large, is, the Rev. Mr. Plumptree, who has published a volume of dramatic pieces illustrative of his purpose, which blend with deep interest, a purity of thought and propriety of language, rarely to be met with in the theatrical works of the day.

The first of the dramas is called Royal Beneficence, or the Emperor Alexander, and is founded on an event which occurred to his Russian Majesty, on the banks of the Wilna, where he restored a drowned young man by the means prescribed by the Humane Society, which means of restoration are published with the play—evidently with the best intentions. Mr. Plumptree offered this piece to Covent Garden, and to Drury Lane, but it was by both rejected; then Mr. Hindes, the manager of the Norwich playhouse, had the refusal of it; but he, like the London proprietors, objected to its appearance, because a living character was introduced.

Mr. Plumptree reasons very fairly upon the futility of this excuse, and prints the detail of the Emperor's indefatigable exertions, upon which his play is founded, together with many other interesting documents concerning the valuable charity to which the piece is dedicated.

The drama is full of interest and good feeling; and although, in the present state of the stage, there is, perhaps, a want of bustle, still the affecting incident at the end of the first act, where the dead body of the hero is dragged out of the water, and stripped upon the stage, under the immediate inspection of the Emperor, who says—

"Lose no time in fruitless ceremony: this is our duty now; strip off his clothes; wipe him dry, and rub about his heart, his temples, wrists, and everywhere."

appears to us likely to have produced a great sensation in a British audience.

We must say, that the rejection of such a piece by the London managers reflects equally upon their taste and delicacy.

The next drama is called Winter, and is founded upon the story of Elizabeth Woodcock, who was buried in the snow for upwards of a week, and is extremely pretty. The Force of Conscience, a tragedy, follows, which ends with the execution of Mr. Morris, a blacksmith, on the new drop, during which awful ceremony he is assisted in prayer by the Rev. Mr. Jones; the spectators make comments, and the culprit his last dying speech, when the drop, or rather the curtain, falls, which ends "the strange eventful history."

The next play is called Mrs. Jordan and the Methodist, and is founded upon a benevolent action (one of many) performed by that incomparable actress. We have too much affection for her memory to make a single comment upon Mr. Plumptree's delicate attempt to commemorate her good qualities.

The next is a comedy, called The Salutary Reproof, or the Butcher! from which we intend to make a few extracts, in order to give a fair specimen of Mr. Plumptree's dramatic talent and virtuous intentions; and we certainly do hope that one of the London theatres will afford the town an opportunity of judging for themselves the benefits likely to arise to their morals by such representations, without any curtailment of their amusement.

The play opens with a view of a country village; a public-house—sign the Salutation, on one side; on the other side, a baker's house and shop, and next door a butcher's house and shop; trees and a seat before it.

Enter the Rev. Mr. Shepherd—goes to the inn, and is shut out—he tries the baker, who will not give him a lodging—whereupon he proceeds to the butcher's. As he advances, he hears a hymn sung by the butcher's family, accompanied on the oboe. He is shortly after received by the butcher, and the scene changes to the inside of the butcher's house, where, as it is described, there is "every thing remarkably neat, and even elegant in a plain way."

Enter Mrs. Goodman, George, and Ruth—then Goodman and the Reverend Mr. Shepherd.

The following conversation occurs:—

"Goodman. Mary, here is a gentleman will lodge here to-night. Muggins is in one of his surly fits, and has denied him. Put clean sheets on the bed, and you shall sleep with Ruth, and I with—George!

"Mrs. G. What will the gentleman be pleased to have. Pray, be seated, Sir—take this great chair. Shall I do you a mutton-chop, Sir?

"Goodman. Bring the ease and comfort, George."

In a long note Mr. Plumptree elaborately describes this machine, and benevolently observes, that no house should be without at least one of them.

"Mr. Shepherd. I thank you—if it will not be giving you too much trouble, I should prefer tea before every thing—nothing refreshes me after fatigue like tea.

"Mrs. G. By all means, Sir; the fire is not out in the back-house. Ruth, put on the kettle, it is hot, and get the tea things.

"George. (Bringing the ease and comfort:) Here, father.

"Goodman. Will you rest your legs on this, Sir—we call it ease and comfort.

"Mr. Shepherd. 'Tis ease and comfort, indeed. I know it by the name of rest-and-be-thankful. I will beg, if you please, when I go to bed, the patriarchal hospitality of water for my feet, and that warm."

This conversation, which is quite refreshing from its naturalness, continues till it takes a turn in this manner:—

It will be observed that Goodman is a butcher.

"Goodman. It is said that our laws do not allow a butcher to serve upon a jury in a case of life and death—supposing, from his business, that he must have less humanity than others.

"Mr. Shepherd. But that I believe is not the case; and within my own confined experience I have known several truly respectable and humane butchers! Our laws themselves are sanguinary; and they do not make the same exception to the military or naval characters, both which professions have too much to do with the effusion of blood."

* * * *

"Goodman. What do you think, Sir, of the post-boy who cuts and overdrives his horses?

"Mr. Shepherd. What do I think of the gentleman who sits behind him, and permits it—nay, encourages him, and pays him extra for distressing them, merely to bring him a few minutes sooner to the end of his stage?

"Goodman. Sir, I had rather be what I am.

"Mr. Shepherd. And so had I—it is a consolation to me often in my journeys on foot, that no beast suffers for my accommodation."

The vein of morality which runs through the dialogue is exquisitely touching, and in the hands of Terry or Macready we think Goodman might be made highly effective—Young would be excellent in the "Rev." Mr. Shepherd, and in the latter part of the act, where Goodman discovers in the clergyman a friend who "put up at the Wheat Sheaf, at Blessbury, twenty-five years before," would make a decided hit—when pushing away his ease and comfort, the Reverend Gentleman returns thanks for having made the butcher what he finds him.

The conclusion of the first act is happily imagined, and highly theatrical.

"Mr. Shepherd. If you please I will retire to rest—I heard your evening hymn, and interrupted your prayer in the hope of joining in it—of whose devotions do you make use?

"Goodman, Bishop Wilson's, Sir—but you will be so good as to lead for us.

"Mr. Shepherd. If you please—but in general I know not that you can do better than make use of the pious bishop.

"Goodman. George, bring the book.

"Mr. Shepherd. I will have it in my hand, if you please, but our own peculiar circumstances require our own peculiar thanks and petitions.

"[George brings the book, and gives it to Mr. S., and whilst they are looking at him, as if waiting for his kneeling first, the curtain drops.]"

It is impossible not to feel such a scene deeply—its dramatic quality and the powerful effect that such a style of repretsentation could not fail to have upon a thinking audience.

In the second act Goodman dispatches a leg of mutton to Lord Orwell, and puts up a prayer—Mr. Goodman requires if the gentleman's shoes are cleaned, and mentions that she must go and look at the rolls in the camp oven: subsequently to which we are presented with a scene at his Lordship's, who desires the butcher to sit down, and enters into conversation about Florin grass, which Goodman says will produce six ton per acre. His Lordship then recommends a work called "The Experienced Butcher," published by Darton and Harvey, Gracechurch-street, price 6s.—in return for which Goodman mentions the arrival of Mr. Shepherd, and recommends him for the vacancy of Gladford, the new rector having refused to countenance him. Whereupon Lord Orwell says to the butcher (taking his hand,) "Mr. Goodman, this, like every part of your conduct, raises you in my "esteem—depend upon my services wherever they can be useful."

"Goodman. Your Lordship is too condescending—too good—to me too. [Exit, putting his hand to his eyes to wipe away the tears.

"Lord Orwell. No profession, I see, however rude, can prevent the growth of humanity, where religion affords its kindly influence. Even conversation with this butcher I perceive to improve my humanity!

Enter Sir William Rightly.

"Good morning to you, Sir William; you rested well, I hope?

"Sir W. Quite so. I thank you; your Lordship is well this morning, I hope? You have been sending your butcher away in tears I see. I passed him in the hall; he gave me a look that spoke I know not what; I felt it at my heart.

* * * *

"Lord Orwell. I think you must have heard me mention this butcher before; he is not only the best butcher for many miles round, but one of the best men!"

His Lordship then characterizes Goodman thus:—

"I have a great regard for him. In addition to all I have said, there is a civility and gentleness in his manner—an ease and frankness—civil without servility—ease without familiarity, and gentle, with much animation!

"Sir William. It seems then that the butcher, if not a gentleman, has much of the gentle-man about him.

"Lord Orwell. Exactly so. But let us join the breakfast party.

"[Exeunt."

There is so much genuine nature in all this, that we certainly should have no hesitation in foretelling the reception it would meet with on the stage, if acted. The denouement may easily be anticipated: Mr. Shepherd, instead of being continued as Curate, gets the Rectory of Gladford; and Lord Orwell and Sir William Rightly having walked down to the butcher's, there conclude the play thus:

[Lord Orwell and Sir William alternately shake hands with Mrs. Shepherd and Mrs. Goodman; Mr. Shepherd and Goodman then take each other cordially by the hand, in the centre, while Lord Orwell takes Goodman's hand and Mrs. Goodman's! Sir William takes Mrs. Shepherd's and Ruth's; Mrs. Goodman takes Muggins's, and Muggins George's; Ruth takes Crusty's, and Crusty his wife's. The curtain drops.]

As we have already said, the great charm of these pieces is the perfect representation which they give of real life. The intimate knowledge of human nature, and of society, which shines throughout all of them: and above all, that consummate skill which, while it affords the richest dramatic treat, conveys the purest moral lesson.

It certainly is not for us to prescribe to Mr. Elliston; but we do think, that if the play, whence we have made the above extracts, were acted at Drury Lane, the effect produced would be extraordinary. To Mr. Plumptree we return our thanks for his volume, which having read with admiration, we lay down with infinite satisfaction; and if every Author were to pursue his plan and publish the piece, which managers have refused, it would very soon put an end to all doubts as to the cabals and intrigues which agitate, divide, and govern theatrical cabinets.

TO JOHN BULL.

Sir,—You have conferred such material benefit on society by noticing the many "humbugs" which are daily attempted to be puffed off, that if your intelligent Correspondent Paul Potter has not impounded amongst his stray Whiggeries, the inclosed puff direct (taken from the Times of this day,) on the part of the independent candidate for the borough of Newport, at the late election, I sincerely hope you will do so, in such manner as your better judgment dictates.

I have always expected nothing but puffing from the Playhouse people, the Lottery-office keepers, and Quack Doctors; but surely, Sir, it does not become a Banker, and a gentleman of independent principles, to resort to the necessity of advertizing in this way to support his political influence.

I should be particularly obliged if you would inform the public why this protegé of the Duke of Sussex (through Sir George Smart's introduction) has so soon forsaken his West Loo friends. Is this a particularly cheap method of getting into the House? I have the honour to be, Sir, your constant reader,

SPECTATOR.

[Advertisement.]—Newport Election.—"The election of a member for the borough of Newport, in Cornwall, took place on Friday last. The candidates were Jonathan Raine, Esq. who was supported by the powerful influence of the Duke of Northumberland, and Rowland Stephenson, Esq. who, yielding to the wishes of the independent interest, was put in nomination on the occasion, and after a canvass of three days only, such was the unanimity feeling entertained by a large portion of the electors, and such their anxiety to rescue the borough from the dominion under which it has been so long placed, that the actual state of the poll at its close was, for Mr. Raine, 40—Mr. Stephenson, 36. It is, however, to be observed, that ten of Mr. Stephenson's votes were rejected, according to the criterion adopted by the returning officers (one of whom is the agent and solicitor for the Duke,) in opposition to the usage of the borough. The general feeling in Newport justifies the confidence, that at the next election Mr. Stephenson will be returned."—From the Times, 26th March, 1823.

We can only say that we know nothing of the circumstances with respect to West Loo, but we publish our correspondent's letter, in order to complete the exposure of Whig independence, so ably begun by the Times.

Mr. Rowland Stephenson has always been represented to us as the most quiet, diffident, retiring man in the world, extremely amiable, and certainly the last person in the dom likely to contest an election and puff himself afters We are inclined to believe the advertisement the foolish of some friendly interference. Of one thing we can Mr. Stephenson, that whoever made him or his believe that he has a chance of ever sitting for the of Newport, were just humbugging him.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

The columns of the Gazette of Lyons have for some time filled with details of trials for seditious cries. The last tains five or six sentences pronounced on journeymen paper received to-day states that the Correctional Tribunal the cause of two young men of Condrieux, accused of a band of 12 young men of the class 1812, who, on the 15th paraded through the village of Roches with a drum, crying with the King!"—"The Emperor for ever!" Finally Gazette announces, that on the 18th of this month the 12 persons, who had passed the night in singing seditious the night of the same day the houses of persons suspected a subscription in honour of Mm. Manuel and Mercier were

The bands of the factious of Navarre, to the number of men, have entered France by the mountains that surround Pied-de-Port, on the 11th, 12th, and 14th instant; they have the purpose of being armed, equipped, and receiving a new tion. Ch. O'Donnell has gone there to organize them. tended to have quartered them in private houses, but the have refused to receive them.

The Portuguese army is in motion to enter Spain at the with the French troops.

The Moniteur, of the 21st inst. contains a Royal Ordonna missing the Sieur Mercier, Sergeant in the National Guard said Guard for his act of disobedience in not arresting Manu

The Marshal Duke de Belluno, Minister and Secretary for Department, to be Major-General of the Army of the Pyrene Viscount Dijeon, Peer of France, is named Minister Sec State, and entrusted with the Portefeuille of the War Depart the absence of the Duke de Belluno.

The Frankfort Papers state that the three great Continental intend to send Commissioners to the head-quarters of the Duke goulême to form a diplomatic Council for his more prudent ca cial guidance.

Frankfort, March 20.—The report of the capitulation Castle of Corinth is confirmed; 3,500 men laid down their arms 12th of February, to be conveyed to Asia. The news of the ne of Patras, by the Greeks, appears to be premature. Accor accounts given by travellers who had arrived at Delegrein, la was in the hands of the Turks on the 19th Feb.

Letters and papers from Oporto the 11th instant, announce the plete defeat of the recent revolutionary attempt in the north of tugal. The Ex-Count of Amarante, the principal actor in the only escaped the Constitutional troops by the rapidity of his There were great rejoicings at Oporto in consequence of this intelligence.

An article from Madrid, dated the 17th inst. states, that notwithstanding the second nomination of the new Ministers, and the ceptance of office, the old ones still remained, and were to ex "in activity till they should have read to the Cortes the Exposes of their respective Departments."

Advices from Pernambuco, state, that General Lalaat had the Portuguese troops at Bahia, and had been completely defeated that it was expected a Government would be shortly declared independent of Rio Janeiro.

Bayonne, March 18. Bessieres has divided his army into bands, which hold the two banks of the Ebro. Hitherto the Constitutionalists have not had sufficient force to attack him with Gen. Ballesteros arrived on the 8th at Saragossa, where he was vested to revive enthusiasm by announcing that 20,000 conscripts 1200 horses, were about to arrive—evidently a fanfaronade. It that orders have been issued for all those who quit the Army Faith to march on St. Jean de Luz, and St. Jean Pied de Port that all the refugee Spaniards should set out for the interior. The first column of the Royal Guards arrived on Sunday, with Gen. Amorugeac. These fine troops go into barracks in the Geneva Modlin arrived yesterday evening. Marshal Oudinot to be expected to-day. The Horse Guards of Honour are organ the Foot Guards, which are the most numerous, are also organiz The Duke d'Angoulême will be at Bayonne on the 30th inst. army will enter Spain on the 1st of April. Every preparation is pleted, and 60,000 men are assembled in and round Bayonne.

March 20.—The Marshal Duke of Reggio arrived in this city terday, to take the command of the 1st corps of the army. The ment of the troops continues, and all go to take up cantonments the frontiers as they arrive. It is impossible to form an idea of immense quantities of provisions which are preparing, and of large sums of money that are daily employed; and yet it is with difficulty that forage is procured at Bayonne and in the environs. It impossible that Navarre, though fertile, should long support 20,000 horses, which there will be with this army.

Stockholm, March 11.—The State Gazette of yesterday contains the following notice:—"As fictitious Orders, with the forged signature of Major-Gen. Holst, have been sent, with most criminal intention to his Majesty's Commanders in Gefle, Hulmstad, Hernosand, Christianstad, and letters containing them, were put into the Gene Post Office in this city; any one who can point out the person persons who put these letters in the post, is hereby called upon to notice to the Chief Governor, or to the Chancellor of Justice. honour of the nation, the sacredness of the laws, and the general are intimately connected with it. He, therefore, who can prove the author of those letters, and give legal proof of the truth of his ment, shall receive a reward of 10,000 dollars Banco. The letters question were put into the General Post Office in this city on the and 28th of February, were sealed with a wafer, and were directed the Norwegian language.—(To the Royal Commanders in the By his Majesty's most gracious command. Dan. D'Ehrens

"Office of the Chief Governor. G. E. Lond."

A letter which we have received from Malta, gives a most affecting description of a catastrophe which occurred in a Corridor of the Convent of Franciscans (the Minori Osservante) adjoining the Opera during the Carnival. It had been usual to collect the boys belonging to Valletta, and in the three cities on the other side of the harbour from the ages of eight to fifteen, and to form them into a procession. After attending service in Church, a collation of bread and figs was distributed to them, with a view of keeping them out of the way and confusion of the Carnival in the streets. On the present occasion a multitude of boys and full grown persons had mixed with the other boys, (who did not amount to more than 100), and a great crowd ensued. When the door was opened through which they were to pass into the Strada St. Ursola, where the bread was to be distributed, the great pressure pushed the unfortunate children through a door left closed, down a flight of eight steps, which they had not perceived (owing to the only lamp being extinguished), and they fell over one another, and were suffocated in the dark—the spot being made the number of the bodies two feet above the level of the highest step. One hundred and ten boys from eight to fifteen years perished on the occasion, from being trampled on or pressed to death. A minute of the unfortunate occurrence was published by the Lieut.-Governor.

Doneraile, March 21:—Last night, a party of the 22d regiment under the command of the Hon. Lieut. Cavendish, accompanied by a party of Major Carter's Police, proceeded to the neighbourhood of Carker, and succeeded in bringing safely into town, five portable forges, one musket, one blunderbuss, one sword (apparently quite new), one pistol, heavily loaded. The musket bears the Tower mark, and is conjectured was one of the stand of arms taken from a party of the 40th regiment, near Charleville, about a year ago. Since writing the above, two pikes of the above description have been brought in and lodged at the Police office. Some papers, we understand, have been found on Hickey, whose accidental mutilation, lately at Doneraile, had led to his discovery; and those, it is thought, may cast some light upon the causes and objects of the present "disturbances"—for they are not, just now, disposed to strip things of their least repulsive appellations.—Cork Paper.

Neville and Fitzgibbon were stated in our last, as having been at Limerick, for the murder of Major Going. Neville confessed the guilt; but Fitzgibbon, when on the platform, being asked by a person if he was guilty, replied, with great levity, "if you'll call at this time to-morrow, I'll tell you." Fitzgibbon's Confessor desired him to tell the people to give up their fire-arms, which he refused to

MISCELLANEOUS.

On Tuesday afternoon, the Duke of York, as Commander-in-Chief, held a Levee at his office in the Horse Guards, which was attended by upwards of sixty officers and other persons. Among those present were—Generals Milner, Hodgson, Lieut.-Gens. Sir R. M'Farlane, Montgomerie, Fraser, Sir M. Nightingall, Sir W. Houstown, Sir Hussey Vivian, Sir F. M'Lean, Sir R. Ferguson, Major-Gens. Hamilton, Skinner, Sir C. Grant, T. Widdington, Shaw, Ainslie, and Sir Henry Grant. Sir C. Grant, T. Widdington, Shaw, Ainslie, and Sir Henry Hawker, Hotham, and Saltown.

On Tuesday afternoon, about half past four o'clock, Mr. O'Gorman Mahon arrived at the Foreign Office in a coach and four, with dispatches from Ireland.

A Cabinet Council was held on Tuesday, at two o'clock, at the Foreign Office, which sat till near half past four.

On Thursday, at one o'clock, a Cabinet Council was held at the Foreign Office.

On Thursday, the Annual distribution of His Majesty's Royal Bounty took place at Whitehall Chapel, when 61 men and 61 women, under the age of the King, received the customary gifts of provisions; viz. a chaldron of coals, and purses of money. One of the females exceeded ninety years old; and a male, an old soldier, was ninety-two.

The Marriage Act Repeal Bill has received the Royal Assent, and all marriages will now be solemnized according to the old law of marriage.

Sir Robert Brownrigg, Bart. G.C.B. is appointed Governor of Chelsea Hospital.

Sir Henry Hardinge, who served under the Duke of Wellington, in the Peninsula, succeeds Mr. Robert Ward at the Ordnance.

Captain Phillimore is appointed to command the Hussar frigate, at Chatham.

Mr. Harris is appointed to command the Thetis frigate, at Plymouth.

It is said that the packet brigs will be commanded by Lieutenants, and placed at Falmouth, as the present Post-office packets are, and be under the superintendence of Captain W. King, R.N. who will have the superintendence of Captain W. King, R.N. who will have the superintendence of the Ariel to lie at Falmouth for that purpose.

A Court of Directors was held at the East India House, when Capt. William Manning was sworn into the command of the ship Thomas Grenville, consigned to Bengal direct.

The General Harris, Capt. George Welstead, from China, arrived at Deal on Today the 24th inst. having left Macao roads the 23d Nov.; she at St. Helena the 3d Feb. and sailed from thence for England Feb. 8th; she also touched at the Island of Ascension on the 14th Feb. The following ships were left at China, viz.:— Marquis Camden, Lord Amelia, Lady Melville, Marquis of Huntley, Buckingham, Mr. Dumira, Thomas Coutts, Macqueen, Orwell, William Fairlie, Sir Huntly, Earl of Balcarras, London, Sir David Scott, Duchess of Atholl, and Canning.

Advice was received at Lloyd's, on Wednesday, of the capture of two Irish ships by Spanish privateers; viz. the Aurora, of Greenock; and John Crawford, of Liverpool. They were carried into Porto Rico, but the latter had been condemned, and her cargo (coffee) sold.

Loss of a Liverpool Packet.—One Hundred and Thirty Persons Drowned.—Holyhead, March 26.—This morning, at 10 A. M. the Thomas Mangan, Liverpool Packet, from Dublin to Liverpool, struck on the west end of the Mouse Rock, near the Skerries Light-house, and in less than half an hour went down. The Captain and crew, excepting the Steward and a boy, were saved; from ten to fourteen of the passengers were also saved; about 130 perished. Boats from this place, have picked up and landed 26 of the dead bodies.

The Extract of a letter from the purser of the Marquis of Huntly East Indiaman, to a near relation in this county, dated Anger, a small seaport town of Java, August 11, 1822:—He says "One of their sailors had been missed being one of the murderers of a Mrs. Donatty, a French woman, who was murdered in London about two years ago; two other Lascars and a woman were also concerned. The latter was a servant to Mrs. Donatty."—Glasgow Chronicle.

On Wednesday the Lincoln County Meeting for Reform was held; Sir Gilbert Alsop, the two County Members, and a considerable number of the country gentlemen were present. Sir R. Heron moved the petition, which called for such "complete and effective reform as would render the House the real Representatives of the people." Major Cartwright opposed another petition, embodying the principle of universal suffrage. The petition of Sir R. Heron was carried.

In the Court of Chancery, on Thursday, the Attorney-General moved the Court (and the motion was assented to on the other side,) that the Master's report, in the case of the Earl of Portsmouth, appointing Mr. H. Fellowes' committee of the lunatic's person, be confirmed.—Granted.—The Lord Chancellor intimated to the bar, that the House of Lords would not sit to hear appeals on the Wednesday and Friday after the first Seal, he would sit here on the Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday, and Friday in that week. His Lordship then adjourned to the 8th of April.

John Coleman, for the murder of Mr. James Smith, was executed on Friday morning, on Penenden Heath, near Maidstone.

On Wednesday morning, about five o'clock, a fire broke out in the house of Mr. Jones, in Union-street, Borough, which, with the whole of its property, was destroyed.

On Tuesday afternoon, three fellows passing by the house of Wm. Esq. Peckham Rye, and observing no person in the parlour, three up to the window sash, which one of them entered, and stripped the plunder of several articles of plate.

Wm. Cooper, who had been taken to the Giltspur-street Compter, on Wednesday night, charged with acts of indecency, and who had been locked up in a separate room by himself, was found in the morning by the keeper sent to unlock the cell, quite dead, having suspended himself by his handkerchief from the top of the inner room.

About 11 o'clock on Sunday night, some fellows broke into the house of Mr. Preece, in Sly Place, Lambeth. One of them secured Mrs. Preece, and in a deliberate manner placed her in a chair, took the key out and tied it over her mouth to prevent her calling out; he took a small cord from his pocket, and tied her hands behind her, and fastened her legs. Having thus secured her, the villain took another pocket 20 shillings and a 5l. note, and then made off.

On Tuesday night, Williams, Brown, and Milsom, convicted of horse-stealing, were executed at Aylesbury. The real name of the two Browns, and the two latter were brothers, named John and Samuel Smith, natives of Bristol.

Yesterday morning, at Guildhall, George Hooper and Charles Bonnie were charged with having stopped Henry Marsh on the highway, and robbed him of his watch on Thursday evening last. He was walking along Aldersgate-street, Bermondsey, in company with a friend, when the prisoner darted suddenly upon him, presented a pistol at his breast, and swore he would blow his brains out if he did not instantly give up to him all he had. At the moment another ruffian sprung from a door, and also pointed a pistol at his head. Marsh made efforts to disengage himself from his assailants, and his female companion screamed out, the prisoners ran off, followed by the witness, and after a long pursuit Hooper was apprehended, when a brace of pistols were found in his pockets. The other prisoner was not to be found in the morning, and at his lodging were discovered five gold silver watches, together with implements for house-breaking. They were both remanded.—Samuel Stroud and Wm. Moore, against whom a Coroner's Jury had returned a verdict of manslaughter, for the death of the late Mr. Briggs, the butcher, of King's-Bench-walk, Westminster, underwent an examination at this office. Evidence similar to that taken at the Inquest. The Magistrates committed them for murder.

The following Inquests have been held:—On the body of Thomas Grist (after an adjournment) who terminated his existence on Friday morning by swallowing an ounce of nux vomica in a glass of brandy.—The decision of the Jury, on Tuesday night, was nine for felo de se and two for insanity.—The Jury the following day, after hearing further evidence, returned a verdict of "Temporary derangement."—On the evidence of a Mr. Morgan, who was of that opinion.—At the house of Mr. Hill, Berwick-street, on the body of W. Hill, his son, who put an end to his existence. Verdict—"The deceased hanged himself in a state of mental derangement."—On Mr. John Lumley, a gentleman who cut his throat in Copenhagen-fields. Verdict—"Insane."—In the Fleet Prison, on the body of John Brown, a prisoner, who died by contempt of the Court of Chancery. The deceased came into the prison about five months ago, aged forty years. He was obliged, within a few days after, to repine much, which was imputed to his dejected disposition, and which nothing seemed to remove. He gradually fell into a decline, and died under extreme debility till Saturday night last, when he expired.—Verdict—"Died by the visitation of God."—At the Elephant and Castle, Newington, touching the death of John Briggs, who was killed in fighting, at Newington, with two coal-heavers, named Stroud and Moore. Verdict—"Manslaughter against Stroud & Moore."

THE MONTHLY CENSOR; or, General Review, No. XI. will be published on the 1st of April, price 2s. 6d. containing, amongst other pieces—Letters on Prejudice—Sermons by H. G. White—Dr. Philpotts' Letter to Ad.—Peechio's Spanish and Portuguese Revolutions—Historical Account of His Majesty's Visit to Scotland—Life and Adventures of John Nicol, Mariner.—Han. Fiedler's Arithmetic—Captain Forman on the Tides—James's Tin-Geognostique—Discovery of Diamonds in Siberia—Humboldt's Essay on the last Saxon—The Literati, No. I. and II.—Werner; a Tragedy, by Lord Byron—Lutin d'Argail, par Charles Nodier—The Lucubrations of Humphrey Ravelin, Esq.—London: printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria lane.

Just published, in one neat pocket volume, with Vignette and Frontispiece, designed by Uwins, and engraved by Horsburgh, 5s. boards,

GOLDSMITH'S VICAR of WAKEFIELD, ESSAYS, and POEMS; with Prefatory Remarks, by JOHN M'DIARMID, Author of "The Life of William Cowper," &c. &c.—Published by Oliver and Boyd, Edinburgh; of whom may be also had,

1. POEMS, by William Cowper; to which is prefixed, a Memoir of the Author, also Critical Remarks on his Poems, written expressly for this edition, by John M'Diarmid—Third Edition, revised and extended; Vignette and Frontispiece. 24mo. 5s. bds.

2. The POEMS of OSSIAN, translated by James Macpherson, Esq.; with the Translator's Dissertations on the Era and Poems of Ossian; Dr. Blair's Critical Dissertation; and an Inquiry into the Genuineness of these Poems, written expressly for this edition, by the Rev. Alex. Stewart; Vignette and Frontispiece. 24mo. 5s. bds.

3. LETTERS of JUNIUS; with Preliminary Dissertations and Copious Notes, by Athens Secundus; with seven Portraits and Vignette Title. 24mo. 5s boards.

Just published, in 8vo. price 1s. 6d.

PEACE; a Poem; in Two Cantos.

Published by Sherwood, Jones, and Co, Paternoster-row.

ARCHITECTURAL LIBRARY, HIGH HOLBORN.

Just published, No. I. price 5s. Medium 8vo.; 8s. Imperial 8vo.; and 14s. Medium 4to. with Proofs, ARCHITECTURAL ILLUSTRATIONS of the PUBLIC BUILDINGS of LONDON; accompanied by Historical, Descriptive, and Critical Accounts. By J. BRITTON, F.S.A. &c. and AUGUSTUS PUGIN, Architect. To be completed in 24 Numbers, making two handsome Volumes.

☞ Gentlemen desirous of securing choice Impressions are requested to forward their Names to either of the Publishers, where Specimens of the Work may be seen, and Prospectuses obtained.

London: published by Josiah Taylor, Architectural Library, High Holborn J. Britton, 17, Burton street; and A. Pugin, 105, Great Russel street.

EDINBURGH ENCYCLOPÆDIA.

Just published, handsomely printed in quarto, and illustrated by 14 Engravings, from Original Drawings, Vol. XVI. Part I. (price One Guinea, boards) of THE EDINBURGH ENCYCLOPÆDIA; or, Dictionary of Arts, Sciences, and Miscellaneous Literature; conducted by DAVID BREWSTER, LL.D. F.R.S. London, and Sec. R.S. Edinburgh, &c. &c. with the assistance of Gentlemen eminent in Science and Literature. The following are the leading articles in this half volume:—Orkney Islands—Ornithology—Ossian's Poems—Oxford—Painting—Paisley—Palestine—Paley—Palias, P. Simon—Palmyra—Paper-making—Parallax—Parallel roads—Paris—Park, Mungo —Partial Tides—Parish Registers—Patents—Pearl Fishery—Peebles-shire—Pelew Islands—Pembrokeshire—Pendulum—Pennant—Persia.

☞ A few copies are splendidly printed on the finest royal paper, with proof impressions of the Plates, price 2l. 12s. 6d. each Part, in boards.

Printed for Wm. Blackwood, and Waugh and Innes, Edinburgh; John Murray; Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; and J. M. Richardson, London; and the other Proprietors. Sold also by W. Oliphant; D. Brown; Anderson and Co.; Stirling and Slade; and Thomson and Co. Edinburgh; W. Turnbull, Glasgow; G. Clarke, Aberdeen; J. Cumming, Dublin; and S. Archer, Belfast.

NEW ATLASES.—The following Atlases, with the most recent Discoveries and Improvements, and on a plan unprecedented both for accuracy and cheapness, have been the cause of publication, by John Thomson and Co. Edinburgh, and Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy.

1. A NEW GENERAL ATLAS, containing eighty Maps, full coloured, size 24 inches by 20, on Imperial folio, engraved by the first artists, from Drawings made on purpose; also, a Memoir of the Progress of Geography; a Chapter on Physical Geography; a View of the Comparative Heights of Mountains and Lengths of Rivers; and a Consulting Index.—Published in 20 Numbers, at 10s. each, and may be had in 2 vols. or half-bound in russia, 11l. 11s.

2. A CLASSICAL and HISTORICAL ATLAS, founded on D'Anville, with a Series of additional Maps, illustrating all the remarkable Epochs of the World; a Syllabus of History, and Chronological Tables.—Publishing in Numbers at 16s. each, to be completed in from 10 to 13 Numbers.

3. A SMALL CABINET ATLAS, consisting of 40 Maps on imperial 4to. price 2l. 2s. half-bound.

4. A COUNTY ATLAS of SCOTLAND, on a very large size, and replete with the most interesting local information.—Nos. I to 8 are published at 10s 6d. each.

Just published, No. VII. of a

SERIES of PORTRAITS of HISTORICAL CHARACTERS, introduced in the "NOVELS and TALES" of the Author of Waverley; with Biographical Notices. They are engraved in the most highly finished manner by Mr. R. Cooper, from Drawings expressly made for the Work by Messrs. Thurston, Uwins, and Watson, from the most authentic Originals. To be completed in Eight Parts, each containing Four Portraits and Lives. Price, in 12mo. 6s.; 8vo. 10s.; Proofs on India Paper, royal 8vo. 14s.; 4to. Proofs, 20s.

Contents of No. VII.:—The Earl of Murray—King James I.—Prince Charles—Rob Roy.

Just published, 2d Edition, price 7s. in 12mo. (250 pages) with 12 Plates, drawn and engraved by G. Cruikshank,

2. GERMAN POPULAR STORIES, translated from the Kinder und Hausmarchen of Messrs. Grimm.

Just published, price 5s. No. XIII.

3. THE RETROSPECTIVE REVIEW, containing—

I. Sickness, Heresy, Death and Burial of William Chillingworth

II. Sir A. Weldon's Court and Character of James I.

III. Memoirs of Philip de Comines.

IV. Archbishop Laud's Diary of his own Life.

V. Bacon, Carvaio, Hermippus, &c. &c. on the Prolongation of Life.

VI. John Webster's Dramatic Works.

VII. Life and Adventures of Peter Wilkins.

VIII. Character and Anecdotes of Charles II.

Published (Quarterly) by C. Baldwyn, Newgate-street, and R. Triphook, Old Bond-street.

THE WORLD IN MINIATURE.—Just published, the 7th Division of this work, containing a Description of the Manners, Customs, Diversions, Religion, Character, &c. of the Inhabitants of the AUSTRIAN EMPIRE, in 2 vols. with 30 coloured Plates. 12s.—The preceding Divisions consist of—

ILLYRIA AND DALMATIA, 2 vols. 32 coloured Plates, 12s.

WESTERN AFRICA, 4 vols. 47 coloured Plates, 21s.

TURKEY, 6 vols. 72 coloured Plates, 32s.

HINDOSTAN, 3 vols. 36 coloured Plates, 18s.

PERSIA, 2 vols. 30 coloured Plates, 16s. 6d.

RUSSIA, 4 vols. 72 coloured Plates, 32s.

The 8th Division, CHINA, in 2 vols. 30 coloured Plates, will be published on the 1st of June.

Orders for the regular supply of The World in Miniature, or for any particular Division, each of which forms a distinct and independent work, are received by R. ACKERMANN, 101, Strand, Bookseller to the United Kingdom.

On the 1st of April will be published,

No. IV. of a NEW SERIES, being the Third, of THE REPOSITORY OF ARTS, LITERATURE, FASHIONS, &c. containing 5 coloured and 1 plain Engravings, with about 70 pages of interesting Letter-press. Price 4s.

Also, just published, a Miniature Edition of DR. SYNTAX in SEARCH of the PICTURESQUE. Price 7s.

PLUMBE ON RINGWORM.—Just published,

A PRACTICAL ESSAY on RINGWORM of the SCALP, called Tinea Capitis, in which the causes of the obstinacy of these diseases are satisfactorily explained, and successful methods of treatment copiously detailed. By SAMUEL PLUMBE, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, of the Medical and Chirurgical Society, &c.—Published by T. and G. Underwood, 32, Fleet-street.

"This Essay is very creditable to the talents and humanity of its Author, and will be highly beneficial to his fellow-creatures, and useful to his professional brethren."—Medical and Physical Journal.

"We have exhibited sufficient specimens of the matter of this Work to induce our Readers to seek a more intimate acquaintance with the contents of the original."—Med. Chir. Review.

"We are happy in being able to say that we have perused the tract before us with no inconsiderable satisfaction, thinking, as we do, that attention to the precepts it enjoins, will be productive of much benefit in the diseases of which it treats. We may add, that the pamphlet is a pleasing style, and deserving every praise eyenast it every particular."—Medical Repository.

Preparing, for the press, a Critical Examination of Dr. Willan's Classification of Cutaneous Diseases, with descriptions of Plans of Treatment of some of them, founded on minute observations of their Pathology. By the same Author.

"Lines, &c. of a beautiful colour, and preventing their turning yellow."—This new and superior article forms a striking contrast, on comparison with every other kind of Starch, by its brilliant whiteness, and when prepared for use, according to the Directions, is considerably stronger, and, consequently, more economical. Its greatest excellency consists in being very thin and transparent, resembling a thin solution of fine Gum (notwithstanding its superior strength), resembling a thin solution of fine Gum (notwithstanding its superior strength), resembling a thin solution of fine Gum Arabic, thus divested of the thick and pasty quality of common Starch. It is Arabic, thus divested of the thick and pasty quality of common Starch. It is manufactured by the Patentee, and the latter is so defective in colour, &c. that the manufactured by the Patentee, and the latter is so defective in colour, &c. that the many worthy of remark, that the latter is so defective in colour, &c. that the many worthy of remark, that the latter is so defective in colour, &c. that the many worthy of remark, that

LATEST NEWS.

Important Intelligence has been received from Paris up to Friday. The war between France and Spain may be said to have actually commenced. The French army on the line of Bayonne, 50,000 strong, is to enter Spain on the 1st. But on the other frontier, between Perpignan and the Pyrenees, a corps of Spanish royalists had been stationed under the Baron d'Eroles. On the evening of the 17th Mina and General Llobera, made an irruption into the French territory, attacked, and are said to have defeated the baron.

An article from Paris, dated the 27th March, says, a courier arrived to-day from Madrid, bringing accounts from that capital to the 21st. The King left Madrid on the 20th, according to the preconcerted arrangement. His Majesty was accompanied by nearly 6,000 men, who will probably escort him as far as La Mancha. The King and his escort left the capital as if to make a grand promenade, amid the acclamations of the people. The Cortes have not left the capital, and their departure is not yet fixed. Probably they will not set out till the danger from the invasion becomes imminent: 22,000 militia are stationed on the road to Seville. The English ambassador had set out for Seville the evening before the King: the persons of his legation still remained.—The journey of the Duke of Belluno, who left Paris so precipitately for the army, was retarded by an accident. His carriage broke down near Orleans, and was so much injured as to require half a day to repair it.

A private letter from Constantinople, dated the 27th of February, mentions that two or three shocks of an earthquake had been felt, which had destroyed a few houses, but no lives had been lost.

On Good Friday the King was present at divine service in the palace chapel at Brighton, attended by the Lord Steward, Sir William Keppel, &c. His Majesty appeared to be entirely recovered from the gout. A crowded congregation was present.

At the Sussex Assizes, held at Horsham, an action was brought by Lieutenant Edward Andrews against Patrick Conolly, a surgeon in Regent-street, Oxford-street, for libelling the character of the plaintiff, in certain letters which he wrote to the brother of the plaintiff, Captain Andrews of the 12th Lancers, and to Colonel Brotherton of the same regiment. In these letters he called the lieutenant a swindler, and used other opprobrious epithets. The Jury gave the plaintiff a verdict for 250l.

On Friday morning the body of an apparently respectable female was discovered floating in the river, at Richmond, Surrey, supposed to have been in the water several days, and being unknown was conveyed to the sign of the Three Pigeons at that place, and a Coroner's Jury summoned to investigate the cause of her death. The linen has "J. J." marked on it.

The body of a young woman, named Betty Shallcross, aged 27, was found murdered a few days since at Butterhouse-green, near Stockport. A farmer, named Samuel Fellows, has been committed, on suspicion, for trial, for the murder. She was pregnant by him.

The front of CARROLL'S Offices, No. 19, Cornhill, and 26, Oxford-street, present a curious appearance at the present moment, being entirely covered with the numerous Capital Prizes sold by him in the last contract, amongst which we noticed two of £20,000, one of £10,000, and a great number of £1,000, £500, &c. The present Lottery will commence drawing on the 9th of April, and contains Three Prizes of £20,000, Two of £5,000, Two of £2,000, &c. Fifty-three Capitals will be drawn in the first half hour, and the first drawn Prize will be entitled to £2,600.

PIDDING & Co.'s Office has experienced a greater demand for whole Tickets during the present Lottery than has occurred for a long time: this is attributable to two causes; first, the established notoriety of the lucky corner, No. 1, Cornhill, where, even in the last contract, if one person had purchased all the tickets that were sold there, he would have made a profit of many thousand pounds beyond the cost of the tickets;—secondly, because there is absolutely a better chance now of gaining money by the lottery than ever existed before: for out of 5,000 tickets, which are all to be drawn Next Wednesday, 9th April, the first 53 prizes are each to have a capital from 200l. to 20,000l., and recollect, some of these may now be obtained at Pidding's Lucky Corner.

ELEGANT GLASSES, FURNITURE, &c.—The Nobility and Gentry are invited to inspect the Warerooms of Cooper and Son, 93, Bishopsgate-street Within, where is exhibited a large Assortment of new and second-hand Plate Glasses, admirably suited to every description of drawing or dining-rooms. In the furniture department is comprised every new and elegant article of upholstery, cabinet, and chair work, the prices of which are reduced to such a scale of economy as to attract and ensure the patronage of rank and fashion.

A great Personage has often remarked a Nobleman, about fifty, in his suite what a fine head of hair he had, and was informed that he had used, twenty years constantly, Prince's celebrated Russia Oil: that great Personage replied, he would have given millions if he had done the same; in short, there are various articles puffed in the newspapers for the hair; but Ladies and Gentlemen may rely on it, that Prince's celebrated Russia Oil, is so improved with an extra ingredient, that it is the best Oil for preserving, promoting, restoring, and preventing the hair falling off, or ever turning grey, and is now a nourisher to the roots of the hair, that if it even has began to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour, and is sure to clear the scurf, from infancy to old age, and when dressing with it, will always keep the head and hair clean and beautiful.—It is no wonder that Ladies and Gentlemen have complained of late of the Russia Oil not being of service to the hair, as they have found out that unprincipled persons have sold them counterfeits; therefore Ladies and Gentlemen ought to be particular and have it of a respectable person. Ask for Prince's improved Russia Oil. The ounce bottle 5s. or a large bottle, containing five ounces for one pound, is a saving.—Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. Prince, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street, near the Pantheon; and by Mr. Smyth, Perfumer to His Majesty, New Bond-street; and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders.

WINDSOR SOAP.—J. Atkinson, 44, Gerrard-street, Soho-square, London respectfully informs the Public that his Double Refined Windsor Soap will be found a Soap of a very superior kind; it is made of the best materials, and freed from the caustic properties contained in most Soaps, and which acts so injuriously to a delicate skin; its perfume is a complete bouquet; it is gently detergent, emollient in use, very durable, and sold at the price of the commonest articles; it is highly valuable in the nursery, and where the skin of adults have got hard, rough, or uneven, it gradually, but certainly, corrects such imperfections, and makes the skin luxuriously soft, white, and even. Half pound packages, 1s. 2d.; pounds, 2s.; by taking a dozen, 1s. 9d.—Sold by most Perfumers, but the genuine has the Proprietor's signature and address on the label.

A candid examination of professional pretensions is only to be feared by those, who are conscious of incapacity. Messrs. Goss and Co. Members of the Royal College of Surgeons, confine their studies to the treatment of such disorders as arise from nervous debility. Their works "The Light of Life," and "Hygeiana," (the latter addressed to females) in full explanation of these subjects, may be had at No 20, Paternoster-row, London, Porter, 72, Grafton-street, Dublin, or at any Booksellers. Medicines can be forwarded to any part, however distant, on receiving a blank note.—11, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

FOR PASSENGERS ONLY.—For BOMBAY Direct, to SAIL early in MARCH the fine new teak Ship, CHARLES FORBES, Burthen 1000 Tons. THOMAS BRYDIN, Commander. Has excellent accommodations for Passengers, and carries a Surgeon.—Apply to Messrs. Inglis, Forbes, & Co. 2, Mansion House-place; or Wm. Abercrombie, 4, Birchin-lane.

HOME-BREWED ALE and BEER.—NEEDHAM'S PATENT PORTABLE FAMILY BREWING MACHINE, patronised by his Majesty.—The Proprietor of this highly approved requisite in domestic economy begs to call the attention of the Public to the great advantage and comfort derived from the possession of genuine home brewed Ale and Beer, produced in the highest perfection by this Machine, at less than half the brewer's charge, and in quality, flavour, and soundness for keeping, superior to that brewed from the same quantity of malt and hops by any other process. The apparatus is simple, compact, and does not require fixing; is economical in time, labour, and fuel; and, with the printed directions given, may be used successfully without any previous knowledge of brewing: it is also applicable to various other domestic and culinary purposes. The Machine is made of various sizes, (warranted to answer), price Eight Pounds and upwards, and sold only at 202, Piccadilly; where may be also had, the HUISH BEE HIVE, from which the combs are extracted without killing the Bees.

IN Cases of Asthma and of Phthisis Pulmonalis, when there is reason to suspect the Disease to be complicated with Scrophula the following Medicine should be had recourse to, viz. RYMER'S CHALYBEATE SAL POLYCHREST. This compound Salt, in which are concentrated the medicinal virtues of the Cheltenham, Bath, and Piermont Waters, Mr. Rymer can with confidence recommend as a safe and effectual remedy for the cure of Scrophula, or King's Evil, and for the cure of those genera of consumption, called Tabes, and Atrophia, which are characterized by wasting away of the body without cough, and which are symptomatic of some internal disease: and when arising from obstruction of the mesentric glands or abdominal viscera, the Chalybeate Sal Polychrest will most certainly remove it.—Sutton, and Co. (late Dicey and Sutton) No. 10, Bow Church yard, are the sole wholesale agents. It may be had retail of Sanger, (late Bacon) Oxford street; Smith, Haymarket; Ward, Holborn; Stradling, Royal Exchange; and of all the principal Venders of Patent Medicines throughout the United Kingdom, in bottles at 4s. 6d. each.

DEDICATED, BY PERMISSION, TO THE KING.

Just published, in one volume folio, price 2l. 2s. boards,

THE LOYAL and NATIONAL SONGS of ENGLAND; for One, Two, and Three Voices, selected from original manuscripts, and early printed Copies in the Library of WILLIAM RITCHINER, M.D.—Printed for Hurst, Robinson, and Co. (Booksellers to His Majesty) 90, Cheapside, and 8, Pall-Mall, London; and Archibald Constable and Co. Edinburgh.

☞ The Second Portion, comprising the most popular Sea Songs, is in the Press, and will shortly be published.

VAN HASENDONCK'S DUTCH GRAMMAR 12mo. New Edition.

Just published, price 5s. 6d. bound.

A GRAMMAR of the DUTCH LANGUAGE; with an Appendix, containing Rules, Practical Exercises, Dialogues, Letters, a Specimen for Reading, &c. By J. B. VAN HASENDONCK, B.A. The Second Edition, improved.—London: printed for Boosey and Sons, Broad-street, Royal Exchange; Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, Paternoster-row; J. Col

JOHN BULL.

"FOR GOD, THE KING, AND THE PEOPLE!"

No. 121. SUNDAY, APRIL 6, 1823. Price 7d.

KING'S THEATRE. Under the immediate Patronage of His Majesty.—The Nobility, Gentry, Subscribers to the Royal Academy of Music, and the Public in general, are respectfully informed, that A GRAND CONCERT of Ancient and Modern Music will take place in the above Theatre, on THURSDAY, APRIL 24, 1823, for the Benefit of this Institution. The Select Committee of the Royal Academy of Music is happy to announce, that the following eminent Professors and Honorary Members of this Institution have, on this occasion, kindly consented to give their valuable assistance:—Mrs. Salmon, Miss Vestris, Miss Goodall, Miss Paton, Miss Stephens, Miss Travis, Madame Camporese, Madame Ronzi De Begnis, Signora Caradori, Mrs. W. Tree, Madame Vestris, Mr. W. Kuyvett, Mr. Terrail, Mr. Hawes, Mr. Braham, Mr. Vaughan, Mr. W. Elliott, Mr. Evans, Master Smith, Mr. Smith, Mr. Sale, Mr. Durouet, Mr. Pen, Mr. Elliott, Mr. Evans, Master Smith, Mr. Smith, Mr. Sale, Mr. Durouet, Mr. Pen, Mr. Kellner, Signior Curioni, Signor Begrez, Signor Placci, Signor Sale, Jun., Mr. Kellner, Signior Curioni, Signor Begrez, Signor Placci, Signor De Begnis, and Signor Porto. Harp, Mr. Bochsa: Flute, Mr. Nicholson; Horn, Mr. Willman; Double Bass, Mr. Dragonetti; Leaders, Mr. Clarinet, Mr. Spagnoletti, and Mr. Mori; Dr. Crotch, Principal of the Royal Academy, will conduct the Performance, and preside at the Organ. The Band and Chorus will consist of upwards of 300 Performers, from the Antient Music, the Opera, and the Philharmonic Concerts, for which the Orchestra will be considerably enlarged. A grand Organ (built expressly for Mr. Hawes) will be opened on this occasion by Mr. Adams. The First Part from the Sacred Works of Handel, Haydn, Mozart, &c. commencing with the Four First Movements of the "Dettingen Te Deum;" and concluding with the Grand Coronation Anthem, composed by Attwood. A Miscellaneous Selection of Songs, Glees, &c. by Modern Composers, will form the Second Part, commencing with Mozart's Grand Symphony in C (Jupiter). In the course of the evening, (by particular desire), Mozart's favourite Duet, "Deh vieni," and the popular Trio called "Lessons of Love," by Paesiello, will be performed; now published by Miss Bartleman from her late Brother's Manuscript. The Choral Department will be assisted by the Young Gentlemen of St. Paul's Cathedral and His Majesty's Chapels Royal.—Tickets, Half-a-Guinea each, to be had at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Regent-street; Birchall's, and Chappell's, New Bond-street; Power's, Strand; Goulding's, Soho square; Preston's, Dean-street, Soho; Clementi's, Cheapside; Betts', Royal Exchange; and of Mr. Hawes, 7, Adelphi Terrace.—The Concert will commence at Eight o'Clock precisely.—Further particulars in a few days.

MR. SAPIO has the Honour to announce to the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public, that his CONCERT is fixed for THURSDAY, the 24th of APRIL, particulars of which will be speedily announced.

MUSIC.—Families and Private Pupils attended by a Lady who is perfect mistress of Music, viz. the Harp, Piano Forte, and Singing, and who has had considerable experience in Teaching. No objection to attend a short distance out of town.—Letters, post paid, addressed to M. N: at Goulding and Co's, Soho square.

PINNOCK'S IMPROVED and SUPERIOR-TONED PIANO-FORTES, WARRANTED, manufactured and sold by him, at No. 267, St. Clement's Church-yard, Strand, are submitted to the notice of the Musical World and the Public in general, as combining, in a very superior degree, the various qualities of power, brilliancy, sweetness, and uniformity of tone, so essentially requisite in constituting good and perfect Instruments. Elegant Cabinet Piano-fortes, from 50 to 80 Guineas.—Harmonic or Cottage ditto, from 45 to 70 Guineas.—Square Pianos, from 30 Guineas upwards, according to the style of ornament. Any Lady or Gentleman wishing to exchange an old Instrument for one of the above, will be waited on at their request, and the utmost value allowed for it.

NEW MUSIC published by the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 295, Regent-street:—"Hither Fairy Queen," a Canzonet, sung with great applause by Mrs. Salmon, at the British Concerts. composed by T. A. Rawlings, price 2s. 6d. "The night is rainy," a Glee for 3 voices, composed by T. Welsh, 2s. 6d.; "Heigh, ho! what shall I do," a Song, sung by Mrs. Salmon and Miss Carew, composed by T. Welsh, 2s. Rondoletto for the Piano Forte, composed by J. Moscheles, pr. 3s.; "O'er the water to Charlie," arranged as a rondo for the Piano Forte, by J. W. Holder, pr. 2s. 6d. The Jessamine, No. 1, 2s. 6d.; the Hyacinth, No. 2, 2s. 6d.; the Myrtle, No. 3, 2s. 6d.; the Rose, No. 4, 2s. 6d.; the Lily, No. 5, 2s. 6d.; the Eglantine, No. 6, 2s. 6d. The above 6 Nos. are for the Piano Forte, with an accompaniment for the Flute (ad lib.) in which are introduced popular Airs, arranged by T. A. Rawlings.

NEW MUSIC.—PIANO FORTE. "Introduzione ed Aria all'Inglese, by J. B. Cramer, price 3s. 6d.: Rondo on the admired Duet in "Maid Marian, by F. Kalkbrenner, pr. 3s.; Rondo on the popular Duet "As it fell upon a day," by F. Ries, pr. 3s.; Capriccio Ecossois, with the airs "Kerrin Cree" and "Charlie over the water," by G. Kiallmark, pr. 2s. 6d.—HARP. Fifteen brilliant and short Preludes, pr. 4s.; and Caledonian Fantasia, with "Scots wha hae," pr. 3s. 6d. by N. C. Bochsa; the Music in "Macbeth," as Duets for Harp and Piano Forte, price 7s.; and Select Airs from Rossini's Opera "Il Tancredi" and "Othello," in books, price 5s. each, by J. F. Burrowes. VOCAL. The whole of the Music in "Maid Marian," composed by H. R. Bishop, pr. 18s. The Songs, Duets, and Glees may be had separate. "Young Allen," romance by Ditto, price 1s. 6d.; the celebrated "Tramp Chorus," by Ditto, price 3s.; "The Vocalist," a new work on Singing, calculated to prepare students for more elaborate treatises, by J. Parry, price 5s.—Published by Goulding, D'Almaine, Potter, and Co. 20, Soho-square.

NEW MUSIC, just published by Mayhew and Co. No. 17, Old Bond-street.

HART'S THIRD SET of SCOTCH QUADRILLES, including the celebrated and admired Airs of "The Campbells are coming," "Arthur's my name," "Corn riggs," "O whistle, and I'll come to you," and "Loch Erroch side," with entire new figures, composed and arranged for the Piano Forte or Harp, and respectfully dedicated to Lady Grey, by Joseph Hart. 3s.

The great success which attended the publication of Mr. Hart's First and Second Sets of Scotch Quadrilles, has induced him to offer a Third Set to the notice of the Nobility and Gentry, which he trusts will prove worthy their patronage.

Also just published, HART'S SIXTH SET of QUADRILLES, selected from Rossini's popular Opera of "La Gazza Ladra," as danced at Almack's and the Nobility's Balls. Arranged for the Piano Forte or Harp. Price 4s.

London: Mayhew and Co. Music-sellers to the Royal Family, 17, Old Bond-street, where may be obtained,

New Editions of Hart's Fifth Set, from "Il Turco in Italia;" also his Fourth Set, including George the Fourth's Coronation Waltz. "Celebrated Hussars," with the admired "La Cendrillon," and Irish Quadrilles, containing the Rose, Shamrock, Thistle, Emerald Isle, and the Sovereign, all of which are in constant demand.

NEW SCOTCH QUADRILLES.—The MID-LOTHIANS, dedicated (by permission) to Lady Gwydir, containing a Selection of the most celebrated Scottish Airs, arranged for the Piano-forte, by R. W. Evans; with new Figures by J. S. Pollock.—Published by R. W. Evans, 146, Strand.—Of whom may be had, The Parisians; The Rogers, or Les Maissonneurs, &c. &c. by R. W. Evans.—Shortly will be published, Kelvin Grove, arranged as a Rondo, by R. W. Evans.

NEW FOREIGN MUSIC, at very moderate prices. R. COCKS and Co. beg leave respectfully to inform the Nobility, Gentry, and Public that they have formed an establishment (20, Princes-street, Hanover-square,) for the importation and publication of Foreign Classical Music, and also for the Works of the best British Composers. R. C. and Co. beg also to state, that all orders with which they shall be favoured will receive the most punctual attention, and that no expence will be spared to render their establishment deserving the choice works of every great master, including the complete Operas of Mozart, for piano and voice, in 10 vols. price 7l. 10s. Also Rossini's ditto, for ditto, in 11 vols. at very low prices; and Pleyel's Edition of Haydn's Quartetts, price 2l. published, and may be had on application. R. C. and Co. late principal assistants to Messrs. Clementi and Co.'s.

MISS LINWOOD'S GALLERIES of PICTURES, in Leicester-square, are RE-OPENED with new DECORATIONS, ALTERATIONS, and ADDITIONS, and will continue open every day, (Sundays excepted) from Nine o'clock in the morning until dark. Admittance, 2s. Children, 1s.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF MISS CLARA FISHER,
AND THE LAST NIGHT OF HER APPEARANCE THIS SEASON.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.—On Monday Evening, April 7, will be performed Sheridan's Opera of "The Duenna."—Carlos, Mr. Braham; Clara, Miss Stephens; Little Isaac, Miss Clara Fisher. With the Interlude of "Bombastes Furioso."—General Bombastes, Miss Clara Fisher. To conclude with the "Actress of All Work."—Maria (the Actress of All Work), Miss Clara Fisher.—Tickets to be had of Messrs. Budd and Calkin, 99, Pall-mall; 26, Euston Place; and of Mr. Spring, at the Theatre, where places may be taken.

OLYMPIC THEATRE, Newcastle-street, Strand.—ST. ALEXANDRE having been completely AT HOME in his Popular Entertainments, during the last week, at this Theatre, will repeat "his Rogueries" every Evening until further notice.—Boxes, 4s. Pit 2s. Gal. 1s. Second Price at Half-past Eight. Doors to open at Half-past Six, performance to commence at Seven.

BRITISH INSTITUTION, PALL-MALL.—CLOSE of the PRESENT EXHIBITION.—The Gallery for the Exhibition and Sale of the Works of Modern Artists IS OPEN Daily, from Ten in the Morning until Five in the Evening, and will be closed on Saturday the 19th of April.—Admission 1s. Catalogue 1s.

(By Order) JOHN YOUNG, Keeper.

The Gallery will re-open early in May with a selection of the Works of Sir Joshua Reynolds and the ancient Masters.

CORONATION.—HENRY ASTON BARKER'S PANORAMA, Leicester square.—Now Open, a Grand Representation of the CORONATION PROCESSION, with Portraits of His MAJESTY, GEORGE the FOURTH, the ROYAL DUKES, and several others; particularly of the late Marquis of LONDONDERRY, in the full Habit of the Order of the Garter. The Panorama exhibits at least Thirty Thousand Figures!!!—A VIEW of LAUSANNE, with the LAKE of GENEVA, is also open.—Admittance to each Painting, 1s.

COSMORAMA.—The CHANGE for April having taken place, the Views now exhibiting are those of the Exterior and Interior of the Pantheon at Rome, by Moon-light: the Glaciers of Grindelwald, in Switzerland; the Tagus, from Belleu Castle; Two of the City of Lyons; and the Exterior and Interior of St. Peter's, at Rome, (lately put up again at the general desire of the Visitors of the Cosmorama, though already seen by many thousands of them several times over.)—This exhibition being lighted by artificial light, is not dependent on the weather.—Admittance One Shilling.—26, St. James's-street.

SUBSCRIPTION LIBRARY, 27, Old Bond-street, London.—MR. EBERS begs leave respectfully to announce that he has greatly extended the arrangements at his British and Foreign Library, so that the following superior accommodations are derived by Subscribers to this Establishment:—1st. They are entitled to the IMMEDIATE PERUSAL of the NEW PUBLICATIONS.—2d. The Proprietor engages to purchase for Subscribers any works of general interest that may not have been previously added to the Library.—3d. Subscribers have the right of choosing from a most extensive collection of the established works in the various branches of English, French, and Italian Literature.—And 4thly. Subscribers are admitted to the use of a costly series of Publications, embellished with highly finished and coloured Engravings, which illustrate in a beautiful manner the History, Antiquities, Costumes, Sports, Pastimes, &c. of the Ancient and Modern World, together with Maps and Atlasses.—New Catalogues, with terms, to be had on application.—Books regularly forwarded to all parts of the United Kingdom, and the Continent.

On the 1st of April was published,

THE NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE, for April. Contents: I. On Music, with reference to the Principles of the Beautiful in that Art —II. The 1st of April, or arte perire sun—III. Songs of the Cid. by Mrs. Hemans; the Cid's Death-bed, a Ballad, &c —IV. Ante and Post-nuptial Journal —V. Barry Cornwall's New Poems—VI. Friends and Friendship—VII. British Galleries of Art, No. 4: Windsor Castle—VIII. Barry the Painter—IX. Remarks on Col. Stewart's Sketches of the Highlanders—X. London Lyrics: the Upas in Marybone-lane; an Actor's Meditations—XI. Greek Songs; the Bowl of Liberty; the Voice of Scio, &c.—XII. Grimm's Ghost, Letter 7; the Seven Singers—XIII. The Prophecy of Constantine—XIV. Spring, Youth, and Love—XV. Peter Pindarics—XVI. Heaven and Earth, a Mystery—XVII. On the Troubadours—XVIII. The Physician, No. 5—XIX. Dramatic Travels—XX. Manzoni's new Tragedy—XXI. Reviews of various Works, English and Foreign, and the usual varieties in Biography, the Fine and Useful Arts, Music, the Drama, Politics, Commerce, &c. London; printed for Henry Colburn and Co.; Bell and Bradfute, Edinburgh; and John Cumming, Dublin; of whom may be had the preceding Numbers of this Work from its commencement in 1821. Price 3s. 6d. each; or in six volumes, handsomely half-bound, price 14s. each.

WEST INDIES, &c.—In a few days will be published,

A FAITHFUL NARRATIVE of the INSURRECTION of 1795 in GRANADA, WEST INDIES. By a Gentleman who was one of the Prisoners in Morne Quaco. With Prefatory Remarks, by a Military Man who was nearly 30 years resident in the West Indies.—Printed for James Ridgway, Piccadilly.

Just published, in 8vo. price 14s. boards, the Second Edition, greatly enlarged, of

AN ESSAY on the HISTORY of the ENGLISH GOVERNMENT and CONSTITUTION, from the Reign of Henry VII. to the present time. By LORD JOHN RUSSELL.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had, by the same Author,

2. The LIFE of WILLIAM, LORD RUSSELL, with some Account of the Times in which he lived. The Third Edition, in 2 vols. 8vo. 11. 1s. boards.

3. DON CARLOS, or Persecution; a Tragedy, in Five Acts. Sixth Edition, 8vo. price 4s. 6d. sewed.

Just published, in 2 vols. 8vo. price 11. 11s. 6d. boards,

HISTORY of ROMAN LITERATURE, from its earliest Period to the Augustan Age. By JOHN DUNLOP, Esq. Author of the "History of Fiction."—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. —Of whom may be had, by the same Author,

2. The HISTORY of FICTION; 3 vols. post 8vo. 21. 2s. boards.

Just published, in 1 vol. 8vo. price 12s. boards,

TRAVELS in IRELAND, in the Year 1822, exhibiting Sketches of the Moral, Physical, and Political State of the Country, with Reflections on the best Means of Improving its Condition. By THOMAS REID, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons in London, and Surgeon in the Royal Navy.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had, by the same Author,

2. TWO VOYAGES to NEW SOUTH WALES and VAN DIEMAN'S LAND; with a Description of the present State of that Colony. In 8vo. 12s. bds.

Just published, by J. Deighton and Sons, price 5s. 6d. bds.

THE CAMBRIDGE UNIVERSITY CALENDER for the Year 1823; containing a list of all the Members of the University, the Tripos Lists of Honours for the last 27 years, Prizes, Exhibitions, Scholarships, Parliamentary Degrees conferred during the year 1822, a List of the Masters of each Trouse &c. Degrees conferred during the year 1822, a List of the Masters of each College from its foundation, the Representatives in Parliament of the University for the last century, with the Problems used at the Examination for the Degree of Bachelor of Arts in January last; also Regulations for the institution of a previous Examination of Undergraduates, an Account of the Observatory, &c. &c.—To be continued Annually.—Sold in London by Longman and Co.; C. and J. Rivington; Hatchard and Son; C. and W. B. Whittaker; J. Mawman; and Simpkin and Marshall; and by J. Parker, Oxford.

In 12mo. with a new portrait,

THE LIFE of the ADMIRABLE CRICHTON. By PATRICK FRASER TYTLER, Esq. Advocate, F. R. S. E. and F. S. A. Second Edition, corrected and enlarged.—Printed for W. and C. Tait, Edinburgh; and Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

In 2 vols. post 8vo. 11. 8s.

HESPERIDES; or, Works both Human and Divine of ROBERT HERRICK.

Herrick is instanced, in the Quarterly Review, (vol. IV. p. 167) "as one of the striking examples of the unjustly neglected early poets;" and is said to have possessed "vigour of fancy, warmth of feeling, soundness of sense, and ease of versification," in a very high degree. See also Drake's Literary Hours, Ni chols' Leicestershire, Ellis, Campbell, The Sketch-book, The Retrospective Review, &c.

A few copies have been printed in 2 vols. 4to. price 4l. 4s.

Printed for W. and C. Tait, Edinburgh; Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, Paternoster-row; and Robert Triphook, Old Bond-street, London.

Just published, in one vol. foolscap 8vo. price 6s. boards,

THE POPULAR SUPERSTITIONS and FESTIVE AMUSEMENTS of the HIGHLANDERS of SCOTLAND. By W. G. STEWART.

"Of Brownyis and of Bogilis full is this Buik."—Gavin Douglas.

Printed for Archibald Constable and Co. Edinburgh; and Hurst, Robinson, and Co. 90, Cheapside, and 8, Pall Mall, London. ☞ This volume contains an account of the Superstitions, Traditionary Stories, and Festive Amusements of the Highlanders; illustrated in Narrations of Ghosts, Fairies, Brownies, Water Kelpies, Spunkies, Witchcraft, Hallowe'en, Christmas, Fasten's Eve, Weddings, Wakes, &c.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

[This Gazette contains the appointment of the Right Hon. W. Huskisson, to be President of the Committee of Council of Foreign trade. The Right Hon. C. Grant, to act as President in the absence of Mr. Huskisson. Col. Sir H. Hardinge, to be Clerk of the Ordnance; and the return of Walter Boyd, Esq. as Member for Lymington.]

WAR OFFICE, 5th April, 1823.

4th Reg. Drag. Guards: Lieut. W. B. Ravenhill to be Capt. vice King, ret. Cornet W. H. L. Brooke to be Lieut. vice Ravenhill; G. M. Keane, Gent. to be Cornet, vice Brooke.—5th Ditto: Capt. R. D. Cane to be Major, vice Walker, dec.; Lieut. and Adj. Jackson to be Capt. vice Cane; Lieut. F. Westenra to be Lieut. vice Locke, exc.—4th Reg. Light Drag.: Cornet E. Bromwich to be Cornet, vice Knox, exch.—7th Ditto. Capt. J. J. Fraser to be Major, vice Williams, ret.: Lieut. the Hon. G. D. R. F. Strangways to be Capt. vice Fraser: Cornet R. Smyth to be Lieut. vice Strangways: J. L. Hope to be Cornet, vice Smyth.—11th Reg. Light Drag.: Cornet A. W. Bishop to be Lieut. vice Brisco, dec.: Ens. R. Lawrie to be Cornet, vice Bishop.—12th Ditto: Serj.-Major R. Bell to be Reg. Quarter-master, vice Sidley dec.—17th Ditto: Cornet E. Knox, to be Cornet, vice Bromwich, exc.—1st Reg. Foot: to be Lieuts.: Lieuts. H. Gray, vice Bruce; and H. Nicholson, vice Pounden, exc.—7th Ditto: Major J. Carter to be Major, vice Fitzgerald, exc.—11th Ditto: Lieut. P. Mitchell to be Lieut. vice O'Kelly, exc.—14th Ditto: Quartermaster Serj. S. Goddard to be Quartermast. vice Harris—15th Ditto: Lieut T. Bannister to be Ad. vice Hutchinson.—27th Ditto: to be Lieuts.: Lieut. W. Trimmer, vice E. O'Halloran, exc. and Ensign W. Grindlay, vice Carey.—29th Ditto: Ens. T. Knox to be Lieut. vice Robbins, exc.—22d Ditto: Capt. A. Campbell to be Capt. vice Castill, exc.—24th Ditto: Capt. T. D. Franklyn to be Capt. vice Wilson, exc.—32d Ditto: Lieut. A. S. Reoch to be Lieut. vice Robinson, exc.—36th Ditto: Ens. R. Montgomery to be Lieut. vice Dowman, dec.; F. Paget, Esq. Page of Honour to His Majesty, to be Ens. vice Montgomery.—38th Ditto: Capt. C. Wilson to be Capt. vice Franklyn, exc.; Lieut. E. O'Halloran to be Lieut. vice Trimmer, exc.—41st Do.: Ens. W. Gossip to be Lieut. vice Horne, dec.—43d Ditto: Gent. Cadet Sir R. J. Fletcher, Bart. to be Ens. vice Grindlay.—45th Ditto: Lieut. Hon. C. T. Monckton, to be Capt. vice Gardon, ret.—47th Ditto: Ens. J. Stuart to be Lieut. vice Hamilton; to be Ensigns: R. Sweetenham, Gent. vice Lawrie; C. C. Taylor, Gent. vice Stuart.—48th Ditto; Gent. Cadet Charles D. O'Brien, vice Hagzestone.—52d Ditto: Lieutenant Stanhope Bruce to be Lieut. vice Gray, exc.—61st Ditto: Ensign W. Mein to be Lieut. vice Campbell; R. Blunt, Gent. to be Ensign, vice Macdonnell.—67th Ditto: Capt. W. Hore to be Major, vice James; Lieut. K. Cassidy to be Capt. vice Hore; Ensign S. Robbins to be Ens. vice Knox.—73d Ditto: Brev. Lieut. Col. T. G. Fitzgerald to be Major, vice Carter.—74th Ditto: Maj. J. A. Mein to be Lieut.-Col. vice Trench, dec.; Brev. Maj. W. Moore to be Major, vice Mein; Lieut. A. H. Patterson to be Capt. vice Moore —81st Ditto: the Marquess of Douro to be Ensign, vice Hammond.—84th Ditto: Capt. R. Law to be Capt. vice Fraser; Ensign W. S. Johnson to be Ensign, vice Smith; Ass.-Surg. A. M'Queen to be Ass.-Surgeon, vice Tonnere.—87th ditto, Hosp. Assis. W. P. Birmingham, to be Assis. Surg. vice Dunn, dec.; 89th ditto: Lieut. W. Carey, to be Lieut. vice Campbell, ret.; 92d ditto: Brev. Lieut.-Col. J. F. Fulton, to be Maj. vice Cooper, exch.—1st West India Reg. Capt J. Macdonald, to be Capt. vice Law.—1st Ceylon Reg., to be Capts.: Capts. J. Antill, J. Parker, and T. D. Dunne; Lieuts. J. H. Hamilton and R. P. Campbell: to be First Lieut., Ens. F. Hammond, vice Braybrook, prom: to be First Lieuts., Lieuts. J. Burke, H. W. Smith, G. Fretz, C. Ashur, and Ens. J. Hagerstoue: to be Second Lieutenants, Second Lieutenants Cosby Warburton and David Meaden, John Stratford Rodney and Hugh Van Kempen, gents.—Cape Corps of Cavalry—To be Major: Capt. H. Somerset.—To be Capt.: Lieut. J. A. Reid and Loughborough. To be Lieut.: Cor. W. L. Heathcote.—Brev.: Maj. Gen. Sir E. Barnes, K.C.B. to be Lieut.-Gen. in the Island of Ceylon.—Staff: Col. J. Gardiner to be Deputy Adj. Gen. to the Troops serving in Ireland, vice Thornton, who resigns; and Capt. R. Fraser to be Fort-Major at Jersey, vice Lister, who resigns.—Hospital Staff: Ass.-Surg. A. Tonnere to be Ass.-Surg. to the Forces.

Commissions signed by the Lord Lieut. of the county of Wigtown.—Major-Gen. J. W. Acker; P. H. Blair, Esq.; J. G. Moore, Esq.; J. Adair, Esq.; and H. D. Stewart, Esq. to be Deputy Lieutenants.

Commissions in the Staffordshire Militia signed by the Lord Lieut. of the county of Stafford—W. Yates, Esq. to be Capt. vice Bickley, resigned; Cornet F. Cruso to be Lieut. vice Hand, dec.—To be Cornets: J. Henneker, Gent.; W. Ashton, Gent.; and H. D. Bourne, Gent.

Commission in the Derwickshire Reg. of Militia signed by the Lord Lieut. of the county of Haddington—C. Middlemass, jun. to be Ensign, vice Thornton, deceased.

BANKRUPTS.

R. COUT and W. HAIGH, Leeds, dyers—J. BARKER, Crane-court, shoe-factor—S. DICKINSON, Great Driffield, money scrivener—J. K. ALDERSON, Norwich, plumber—B. HILL, Bath, furniture-broker.

GREAT ROOM, SPRING GARDENS.—NOVELTY.—MARSHALL'S Grand Historical Peristrephic PANORAMA of the CEREMONY of the CORONATION, the Coronation Procession, and the Banquet, painted on 10,000 square feet of canvas, and displaying nearly 100,000 figures, upwards of 500 of the principal characters on the foreground the size of life. The movement of the Panorama gives such an imposing and striking illusion, that the spectators are led to believe themselves present at the different splendid ceremonies it represents; the whole accompanied by a full Military Band, assisted by a Fine-toned Organ and Trumpets, who perform that Coronation Music.—IS NOW OPEN.—Day Exhibitions at 12, 1, 2, 3, and 4 o'clock; and in the Evening, brilliantly illuminated, at 7, 8, and 9 o'clock.—Admission, Boxes, 2s. Gallery, 1s.; Descriptive Book, 6d.

A VERY GREAT SAVING.—GENUINE LAVENDER WATER and ESPRIT de ROSE may be had retail at the Manufactory, 3 Gloucester-place, near Smith-street King's road, Chelsea, at about half the usual cost, of such superior strength and fragrance as to defy all competition. Sold also by Mr. Sharpus, china-man, Cocksparr-street; Miss Cole, 30, Speldhurst-street, Burton-crescent, and Mr. Letts, 32, Cornhill.—All orders by post to be addressed to the Manufactory. Not less than 1 dozen pints of Lavender Water can be had at the exportation price.

CHAMPAGNES.—CHARLES WRIGHT, Wine Merchant to His R. H. the Duke of Clarence, next to the King's and opposite the Haymarket Theatres, Opera Colonnade, London, is now landing CHAMPAGNES, ROUGE ET BLANC, first quality, brilliant condition, (G. Perls, Sueva, Avize, growers,) 41.4s. per doz.; CLARET, ST. JULIEN ET LA ROSE 63s.

OLD PORT, 36s.; SHERRY, superior, 36s.; and CAPE MADEIRA, 16s. per hamper. A 3-dozen hamper, containing one dozen of each of these wines, bottled, &c. for 5l. and so in proportion. MADEIRA, WINDSOR, SHERRIES, CALCAVELLA, 40s. per dozen; OLD COGNAC BRANDY, 23s. 6d. per gallon, and fine OLD RUM 15s. 6d. Fresh empty Wine Pipes 17s. each. Postage to be paid, and no credit given.

A YOUNG LADY is desirous of obtaining a SITUATION as COMPANION to a LADY. Salary not so much a consideration as a comfortable home. She speaks French, and will have no objection to travel.—Letters addressed, post paid, to H. W. Mr. Spalding's, Wine-merchant, Camberwell.

DRAWING ROOM FURNITURE.—A complete and splendid suite of Chairs, Sofas, and Tables, with six of the handsomest Silk Damask Curtains in London; and will be sold for half their value, by Nias and Co. agents, 32, Berners-street, Oxford-street.

THE Property of a Gentleman, and may be SOLD, one of the best London-built LANDAULETS in the country, quite new, and travels very light. Will be sold at half what it was charged to the Gentleman, by Nias and Co. agents, 32, Berners-street, Oxford street.

KENNINGTON.—APARTMENTS WANTED by two single Gentlemen of respectability, whose principal object is to join a Private genteel Family, where they could meet with cheerful and agreeable society. The neighbourhood of Kennington Common would be preferred. Letters, post paid, stating terms, &c. to be directed to P. P. Batson's, Cornhill, no others will be attended to, and no Boarding House need apply.

MONEY on EQUITABLE TERMS.—The Advertiser advances Money to any extent, at moderate interest, whether on Freehold, Copyhold, Leasehold, Lifehold, Funded, Church Livings, or other similar Securities, and assures those who may honour him with their confidence, that his long experience treatment the most candid, liberal, and explicit. Applications in business is sometimes viewed with mistrust, from the dishonourable conduct of disreputable people.—Letters, post-paid, to A. Z. care of Mr. Sollitt, 19, Great Inner Temple-lane, Fleet-street, will receive immediate attention. Where no card of address may be had.—Reversions are purchased.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—Mr. W. BEACALL, Surgeon Dentist, 6, Greek-street, Soho-square, having, with unremitting attention made the Science of Artificial Teeth, where mechanical contrivance is required, his peculiar study, he continues to supply the loss of Teeth with Nature's Artificial, in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single tooth to a complete Set, at little more than one half the regular prices. Decayed Teeth are so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful, without pain or injury to the enamel. Decayed Teeth or Stumps extracted with the utmost care and safety, or stopped to prevent irritation on the nerve. Every operation on the Teeth and Gums. Attendance at home from ten till four.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

Addison and Co. Newcastle-upon-Tyne, earthenware-manufacturers—Shuttleworth and Co. Manchester, cotton-merchants—Lister and Co. Hightown, Birstall, Yorkshire, card-makers—E. and J. Bunting, New Bond-street, dyers—Youle and Co. Kingston-upon-Hull, raff-merchants, so far as respects E. Youle—Clarke and Weatherley, Fleet-street, tea-urn-manufacturers—T. and J. Allen, Warwick, painters—Cartlidge and Cork, Burslem, Staffordshire, earthenware-manufacturers—Young and Thorne, Barnstaple, Devonshire, patent lead pipe-manufacturers—Bloxam and Argent, Hinckley, Leicestershire, surgeons—Ingman and Franklin, St. James's-street, Piccadilly, tailors—Mason and Flint, Spitalfields, dyers—Tankard and Clark, Compton-street, Clerkenwell, linen-drapers.

BANKRUPTCY ENLARGED.

T. WELCH, Great Tower-street, wine-merchant, from April 5 to April 19.

BANKRUPTS.

J. MUNDELL, Liverpool, draper—T. CRAWFORD, Liverpool, ship-chandler—J. JACKSON, Holborn-hill, wine-merchant—J. SMITH, Newbury, Berkshire, baker.—F. FREDRICKS, Crickhowell, Breconshire, banker.—S. HODGSON, Dover-street, Piccadilly, hotel-keeper.—J. WHIDDON, Exeter, grocer.—J. SQUIRE, Kendal, Westmorland, watch-maker—R. FLACK, Shepherd-street, Oxford-street, cabinet-maker—J. HELLICAR, Andover, Hampshire, linen-draper—J. and J. GREEN, jun. Warminster, Wiltshire, brewers.

DIVIDENDS.

At the Court of Commissioners of Bankrupts—April 12, T. and E. S. Foster, Yalding, Kent, maltsters—April 8, T. Griffis, Knightsbridge, plumber.

May 2, J. Ryley, Birmingham, spoon-maker—April 25, J. Stoker, Doncaster, tinman—May 2, C. Mason, Birmingham, druggist.

CERTIFICATES—April 22.

T. W. Elam, Bradford, Wiltshire, clothier—J. Alloway, Rotherithe, timber-merchant—T. Byrne, King-street, Bryanstone-square, tailor—W. B. Townshend, Little Chelsea, brewer—J. Hiron, Banbury, Oxfordshire, grocer—L. J. J. Noel, Great Ormond street, bill-broker—J. Gray, Kingston, linen-draper.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARIS, MARCH 29.—The Quotidienne says:—"The Courier of the Descamisados (the Courier Francais) has announced upon positive information, that Mina and Llobera arrived upon the extreme frontier on the 19th instant, and that these two Constitutional Generals passed down the whole line which separates the two States; if in fact the Courier has received positive information it ought to have been informed of something more; it might have added that Mina was not only accompanied with General Llobera, but also with Gen. Fabvier. This group displayed to the French troops a tri-coloured flag and an Imperial Eagle. These Buonapartean demonstrations only excited contempt. Mina was disposed to pass the frontier line by himself, when the General who commands there informed him that he would be fired at if he advanced another step;—the heroic Mina withdrew."

The affair of the Editors of the Journal du Commerce, and of the Courier Francais has been decided before the Tribunal of Correctional Police. M. Cardon, the Editor of the Journal du Commerce, was first heard for the article in that paper of March 11, 1823, which was denounced to the Chamber of Deputies by M. Frenilly. The Court condemned Cardon to three months' imprisonment, and a fine of 3,000 francs, ordered that he should be bound to insert the present sentence in his paper within three days, and condemned him besides in costs.—The Tribunal then proceeded to try separately the accusations against the Editor of the Journal du Commerce and of the Courier Francais, for having given an account (without being authorized) of the secret sitting of the Chamber of Deputies, on the 8th of February, for the discussion on the Address, and for having, besides, excited the citizens to hatred and contempt of the King's Government, by attributing to the President of the Council of Ministers language which he did not hold, viz.—That M. de Villele, replying to Messrs. de la Bourdonnaye and Delalot, had said that the French Government has, relatively to Spain, done all it could to favour the insurgents. The Court sentenced Messrs. Cardon and Legravieux, responsible editors of the two journals, as they refused to give up the names of the authors of the articles, to three months' imprisonment, and to a fine of 2,000 francs each; declared the seizure of the numbers of the 9th of February to be valid; ordered the copies to be torn to pieces; and condemned these editors also in costs.

The affair of the young men arrested in the tumult of the 3d and 6th of March, was divided, and tried by the Court of Correctional Police, on two separate days; on the first, six persons were implicated; viz. Blochet, aged forty, tailor; Choffard, apothecary pupil; Arnout, thirty-three, merchant's clerk; Evrard, cutler; Dioiot, twenty-six; and Claitte, traveller. The last appeared on a summons; the others were prisoners. Blochet was accused of having violently resisted gendarmes, who wished to hinder him from crossing the Pont Louis XVI. and of having insulted, by gestures, a Commissary of Police, in seizing him by the collar. The others are accused of having added seditious cries to those of "Vive Manuel!" "Vive le Cote Gauche! Vive la liberte." The Tribunal condemned Blochet to 2 months' imprisonment, and a fine of 50 francs; Choffard, 8 months, and 100 francs; Arnout and Diolot, each 6 months, and 50 francs; Evrard, 2 months, and 25 francs; and Claitte, 15 days' imprisonment, and 16 francs fine.

The Duke of Angoulême reviewed the troops assembled on the plain at Perpignan, about ten days ago. They were composed of two battalions of the 7th regiment of the line, two of the 18th, two of the 26th, one of the 32d, one of the 60th, and another of the 6th, of the 18th and 23d mounted chasseurs, to which are joined the two squadrons newly arrived from Carcassone, of 250 foot and 60 horse artillery, with 50 soldiers of the train.

The Quotidienne says that hostilities will not commence till the 10th instant—the statement that the French army would cross the Pyrenees on the 1st seems to have been unfounded.

Messrs. Rouen, Sensier, Sang, Parysi, Charleau, and Desloges, appeared last week before the Tribunal of the Correctional Police, on a charge of having uttered seditious cries on the day of M. Manuel's exclusion from the Chamber. A great number of witnesses were heard on both sides—but the further hearing was adjourned.

The responsible Editor of the Lunes Parisiennes has been sentenced by the 7th Chamber to two months' imprisonment, and a fine of 300 francs.

In the Chamber of Deputies, on Monday, a discussion took place on the Law of Finance; it was opened by M. de Labourdonnaye, who, in a speech of considerable length, contended, that the Budget, being presented in time of war, and yet, not including all the expenditure required for a period of peace, was, in reality, a mere fiction, which did not deserve the honour of serious discussion. The object was to create a false impression as to the real state of the finances of the country. He then proceeded to animadvert upon the tardy and indecisive policy of M. de Villele, with regard to Spain, and upon the failure of his promises, when he entered the Ministry, that Royalist principles should obtain a signal triumph.—The President of the Council replied to M. de Labourdonnaye, but he confined himself entirely to the vindication of the budget upon financial principles and calculations. He concluded by saying, "I limit myself to those explanations, the only ones which would be worthy of notice."—(Almost unanimous marks of approbation.)

MADRID, MARCH 16.—The near approach of the invasion of the French, one would think, ought to have effect upon the spirits of the Spanish people; but really in Madrid they seem to think nothing about it. The Prado is crowded every evening with as much gaiety as if all the world were in profound peace, and many persons say that they will not give themselves the least trouble about the matter—that the French are coming as friends, and not as enemies. "Let them come," they say, "we shall know the worst, and, in the meantime, let us go on as well as we can."—The plan of the French campaign is said to be as follows:—The army of reserve is to occupy the banks of the Ebro; from 10 to 15,000 men are to be sent on to Madrid, under the command of Quesada; an equal force is to gain Barcelona under the Baron d'Eroles. The fleet which lately sailed from Brest is said to have on board 10,000 men, who are to be landed near the mouth of the Guadiana, and thus all the principal points of the Peninsula will be in their power.

There has been a political riot in the theatre of Marseilles. On the 17th, Paul et Virginie was performed. On the entrance of the Governor, by the name of Labourdonnaye, hissing commenced in every part of the house, accompanied by cries of "We do not want that fellow!"—"Collar him!" A great number of tickets are said to have been distributed for the performance of the following night, and the pit was crowded; the piece was the opera of Almaviva and Rosine. Every thing went on quietly enough, until a Spanish officer appeared on the scene; he was received with loud plaudits from the galleries and part of the pit. The applause increased in consequence of a crown of flowers being thrown from the upper boxes. One party in the pit then cried "Down with the red cockade." The other replied by cries of "Peace! peace!" The former called for the "Chant Francois," which when sung, the latter drowned by a burlesque chorus and noise. A serious conflict was about to commence, when the gendarmes entered and prevented it. Next day two young men, belonging to respectable mercantile houses, were arrested and sent to prison.

Extract of a letter from Marseilles, dated 26th March, 1823:—"Agreeably to my promise, I hasten to make known to you what has passed in this town since the scandalous scene of the 18th inst. On the day following, the theatre was closed by order of the authorities. Certain people were thus extremely disappointed, for they had projected the renewal of these disorders, and accordingly they reserved themselves for the day of the arrival of Gen. Briche, which took place on Sunday the 22d inst. Whilst the band of the regiment was honouring him with a serenade, cries of 'Down with the Liberaux!'—'War with the English!' were re-echoed. Public tranquility was not disturbed; but a coffee-house was closed as a measure of precaution. Two other serenades were given to the General on Monday and Tuesday, which were only interrupted by some cries of 'War for ever!'"

Letters from Havannah represent the state of society as very disastrous, as dangerous in the extreme for strangers, and Americans in particular. One dated the 6th ult. says—"A residence here is really dangerous to strangers—six or seven men have been murdered within the last week, some of them in the most shocking manner, being seized, stripped, and then laid on a cot and completely cut to pieces from head to foot. The boat of the United States' brig Spark was stoned at the public landing a few days since, and there is no doubt that they would all have been murdered had the officer persisted in landing. Capt. Wilkinson wrote to the General of Marine, to know if he must arm his boat's crew, or whether the Authorities here would protect him. The answer, I am told, was a very polite one; stating, in substance, that he and his crew would be protected, and expressing regret at the outrage which had been committed."

IRELAND.

INSOLVENTS' COURT, DUBLIN.—George Henry Sarratt was opposed The insolvent is a half-pay Lieutenant in the Royal Navy, and holds the situation of a Commander in the Water Guard Service, on the North East Coast. Damages were had against him by a Jury of the county of Down, for seducing a young lady under the age of 17 years, who lost her mother at an early age. Her father, who had six other children, was obliged frequently to be from home—upon one of these occasions the insolvent had accomplished her ruin, and damages to the amount of 100l. were awarded. The insolvent, in his own house, having made her incapable of knowing right from wrong through intoxication, accomplished her ruin.—Remanded for 18 months.

The Grand Jury of Kerry have presented an Address to Col. Stuart and the 39th Regiment, for their excellent conduct while stationed in that county.

The Peace Preservation Act is withdrawn from the parishes of Ardeath, Clonalvey, and Piercetownlandy, in the county of Meath, which are restored to tranquillity.

CORK, MARCH 29.—The amount of the petitions for burnings, and other destruction of property, delivered in to the Clerk of the Peace yesterday, was 10,539l. 4s. 10d. Of this the sum of 8,613l. 17s. 8d. falls on the county at large, petitions to that amount being over 100l. each. A notice was posted at Ballinamona Church on Sunday last, threatening one of the churchwardens to burn his house and himself in it, if he persisted in collecting the parish Cess; even the clerk of the church did not escape their threatening wrath. Notices were posted on the doors of three of the tenants of Nicholas Whiting, of Mount Rivers, Esq. ordering them, in the name of General Rock, to give up their lodgings, they having taken them contrary to the rules; and on the chapel door of Inchygeela, which was immediately torn off by the Rev. Mr. Holland, P. P. who exhorted his parishioners on the folly and illegality of attending to such threats.—The house of Richard Fitzgerald, Esq. at Muckridge, was attacked by a large number of insurgents, all armed, with their faces blackened. After firing some shots they went off, threatening to pay Mr. Fitzgerald another visit in a short time. Military assistance was sent for to Youghal, but did not arrive till after the villains were gone. The military, on returning, passed close to the house of Captain Cotter, near Muckridge, who challenged them, and after they had answered "military assistance," from some misapprehension, they were fired on from the house, and two of the soldiers were wounded, one slightly, the other dangerously.

On Wednesday se'nnight, as a detachment of the 52d Foot were moving from Mullinahone to Cashel, one of the men having been taken ill, he was left with another private to take care of him. They were suddenly attacked and knocked down by five fellows with clubs, who took their muskets.—On the same day, a Policeman had his jaw nearly broken by the blow of a stone in the streets of Cashel.—Some houses were set on fire at Baltynaclough, near Golden; and at Glanhane, near Lattin. Gleeson, whose house had been partly burnt a few nights back, had an out-house of his and all his hay burnt on Monday night last by incendiaries.—A party of fellows went to the lands of Cloher, in Kilnemanagh, a part of the property of Nich. Doherty, Esq. where they broke the windows of the dwelling-house and turned away the working people, telling them, that if they had not come from a good country, they would serve them as they had served the Sheas.—Threatening notices, of the most dangerous description, have been recently posted at Lattin, near Tipperary.

The following outrages have been committed lately in Limerick county:—Two farm-houses and a quantity of hay and corn consumed on the lands of Quinanne.—A cow-house, and a rick of hay, the property of W. O'Brien, Esq. at Knockdoug, consumed—fortunately there was timely assistance to preserve forty in calf cows, intended to have been destroyed by the miscreants who now rule that part of the country.—Patrick Crona and Wm. Balfrey, farmers, at Cunnigar, attacked by a large party of Whiteboys, and dreadfully beaten.—The out-houses, and thirteen cows, the property of Mr. Allen, living in the north liberties of Limerick, consumed by fire—the timely arrival of the police preserved the rest of the property on the premises.—The house of a tenant of the Right Hon. George Canning, Minister for Foreign Affairs, was attacked at Kilbraban, county Kilkenny, and the tenant, Dermody, commanded to surrender his farm on pain of death.—Three houses burned in the neighbourhood of Donoghmore, county Cork.—The house of a man named Sweeny, broke into, in the neighbourhood of New-market. Sweeny escaped, but his brother was much abused, and several unlawful oaths administered to him; the house was set on fire, but the party returned and extinguished the flames, as the house was close by the chapel which they would not endanger.—On the night of the 10th instant, an armed body of miscreants, consisting of about 15 persons, broke into the house of one Michael Galvin, residing in Carrack Naghten, county Roscommon. Upon entering they assembled fire arms, but finding none, they departed, first beating Galvin in most unmercifully, and shooting his dog.

The Evening Mail contains a letter, dated Limerick, March 25, and subscribed Mathias Harrold, the substance of which is as follows:—About a fortnight since, Mr. Harrold married a Roman Catholic, according to the rites and ceremonies of the Established Church, previously stipulating that his wife should renounce the errors of the Romish Church, which, from conviction, she had determined to do. On the Sunday following, the Roman-Catholic Curate of the parish of St. John, in which the bride resided, solemnly denounced her from the altar of his chapel, stating, "that one of his parishioners had married a Protestant, and, after calling on her to come forward, which she refused, he stated, that the bed she lay on was cursed; that the ground she trod on was cursed; and that she lay at night in the arms of the devil—together with other similar expressions." On the following Friday (23d) Mrs. H. read her recantation in St. John's Church, before the Rev. J. Fizgibbon, after which Mr. Harrold waited on the Roman Catholic curate, the Rev. G. J. Woulfe, with Mr. Fitzgibbon's certificate of the act of recantation, but which the Rev. Mr. W. would not condescend to look at. Mr. H. then warned him against any further public allusion to his wife's name. On the following Sunday, as Mr. Harrold and his wife were returning home from attending divine service in St. John's Church, they were assailed at the church gate by a Popish mob of about 1000 persons, men, women, and children. Seven persons have been committed for the assault. Mr. Harrold's letter further states, that, during this barbarous and bigotted outrage, the Rev. Messrs. Woulfe and Tuohing, Roman Catholic Curates of the parish, were looking from one of Mr. Woulfe's windows, apparently enjoying the atrocious and disgraceful scene.

MONAGHAN ASSIZES.—James Bernard, and Edward Kelly, (father and two sons), were indicted for wilfully and maliciously pulling down and destroying a certain tenement (a school-house), in December last, the property of David Dunne. In his charge to the Jury, the Hon. Baron M'Clelland remarked—"The oftener I preside at these Assizes, the more do I find, by the cases that come before me, that this county is rapidly going back to a dark and benighted state—to an age of barbarian ignorance. Of this fact the case now before you is a striking instance. I did not think that any county in the province of Ulster was in such a deplorable state. When discharging my duties at the Special Commission in the south lately, I rarely found instances of such blinded infatuation, distempered feelings, and bigotted bigotry, as have been manifested in this county."—The Jury having returned a verdict of Guilty, his Lordship then sentenced them to be imprisoned one year.

ASSIZES.

SURREY.—Joseph Hooper and Charles Bonnick, were convicted of the 23d of March, was walking with a young woman, in Snow's mondsey and Peckham, when he was overtaken by three seized him by the collar, put a pistol to his head, and demo money, snatched his watch, and took about ten shillings pocket. The assailants then ran off. The man who had t told him to return to Peckham, and threatened to blow out The two prisoners were apprehended about a week after prosecutor would not swear to their identity, but expressed that they were two of the persons who had robbed him. U ing the lodgings of the prisoner Bonnick, five or six w found, one of which turned out to be the property of the Under some coals, in the same premises, were found two Bonnick confessed the fact, that he was concerned in the surrendered himself willingly. A good character was prisoners, by several reputable persons, who had known their infancy.—The Jury found Bonnick Guilty—Death. prisoner Not Guilty.—The prisoners were again indicted robbery, in stealing from the person of Benjamin Cole watch and 20s. The prosecutor, a clerk in the Bank of the evening of the 21st of December last, was walking with Bermondsey-road, when two men came behind him, one other a tall man, and seized him by the collar. The tall manded his blunt, and at the same instant presented a pis head. Not knowing the meaning of the word blunt to upon which the same man said, "Be quick; you know what one word, and I'll fire, by G—d." The prosecutor took from his pocket, and gave them to the robbers. The tall said, "has he a tatler?" The shorter man then felt his fo forth a metal watch, when they both ran off. Looking at now, they bore every resemblance to the men who robbed night in question. The Jury found both prisoners—Not G prisoners were again severally indicted for similar robbe Jekin Elwin, a Student of Guy's Hospital, and Mr. Henry for want of sufficient proof of identity, verdicts of Not G recorded.—The prisoners then pleaded guilty to an indict assault with intent to rob Mr. Henry Marsh, at Rotherh prisoner Hooper was sentenced to seven years' transpor other prisoner received sentence of Death.

Jones v. Wilson and others.—This was an action brought damages for forcibly entering the plaintiff's house, and thence a considerable quantity of household furniture. T was the occupier of a house situated 16, Salisbury Crescent Kent-road, which he rented of a Mr. Bradbury. The Wilson, an upholsterer; Benham, a furnishing-ironmon Turner, a looking-glass-manufacturer, had in October last the plaintiff with a quantity of household furniture. On that month, however, the defendants, with a numerous body collected in front of Mr. Jones's house. Admittance was which being refused, the doors were broken open, and the tered. The furniture was speedily removed from the prem being let down from the windows, and the rest taken out It was for this conduct, the value of the property, and the to the house, that the action was now brought. The defend on the bill for the furniture being delivered it was not paid plea not being deemed satisfactory, the defendants had recourse means stated to recover their property.—The Lord Chief Bar to the Jury to say, if they thought the purchase was with a fa intent or not.—The Jury found a verdict for the plaintiff amount of damage to the house.

MONMOUTH.—Daniel Jones was indicted for assaulting Lewis, a child under the age of ten years. This case stood the last summer assizes for this county. Mr. Justice Bu then presided in the Criminal Court, examined the child, to her knowledge of the nature and obligations of an oath; and she was not then competent to give evidence, directed the t postponed till these assizes, and ordered the child to be in t time instructed in the duties and the sanctions of religion. S appeared fully to understand the responsibility she was incurr gave her evidence in a clear and intelligent manner. She de the outrage as having been committed in a pea-field, whither been sent by her grand-mother, to drive away the birds, on of June last; and spoke without the least hesitation to the the prisoner. It appeared from the testimony of a surgeon great violence had been sustained by the child.—The Jury clined making any defence. The Jury found him Guilty. tice Best passed sentence of death upon him, and warned would undoubtedly be executed.—The prisoner left the manifesting any emotion.

YORK.—Stephen Lawrence (21), James Walker (18), Elizabeth wraye (22), John Scott (21), and Thomas Cockcroft (21), were for robbing Mr. G. Priestley, on the highway, near Kirkstall on the 9th of December. Mr. Priestley was returning from a fair on horseback. He stopped at Kirkstall-bridge a short time when he had proceeded a little more than half a mile, he fell horse, and became insensible. When he recovered, several p came up to him and knocked him down; and one of them held arms behind, whilst another pulled him back by the hair of his and thrust his fist into his mouth. They then unbuttoned his and took away a pocket-book, containing 13l. in notes, and 3s silver from his breeches pocket, and his watch. They also took leaving an old hat and a silk handkerchief behind. A sweeper's lad, called Isaac Wales, impeached the prisoners, admitted King's evidence. His story was confirmed in several ticulars, by other witnesses; and a person of the name of Wood to some conversations of the prisoners in gaol, which tended minate them. The Jury returned a verdict of Guilty against prisoners.

NORFOLK.—W. Bray, aged 20, Edward Turvy, aged 19, and thew Craven, aged 19, were convicted of a burglary. These were present at a meeting of Ranters, and during the service the robbery of Mrs. Bird, who is an aged woman, living in a tage near Shouldham. They forcibly entered the house by in the shutter with a mattock, compelled the poor woman to her money, in all 21. 17s. and Bray attempted to violate her and used her with great brutality.—All the convicts were before the Judge left the town, except Bray, whose aggravated placed him out of the reach of mercy.

DORSET.—An action was brought by Mr. Pitt, M. P. for the against Mr. Augustus Newton, for trespassing and killing Mr. Pitt's manor. The offence being proved, the defendant stated that he was instructed to say, that Mr. Newton would again trespass in Dorsetshire, and he was willing to make some or compensation. Verdict for the plaintiff—Damages 100l. action was brought by Mr. Frampton against the same defend a similar offence, and judgment having been suffered to go by the case was brought before the Under Sheriff and Sheriff when a verdict of 15l. was returned.

SUFFOLK.—Butt, Clerk v. Eagle, Esq.—The plaintiff in this is Vicar of Lakenheath, and the defendant a barrister. The was brought to recover damages for an assault committed in the of the parish. A select vestry was held on the 30th January the subject of an appeal against the rates on the part of Mr. farmer; and that Mr. Eagle, being churchwarden, told him should be attended to when he behaved properly. Mr. Butt terposed, when Mr. Eagle said to him, "Poor old Robinson that you sucked your money from"—meaning, it was stated, Butt could no longer obtain money to defray law expenses wealthy old gentleman, who lately died in the parish. Mr. torted, "Never mind, Sir Henry is not"—in allusion, it was to Sir Henry Bunbury. Mr. Butt observed, "if you throw others, you must expect to be thrown at in return." Upon Eagle reiterated—"The poor, helpless, feeble old man sucked your money from, is dead." Mr. Butt then used the "If you mean to say that I took advantage of Mr. Robinson less state to obtain money from him, I say you lie." At this Mr. Eagle struck Mr. Butt a blow with his fist, which knocked nearly to the ground.—Verdict for the plaintiff—damages, 10l.

MILES and EDWARDS, of Oxford-street, have just introduced a most splendid designs in London Cabinet Furnitures and Sopha marks ever manufactured, and at such an amazing reduction as will astonish every person who has not had an opportunity of inspecting such superior articles so considerably below the prices regulated at other establishments, they are determined, if possible, to increase about fitting up drawing-room or dining-room curtains, four post beds, &c. may effect a saving of at least one-third in the expense tion of this new and matchless stock. M. and E. think it necessary are not connected with any other concern. No. 134, Oxford-street Holles-street and 103 Cavendish-street.

WESTMINSTER SESSIONS.

[illegible]day.—Mary Hammond was indicted for stealing a number of [illegible] articles, the property of a poor woman who was confined to [illegible] bed with illness, and whom the prisoner visited under the pretence [illegible] of affording assistance. She was detected in committing the theft, and [illegible] the prosecutrix endeavouring to get back her property, the pri[illegible]soner struck her a violent blow in the face. The case was clearly proved. [illegible] The Chairman, in passing judgment, said, the case was one of an [illegible] aggravated nature, and the sentence of the Court, therefore was—[illegible] That she should be imprisoned for six calendar months, and kept to [illegible] hard labour."

SOUTHWARK SESSIONS.

Thursday.—Butler Odell Monckton was indicted for assaulting [illegible] Woodland, his cook. The old cook stated, that in September she [illegible] was in bed with one of Mr. Monckton's sons, a child about a year old. [illegible] between one and two in the morning he entered her room, in which [illegible] was also lay, on account of a still younger babe, which she [illegible] Mrs. Monckton also. Witness was asleep with the little boy in her arms, and [illegible] was surprised awaked her with very bad language, and then threw the [illegible] defendant awaked her with very bad language, and then threw the [illegible] lighted candle and candlestick at her. She held her arm before the [illegible] face to protect it. Her arm was cut open. She did not know whether [illegible] the master was drunk at the time. His wife could not pacify him al[illegible]though she tried. Mr. Monckton, who undertook his own defence, [illegible] cross-examined the prosecutrix. She positively denied that she had [illegible] any thing on the night of the assault.—Henrietta Peters, Mrs. [illegible] Buckley's nurse, said the defendant appeared to be intoxicated on [illegible] the night of the assault. The cook stayed in the service three months [illegible] after the assault, but never slept in the house. The defendant, be[illegible]fore the candlestick was thrown, wished to have the child taken from [illegible] the cook.

The Defendant—Did you know that she was in the habit of taking [illegible] to gin-shops?—Never.

Did you know that she was set as a spy upon my actions by my cruel [illegible] mother-in-law?—Never.

The defendant then said that he owed all the persecution to his fa[illegible]ther-in-law, who was enraged to see him married to his daughter; [illegible] but he had thought proper to marry a ward in chancery; the mar[illegible]riage had been solemnized by the Bishop of Limerick. Lord Adare [illegible] had been settle matters, and the Chancellor had made a hand[illegible]some settlement upon consideration. Notwithstanding this arrange[illegible]ment, his wife's father had urged his creditors to throw him into diffi[illegible]culties, and crowned the work by employing the prosecutrix to do him [illegible] mischief. It was under the impulse of the feelings roused by this con[illegible]duct that he went into the chamber, and finding the cook was drunk, [illegible] and that she had struck his child, he spoke to her; whereupon she abused [illegible] him, and he just chucked the candle and candlestick into the bed, but [illegible] did not hurt her in the least. Verdict—Guilty.

The Recorder—Are you willing to recompense the poor woman for [illegible] her injury?

Defendant—If I had done her any I should not let the case come [illegible] here.

Prosecutrix—Oh, my Lord, it is the fourth time he has beaten me; [illegible] I receive him three times.

The Recorder—Take him away, gaoler. His sentence is imprison[illegible]ment for two months. His conduct has been most barbarous; he has [illegible] no humanity. I do not wonder that his wife's father should feel for [illegible] the child.

MISCELLANEOUS.

An intimation has been given, that it is not His Majesty's intention [illegible] to embark on his cruising excursion in his Royal Yacht this summer. Hampshire Telegraph.

The apartments in Windsor Palace are quite ready to receive His [illegible] Majesty, whose intention is occasionally to sojourn thither when he re[illegible]turns to town.

Monday, about one o'clock, the Duke of York left town, on a visit [illegible] for a few days to the King at Brighton.

In the course of Sunday, Mr. Bulfe and Mr. Vick, King's Messen[illegible]gers, arrived at the Foreign Office with dispatches from Madrid and [illegible] Paris.

The Duke of Wellington has arrived in town from Brighton.

Dr. Wollaston has been elected Foreign Associate of the French [illegible] Institute, in the room of the late Dr. Jenner.

From the first of January, 1822, to the first of January, 1823, [illegible] 7,511lbs. 2ozs. of gold, value 4,426,446l. 14s. 3d. were imported [illegible] to the Mint; and the amount of gold monies coined during the year [illegible] was 5,356,787l. 12s. 6d.

A Bill has been brought into the House of Legislature at New York, [illegible] to lay a heavy tax upon all bachelors above the age of 28, the produce [illegible] to be appropriated to the encouragement of literature amongst females.

The payment of the April dividends will commence in the ensuing [illegible] week. Merchants and Bankers sign on Monday and Tuesday—pay[illegible]ment to the public at large will commence on Wednesday.

The candidates for the vacant Gown, occasioned by the death of Al[illegible]derman Sir John Eamer, are Sir Francis Desanges, Mr. Rowland [illegible] Stephenson, banker, and Mr. Key, stationer.

The Chief Justiceship of Ely is vacant by the death of Edward [illegible] Christian, Esq.

A case of importance to tradesmen has just been decided by the [illegible] Commissioners of Taxes for the Birmingham district. A Scotch [illegible] hawker was surcharged for four persons employed by him as travellers [illegible] a fee, for the sale of linen, tea, &c.; and as the parties were em[illegible]ployed in the sale of goods not their own property, the Commissioners [illegible] confirmed the surcharge, amounting to 20l.

The Marine Officers at Chatham have invited the Duke of Clarence [illegible] to a grand dinner, on the appointment of his Royal Highness to the [illegible] Lieutenantship of the Marines.

Mr. J. Kemble.—The funeral of this distinguished actor took place [illegible] at Lausanne, on Saturday the 1st of March, in a piece of ground ad[illegible]joining the cemeterie, on the Berne Road—several English are there [illegible] interred. The Dean of Raphoe read the funeral service at the house [illegible] of Mr. Kemble; and Mr. Cheesebrough, the resident Clergyman, per[illegible]formed the melancholy ceremony at the grave. The age of 66 was re[illegible]corded on the coffin.

On Wednesday, a Court of Directors was held at the East India [illegible] House, when the following ships were taken up for one voyage, and [illegible] are now stationed, viz.:—Royal George, Orient, Rockingham, Florentia, [illegible] and Alberton, for Bengal direct; and Fame, for Bengal and Bencoolen.

In Woolwich Dock, where the Nelson was launched about eight [illegible] years ago, the keel of a new line-of-battle ship, to be called the Thun[illegible]derer, has just been laid down. Three frigates are building, and in a [illegible] considerable state of forwardness; these are the Hebe and Clyde of 50 [illegible] guns each, and the Tenedos of 40 guns.

A Meeting of the Clergy of the North Riding of Yorkshire was held [illegible] at Thirsk, on the 24th ult. when a Petition against the Catholic Claims [illegible] was carried by a majority of 20 to 10.

On Easter Tuesday, the Christ's Hospital Boys walked in procession [illegible] in number about 700) to the Royal Exchange, thence to the Mansion [illegible] House, where, according to ancient custom, they each received a glass [illegible] of wine, a bun, and a sixpence from the hand of the Lord Mayor.

On Monday, according to annual custom, the Lord Mayor, Aldermen, [illegible] &c. went in state to Christ Church, Newgate-street, to hear the [illegible] Spital Sermon, which was preached by Dr. Kaye, Bishop of Bristol.

The Bellerophon hulk, at Sheerness, is discharging all her convicts, [illegible] preparatory to being converted into an asylum for juvenile convicts, [illegible] who are to be kept constantly at different trades, under masters ap[illegible]pointed for the special purpose.

Pitcairn's Island.—The ship Hercules, of Calcutta, Capt. John [illegible] Henderson, arrived at Pitcairn's Island on the 5th May, and landed [illegible] the presents which were sent to the inhabitants from the gentlemen [illegible] of Calcutta. John Adams was still alive, and the rest of the inhabi[illegible]tants 33 in number.

On Easter Monday the grand annual Hunt took place at Farnham [illegible] Common. Soon after nine o'clock a fine deer was turned out of the [illegible] park, who set off with great swiftness across the common to the right of [illegible] Farnham. In the course of the chace, the hounds got scent of a fox, [illegible] which they followed for some time, and in so doing the deer got a great [illegible] way a-head, and they were obliged to take the hounds back. They [illegible] renewed the chace through the inclosures and fields by the Earl [illegible] of Bridgewater's and Hemel Hempstead. The deer was taken in Gads[illegible]hill, in Hertfordshire, a few miles to the left of St. Alban's, after a run [illegible] upwards of four hours, and about 36 miles from Windsor. Many of [illegible] the sportsmen gave up the chace; some went 20 miles, some 30 miles, [illegible] and many fine horses were obliged to give up. Some lost their shoes, [illegible] were tumbled down and broke their knees.

A few days since, Mr. Glover, of Great Prescot-street, accompanied [illegible] his wife, left home for Stepney fair. On their return, about seven [illegible] o'clock, they were surprised to find the passage door open; and on [illegible] going into the parlour, a desk was discovered broken open, and a small [illegible] box, containing 120 sovereigns and five guineas, taken therefrom.

Sporting.—Betting-Room, April 3.—Claret Stakes—3 to 1 agst Moses, 13 to 4 agst Posthuma, 5 to 1 agst Swan, 8 to 1 agst Wanton, 12 colt, 3 to 1 agst Emilius, 3 to 1 agst Talisman.—Filly Riddlesworth—6 to 5 agst Veil.—Derby—11 to 2 agst Web colt, 15 to 2 agst Fanatic, 9 to 1 agst Emilius, 10 to 1 agst Talisman, 17 to 1 agst Aladdin c, 19 to 1 agst Brother to Pacha.—Oaks—6 to 1 agst Veil, 6 to 1 agst Zaida f., 10 to 1 agst any other.—St. Leger—17 to 2 agst Sherwood, 17 to 2 agst Tinker, 15 to 1 agst Miss Fanny, 20 to 1 agst Palais Royal.

At the Pontefract Spring Meeting, the Gold Cup, value 5 guineas, given by the Badsworth Hunt Club, was won by Mr. Alderson's b. h. Random, aged. The Silver Cup, value 50l. given by the Hon. E. Petre, was won by Mr. Fowler's b. f. Creeping Jane; and the 50l. plate, raised by subscription, was won by Mr. Petre's b. h. Dick.

Oxford.—The Rev. E. Greswell, M.A. of Corpus Christi college, is admitted Fellow of that society, in the place of the Rev. T. E. Bridges, D.D. now President.—The last day of Lent Term, the following degrees were conferred:—Doctors in Divinity—Rev. Is. Bandinel, New college, Head Keeper of the Bodleian Library, and Rev. W. B. Yeomans, Fellow of New college.—Masters of Arts—Rev. R. D. Warner, Queen's coll.; Rev. H. Hutton, Baliol coll.; and Rev. D. Basley, Merton coll.—Bachelor of Arts—W. Robinson, Esq. Baliol coll.

The Navy.—Vice-Admiral Sir H. Neale, Bart. K.G.C.B. is appointed to the command in the Mediterranean, in the room of Vice-Admiral Sir G. Moore, K.C.B.—Rear-Admiral Sir G. Eyre, K.C.B. to the command on the South American station, vice Commodore Sir T. M. Hardy, Bart. K.C.B.—Commodore C. Grant, C.B. to the East India station, vice Rear-Admiral the Hon. Sir H. Blackwood, Bart. K.C.B.—To the rank of Post-Captain—T. Herbert, C. H. Reid, J. Smith (b) H. T. B. Collier, J. Brenton, W. Ramsden, G. R. Pechell, A. B. Branch, H. B. Powell, J. D. Boswall, H. Stanhope, J. T. Coffin, F. Hunn, C. S. White, S. Arabin.—To the rank of Commander—F. J. St. John Mildmay, J. Longchamp, J. Brasier, J. Soady, W. Sandom, E. W. Gilbert, R. W. Yates, H. Kent, T. Bushby, Hon. W. Waldegrave, C. S. Cochrane, E. Hibbert, M. J. Currie, W. Boxer, W. B. Bowyer, H. Anderson, J. B. Dundas.—Midshipmen to the rank of Lieutenant—H. A. Cornect, J. Henderson (d), R. Hussey, H. P. Dobson, T. S. Scriven, W. Hocker (b), J. B. Clarke, J. Sherer, E. Jull, J. C. Ross, J. Baker, W. N. Clay, H. M. Denham, C. Brand, G. H. Coulson, C. Talbot, W. Crooke, R. Cracie, H. M. Mostyn, W. Gordon, J. Wheatley, D. F. Grant, H. D. Trotter, F. Gilly, G. Morris, G. S. Penfold, W. P. Canning, J. Campbell, E. Wodehouse, J. Anderson (e), P. Kerr, C. Blackmore, W. G. Skrying, G. F. Dixon, G. W. C. Lydiard, C. Ricketts, H. J. Puget, H. B. Martin, W. H. Gearey, W. N. Taylor, and W. Preston.—Captains—J. B. Dundas, to the Argus; G. W. Willes, to the Brazen; A. Skene, to the Britannia; F. J. St. John Mildmay, to the Carnation; Chas. Strangways, to the Clio; W. J. H. Johnstone, to the Eclair; S. Roberts, C.B. to the Egeria; J. F. Chapman, to the Esniegle; D. C. Clavering, to the Griper; G. Harris, C.B. to the Hussar; G. T. Falcon, to the Isis; W. Gordon, to the Pandora; Hon. G. Barrington, to the Parthian; Sir C. Burrard, Bart. to the Revenge; M. J. Currie, to the Satellite; T. Herbert, to the Tamar; J. Phillimore, C.B. to the Thetis; and R. Shannon, to the Trinculo.

Dundee, March 30.—The snow lies deep on the upland roads. On the road through Glenshee and Glenchochil to Aberfeldy, for instance, saddle horses and foot passengers can with difficulty pass. On the low grounds, however, there is little or none; and the people are begun to their spring labour.

Monday morning the Swallow Dover coach upset on Shooter's-hill, opposite the Red Lion, at the bottom. A French lady, on her way to a brother in London, was dreadfully injured in consequence of the coach falling upon her. The vehicle was raised by the help of several men, and the unfortunate sufferer extricated and taken to a tavern, where she died. The other passengers received no material injury.

A fire broke out, on Monday morning at five o'clock, on the premises of Mr. Noyes, tallow-chandler in Wych-street. It consumed the house, and that of Mr. Linsey adjoining, and damaged the house of Mr. Tuck. The watchman first discovered the flames bursting out at the windows on the ground floor, and scarcely had he time to arouse the sleeping inmates before the whole house was enveloped in flames. Mr. Noyes escaped at the window, without even sufficient apparel to clothe him.

On Saturday se'nnight, a fire occurred at a shoe-maker's in front of the Blind Asylum, London-road, which was got under without material damage. Mr. Mackenzie, the proprietor, was a short distance from home at the time it broke out, and was instantly sent for. On his arrival at the warehouse, the fire had been nearly got under. His alarm, however, was so great, that he was utterly unconscious of the presence of friend or foe; and though all danger had subsided, he continued in a state of absolute stupor that alarmed the family. Medical advice was called in. Nothing however could relieve him; he never recovered the sudden shock; the malady increased so rapidly, that he expired on Tuesday.

On Sunday evening as a gentleman was passing through Adam-street, Adelphi, his attention was attracted by a bundle laying at the door of the Society of Arts. Upon examination it contained the body of a male new-born infant, dreadfully bruised, and quite black about the body and face. It was conveyed to the workhouse.

On Saturday se'nnight, Felix Reynolds and Timothy Quilligan, privates in the 58th Regt. for violating the person of Mary Totham, at Harwich, were executed at Chelmsford.

Bury.—Last week, the shop of Mrs. James (who keeps a small house on Barking Tye,) was attacked by a gang of men armed with bludgeons—one man entered the bed-room in which she with her mother, aged 84 years, and a young woman, her neice, slept, by breaking the glass and frame of the window, demanded her money and keys, and taking her pockets, desired to know how much money was in them, and on being told about four pounds, swore that if she did not get more instantly he would kill her, but on the cry of murder from the neice, he threw the pockets out of the window, and the gang departed.

Perth.—About a fortnight ago, a young man belonging to Muthill, suddenly disappeared, on a matrimonial connection with a young woman. The young woman had made her elopement during the night, by the window of the room where she slept, and had left a letter upon the table informing her parents of her purpose, and saying that they would hear from her soon. At an early hour on Sunday her father left his own house, saying that he was going to spend the day at a friend's house in the country. It appears, however, that his distress of mind had got too great an advantage over him, and that he had resolved upon self destruction. His dead body was found several hours afterwards in the water of Mahany, by some people passing to church.

Lambeth-Street.—On Thursday, a Petty Sessions was held at this office, to inquire by what authority Bow Fair is held; at which Mr. Wilson, Steward of the Manor, and Mr. Giles, who rents the ground, attended; but neither of them could shew any other authority than ancient custom for holding it. They were asked if they would give bond for their appearance in the Court of King's Bench; this they declined to do. The Magistrates said, then they had but one course to pursue, which was to declare the fair unlawful. The Act states, that if the owner or occupier of the ground on which such fair is held (within ten miles of London) should not produce an authority sufficient to satisfy the Justices assembled, that then the party should enter into recognizances to appear the first day of Term in the Court of King's Bench. In default of such sureties being entered into, that then the Fair shall be deemed unlawful, and copies of such declaration shall be affixed to the church-doors, and other places in the parish; after which time, the constables shall be empowered to take into custody all persons found assisting in erecting tents, booths, &c. for the Fair, and if convicted, shall be fined in a sum not exceeding 10l. nor under 20s. The Magistrates agreed to postpone the case for a fortnight, to give Sir C. Morgan, the Lord of the Manor, who resides in Monmouthshire, an opportunity of producing any authority for holding the Fair.

Marlborough-street.—A complaint was made by Mr. Croker, jun. against Thomas Dixon, a watchman of St. George's parish. Mr. C. was returning home with some friends through Conduit-street, when he asked the watchman the time of night, the latter replied that he ought to know himself what it was. Mr. Croker remonstrated upon the impropriety of such an answer, upon which the watchman seized him by the collar in a most violent manner, tore his coat, waistcoat, and shirt, and dragged him to the watch-house, refusing even to let him call upon a friend by the way, to bail him. Mr. Croker added that the abusive language of the man on the way to the watch-house surpassed all he had ever heard. The Magistrate suspended him for one month.

A gentleman of consideration, supposed to be in a state of temporary mental derangement, was charged with having assaulted one of the clerks in Coutts's banking-house, by snatching a bill of acceptance of 87l. from his hands, and swallowing it. He was ordered to find bail.

On Monday, the 21st inst. will be published, in 1 vol. foolscap 8vo.

FABLES for the HOLY ALLIANCE, with other Poems, &c.—By Thomas Brown the Younger.

List of the Fables.—Dissolution of the Holy Alliance—The Looking-glasses—The Torch of Liberty—The Fly and the Bullock—Church and State—The little Grand Lama—The Extinguishers—The Two Rights—Louis the XVIth's Wig.

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had, by the same author,

The FUDGE FAMILY IN PARIS. 9th Edit. foolscap 8vo. 7s. 6d.

In a few days will be published, in 1 vol. 8vo.

MEMOIRS of a CAPTIVITY among the INDIANS of NORTH AMERICA, from Childhood to the age of Nineteen. With Anecdotes descriptive of their Manners and Customs, and some Account of the Soil, Climate, and Vegetable Productions of the Territory westward of the Mississippi. By JOHN D. HUNTER.

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, price 2s.

A LETTER to LORD HOLLAND, on the Review of "Napoleon in Exile," in the Fifty-fifth Number of the Quarterly Review.

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London; and A. Constable and Co. Edinburgh.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW, No. 75, will be published next week. Printed for A. Constable and Co. Edinburgh, and Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, in one thick vol. 8vo. double columns, price 11. 1s. bds.

THE EDINBURGH ANNUAL REGISTER for the Year 1820. Printed for A. Constable and Co. Edinburgh; Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; and Hurst, Robinson, and Co. London. Of whom may be had, the volume for 1819. Just published.

☞ The volumes for 1821 and 1822 will be published during the course of the present year. Each succeeding year will then appear regularly in an early part of the year following that of which it records the history.

Just published, a new Edition, (being the 8th), revised, and considerably improved, in 2 vols. 12mo. with Plates by Lowry, CONVERSATIONS on CHEMISTRY. In which the Elements of that Science are familiarly explained and illustrated by Experiments. —Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, a Third Edition, in 12mo. price 10s. 6d. boards, illustrated with 22 Engravings by Lowry,

CONVERSATIONS on NATURAL PHILOSOPHY, in which the Elements of that Science are familiarly explained, and adapted to the comprehension of young pupils. By the Author of "Conversations on Chemistry," and "Conversations on Political Economy."—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, the Fourth Edition, in one large volume, 12mo. price 9s. boards, CONVERSATIONS on POLITICAL ECONOMY, in which the Elements of that Science are familiarly explained. By the Author of "Conversations on Chemistry," and "Conversations on Natural Philosophy."—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, the Fourth Edition, enlarged, in one volume, 12mo. price 7s. 6d. plain, or 10s. 6d. coloured,

CONVERSATIONS on BOTANY, with 21 Engravings.—The object of this Work is to enable young persons to acquire a knowledge of the vegetable productions of their native country; for this purpose the arrangement of Linnæus is briefly explained, and a native plant of each class (with a few exceptions) is examined, and illustrated by an engraving; and a short Account is added of some of the principal foreign species.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, in 2 vols. 12mo. price 14s. boards,

CONVERSATIONS on MINERALOGY, with Plates, engraved by Mr. and Miss Lowry, from Original Drawings, comprising upwards of 400 figures of Minerals, including 12 beautifully coloured specimens.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, Paternoster-row; and sold by J. Mawe, 149, Strand.

"The plan of these Conversations is happily conceived, and, it is executed with ability and taste. We may, therefore, unhesitatingly characterize this work as one of the most desirable Text Books that have issued from the British press."—Monthly Review, Dec. 1822.

Just published, in 3 vols. 12mo. price 18s. boards,

OTHER TIMES; or, the MONKS of LEADENHALL. A Romance. By the Author of the "Lollards," "Calthorpe," &c.—This Romance gives some idea of the habits, customs, and "appliances" of the people of England three hundred years ago, with views of Old London when Henry VIII. filled the Throne, when the whole neighbourhood of Finsbury was but a series of marshy fields, and when a Monastery occupied the site of Leadenhall Market. —Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

2. CALTHORPE; or, Fallen Fortunes. 3 vols. 12mo. 11. 1s.

3. The LOLLARDS; a Tale of the 15th Century. 3 vols. 11. 1s.

The following important Works will be published in the course of April, by Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

FABLES for the HOLY ALLIANCE, with other Poems, &c. By Thomas Brown the Younger. In 1 volume 12mo.

2. The HISTORY of ENGLAND, during the Middle Ages. By Sharon Turner, Esq. F.S.A. Vol. III. 4to. comprising the Reigns of Henry VI. Edward IV. Edward V. Richard III. and Henry VII.

3. OBSERVATIONS made during a Residence in the Tarentaise and various Parts of the Grecian and Pennine Alps, in Savoy, and in Switzerland and Auvergne, in the Years 1820, 1821, and 1822, with Remarks on the present State of Society, Manners, Religion, Agriculture, Climate, &c. of Countries hitherto little visited by English Travellers. In 8vo. illustrated with Plates, &c. By Robert Bakewell.

4. ALFRED; a Romance, in Rhyme. By Richard Payne Knight, Esq. 8vo.

5. BODY and SOUL. Volume Second. In 8vo. A new edition of vol. I. is just published.

6. SYLVA FLORIFERA," the "SHRUBBERY;" containing an Historical and Botanical Account of the Flowering Shrubs and Trees, which now ornament the Shrubbery, the Park, and Rural Scenes in general. By Henry Phillips, F.H.S. Author of the "History of Fruits known in Great Britain," and the "History of Cultivated Vegetables." 2 vols. 8vo.

7. SKETCHES of the LIVES of CORREGIO and PARMEGIANO, with Notices of their principal Works, beautifully printed in small 8vo. with a Portrait.

8. WINE and WALNUTS; or, after Dinner Chit-Chat. By Ephraim Hardcastle. Citizen and Dry-salter. In 2 vols. small 8vo.

9. TRANSACTIONS of the LITERARY SOCIETY of BOMBAY. Vol. III. 4to. with numerous plates.

10. A TREATISE on MENTAL DERANGEMENT. By Francis Willis, M.D. Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians. 1 vol. 8vo.

11. The KING of the PEAK, a Novel. By the Author of the "Cavalier," &c. In 3 vols. 12mo.

12. RECOLLECTIONS of the PENINSULA, containing Sketches of the Manners and Characters of the Spanish Nation. By the Author of "Sketches of India." In one vol. 8vo.

13. A DESCRIPTION of the SCENERY of the LAKES, in the North of England. By W. Wordsworth, Esq. A new Edition, in 18mo. with a Map.

14. INTEGRITY; a Tale. By Mrs. Hoffland, Author of the "Son of a Genius," "Tales of the Manor," &c. 1 vol. 12mo.

15. The HISTORY of the ANGLO-SAXONS, from their first Appearance in Europe to the end of their Dynasty in England; comprising the History of England from the earliest period to the Norman Conquest. By Sharon Turner, F.S.A. In 3 vols. 8vo. the Fourth Edition.

16. MEMOIRS of the late MRS. CATHERINE CAPPE. Written by Herself. The 2d Edition, in 8vo. with a portrait.

17. The THREE PERILS of WOMEN, Love, Learning, and Jealousy. By James Hogg, Author of the "Three Perils of Man." In 3 vols. 12mo.

18. A NEW EDITION of the SAXON CHRONICLES, with an English Translation and Notes critical and explanatory. By the Rev. J. Ingram, late Saxon Professor in the University of Oxford. With a short Grammar of the Saxon Language, and an accurate and enlarged Map of England during the Heptarchy. 1 vol. 4to.

19. The ART of VALUING RENTS and TILLAGES, wherein is explained the Manner of valuing the Tenants' Right on entering and quitting Farms. The whole is adapted for the use of Landlords, Land Agents, Appraisers, Farmers, and Tenants. By J. S. Dayldon. In 1 vol. 12mo.

20. A PRACTICAL TREATISE on Complaints that affect the Secretion and Excretion of the Urine. The whole exhibiting a Comprehensive View of the various Diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder, Prostate Gland, and Urethra. By John Howship. 8vo. illustrated with numerous Cases and Engravings.

21. The JAMAICA PLANTER'S GUIDE; or, a System for Planting and Managing a Sugar Estate, or other Plantations in that Island, and throughout the British West Indies in general. Illustrated with interesting Anecdotes. By Thomas Roughley, nearly Twenty Years a Sugar Planter in Jamaica. 1 vol. 8vo.

22. OTHER TIMES, or the Monks of Leadenhall. A Romance. By the Author of the "Lollards," &c. 3 vols. 12mo.

23. The MINOR POEMS of ROBERT SOUTHEY, Esq. LL.D. Poet Laureate. A new Edition, in 3 vols. 12mo.

24. A TREATISE on the NATURE and CURE of GOUT and RHEUMATISM. By Charles Scudamore, M.D. &c. &c. In 8vo. a new Edit. revised and enlarged.

25. The ROYAL NAVAL BIOGRAPHY, Vol. I. Parts I. and II. in 8vo. containing Memoirs of all the Flag-Officers living at the commencement of the present Year. By John Marshall, (R.) Lieut. R.N. Vols. II. and III. containing Memoirs of the Captains and Commanders will appear shortly.

26. A GENERAL HISTORY of the COUNTY of YORK. By Thomas Dunham Whitaker, LL.D. F.S.A. F.R.S. Complete in 2 vols. folio. With Plates engraved from beautiful Drawings by J. M. W. Turner, Esq. R.A. and the Architectural Subjects by Mr. Buckler, in the very best style of the Art; and Woodcut Vignettes by Thompson.

27. A SYSTEM of UNIVERSAL GEOGRAPHY. By M. Malte Brun, Editor of the "Annales des Voyages," &c. In 8vo. Vol 4.

29. The NEW ANNUAL REGISTER, or General Repository of History, Politics, Arts, Sciences, and Literature, for the Year 1822. In 1 thick vol. 8vo.

29. A TREATISE on DISLOCATIONS and on FRACTURES of the JOINTS. By Sir Astley Cooper, Bart. F.R.S. Surgeon to the King, &c. &c. &c. A new Edit. in 1 vol. medium 4to. with 30 Engravings.

30. A New Novel, by Mrs. Opie.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Our numerous Correspondents must excuse our replying to their favours this week.

PRICE OF STOCKS AT THE CLOSE, SATURDAY.

The past week has been rather a barren one in the Money Market, and the variations have been but trifling. Consols for the Account opened to-day at 74¾, and at the close were 74¾, sellers. Spanish Bonds generally have been from 29¾ to 30.

3 per Cent. Red. . .	India Bonds 31 30
3 per Cent. Consols 74¾ ¾ ¾	Exchequ. Bills, 2d 1000l. 12 14 13
2½ per Cent. ditto . .	Ditto . . . . . 500l.
4 per Cent.	Small . . . . .
New 4 per Cent. . . 94¾ ¾	Con. for Acc. 74¾ ¾ ¾
Long Annuities .

Letters from Paris quote the prices of French Stock as follow:—

FRENCH FUNDS, April 3.

5 per Ct. Con. 22 Sept. . 78-40	Bank Sh. Div. 1 July
Recon. Div. 22 Sept. . . .	Ex. Lond. 1mo. 25-50 3mo.

The Neapolitan 5 per Cents. Div. were at 66¾

A MONDAY'S EDITION, containing the LATEST NEWS, the STOCK LIST, the LONDON MARKETS, and the STATE OF THE COUNTRY MARKETS by that Morning's Post, is published at Three o'Clock.

LIBRARY OF CLASSICAL ENGLISH POETRY.

Just published, in 10 vols. post 18mo. price 2l.

SELECT WORKS of the BRITISH POETS, with Biographical and Critical Prefaces. By DR. AIKIN. Also in royal 18mo. to match the British Essayists and Novelists, price 3l.; and complete, in one vol. 8vo. for School's &c. price 18s.

The object of this Work, which is entirely new, is to comprise, within a moderate compass, a Chronological Series of our Classical Poets, from Ben Jonson to Beattie, without mutilation or abridgement, with Biographical and Critical Notices of their Authors. The contents of these volumes are so comprehensive, that few poems, it is believed, are omitted, except such as are of secondary merit, or unsuited to the perusal of youth. The work, within those bounds, may be termed a "Library of Classical English Poetry," and may safely be recommended to the heads of Schools in general, and to the Libraries of Young Persons.

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

A new Edition of DR. AIKIN'S ANNALS of the REIGN of GEORGE the THIRD, brought down to His Majesty's Decease, is just published, in 2 vols 8vo. price 11.8s bds.

Just published, in 2 vols. 8vo. price 11. 4s. boards,

VIEWS of IRELAND, Moral, Political, and Religious; comprising, among others, the following subjects: Education, Religion, National Character, Church Establishment, Tithe; Church of Rome in Ireland; Presbyterian Church; the Union, Rebellion, &c. &c. By JOHN O'DRISCOL, Esq.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London, in 1 vol. 8vo. price 12s.

FRANCE FOR THE LAST SEVEN YEARS, containing many Facts, and much valuable information hitherto unknown, with Anecdotes, Jeux d'Esprits, &c &c.—By W. H. IRELAND, Member and Ancient of the Athenæum of Science and Arts, at Paris.

"One of the most honest books that has appeared for several years relative to France, is Mr. Ireland's volume, entitled, "France for the Last Seven Years: or, The Bourbons." He therein proves that his feelings are of the true old British School, and that he is not one of those base panders of power, who, for years past, have subsisted by ascribing the crimes of their patrons to the principles of liberty."—Monthly Magazine, Vol. 53, p. 162.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.—Monday, Macbeth Tuesday, The Wonder—Wednesday, the new Tragedy, Julian—Thursday, Maid Marian—Friday, Julian—The Vision of the Sun, or the Orphan of Peru, every evening.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.—Monday, The Duenna, with Bombastes Furioso, and the Actress of All Work.—Tuesday, Wild Oats.—Wednesday, Pizarro.—Thursday, The Cabinet.—Friday, A Play.—Saturday, The Castle of Andalusia.—The Chinese Sorcerer, or the Emperor and the Three Sons every Night, except Monday.

JOHN BULL.

LONDON, APRIL 6.

THE temporary recess of Parliament affords us breathing time, and an opportunity of balancing our accounts, as they stand on the debit and credit side of the ledger; or, in other words, the relative state of Ministers and Opposition, in their actual position before the public. We may place to the credit of the former, in the current account of the Session, a reduction of taxation to the amount of TWO MILLIONS, which, with the reduction of last year, amounts to upwards of TWENTY MILLIONS since the conclusion of the war, or nearly ONE THIRD of the WHOLE, besides a surplus revenue for a Sinking Fund, for the redemption of our debt, of FIVE MILLIONS per annum more. It is unnecessary to enter into a detail of the necessary reductions in the various departments of public expenditure which have enabled Ministers to effect all this—they speak for themselves.

But how stands the account per contra? that is, what say THE WHIGS, who may be considered the per contra of every thing connected with national prosperity? We will copy from their own day-book, under the peculiar keeping of COCKER HUME, and published by all his learned clerks, cheerers, and emissaries, from the Opposition benches to every provincial hustings throughout the country—"Ministers, in spite of their professions, have literally done NOTHING; and in wanton contempt of the sufferings and distresses of the people, set themselves against ALL measures of RETRENCHMENT and ECONOMY!"

We leave our readers to strike the balance. He who runs may read it.

In winding up the first act, as it may be called, of the present Session, LORD ARCHIBALD HAMILTON, apprehensive, as it should appear, that Ministers might take to themselves credit for this balance, denies that they have any claim upon the approbation of the country, because they have adopted ALL their measures at the suggestion of the WHIGS. LORD ARCHIBALD could not have brought a more grave charge than this against Ministers, or one more likely to shake their credit with the country, since it requires no great political skill to discover, that the foundation-stone of public confidence in Ministers is their systematic, steady, and principled resistance to ALL that has been urged and suggested by THE WHIGS for the last THIRTY YEARS! It is probably upon some such calculation that his Lordship dismissed his associates to enjoy their Easter holidays with the happy assurance that the downfall of Ministers is an event to be anticipated in the due course of things; and that, as they have so long been acting upon the advice of the WHIGS without knowing it. (comme le Bourgeois Gentilhomme)—they are upon the point of yielding to the suggestion, dinned into their ears Session after Session, during the whole revolutionary war, of giving up their places to their betters; that is, to the WHIGS! We confess we see no other possible ground for the prospect of so glorious a consummation; and it may be thrown out for the purpose of supplying "notice" of a direct motion to that effect from his Lordship's honourable friend from the Land of CAKES!

But although we smile—and well we may—at such inferences as the puerile vapourings of vanity, Ministers may take a lesson from it, and one which we have always been forward to inculcate, and force upon their attention—To attempt to conciliate a WHIG, is something like the experiment of taming a HYÆNA! He will take any thing you offer him, but will at the same instant snap off your fingers if you venture to approach or caress him. We have thought—and so it seems to approach or caress him. We have thought—and so it seems to the Whigs have also inferred—that there has been of late too much coquetting—too much of liberality (fatal, fatal word!) and concessions to the suggestions of men who have the interests of a party, and not those of their country, at heart.

We complain not of that courtesy which should never be lost sight of, even in political discussion, between Statesmen of opposed principles, but we never can agree to any compromise of principles upon the great and vital questions, connected with the integrity of the CONSTITUTION, under its ancient and established forms. CONCESSION is a word which should be expunged from the dictionary of Ministers. If their measures be grounded on principle, every surrender to those who are opposed to it is a sacrifice of a part of that principle, and deducts infinitely more from the one party, than is gained, quoad the individual question, by the other. There is a wide difference between pertinacity of opinion and adherence to principle; circumstances may operate to influence the former, and there may be even a merit in changing it, but neither time, nor chance, nor circumstances, can, or ought to have any influence upon the other.

The WHIGS of the present day hold not one single principle in common with those high-minded men and patriots from whom they take their name; for even their professed attachment to liberty partakes not of the sentiment those great persons so carefully cherished, in watching over the existing establishments of the country, but has degenerated into a spirit of blind and bigotted hostility against ALL REGULAR GOVERNMENTS—and can issue in nothing but INSURRECTION, REBELLION, and ANARCHY! What concession, therefore, let us ask, can be made to such men, without endangering the existence and continuance of those blessings, which originate, and can be sustained only, under the forms, and through the instrumentality of a system founded on the fixed and immutable principles of RATIONAL FREEDOM?

But if we could suppose Ministers to be influenced even by personal considerations, the impolicy and uselessness of the attempt to conciliate men, whose primary object is to overturn them altogether, is as self-evident as the mischief which it is calculated to bring upon the country. Nothing can save us but firmness—INFLEXIBLE FIRMNESS, in the existing, and still more the approaching crisis, for which so few people appear to be prepared. JACOBINISM is again about to appear in arms, through the impolitic precipitancy of the French Councils; but—and we solemnly record our conviction—if, by any of the multifarious intrigues, which are carrying on in every part of Europe, and of which LONDON is at this moment THE FOCUS—for the extension of liberal—Anglicé—JACOBINICAL PRINCIPLES—if, by any of the sophisticated arguments which the WHIGS, ignorantly or artfully (for the party is a most heterogeneous compound) urge forward for the purpose of committing this country to THE CAUSE, which for five and twenty years it has exhausted its blood and treasure to combat, Ministers make a single concession, or surrender one particle of THE PRINCIPLE which has from the year 1793 been the PALLADIUM of our liberties, the FIRST blow is given to our honour; and the Constitution will, step by step, from moderate to Radical REFORM, be delivered over to the CONSTANTS, the RIEGOS, the ARGUELLES, and their quack-salving disciples, among the WHIGS at home, for REGENERATION!

Do not let our readers suppose we are vapouring upon this subject—we have no one motive—no one object in view but the conscientious desire to place our unwary countrymen on their guard. We may be wrong, we trust we are, to the full extent of our apprehensions—but our only safeguard is a state of preparation—we mean of PUBLIC OPINION and PUBLIC SPIRIT, which, we may thank God, are still in this country, all powerful to overthrow the designs of innovators, and even traitors, if timely and duly awakened to a sense of danger. But the very liberality of our sentiments (we speak of them in their legitimate sense) increases our danger. We are too apt to give more credit than experience justifies to the professions of men, to whom we attach the character of British noblemen and gentlemen, forgetting that there is no such levelling principle as a COMMON CAUSE—no such blind incentive even to the sacrifice of our own interests, as leagued enthusiasm and bigotry to an exclusive creed!

We find it difficult—and "out upon the times"—that it should not be impossible, to believe that men who ought to be able to appreciate the excellence of our own institutions, and to bound all the enthusiasm of their nature by their devotion to a government which alone in the universe connects a perfect system of LIBERTY with the laws and restraints necessary to social happiness, should be warped in their affections by the selfishness of disappointed ambition, and be led to transfer their worship from the temple of their fathers to the flimsy unsubstantial theories of men, new to the very notion of LIBERTY, and who have deluged the world with BLOOD for thirty years in professed experiments upon it!

Yet so it is; and we must be upon our guard against the seductive inferences, which our very candour may draw from the conduct of such men, that it is too extravagant to be sincere. So might it have been said of the DUKE of ORLEANS, and his "affiliated societies for reform"—so may it be said of my LORD HOLLAND, corresponding with and encouraging the leaders of faction in Spain, who hold their King in captivity, and his life in jeopardy, after the most solemn oaths of constitutional allegiance to his person and government—so may it be said of the intimate connexions of Whig individuals with the GOURGAUDS, the LAS CASES, the CONSTANTS, the dregs of jacobinical and imperial usurpation—so may it be said of WILSON, the friend of NEY, the accomplice in the escape of LAVALETTE, and the fidus achates of GEN. PEPE!—But when we hear, and know, that simultaneous movements have been made in every quarter of Europe—that the implements and badges of revolution are collecting, and that men, in the habits of associating—intimately associating with OPPOSITION WHIG MEMBERS, have actually sailed from this country, for the purpose of re-organizing the scattered bands of JACOBINISM, and combining them in one great COMMON EFFORT AGAINST THE MONARCHIES OF EUROPE, it is time at least to put ourselves upon our guard, lest the real and literal interpretation of what is concealed under the general term of REFORM, be thundered in our ears, whilst we are sneering and smirking at the insignificant policy of the Whigs—at such leaders as HUME, BENNET, or ALDERMAN WOOD, treating them with a contempt, which, however merited, brings them into closer contact with the more mischievous, because the more numerous, agents of any faction which condescend to court them.

CONCESSION, then, we again repeat, in such a state of things is RUIN: and we do most earnestly call upon Ministers to beware of that fatal policy, which inclines rather to conciliate enemies than to encourage friends, and which at every step, however gradual, tends to confound the line of demarcation between the principles of SOCIAL ORDER, and the jangled doctrines of SUBVERSION and ANARCHY! The Questions about to be brought under discussion will put these principles to the test. We repeat, what we have said upon a former occasion, that had MR. PITT been indecisive a moment to hesitate in awarding the sanction of Government to the societies, which the loyalty of individuals established as a counter-action to the CORRESPONDING SOCIETY (let it be recollected MR. FOX and his modern school of Whigs joined in supporting though in direct correspondence with enemies of their country) had that great Minister shrunk from the personal responsibility of giving the countenance of Government to these associations, as the rallying point of loyal and free people, THE COUNTRY MUST INEVITABLY HAVE FALLEN UNDER THE ASSASSIN BLOWS OF A JACOBINICAL CONSPIRACY!

If the WHIGS forget, WE DO NOT, the testimony they bore to the noble and loyal spirit of ARTHUR O'CONNOR, even the act of going over to invite foreign invasion to our shores, and the zealous and voluntary evidence they produced of it, being in their estimation a WHIG OF THEIR OWN SCHOOL. Whether this record be taken in proof of their hopeless folly, or of a deeper criminality, is a question at this moment not worth investigating; but when we hear them stigmatize the most odious, unconstitutional and nefarious, the ORANGE SOCIETIES of IRELAND, which from our souls we believe to have been hitherto the chief means of effectual preservation to the PROTESTANT GOVERNMENT; when we find them uniformly silent upon all those other combinations, whose object is no longer concealed, and whose oaths are registered, of bathing under the assassin's knife every Protestant connected with public establishments in CHURCH and STATE; we cannot, we would, blind ourselves to the object which they must necessarily have in view!

If Ministers—because by the art and cunning of faction a temporary air of unpopularity (for the very purpose) is given over these establishments—should temporize, or connive at any interference with the great body of men thus united in support of the Constitution, and zealous in the exercise of rational liberty—directly or indirectly—we are perfectly satisfied the most ruinous consequences, if not the ultimate destruction of the two countries, must ensue!

We say nothing of the Roman Catholic Question at present. It is rumoured that the daring and outrageous conduct of the priesthood and of their partisans, who openly talk of the approaching "ASCENDANCY" under the verandahs of the Protestant Episcopal palace, has, as upon a former occasion, given some alarm to their political supporters: and that a disposition entertained of the policy of bringing forward the question during the present Session of Parliament. Be it so—we only construe their motives, whether blazoned forth under a liberal shew of zeal for toleration, or cloaked under a submissive acquiescence in the unfitness of the season, and we shall be prepared to meet them under either alternative. And every honest and loyal subject be equally on the alert!

THE CHRONICLE is really too good—on Tuesday or Wednesday it informed us that His Majesty expected a party of three hundred to dinner every day last week. Now what shews the excessive stupidity of the CHRONICLE in saying this, is, that in point of fact they have a spy, from whose pumpings and listenings they contrive to pick up just sufficient truth to give a tone to their original falsehoods.

The COURIER, anxious apparently for the dignity and respectability of the Ministers, has taken up this matter, and concludes an article upon the subject in Wednesday's Number, by advising this spy to have more consideration for the honour and dignity of the Sovereign, and desist from affecting the Whig Journal any information from Brighton.

The COURIER and we, feel differently upon this point: the COURIER of course knows more than we can be supposed to know about things connected with the Court—but we certainly think that the step to be taken with respect to any person as the correspondent of the CHRONICLE should originate IN the Palace, and the most certain means taken to prevent such conduct in future.

We confess that in any speculations of ours we look for consideration for the honour and dignity of the Sovereign in higher quarters, and we were a little vexed—but not at all surprised—to find, that of all those persons who have been honoured by late invitations to the Palace, and whose political principles have been so liberally considered there, not one could be found to remonstrate with my LORD ELLENBOROUGH when he made a Speech in the House of Lords on the subject of the KING's most munificent gift of his Library to the nation—which we confess ourselves afraid to express our real opinion of.

We feel—more than we can presume to write—but it is impossible to shut our ears: we trust all we hear is not true—when we are convinced that it is—WE WILL SPEAK OUT!

A CURIOUS circumstance has just been communicated to us, which among other "signs of the times" seems to argue a fatuity, or a dereliction of duty and principle among those who, from their office and station, are bound by every motive, human and divine, to aid our public institutions in this their hour of trial and peril.

A meeting of the Clergy of the Riding had been convened at Thirsk, for the purpose of addressing Parliament against the Roman Catholic claims to power, which was most respectably and numerously attended. The object of the meeting was known, and consequently when an appropriate and moderate petition was proposed the general assent was given to it: to the no small surprize of the assembly, however, a counter address in favour of the Roman Catholic Claims was brought forward—nor was their surprize diminished by the circumstance of its being proposed and seconded by the ARCHDEACON WRANGHAM, the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK's confidential chaplain, and by MR. VERNON, the Archbishop's own son! The trick failed, and only five or six expectant divines, to whom it was intimated that their suffrages were expected from a higher quarter, could be induced to hold their hands against the sense of the great majority of the meeting.

But the matter does not rest here; or we should probably have left these gentlemen to the operation of public opinion, in the quarter where their conduct is most justly appreciated. But a manœuvre is in progress, under the management of this liberal minority, for the purpose of securing precedence—at least in point of time—to their Address; and, to add to the effect, is to be presented as the Address of the WHOLE RIDING! There may be something to smile at, in the cross-fire and jostling of political parties, and even in the juggling of electioneering manœuvres, but as long as we can wield a pen, we will protest against every thing that savours of political intrigue, or which can tend to transfer the disgraceful expedients of faction to the sanctuary of our national Church.

She is beset from without, and from within; HUM-FUMISM—which is Clerical HUMBUG, as contra-distinguished from political—is gnawing at her very vitals, whilst WHIGGERY is labouring to strip her of every decent external. We trust she will yet brave and baffle the cant of the one, and the cold-blooded infidelity of the other; and we will give her our hearty aid and assistance for the purpose. But if we perceive in any part of that body—whether it shew itself on the Bench or in a country Curacy—a diseased, or ulcerous part, we will cry as loud as the loudest of the REFORMERS, to cut it off; and in a voice too, that shall be heard to the remotest corner of the Empire!

A circular advertisement has been sent to the newspapers, containing a detail of proceedings upon the occurrence of a vacancy in the Court of Aldermen by the death of SIR JOHN EAMER, in which we are told that a deputation of the Ward waited upon ROWLAND STEPHENSON, ESQ. the Banker, to solicit him to stand a contest for the honour of the gown, to which he assented, &c. &c.

The TIMES inserted the whole of this puff, which concludes with these words:—

"MR. STEPHENSON it was who made the vigorous stand in Cornwall against one of the creatures of the DUKE of NEWCASTLE, and was within four or five votes of gaining the election for one of the notorious boroughs."

The "creature" here mentioned is MR. RAINE, the eminent barrister; and, moreover, the DUKE OF NEWCASTLE has as much to do with the borough in question as the EMPEROR OF MOROCCO.

With respect to the Aldermanic gown, there can be little doubt, now MR. ROWLAND STEPHENSON has very judiciously resigned, that MR. JOHN KEY will be elected. It is but right that he should. His politics and principles are those which are duly appreciated by the respectable part of the London citizens.

NOTHING is more diverting, if the consequences it suggests could be dismissed from our minds, than the different fights in which the same things are viewed and represented by JACOBINS in and JACOBINS out of power. If at any period of popular discontent, our own good King were to take one road to Brighton, whilst his attendants had notified his intention of going by another—or, if the apprehension of insults being offered to the Royal Person, owing to the recent circulation of any Jacobin poison among them, were to induce Ministers to surround His Majesty with an additional troop of Life Guards, heavens! what a clamour would be rung in our ears about "confidence in the love of the people," and "the infamous system of dragooning the people into loyalty and obedience."

Turn we round to the poor ill-fated FERDINAND of Spain, whose guardian Ministers—whether from loyal zeal to their Royal Master, or more tender apprehension for themselves we must leave our readers to decide—having, in their late flight from Madrid, sent a body of guards forward to the Gate of Toledo, professedly to prepare for the King's departure through that quarter, no sooner found the people collected in the neighbourhood, than they whipt off their unfortunate captive in a sedan chair, and smuggled him and his family through bye-lanes and passages out of the city in an opposite direction; and lest the FREE PEOPLE of MADRID, liberated from all the odious and tyrannical oppressions of the ancien regime, should evince any disposition to injure themselves by an uncourtly use of their own newly acquired SOVEREIGNTY, "a body of TWO or THREE THOUSAND MEN, INFANTRY and CAVALRY, was placed in the Plazza de la Constitution, in order to repress any disorder which might arise, and they had with them TWO PIECES of ARTILLERY!!"—It would be difficult to decide which is most to be envied in the zenith of liberal ascendancy—the Constitutional Monarch, or the LIBERATED PEOPLE!

We have presses of all sorts and sizes in this country, and as consistency is no part of the creed of those who have a common enemy to attack, with motives of every hue of the rainbow for doing so, we find Jacobins and Methodists, Free-thinkers and Saints, all ready and forward to assist each other in supporting their mutual system of HUMBUG. The CHRONICLE, accordingly, gives room to an angry partisan of WILBERFORCE—"who has no personal acquaintance with that gentleman" (though marvellously well acquainted with him) —in order to raise a shield against the "vile attacks of JOHN BULL against the friend of the oppressed bondsman!"

We do not attack MR. WILBERFORCE for being the friend of the "oppressed bondsman," but for being too much the friend of his own craving appetency for popularity—to which every other consideration is sacrificed. If MR. WILBERFORCE were a recluse, we might find the same plea which we extend to PETER the Hermit, for his wild and ruinous schemes, which for a time desolated Europe—a heated imagination, and an overstrained zeal; but when we see him one of the most active and subtle politicians of the day, availing himself of every turn and every shade of popular feeling, to desert friends or aid their opponents—when we see him at the head of a SECT, filling all the great public Boards, and carrying all his sectarian projects by the force and influence of bodies of partisans thus engendered—we, who profess to have no respect for persons, but as they are supposed to contribute to measures of public utility, consider MR. WILBERFORCE as much open to the freedom of animadversion as MR. HUNT, or any of those persons who, for the sake of popularity, or whatever else may be THEIR PRICE, bring forward measures of more than doubtful policy, and, like MR. BROUGHAM, "reckless of consequences," recommend innovations which may entail upon the country evils, the extent of which no man can calculate.

THE WHIGS, in the elation of spirit occasioned by the yells and whoopings of their own hirelings—and of the partisans whom they have paid and equipped for a combined effort against the Thrones of Europe—no longer disguise their object. "It is reported," says the CHRONICLE, "that the "South of France is in an insurgent state, but at a time like "this, all sorts of reports gain circulation,"—(They may be prematurely anticipated, Master CHRONICLE!)—"and it is "necessary to distrust the influence of OUR WISHES, or our "judgment!" The blood and horrors of the previous revolution are not sufficient to glut the insatiable appetite of Jacobinical fury, and thirst for human misery! The judgment therefore of these worthies must be reconciled to their WISHES. "One would think," (continues this philosophical calculator upon human carnage) "if the matter of disaffection exist to the extent generally believed, THE APPEARANCE OF A RESPECTABLE BODY OF TROOPS, WITH THE NATIONAL COLOURS AND DETERMINED LEADERS, WOULD BRING IT INTO ACTION!!!"

The man is then instructed (for he never writes unadvisedly) to calculate upon the proper successor to LOUIS XVIII. when properly disposed of; and setting aside the DUC DE ORLEANS—for whose claims, as the son of EGALITE, the WHIGS seem to entertain some predilection—they have fixed upon NAPOLEON II. who, they inform us, "is every where proclaimed."

Is not this rather, rather premature again? We know that he is proclaimed—in CERTAIN MANIFESTOES—but the door of this article ought to recollect, that the PATRIOTIC CARGO cannot yet have reached land, and that, consequently, that the proclamation is not yet made. Really, we almost doubt whether we breathe in English land—to find our loved, and once honoured country, the depository of all that is atrocious in principle and desperate in policy—to find our very prosperity affording the means of supplying desperate adventurers with the means of again extending the horrors of anarchy and oppression over the Continent of Europe; and to have a party—among which are even Nobles and Statesmen, such as they are—holding forth encouragement to insurrection and rebellion, to the subjects of a neighbouring Government—afford altogether such a striking picture of degradation, that the country must either rouse itself, and with ONE VOICE cry down this monstrous apostacy, or be hurried away to destruction in this revolutionary torrent.

These are the men too, who deprecate any interference in the internal Government of other countries; and who, at the bare apprehension of our Ministers suggesting moderation to the Spanish Exaltados, declare them worthy of execration, if not impeachment!

Well may this chief Scribe—we might add Pharisee, considering his principal employers—exclaim in a tone of triumph, "the days of ANTI-JACOBINISM are fairly gone by!"—We can only say, that if THEY BE NOT REVIVED, the days of British glory and prosperity are on the wane!

WE have received from a valued correspondent a notice of LEIGH HUNT'S "AGE OF BRONZE," published as my LORD BYRON'S. We are sorry we have not room for it this week, we shall give it in our next. It really is very incautious in his Lordship to allow his name to be made use of in this way even by implication. JOHN HUNT and MURRAY are both of them much too respectable tradesmen not to be injured by such proceedings. Will anybody believe that an English nobleman and a poet, could have written the following lines descriptive of ENGLAND and its brightest ornaments:—

"Proud WELLINGTON, with eagle beak, so curled
"That nose, the book where he suspends the world
"And WATERLOO—and trade—and—(hush! not yet
"A syllable of imposts or of debt,)—
"And ne'er (enough) lamented CASTLEREAGH,
"Whose pen-knife slit a goose-quill t'other day!"

The contempt which every man must feel for the absurdity of such doggrel as this, is lost in the horror excited by its brutality: a display of insolence towards the champion of our country is to be expected from the votaries of BUONAPARTE; —abuse of WATERLOO, by whose glorious fight that BUONAPARTE was subdued, we may naturally look for;—allusions to "imposts and debt" at a moment when the nation has been so greatly relieved from taxation, we should set down merely as a new specimen of radical justice and rationality; but the allusion to the death of LORD LONDONDERRY must not be ranked amongst human errors; it is wickedness, fiend-like, and disgusting.

Good God! if it should be LORD BYRON'S writing after all!—if talent such as he once possessed should have dwindled to this—if high-mindedness and love of glory which once burned in his breast should have degenerated to such conduct—it is dreadful to think of such a fall.

Had WE during the period when moderation in politics was unknown, when virulence and invective were the associates of treason and threatened revolution—if in those times of peril, with a crisis at hand, to carry the strongest point, to do the "State some service"—we had alluded to the melancholy deaths of a WHITBREAD or a ROMILLY, what would have been said of us by these very people?

We hated MR. WHITBREAD'S politics; we loathed the politics of SIR SAMUEL ROMILLY; but there was something so touching—so moving—(and in the latter case so heart-rending) in the events which took them from the world, that we should have thought it sacrilege to touch upon the subject even in the smallest degree.

Whatever private virtues MR. WHITBREAD or SIR S. ROMILLY possessed, LORD LONDONDERRY was, at least, their equal in public life. But why do we waste a word upon such a subject?

THE STATUE.

WE lay before our readers a Proclamation issued in the year 1714, from the Castle of Dublin, touching some indignities offered to the Statue of KING WILLIAM THE THIRD, of GLORIOUS and IMMORTAL MEMORY, in the hopes of rescuing those from censure or ridicule who in the present day venture to consider their civil liberties as dependent upon the principles established at the period of the revolution of 1688.

"BY THE LORDS JUSTICES AND COUNCIL OF IRELAND, A PROCLAMATION.

"Will. Dublin, Jo. Team, Kildare.

"WHEREAS, notwithstanding a former Proclamation issued promising a reward to such as should discover and apprehend the person or persons who had formerly defaced the Statue erected at College Green, at the expence of the citizens of Dublin, in honour of His late Majesty KING WILLIAM the Third of Glorious Memory, for the Majesty KING WILLIAM the Third of Glorious Memory, for the issuing of which the Commons of Ireland soon after in Parliament assembled, made an humble address of thanks to the then Lord Lieutenant of this Kingdom, for his care and vigilance in issuing thereof, yet nevertheless the same base and villainous act has been since practiced by some profligate and infamous persons disaffected to His Majesty's Government and happy establishment on the throne of these nations, and to the late happy revolution; and on the seventeenth day of February last, being the day of the late KING WILLIAM'S and Queen Mary's accession to the throne, offered great indignities to the memory of His said late Majesty by taking the truncheon out of the hand of the said Statue so erected to the memory of that glorious Prince, by whom under God this nation in the year of our Lord one thousand six hundred eighty and eight, was delivered from popery and arbitrary power. We, the Lords Justices and Council, having a just abhorrence of all such disaffected and villainous practices, do hereby declare, that all persons concerned in that barbarous fact, are guilty of the greatest insolence, baseness, and ingratitude, and for discovering the author or authors of that villainy, we do hereby publish and declare, that we will give the necessary orders for the payment of two hundred pounds sterling, to such person or persons as shall discover, take, and apprehend all or any of the persons guilty of the said offence; and in case any one of the persons concerned therein shall make a full discovery of his accomplices, so as one or more of them may be brought to condign punishment, such discoverer, besides the said reward, shall have His Majesty's most gracious pardon for the same.

"Given at the Council Chamber in Dublin, the seventh day of March, 1714.—Alan Brodrick, Canc. Inchiquin, Mount-Alexander, Tyrawly, Wm. Whitshed, Joh. Foster, Edw. Crofton, Hen. Pitchborne, Tho. Keightley, Gus. Hamilton, Theoph. Butler, John Allen.

"GOD SAVE THE KING.

"Dublin: Printed by Andrew Crooke, Printer to the King's Most Excellent Majesty, in Copper-alley, 1714.

"It will be observed that the year old style, commenced on the 25th March, and consequently as Queen Anne died 1st August, 1714, the year of the accession of George I. did not terminate until seventeen days after the date of this Proclamation, which reconciles the seeming inconsistency as to dates."

Having laid this document before our readers, we feel it a duty to subjoin the remonstrance of the Orangemen of Armagh on the 11th ult., a paper which should be read attentively by those who mean to vote on the 17th of April.

"At a Meeting of the Grand Lodge of the County of Armagh, the Grand Master, the District Masters, and the Representatives of 340 Lodges of the Loyal Orange Association being present—Assembled at Armagh, on the 11th of March, 1823, the following Declaration was unanimously agreed to:—

"We, the Master and Members of the Grand Orange Lodge of the County of Armagh, finding that the principles of our Association have been called in question, our conduct arraigned, and our very existence threatened, think it incumbent on us once more in the face of the country, to repeat the former declarations of our principles, and to repel the slanderous accusations which have of late been cast on us, by appealing to the justness of the principles which animate us, and the conformity of our conduct with them.

"We have seen a declaration of similar import from the Grand Lodge of Ireland, and also one from our highly respected Brethren of the Grand Lodge of England, with which we most cordially agree; but we, of this county, feel ourselves particularly called on to state our feelings in the most public manner, as it was among us the Orange Association arose; it was here that those sparks were first elicited, which have since spread so vivid, and yet so genial a warmth of loyalty through this whole country, and which also glows with steady and happy lustre in our Sister Kingdom, illuminating our mutual path to real union and inseparable connexion; and we owe it to our Brethren throughout the empire, as well as to the Public, to declare, that those principles which at the first animated our Association, are, and will always remain UNALTERED.

"That we do now, as we did at first, detest and abhor all persecution, and that we are associated for mutual defence, and for the protection of our Liberty and our Religion.—And having learned from our Fathers to admire the Constitution, both political and religious, of this realm, as established by the glorious revolution in 1688, which rendered Great Britain the abode of rational freedom, of pure, unadulterated religion, and of unfettered liberty of conscience.

"We are zealously disposed to draw the bands which unite us to that happy land close around us, to record the memory of that great event, which rescued us from the dominion of bigotry and superstition, and the chains of arbitrary power, and to cherish the immortal memory of that illustrious Prince, by whom such blessings were placed within our reach; blessings which, as we ourselves rejoice in, we desire to transmit unimpaired and unaltered to our children; and as we have hitherto done, through all the rebellions and tumults of the last 27 years, so we resolve to continue to rally round the Throne of our King, and the Altar of our God; and support the present Constitution with all the influence we possess, and by every exertion in our power, consistent with the duties which allegiance and religion impose upon us.

"With such principles originally declared, and uniformly acted on, we feel not less surprised than grieved, that the Orange Association should be accused of illegal interference in the State, or branded as an intolerant and persecuting faction, bound by deep and unlawful ties, to acts dangerous to the public weal.

"We respectfully, but firmly call on our accusers, to show where in this land have the laws been so well enforced, and so cheerfully obeyed, as in those districts where the Orange Association had most power and influence? Where have peace and harmony so much been found as where we have strength to uphold them; and we call on them to show, in all the outrages and rebellious tumults which have disgraced the very name of Ireland, where has the true Orange member been found, who was not ranged on the side of the laws, and boldly stepping forward in their defence? And we fearlessly appeal to our conduct for the judgment of our country; and if the enemies of our Institution impute to us, as a body, the crimes or follies of a few thoughtless and intemperate individuals, we publicly deny the charge.

"We declare, that undeviating submission to the laws, respect to authority, and warm and dutiful attachment to the beloved and illustrious Monarch who fills the Throne, are the inmost sentiments of our heart.

"And we further proclaim, that all conduct subversive of good order and public propriety, is as contrary to the bounden duties of true Orangemen, as it is to the laws of society—and both as a body and as individuals, we must always behold with disapprobation and regret, any disrespect shewn to the laws or constituted authorities of the land, by whomsoever exhibited; and must also view with similar feelings every attempt to alter the present Establishment in Church or State, or to render our mild and equal laws the instruments of unwise or unconstitutional vigour. Signed by Order, JAMES VERNER, G.S."

Our columns, next week, will be specially devoted to the struggle which every honest Englishman is bound to make for the preservation intact and unimpaired of our GLORIOUS CONSTITUTION. The most powerful efforts will be made to carry the point against us—we will exert every energy in the defence of Protestantism, convinced that, in repelling innovation, and in supporting the religion of our country, we best fulfil our duty to "GOD—the KING—and the PEOPLE!"

WE are requested by a friend of MR. HUME'S to retract some little observations which we have occasionally made upon that gentleman's pronunciation of the word "tottle," for the correctness of which our correspondent quotes the authority of SWIFT.—

"You keep such a twattling
With you and your tittling,
I see the sum TOTAL,
We shall not get a BOTTLE."

We hasten to make the amende honorable by inserting the Doctor's justification.

REVIEW OF LAS CASES' JOURNAL.

(Concluded.)

BUONAPARTE'S principal objection to the King of Prussia—stated gravely too—was, that he could not ride well, and kept him standing at the door in the rain; it is pretty clear also that both he and LAS CASES mistook the captains of our China ships for Chinese captains. There is one thing moreover which every reader must observe as curious in a detail of miseries—amongst which the wretchedness of the climate ranked as one—and a very important one too—we mean the frequent mention of "fine weather," "exquisite evenings,"

"delightful afternoons," "charming moonlight," &c.; these descriptions occur very thickly throughout the work, indeed oftener, we believe, than any other subject, always excepting M. LAS CASES' own Atlas.

This book is lugged in upon every occasion—he judges everybody by the opinion they entertained of his Atlas, which he declares to be the most complete, wonderful, and extraordinary work ever published—so fond indeed is he of the subject that after having brought it to view in at least fifty otherplaces, he appropriates a portion of the book, beginning at p. 265. to what he calls "History of my Atlas," which continues to p. 285. in consequence of a demand from BUONAPARTE, couched in these words,—p. 264. P. III.

"This," said he (BUONAPARTE) "is what I call enjoying a real triumph, a great reputation in the literary world." (He is speaking of LAS CASES to himself) "I wish you would give me the history of your Atlas—tell me when and how you conceived the idea of it—the manner in which it was executed, and its results—why you first of all published it under a fictitious name—why you did not afterwards affix your real name to it—in short, give me a true and particular account; you understand me, Mr. Counsellor of State!"

LAS CASES, as we have just mentioned, took BUONAPARTE at his word, and having bestowed all his tediousness upon him, transfers his interesting account to paper, and publishes it, for the edification of the public.

M. LAS CASES may, in giving an account of himself and his own affairs, be correct—in speaking of other persons he certainly is not: for instance, he alludes to LADY LOWE, the wife of SIR HUDSON, and says,—

"I went to pay my first visit to Plantation House—I thought LADY LOWE a pretty and amiable woman, though there was something of the actress about her. * * * * * * I understand this lady was the widow of an officer of the regiment which SIR HUDSON LOWE commanded, and the sister of a colonel killed at Waterloo."

For M. LAS CASES' opinion of LADY LOWE we dare say neither LADY LOWE nor anybody connected with her will care one straw—with respect to her personal attractions there can be very little doubt—and as to her having "something of the actress about her," we believe, from the testimony of those who know her well and intimately, that there is not the smallest portion of artificiality in the whole composition of her mind. This, however, is immaterial, and a matter of opinion; we have no right to call in question M. LAS CASES' want of taste or judgment, but when he is decidedly wrong in his historical account of her Ladyship, it becomes our duty to set him right.

LADY LOWE was not the widow of any officer in SIR HUDSON'S regiment, but of COLONEL JOHNSON, son of SIR J. JOHNSON, and grandson of SIR WILLIAM JOHNSON, BART. whose name stands distinguished in the annals of American warfare. His brother—the Colonel who was killed at Waterloo, and who fell gloriously by the side of the DUKE of WELLINGTON, having served during the whole Peninsular war on his Grace's Staff—was SIR WILLIAM DELANCEY, K.C.B. Thus, if we may judge of all the details of M. LAS CASES by that, which he gives of LADY LOWE and her family, we fear even the authenticity of many of the absurdities which he recounts will be woefully shaken.

"SIR HUDSON LOWE" (says LAS CASES, p. 84, P. III.) "shewed me the most marked politeness and attention. He said he had been much gratified by the perusal of 'my Atlas!'" &c. &c.

The anecdote of BUONAPARTE'S delight at an insult offered to the Admiral by his valet NOVERRAZ, (p. 52. Part III.) will be read with infinite satisfaction by the admirers of good breeding and conciliating manners. The account of French military sensibility (p. 151. P. II.) will also be found entertaining; and indeed every part of the work, as we before said, is well worth the attention of the partisans of the departed Chief; and it contains so much more matter of fact than any other we have seen, that we sincerely recommend a perusal of it.

One extract more, and we shall conclude: it is so characteristic, so vain, and so absurd, that it is irresistible.

Speaking, on board of the Northumberland, to some of the officers, on the subject of the tri-coloured cockade, LAS CASES said this—

"With regard to our colours, which seem to have dazzled you so much, they are but a remnant of our old costume! We wear them today, because we wore them yesterday—one cannot with indifference lay aside things to which one is attached, that can only be done from constraint or necessity." P. I. p. 176.

We pause here to observe, that this very LAS CASES, after having emigrated to England, having lived here, and made upwards of two thousand pounds by "my Atlas," returned to Paris after BUONAPARTE'S defeat and banishment to Elba, and, as we have already shewn, hastened to avail himself of the indulgence of being permitted to approach LOUIS XVIII.! It is to be presumed that neither constraint nor necessity were employed to take him to the KING'S Court at the Tuilleries, nor to solicit the rank of captain in the navy, merely that he "might wear the uniform" of this very LOUIS XVIII. and, of course, the WHITE COCKADE.

It seems that he contrived then to lay aside a "thing to which he afterwards appeared very much attached," without any of that compulsion which he subsequently considered necessary to induce him a second time to abandon his colours.

But we must conclude his wise, consistent, and energetic speech to the Midshipmen of the Northumberland, amongst whom "was a son of SIR R. WILSON," which caused (says LAS CASES) "his writings to be particularly known and spoken of on board the ship."

"We cannot deny," (says the old gentleman), "that these colours are dear to us; we are attached to them, because—they have seen us victorious over all our enemies! because, we have paraded them in triumph through every capital in Europe!"

Considering that at the time MR. LAS CASES said this he was on his way to St. Helena, in consequence of a series of defeats which had continued uninterruptedly throughout the whole Peninsular war, and concluded with the fight of Waterloo; considering, that he was telling a party of Englishmen that those colours had been paraded in triumph through every capital in Europe! while every one of his hearers knew that the capital of their own country had never been profaned by even the sight of them; considering these things, we think our readers may form a pretty fair opinion of the good sense, and good taste of BUONAPARTE'S biographer.

As for SIR ROBERT WILSON, MR. GOLDSMITH, or any body else who has written against BUONAPARTE, it seems to us that they fall far short of M. LAS CASES in lowering and degrading his character; and so completely does this book expose, as we think, the vanity, blasphemy, little-mindedness, egotism, and maliciousness of the hero, and so entirely justify the Government of England and the Allies, and the local Government of St. Helena, in all their conduct, that if it had been more recently published, we should have thought that M. LAS CASES had been invited to meet MR. COBBETT at dinner during the week wherein that gentleman thought it right to publish in his Register the article from the QUARTERLY REVIEW upon MR O'MEARA'S work.

TO JOHN BULL.

SIR,—In your critique on the Journal of LAS CASES, which appeared in your paper last Sunday, you say that you had never heard the anecdote I related of MADEMOISELLE G. alluded to in the Journal of LAS CASES. Permit me, therefore, to send it to you as an extract from my "Secret History of the Cabinet of NAPOLEON," published here in 1810; to which I subjoin the story told of this young lady by BUONAPARTE to his surgeon and confessor O'MEARA, as appears in the publication of the latter. The public will see what degree of credit is to be placed in any of the works emanating from the Napoleonic crew.

After enumerating many of NAPOLEON'S amours, amongst which was his barbarous and unmanly treatment of MADAME D—, the wife of one of his Counsellors of State, the story of MADEMOISELLE G. is thus related:—

"Another scandalous anecdote occupied all Paris a short time since. A MADAME G—b—t, an Irish lady, widow of a Paris banker, had a most beautiful daughter. BUONAPARTE saw her, and she was soon after engaged by the EMPRESS JOSEPHINE as a lectrice (reader:) JOSEPHINE was as complaisant to NAPOLEON as MADAME de BERRY was to LOUIS XV.

"MADEMOISELLE G. accompanied the imperial family to Bayonne in 1808, when BUONAPARTE went there to entrap the royal family of Spain; one night he forced his way to the bed-chamber of MADEMOISELLE G. * * * * The next morning she told her unhappy story to the Empress, who remonstrated with NAPOLEON. He was so enraged at the poor girl for having made a confidant of the Empress, that he sent her off to Paris in a chaise de poste, by herself, with as much money as would defray the expences of her journey. The young lady is known to many of our nobility, who saw her at Paris during the peace of Amiens."

This, Sir, is MY story; the way it was related by NAPOLEON to LAS CASES appeared in JOHN BULL of last Sunday. Now for the story as it is related by DOCTOR O'MEARA, in his "Voice from St. Helena," vol. II. page 218.

"He (NAPOLEON) now recounted some of his own love adventures. 'The most beautiful female I ever saw,' said he, 'was an Irish girl, MADEMOISELLE G.; whether she had been born in Ireland, or was only of an Irish family, I am not certain; it was during JOSEPHINE'S time, and long before I married MARIE LOUISE. One day, when I was hunting in St. Germains, some of the Court intriguers threw her in my way, and contrived it so that she came with a petition in her hand to deliver to me. When she presented herself, and said she had a petition, every one made way for her, as I had given orders that persons bringing petitions should invariably be allowed to approach me. She fell at my feet and presented it. She was covered with a veil, that did not conceal the beauty of her countenance, which was really heavenly. Certainly I was taken with her charms; and although I suspected there was some intrigue, I was not displeased. Three or four times afterwards I saw her and conversed with her. I used to take little liberties with her, such as patting her cheeks. At this time a letter from her mother to her was brought to me from the Secret Post Office. Her mother was an old intriguer, and gave her daughter directions, which elucidated her character. There were instructions relative to her conduct towards me in many particular instances. I was now convinced that it was not proper for me to countenance this proceeding; and although I was assuredly smitten with her, for she was as beautiful as an angel, I gave such orders as prevented her ever having the means of being again admitted to my presence.'"

The above story, as you see, differs materially even from that told by LAS CASES.—I have the honour to be, Sir, yours, &c.

LEWIS GOLDSMITH.

THEATRICALS.

THAT Cerberus had three heads, and Argus an hundred eyes, no rational person can doubt; but as neither of these prodigies are at present connected with the public press, we cannot choose but sneer when we take up an Easter Tuesday newspaper, and find elaborate criticisms upon the performances of the preceding night, at every theatre, riding-house, tumbling-shop, or puppet-show within the bills of mortality.

The criticism, in the TIMES of last Tuesday, upon the "CHINESE SORCERER," at Drury Lane, was exceedingly good; just enough, and somewhat comical: but the critic quite enough of a mannerist to betray himself, in the review of one or two other pieces, at other theatres, in which he could not have been.

For our own parts we are not very ambitious, nor very pretending, and being in one place at a time is as much as we expect to accomplish; we shall open our hearts upon the subject, and speak truth—we have been to Covent Garden, Drury Lane, and Sadler's Wells. Next week, if the weather be cool, we will undertake most of the other places; and the first time we leave London by the Leith Steam Packet, we will stop at the Royalty on our way, and dispatch a critique to town by the general post.

With respect to the pageants of the winter theatres, there is indeed little to be said. We have seen, we believe, all the varieties of gold-leaf and tin-foil—all the sliding of traps and sinking of parallels; fire, water, elephants, horses, and even tigers, have contributed to our delight upon these holiday occasions; and what more can be done?

We have, to be sure, a melancholy proof of the distress of the times, in the representation of the "VISION OF THE SUN;" or, indeed, rather a repetition of the proof afforded by a similar event in "JULIAN." It is not agricultural distress—it is a distress of a more powerful nature, as far as regards the ladies, and the hope of continuing the present race of people in the nation—we mean a scarcity of men.

In "Julian," MISS FOOTE is doomed to be a King—in the "Vision of the Sun," MRS. VINING is ordained to be a Prince! Nothing is more unpleasant, more uninteresting, than these unnatural assumptions of the male character by women, who, in their proper department, are full of beauty and attraction.

We conclude that there can be but one reason for such absurdity—it is greater in this drama than in JULIAN; because, in JULIAN, it was requisite that the King should be young, graceful, full of tenderness, and that the part should be well acted. Requiring all this, who so fit to act it as MISS FOOTE? But in the spectacle, where we want a gallant Knight, a giant-killer, and a husband for this very MISS FOOTE, (the Princess RUNAC) why, in the name of propriety and probability, knows there are men enough in the world who would give their ears to fill the part; and it is so much more natural, so much more interesting, to see a man making love to a girl, vowing to her, and fighting for her, than another girl dressed up in man's clothing, that we can only attribute the conduct of the Covent Garden managers on the occasion, as we have before surmised, to a dreadful scarcity of male performers.

If splendour, activity, and pretty music have charms for the public, they will find them all in the "Vision of the Sun," and FARLEY, under whose superintendence it has been produced, deserves the greatest credit for this last specimen of his skill in the management of the stage, and the conduct of spectacle.

The Drury Lane affair is as full of gold-leaf and tin-foil as its rival; and the Palace of Ho Ho, and the Groves of Hyhum, shine, in splendour, as glaring as the Peruvian Princes of Covent Garden.

Its extraordinary length distinguishes it from any other drama we ever had the pleasure to see. In construction it is far inferior to the Covent Garden one; the music and singing are execrable, with the exception of a song by MR. HARLEY, but we must do justice to one scene, which is beautifully painted; we mean a view of a harbour; which struck us as a chef d'œuvre of the art.

It would be ridiculous to criticise these pieces seriously, as if one is to be good-natured, why there is no use in pointing out the various absurdities with which they are replete; they will doubtless answer the purpose of amusing the children, and paying the managers!

AT SADLER'S WELLS great works have been doing, as the Montagnes Russes from Tivoli and the Beanjon are imported in little, into the pit of the Theatre: we confess, however, that in the farce of SYNTAX IN LONDON we found great deal to laugh at. It is of the TOM and JERRY school, and, we suppose, by the same author. It has more slang in its composition than is necessary or agreeable; and it is, as we have often observed, a fault of the minor dramatists of the day to interlard their dialogues with either cant sayings, peculiar to some particular set in which they move, or with theatrical jokes, or the kind of slang to which we have just alluded, none of which are intelligible to persons in good society. Women, for instance, sit and wonder what all the "hits" and "allusions" mean, and though we by no means wish that they should understand the language thus used, we certainly could wish that the farce-writers would use some language as the ladies might understand.

We have before said, in this department of our paper, that the error into which the few persons who write for the stage now fall, is that of thinking vulgarity essential to fun. It is no such thing:—vulgarity is, in these days, repugnant to the general feelings of society. What would be thought of a man who, in company with ladies, addicted himself to swearing? What would be thought of a man who appeared before females in a state of intoxication? Such events cannot happen in society now; and the refinement and good taste which have banished such grossnesses from our drawing-rooms naturally give a disgust for the representation of low-life excesses and vulgar conduct and conversation on the stage.

The piece of TOM and JERRY (our opinion of which, speaking as to its moral effects, is recorded) is an exception to the rule which we should like to see observed, because TOM and JERRY was expressly contrived to display (to what intention we know not) the slang of the Metropolis; therefore, in that piece, such was its construction, that to tone we object to was characteristic, and its adoption inevitable. But why this tone should continue to pervade other pieces we are at a loss to imagine, nor can we, when, in addition to our wives and sisters, we take our children, male and female, to a theatre, understand why we are to have scenes and conversations brought before us, with which, without an intimate acquaintance with vulgarity and vice, we could not, in real life, become acquainted.

We do not mean to apply this to "SYNTAX IN LONDON," or at least to the early parts of it, which are spirited, comic, and full of drollery; it is too long, and hangs heavy on hand, in the third act; but, upon the whole, with its imperfections on its head, it possesses a great deal of whim, and is far superior to the ordinary run of things brought out at the summer theatres.

The pantomime is liberally got up, and we have no doubt that the season will turn out as profitable as the last.

The Police reports teem with an assault committed last week by the mother of one of our most sprightly actresses, an especial favourite of ours, upon MRS. CHRISTMAS, a lady "d'une certaine age," who, having married a young man, became jealous of his attentions to the bright eyed belle, and followed her attractive rival into her mother's house, where the old lady received her with a knock-down blow.

We know nothing of the affair; it is clear that, in Craven-street, CHRISTMAS comes oftener than once a year; but we shall not indulge in a remark upon that, which however public it has been made, is a matter of private conduct—calumny is ready enough without our assistance, and there are more people than MR. CHRISTMAS accustomed to CHATTER-LIES.

On Wednesday, the landlady of the Brown Bear public-house at St. Albans, who came to town to pay her distiller one hundred and fifty pounds, in going along Cheapside, had her pocket cut and lost her money.

A woman, who had concealed herself in the house of Wm. Locksmith, in Bedford-street, Tavistock-square, on Tuesday night, going up stairs in the dark, missed her way and fell through a trap-door into the forge and broke her arm.

On Thursday night, about ten o'clock, a fire broke out at the house of Mr. Meeling, No. 89, High Holborn, and which in less than half an hour completely destroyed it. Two houses adjoining, with their contents, also suffered great injury.

Thomas and Wm. Harvey, and Thomas Dosseter, left for execution at Dorchester, for stealing Lady Damer's plate, suffered the sentence of the law on Saturday se'nnight. Dosseter was uncle to the Harveys; he had previously been convicted of theft, when he received sentence of transportation, and served the period of his punishment on board the hulks. He has left a wife and four children; William Harvey has left three children, and a wife far advanced in pregnancy; Thomas has left a wife and one child.

A melancholy accident occurred on Wednesday to Mrs. Pearman, the wife of the singer of that name, as she was driving her husband's gig to her own house in Euston Crescent. On reaching the cross roads at the top of Tottenham-court road, she was suddenly thrown in by two of the Paddington stages. The gig was overturned, and the unfortunate lady fell beneath one of the coach wheels, which, passing over one of her legs, immediately above the ancle, fractured the limb so horribly that the foot only hung by a small portion of the muscle. It became necessary to perform amputation in the evening.

On Sunday night last, a youth of the name of Stratton, aged 16, in the service of —— Waring, Esq. Pear-tree-green, in a moment of passion, caused by a reproof for his late hours, stabbed himself with a kitchen-knife, which lay by, and staggering a few paces, fell dead on the spot. The weapon completely penetrated the heart.—Southampton Paper.

Just published, by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave Maria-lane, 8vo. pr. 7s. 6d. bds.

TABLES of the ANNUITIES, and ASSURANCES on LIVES, with the Doctrine of their Calculations, containing concise methods (never before published) of determining them, with Logarithmic Tables, formed by the Author for that purpose; Calculations of various Contingencies as Property, Expectations, &c. held on Lives; Examples of the Use of the Tables &c. &c. The whole explained on plain arithmetical principles. By R. THOMAS, of Falmouth, Surgeon and Civil Engineer.—By the same Author, price 11. 12s. to be had of Mr. J. Cary, Strand.

GEOLOGICAL and SURFACE MAP of the Winding District of CORNWALL, with Sections, Geological View, and Report—Also, price 11. 1s. to be had of Mr. Cary, Strand, and of Mr. W. Falder, Charing-cross.

A Large CHART of the SEVERN, including the Wye to Chepstow.

Speedily will be published, in 3 vols. 12mo.

RINGAN GILHAIZE, or the COVENANTERS. By the Author of "Annals of the Parish," "Sir Andrew Wylie," "The Entail," &c.

"Their constancy in torture and in death,—
"These on Tradition's tongue still live, these shall
"On History's honest page be pictured bright
"To latest times."—Grahame's Sabbath.

Printed for Oliver and Boyd, Edinburgh; and G. and W. B. Whittaker, London.

TO CHURCHWARDENS AND OVERSEERS, &c.

Just published, price 5s. 6d. sewed, the fourth edition of

THE CHURCHWARDEN and OVERSEER'S GUIDE and DIRECTOR: written and arranged for the use of Parish Officers and others, desirous of requiring Parochial Information; on an entirely new system, in which every branch of Parish Business, and other matters relating thereto, and the various Duties of Parish Officers, are familiarly and minutely explained. By J. ASHDOWNE, Member of the Hon. Society of Lincoln's Inn. Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.—Also, by the same Author,

2. The PARISH OFFICER'S ALPHABETICAL REGISTER; shewing the Names of Paupers receiving occasional or permanent Parochial Relief, whether residing in their own Parishes, or elsewhere, price 2s. 6d. sewed.

3. The PARISH POORS' RATE BOOK, for Overseers of the Poor; being an improved and convenient Plan for the Assessment for the Relief of the Poor; and containing proper directions for completing the Assessment, the adjusting of Disputes, and the manner of proceeding to recover the amount of the Rate by Distress, &c. In post 4to. price 3s. in red sheep.

ANTIQUITIES OF FREEMASONRY.

Just published, in 8vo. (illustrated with Four Maps), price 12s. boards,

THE ANTIQUITIES of FREEMASONRY; comprising Illustrations of the Five Grand Periods of Masonry, from the Creation of the World to the Dedication of King Solomon's Temple. By GEORGE OLIVER, Vicar of Clee, in the County of Lincoln, F.G.S. Chaplain for the same County, and Domestic Chaplain to the Right Hon. Lord Kensington.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

Just published, 12mo. 4s. 6d. bound, a new edition of GEOGRAPHY and HISTORY, selected by a Lady, for the use of her own Children. The Thirteenth Edition, enlarged and illustrated with Maps. Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, C. and J. Rivington, J. Scatcherd; Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; Harvey and Darton; J. Mawman; Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; J. M. Richardson, and E. Edwards.

Just published, 12mo 6s. boards.

MATINS and VESPERS; with Hymns and Occasional Devotional Pieces. By J. BOWRING. Sold by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane; and Rowland Hunter, St. Paul's Church-yard.

Just published, price 2s.

BISHOP MARSH'S THEOLOGICAL LECTURES, Part 7, On the Authority of the Old Testament.—Also, lately published, Part 6, On the Credibility of the New Testament, 2s. 6d.—Part 5, On the Authority of the New Testament, 2s.—Part 4, On the Interpretation of Prophecy, 2s. 6d.—Printed for C. and J. Rivington, St. Paul's Church yard, and Waterloo place

Just published, price 6s. in boards.

LECTURES on the GOSPEL ACCORDING to ST. JOHN.—Part the Third. Delivered at the Parish Church, and St. Margaret's Chapel, in the Parish of Walcot, Bath, on the Wednesdays and Fridays during Lent, in the year 1823. With Notes. By C. A. MOYSEY, D.D. Archdeacon of Bath and Rector of Walcot. Oxford: printed by W. Baxter, for the Author; sold by J. Parker, Oxford; C. and J. Rivington, St. Paul's Church-yard, and Waterloo-place, London; and Barratt and Collings, Bath. ☞ This Part finishes a Course of Eighteen Lectures on important points of Doctrine and Practice, taken from the Gospel according to St. John, which may be had separately at 6s. each Part, or altogether at 18s. in boards.

Just published,

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE, No. LXXIV. For March 1823.—Contents:—I. The Candid. No. 2.—II. There is a tongue in every real.—III. Letters from the Baltic. No. 5.—IV. Calperga.—V. Cither's Apology.—VI. Mr. Rose's translation of the Orlando Innamorato.—VII. Thom's Whispering Gallery. No. 2; King Jamie and the Sleeping Preacher.—VIII. The Shepherd's Calendar, Class Second; Deaths, Judgements, and Providences.—IX. Love; a poem, &c. By E. Elliot.—X. Tales o' the Daft Days. No. 3. Male Second. The Old Man's Tale; or, Klipindey Castle.—XI. Analysis of Tucker's Vision.—XII. Remarks on Mr. Owen's Plan.—XIII. Nugæ Lyricæ. Nos. 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6.—XIV. Lockhart's Spanish Ballads.—XV. Public Affairs.—XVI. Patriotic Ode, From the Spanish Gazette of Madrid, 1st March. 1823.—XVII. Irish Affairs.—XVIII. On the Scotch Character. By a Flunky.—XIX. Edinburgh Nuisances.—XX. Noctes Ambrosianæ. No. 7. Printed for William Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, Strand, London.

Just published, price 10s. 6d. in boards,

DISCOURSES principally on Subjects of SCRIPTURE HISTORY. By the Rev. CHARLES FORSTER, B.D. Domestic Chaplain to the Lord Bishop of Limerick.—Printed for T. Cadell, in the Strand; W. Blackwood, Edinburgh; and R. Milliken, Dublin.

Just published, in post 8vo. price 9s. 6d.

THE ORLANDO INNAMORATO: abridged in Prose, from the Italian of Berni: and interspersed with Stanzas in the same metre as the original. By W. STEWART ROSE.

☞ It is curious that the Orlando Innamorato, though necessary to the understanding of the story of Ariosto's Orlando Furioso, which is a continuation of it, has never been translated into English; if we except a mere outline of the main action, which gives little notion of its innumerable episodes, and none of its poetry, or the spirit in which it is conceived. The present translation is an attempt to supply such a deficiency.

Printed for William Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, Strand, London.

Just published, price 4s. 6d.

THE ITALIAN WIFE; a Tragedy.

Printed for W. Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, Strand, London.

Just published, in post 8vo. price 10s. 6d. The Third Edition, of

LIGHTS and SHADOWS of SCOTTISH LIFE. By the Author of the Trials of Margaret Lyndsay.—Printed for Wm. Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, Strand, London. Of whom may be had,

The TRIALS of MARGARET LYNDSAY. Post 8vo. price 10s. 6d.

NEW ROMANCE.—In 3 vols. price 11. 4s.

ISABEL DE BARSAS.—A Tradition of the Twelfth Century.

"What art thou that usurpst this time of night,
Together with that fair and warlike form?"
London: printed for Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy.

THOMPSON'S CONSPECTUS.

New edition, greatly improved; with an Appendix on Poisons, a Selection of Extemporaneous Prescriptions, and an Analysis of Mineral Waters.—Just published, price 8s. a Pocket Edition of A CONSPECTUS of the PHARMACOPŒIAS of the London, Edinburgh, and Dublin Colleges of Physicians; being a practical compendium of Materia Medica and Pharmacy. By A. T. THOMPSON, F.L.S. &c.—Printed for Thomas and George Underwood, 32, Fleet street; and Burgess and Hill, Great Windmill-street.

Just published, in 3 vols. price 21s.

THE CONFEDERATES. A Story.

"Oh, they are thoughts that have transfix'd my heart,
"And often (in the strength of apprehension)
"Made my cold passion stand upon my face,
"Like drops of dew on a stiff cake of ice."—BEN JONSON.

Printed for T. Hookham, Old Bond-street.

PHARMACY AND MATERIA MEDICA.

Just published, in 8vo. price 10s. 6d. in boards,

THE ELEMENTS of PHARMACY, and of the Chemical History of the Materia Medica; containing an Explanation of the Chemical Processes of the London Pharmacopœia on the different Theories received at present. The chemical properties of the various articles of the Materia Medica, of the London College; and other drugs that have lately been introduced into practice. A description of the most approved Furnaces actually used in the practice of experimental and manufacturing Chemistry, illustrated by Figures. The whole intended as a Companion to the Author's Treatise on Pharmacy. By A. T. THOMSON, Lecturer on the Materia Medica, Botany, and Pharmaceutic Chemistry.—Printed for Thomas and George Underwood, 32, Fleet-street.

Just published, in 20 vols. 4to. handsomely printed, and illustrated by Six Hundred Engravings,

THE ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA; or DICTIONARY OF ARTS, SCIENCES, AND MISCELLANEOUS LITERATURE. Sixth edition, revised, corrected, and improved.—Printed for Archibald Constable and Co. Edinburgh; and Hurst, Robinson, and Co. 90, Cheapside; and 8, Paternoster-row, London.

The Sixth Edition, now offered to the Public, has received a variety of corrections and improvements. In the Historical Articles, the narrative has been continued, so as to embrace all the most memorable events which have occurred down to the present time. The Geographical and Statistical Articles have been adapted to the late political arrangements, and amended by incorporating the new information furnished by recent travellers, and references have been made to the new Articles in the Supplement, now in course of publication: so that the whole will form the most complete Repertory of General Knowledge that has yet been given to the Public.

CHEAP and ELEGANT RETICULES.—W. MARSHALL Stock of Russia, Morocco, and Tortoise-shell Reticules, finely ornamented with from 2s. 6d. to one guinea. Rich velvet reticules with gold mounted improved Patterns, reticule clasps, 1s. 6d.; fine polished steel reticule clasps 2s.; superior gilt, 6d.; ladies' fine polished elastic steel bracelets with fine studded clasps only 2s. 6d. per pair, equal in quality to those usually sold at 7s.; large assortment of ladies' steel waist buckles and clasps 4s.; real Russia card cases 1s.; strong snaps; sovereign purses; real Russia pocket books of every description. at Holborn Bars, the corner of Middle-row.

CHEAP and FASHIONABLE CABINET, CHAIR, COUCH, and SOFA MANUFACTORY.—Fifty different Patterns, and from twenty to thirty dozen of well-seasoned mahogany, real rosewood, stained rosewood, cottage, and bed-room chairs, of all colours, ready for inspection. Real rosewood chairs nearly as cheap as stained; card, sofa, and loo tables, and cabinets to match. A large assortment of mahogany parent dining tables of all sizes; sideboards, wardrobes, drawers, and all other articles of furniture, too numerous to mention. All manufactured on the premises, and warranted of the best quality, at ROBERT WALKINGTON'S, 324, High Holborn, opposite Southampton-street, Bloomsbury-square. All Goods sent free of expence within twelve miles of London.

HIS MAJESTY'S DRAWING ROOMS.—DISON, WILLSON, and CO. impressed with a due sense of gratitude to the Nobility, Gentry, and Public, for the high and distinguished patronage they have received during their establishment in Regent street, and anxious to merit a continuance of the same, have prepared, for the approaching season and Drawing Rooms, a matchless and unique collection of lace dresses, squares, scarfs, veils, pelerines, lappets, ruffles, and frills, and every article (in lace) connected with Court and full dress costume. D. W. and Co. leave also to remark that on Monday in every week throughout the season they shall have the honour of submitting for inspection an entire new article, from Parisian designs, and fitting their guarantee of being ever foremost in the production of fashion, and which they further state will be exclusively confined to their establishment. The novelty for this week will be the Spanish Head Mantella, (an article combining the triple use of cap, scarf, and mantella,) in the Brussels fabric; and on Monday, the 14th inst. they shall have ready a Parisian novelty, called Pelerine Echarpe. To afford a convincing proof that their goods are cheaper than any imitations, they have now a beautiful collection of real Brussels sprigged veils, from 30s. upwards; with squares, scarfs, &c. equally advantageous; real point and Brussels dresses of unrivalled beauty and texture.—Foreign and British Lace Warehouse, No. 237, Regent-street, facing the Argyll Rooms.

FIVE THOUSAND PIECES of the best IRISH LINENS which were ever imported, to be SOLD by the whole piece only (much under the mark).—Apply to GRAHAM and NIXON, Wholesale Drapers and Irish Linen Factors, Nos. 293 and 294, High Holborn, London.

ESTABLISHED a quarter of a Century, under the highest patronage, and has obtained a preference over every other house for the improved British Gassed Laces. The Nobility and foreigners of distinction are respectfully solicited to inspect a large collection of superb colonade dresses, mantillas, scarfs, and veils of the most beautiful patterns and designs, and of greater durability, being in great demand for home and continental costume; also an unequalled collection of Honiton flouncing and trimming laces; likewise a few great bargains in black Chantilly and sprigged lace dresses, with a numerous assortment of lace caps, dress bodies, sleeves, ruffs, and French pillereens, surprisingly cheap, at Perkins's original manufactory, 286, High Holborn, (late Forrest and Perkins).—N.B. Letters immediately attended to.

LEVANTINE SILKS, FRENCH WIDTH, 2s. 9d. per yard, and a 15,000l. Stock of the newest and most fashionable SILKS and SHAWLS, both Foreign and British, that can be produced, in every novel and brilliant colour; also a most splendid selection of Parisian Silk Cloaks, trimmed in the most superb and prevailing fashion; fine habit Cloths, and foreign Cashmere ditto for Ladies' dresses, in the first quality, at thirty-one yards; viz. Cypre Crape Dresses, 14s. 6d. each; Velvets, 5s. 6d. per yard; very rich ditto, 10s. 6d.; the richest made, 12s. 6d.; Lapland Cords, 4s. 3d. per yard; Gros de Naples, 3s. 6d. and 3s. 9d. per yard; very rich ditto, 4s. 6d.; rich Gros de Tours, 4s. 9d. per yard; Norwich Crapes, the widest made, 1s. 3d. per yard; rich Satins for dresses, 2s. per yard; Poplins and Lustres, 1s. 6d.; rich ditto, 2s.; Irish ditto, 2s. 6d.; figured ditto, 3s. 6d.; rich Tabinets, 2s. 2d.; fine coloured Bombasins, 1s.; Black ditto, 1s. 2d.; fine ditto, 1s. 6d.; wide Sarsnets, 3s.; rich twilled ditto, 4s. 6d.; elegant Flounce Robes, 15s.; India worked Muslins, 2s. per yard; fine Jacconot ditto, 19s. the piece of 20 yards; white and coloured Trimmings, &c. unusually cheap; Shawls and Scarfs of the most chaste and elegant patterns, and scarcely to be known from the original Cashmere, from one guinea to five guineas each; those at 21. 10s. and three guineas, are most superb patterns; Norwich ANN Shawls, 12s. and 15s. each; Braganza Shawls, the largest size, 5s. each; 400 Cloth Shawls, bound, &c. 7s. 6d. each; 500 Scotch Erminet Shawls, 21s. each; every fashionable Article for the season, with a superior Stock of Family Linen Drapery.—The fullest value for India Shawls, Turbans, and Birds of Paradise, at RILEY'S India Warehouse, No. 118, Oxford-street.

GREAT BARGAINS IN SILKS of every Description.—Handsome dresses, 9s. each; rich Gros de Naples, 4s. 3d. (worth 7s.) white satins, 3s.; rich figured lutestrings, only 4s. 6d.; good sarsnets, 3s.; white evening dresses, 5s. and French lawn ditto, 12s. a dress; French width Levantines, velvets, the new French gauze dresses, 10s. 9d. to 18s. (usually sold at 2 and 3 guineas); rich white satins, taffeties, poplins, Cyprus crapes, Norwich crapes, cachmeres, striped silks, ducapes, white washing satin for slips, and a quantity of Norwich square shawls at 41s. (worth 4 guineas). In addition to these bargains, are many beautiful articles for morning and evening dress, entirely new, from 29s. to 40s. which have attracted extensive purchasers amongst the Nobility. To be had at no other house. Very fine black bombazines at 14s. the dress, without the match; 27 in. being merely 3 quarters wide, and with a double portion of silk, for the Spanish market; black crapes, lutestrings, &c. at Brown and Co.'s, 15, Hemlettn-street, Covent-garden.—Ready money only.

CARPET, BLANKET, HEARTH RUG, MOREEN, COUNTERPANES, LINEN, and MUSLIN, WAREHOUSE, Denmark House, 240, Regent-street, corner of the Circus, Oxford-street.—DAVIS and WELL, and Co. respectfully inform the Nobility and Public in general, they have purchased the above Warehouse, in which they are determined to offer the undermentioned articles on such principles that have never yet been offered to the public, which will be found, on inspection, to exceel, in cheapness and quality, any yet offered, at such prices as will defy all competition. They will warrant every article made of the best fabric, and free from any imperfections. Turkey, Persia, Brussels, and Kidderminster carpets, all sizes, ready for laying down. Brussels, Wilton, Venetian, and Kidderminster carpeting druggets of every colour; table covers, counterpanes, quilts, bed ticks, blankets, flannels, green baize; Scotch and Irish linen sheetings of every width and quality; diapers, lawns, long cloths, damask and diaper table linen, printed furniture, furniture dimity, satteens, and jeans; coloured linings; muslins of every description; window Hollands and floor cloths to any dimensions, &c. &c. &c.—E. C. T. and Co. are determined to mark every article at the lowest price, and no abatement made. For ready money only, at Denmark House, 240, Regent-street, near the Argyll Rooms.

A NEW SYSTEM of OFFERING LINEN DRAPERY.—Every piece of goods marked the lowest price, in plain figures, from which no alteration is made. R. HOWELL and Co. (late Jones,) No. 39, Bishopsgate-street Within, near Threadneedle-street, beg leave to offer to the public an extensive stock of Irish linens of the most approved fabrics; Hainbro', Scotch, and Irish tablelinen of all sizes; Russia, Scotch, Irish, and patent sheetings, huckabacks, blankets, counterpanes, quilts, furnitures, flannels, and muslins of every description; printed cambries and muslins, shawls in great variety, French cambrics, cambric handkerchiefs, nankeens, and every other article of family linen drapery, silk mercery, hosiery, &c. In addition to the above they beg particularly to recommend their imitation Gulix Holland for shirts, a most superior linen for strength and durability. R. H. and Co. feel confident that on an inspection of their goods, the very low prices, and the liberal principle on which their business is carried on, they are certain of insuring the purchaser's approbation, as they are determined to sell none but the best goods, for the smallest profit possible, for Ready Money only. R. H. and Co. have also to call the attention of their friends to a large quantity of real Scotch Muslin, which are become very scarce, and rarely to be obtained in the same variety at any other house. An assortment of British lace, veils, collars, caps, cuffs, &c.

URLING'S LACE.—COURT OF KING'S BENCH.—The validity of Urling and Co.'s Patent for the EXCLUSIVE PRODUCTION of this celebrated article having fully established by the late successful verdict for an infringement of the same, the King's Letters Patent, under the Great Seal of Great Britain, may be seen at Urling and Co.'s ONLY WAREHOUSE IN LONDON, 147, Strand, near Somerset House. It is presumed that five years' increasing favour with the British and Foreign Nobility, will elevate this extensive concern beyond the suspicion which may accompany untried pretensions; Urling and Co. have obtained a beautiful Lace from France for their Lace on its introduction to this country, which is sold in London as Foreign Lace, by adventurers, at a double price for which the same article may be procured in the Strand. A double price for which the same article may be procured in the Strand. A matchless variety of novelties prepared for the season. The real Point and Brussels work will bear comparison with foreign lace, being rendered superior as to cleanness by the patent principle. Tamboured goods, with nets and laces of every kind at the reduced wholesale prices. Manufactory, Basford, Notts.

N.B. Gentlemen's dresses, lappets, frills, ruffles, &c. in great perfection.

ESTABLISHED UPWARDS OF TWENTY YEARS, for the SALE of IRISH LINEN by the Piece, at the Factor's Price, No 4, on the South Side of Bloomsbury-square, four doors from the top of Southampton-street, Holborn.

THE IRISH LINEN COMPANY beg leave to announce to the Public, that the above House is their only Establishment in the Country: where they continue to supply the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public with WARRANTED GRASS BLEACHED LINEN, for Shirts and Sheets, of the best fabric and colour, at a price considerably lower than they can be procured elsewhere. They also engage to return the Purchase money through any other medium. They also engage to return the Purchase money should any fault appear. Good Irish Bills and Bank of Ireland Notes taken as usual. Country and Town orders punctually attended to by JOHN DONOVAN, 4, Bloomsbury-square, London, } Agents.

JOHN DOYLE, 31, St. Mary's Abbey, Dublin, }

IN SIX EASY LESSONS OF ONE HOUR EACH.—MR. BRADBURY, Private Tutor at Westminster School, solicits the attention of Ladies and Gentlemen to his unrivalled and infallible system of beautiful PENMANSHIP, whereby he pledges himself to teach persons of all ages to write with ease, elegance, and expedition, (whatever may be the deformity of their present writing) in six progressive Lessons. This system, as it equally promotes the attainment of a bold and masculine hand calculated for business, and of a light and graceful manuscript adapted to Ladies; also secures to the Pupil the certainty of writing straight, without lines, with wonderful dispatch and accuracy, and, moreover, will steady the hand of the most tremulous writer. Upwards of 2000 specimens, and numerous recommendatory letters may be seen, and references given to persons of the first distinction, some of whom are upwards of 50 years of age, Private Lessons at home. Ladies and Gentlemen attended at their own residences. A new and practical system of Short Hand, taught in a few lessons, so as to enable the writer to decipher what he has written with inconceivable ease.—Apply, (or direct, post paid) at the Academy, 464, Strand, near Charing Cross.

WRITING PAPER, of the best quality, made by the justly celebrated J. WHATMAN, of Turkey Mill, to be sold at the following low prices:—Excellent copy 7d. the quire, or 11s. the ream; good laid post 9d. superfine thick 9d. and 1s. the quire, or 12s. 13s. 6d. and 17s. 6d. the ream; superfine Bath 9d. ditto. hot pressed, 10d. and 1s. the quire, or 13s. 6d. 15s. and 17s. 6d. the ream: very best thick Bath gilt, 1s. 1d the quire, or 20s. the ream; good foolscap 1s. the quire, superfine 1s. 2d. and 1s. 4d. a quire, or 21s. and 26s. the ream; superfine large bank post 1s. the quire, or 18s. the ream; best thick lined brief 1s. 4d. the quire, or 26s. the ream; very good copy books 3s. 6d. per dozen; best sealing wax 4s. 6d. the lb. Also for sale, the new-invented Steel Nib Pen; it has the elasticity of the quill, with the durability of the steel pen, price 1s. 4d. each. Strong brown 8d. 10d. and 1s. 6d. small hand 4d. the quire; at H. and W. SMITH'S, 192, Strand, Second House from the Crown and Anchor Tavern.—Account Books made to order, of any size or pattern; Drawing Paper, and Bristol Boards, equally low in price.

BLANKETS, COUNTERPANES, SHEETINGS, DAMASK TABLE LINEN, Welsh Flannel, India Long Cloth, Irish Linen, French Cambric, and General Linen Drapery, Haberdashery, and Silk Mercery Warehouse, 15, Oxford-street, next door to Dinter's old established Fur Warehouse.—KINNING and CO. now offer the Nobility and Families in general a new and select Stock in the above branches of business, not at half price, as advertisements generally puff, but at such low prices as K. and Co. can with confidence assert will meet their entire approbation, and ensure to them their future commands.—Real Witney Blankets at the following low prices, proved only by inspection—1¼ yds long, 4s. 9d.; 2 yds do. 5s. 6d.; 2¼ yds 7s. 6d.; 2½ yds, 11s.; 2¾ do. 14s. 6d.; 3 yds do. 17s. and in proportion to any size; Counterpane, 2 yds square, 2s. 2¼ yds do. 2s. 7½; 2¾ yds do. 3s. 6d.; 2¾ yds do. 3s. 9d.; 3 yds do. 4s. 6d.; Marseilles Quilts, 2¼ yds square, 13s. 6d.; 2¾ do. 15s.; 3 yds do. 16s.; 3¼ yds do. 18s. 6d.; all warranted to measure as stated above; Servants' Sheetings, 8d. per yd; the best made, 1s.; yd wide Russia, 11d. per yard; 1¼ wide do. 1s. 2d.; 1¾ wide do. very stout, 1s. 8d.; 2¼ yds do. require no seam, 3s. 3d.; Table Linen, Damask Napkins, 7s. 6d. per dozen; Breakfast Cloths, 1¼ square, 1s. 10d.; 1¼ ditto, 2s. 6d.; 1¾ ditto, 4s. 6d.; yard wide, 6s. 6d.; 2¼ ditto, 8s. 3d.; double damask do. 1¼ 6d.; 2 yds long do. 14s. double damask do. 2¼ yds do. 22s. 6d.; 4 yds do. 25s.; and in proportion to the largest made. Several boxes of Irish Linens, of the most approved makers, warranted, from 1s. per yard; a fine quality, for Gentlemen's wear, 1s. 8½d; Real Welch Flannels, very fine, 1s. 6d. and 1s 8d. per yard; India Long Cloths, perfectly free from dress 12½d. and the finest made 1s. 3d. per yard. Several boxes of French Cambric Handkerchiefs, the largest size, 4s. per dozen; fine Irish sheetings, one yard and a quarter wide, 1s. 6d. with every other article in flax for household purposes. Their Stock of plain, figured, and striped Gros de Naples are now offered to the public at a great reduction in price; purchasers of these articles, and of washing Silks, will find an advantageous market. White Flounced Dresses of every description are still at their reduced prices, and some new Spring Patterns just purchased for ready money will be sold at the same reduction. K. and Co. take this opportunity to inform their present friends and those who may in future honour them with their commands, that they have extended their Business by adding to it the general Haberdashery, Silk Mercery, Glove and Silk Hosiery departments, which they pledge themselves to offer upon the lowest possible terms, and to sell articles of the best manufacture. A per centage allowed upon all purchases amounting to 10l. and upwards at Kinning and Co. 59 Oxford-street.

RICHARDS'S CHEMICAL SCOURING BALL, for effectually removing spots of grease, dirt, oil, paint, wax, and mildew; also stains of Port wine, tea, fruit, &c. from woollen cloths, kerseymeres, silks, stuffs, baize cloths of card tables, druggets, carpeting, silk or beaver hats, &c. It has such a strong affinity for grease that it will take it out of a coat collar or cuffs, it leaves, when done, no white mark, nor will it injure either texture or colour. Sold by J. Richards, Chemist, 193, Strand; Mr. Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Mr. Stradling and Mr. Nix, Royal Exchange; and Ward, 324, Holborn. Price 1s

BURGESS'S NEW SAUCE for general purposes, having given such great approbation, and the demand for it continuing to increase JOHN BURGESS and SON beg most respectfully to offer this their best acknowledgments to the Public for their liberal patronage of the same: its utility and great convenience in all climates, has recommended it to the most distinguished foreign connexions, who have all spoken highly in its recommendation.—It is prepared by them ONLY; and for preventing disappointments in families, all possible care has been resorted to, by each bottle being sealed upon the cork with their arms and address, as well as each label having their signature, without which it cannot be genuine.

JOHN BURGESS & SON'S long established and much-esteemed ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES, continues to be prepared by them after the same manner that has given the greatest satisfaction for many years.—Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy-steps, London.—The original Fish-Sauce Warehouse.

SMOKY FIRE-PLACES REMEDIED.—W. and M. FEETHAM, No. 9, Ludgate-hill, and 296, Oxford-street, beg leave to inform the Public, that they undertake to remedy the above evil, and by long practice and attention to the important object, with experienced workmen, they can effectually Remedy every description of Smoky Rooms, with little or no inconvenience to the family during the process. W. and M. F. beg the Public's attention to their Warm Air Stoves, with an increased draft, for halls, large rooms, &c. Likewise Warm Baths, on a convenient and approved plan, and their Attemperating Shower Bath, by the King's Patent.

EASE and COMFORT in SHAVING.—To those Gentlemen who experience inconvenience in Shaving from a tender face or strong beard, J. T. RIGGE most particularly recommends his celebrated MAGNETIC RAZOR TABLET, which, with its late improvement, he engages will produce so keen an edge as to supersede all grinding, and, at the same time, render the operation of shaving as easy and agreeable as it was before unpleasant and painful, its use is simple, its effect certain; price 7s. 6d. J. T. Rigge's Aromatic Shaving Soap will also be found an invaluable addition. Manufactory, 65 Cheapside and 52, Park-street, Grosvenor-square.

A. ROWLAND and SON, Sole Proprietors of the original MACASSAR OIL, respectfully inform the Nobility, Gentry, and Public at large, that they have REMOVED to No. 20, Hatton-Garden. Also, beg to CAUTION, that in consequence of the universal demand for their ORIGINAL and GENUINE MACASSAR OIL, impostors purchase the empty bottles, and attempt to deceive the Public with spurious Macassar Oil, composed of injurious ingredients, offering it for sale at a lower price, and without the label; and others sign, "Rowlandson," imitating the signature, which renders it necessary on purchasing to ask for ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, and strictly to observe, that none are genuine without the outside label and the little book inside the wrapper; and the label is signed on the outside, in red, "A Rowland and Son." The prices are 3s. 6d.; 7s.; 10s. 6d. and 21s. per bottle. All other prices are impositions. The genuine has the address in Red, "No. 20, Hatton-Garden"—Also, Red Whiskers, Grey Whiskers, Eye-brows, Hair on the Head, effectually changed to Brown or Black, by the use of ROWLAND'S ESSENCE of TYRE. By merely wetting the Hair, it immediately produces a perfect change. Price 4s.; 7s. 6d. and 10s. 6d. per bottle. Sold by the sole Proprietors, A. Rowland and Son, No. 20, Hatton-garden, Holborn, London; and, by appointment, by most Perfumers and Medicine Venders.—Ask for "Rowland's Oil," or "Rowland's Eclye," and observe the signature, "A. Rowland and Son. All others are counterfeits.

INDIGESTION.—Persons of bilious habits, or who are subject to Indigestion, Loss of Appetite, Sickness, Pains in the Bowels and Stomach, and other symptoms arising from a weakened or deranged state of the digestive organs, are recommended to try the BATH DIGESTIVE DINNER PILLS, as one of the safest and most certain remedies ever offered to public notice. Mild but effectual in their operation, they cleanse and yet strengthen the stomach, restore the appetite, promote digestion, and keep the bowels in a comfortable and regular state, free from costiveness, but so means too relaxed.—Sold by Mrs. Hudson, Apothecaries' Hall, Chancery, 193, Strand; and Mr. Stradling, Royal Exchange. Price 2s. 9d. a box. Where may be had, Fuller's Infallible Specific for Tooth Ache, 2s. 9d. a bottle.

GREY HAIR changed in a few minutes to a Brown Black. In short, ABIGAIL'S GOLDEN METALLIC TINCTURE is the purest and best discovery in the Universe; as it is sure to change Red or Grey Hair on the Head, Whiskers, or on any other part, to a brown black. Directions are sealed up with each bottle, so that any one can dye their own hair with ease and secresy in a few minutes, without staining the skin.

What makes the Golden Tincture preferable to any other dye, it actually changes the hair to no other colour than a brown black, and never comes off. Several Gentlemen have declared, who have dyed their whiskers with it, and have half an hour after shaved and washed with soap, that none of the dye comes off.

CAUTION.—As valuable articles are generally tried to be counterfeited, therefore Ladies and Gentlemen will be particular, and ask for Abigail's Golden Metallic Tincture. One bottle is sufficient for most heads. The Stamp Stands, which is a saving, and observe, "Abigail & P." is signed on the cover of each bottle, without it is not genuine, and cannot answer the purpose.—Sold by appointment at A. Prince's, No. 9, Poland-street, near the Pantheon, Oxford-street, London, and No. 26, London road, Surrey; Sanger, 150, Oxford-street; Prout, 229, Strand; Davison, 59, Fleet-street; Rigge, 65, Cheapside; Johnson, 68, Cornhill; Tatt, Royal Exchange; and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders.—Ladies and Gentlemen residing in the country, sending a remittance, it will be forwarded immediately by coach. It is so prepared as to keep in all climates; the older the better.—Merchants and Captains will receive a liberal allowance for exportation.

LATEST NEWS.

Bayonne Papers to the 28th ult. arrived yesterday. General Eguia is stated to be ill at Bayonne; Lonca is still in that town. Quesada, who is at St. Jean de Luz, has requested a French Marshal (whose name is not given) to supply him with six field-pieces; the request was refused, on the ground that the latter did not deem it necessary.

General Guilleminot remains as Chief of the Staff under the Duke of Angoulεme, but it is now admitted even by the Official Papers that one of his Aides-de-Camp has been arrested under a charge of conspiring, and has been brought to Paris. His name is even given: it is M. de Lostande, and it is added that he was conveyed to the capital by two Gendarmes, and consigned on the 1st instant to the celebrated prison of l'Abbaye. The Journal des Debats also says, that "M. de Bois Bertrand, Commissary-General of Police, had arrived on the 26th of March at Bourdeaux."

The Duke of Bellune (Minister at War) passed through Bourdeaux on the 28th ult. and proceeded with the greatest rapidity to the army. M. de Martignac, the King's Civil Commissary, also reached Bourdeaux on the 28th, and left it the following day for Bayonne.

Letters from Aleppo of the 7th, 10th, and 13th of January last, state, that the shocks of earthquakes had recommenced in that country with more violence than ever.

A Lisbon mail arrived yesterday, which states, that General Luiz de Reao, after the affair of the 13th, with his vanguard, encountered the factious, and an action took place with loss on both sides, when he concentrated the troops under his command, and transferred his head quarters to Amarante.

New York Papers to the 16th; Philadelphia to the 15th; and Washington to the 14th ult. also arrived. Iturbide, the new Emperor of Mexico, is likely to be soon despoiled of his dignity.

Thursday afternoon the King held a Court at Brighton, which was attended by the Duke of York, the Secretary of State for the Colonial Department, the Lord Steward, the Master of the Horse, the Earl of Chichester, Lord Colchester, &c. After which his Majesty held a Privy Council, at which the Right Hon. Charles Grant was appointed Vice-President of the Board of Trade.

His Majesty's sloop Cygnet, Capt. Bennet, is arrived at Portsmouth, from the Cape of Good Hope; she left Simon's Bay on the 26th Jan. St. Helena on the 11th Feb. and Ascension on the 21st of the same month. The Andromache, 48, Commodore Nourse, Ariadne, 24, Capt. Moorson; Espiegle, 18, Capt. Collier; Delight, 10, Capt. Hay; and Bathurst (sur veying vessel, from New South Wales), Capt. King, were lying in Simon's Bay.

The Duke of York arrived in town on Friday from Brighton.

Yesterday was the day for making up the quarter's revenue. The financial details were not published in time for our Paper, but the statement we understand will prove a most satisfactory one.

The Viscount de Marcellus, the Charge d'Affaires of France, paid a visit on Thursday to Mr. Canning—it was a visit of ceremony.

The Parish Church of St. Brides, which has been repaired and beautified, will be opened this day for divine service.

HUNTING.—Earl Fitzwilliam's Hounds meet to-morrow at Bedford Purlieus; Wednesday at Sawtry Toll-bar; each day at nine o'clock.—Lord Yarborough's Hounds to-morrow, at Irby Dales; Wednesday at Hundon; Friday at Tegsby Village; each day at 11 o'clock.—BURTON HUNT—Sir R. Sutton's Hounds to-morrow, at Legsby; Tuesday, at Newbold Common; Thursday at Branston Wood; Saturday at Blankney; each day at 11 o'clock.

The Grand Jury have found a true bill against Capt. Wallace for assaulting Lord Cranmorne.

At Worship-street Office, Wm. Waggett, the grave-digger, has been remanded for robbing the graves of Holywell Liberty, Shoreditch, of great numbers of the dead. A fellow, named Vaughan purveyor to the surgeons, had been in the practice of giving the grave-digger 30s. for each body, but he latterly demanded 40s.; a quarrel ensued at a public-house, which led to his apprehension. Vaughan swore that he had paid him within three months upwards of 70l. and that he (Waggett) had raised 43 bodies, and sold them to this infamous dealer.

At the Surrey Assizes the following gentlemen, summoned on the grand jury, were each fined 50l. for non-attendance. Sir J. D. Broughton, Bart.; Thomas Langley, Esq. of Kingston; Henry Wright, Esq. of Ham; John Augustus Knight, Esq. of Wimbledon; and John Garratt, Esq. of Kingston.

The Cork paper of Tuesday, received yesterday, says—"On Friday last, a house on a farm near Kildorrery, surrendered to Joseph Delany, Esq. was consumed in the noon-day. It is suspected to have been burnt by the going-out tenant, as, in half an hour after he left the premises, the flames burst out. On Sunday night, a farm-house on a farm surrendered to M. Roberts, Esq. of Kilmoney, was also consumed. We have in our possession a notice lately posted at Blarney, similar to those generally posted up through the county, and signed 'General John Rock, K.C.R.' We have reason to know that a change will immediately take place, respecting the administration of justice in this country, and that the lenient course hitherto proved so inefficacious, will no longer be adhered to."

CARNOLL'S Offices, No. 19, Cornhill, and 26, Oxford-street, have always been distinguished for the Sale of the large Capitals. In the very last Contract, the Prizes of £20,000, one of £10,000, and fourteen others Capitals of £1000, £500, &c. were sold by CARNOLL. Next Wednesday the Drawing of the present Lottery will commence, when Fifty-three Capitals will be decided in the first half-hour, and the first drawn Prize entitled to £20,000. The Scheme contains three of £20,000, two of £5000, two of £2000, &c.

PIDDING & Co.'s Office has experienced a greater demand for whole Tickets during the present Lottery than has occurred for a long time: this is attributable to two causes; first, the established notoriety of the lucky corner, No. 1, Cornhill, where, even in the last contract, if one person had purchased all the tickets that were sold there, he would have made a profit of many thousand pounds beyond the cost of the tickets;—secondly, because there is absolutely a better chance now of gaining money by the lottery than ever existed before; for out of 5,000 tickets, which are all to be drawn Next Wednesday, 9th April, the first 53 prizes are each to have a capital from 200l. to 20,000l., and recollect, some of these may now be obtained at Pidding's Lucky Corner.

THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE.—An interesting volume is just published, relative to this part of the world, under the title of the Geography, History, and Statistics of America and the West Indies, &c. &c. by Messrs. Carey and Lea of Philadelphia, with considerable additions relative to the New States of South America, &c. on the merits of which we are induced to quote the following opinion of a contemporary print:—"When the folio whence this publication is formed, arrived from Philadelphia, we expressed our opinion of its great utility and merits.—(See Lit. Gaz. No. 288)—That opinion is much enhanced by the publication before us, which contains by far the most valuable condensation of American Geography, History, and Statistics, which has issued from the Press. It is constructed on a comprehensive and excellent plan: the maps, charts, and plates are numerous and well executed; and when all the modern information required by the changes and revolutions on the New Continent are taken into the account, we are free to say that this Volume is a very complete illustration of the important matters which it embraces. Either for instruction or reference it is calculated to be a standard work."—Literary Gazette, March 29.—After this unequivocal testimony to the merits of the volume before us, it merely remains for us to state that its price is only 18s. while the original work from which it has been formed sells for six guineas.

FASHION.—From a Fashionable Magazine—"The taste for millinery and beaver bonnets, as the season advances, rapidly declines. Spring has introduced a new carriage bonnet, composed of a pretty fancy straw, in the gypsey form, short at the ear, front inclined à la Maria Stuart; trimming, an affair of lutestring and wild roses, placed in front of the crown. This novelty is attributed to the house of Askew and Normanvill, Leghorn hat merchants, 85, Oxford-street.

ELEGANT GLASSES, FURNITURE, &c.—The Nobility and Gentry are invited to inspect the Ware rooms of Cooper and Son, 83, Bishopsgate Within, where is exhibited a large Assortment of new and second-hand Plate Glasses, admirably suited to every description of drawing or dining-rooms. The prices are just reduced 40 per cent. on plates measuring 100 inches by 72, and upwards; and on those of smaller dimensions the alteration will be found equally important. The extensive preference given to this Establishment is thankfully acknowledged by the Proprietors, who, in their endeavours to evince their gratitude, by manufacturing articles in a superior manner, at prices suitable to the times, hope to merit a continuance of public support. In the furniture department is comprised every new and elegant article of upholstery, cabinet, and chair work, regulated upon such a scale of economy as to demand and ensure the patronage of rank and fashion.

A candid examination of professional pretensions is only to be feared by those, who are conscious of incapacity. Messrs. Goss and Co. Members of the Royal College of Surgeons, confine their studies to the treatment of such disorders as arise from nervous debility. Their works, "The Elgis of Life," and "Hygeiana," (the latter addressed to females) in full explanation of these subjects, may be had at No 20, Paternoster-row, London, Porter, 72, Grafton street, Dublin, or at any Booksellers. Medicines can be forwarded to any part, however distant, on receiving a Bank note.—11, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

THE PROPRIETORS of EAST INDIA STOCK will not throw away the few moments of attention they may bestow upon the following brief hints relative to the question which stands for BALLOT on TUESDAY:—

The mode in which the Ballot is announced in the Public Papers (we presume it to be the usual form), has led to a doubt whether the contrary is the case demanded the Ballot are favourable to the Resolutions; the contrary is the fact, but those who have thus stood forward do not ask any sacrifice of the interests of the East India Company to those of the West India Colonies. They are persuaded that every Proprietor of East India Stock, who rightly considers his own interest, will Ballot against the Resolutions.

The ablest men who ever directed the Company's affairs, discouraged, in 1792, a similar attempt to stimulate the growth and manufacture of Sugar in India, by rivalry of the West India Colonies, and the most experienced of the present Directors do not widely differ from their able Predecessors. The private Traders and great Agency Houses have their views, but their efforts would avail but little, if they had not, upon this occasion, acquired and obtained the aid of two active and formidable bodies, the Political Œconomists, and the Saints.

These two parties have fairly divided the argument between them, and while the former furnishes the Logic, the latter abundantly supplies the Rhetoric of the Debate. But although Negro Slavery be a fertile topic of appeal to the passions, how is it fairly applicable to the point in question? In the appeal which you are urged to make to Parliament, can you reasonably object to the Colonies, that mode of cultivation, which the Legislature has so repeatedly and expressly sanctioned and encouraged, and upon which in reliance on its acts and declarations so much British capital has been embarked? These anti-rhetorical pists too, I shrewdly suspect, if by your aid they could get out for the display of their talents, would find in your concerns some matter for the display of their benevolent exertions are not backward to claim.

But the Political Œconomists! Will you accept of their alliance too? How are your privileges, your China Trade in particular, to stand against their doctrine? Can you take them with you for this stage and drop them when you please? Or, will you not find yourselves entangled in the principles, which you shall, on this question, have adopted, when you have your own important interests to defend?

Believe me the Resolutions proposed contain some other case, not your's; these are the days of humbug! But you will surely be upon your guard.

VERBUM SAT.

GRAND JURY ROOM, ENNISKILLEN, March 19, 1823.—RESOLVED, That whilst we feel in common with all well disposed and loyal subjects, disapprobation at any insult offered to the representative of our most gracious Sovereign, we cannot, at the same time, avoid, as Grand Jurors, take notice of, and expressing our alarm and indignation at the highly unconstitutional measures resorted to by His Majesty's Attorney General for Ireland, by the late Ex-Officio prosecution, as infringing directly on the powers of Grand Juries, and the rights and freedom of the subject.—Resolved, That we hereby request our Representatives in Parliament to use their utmost exertions to prevent the recurrence of such unconstitutional proceeding; and that we have the fullest reliance on their co-operation in all such legislative measures as may preserve inviolate our most glorious Constitution in Church and State.

Corry, Foreman,	George Lendrum,
John Creighton,	Andrew Dixon,
Henry Brooke,	Michael Jones,
Gerard Irvine,	Joseph M'Gwire,
Edward Archdall,	John Brien,
John Madden,	Simon Armstrong,
John Richardson,	Francis Hassard,
Wm. D'Arcy Irvine,	Charles Archdall,
Folliott W. Berton,	James Dixon,
Richard Irvine,	John Crozier,
Hamilton Irvine,	J. D. Johnston.
Alex. Fitzgerald Crawford,	Edward Denny, Sheriff.

PELICAN LIFE INSURANCE OFFICES, Lombard-street and Spring Gardens.

DIRECTORS.

Right Honourable William Heygate, Lord Mayor, M.P.

Sir William Curtis, Bart. M.P.	Sir Charles Flower, Bart. Alderman.
Matthias Attwood, Esq. M.P.	John Coope, Esq.
William Cotton, Esq.	William Davis, Esq.
Hugh Hammersley, Esq.	John Hanson, Esq.
John Hatsy Hustpiet, Esq.	Thomas Raikes, Esq.
William Samler, Esq.	George Shum Storey, Esq.
	William Walker, Esq.

The Company continue to effect Insurances on Lives at equitable Rates without Entrance Money, or any additional Premium for sea risk in decked vessels to or from the British Isles, or to or from the opposite line of coast between the Texel and Figure de-Case included—to grant and purchase Annuities under a special Act of Parliament—and also to purchase well-secured Reversions of considerable amount, and respectable parties, on liberal terms.—Agents are appointed in all the Cities and principal Towns in the United Kingdom.

THOMAS PAIKE, Sec.

IMPERIAL LIFE INSURANCE COMPANY, Sun Court, Cornhill, and St. James's Street.—Capital £750,000.

Lives Insured with this Company are allowed to pass by sea from one part of the United Kingdom to another; and also in time of peace to pass in King's Ships and Packets or other decked Vessels, between British Ports and such Foreign Ports as lie between Ostend and Havre de Grace, both inclusive, without extra Premium, and without being subjected to the inconvenience of applying for the special leave of the Directors, as heretofore required by the usual conditions of Life Policies.

By Order of the Board,

JOHN GREY, Actuary.

Persons insured for the whole term of Life will participate periodically in Two-third Parts of the Profits of the Company, by additions to the sums insured. Rates and Conditions may be had by applying at either of the Company's Offices. A liberal Agency is allowed to professional men effecting Insurances.

EUROPEAN LIFE INSURANCE and ANNUITY COMPANY, No. 10, Chatham-place, Blackfriars.—Persons affecting Insurances with this Company, for the whole period of life, are immediately entitled to participate in whatever division of profit shall take place, which, with the reduced rate of Premium demanded, will enable all descriptions of persons to make a provision for their families on terms the most advantageous. Tables have also been calculated by which the Premiums may be paid Quarterly, Half-Yearly, or Annually, at the option of the Insured. No charge is made for Entrance, or for Policy, except the stamp. The Insured are permitted to go in steam, or other decked vessels, to and from any part of the united kingdom, and in time of peace to and from any part of the Continent, situated between the Elbe and Brest, without being required to pay additional Premium, or to procure a licence from the Directors. This Company continue to advance Money on Annuity, secured on Freehold, Copyhold, or long Leasehold Property, or Money in the Funds.

JOHN CLARK, Managing Director.

BEACON FIRE INSURANCE COMPANY, No. 8, CHATHAM-PLACE, BLACKFRIARS, London.

Directors:

Robert Ward, Esq. M.P. Chairman—John Wray, Esq. Deputy Chairman.

Benjamin Ansley, Esq.	David Laing, Esq.
Henry James Bouverie, Esq.	Lawrence Burke Morris, Esq.
Henry Hallam, Esq.	Sir Henry Parnell, Bart. M.P
George Hammersley, Esq.	William Sotheby, Esq.
John Adair Hawkins, Esq.	Wm. Rob. Spencer, Esq.

John Clark, Esq. Managing Director.

Bankers—Messrs. Hammersleye and Co. 69, Pall Mall, and Sir P. Pole, Bart. Thornton, and Co. Bartholomew-lane.

The plan of the above Company offers the following advantages:—A reduction of 25 per cent. on the rates of premium required to insure private dwellings and household furniture, not deemed hazardous, and an equally liberal abatement will be made on all other description of Insurances; besides a reduction of 5 per cent. on the duty payable to Government.—The payment of 5 per cent. on the amount of loss on all property insured with this Company, within one week after the same shall have been destroyed or damaged by fire, and the remainder so soon as the amount of loss can be ascertained.—The insurance of rent during the re-building of the premises insured.—Insurance of a weekly allowance to tradesmen and others during the period they may be deprived by fire of the means of pursuing their usual avocations.—The Insurance of property for specific periods, or during the combination of any life or lives.

To secure persons possessing houses from sustaining loss, from the tenants bringing on the premises property deemed hazardous, this Company further undertakes, by the payment of a compatible rate of premium, to insure Landlords of such property against every risk, that might otherwise be incurred from the misconduct of their tenants.—The Directors meet every Thursday, at No. 8, Chatham-place.

ALE, STOUT, CIDER, &c.—THOMAS FIELD and SON beg to acquaint their Friends and the Public, that their genuine Burton, Edinburgh, Taunton, and Welsh Ales, Dorchester Beer, Brown Stout, Cider, Perry Wines, Cape Madeira, Brandy, Rum, Hollands, Geneva, and Orange Shrub; and they have been enabled to make a considerable reduction in the prices of several articles.—22, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden.

PATENT ECONOMICAL CHAMBER-LAMP and UNIVERSAL SUBSTITUTE for a CANDLE.—Although the principle of this Improvement is alike advantageous in the Lamps of every sort, and lights to any degree from one to six candles, the Patentee presumes to state its perfection as a Chamber or Night Lamp only, that the Public may judge of its claim to universal adoption. It gives a brilliant and invariable light any length of time it can be wanted, and can be so regulated as to burn till the approach of day, and ready at the instant it is wanted; and so safe, that it may even be used about the bed of sickness without danger; and as a moving or house light, is a protection of the carpets from tallow or wax, and an absolute to greasy candlesticks and a waste of candles; can be trimmed with little more than a touch, and requires to be replenished with cotton only once in two months. The price of the neat Japan stands, and 15s. to 20s. in bronze, for the chamber of the affluent, including cotton, sufficient to try the Patent, for seven years' consumption. In economy nothing can compete with it, the expense in spermaceti oil not being half that of a rushlight.

Sold for the Patentee, by T. PEARCE and CO. only, at 368, facing the front of St. Clement's Church, in the Strand, who, to secure its reputation from the effects of bad Oil, are bound to sell none but pure Spermaceti Oil, in which the confidence of the public shall never be abused.—Letters, post paid, from any part of the kingdom, will meet with prompt attention.

WEDNESDAY NEXT.

SWIFT and CO. solicit the attention of the Public to the present Lottery Scheme of only 14,000 Tickets, having 83 Capitals, viz. three of £20,000, two of £5,000, two of £2,000, six of £1,000, &c. &c. drawn in three days. All the Prizes are of Money. On the First Day, there will be only 5,999 Tickets in the Wheel, to which must be drawn a Prize of £10, and 52 other Capitals, all fixed for that day: in addition to which there will be drawn the First Day, a Prize above £10, will entitle the Holder to a Whole Ticket for the Second Day, so that a Purchaser may obtain Two Capital Prizes by the purchase of one Ticket or Share. Schemes at large to be had at SWIFT'S and Co. No. 11, Poultry, the Old and Fortunate Office of Swift and Co. No. 11, Poultry, next to the Mansion House, and 31, Aldgate High-street, where 2,151, a Prize of £5,000, and other Capitals, were sold in January last.

ECONOMY in UPHOLSTERY and CABINET FURNITURE.—Ladies wishing to make up their own Curtains, Draperies, &c. can have them cut out by J. PORTER, 25, Welbeck-street, and every part required, so that they may make them up in the most fashionable manner, with the greatest ease, and at a very moderate expense. J. P. feels confident, from his practical knowledge of the business, and particularly of Design and Drawing, that his Work will be found classical and elegant. His manufactures exist in the Cabinet and Chair line, and from the late fall in mens's wages, he is enabled to offer them at very Low Prices. Curtains dyed and made. Mattrasses, Sofas, and Chairs re-stuffed. Estimates of Prices, &c. made on the shortest notice.—An Apprentice wanted.

IN consequence of the great disappointment many persons have experienced from purchasing inferior TRUSSES, SALMON, ODY, and most respectfully solicit the attention of Professional Gentlemen and the Public to observe, that the true PATENT SELF-ADJUSTING TRUSS has only Salmon, Ody, and Co. No. 292, Strand, London," marked upon the leather case in which they are of the spurious kind. Salmon, Ody, and Co. the sole Inventors and Patentees, have made 50,000 of their PATENT SELF-ADJUSTING TRUSSES, and still continue to have the recommendations of all the most eminent Surgeons in Town and Country. They have also the honour to supply the Army and Navy; the Naval and Military Hospitals; the Dockyards; the Marine Infirmary; the Hon. East India Company; the Chelsea Truss Society; the Marylebone, Wycombe, Bristol, and Bethnal-green Dispensaries; the Windsor General Dispensary; the Middlesex and Surrey Hospitals; Parochial Establishments, &c. &c.—Sold by one or more Agents in every principal Town in the United Kingdom.

SPITALFIELDS SILKS.—Ladies who are about purchasing Spring Dresses will find an unlimited collection of RICH SILKS, equalled by any House in Europe (of the original Manufacturers) for splendour of beautiful colours, with the advantage of purchasing only of the Manufacturer, at the same price per yard as recently given. 500 pieces of rich striped de Naples, 2s. 7d. to 2s. 10d. per yd; double do. in beautiful shades, 3s. 6d. to 4s. 3d. 400 pieces of rich levantine silks, 3 quarters wide, 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d. 500 pieces of the new Zephenine silk, much resembling the French manufacture, a yd. commonly sold at 7s. 700 pieces of very rich damask silks, an article which the house has been long patronized, such that England never can or will bid defiance to all French silks, measuring 3 qrs. wide, 3s. to 5s. 6d. per yd. SEWELL and CROSS have leg to observe, that whatever price may be given for foreign silks, they will not equal this article, being made up of Piedmont silk, and got up under their own immediate inspection, an article which must ever do credit to a British manufacturer, and is now making to order for the first nobility in town and continue to make to the same pattern. With the privilege of the Assignees of G. W. and Co. the fortunate Manufacturers in the Fields, S. and C. have on sale their Stock of pieces of rich stripe Silks, 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d. a yard, and 400 pieces of all-silk Satins suited for ladies morning or dinner dresses, 2s. 3d. a yard, commonly sold and cost the Manufacturers 2s. 9d. a yard; an equally rich variety of Figured Gauzes, any colour, 11d. and 1s.; 60 pieces of Persian Silks, for full dress, in shade, 1s. 5d. to 1s. 8d.; 300 pieces of rich black Gros de Naples, and coloured Silks, ladies evening dresses 2s. 6d. to 3s. 3d. a yard, worth 3s.—30 boxes of fine Lawns (equal to Cambric) suited for ladies pocket handkerchiefs, 1s. 6d. per square; 80 doz of real Cambric Handkerchiefs, 21s. the doz. to the trade, made at 21.; 50 bales of India Long cloths, 6-4 in an inch free from dressing, for 6d. a piece, a large parcel of fine printed Jaconet Muslins, 6d. per yard, for 20s. these cloths are particularly suited for families going abroad, or to the East or West Indies; 200 pieces of the best coloured muslin de laines (a great bargain, any colours) 1s. 5d. a yard, worth 2s.—at SEWELL and CROSS'S, 42, Frith-street, corner of Old Compton-street, Soho-square. Let by referring to the advertisement, may depend on having any article at prices advertised.

HAMPTON COURT.—To be LET, Handsomely Furnished, a long or short period of the LEASE and FURNITURE (if not disposed of), an Excellent FAMILY HOUSE, situate on the Banks of the Thames, commanding a fine prospect of the River. The House is in complete repair, and fit for the immediate reception of a family of the first respectability, containing 12 bed rooms, 4 sitting rooms of good dimensions, double coach house and four-stalled stable, and a neat flower garden bounded by the River. For cards to view apply to Mr. Parnell, Estate Agent, 22 St. Martin's-le-Grand, Leicester square, and Kingston, Surrey.

FITZROY-SQUARE.—To be LET, or the LEASE offered for SALE, on very moderate terms, of an Excellent FAMILY HOUSE, in complete repair, with three rooms on the ground floor, two handsome drawing rooms, three best bed-rooms and water closet, and four second bedrooms, convenient servants' rooms, and a good kitchen, with a detached brew and wash house, and coach house and stable, with lofts and rooms over. Cards to view apply to Mr. Parnell, Estate Agent, 22, St. Martin's-court, Leicester-square, and Kingston, Surrey.

SALES BY AUCTION.

OXFORDSHIRE.—At the White Hart Inn, Chipping Norton, on the 6th day of MAY NEXT, at 4 o'clock in the afternoon, in One Lot, A most desirable and improveable ESTATE, in the Hamlets of Chadlington with Pudlicot, Chilson, and Shorthampton, in the Parish of Chadlington, in the County of Oxford; comprising the Manor of Chadlington West, the Court Leets, Court Baron, Heriots, Quit-rents, and all other appurtenances: the Rectory of Shorthampton, the capital Mansion, coach-house, stables, farm-houses, with other and buildings, and about 2,000 acres of arable meadow pasture and woodland, enclosed, and tithe free, of which about 1,000 acres are Freehold, and the remainder Lease and Colleges, the Lease nearly 19 years, and renewable for leases to respectable tenants, which expire 1839.

Also will be sold, at the same time and place, in one Lot, by double Lot, a rich Meadows, called Fulling Mill Hams, containing, together, about 80 acres with a building thereon, situate in the parish of St. Thomas, distant one road leading to Witney.—For a view of Chadlington Estate apply to Mr. Hazard, builder, Chadlington; and of the two Meadows, at Witney, to Mr. Chaundy, George-lane, Oxford; and for other particulars may be had of the 21st inst.) at the White Hart, Chipping Norton; Plough Inn, Chilson; Thomas Taunton, Esq. Oxford; and Messrs. Bray and Warren, solicitors to Russell street, London.—The Manor of Chadlington is well stocked with Game, and the roads in the neighbourhood are remarkably good, and is distant from Chipping Norton 1 mile, Blenheim 6, Oxford 16, Cheltenham 25, and about from London.

HORSE BAZAAR, King-street, Portman square, for the Sale of Horses by AUCTION and COMMISSION, by GEORGE YOUNG, on every Monday (and every succeeding Saturday) precisely at Twelve o'clock.

SEVERAL LOTS of HORSES, many of them suitable for Saddle and Stage Masters.

N.B. A great variety of Horses in addition to the above, are constantly for Sale by Commission at the Bazaar, and amongst them are a considerable number of fine young Horses, consisting of superior Hunters, Hacks, and Cart Horses.

G. Young begs to Inform Gentlemen that have Horses for Sale, that at this there is considerable demand.

STOCKS.		Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thur.	Fri.	Sat.
Bank Stock				—	—	—	—
3 per Cent. Reduced				—	—	—	—
3 per Cent. Consols				74¼	74¼	74¼	74¼
3½ per Cent. Consols				—	—	—	—
Consols for Account				74¾	74¾	74¾	74¾
4 per Cent. Consols				—	—	—	—
New 4 per Cent.		Holiday.	Holiday.	94½	94¼	94¼	94¼
Bank Long Annuities				—	—	—	—
India Bonds				26 p	30 p	31 p	31 p
Exchequer Bills, 24l.				11 p	13 p	14 p	14 p
Ditto, 24l.				—	—	—	—
Columbian Bonds				—	—	—	—

MARRIED.

On Thursday, April 3, at Wanstead Church, by the Rev. T. Thirlwall, Rev. Charles E. Smith, of Otterden, Kent, to Henrietta, eldest daughter of the late Rev. W. J. French, of Bow.

Lord Dunsany, to the Hon. Miss Kinnaird.—Sir J. D. Hay, Bart. to the eldest daughter of G. Hathorn, Esq.—Col. Adams, to Gabrielle, third daughter of John White, Esq.—Capt. J. Lindsay, of the Grenadier Guards, to the eldest daughter of Sir C. Trotter, Bart.

DIED

On Wednesday, April 2, at the seat of her father, Burwood Park, Surrey, Mary, wife of James T. Fyler, Esq. of Twickenham, and third daughter of Sir John Frederick, Bart.

At Woolwich, on the 1st inst. sincerely regretted by her family and friends, Isabella, wife of Major-General Young, Royal Artillery.

At Camberwell-grove, on the 28th ult. Margaret Ainslie, daughter of Sir Rutherford, of Madeira, in her 7th year.

On the 3d inst. in the 80th year of her age, Mrs. Broadley, of Blyborough, Lincolnshire.

At Dover, Sir H. Peake, one of the Surveyors of His Majesty's Navy.—At Cambridge, Sir C. Corbet, Bart., M.A. of Trinity College.—he died on the night, at his Lodge, in Downing College, E. Christian, Esq. Chief Justice of the Isle of Ely, and Professor of the Laws of England in the University of Cambridge.—At Brighton, in his 74th year, Sir J. Eamer, Alderman of London and Bath, aged 73. Barbara, wife of Lieut.-Col. Warne.

LONDON: Printed and Published by E. SHACKELL, No. 11, JOHNSON'S-COURT, FLEET-STREET, to whom only Communications to the Editor (post-paid) are requested.

JOHN BULL.

FOR GOD, THE KING, AND THE PEOPLE!

No. 122. SUNDAY, APRIL 13, 1823. Price 7d.

ROYAL ACADEMY OF MUSIC. Under the immediate Patronage of His Majesty. On THURSDAY, the 24th instant, will be given at the King's Theatre, A CONCERT on a most extensive scale, to which great attention is paid by the Professors of the Capital, Vocal and Instrumental, have generously tendered their assistance. The Orchestra will consist of upwards of Two Hundred Performers.—Further particulars will be announced in a short time.—Tickets to be had at the Royal Academy, Tenterden-street, Hanover Square.—It is respectfully notified, that no Boxes (except those taken at the Academy) will be for the Benefit of the Institution.—Boxes on the ground and first tiers, 3l. 4s.; the other tiers, 3l. 3s.; Pit, 10s. 6d.; Gallery, 5s.

31 April, 1823.

MR. KELLY most respectfully informs his Friends and the Public that his ANNUAL BENEFIT will take place at the Opera House on THURSDAY, the 5th of JUNE. The Entertainments of the night will be on the same extended scale as on former Seasons.

NEW ARGYLL ROOMS, Regent-street.—MR. HAWES most respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that his CONCERT will take place on FRIDAY NEXT, April 18, 1823, at the above Rooms.

Vocal Performers—Mrs. Salmon and Miss Stephens, Miss Veues, Master Wesley, and Miss Goodall; Mr. Sapio Mr. Terrail, Mr. J. Elliott, Mr. Evans, Mr. Bennet, Mr. Goulden, Mr. Mullinex, Mr. Clark, Mr. Hawes, Mr J. B. Sale, Mr. Bellamy. Leader of the Band, Mr. Mori; Conductor, Mr. Attwood.

The Chorus will consist of Fifty Performers, from the Concert of Ancient Music and Choral Fund, assisted by the Young Gentlemen of the Choir of St. Paul's Cathedral and the Chapel Royal, for which the Orchestra will be considerably enlarged and the Chapel Royal, for which the Orchestra will be considerably enlarged and a New Organ (built expressly for Mr. Hawes), will be opened on this occasion, by Mr. Adams.

ACT I.—Grand Selection from the Dettingen "Te Deum,"—Handel; Quartetto, Mrs. Salmon, Mr. Terrail, Mr. Hawes, and Mr. J. B. Sale; and Chorus, "Benedictus."(Requiem)—Mozart: Duet, Mr. Sapio and Mr. Bellamy, Dove sconces,"Horns and Bassoons Obligati, added by the late Mr. Harrison)—Mozart; Scena, Miss Stephens, "A cossier," accompanied on the Violin by Mr. Mori—Cherubini; Solo, Organ, Mr. T. Adams; Glee, "Hail, smiling morn"—Spofforth; Song, Mrs. Goodall, "Eve's Lamentation." (from the Oratorio of the Interces-sion)—M. P. King; Motet, "Methinks I hear the full celestial choir," the Solo Part by Mr. J. B. Sale—Dr. Crotch; Aria, Mrs. Salmon, "Gratias agimus tibi;" Clarinet Obligato, Mr. Willman—Guglielmi; Grand Coronation Anthem, "I was glad"—T. Attwood.

ACT II.—Grand Sinfonia (Jupiter)—Mozart; Trio, Miss Veres, Mr. Hawes, and Mr. Bellamy, "Lessons of Love"—Paesiello; Aria, Mr Sapio, "Fra tante amorose Carattia; Glee, Miss Goodall, Mr. Terrail, Mr. Hawes, and Mr. J. B. Sale, "If this delicious grateful flow'r," harmonized by W. Hawes; Solo, Violin, Mr. Mori; Song, Mrs. Salmon, "Non je ce veux pas chanter," Nicolo; Glee, Four Voices (with a double Choir), "Foresters, sound the cheerful horn," (Horns Obligati, Messrs. Petrides)—Bishop; Song Mr. Bellamy, "Let the dread fal engines"—Purcell; Pupular Scottish Ballad, Miss Stephens, (first time this Season), "Auld Robin Gray," newly arranged by W. Hawes; Glee, Five Voices, "Strephon's wedding," newly arranged by W. Hawes; Grand Selection from Verse and full Chorus. The Concert will commence at Eight o'Clock precisely.

Tickets, Half a Guinea each, to be had at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Regent-street; Birchall's, and Chappell's New Bond-street; Power's, Strand; Goulding's, Soho-square; Purkis's, Piccadilly; Clementi's, Cheapside; Davis', Royal Exchange; and of Mr. Hawes, 7, Adelphi Terrace.

KING'S CONCERT ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE.—MR. LA PORTE, respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and his friends generally, that his ANNUAL CONCERT will be at the above Rooms on FRIDAY the 25th inst. Principal vocal performers Madame Camponese, Miss Stephens, Miss Travis, and Mrs Salmon; Mr. Vaughan, Messrs. W. Knyvett and J. B. Sale; Mr. Durusset, Mr. Terrail, and Mr. Bellamy. Principal instrumental performers Messrs. Lindley, Dragonetti, W. Griesbach, R. Ashley, Ling, Willman, Nicholson, Mackintosh, Puzzi, Petrides, Harper, Hyde, jun. Mariotti, and Mr. Jenkinson; Leader Mr. F. Cramer; organ and grand piano-forte, Mr. Greatorex. The Chorusses will be sustained by the ancient Concert Band, including the favorite singers from Lancashire, and the orchestra will be complete in every department. Tickets half-a-guinea each, to be had of Mr. Greatorex, No. 70, Upper Norton-st, at the music shops of Messrs. Birchall and Co, 133, New Bond street, Clementi and Co. Cheapside, and at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Regent-street.

MISS COOKE (Daughter of Mr. T. COOKE) most respectfully informs her Friends and the Public that her CONCERT will take place at the ARGYLL ROOMS, on THURSDAY EVENING, 24th of May, 1823, when will be performed a Selection of Vocal and Instrumental Music, by several eminent Professors; particulars of which will be duly announced. To commence at Eight o'clock.—Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, to be had of Miss Cooke, 22, Manchester-street, Manchester square; at the principal Music Shops; and at the Argyll Rooms.

SONS OF THE CLERGY.—The REHEARSAL and ANNIVERSARY of the MUSIC to be performed before his Royal Highness the Duke of York, and the rest of the Stewards of the Feast of the Sons of the Clergy, at St. Paul's Cathedral, for the present year, are fixed, the Rehearsal for Tuesday, the 13th, and the Anniversary for Thursday, the 15th May.

The Sermon will be preached on Thursday, the 15th May, by the Rev. George D'Oyley, D.D. Rector of Lambeth, in Surrey, and of Sundridge, in Kent.

UNDER THE PATRONAGE OF H. R. H. THE PRINCESS AUGUSTA. THE MUSICAL MUSEUM IS NOW OPEN at the Lower Great Room Spring Gardens. Day Exhibition from Twelve till Five—Evening Exhibition from Seven till Nine. Admission, 1s.—Among the novel Musical and Acoustical Phenomena included in this Museum, are the Enchanted Lyre, the Diaphonic Orchestra, the Œdephone, the Invisible Girl, and the Cylindricherd. These Inventions, which are illustrated by superior performances, are calculated to afford the highest gratification to the Musical World, and to interest generally by the novelty of the means employed, and the beauty of the effects produced.

NEW MUSIC.—On Saturday next will be published, price 3s.

THE SECOND PSYCHEAN QUADRILLE, containing Ariel Blanche, Jessica Perditta, and Virgilia, as danced at Almack's, the Nobilities' Balls, &c. composed, and dedicated, by permission, to the Right Hon. Countess Cowper, by R. TOPLIFF.

☞ The Third Edition of the First Psychean is ready for the Public.—To be had at the principal Music-shops, and of the publisher, 15, Castle-st. Holborn.

NEW QUADRILLES.—Just published, Paine's 18th Set, or New Lancers' Quadrilles, with entire New Music and Figures; also, the 19th Set of Quadrilles, the subjects taken from Pietro L'Eremita, now performing by Paine's Band at the Nobilities' Balls, each 3s. The extreme popularity of the former numbers of these Quadrilles, arising from their superior arrangement, have caused the decided preference given them to any other, and from the increasing sale, J. Paine flatters himself they have given a general satisfaction to the Millions, for those that have not been supplied with them, are re-publishing, from No 17, at Falkner's Opera Music Warehouse, at 3, Old Bond-street, where may be had, the Music in Elisa e Claudio, La Donna del Lago, and all Rossini's Operas.

NEW MUSIC.—A favourite Air from the Ballet of Nina, with Variations by Mayseder, arranged for the Piano Forte by Ferd. Ries, 3s.; Overture and Introduction to La Donna del Lago, 2s. 6d.; and the favourite Songs from ditto; La Donna del Lago Quadrilles, in which is introduced the favourite air, "Tanti affetti," and the second set of Waltzes, by Spagnoletti, 4s; and a fourth Set, from admired Scotch Airs, 4s.—Published and sold by John Gow and Son (by special appointment) music and musical instrument sellers to His Majesty, 168, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street.

NO. IV of HIBERNIAN AIRS for the Piano Forte, by J. F. BURROWES. Erin go bragh and St. Patrick's Day, 2s. 6d.; also Grannochree, Planxty Kelly, My Lodging, and Planxty Connor. Just published, the Beggars' Opera, as Piano Forte Duets; also, Auld lang syne, Auld Robin Gray, Charlie's my darling, &c. with variations, by the same Author. Goulding and Co. Soho square, and Chappell and Co. Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC, published by the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street.—A set of Quadrilles, selected from the Opera of La Donna del Lago, by J. T. Craven, 2s.—O Resumere os and ava Willie, a Scotch air, arranged as a rondo for the piano forte, by Ferd. Ries, Op. 101, No. 2, 3s.—La Donna ha Dolce Il Core, a favourite air by Martini, arranged as a rondo, with an introduction for the piano-forte, by J. B. Cramer, price 3s.—Regna Amore, a favourite air, by Mozart, arranged as a rondo, with an introduction, for the piano-forte, by C. E. Gridin, price 3s.—Di placer mi balza Il Cor, a celebrated air arranged with variations for the harp, by N. C. Bochsa, price 4s.—The Fall of Paris, a popular air, arranged as a rondo for the harp, by N. C. Bochsa, 3s.—Charlie is my darling, a Scotch air, arranged for the harp, by T. P. Chipp, 2s. 6d.—Non piu Andrai, a favourite air by Mozart, arranged as a duett for the harp and piano-forte, by J. Naderman, 5s.—Pledge of Truth, a song by T. Welsh, 2s.—Rest my Heart, a song by F. W. Cronch, 2s.—Peggy Bawn, a Scotch song, arranged by W. Hawes, 2s.—"I came to tell my brother I loved," song (Dirce) by C. E. Horn, 1s. ☞ Piano-fortes and Harps hired and let on hire.

NEW FOREIGN MUSIC.—T. BOOSEY and CO. Importers and Publishers of Foreign Music, 28, Holles street, Oxford street, respectfully inform the Nobility and Public, that, in addition to their extensive Stock of Foreign Music, (a Catalogue of which, containing upwards of 6000 Compositions, was lately published), they have just imported, and are now selling at very reasonable prices, a large assortment of the latest Comp sitions, from Vienna, Leipsic, and Paris, including the following:—I. All the Operas of Rossini and Mozart—the best German Editions, with Italian words.—II. The same, together with the best Modern Ballets arranged for the Piano, without the words.—III. For the Pianoforte.—All the latest Compositions of Hummel, Moscheles, Czerney, Leidesdorf, Weiner &c.—IV. For the Violin and Violoncello—the last Works of Mayseder, Spohr, Romberg, Staseny, Dotzauer, &c.

☞ Purchasers from T. Boosey and Co's General Catalogue are allowed a liberal Discount for ready money.—A large Assortment of soiled Foreign Music at half the original prices.

NEW MUSIC, just published by R. W. Evans, 14d, Strand.

KELVIN GROVE (the much admired ballad) arranged with variations, and a Rondo for the Piano Forte, with accompaniment for the Flute, by R. W. Evans, price 2s. 6d.: His Majesty's Welcome to Scotland, arranged as a Rondo for the Piano Forte, by R. W. Evans, price 1s. 6d.; Serenade Espagnole, No. 2. for the Piano Forte, with accompaniment for two Flutes (ad lib.) composed and dedicated, by permission, to his Excellency Don Luis de Onis, the Spanish Ambassador, by R. W. Evans; New Scotch Quadrilles, the Mid Lothians, dedicated, by permission, to the Right Honourable Lady Gwydir, containing a selection of the most favourite Scotch airs, arranged for the Piano Forte, by R. W. Evans, with New Figures, by J. S. Pollock, price 3s.

HEATHER on the PRESENT STATE of PIANO FORTE STUDY.—Just published, by H. Falkner, 3, Old Bond-street, a new edition of the above Work, price 10s 6d.

"Mr. Heather sets out with a preface, which, we confess, strongly biassed us in his favour; it is not only well and sensibly written, but it also shews that the author thinks and feels rightly on the subject of which he treats. We regret that our limits prevent us from giving an extract of his judicious observations on practice, expression &c.; they are eminently worthy of the serious attention of every Pupil that wishes to be a proficient in the art. In the work itself we met with many occasional remarks which equally shewed the author's good sense, the justness of his views, and, we may add, considerable experience in the art of instruction."—Vide Musical Review

A TREATISE on THOROUGH BASS, for Beginners: dedicated to Mr. J. B. Cramer; by JOSEPH GOURDEZ. Published by Messrs. Rutter and M'Carthy, Bond street price 12s.

"This Treatise ranks among the most useful elementary works with which we are acquainted. It does not indeed profess to go farther than impart the requisite knowledge for accompanying well. The Author has succeeded in his object. His classification of the chords is skilful and correct, and his instructions in general are communicated in simple and intelligent language."—Monthly Review, January, 1823.

MISS LINWOOD'S GALLERIES of PICTURES, in Leicester-square, are RE-OPENED with new DECORATIONS, ALTERATIONS, and ADDITIONS, and will continue open every day, (Sundays excepted) from nine o'clock in the morning until dark. Admittance, 2s. Children, 1s.

MR. HAYDON'S Great Picture of LAZARUS RISING FROM THE DEAD is NOW OPEN.—Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, ground floor to the right.—Admission 1s. Catalogues 6d.

GREAT ROOM, SPRING GARDENS.—NOVELTY.—MARSHALL'S Grand Historical Peristrephic PANORAMA of the CEREMONY of the CORONATION, the Procession, and the Banquet, painted on 10,000 square feet of canvas, and displaying nearly 100,000 figures, upwards of 500 of the principal characters on the foreground the size of life. The movement of the Panorama gives such an imposing and striking illusion, that the spectators are led to believe themselves present at the different splendid ceremonies it represents; the whole accompanied by a full Military Band, assisted by a Ringer Organ and Trumpets, who perform the Coronation Music.—IS NOW OPEN.—Day Exhibitions at 12, 1, 2, 3, and 4 o'clock; and in the Evening, brilliantly illuminated, at 7, 8, and 9 o'clock.—Admission, Boxes, 2s. Gallery, 1s.; Descriptive Book, 6d.

BRITISH INSTITUTION, PALL-MALL.—CLOSE of the PRESENT EXHIBITION.—The Gallery for the Exhibition and Sale of the Works of Modern Artists IS OPEN Daily, from Ten in the Morning until Five in the Evening, and will be closed on Saturday the 19th of April.—Admission 1s. Catalogue 1s.

(By Order) JOHN YOUNG, Keeper.

The Gallery will re-open early in May with a selection of the Works of Sir Joshua Reynolds and the ancient Masters.

THE COSMORAMA WILL CLOSE towards the end of this Month, when it will immediately RE OPEN, at No. 209, Regent-street, where the Proprietors, encouraged by the popularity and success which the present establishment has been favoured with, have built extensive and commodious Galleries, constructed so as to enable them to exhibit by Day-light. One Gallery will be appropriated to the Views of Europe and America; another to those of Asia and Africa; a third will be laid out as a promenade, ornamented with a Parterre of the choicest Flowers. The collection at present exhibiting at St. James's-street, the most interesting which has ever appeared, will be removed and substituted by others on re-opening at Regent-street. It consists of Views of the Glaciers of Grindelwald; the Exterior and Interior of the Pantheon at Rome by Moonlight; two of the City of Lyons; the Tagus from Bellem Castle; and the Exterior and Interior of St. Peter's at Rome.—Admittance, 1s.—26, St. James's-street.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.—Monday, The Stranger—Tuesday, The Castle of Andalusia—Wednesday, The Suspicious Husband—Thursday, The Cabinet—Friday, Richard the Third—Saturday, The Marriage of Figaro.—The Chinese Sorcerer, or the Emperor and his Three Sons, every Night.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.—Monday, Macbeth Tuesday, The Duenna—Wednesday, Much Ado about Nothing—Thursday Rob Roy—Friday, The Belle's Stratagem.—The Vision of the Sun, or the Orphan of Peru, every evening.

DAVIS'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—During the week, Dunoir the Base; or, Is it a Spectre?—Equestrian Exercises—Mr. Gray, the Extraordinary Leaper—Monsieur Loungemare, the Tight Rope Prodigy. To conclude with the High-Mettled Racer, with real Horse Race, and real Fox Chace.

GRAND MASQUERADE, Argyll Rooms.—The Nobility and Public are respectfully informed, that a GRAND MASQUERADE, on an unusually splendid scale, will take place at the above Rooms, on WEDNESDAY the 22d instant, in Commemoration of HIS MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY'S NATAL DAY, under the immediate sanction and patronage of several of the Nobility. Further particulars will be duly announced. Early application for Tickets is requested, as the number will be limited.—All communications, letters, &c. to be directed to the Committee, at MR. CHARLES WRIGHT'S, Opera Colonnade, next to the King's Theatre, Haymarket.

GRAND MASQUERADE, NEW ARGYLL ROOMS.—MR. JARRIN, ITALIAN CONFECTIONER, 123, New Bond-street, having undertaken to supply the Supper at the Masquerade, to be given at the Argyll Rooms, on St. George's Day, (the 23d) begs to inform the Nobility and Public that he has Tickets for sale, and besides that those who may wish to have private supper parties upon that occasion, may be accommodated by favoring him with their orders previous to the 22d of April. Jarrin takes this opportunity of stating, that, as this Refreshment Rooms in Bond-street, he has less of four sorts always ready. French and Italian Pastry of superior quality, and a great variety of Bons-bons, and other novelties lately received from Paris. Balls, Routs, Suppers, Parties, &c. attended as usual.

A MARRIED and BENEFICED CLERGYMAN, formerly Tutor to a Nobleman of the highest rank, and subsequently receiving a few PUPILS into his house, a moderate distance from London, has now a VACANCY.—Letters directed for the Rev. A. B. Mr. Hayes's, bookseller, 6, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London, will be duly forwarded to him.

DR. MERRIMAN, Physician Accoucheur to the Middlesex Hospital, and DR. LEY, Physician Accoucheur to the Westminster Lying-in-Hospital, will commence a COURSE of LECTURES on the Theory and Practice of MIDWIFERY, and the Diseases of Women and Children, on MONDAY, the 14th of APRIL, at half-past ten o'clock.—Particulars may be learned at Dr. Merriman's, No. 34, Lower Brook street, Grosvenor square; at Dr. Ley's, 24, Merriman's, No. 34, Lower Brook street, Grosvenor square; at Dr. Ley's, 24, Merrimanst, Berkeley-square; and at the Middlesex Hospital, where the Lectures will be given.

MR. IMRIE, SURGEON DENTIST, (late assistant to Mr. Cartwright) has the honour to announce to the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends, that he has removed from Ruthbone-place to No. 10, Woburn-place, Russell-square; and in soliciting a continuance of their patronage, takes this opportunity to express his warmest gratitude for the considerable encouragement he has hitherto experienced.—10, Woburn-place, Russell-square.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

[This Gazette contains the appointment of the Earl of Morton to be High Commissioner to the General Assembly of Scotland; to be Rear Admirals of the White, Capts. Sir C. Paget, R. Williams, and R. Worsley; and the return of Sir H. Hardinge, K.C.B. as Member for Durham.]

WAR OFFICE, April 12, 1823.

7th Reg. Foot: Capt. F. Prosser to be Capt. vice Page, exch.—57th Ditto: Lieut. P. Logan to be Capt. vice M'Lachlan, ret.; Ens. Bainbridge to be Lieut. vice Logan; J. Mitchell, Gent. to be Ens. vice Bainbridge.—58th Ditto: Lieut. W. Harding to be Capt. vice Estat, ret.—61st Ditto: Capt. H. Burnside to be Capt. vice Furnace, exc.—66th Ditto: Ens. A. Gould to be Lieut. vice Harding; Gent. Cadet J. H. Abercrombie to be Ens. vice Gould.—81st Ditto: Capt. T. Craddock to be Capt. vice Coleman, exc.—93d Ditto: Capt. T. Coleman to be Capt. vice Cradock, exc.—1st Ceylon Reg. Capt. G. Bolton to be Capt.

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, April 9 1823.

Corps of Royal Engineers: Sec. Lieut. E. Durnford to be Sec. Lieut.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

G. L. WHATLEY, Cheltenham, money-scrivener—T. B. GREGG, Deal, apothecary.

BANKRUPTS.

W. MITCHELL, Wanstead, butcher—W. BIGNELL, Colchester street, wine and porter merchant—W. and D. GUNSTON, St. John-street, cheesemongers—W. H. TUCKER, High Holborn, window glass-cutter—J. W. HAYWARD, Bread-street, coal-merchant—S. DARBON, Mary-le-Bone-street, wine-cooper—M. A. SHIRREFF, Duke-street, Westminster, grass-maker—R. BEDFORD, St. Martin's Le Grand plumber—S. TABERNER, City road, linen draper.

AVERY GREAT SAVING.—GENUINE LAVENDER WATER and ESPRIT de ROSE may be had retail at the Manufactory, 3 Gloucester-place, near Smith-street, King's road, Chelsea, at about half the usual cost, of such superior strength and fragrance as to defy all competition. Sold also by Mr. Sharpus, china man, Cockspur street; Miss Cole, 30, Speldhurst-street, Burton-crescent, and Mr. Letts, 32, Cornhill.—All orders by post to be addressed to the Manufactory. Not less than 1 dozen pints of Lavender Water can be had at the exportation price.

CHAMPAGNES.—CHARLES WRIGHT, Wine Merchant to His R. H. the Duke of Clarence, next to the King's and opposite the Haymarket Theatres, Opera Colonnade, London, is now landing CHAMPAGNES, ROUGE ET BLANC, first quality, brilliant condition, (G. Pitis Saleau Avise, growers,) 41 4s. per doz.; CLARET, ST. JULIEN ET GA ROSE 63s.

OLD PORT, 36s.; SHERRY, superior, 36s.; and CAPE MADEIRA, 16s. per hamper. A 3-dozen hamper, containing one dozen of each of these wines, bottles, &c for 5l. and so in proportion. MADEIRA, VIDONIA, TENERIFFE, CALCAVELLA, 40s. per dozen; OLD COGNAC BRANDY, 23s. 6d. per gallon and fine OLD RUM 15s 6d. Fresh empty Wine Pipes 17s. each. Postage to be paid, and no credit given.

THE Nobility, Gentry, Nurserymen, and Florists, may be supplied with DURABLE PORCELAIN LABELS such as have been approved by the Horticultural Society, at SPODE and COPELAND'S, Portugal-street, Lincoln's-inn-fields.

MONEY on EQUITABLE TERMS.—The Advertiser advances Money to any extent, at moderate interest, whether on Freehold, Copyhold, Leasehold, Ecclesiastical, Funded, Church Livings, or other ample Security; and assures those who may honour him with their confidence, that they will experience treatment the most candid, liberal, and explicit, though similar business is sometimes viewed with mistrust, from the mal practices of disreputable people.—Letters, post-paid, to A. Z. care of Mr. Williams, glover, Inner Temple-lane, Fleet-street, will receive immediate attention; where also a card of address may be had.—Reversions are purchased.

MUTUAL ACCOMMODATION, and MONEY ADVANCED upon approved Securities.—The Nobility, Gentry, Merchants, and Tradesmen in general may be accommodated with a regular exchange of equal acceptances to any amount, and cash advanced upon approved securities, in a more expeditious manner of doing business than has been hitherto acted upon. The greatest secresy may be depended upon, and will, of course, be expected. Communications from every part of the united kingdom will be strictly attended to. None but post paid letters will be received. Address, Mr. H. No. 34, Golden-square. Hours of business from twelve till four o'clock every day (Sundays excepted.)

N.B. Money advanced upon all property intended for immediate sale.

CABINET FURNITURE.—The Nobility, and Public, are requested to inspect the Ware-rooms of C. MILLS, 77, High-street, Marylebone, which will be found to contain a STOCK unrivalled by Houses of the first Denomination, and at Prices that cannot fail to establish their interest. To the name only a few of the leading articles, it is hoped will be thought sufficient, for the Dining-rooms are patent Tables, of large dimensions, Sideboards and Chairs, corresponding; Drawing rooms, are Loo, Writing, and Card Tables. Tea Trays, &c. But the most novel, and particularly deserving notice, is, the Zebra wood, consisting of about nine dozen Chairs, and two setts of Cottage and French Loo Tables, Couches, &c. of the same wood; Bed-room Chairs at 4s. 6d. per chair.—Please to observe, the No. is 77.

FAMILIES Furnishing are respectfully invited to inspect HAWKINS' PATENT PORTABLE SELF-ACTING WATER CLOSETS for Bed Chambers, on an entire new principle, effectually preventing the escape of all effluvia; which the Patentee flatters himself need only be seen to be approved of. Price from 33s. to 10l. 10s. No. 167, Fleet-street.

PROPRIETORS of NEWSPAPERS, MAGAZINES, &c.—A GENTLEMAN of acknowledged talent, of independently loyal principles, of extensive editorial experience, and thoroughly conversant with the routine of the Press, is desirous of treating for a Share in, or for the conduct of, a POLITICAL or LITERARY PUBLICATION.—Apply, by letter only, (post-paid) to B. X. A. Peele's Coffee-house, Fleet-street.

POPERY, THE MYSTERY OF BABYLON!

On Sunday next, April 20th inst.

THE FIRST of a Series of LECTURES on PAPACY will be Preached at the Church of the United Parishes of St Mary Somerset and St. Mary Mounshaw, Upper Thames-street, by the REV. JOHN SYMPSONE SERGROVE, LL.B. of Emmanuel College, Cambridge, Rector, and Domestic Chaplain to the Right Hon. the Earl of Caledon.—Prayers to begin at 11 o'clock.

N.B. These Lectures will be published, declared, by permission, to the Right Rev. Lord Bishop of Winchester.—Subscribers' names to be inserted in the books at Messrs. Rivingtons', St. Pauls, and at Waterloo place, and Greenland, Finsbury-square.—10s. 6d. to Subscribers, Nine-Subscribers.

In a few days will be published, in 8vo. price 5s.

SHERE AFKUN, the First Husband of Nourmahal, a Legend of Hindoostan. By J. R. PLANCHÉ.

Also, The TWO BROKEN HEARTS. A Tale. Price 5s.

Sold by J. Andrews, 167, New Bond-street, and all other Booksellers.

N.B. No V. of the ALBUM will be ready on the first of May.

MANUSCRIPT OF LOUIS XVIII.

Just published, in 8vo. French, 5s. 6d. English, 6s. 6d.

THE KING of FRANCE'S NARRATIVE of his ESCAPE from PARIS, and Journey to Brussels and Coblentz, in 1791.

"Teucro duce, et Auspice Teucro."—Hor. L. 1. Od. vi.

Printed for Henry Colburn and Co. Conduit-street; and M. Bossange and Co. Great Marlborough-street

THE BATTLE OF SEETABULDEE, NAGPORE, EAST INDIES.

TWO VIEWS taken on the spot, are just published by Edward Orme, publisher to His Majesty, price 3l. 3s. representing the BATTLE of SEETABULDEE, where the English Forces, consisting only of three troops of cavalry, 1100 bayonets, and four guns, defeated the forces of the Rajah Appa Sahib, 25,000 horse and foot, and 36 guns. Inscribed to Richard Jenkins, Esq. resident at Nagpore, Col. Hopetown Scott, C. B. and the officers who fought under his orders at the memorable Battle of Seetabuldee, on the 26th and 27th of November, 1817, by J. Dayley, Captain and Assistant, Military Department, Nagpore.—Bond-street, corner of Bronk-street.

NEW WORK BY THE AUTHOR OF WAVERLEY.

Nearly ready for Publication, in 3 vols. post 8vo.

QUENTIN DURWARD. By the Author of Waverley, Peveril of the Peak, &c. &c.—Printed for Archibald Constable and Co. Edinburgh; and Hurst, Robinson, and Co. 90, Cheapside, and 8, Pall-Mall, London.

Just published, the Second Edition, price 7s. 6d. 8vo.

A RESPECTFUL LETTER to the EARL of LIVERPOOL, K. G. First Lord of His Majesty's Treasury, &c. &c. &c. occasioned by the Speech imputed to His Lordship at the Isle of Thanet Bible Society Meeting, October 17th, 1822. By the REV. H. H. NORRIS.—Printed for C. and J. Rivington, St. Paul's Church-yard, and Waterloo-place, Pall mall.

N.B. To this Edition is prefixed an Advertisement, vindicating the Author's accuracy in the chief particulars, which have been impugned, which may be had separately, price 6d.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

Commission in the 1st (or Higaland) Regiment of Local Militia—Col. A. M. M'Gregor to be Col. Commandant.

Commissions in the Chepstow Troop of Yeomanry—J. Buckle, Gent. to be Lieut. vice Wells; resigned; J. Proctor, Gent. to be Cornet, vice Baldwyn, res.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

Whitwell and Carr, Kendal, Westmoreland, grocers—Munro and Melton, London, wine-merchants—Laycock and Co. Sheffield, manufacturers—R. and D. Derry, Plymouth, linen-drapers—E. and S. Davis, Walworth, linen-drapers—Herington and Wingrove, Uxbridge, linen-drapers—Allen and Co. Frome Selwood, dyers—Gillespie and Mitchell, Glasgow, commission-agents—Foster and Co. Hunsle: Moor, Yorkshire, charcoal-grinders—R. and G. Goodman, Leeds, wool factors—Warburton and Co Bradford, iron-founders—Salmon and Manne, Bath, surgeons—Milliken and Groom, Weymouth, furniers.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

W. STEPHENS, Oxford, liquor-merchant—J. BANTING, Cumberland-street, New-road, carpenter.

BANKRUPTS.

T. HUNTINGTON, Carlisle, ironmonger—H. P. EVANS, Birmingham, broker—J. MORRISS, Claines, Worcestershire, joiner—G. LEVITT, Kingston-upon-Hull, merchant—T. SMALLWOOD, Draxton in Hales, Shropshire, banker—I. ISAACS, Chatham, slop seller—W. CROWTHER, Charles-street, Middlesex Hospital, coach-maker.

DIVIDENDS.

At the Court of Commissioners of Bankrupts—May 3, J. and J. Stickland, sen. and jun. Newgate-market, cheesemongers—June 28, T. Colbeck, W. Ellis, J. Willis, sen. W. and J. Holdsworth, Westhouse, Fewston, Yorkshire, flax-spinners—June 28, T. Colbeck, Westhouse, flax-spinner—April 29, W. Masson, New court, St. Swithin's-lane, merchant—April 29, J. R. Oliver, Blackheath, merchant—May 3, W. Urquhart, Sion College-gardens, merchant—April 19, W. Essex, Paddington, wharfinger—April 15, D. Reeves, Wardour-street, grocer—April 19, H. Russell and R. Bruce, St. Martin's-lane, cabinet-makers—May 10, G. Austin, Long-acre, coach-maker—April 29, B. J. Johnson, Houndsditch, cabinet-maker.

April 28, S. Richards, A. Ogden and D. Selden, Liverpool, merchants—May 1, R. W. and J. Dickenson, and J. R. Hodgson, Liverpool, merchants—May 5, J. Troubridge, Shaftesbury, stocking-manufacturer—May 5, T. and W. Jackson, Liverpool, merchants—Apr. 30, W. Butcher, Sutton, Nottinghamshire, mercer.

CERTIFICATES—April 29.

E. Davis, Chancery-lane, victualler—A. Bennett, Fountain-court, Minories, packing case-maker—S. Brown, Lambeth, cooper—C. Read, Lower East Smithfield, coal-merchant—J. Shackle, Milk-street, hosier—J. and J. Stickland, sen. and jun. Newgate-market, cheesemongers—J. Grove, Drury-lane, grocer—T. Lane, Chandos-street, oilman—B. Beverley, Bucklersbury, merchant—E. Bovie, Leicester-square printer.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

THURSDAY.

VISCOUNT CLIFDEN presented a Petition from Kilkenny, praying for a commutation of Tithes.—The Petition was laid on the table.

LORD ROLLE presented a Petition from Great Torrington, in the county of Devon, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; and one from the city of Exeter, against the duty on Coals.—Laid on the table.

THE BISHOP OF CHESTER presented a Petition from the Merchants, Bankers, and Tradesmen of Little Bolton, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.—Laid on the table.—Adjourned.

FRIDAY.

The Grants in Aid and the Inkeepers' Bill were read a first time.

Petitions were presented from Halifax, Doncaster, and Dewsbury, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.

On the motion of the MARQUIS of LANSDOWNE, an account of the sums voted by Parliament, and applied for the relief of the poor in Ireland, employed on public works from the 1st Jan. 1822, to the 1st April, 1823, was ordered to be laid before the House.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

THURSDAY.

A new Writ was ordered for Haslemere, in the room of Robert Ward, Esq. who has accepted the Chiltern Hundreds.

Petitions were presented from Kirkwall, complaining of Agricultural Distress; Walsall, St. Mary, Whitechapel, Staines, and from a person named Smith, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act (the latter complained of the conduct of certain Commissioners of the Insolvent Debtors' Court, who had allowed an insolvent mechanic the sum of 3l. per week for his sustenance in prison, to the injury of the petitioner, and the other creditors of the party;) from certain Cotton Spinners, in Dublin, complaining of the Union Duties; Edinburgh, against the Coal Duties; from certain inhabitants of Dublin, Belfast, Waterford, and Derry, connected with the Manufactories of Glass in Ireland, against any alteration in the Union Duties.—Ordered to be printed.

The Report of the Beer Duties Bill was fixed for consideration on Wednesday.

In answer to a question from LORD HOTHAM, respecting the motion of MR. PLUNKETT on the Catholics, that Right Hon. Gent. stated it to be his intention to bring forward the subject on the 17th instant.

The Committee on the Revenue Departments Consolidation Bill was postponed till Friday the 18th last.

The Union Duties Bill was committed for Monday.

COL. DAVIES, referring to the state of our foreign relations, wished to know if he had rightly understood what had fallen from the Right Hon. Gentleman (the Secretary for Foreign Affairs) on a former occasion, when he understood him to say it was his intention, next Monday, on laying before the House the papers relative to the late negociations, to go into a general view of our foreign affairs. He was of opinion that no statement ought to accompany the production of the papers. The fairer course would be to lay them on the table of the House, without comment, and leave the whole subject open for their future consideration.

MR. SECRETARY CANNING said the Hon. Officer had rightly understood him to announce, that it was his intention on Monday next, when, by His Majesty's command, he should lay before the House the documents relative to the late negociations, together into a statement of the course which they had pursued, when he should give a general outline of the policy pursued by Ministers in connection with these transactions. It was not usual for Ministers to lay documents before the House on which they did not propose to call for any proceeding on the part of the House, but in the present instance it was not meant to call for any. This, however, would throw no impediment in the way of those Members who might think it right to call for a proceeding of an adverse nature. In most cases, when papers relative to negociations were produced, it was when such negociations had terminated in war, and Ministers, in the name of the King, had an opportunity of explaining the course which they thought it their duty to pursue, through the medium of that declaration which it became their duty to put forth on the part of the country, and under the authority of the Crown. The present negociations not having terminated in war, no such declaration had been deemed necessary; and the statement which he had to offer was only intended to supply the place of that declaration, and would no further prejudge the merits of the case, than it would be prejudged by a declaration, if one had been thought necessary. In what he had to say on this occasion, it would be his object to give nothing more than a plain unvarnished statement, anticipating no contested point, and asking for no premature approbation. It would subsequently be open to every one to take that course which he thought fit. Acting thus, an advantage would be given against the Government, and for their opponents, as the latter would be in possession of all the case of Ministers, before coming to a discussion on the subject, which was a more favourable situation than they could well be placed in under ordinary circumstances.

SIR J. NEWPORT submitted certain resolutions, to be adopted by the House, respecting the "First Fruits" of the Clergy of Ireland, for the purpose of rendering the revenue thence arising available to effect the object of the Royal Grant thereof, and to diminish the necessity of Parliamentary aid. The Right Hon. Baronet proceeded at some length to explain the original objects of the grant from the Crown, and to shew the necessity which existed for revising the present system. He quoted a variety of authorities in support of his view of the subject, and contended for the propriety of giving the first year's produce of every benefice made of the fund for the relief of the poor Clergy, and to carry into effect the other objects of the Royal grant. This would diminish the necessity for calling so repeatedly for Parliamentary grants, which he considered tended to unite a number of parishes in one benefice, instead of contributing to diminish the evil.

MR. GOULBURN was not disposed to oppose the motion, if it went to benefit the Church, but the object of the Right Hon. Baronet was this, that whenever a benefice fell vacant, the amount of its revenue, for one year, should be given in aid of the Revenue, arising from "first fruits." The question was then neither more nor less than this, whether the House should lay a tax of 40,000l. per annum on the Clergy of Ireland. The ancient Statutes had never been construed in the way the Right Hon. Member now contended for, by an Act of the 23d of Henry the Eighth, a composition had been made, which it was declared should be inviolably observed. Subsequent Acts had confirmed the arrangement then agreed upon; and from all these it was clear, that it was never intended to take from a benefice one whole year's revenue, such as in latter times it might have become, but merely that sum which was considered to be its amount at the period of the original valuation. The Right Hon. Gent. moved "the previous question."

The House divided. For the motion, 39—For the previous question, 48. Majority against the motion, 9.

MR. HUME moved for a return of the Crown Debtors in the several gaols of the united kingdom, distinguishing those originally charged in execution, and those confined for want of bail; the name of each person, the time when confined, the names of their sureties, and whether any or what parts of their debts had been paid. He contended that the crown ought not to have greater power over its debtors than an individual. He also moved for a continuation of a return made on the 11th of July, 1820, of the several persons now in custody in the Fleet and other prisons for contempts of processes issuing out of His Majesty's Exchequer. Persons had been confined for 30 years, others for 20, 16, and various shorter periods. There was the case of Hannah Barber, who had been confined ever since the year 1789 for the non-payment of the sum of 40l. These cruel punishments were inflicted for what the judges alleged to be a contempt of court; such offences ought to be determined by a Jury, and visited with some certain and defined punishment.

THE SOLICITOR-GENERAL said that the Hon. Member was mistaken in his view of the law upon these questions. In cases where persons were not able to pay fines imposed upon them by a Court, they came under the operation of the Act for the Relief of Insolvent Debtors. In cases of contempt, where the parties refused to conform to the orders of the Court, and were committed, they were always released upon conforming to such orders, and therefore, there was no hardship in the law, because persons chose to undergo a voluntary imprisonment. In the same manner, when persons insulted the authority of the Court, the moment they submitted to that authority, they were liberated almost as a matter of course. With regard to putting the power of the crown upon the same footing with that of individuals in cases of debt, if they looked at the effect which such a proceeding would have upon the revenue, it could not be entertained for an instant. If persons were unable to pay such debts, and their cases deserved consideration, applications to the Lords of the Treasury were always attended to.

MR. SECRETARY PEEL said that he had never meant to lay it down as a principle, that any particular scale of punishment should be fixed upon for the revocation of fines. If any such principle were adopted, fines would never be paid at all.

After a few words from Dr. Lushington, Mr. C. Wynn, Mr. Ricardo, and Mr. Peel, the motion was agreed to.

SIR J. BOUGHEY obtained leave to bring in a Bill for enlarging the power of Justices in determining complaints between masters and servants, masters and apprentices, and others.

DR. LUSHINGTON obtained leave to bring in a Bill to amend and consolidate the Laws relating to the Slave Trade.

FRIDAY.

A petition was presented from the Bristol Gas Light Company against the Oil Gas Light Bill for that city, which was committed, and the petition referred to the Committee.—Petitions were presented from Penzance and Arbroath, against equalizing the Sugar Duties.—From Ulverstone against concession to the Roman Catholics.—From Dudley, complaining of Hawkers and Pedlars. From Carlisle and Barnstaple, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.—From Kilkenny, against repealing the Union Duties.—From certain hackney coachmen against the General Turnpike Act.

MR. WETHERELL presented a petition from the Grand Jury of the City of Dublin, who sat upon the recent questions which arose out of the outrage offered to the person of the Lord Lieutenant at the theatre. The petition set forth the proceedings in respect of the trial of the persons charged with conspiring against the Lord Lieutenant; the address of the Attorney-General for Ireland in consequence of the Jury having ignored the bills, and their remonstrance to that address in open court. That the Address of the Attorney-General, in addition to the general charge of corruption against your Petitioners, contained an insinuation that they had found Bills for a riot against two only of the prisoners indicted with a knowledge that by the rules of law such finding would be abortive, and with a criminal design of defeating any further proceedings thereon. The petitioners threw themselves upon the consideration of the House in full reliance that whatever shall be deemed necessary or expedient to prevent the recurrence of such an evil in future, will be adopted and applied.

MR. PLUNKETT said, had the petition contained a direct charge that he, in the discharge of his official duty had imputed corruption to the motives which actuated the conduct of the Grand Jury, he might have rested the refutation of that charge upon the petition itself. A great attempt had been made out of doors to excite a belief that he had acted with partiality and under the influence of party feeling, with regard to the political or religious sect of the persons implicated in these transactions. A reference to his whole life might be a sufficient answer to any such accusation. There were two counts in the bills presented to the Grand Jury, which had only a very slight difference. The one charged the two persons with a riot, cum multus aliis, and the other was limited to themselves. The Jury returned their finding upon the last, and ignored the first count. That circumstance he was now free to confess had a considerable influence on his mind with regard to his subsequent conduct.—The petition was ordered to be printed.

On the question for committing the Naval and Military Pensions' Bill,

MR. GRENFELL moved that it be committed that day six months. After some conversation, in which the amendment was supported by MR. Robertson, Sir F. Blake, Mr. Baring, &c. The House divided—For the committal, 85—For the amendment, 44—Majority, 11.—The Bill was committed, and the Report ordered for Monday.

In a Committee of Supply, MR. GOULBURN moved a grant of 17,000l. in aid of the Charter Schools of Ireland.

MR. HUME moved that this vote be reduced to 10,000l. which he thought sufficient, as the education was confined to Protestant children.

The Committee divided—For the amendment, 15—For the original grant, 42.

The following grants (after some observations from MR. HUME) were agreed to:—14,000l. for the Society for Promoting Education in Ireland; 27,672l. for the Dublin Foundling Hospital; 19,000l. for the Dublin House of Industry; 4900l. for the Dublin Lunatic Asylum; 7900l. for the Hibernian Society; 1600l. for the Dublin Marine ditto; 1930l. for the Dublin Female Orphan House; 2680l. for the Dublin Lock Hospital; 2800l. for the Dublin Lying-in ditto; 1400l. for Stevens' ditto; 3692l. for the Fever ditto; 8928l. for the Roman Catholic Seminary; 2000l. for the Royal Cork Institution; 7000l. for the Dublin Society; 9230l. for building churches, &c. This grant was opposed by Lord A. Hamilton, Mr. Hume, and Sir J. Newport, who said the higher members of the Irish Church ought, in his opinion, to defray the expences of church-building and repairing out of their revenues. He stated as a fact that they ought to be ashamed of, that within the last 15 years three Right Rev. Bishops had left to their families no less than 700,000l. —The Committee divided—For the grant, 47—Against it, 19.

On the resolution for granting 10,000l. for improving the Streets of Dublin, MR. HUME moved to reduce the grant to 4500l. but his amendment was negatived, and the original resolution was carried.—The Linen and Hemp Manufactories; 1617l. for the Board of Works; 17,301l. for the Stationary Department. The Committee then reported progress, and the House adjourned till Monday.

On Thursday a meeting of the Merchants and Traders of Westminster was held at Willis's Rooms, pursuant to public notice, to consider the consistency of petitioning the Legislature to amend the Acts for the relief of Insolvent Debtors. John Cam Hobhouse, Esq. took the Chair. Sir Francis Burdett also attended. Several resolutions were carried, which declared that the acts intended for the relief of the honest unfortunate debtor was converted into an instrument by which unprincipled men defrauded their creditors; the petition prayed, that the detaining creditors of insolvents should be examined in the Insolvent Court, and if found to be in collusion with the insolvent to be subjected to punishment; it also prayed that Insolvent debtors should be deprived of the benefit of the Rules of the King's Bench and Fleet on the claims of creditors who might sue their debtors in that Court, for sums not exceeding 15l. in the same manner as the Court of Requests now decide on debts under 5l.

On Thursday morning, at three o'clock, a fire broke out at the Maidenhead public-house, Ram-court, Fleet-street; completely destroyed the public-house, where it originated, and the house of Mr. Potts, in Serjeants' Inn, situated in the rear of it; three other houses are also much injured.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARIS, APRIL 6.—The Cortes very readily granted the loan of millions to defray the expence of his journey. His Majesty has allowed only half the number of persons whom he required for his service. The Cortes also voted two millions for the expence of their journey, with the exception of the 8000 reals granted to each Deputy. It is said that if the King goes as far as Seville, he will stop there a few days; and that the Cortes will cause him to proceed to Cadiz, whence they would embark for the Canary Islands, if necessary. General Morillo is immediately to take the command of the 4th district. A Royalist troop belonging to one of the divisions of Bessieres has penetrated as far as the Prado. Its object was only to reconnoitre, or to observe the forces which form the garrison of Madrid. A distinguished personage who quitted Madrid on the 29th of March in the evening, and who arrived yesterday in Paris, states, that from the capital of Spain to the French frontiers, he did not see a single corps of Constitutional troops capable of opposing any resistance, but that, on the contrary, he had encountered numerous bands of Guerillas. The general appearance of the country, and the temper of the public mind, convinced him that the French army would not encounter any obstacle.

In the Sitting of the 5th April, the Deputy Minister at War, Count Dijeon, proposed a project of law to the French Chamber of Deputies, to enable the Government to call into service, in the course of the present year, if it should be thought necessary, the young men who would not otherwise have been of age and liable to serve in the army. The project was sent to the Bureaux, and the discussion on the budget was resumed, and again adjourned without coming to any decision.

The discussion on the law of Finance was continued on the 6th in the Chamber of Deputies, and adjourned for want of the sufficient number of Members to make a House.

APRIL 8.—It was yesterday that the army passed the Bidassoa. Numerous contradictory rumours have been, and are still current, relative to the Marshal Duke de Belluno, Minister of War; it has been said that his Excellency arrived in Paris yesterday. The official statement, we believe, is correct:—The Marshal repaired to Bayonne to verify the different reports which had been made of the situation of the army; he found it one of the finest armies that France has had during a long period—in want of nothing, and even provided for the future; remarkable for its discipline, full of zeal and ardour, ready to march under the white flag, led by the grandson of St. Louis. The Marshal will pass the Bidassoa, to superintend the entrance of the troops into Spain; his Excellency will afterwards return to France, inspect the corps d'armee assembled at Perpignan, and thence return to Paris, to resume the portefeuille of the War Department. His return hither cannot take place until 15 days or three weeks hence.

ARMY OF THE PYRENEES.—Order of the Day.—"Soldiers! I am among you! I have been satisfied with the good dispositions which animate you, and with your constancy in supporting the fatigues of a long march during the inclemency of the season. It will be in a splendour of every military virtue, that you will soon manifest your devotion to the King and to your country. Fidelity, honour, discipline these will always be the device of the white flag, under which we are going to fight. I shall watch over all your wants.

(Signed) "LOUIS ANTOINE.

"Head-quarters, Bayonne, March 30, 1823.

"By order of his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief of the Army.

(Countersigned)

"The Major-General Count GUILLEMINOT."

THE DUKE D'ANGOULEME, GENERAL IN CHIEF OF THE ARMY OF THE PYRENEES, TO THE SPANIARDS.

The King of France, by recalling his Ambassador from Madrid, hoped that the Spanish Government, warned of its dangers, would turn to more moderate sentiments, and would cease to be deaf to the counsels of benevolence and reason. Two months and a half have passed away, and his Majesty has in vain expected the establishment in Spain of an order of things compatible with the safety of neighbouring States.

The French Government has, for two entire years, endured with forbearance without example, the most unmerited provocations. The revolutionary faction which has destroyed the royal authority in your country—which holds your King captive—which calls for his dishonourment—which menaces his life and that of his family, has carried her fury to your frontiers its guilty efforts. It has tried all means to corrupt the army of his Most Christian Majesty, and to excite troubles in France in the same manner as it had succeeded by the contagion of its excesses and of its example to produce the insurrection of Naples and Piedmont. Deceived in its expectations, it has invited traitors, condemned by their tribunals, to consummate, under the protection of triumphant insurrection, the plots which they had formed against their country. In order to put a stop to the anarchy which tears Spain in pieces, which takes from it the power of settling its colonial disputes, which separates it from Europe, which has broken all its relations with the august sovereigns whom the same intentions and the same views unite with his Most Christian Majesty, and which compromises the repose and the interests of France.

Spaniards! France is not at war with your country. Sprung from the same blood as your kings, I can have no wish but for your independence, your happiness, your safety. I am going to cross the Pyrenees at the head of 100,000 Frenchmen; but it is in order to place myself to the Spaniards, friends of order and of the laws, to assist them in setting free their captive King, in raising again the altar of the throne, in rescuing priests from exile, men of property from spoliation, and the whole people from the domination of an ambitious few, who, while they proclaim liberty, are preparing only the slavery and ruin of Spain.

Spaniards! Every thing will be done for you and with you. The French are not, and wish not to be, any thing but your auxiliaries. Your standard alone shall float over your cities; the provinces traversed by our soldiers shall be administered in the name of Ferdinand by Spanish authorities; the severest discipline shall be observed; every thing necessary for the service of the army shall be paid for with scrupulous punctuality; we do not pretend either to impose laws upon you or to occupy your country; we wish nothing but your deliverance; and as soon as we shall have obtained it, we will return to our country, happy to have preserved a generous people from the miseries produced by revolution, and which experience has taught us but too well to appreciate.

Head-quarters at Bayonne, April 2, 1823. LOUIS ANTOINE.

By his Royal Highness the Prince General in Chief, the Counsellor of State, Civil Commissioner of his Most Christian Majesty.

MARTIGNAC.

CIUDAD RODRIGO, MARCH 20.—The rebellion attempted in Portugal is already suppressed. The last advices inform us that the Count de Amarante has been taken. His uniform was taken from him in the presence of 6000 men, and he was laid on the ground, with his sword and his staff of command by his side; after which all the troops defiled and passed over him, with the exception of the Regiment of Alcantara, of which he had been Colonel, and which requested General Hogan to dispense with their trampling upon the sword and the uniform of Amarante, who had formerly commanded them with honour. Hogan granted their request. This mode of degrading a traitor produced a great effect on the army.

Letters from Perpignan of the 29th March, state, that General Roche Aimon has taken the command of one of the brigades of the corps, and that General Donnadieu, who was to command a division of the army, was expected every moment. Baron d'Eroles, who had moved his head-quarters to St. Esteve, will have under him nearly 20 thousand Catalonians.

BAYONNE, APRIL 3.—We have no news from Spain to-day. The mail has probably been stopped by the Royalists, who are posted in Bergara, and have had an engagement with the Constitutionalists, the result of which is not known; there are but few troops of either party in that quarter. General O'Donnell arrived here the day before yesterday, no doubtless to take the orders of the Duke of Angoulême. We learn from Irun, that the Political Clubs of the Spanish frontiers have had a meeting at Mondragon, to concert the final arrangements for removing all provisions, forage, cattle, carriages, &c. and withdrawing the inhabitants into the interior.—Measures are taken to send in the front provisions and other necessaries for the army; 200 waggons loaded with such articles are to leave this city to-morrow, and at least an equal number every succeeding day. Two English sloops have entered our port; they have on board 500,000 piasters. The destination of this money is supposed to be for the disbursements of the Army of the Faith.

Orders have been given for the establishment of a line of telegraphs from Bayonne to Paris, which, it is said, will be in activity on the 15th.

STOCKHOLM, MARCH 18.—Two persons have been arrested by the Police, and examined respecting the scandalous letters to the Governors of the Provinces, with the forged signature of General Hoijer, but this had not afforded any clue towards the discovery of the crime.

IRELAND.

The City Grand Jury have addressed a sensible and judicious memorial to his Excellency the Lord Lieutenant, on the state of this part of the South of Ireland. It is rumoured that martial law is to be proclaimed immediately in the County of Tipperary.—Cork Constitution.

The Evening Mail enumerates the following outrages as having been committed in the short space of two days, in addition to other burnings: County of Cork.—The out-offices of the Rev. C. Wallis, near Castlecor Roache, in which were burned nine cows, 22 bags of wheat, and paper property—Mr. Minton's house, near Kanturk, burned—Timber property—Mr. Minton's house, near Kanturk, burned—T. Slaine's house burned in same townland—Two houses burned on the lands of Rathduff—Several houses consumed on the lands of Ballyhalagan—A rick of hay consumed on the land of Garrane—House, furniture, and a quantity of oats burned near Charleville—House attacked, gate, and a quantity of oats burned near Charleville—House attacked near Boyle—Mr. Stawell's house, near Doneraile, burned—Three dwelling-houses, the property of Mr. Foote, near Mallow, burned—A dwelling-house, and fifty barrels of corn burned at Ballyhea—Mr. Sprat's house robbed of arms—Mr. Hennessy's house, near Doneraile, attacked.—County Limerick—Attempt to burn Cunnegar House, near Adare—Farm house and six cows burned at Rahenagh, near Newcastle —Farm house near Newcastle consumed, in which were a number of cows; the cattle saved—A man conveying his furniture for safety, attacked, and furniture destroyed—A man named Egan murdered near Askeaton—W. Creagh murdered near Charleville—Mr. White's house attacked near Shanagolden—House attacked near Glenshanold, the owner flogged, the house then set on fire, in which were his wife and seven children; the inhabitants saved, house destroyed.—County Tipperary—A house burned at Newport—A house burned at Carrickgopher—Barrack burned near Holycross—House at Cappawood attacked.—County Clare—Attempt to burn Meelick Villa, near Cratloe—House of a widow burned at Ballinacolly—A house burned, and another pulled down, at Clonkella—At Cochnaine, a mare ripped open —Two houses burned at Barrane—Farm house at Elton burned.—County Westmeath—Mr. E. Brady's house attacked, one of the assailants shot—Several persons attacked and beaten by Ribbonmen—Mr. Ball, Postmaster of Ballinacarrig, attacked and cruelly beaten—Anthony Connor, tithe-proctor, beaten—Thomas Dooley's house, near Moate, attacked, and all the inmates beaten—James Fox's house attacked—Michael Murray's house attacked.

LAW INTELLIGENCE.

COURT OF CHANCERY.

Thursday.—Mr. Hart presented the petition of Lord Grantley, in the matter of the Earl of Portsmouth, a lunatic, praying that the confirmation of the Master's report may be suspended, that a proper plan or scheme of the household of the lunatic, as the best for securing his care, security, and happiness, should be approved of, and that it may be inquired who is the most fit person to have the care of the lunatic's person.—Mr. Attorney-General opposed the application. The matter had been regularly referred to the Master, to inquire who was the most fit and proper person to have the care of the unfortunate Earl; and he had, on the most respectable depositions, considered Mr. Henry Fellowes (a cousin of the Earl's on the maternal side), the gentleman to whom the care of the lunatic ought to be entrusted. And after all that has been done, without any objection at the time on the part of Lord Grantley, he now came here to ask the Court to appoint a second committee. If the Court should think any further inquiries before the Master necessary, his clients were most willing to consent to that, but if the matter was again sent to the Master on account of Lord Grantley having presented this petition, it would carry with it some suspicion that Mr. Fellowes was not the fit and proper person that the Master has reported him to be.—His Lordship confessed he signed the usual order on sending it to the Master, but he did it, perhaps, without first giving it that consideration it required, for he was determined, that as long as he lived, he never would appoint any man, let his name and character be what it might, were he the most worthy man that ever walked on earth, till he first was satisfied, through the authority of the Master, of the plan proposed to be adopted as to the care, security, and happiness of this Noble Lord; for he could not forget how he has been left on the world since the year 1809 till 1823, with relations on both sides around him, and yet not to look at the treatment he has received. Upon Lord Grantley's petition he would make no order at all; he considered no blame whatever could be attached to him for presenting it, on the contrary, he thought it right to say, that Lord Grantley was the first person who brought the Earl before the Court; and had it not been for him, there was a great probability that the care of this Court would never have been thrown around the unfortunate Nobleman.

OLD BAILEY.

Wednesday.—Henry Pestel, aged 19, was indicted for breaking and entering the dwelling-house of Edward Birkenshaw, of Hornsey, and stealing therein twelve sovereigns, and a variety of other property; and Joseph Hatchett, aged 20, and James Day, aged 19, were charged with receiving part of the same knowing it to have been stolen. Pestel had watched the prosecutor and his family out of their house on their way to Church, when he entered and plundered it of various articles. He was subsequently found asleep in the kitchen, but whether from the effects of intoxication did not appear. Before the Magistrate, he confessed that he knew where part of the property was, and hence the other prisoners were taken into custody. Lord Chief Justice Abbott summed up the evidence to the Jury, who found Pestel guilty, but acquitted Hatchett and Day.

Thursday.—James Bynon was indicted for stealing a bill of exchange for 30l. the property of Wm. Devey. The prosecutor stated that he had possessed a bill of exchange for 30l. accepted by a person of the name of Smith; does not know the residence of Smith, or to whose order it was payable; it was due on the 3d of March. William Wright, clerk to the last witness, took the bill to Smith's, No. 19, Millbank-street, Westminster, for payment; it was accepted by Smith, and directed as payable at his house—witness saw a woman in the shop, who said that Smith was from home—gave her the bill, when she sent a child to tell him he was wanted—the prisoner came in during witness's stay, as did Mr. Smith and the child. In his cross-examination, witness said, he asked the prisoner whether his name was Smith? he replied, yes, but gave him a card with the name of Bynon, Little James-street, Gray's Inn-lane—he put the bill in his pocket, observing, that it had been improperly obtained from him. The prisoner, in his defence, said that he put the bill in the possession of a man named Hatch, to get discounted by Messrs. Johnson and Co.; Johnson, after the lapse of five days, wrote to Hatch, saying that he should retain the bill as a set-off against 50l. owing to him by Hatch. Prisoner then went to Union-hall, and was instructed by the Magistrate to proceed against Johnson by an action of trover. Hatch proved these facts. Mr. Devey here interfered, and said that Johnson had told him the prisoner never received value for the bill. "Then, gentlemen," said his Lordship, "the prisoner is entitled to your acquittal. It is justice to the prisoner to say, that although it was an improper, yet it was not a felonious taking of property." Verdict—Not Guilty.

Friday.—Charles James Kerfoot, aged 24, was indicted for forging an order for the payment of the sum of 50l. 3s., with intent to defraud James Mann. The prosecutor resided at Brighton, and was a riding master. On New Year's Day he became acquainted with the prisoner, who resided at the Steyne Hotel, where he remained until the 10th of February. During his stay he hired horses of witness, and on one occasion borrowed 2l. On the 11th of February he hired a horse for a few hours, but it was not returned that day. His suspicion being aroused, he started to London at midnight, and arrived about seven in the morning, soon after which he accidentally met the prisoner in Holborn, on the horse he let him the previous day. Witness took him into custody, and delivered him to the care of the watchhouse-keeper of St. Giles's. The prisoner begged for mercy, and said he would pay what he owed, and the expenses incurred by witness's pursuit of him, if he would permit him to go at large. When conveyed to Marlborough-street he produced a bill of exchange, and repeated his proposal to pay. Witness declined compromising until he went to consult the Magistrate, who informed him that he would not interfere in the business. Witness afterwards asked him what mode of payment he meant to adopt. He said he had a bill which he would send to the Bank and get cashed. No particular sum was stipulated to be taken by the witness. — Bartlett deposed as to the taking the bill in question to Jones, Lloyd, and Co. having seen the prisoner indorse it in his proper name. Witness was informed at the banking-house that the bill was a forgery altogether; witness then took it back.—The Lord Chief Justice inquired whether the only count in the indictment was with intent to defraud Jas. Mann. It should have charged in various ways, it is not stated with intent to defraud Jones, Lloyd, and Co., or Ainsworth and Co.—His Lordship and Mr. Baron Hullock were both of opinion that the evidence would not sustain the indictment; hence he was bound to direct an acquittal.—Not Guilty.

THE REVENUE.

Abstract of the Net Produce of the Revenue of Great Britain, in the Years and Quarters ended the 5th of April, 1822, and the 5th of April, 1823, shewing the Increase or Decrease on each head thereof:—

	Years ended April 5. 1822.	1823.	Increase.	Decrease.
	£	£	£	£
Customs	9,335,711	9,406,642	70,931
Excise	26,685,623	25,516,922		1,148,701
Stamps	6,227,318	6,200,060		27,258
Post Office	1,288,050	1,369,050	81,000
Taxes	7,518,768	6,874,855		643,853
Miscellaneous	320,483	426,578	106,095
	51,395,843	49,824,057	258,026	1,819,812
		Deduct Increase		258,026
		Decrease on the Year		1,561,786

	Quarters ended April 5 1822.	1823.	Increase.	Decrease.
	£	£	£	£
Customs	2,099,679	2,109,408	9,729
Excise	5,856,798	5,656,279		200,519
Stamps	1,592,346	1,573,854		8,492
Post Office	320,000	330,000	10,000
Taxes	980,916	861,764		119,152
Miscellaneous	63,621	76,799	13,178
	10,903,360	10,608,194	32,707	328,163
		Deduct Increase		32,707
		Decrease on the Quarter		295,456

By the above abstract, there appears to be a decrease in the year of 1,561,786l.; and in the quarter of 265,459l. as compared with the corresponding year and quarter. The decrease, however, has been produced by diminished taxation—namely, the reduction of the Excise Duties on Malt, Salt, and Leather, and the repeal of the Agricultural Horse Tax. There is a surplus over the charge on the Consolidated Fund of 2,133,769l.; in the corresponding quarter of last year it was only 1,645,047l.

On Monday night, an extra Messenger arrived in Downing-street, with dispatches from Madrid, and in the evening Mr. Robinson, the King's Messenger, left town, with dispatches for Paris.

On Tuesday, the Duke of York, as Commander in Chief, held a Levee at the House Guards, which was attended by upwards of fifty officers, &c. Among them were Generals Lord Cathcart, Gascoyne, the Hon. —— Taylor, Lieut.-Generals Grey, Sir J. Murray, F. Maitland, Ballingall; Major-Generals Sir S. Beckwith, Wood, Lord Aylmer, Blunt, Pye, the Earls of Kingston, Ashburnham, Lords Colnbrook, and Saltoun.

Lord Charles Fitzroy Somerset is arrived in town from Madrid, last from Paris. His Lordship landed at Dover on Tuesday.

At a Court of Aldermen, on Tuesday, Alderman J. J. Smith was elected Justice of the Bridge Yard, and Acting Alderman of Southwark, in the room of Alderman Sir J. Eamer.

On Tuesday a meeting of some of the members of the Corporation took place at Guildhall, in one of the committee-rooms, for the purpose of adopting some plan to prevent the erection of a new London Bridge. It was stated that a new bridge would cost the sum of 1,500,000l. and the city of London well knew that the Parliament would not be very profuse of the public money, whatever expectations might be entertained under circumstances so seriously affecting the local trade, should the city involve itself in the measure. Some members observed, that they had found, upon the most accurate examination, that estimates in such cases generally exceeded the extent described.

On Tuesday, the Election for an Alderman for the Ward of Langbourn, in the room of Sir John Eamer, deceased, commenced. The candidates were John Keys, Esq. Citizen and Stationer, and Sir Francis Desanges. Mr. Keys was declared returned by the show of hands, but a poll being demanded by the friends of Sir F. Desanges, the numbers were on that day for Mr. Keys, 66—Sir F. Desanges, 42. —On Wednesday, for Mr. Keys, 135—Sir F. Desanges, 89.—On Thursday, Sir F. Desanges resigned, and Mr. Keys was elected.

A meeting of woollen merchants, and gentlemen concerned in the woollen trade, was held at the King's Head, Poultry, on Wednesday. A petition to Parliament, praying a reduction of the tax on wool imported into this country was agreed to.

On Wednesday, a Court of Directors was held at the East India House, when the thanks of the Court were voted unanimously to James Pattison and William Wigram, Esqrs. Chairman and Deputy Chairman, for their zeal and attention to the Company's interest during the last year.—A ballot was taken afterwards for the election of six Directors, in the room of the Hon. Hugh Lindsay, John Morris, Esq. Robert Campbell, Esq. John Goldsborough Ravenshaw, Esq. Josias Du Pre Alexander, Esq. and Neil Benjamin Edmonstone, Esq. who go out by rotation. At six o'clock the glasses were closed and delivered to the Scrutineers, who reported at half-past seven o'clock that the election had fallen on Wm. Stanley Clarke, Esq. John Hudleston, Esq. Richard Chicheley Plowden, Esq. George Raikes, Esq. Geo. Abercrombie Robinson, Esq. and John Thornhill, Esq.—On Tuesday, the following Commanders took leave of the Court previous to departing for their respective destinations, viz. Capt. T. Baker, Lowther Castle; Capt. J. Hine, Bombay; Capt. R. Raives, Warren Hastings; and Capt. W. H. C. Dalrymple, Vansittart, for China direct.—A ballot was taken on the injustice and impolicy of the existing restrictions on the Sugar Trade of British India. It was contended, that since the repeal, by the Acts of last Session of Parliament, of the restrictions formerly imposed on the West India trade, no pretension exists for any exclusive protection to the sugars of the West India Colonies against those of British India. It was proposed to present petitions in the name and on behalf of the East India Company to both houses of Parliament, praying for an equalization of the duties on East and West India sugars, and for permission to be heard by Counsel before the two Houses of Parliament respectively, in support of their claims. At six o'clock the glasses were closed and delivered to the scrutineers, who reported the numbers to be, viz.—For the question, 479—Against it, 189—Majority, 290.

The East India Company's ship Herefordshire, outward-bound, was all well on the 19th February, in lat. 1. 53. south long. 21. 58. west.

On Friday se'nnight the Durham Election closed; the numbers were Sir H. Hardinge, 249—Mr. H. Lambton, 66. Sir H. Hardinge was declared elected.

The anniversary dinner of the Mendicity Society was held on Wednesday at the Freemasons' Tavern, when his Grace the Duke of Northumberland presided.

The Commissioners in Howard and Gibbs's bankruptcy, after proceeding further in their case, adjourned till the 24th inst.

A small naval promotion has taken place, the following Post Captains of 1797 have been made Rear-Admirals of the Blue. The Hon. Sir C. Paget, Capt. R. Williams, and Capt. R. Worsley.

The Army.—The payment of three months' half-pay, to 24th March last, to the reduced officers of His Majesty's Land Forces, including those heretofore borne upon the Irish establishment, will commence on Wednesday next.—The under-mentioned services, including those heretofore borne on the Irish Establishment, will also be in course of payment on Wednesday next:—Unattached pay of General Officers, pay and half pay of retired Officers, pay of Adjutants of Local Militia, and Royal Bounty.—The Foreign half-pay, and Foreign quarterly pensions, due on the 24th ult. will likewise be in course of payment on Wednesday next.

Mr. Baron Garrow has been some days confined to his house; he was much indisposed at the commencement of his circuit, the labours of which were unusually severe.

Newmarket Craven Meeting begins to-morrow; the First Spring Meeting the 28th; Second Ditto, May 12; and Epsom, May 28. More interest is excited by the races at the Craven than known for many years.

The snow is at present deep on the upland roads of Scotland; in some places saddle horses and foot-passengers can with difficulty pass.

The traffic on the Kennet and Avon river, from Bristol to London, has been greater the last month than has ever been known since that communication has been open; the tonnage for that time exceeding any former month by upwards of 1000 tons.

Miles and Edwards, of Oxford-street, have just introduced some of the most splendid designs in London Chintz Furnitures and Spanish Merino damasks ever manufactured, and at such an amazing reduction in the prices as will astonish every person who has not had an opportunity of inspecting their superb stock. The great reputation Miles and Edwards have acquired for selling such superior articles so considerably below the prices regularly obtained by other establishments, they are determined, if possible, to increase, and families about fitting up drawing-room or dining-room curtains, four post and French beds, &c. may effect a saving of at least one-third in the expense by an inspection of this new and matchless stock. M. and E. think it necessary to state they are not connected with any other concern. No. 134, Oxford-street, between Holles-street and Old Cavendish-street.

To-morrow will be published, price 6s.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW and CRITICAL JOURNAL, No. 75.—Contents—I. Reflections on the State of Ireland, in the nineteenth Century. &c.—2. Moore's Loves of the Angels: Lord Byron's Heaven and Earth.—3. Grattan's Speeches.—4. Botany Bay.—5. Cobbett's Cottage Economy. —6. An Inquiry into the Principles of Beauty in Grecian Architecture. &c. by the Earl of Aberdeen.—7. Church Establishments.—8. Negro Slavery.—9. Virginius, a Tragedy, by James Sheridan Knowles: The Bride's Tragedy, by Thos. Lovell Beddoes.—10. East and West India Sugar.—11. Nomination of Scottish Juries.—12. Duty on Slates and Stone carried Coastwise.—13. Spain.—Note on Dr. Phillpotts.—Printed for A. Constable and Co. Edinburgh; and Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, in 4to. illustrated with Twenty-seven Plates and two Maps, price 3l. 13s. 6d. boards,

AN HISTORICAL, GEOGRAPHICAL, and COMMERCIAL ACCOUNT of the BRAZILS. By JAMES HENDERSON.—Printed for the Author, and published by Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

"Mr. Henderson deserves commendation for much originality of observation, much translated instruction, much orderly disposition of parts, and much rational commentary."—Monthly Review, March, 1823.

"This Volume contains more information on the natural and political situation of Brazil, than is to be found compressed within the compass of any single work on the same subject that has appeared since the country itself has become an object of so much interest in the eyes of Europeans. Mr. Henderson's Account of the Commercial and Political Regulations of the Brazil is very valuable."—New Monthly Magazine.

Just published, in 1 vol. 8vo. price 10s. 6d. boards,

THE ENGLISH MASTER; or Student's Guide to Reasoning and Composition; exhibiting an analytical View of the English Language, of the Human Mind, and of the Principles of Fine Writing. By WM. BANKS, Private Teacher of Composition, Intellectual Philosophy, &c.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

"The work now submitted to the public is not the result of mutried speculation, but is an outline of a course of instruction, which, for many years he has delivered to his pupils with the greatest success."—Preface.

Just published, in 8vo. with a Portrait, &c. 15s. boards,

MEMOIRS, including original Journals, Letters, Papers, and Antiquarian Tracts, of the late CHARLES ALFRED STOTHARD, F.S.A. Author of the Monumental Effigies of Great Britain. With connective Notices of his Life, and some Account of a Journey in the Netherlands. By MRS. CHARLES STOTHARD, Author of Letters written during a Tour through Normandy, &c.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

LETTERS written during a Tour through Normandy, Brittany, and other parts of France, in 1818. In 4to. with Engravings, price 2l. 12s. 6d. bds.

Just published, in 3 vols. 12mo. price 19s. bds.

REFORMATION. A Novel.

Tho' losses an' crosses
Be lessons right severe,
There's wit there, ye'll get there.
Ye'll find nae ither where.—Burns.

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

MISS BENGER'S MARY QUEEN OF SCOTS.

Just published, in 2 vols. 8vo. with a genuine Portrait, never before engraved, price 1l. 4s. boards,

MEMOIRS of MARY QUEEN of SCOTS, with Anecdotes of the Court of Henry the Second, during her Residence in France. By MISS BENGER.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had, by the same Author,

1. MEMOIRS of the LIFE of ANNE BOLEYN, Queen of Henry VIII. 2d Edit. in 2 vols. with 2 Portraits 16s.

2. MEMOIRS of the late MRS. ELIZABETH HAMILTON. 2d Edit. in 2 vols. 8vo. with a Portrait. 1l. 1s. bds.

3. MEMOIRS of MR. JOHN TOBIN, Author of the Honey Moon. In 8vo. price 12s. bds.

Just published, in 1 vol. 8vo. illustrated by plates, price 16s. bds.

JOURNAL of a HORTICULTURAL TOUR through Flanders, Holland, and the North of France. By a Deputation of the Caledonian Horticultural Society; consisting of Mr. Neill, Secretary: Mr. Hay, Planner; and Mr. M'Donald, Chief Gardener at Dalkeith Park.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London; and Bell and Bradfute, Edinburgh.

Just published, in 2 vols. 8vo. price 1l. 4s. bds.

A TREATISE on NERVOUS DISEASES, comprising the History and Method of Cure of the various Species of Apoplexy, Palsy, and Epilepsy, together with an introductory Account of the Opinions of ancient and modern Physiologists concerning the Nature and Uses of the Nervous System. By JOHN COOKE, M.D. F.R.S. F.A.S. Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, &c. &c.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

The TREATISES on APOPLEXY, PALSY, and EPILEPSY, may be had separately.

NEW EDITION, WITH 1200 NEW ARTICLES.

Just published, a new Edition, corrected to the present Time, and enlarged with 1200 additional Lives, in 1100 pages brevier octavo, price 25s. in boards,

THE UNIVERSAL BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY; or, an Historical Account of the Lives, Characters, and Works of the most eminent Persons of every Age and Nation. By JOHN WATKINS, LL.D.—This well-known and much esteemed Dictionary, is now submitted to the public in a much-improved state, nearly the whole having been re-written, every article collated by the best quoted authorities, and 1200 additional Lives introduced; making altogether about Ten Thousand several articles. It is therefore one of the most comprehensive and perfect Biographical Works extant; and, as a book of reference, possesses an unequalled degree of general interest and utility.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom, and of all Booksellers, may be had, printed on the same plan,

2. MORTIMER'S COMMERCIAL DICTIONARY; or, Counting-house Library; price 30s. boards.

3. ROBINSON'S THEOLOGICAL and BIBLICAL DICTIONARY; or, Library of Divinity; price 28s. boards.

Very handsomely printed in 12 vols. 8vo. with vignette Titles, price 6l. 6s. bds.

Just published,

THE SPECTATOR, TATLER, and GUARDIAN. Also the SPECTATOR, separately, in 8 vols. 8vo. price 2l. 2s.—London: Printed for C. and J. Rivington; J. Nunn; J. Cuthell; E. Williams; Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; T. Cadell; J. and W. T. Clark; Jeffery and Son; J. and A. Arch; J. Richardson; Lackington and Co.; J. Mawman; W. Ginger; S. Bagster; J. Booth; R. H. Evans; Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; H. T. Hodson; J. Carpenter; Harris and Son; R. Pheney; J. Booker; R. S. Kirby; A. K. Newman and Co.; R. Scholey; Ogle, Duncan, and Co.; J. Bohn: G. and W. B. Whittaker; Sherwood, Jones, and Co.; Edwards; Simpkin and Marshall; C. Taylor; I. F. Setchell; G. Wilson; and W. Wood.

☞ The proprietors of this Edition of the Spectator, &c. can with confidence call the attention of the reader to its very superior accuracy: it has been diligently compared with the original folios, and the first 8vo. and 12mo.; and Mr. Addison's papers with those in the original Edition of his works prepared for the press by his friend Mr. Tickell, and published by him in 1721.

DICKINSON'S JUSTICE, ENTIRE NEW EDITION, WITH ALL THE RECENT ACTS.—In three large volumes, 8vo. price 2l. 14s.

A PRACTICAL EXPOSITION of the LAW relative to the Office and Duties of a Justice of the Peace, chiefly out of Session. By WM. DICKINSON, ESQ. Barrister at Law, and one of His Majesty's Justices of the Peace.—London: printed for Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; J. and W. T. Clarke; R. Pheney; J. M. Richardson; and G. and W. B. Whittaker. By whom also is published, in one vol. 8vo.

A PRACTICAL GUIDE to the QUARTER SESSIONS, and other Sessions of the Peace, price 11. 4s.

TRAVELS IN AFRICA.—Just published, in 8vo. price 12s. bds. with a Map,

THE TOUR of AFRICA. Containing a Concise Account of all the Countries in that Quarter of the Globe, hitherto visited by Europeans, with the Manners and Customs of the Inhabitants, selected from the best Authors, and arranged by CATHERINE HUTTON. Volume the Third.

☞ This Third Volume completes the design of the Work, and, with the two former Volumes, carries the reader through the whole circuit of Africa, and constitutes an Epitome of all the knowledge which has yet been obtained relative to that interesting portion of the Globe.

London: printed for Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy, Paternoster row.

☞ The three Volumes may now be procured together, price 1l. 16s.

In 12mo. price 8s. boards,

A COMPLETE SYSTEM OF COOKERY, on a Plan entirely new; consisting of an extensive and original Collection of Receipts in Cookery, Confectionary, &c. with Bills of Fare for every day in the year. To which are now added, Tables of Articles in Season, and the mode of Dressing Turtle (never before given in any work of the kind), Bills of Fare for Desserts, and a series of Receipts and Bills of Fare for Economical Dishes, to suit the most Private Families. By JOHN SIMPSON.—London: printed for Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; Hatchard and Son; W. Anderson; Rodwell and Martin; J. Booker; and T. Hughes.

☞ This work comprises the result of the Author's Practice and Experience in the service of the late Marquis of Buckingham, and includes Entertainments given to the Prince of Wales and other Royal Personages. The Bills of Fare are displayed in tables exactly as the dishes were placed; and exhibit a rich variety which may be advantageously consulted for selection for less splendid tables. The Bills of Fare for Desserts are quite a novel feature.

HULSEAN LECTURES.—Just published, in 8vo. price 12s.

ON SCRIPTURE DIFFICULTIES. Twenty Discourses preached before the University of Cambridge, in the year 1822, at the Lecture founded by the Rev. John Hulse, M.A. By the REV. C. BENSON, M.A. Fell. Magd. Coll. and Vicar of Ledsham, Yorkshire.—Printed for Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy, London. By whom also are published, of the same author,

I. On the EVIDENCES of CHRISTIANITY. The First Course of Hulsean Lectures, for 1820. Price 11s.

II. The CHRONOLOGY of OUR SAVIOUR'S LIFE; or, an Inquiry into the true time of the Birth, Baptism, and Crucifixion of Jesus Christ. 8vo. 6s.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We are requested to state that his Grace the Archbishop of York was not in the House of Lords on the second reading of Mr. Canning's Bill for the repeal of the exclusion of Roman Catholic Peers from Parliament.

Our other correspondents must stand over.

For Price of Stocks, see the last page.

JOHN BULL.

LONDON. APRIL 13.

So deeply are we impressed with the importance of the question to be discussed on Thursday in the House of Commons, so convinced of the dangers and difficulties by which the consideration of it is surrounded, that we have felt it our duty to devote the whole of this day's paper to the subject.

We of course allude to what is called—ad captandum—"Catholic Emancipation," but which really means, and if its advocates were honest ought to be designated, the projected triumph of Popery over the Protestant Establishment. We have to regret that the Whigs do not act alone upon this vital and important question. If they relied only upon their own resources, we confess we should not be so apprehensive of probable danger, for it is their fate to bungle every measure which comes to be moulded under their policy; and as their witty friend Sheridan said, when writhing under the effects of their folly—they are ingenious only in "building up walls against which to break their own heads." But they have for allies in this cause men who never approach them upon any other, and whose weight may afford a preponderance to Whig intrigue, which can never arise out of its own intrinsic influence. Deeply, deeply do we regret this—and the more so, that a few enlightened and practical statesmen should lose sight of times and seasons in the prosecution of abstract principles, which can only be safely acted upon when the passions of men are lulled to rest.

Much, however, as we may regret this ominous coincidence of opinion between a few men of principle acting in opposition to the general tenor of their policy—much as we lament their temporary coalition with a faction who, acting in a body, make the whole a party question, in order to embarrass the executive government, we cannot sacrifice an iota of that duty which we owe to ourselves and our country, or, for a moment hesitate to mark with reprobation a line of policy which we are satisfied is not only pregnant with danger to our civil as well as religious establishments—but involves the whole question whether a large portion of the empire shall remain as our inheritance, or whether it shall be torn from us and handed over, chain-bound, to the persecuting spirit of papal predominance.

"Amicus Plato, amicus Socrates, sed magis amica, Veritas."

The Roman Catholics have, at this moment, nothing to ask in the way of toleration, and are only excluded from official situations by their sworn allegiance to a Foreign Power—thus utterly precluding all legitimate allegiance to their own Sovereign; to open the highest offices in the State to men who refuse to give a pledge of their Constitutional attachment to it is—considering the question only in the abstract—a measure of such doubtful policy, that no Government could be justified in conceding it; but when to this is super-added, the experience of that Government—that power in the hands of this particular sect or class of persons has constantly been abused or perverted to purposes hostile to the very principles of the existing Government, and subversive of those liberties, to secure which, they were necessarily excluded from all participation in it.

We can conceive no plea sufficiently strong to guard the advocates for their return to power—from the charge of being either rash experimentalists, or of being actuated by the most wanton and wilful desertion of the solid and simple principles which form the basis of our Constitution. If a single Penal Statute remains upon the Books which can be construed to impede or obstruct the full exercise of the religious duties of the Roman Catholic subjects of this Realm, we are among the first and foremost to cry out for its repeal;—not because we approve of the vile mummery under which the light of Christianity is thus suppressed and buried; but, because the spirit of our Constitution breathes throughout every part of it a toleration for errors in religious faith, with which even its love for truth is not suffered to interfere. But there is a "vast gulph" between the toleration, and the encouragement, and propagation of errors, which it is the object and unceasing effort of those who are the strongest advocates of "Catholic Emancipation" to exclude from the view of their countrymen. How many things in common life are we compelled to tolerate, however repugnant to our notions of right and wrong, lest we should trench upon the liberties of the many, by correcting the abuses which disgrace a few; but shall we, on that account, submit to men who thus avail themselves of the precise limits of the law or established custom, the charge and control over our dearest interests, and our most sacred duties!

This is the naked, undisguised, and plain state of the question, as it stands between the Claims of the Roman Catholics, and the required concession on the part of the Protestant Government of these realms. That much may be said—that volumes may be written, on the question cannot be denied, when we have the teeming Whig Press before our eyes, from the moment in which the Whig Leaders began to act upon Tory principles. But, into these simple elements, after all that has, or can be written on the subject, must the piles of Edinburgh Reviews and Chronicle essays—the cart loads of Parliamentary orations, and the reams still lying in the trunk-makers' stores—resolve themselves: the main argument, which rests upon the alteration of times and seasons, falls to the ground the moment the Roman Catholic appears in person to touch the question. The Pillar of his Creed is the immutability of it—his legend and his beast is, that it is unchangeable! To impose upon the country, by asserting in favour of these claimants, what their chief glory consists in denying, is worthy only those who have taken their place among the initiated disciples of Loyola; who, as suited their purpose, when the Church and Throne were tottering, joined the Puritan rabble, and hunted them on to the crime of King-killing, and the plunder of the Ecclesiastical revenues—which, lost to themselves, they preferred to see the spoil of fanatics, than the legitimated property of the Reformers!

Whatever may be the event of the approaching discussion, the question must still remain at issue between the Constitutionalists and their opponents. Neither partial failure nor partial success must be allowed to operate upon the minds of the British nation on a question which embraces directly or contingently all that is essential to the exercise of the wholesome functions of the Protestant Constitution of the country.

It may, however, be to the purpose, in a crisis, when the question is rendered prominent by a parliamentary discussion of its merits, to notice the particular state of the Roman Catholic Church—its existing tone and spirit, and the character in which it stands before the country at the moment in which its claims are—according to annual custom, in order to tire Parliament into acquiescence—brought forward.

We pass over Mr. Plunkett's official exposure of a wide-extending conspiracy, bound by the most impious and daring oaths, and directed by Committees of assassination, deputed to extirpate the whole Protestant population of Ireland. We do not stop to notice the general temper of that country, in a state of half insurrectionary hostility against the Protestant Government, and against the Protestant Landlord; but it is important to consider the position now taken up by the mock hierarchy under the especial appointment of the Pope, in the face and in defiance of the established Hierarchy of the Protestant Church. A powerful and eloquent charge of the Archbishop of Dublin has been anathematized by the Irish Vatican, and his person denounced, and subjected to the insults of a Roman Catholic rabble in his very Palace in Dublin!

What will our readers think of the following extract, taken at random from the pen of a Roman Catholic Bishop, in commenting upon this charge, delivered in the conscientious exercise of his Episcopal duty by a Protestant Archbishop:—"Your Creed," he says—that is the Creed of the Church of England and Ireland—"has been composed in part of the "traditions of men."—(this comes with a good grace from a Popish Priest, at least)—"and compiled from time to time by "Lay Parsons and Ecclesiastics, whose very names are a re-"proach to all with whom they are connected, and whose hy-"pocrisy, lies, and crimes my feelings would not allow me "to commit to paper!"—After coupling his Grace with the old heretical arians, "who were like his Grace, and like his "Grace's predecessors," the Roman Catholic dignitary goes on to inform his country who are the liars, hypocrites, and criminals denounced by the Dublin conclave. "Cranmer, "Latimer, and Ridley, and Coverdale Peter Martyn, "and Bucer, and Zuinglius, Henry, and Somerset, and "Elizabeth, and Cecil, and Burnet, and Tillotson, and "Taylor, and Hoadley—These, my Lord," (addressing the Archbishop)—"are the Apostles, the Fathers, the supporters "of your Church; these are the men, with a host of apos-"tates, in whom your Grace glories."—"If they have re-"constructed your Church on the foundation of the Prophets "and Apostles, the Manichaan system must be true, and "the evil principle has prevailed over the good one!"

This our readers will, we doubt not consider a sufficient proof of the want of toleration imputed to the unfounded jealousy of our Protestant Government—and we may even advance a step nearer to the question, and ask what a Roman Catholic Bishop can require beyond this but the political power to give effect to his anathemas, and to bring the offending Archbishop under the notice of the re-edified Inquisition. The Archbishop is then delivered over to one of the officials—namely, Friar Hayes—an itinerant agent between Rome and Ireland, who in a sermon—not the most violent of the collection, says,—

"To crown this climax of ignorance, impudence, scurrility, and hypocrisy, with a document, which is such disgraceful quality outtops them all, the charge—the insolent charge of his Grace the most Reverend Dr. Wm. Magee—not by the grace of God, or the mission ordinary or extraordinary of Jesus Christ, but by Royal Commission derived in lexitimate succession from Harry of bloodless memory and Bess of virgin fame, Lord Archbishop of Dublin and Primate of Ireland!!!"

In another place he says,—

"The Church of Christ, her head and centre is Rome—she has converted and converts that England, which by your Grace's tongue defames her, as well as this Ireland, which by my voice sweans to her eternal fealty!!"

These are the proofs which the Roman Catholics themselves produce, as a commentary upon the pledges given by their Protestant Advocates, of the change which has taken place in the principles and sentiments—the spirit and tone of their Church, under the "ameliorating influence of time!" and "the progress of human intellect!"—We are satisfied to take it, as a pretty strong proof that intolerance is not the crying sin of our Protestant Government, even should it refuse to grant one single point beyond what has already been conceded—Good God—let us reflect, what would be the consequence of political power in such hands! The Whigs are sucking babes in the cradle of intolerance, when compared with these their new allies.

It may be thought that this Friar Hayes is some obscure and desperate adventurer—like Hunt, or Waddington, or Hume—whom nobody owns, and who is labouring to distinguish himself among the mob by the virulence and intolerance of his zeal. No such thing; he is, we repeat, an accredited envoy—employed to negotiate between the Irish Roman Catholic Boards, as well as the Irish Roman Catholic Bishops, with the Court of Rome; and his work—the work from which we have just made our extracts, has been disseminated by every leading dignitary of the Irish Romish Church, to the amount of no less than 30,000 copies within the last year!!—So much for the Friar!

We have again to refer to a Bishop—a Roman Catholic one—who, in addressing the Primate on his charge, says—after much vituperative bigotry, which is not worthy public attention—

"Your Grace cannot inherit spiritual jurisdiction as you would a title to an estate—you have not received it from the Catholic Church; for she disavows you, saying with Cyprian, no matter what you teach, or who you are, if you be out of the pale of her unity, you are not a Bishop!!—Your Grace is reported to have said, that the Roman Catholics had a Church without a religion."

His Grace did not say so: and this, which is the whole and sole ground of the vile ribaldry which has issued from the Roman Catholic pulpits and press against this most exemplary and pious Prelate, they knew to be—before his Grace condescended to explain it—a false and forced construction of what was stated in the charge.

So much for fair dealing and candour. But to proceed with the elegant effusion of a Roman Catholic Titular to a Protestant Archbishop, upon his mode of discharging After observing that his Grace is reported to have said (although the Charge was printed) that "the Roman Catholics have a Church without a religion," he, taking for granted what he knew to be untrue, goes on, "But Isaias saith of "that Church," (that is the Church of Rome prophetically,) "and against every tongue that contendeth with her, she shall "obtain her cause; for this is the inheritance of her chil-"dren!!" We here not only find all Protestants to be apostates, but usurpers; and the plea for extermination Heretics founded on a prophecy, and therefore implying a command from Heaven in aid of its fulfilment. We can little wonder at the horror excited among the Roman Catholic Population of ireland, in being subjected to Protestant Constitution, as at the measures into which they have been precipitated, by such goads, to exterminate Protestant usurpers and declared enemies of God

We have nearly done with his titular Lordship, but, as climax, we must be permitted to add what follows:—

"As an Archbishop of the Established Church, I would beg to ask you, my Lord, who you are, and where did you come from? From what Heaven have you fallen? What Earth produced you? Turn over the records of your Church; tell us the names of the Bishops who preceded you; shew us how they were connected with the Apostles, or with those who received the Faith from them. Produce a claim to that title of Apostolic which you so ostentatiously put forward but to which your Grace has as good a claim as to the Duchy of Leeds!!!"

Will any one longer doubt the object this enlightened Priesthood has in view in keeping in its archives the original grants of Church lands; nay, the title deeds of all property throughout Ireland which has passed from Roman Catholic into Protestant hands? Be assured they think and believe that the day of triumph is at hand, and that the only existing impediment is that which is opposed by their conscientious, and, it is to be hoped, eternal, denial of political power, sought under the Jesuitical cover of "Catholic Emancipation!"

We must trespass upon the patience of our readers to dwell some subjects, and those especially of such vital importance as that in which we are at present engaged, suffer from being too cursorily treated, or incompletely discussed. We have hitherto seen what Roman Catholic Bishops and Priests can do in the way of pulpit and pamphlet eloquence; but remains to shew that "the gift of prophecy" is not to be among them—nor bestowed without a motive, which, itself, certainly is devoid of all mystery.

Previous, and just previous to the Commission of those terrific excesses by the Roman Catholic Peasantry, as one acts of a conspiracy "for the utter extirpation of Protestants throughout Ireland," exposed, in his official capacity, by Mr. Plunkett, a publication by a Romish Bishop (Walmsly) professing to be an Exposition of the Revelation of St. John, was republished, and circulated among every rank and degree of the Roman Catholic population of the country. Let us see what are the real sentiments, and doctrines, and hopes of this Popish hierarchy the present day, when we are told that liberal sentiments have softened down all the asperities of their ancient bigotry. let us hear how they interpret the Scriptures to their flock and disciples. This Christian Bishop tells them that "Luther opened the Bottomless Pit or Gates of Hell; that a strong spirit of seduction which had been hatched in Hell and had the Devil for its parent, at Luther's opening Hell's door, immediately burst out;" that hence sprang a swarm of locusts mentioned in the Revelation; and that "this spirit of seduction, denoted by the smoke of the abyss, raised up a number of Sectarian Reformers, as they call themselves." He goes on to say that Luther was first intoxicated with this delusive spirit then Calvin, Cranmer, and many others;" that Heretics (all unfortunate Protestants) are compared to locusts, as St. Jerome says, because locusts are a species of insects extremely hurtful to mankind; and the infernal spirit, who was prompter and King of the Reformation and Reformers, is the Abaddon—the destroyer foretold in the Revelations. So much for the hopes under the "tender mercies" of a Restored Church—but even this zealous Bishop has some sympathy for our fate—he could "almost lament the misfortune of Protestants in voluntarily admitting over them, such a King, and enlisting under his banner;" but his pity disappears when, in the rekindled spirit of prophecy, he beholds the rapidly approaching ruin and overthrow of the Devil's Children—and at once declares that awful visitation of Heaven—according to the revelation, will take place before the end of the year 1825!!!

Smile as you may, good reader, many a prophecy carries with it the seeds of its own fulfilment. It is not to the wretched and narrow bigotry of these Priests—fit only to be compared with the blindness of the darkest ages—that we are now calling your attention or invoking your just and merited contempt, but to the effects likely to be produced upon the minds of a half civilized population, purposely kept in darkness in order to fit them to be instruments in the hands of men who declare themselves the agents and dispensers of the Almighty will! This work, or extracts from it, together with the others we have mentioned, have been within the last eighteen months circulated under the direct sanction of the Roman Catholic Hierarchy: and through the agency of every popish priest in every district of Ireland, and we will take upon us to affirm, that there is not a cabin, destitute as it may be of all means for human subsistence, that possesses not a copy of these incitements to insurrection against impious Protestants, and these promises from God, of approaching and almost impending victory over those whom the Devil has for a time raised over them—in the shape of a Protestant King, and a Protestant Constitution!!

Are these signs to be disregarded—and that too in a crisis when a single vote in Parliament may give all that is wanting to set the match to a train for our destruction? We are not speaking of England, though much might be told of which the country at large knows nothing—suspects nothing. Few are aware that this country is the only refuge and harbour of the Jesuits, who are repelled even by the most bigotted adherents of the Roman Catholic Creed—few of our countrymen have even an idea that the conversion of the lowest orders to the Roman Catholic faith is going on in a wholesale way in the North of England, under the superintendence of this reprobated and outcast order of men—still we may look to the general good sense of Englishmen—and the ordinary means of counteraction to an evil which we only name as likely in no very short time to excite public attention by its more obvious effects. But it is to Ireland—that our immediate and incessant attention ought to be directed—to Ireland where the flame of rebellion is kindled at the altars of religion—where a Crusade against the Principles and Spirit of the Constitution is preached from the pulpits, and organized in secret Conclaves—where the leaders have all the bigotry and distempered zeal without the honesty of the first Crusaders—and where their followers are more imperceptibly enslaved and more deeply sunk in ignorance than the miserably deluded crowds who took up the cross for the recapture of Jerusalem. The Jerusalem of these new Crusaders is nearer home—it is within their very grasp—they feel uselves upon its threshold, and wait only for the LAST RRIER to be removed by their allies and confederates THIN, to wrest the inheritance, the ZION of their fathers, m a people more abominable in their eyes than the infidel racens, and whom they even now declare to be out of the of the LAW and the GOSPEL!

To this, our conscientious and digested view of the subject, implore the attention of our countrymen. Let them not directed from this plain statement of the case by the rhe- al flourishes of a spurious liberality—or by that strain of sophis- al reasoning, which invites their concurrence in a measure spe- ially recommended to their best feelings under the plea of TOLERA- ION, and as a concession to tender consciences—but is in reality s, and as a consequence of inevitable, and eventual hazard to the first ciple and very foundation of the constitution! The ROMAN HOLICS, we repeat, have not the shadow of a grievance left, on the ject of Toleration, and they are ONLY EXCLUDED FROM POWER by re- ing to give that SOLEMN PLEDGE OF ALLEGIANCE TO THE THRONE, ired by every other description and order of men must do before they can ed with every other description of PUBLIC TRUST and CONFIDENCE! What is it mitted to offices of PUBLIC TRUST and CONFIDENCE! What is it e they ask—what is it that WE are called upon to refuse? The e they ask—what is it that WE are called upon to refuse? The t of POWER which is denied to ALL THEIR OTHER FELLOW SUB- TS, OF WHATEVER SECT OR DENOMINATION, and the abandonment of ONLY SECURITY which can save us from the ABUSE of it, and which Monarch himself, before the Crown is placed on his head, is com- lled to give in the face of his PEOPLE!

And what have these men done to warrant an exception in their fa- r? What is there in their PRINCIPLES—in their WORDS—in their s, to inspire a confidence, which we repose NO WHERE ELSE, in our or domestic relations, from THE THRONE to the COTTAGE—from FIRST MAGISTRATE to the humblest tenant of office? Are we to k for it in the mass of evidence, from which we have only been able lect the few foregoing instances of the EXISTING SPIRIT and TONE the LEADERS, DIRECTORS, and CONTROLLERS of their consciences? answer in the words of QUESTILLIAN:—

"Maledicis à Maleficio non distat, nisi occasione!!!"

For the developement of the motives by which the political advocates ir cause are actuated, we beg to refer our readers to the important dence impounded this day by our friend, PAUL POTTER.

OUR readers will perceive that in writing the article ich we have just concluded we professed an intention of ving over some apparent inconsistencies in the conduct of RIGHT. HON. WM. CONYNGHAM PLUNKETT. Upon a ther consideration of the Right Hon. Gentleman's conduct are, however, inclined to alter our determination upon s point—he will come to the task on Thursday, fresh from breeze of Brighton!—he will come armed with all that in- ect and deep research can afford to the cause—he will stand ore the nation at once in the double character of His Pre- ant Majesty's PROTESTANT Attorney-General for that part his PROTESTANT Empire called IRELAND, and the FREE, BERAL, and CONCILIATING advocate of the PAPISTS!!! der such imposing circumstances every word and action of becomes important and interesting.

We last week spoke of a SPY SYSTEM, and of a dereliction duty pregnant with evil to that estate of the realm for which feel the most devoted affection—the same system, or care- ness or vanity, or perhaps both, have put into our power most extraordinary history touching this subject and this ght Hon. Gentleman—but these are matters above us—and will reject the present opportunity of throwing new lights on us, preferring, as this is purely a public question—vitally portant to the safety of the country—to press upon those to om we have confided our interests in Parliament—not the eches or the writings of the supporters of the Protestant stitutional religion upon the subject, but the speeches of RIGHT HON. WM. CONYNGHAM PLUNKETT HIMSELF!

Thursday will be the seventeenth of April; distant from the end of November last one hundred and sixty-six days. the latter named day, the RIGHT HON. WILLIAM CO- NGHAM PLUNKETT, being in his official capacity—(in which pacity he also conducted a series of prosecutions against some otestant disturbers of a play in Dublin)—on that day, we ear, and on the trial of MICHAEL KEENAN, did the RIGHT N. WILLIAM CONYNGHAM PLUNKETT made a speech, from ich we make the following extracts:—

"It is with great pain," (says the Right Hon. Gentleman) "that I myself called upon, in the exercise of my official duty, to lay ore the public the very odious, dangerous, and disgusting conspi- cy, by the machinations of which this country has been for some e infested, and its tranquillity exposed to hazard. For some time st, those long I am not exactly aware—more—I believe considerably re than two or three years,) a plan has been formed in Ireland for ducing the members of the community by unlawful oaths and en- gements, to resist the laws, disturb the public peace, and overthrow Established Government. The machinery by which it is sought to ecute these purposes, is one of a very complicated nature, and iring much consideration and contrivance. Its construction is merely artificial, and far beyond the capacity and abilities of such ons as will appear to you to have been engaged in it."

The Right Hon. Gentleman then proceeds to describe the ganisation of these illegal associations, and continues thus:

"It is at all events clear, that it has been founded for the purpose violating the law, and interfering with the constituted authorities— more than all, of infecting all orders of the people with a spirit of vate disaffection and insubordination, ready for any plan of mis- f, should the exigencies of future times give that occasion, of ich the present tranquil state of the world affords no immediate spect. One feature, however, of this confinction distinguishes it m those of 1797 and 1798. It is EXCLUSIVELY CONFINED TO PERSONS ONE RELIGIOUS PERSUASION—I MEAN TO PERSONS PROFESSING THE MAN CATHOLIC FAITH. This circumstance alone, on the face of it, ages the association with every mark of DANGER and ILLEGALITY."

A little further on, while describing the various intentions of se CONSPIRING PAPISTS, the Right Hon. Gentleman says:

"Another object in view, was to overturn the Protestant religion, establish the Roman Catholic in its stead. At another time they ussed the utter extirpation of all Protestants out of the country."

Here, reader, we have MR. PLUNKETT officially exposing displaying to view the objects of a CONSPIRACY by his own owing—PURELY and ENTIRELY ROMAN CATHOLIC!!! s it to be believed, having first told a Jury, and in their sons the country at large, that "a conspiracy, purely Popish, is on foot, and has been going forward for years in the land," that this conspiracy is "far beyond the capacity and abilities of such persons as will appear to have been en- aged in it," that the same MR. PLUNKETT is on Thursday to ing forward a motion in favour of THESE VERY PAPISTS? To be sure, in justice to MR. PLUNKETT, we ought to add, after having described the conspiracy as horrible, mur- rous, revolutionary, and diabolical, he says—

"It is, Gentlemen, TO ME A MOST PAINFUL DUTY to be obliged to ll the public attention to the existence of a conspiracy OF THIS ind."

Why, it should have been painful to MR. PLUNKETT to ll the public attention to a conspiracy of "THIS kind" cannot pretend to say; but this much we will say, that think the situations of Protestant Attorney-General and man Catholic advocate are incompatible.

We call in a loud voice upon our Representatives at this ment. We implore them to withstand the powers of elo- ence, the force of talent, and the weight of influence, which in array against the constitutional religion of the country. have shewn, that if concessions be made to the Papists, will be, and must be, until the ascendancy of the Romish Church is confirmed, unsatisfactory and unproductive of favourable results. We declare that what is called the conciliatory system of Government is RUINOUS—a system which sacrifices principles to popularity, character for place, and friends for foes—induces a laxity of morals, of patriotism, and of good faith, and must be attended with the most fatal consequences.

It is in our Representatives at this crisis to shew the vile and base traducers of the British Parliament, the falsehood and calumny of those aspersions which they have dared to cast upon its honour and purity. Nothing is wanting to OUR CAUSE but TRUTH and FIRMNESS; and if, in conclusion, any man should think that encroachments on the Church are unconnected with Revolution in the State, we will merely add to our extracts from MR. PLUNKETT'S denunciation of the Papists the following testimony offered by MICHAEL COFFEY, a witness upon the trials to which we have been alluding:

"CROSS-EXAMINED BY MR. BENNET.

"Q. You said the object was to destroy one religion and promote another?—A. Yes.

"Q. You yesterday talked about the Radicals?—A. I heard several stories about them.

"Q. Was there any connexion between them and the Societies in Ireland?—A. So I was told by the Delegates. I understood that there was a friendly communication with them, and that it had been so settled, that in case the Queen should be condemned, the Radicals were to rise in England, and that papers should be dropped in Ireland, announcing a general rising. It was considered, that that feint would draw over the army from England here, and then the Radicals in England should seize on London, and the King, and come over to Ireland, and assist the Irish in expelling their enemies, and leave them to form such a Government as they pleased. One of the questions was 'What is your intention?' to which the answer was 'To CUT OFF HEREDITARY, AND REGAIN OUR RIGHTS LOST AT THE REFORMATION!!!'"

Need we add another syllable.

POTTER'S POUND—(No. 13.)
FOR STRAY WHIGS AND WHIGGERIES.

I HAVE had occasion more than once to refer to the testimonial of NEW WHIG principles, afforded by the evidence of the party itself, to prove the interesting fact, of MR. ARTHUR O'CONNOR being a WHIG in every respect like themselves, and a man warm in the political line, upon their own creed! I do not apologise, however, for reverting to the subject, which ought never to be forgotten as long as the liberties of our country are worth preserving, and the NEW WHIGS profess to act upon constitutional principles. The WHIGS of late have rung the changes upon the two questions which they believe and know to be most mischievous in their tendency upon the more ignorant, and consequently the most inflammable portion of the community—I mean REFORM IN PARLIAMENT, which, like the philosopher's stone—with whose qualities they are equally well acquainted—they proclaim to be the universal solvent for all that is corrupt in human nature and in human institutions;—and CATHOLIC EMANCIPATION, as it is vulgarly called, which they assure us will "bid wars to cease upon the earth," and produce a perfect MILLENNIUM in the Christian world, without the necessity of any further interference on the part of Providence.

If any thing were wanting to identify the policy of the WHIGS and the RADICALS—(or rather JACOBINS—for, believe me, my good friends, they are strictly convertible terms)—it is the uniform advocacy of these TWO CAUSES considered as parts of the same system, and as a corollary, the simultaneous attacks upon the Protestant Church, and upon the civil and political institutions of the State. As the grand annual exhibition is about to take place upon one of these important topics, and as there is a pledge also to bring under discussion the conciliatory conduct of the Irish Government towards the Orange Societies, there cannot be a fitter opportunity to lay before the public—who are too easily satisfied with interested and superficial information upon subjects of such vital importance—some account of the nature and principles of those Societies, against whose designs the Orange Association was resorted to as a measure of self-defence, founded on the basis of the Constitution, and of the real and undisguised objects, which the first promoters of REFORM IN PARLIAMENT contemplated, in the event of their success, in promoting them.

The reader will bear in mind, that the evidence given to the character of ARTHUR O'CONNOR by THE WHIGS, was in the year 1798—dates are troublesome and confounding things. This gentleman was the avowed editor of a journal called "THE PRESS," and the known patron and contributor to another called "THE UNION STAR," and the sentiments which we are about to produce from their columns were printed, published, and circulated in the year 1797!! From the "UNION STAR" we can only make a short extract or two—the general matter being of too odious a nature to be revived; but what will the reader say to the following extract when it reaches his eye for the first time. It begins with trusting that "some arm more lucky than the rest may reach his hea.t," (it refers to MR. PITT, then Minister of the Country,) and then proceeds to publish a list of persons proscribed by "THE UNION," many of the highest rank, character, and abilities in the country, and sums it up thus:—"Let the indignation of man be raised against the IMPIOUS WRETCH, "who profanely assumes the title of reigning by the grace of "God, and impudently tells the world he can do no wrong!!!"

Our readers will recognize the vulgar and ignorant interpretation of a great constitutional principle in a similar inference drawn by these congenial spirits the Edinburgh Reviewers, in a late article upon the amiable BISHOP OF LONDON!—but we must not interrupt the pure course of patriotic ardour—the writer goes on,

"We certainly do not advise, although we do not decry ASSASSINATION, as we conceive it is the only mode at present within reach of Irishmen to bring to justice the ROYAL AGENTS. We appeal to thy noble and venerated name, O BRUTUS," &c.

Even an Irish assassin could not avoid a bull, in the fervour of his PATRIOTISM—for after apostrophizing the shade of BRUTUS, the miscreant professing not to recommend assassination, exclaims, "Yes, PRINCE OF PATRIOT ASSASSINS, "thy noble and virtuous spirit shall pervade our land," &c.

We now present a few selections from "THE PRESS," under the avowed official superintendence and direction of that enthusiastic disciple of WHIGGISM MR. ARTHUR O'CONNOR—and regularly on the breakfast table of every WHIG LEADER months before they bore testimony to this man's character under the sanction of a solemn oath in a court of justice!

In urging his country forward to immediate insurrection, he thus remonstrates:—

"Examples are not wanting, if examples can avail, that tyranny has no terrors to a mind resolved, and that confederated multitudes has no terrors to a small number of disciplined troops. France has confirmed this new usurpation the best disciplined troops. France has confirmed this new usurpation the best disciplined troops. France has afforded a lesson of moderation to the discovered truth, and France has afforded a lesson of moderation to the sovereigns of Europe!"—Press, No. 17, Nov. 4, 1797.

"Should those desperate Frenchmen be inclined to approach our shores, as they have threatened this season, and not meeting Commodore Winter in the same blustering temper, should they chance to effect a landing, there can be no manner of doubt that the peasantry of the country, considering the signal gratitude of the Legislature and Government shewn to them for their former loyalty and prompitude in the national defence, would rise en masse, and meet the enemy IN OPEN ARMS."—The italics are in the original, Nov. 1797.

The hand that penned the invitation to assassination in the Union Star, may be traced, at least, in the following extract from a letter addressed to LORD CARHAMPTON:—

"It was indeed to be lamented that you should perish by the stroke of private justice, and defraud the executioner of his right, and the nation of its example. Were you this moment surrounded by the justly-enraged populace—were their arms raised to inflict the desired doom—I would throw myself among their poinards—I would endeavour to rescue you from their fury—I would intercede for your hated life; and this the writer would do, that, when "the day comes" when justice shall prevail—when, on that awful day of rejoicing to the good and terror to the wicked, A FEW VICTIMS MAY BE REQUIRED, this wretch may be included in the number, and meet the ignominious doom of a TRAITOR!!!"—Press, No. 27, Nov. 28, 1797.

Again,

"Gracious God! for what misery are we reserved, when such atrocities are stamped with the praise of spirit? and when it is proclaimed to the Republic of France that the natives of this devoted country are thus hunted down like wild beasts by their own nobility and gentry? When we see the address of HOCHE, offering liberty and protection, answered by the manifesto of LORD GRENVILLE, denouncing slavery and blood!!!"

These extracts, again be it remembered, were printed and published by MR. ARTHUR O'CONNOR in the year 1797, and the testimony of the Whigs bears date in 1798;—(there is no being too precise on these points from what is to follow)—and yet my LORD ERSKINE swears, "I never had any REASON to "think his principles differed from my own, as well on public "as on private subjects."

His Grace of Norfolk swears, "I considered him a gentle- "man warm in the political line, and attached to the Constitu- "tion in the same manner as myself."

MR. WHITBREAD, the elder, swears, "I know MR. O'CON- "NOR; his character is amiable, and his political principles "are the same as my own."

As a commentary upon the famous toast at that period adopted by the Whig Club, as the Test of Union with HORNE TOOKE and the Corresponding Society, the reader may be amused with the following lighter effusion, of the same spirit, and from the same quarter! Dublin Castle, the seat of Vice-royalty, is pointed out.

"That castle, which, through ages past,
"For despots was appointed,
"You, SOVEREIGN PEOPLE, claim at last,
"For you're the Lord's anointed!

"No more they'll vote away our wealth
"To please a King and Queen, Sirs,
"But gladly pack away by stealth,
"Or taste the guillotine, Sirs.

"CHORUS.

"Plant, plant the tree, fair freedom's tree,
"Midst danger, wounds and slaughter,
"Erin's green fields, its soil shall be
"Her tyrants BLOOD, its water!"

Enough of this; the little laureat, TOMMY MOORE, can scarcely exceed this in spirit or in poetry. We will only add, that upon the question being put to MR. OLIVER BOND, one of the REPUBLICAN DIRECTORY, when he was before the Secret Committee of the House of Lords, "for what purpose THE PRESS newspaper had been established?" he answered, "TO FORWARD THE CAUSE OF THE UNION!"

Before we proceed to our more important evidence, as bearing upon the questions which are still agitating the public mind, we will just assist in enlightening the understanding of those very active and zealous remonstrants against ORANGE SOCIETIES, who have never yet been known to raise their voice against the purer Associations for the Promotion of Liberty!

Let us see, upon what principle, and for what purposes, these Societies, which were so rapidly organized into "Directories and Committees of Public Safety," were originally established. The Brother Directors of MR. ARTHUR O'CONNOR, the patriotic MESSRS. NAPPER TANDY, and WOLFE TONE, thus address their countrymen on the first establishment of the Society of "UNITED IRISHMEN." "We call upon our countrymen in general to follow our example, and to form similar Societies, in every quarter of the kingdom, for the promotion of CONSTITUTIONAL KNOWLEDGE, and the dispensation of GENUINE WHIG PRINCIPLES;" the people (that is, His Majesty, the Whig sovereignty of the people,) "when thus collected will feel their own weight and secure that power, which THEORY has already admitted as their portion; and to which, if they be not aroused by their present provocations to vindicate it, they deserve to forfeit their pretensions for ever."

MR. WOLFE TONE is not so well pleased with the coquetry of the Whigs, as some others of his patriotic Committee. He compares them to a "plaister on a sore finger!" which, had he been brought up for a character with his brother O'CONNOR, might have stood somewhat in his way on the score of "his high-mindedness." He asks, speaking of the WHIGS, "what signifies peddling with their superficial measures? They are good as far as they go;—they are not sincere friends to the popular cause;—they dread the people," &c. He declares them to be actuated by the same principles, but without courage to carry them into execution!!

In a paper circulated in Dublin on the first Association of "United Irishmen," the NEW WHIGS are thus described—"We do not thoroughly understand the WHIG CLUB—when the aristocracy come forward the people fall backward—when the people come forward, the aristocracy, fearful of being left behind, insinuate themselves into our ranks, and rise into timid leaders or treacherous auxiliaries. THEY MEAN TO MAKE US THEIR INSTRUMENTS. Let us rather make them OUR instruments," (so thought the patriotic O'CONNOR) "one of the two must happen. The people must serve the purposes of PARTY, or the PARTY must emerge in the mightiness of the people, and Hercules will THEN lean on his club!" How flattering to the WHIGS! whose fate, as we have often had occasion to observe, is to be equally reprobated and distrusted by all parties!

When the plan of the Rebellion was sufficiently matured by the multiplication of branch associations, and the accession of numbers to the secret union, the mask of REFORM was thrown off. NAPPER TANDY considers a reform in Parliament indeed, UPON THE PLAN OF OUR PRESENT REFORMERS, sufficient "TO ATCHIEVE EVERY THING!" "The people when thus collected," he says, "would feel their own weight, and secure THAT POWER to which they are acknowledged to have a right." In the year 1796 the "Civil Union" for Parliamentary Reform was regularly organized into a Military Confederacy, for REVOLUTIONIZING THE GOVERNMENT, and establishing a REPUBLIC, by ARTHUR O'CONNOR, LORD EDWARD FITZGERALD, MAC NEVIN, and the other associated leaders.

In answer to a question before the Lords' Committee, put to DR. MAC NEVIN, "Whether the people were interested in, or cared about a REFORM IN PARLIAMENT, he answered—"I am sure they do not—but they wish much to be relieved from the payment of tythes." In answer to a similar question to COUNSELLOR EMMETT (who was afterwards executed for high treason), he says—"I believe the mass of the people do not care a feather for CATHOLIC EMANCIPATION, neither did they care for PARLIAMENTARY REFORM, UNTIL IT WAS EXPLAINED TO THEM as leading to OTHER OBJECTS."

After having admitted that the rebel leaders could only induce the people to press for PARLIAMENTARY REFORM as the means of abolishing tythes, this man goes on to say, for his own part—"I am very sure, if tythes were abolished, the people, on taking new leases, would be obliged to pay more in proportion for land than they now pay for tythes. MY WISH WAS TO DESTROY THE ESTABLISHED CHURCH, AND TO HAVE NO CHURCH ESTABLISHMENT. The people WERE ALWAYS TAUGHT TO CONSIDER, THAT WHEN THEY BECAME MEMBERS OF A DEMOCRACY, THEIR CONDITION WOULD BE BETTERED!"

OLIVER BOND, one, we repeat, of the intended Directory under the new Republic, in association with that open, candid, and "peculiarly high-minded" WHIG, MR. ARTHUR O'CONNOR, in answer to some questions touching the establishment of the "IRISH UNION," observes, that "it was originally instituted in 1791 for the purpose of REFORM—CATHOLIC EMANCIPATION WAS A MERE PRETENCE!"—This is a BODY OF EVIDENCE from the FOUNTAIN-HEAD, from the main spring of all that had been, and all that remained to be done. He is again asked—"Do you think the mass of the people care for PARLIAMENTARY REFORM?" He answers—"I believe that the mass of the people did not care for PARLIAMENTARY REFORM—but THOSE WHO THOUGHT FOR THEM DID!!"

DR. MAC NEVIN is again asked respecting the oath to be taken to the "Secret Inquisition," the members of which were always concealed from the eyes of THE PEOPLE, upon whom their agents were acting. He states that the original oath, which bound them to secure a "fair and equal representation of the people in Parliament," was, after the organization had been completed, repeated under a new form, by SIMPLY OMITTING the word PARLIAMENT, or "THE COMMONS HOUSE OF PARLIAMENT!"—"Why," he is further asked, "was this omission made?" He answers—"TO RECONCILE REFORMERS AND REPUBLICANS; AND BECAUSE THEY had given up all IDEA OF REFORM, AND WERE DETERMINED ON REPUBLICANISM!!" Now, let it never be forgotten that O'CONNOR, his brother, MACNEVIN, EMMET, and LORD EDWARD FITZGERALD, were all PROFESSING WHIGS—were all hailed and joined in fellowship with the party, as Constitutional Brethren; and were, with them, the supporters of the SOVEREIGNTY OF THE PEOPLE, and joint advocates of PARLIAMENTARY REFORM and CATHOLIC EMANCIPATION!—that they CREATED, and were not INSTIGATED by, popular demands;—that they excited, and did not follow, a POPULAR CRY;—that the WHIGS then, as at the present period, (although we have since seen the country rise to a height and elevation of glory, and a redundancy of prosperity unknown to any former period of our history,) with the same party, and the same associates, laboured to prove to the people that they were impoverished, oppressed, ruined, and trampled on, and that nothing but REFORM in the Government, or, in other words, (as they have proved themselves) REVOLUTION, could restore men to their rights, and the hereditary privileges of Britons!

They pledged their honours—their characters—their souls, to their countrymen, that they were so fallen, degraded, and corrupted, that nothing but a REFORM, under their own auspices, could possibly redeem them;—they prophecied amidst the gloom of impending rebellion, and during ACTUAL MUTINY in the Fleet, which seemed ready to realize the patriotic vision. But when THEY DESPAIRED, their competitors ACTED; and the bitterness of their invectives increased in proportion as the British Councils advanced to their lofty ascendancy in the scale of European Powers; till, galled into an unnatural league and alliance with the very man who had overthrown all the Republican theories they had taken so much pains to weave and to adorn, they became the eycophants and advocates of a tyrant, who, in the height of his phrenzied ambition, had sworn the destruction of THEIR COUNTRY, and has left posthumous proofs of the sincerity of his intentions!

They calumniate when they know they are secure from retort, and aim the coward blow which they are aware cannot be returned. They charge corruption and incapacity upon the purest and the most successful Administration that ever held rule in the country; and would rob the heroes who have restored peace to Europe of the meed they have so gloriously obtained. Not satisfied with this, (as if they feared to be misunderstood—as if those who run could not read ENVY, in broad characters, displayed throughout this system of "hatred and malice,") there is not a traitor, an apostate, a criminal, if his crimes and treachery are directed against "the Powers that be," to whom they have not extended the hand of fellowship, or the patronage of their authority. From ARTHUR O'CONNOR down to THISTLEWOOD, from a direct advocacy of crime, to a lenient toleration for error or rashness, they have neither shewn abhorrence at the guilt of others, nor felt remorse at their own glaring and repeatedly-detected delinquency. They could sympathize with the Derby traitors, but shed not a tear over an assassinated Premier. They could expatiate upon a Milan Commission for the detection of adultery, but they turned with indifference from the details of a Cato-street conspiracy, carried on for a general massacre! They could term the murder of a MARIE ANTOINETTE an act of patriotism, and the trial of a CAROLINE one of cruel persecution! They, in fine, can agree in common with ARTHUR O'CONNOR—as his patriotic Directory upon the great Constitutional questions which involve the very existence of the country, on the foundations laid by our forefathers, and in the face of the evidence, acknowledgment, and taunts of avowed and convicted traitors—that both REFORM IN PARLIAMENT and ROMAN CATHOLIC EMANCIPATION are the mere watchwords and cloak of INSURRECTION, REVOLUTION, and BLOODSHED, they are, to this hour, urging them BOTH forward, and by the same means—by the actual agency of similar intrigues—and by the same scandalous appeals to the PASSIONS OF AN IGNORANT MULTITUDE, as in the period to which we have just referred.

Can our suspicions—our dread—our misgivings, with respect to such men, be called illiberal—or can we be too firmly on our guard against their active enterprizes, whether we consider them acting under the illusions of vanity, or impelled by motives of a more criminal nature? —What satisfaction will it be, in the hour of ruin and anarchy, to be told, that the "intentions of such men were pure?" Shall we be redeemed from the horrors of the storm, and the deluge of blood, by the weeping and wailing of these first victims to their own intemperate or criminal excesses?—Shall we the less escape the assassin's knife, or check the devouring flame, when it has penetrated the vitals of the Constitution, because fools or knaves, who mis-calculated their powers, or over-leaped the bounds they originally presented to themselves, have furnished the weapon, and lighted up the fire-brand?—Rather, will not our inertness—our slavish dependence upon professions, which at every step betray their insincerity—our silent acquaintance with the progress of opinions, which, from without and within, are pouring through a thousand channels, and penetrating, in every direction, among the masses of the ignorant and irritable rabble?—Will not our weakness, folly, and short-sightedness, rise up in judgment against us, and leave us to the bitter reflection, that WE ONLY HAVE BEEN TO BLAME?

There is no political axiom more universally applicable, than that "WHEN bad men combine the good must unite." So far from encouraging the clamour against Orange Societies, or Constitutional Associations, in times like the present, I firmly believe, that as in the first great struggle of this country with Jacobinical principles, we owed our safety, under Providence, to such associations—so, in the present crisis, the Government will require all the aid and influence of the expressed sentiments, and personal co-operation of the loyal and well disposed portion of the country, including all that is elevated in principle, and powerful in the possession of talent and property—to check the accumulating MASSES OF TREASON and INFIDELITY, which are in advance upon the CITADEL OF OUR RIGHTS and LIBERTIES, under the insidious covert of REFORM IN PARLIAMENT—and ROMAN CATHOLIC EMANCIPATION!

PAUL POTTER.

TO JOHN BULL.

SIR—To assist the cause you purpose advocating next week, I have extracted from a Book of Rates, published by ANTHONY EGANE, late Confessor General of the kingdom of Ireland, the form of absolution, and some few of the dispensations, with the prices attached to them:—

"OF MARRIAGES.

"For legitimating of children that shall be born of a conjunction in the 4th degree £19 0 10

"DISPENSATION FOR WILFUL MURDER.

"If a Friar or guardian of a Monastery kills a man, it will be £40 9 0

"Dispensation and pardon for Bishops, or Abbotts, or such Prelates £50 12 6

"For Priests and ordinary Clergymen . . . 40 10 0

"A Layman, having murdered a Priest, shall be pardoned for £6 2 0

"DISPENSATION FOR HERETICS.

"If be be a Layman, and that the Bull containeth an absolution of infamy, he is to pay £12 3 6

"DISPENSATION AND PARDON FOR IRREGULARITIES.

"If there be a general absolution from all sin, it is £8 19 0

"But if the Bull contains a general absolution for all sins past, or for sins not yet committed, and also for all sorts of irregularities, it will cost £50 12 6

"An absolution for one that keeps a we at bed and board, with a dispensation to hold a benefice . . . £4 5 6

"DISPENSATION FOR OATHS.

"For an oath that cannot be kept without incurring everlasting damnation; as, for example, a dishonest vow, or some wicked promise; a dispensation will cost £6 2 0

"LICENCES AND DISPENSATION FOR INDULGENCIES.

"A licence for an Abbess and three or four of her Nuns, together with so many jocund Friars, to go abroad in the country, to see some lands and tenements belonging to the Mother Abbess, and there to recreate themselves for a week or two, will cost £24 6 0

"They may stay a little longer, provided they go always bini and bini, that is to say, two and two; and they are to have a great care, least they may give any bad example; and if they do not live caste, that is, chaste, at least let them live caute, that is, warily.

"THE ABSOLUTION.

"Our Lord Jesus Christ absolve thee, and by virtue of the authority that I hold, I do absolve thee—first, from all sorts of excommunications, whether great or small. If the penitent be a clerk, he must say, 'from all sorts of suspensions and interdicts,' (if by chance you have incurred any)—then I absolve thee from all thy sins, and from all sins and torments due to thee in purgatory for thy sins and transgressions; and I receive thee into the union and participation of the Church; and by virtue of a special authority to me committed, I restore thee into that innocency in which thou hast been when thou wert baptized; and if thou die not at this time, I reserve to thee this grace to the hour of thy death, in the name of the Father, &c. by the merits and passions of our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ, and the merits of the ever blessed Virgin Mary, and of all the Saints and Virgins, that whatsoever sins thou hast committed, and whatsoever injuries thou patiently hath suffered, let them be unto thee a remission of thy sins, and an augmentation to grace, and a premium of life everlasting. Amen: peace be with you!"

If you think these extracts will be of any use, you may serve them up as you please.—I am, Sir, your CONSTANT READER.

TO JOHN BULL.

SIR,—Having been an eye witness to the horrid scenes which took place in St. Domingo, immediately upon the promulgation of the Decree of the National Assembly of France, for emancipating the slaves in that island, they have made such a lasting impression upon me, that I cannot refrain from calling your attention to the petitions which are now presenting to our House of Commons upon the same subject.

I therefore address to you (the staunch supporters of right, justice, and real liberty,) the following letter, dictated by the honest feelings of my heart; and as I do not pretend to any merit of diction, leave it, and the subject, to your judgment, to do with it as to you may appear most fitting.—AN OLD SOLDIER.

It appears upon the notices of Parliamentary proceedings to be brought forward after the recess, that MR. FOWELL BUXTON is to present a petition to the House of Commons from the Society of Quakers, praying the House will take into its consideration, and exert its utmost power to abolish slavery in every situation in which the British dominions may be concerned; and thereby lay a basis for the entire annihilation of that state of society over the whole world. And it also appears that MR. WILBERFOACE (whose exertions, during so many years, were made in alleviating the condition of slaves, and finally succeeded in doing away with the Slave Trade,) has promised to support the petitions with his whole weight and abilities. It is reported that in his Speech on the notices given of the petitions, after highly approving of its principles, he went on to remind the House of the many years which had passed since he first had the honour of presenting a petition for the abolition of the Slave Trade, which, after persevering in Session after Session, he at length had the satisfaction to accomplish. And concluded, by observing, "Who could tell but that on this very night he might have had the good fortune to lay the foundation stone of that fabric, which might ultimately prove the subversion of slavery over the whole world?" On which, I observe, It is true MR. WILBERFORCE may have laid on that night the foundation of liberty in the British colonies. But has MR. WILBERFORCE maturely considered the whole extent of the question? Has he calculated the evils which may proceed from even the mere surmise of a subject he has pledged himself to advocate with his whole abilities? Has he called to his recollection the result of a measure of a similar nature, which was proposed and carried in the National Assembly at the commencement of the French Revolution? Has he ever read and pondered over the effects of that proposal in the Island of St. Domingo? If he has, let him pore and calculate on the chances of the same atrocities happening in the colonies of his own country. Let him recollect, that the proposal alone in the National Assembly of France acted with the promptitude of lightning, and was the death warrant of almost every white inhabitant in that island.

Let him recall to his mind, before he acts, that St. Domingo presents, at this moment, to the British Islands, the picture of an independent colony of blacks, founded upon murders, and almost unheard of and unprecedented atrocities; that this kingdom so established is almost within sight of Jamaica; that Jamaica, independent of the revolutionary principles to be found amongst a proportion of its white population, contains, in her Maroon towns, an immediate rallying point for the factious of all colours. This premised, does MR. WILBERFORCE—(for I have nothing to do with MR. FOWELL BUXTON)—does MR. WILBERFORCE suppose that the black population of our colonies will be contented to work on, and wait patiently for the emancipation he have such a stake in view will quietly and orderly follow that line of conduct MR. WILBERFORCE may prescribe to them, and leave their greatest and dearest object to chance, time, and uncertainty, when, from their overpowering numbers, the assistance they would immediately receive, both from within and without, and the opinions of part of the British Legislators, they may at one blow make themselves masters of it; and to strike which blow, a precedent is already before their eyes in St. Domingo?—No: I would fain hope MR. WILBERFORCE has not maturely considered the probable effects of the question he has taken in hand—(and though every one, with himself, must deplore the continuance of that state of slavery, which, notwithstanding, has existed since the commencement of the world, and which, though it has not received the sanction of our [illegible] yet has not been decried by him, or even mentioned [illegible] will upon taking a second view of it, leave it, at all [illegible] eventful period, to sink into that oblivion it is now [illegible] any exertions of the Members who have given the [illegible] ward. Should this not be the case, I must ascribe [illegible] mark, other causes for agitating this most important [illegible] present moment—causes which induced the National [illegible] adopt the same course and opinions, detestable in a [illegible] under the benign influence of the British Constitution.

Since writing this, I see SIR ROBERT WILSON has presented a petition from some of his constituents—others will follow [illegible] quarter, and the mischief so much to be dreaded may [illegible] fore even the decision of the House upon it can reach the [illegible]

Bath, 30th March, 1823.

TO JOHN BULL.

SIR,—It was with great pleasure we read the account in [illegible] of Monday last, of the clerical meeting at Thirsk, and [illegible] vinced you will be equally desirous with ourselves to correct [illegible] we observed in it, (and you may depend upon the [illegible] ment,) we cannot refrain from informing you that it was a [illegible] of the clergy of the whole North Riding of Yorkshire, but [illegible] of the Archdeaconry of Cleveland; that the counter-address [illegible] of the Roman Catholic Claims was proposed by the Rev. [illegible] SMITH, and not by MR. ARCHDEACON WRANGHAM, who [illegible] chair, but who gave it his strenuous support; and that it was [illegible] diately afterwards publicly announced as remaining at [illegible] signatures of the clergy of the Diocese of York.

We wish you merely to make these corrections in your [illegible] correspondents in the manner you think best, but [illegible] siderable importance that these facts should be made public [illegible] not withhold them from you, and remain Sir, your constant [illegible]

London, April 8, 1823. F. L.

In the Surrey Sheriff's Court on Monday last, a writ of [illegible] was executed before the Under Sheriff and a Jury of the [illegible] assess the damages in an action brought by Mr. Fyshe Palm[illegible] ber for Reading, against Captain N. B. Bull, formerly [illegible] the King of the Netherlands steam-packet, for a libel pub[illegible] him in the John Bull newspaper of the 18th of August, [illegible] fendant had suffered judgment to go by default. The [illegible] mages were laid at 200l. This soon the Jury gave the plaintiff [illegible]

On Wednesday se'nnight Harriet Gough, housekeeper to [illegible] berts, of Kemerton, near Tewkesbury, hung herself to the [illegible] with a shawl. An inquest was held on the body, and a verdict [illegible] of—"Insanity." She had confided in a villain, who obtained [illegible] her all her money, and the best of her clothes, abandoned her, [illegible] left her destitute. Her former conduct, however, was a sufficient [illegible] commendation to obtain for her the situation she filled at the [illegible] her death; but her mind was not strong enough to enable her to [illegible] tend with the bitter reflections caused by the error into which she had been enticed.

One of the Portsmouth waggons was robbed on Monday last, on the road near that place, of several hundred weight of clothing. The robbery was effected by a gang of 16 thieves. Eight men were apprehended, with the waggoner, on suspicion; about 60 dollars have been discovered in a stable at the Green Man, near Guildford, and a large sum buried under a turf on Godalming Peasemarsh.

W. Harris, a convicted felon, now confined in the gaol of Dartmouth, has confessed that he was concerned with Hussey, another man, of the name of Lee, in the murder of Mr. Bird and his housekeeper, at Greenwich, about five years ago: and he has also stated he was concerned in the murder of Lieut. Johnson, on the Deptford-road, about 14 years ago.

A respectably dressed woman was taken out of the Thames, at Westminster Bridge on Thursday morning, and by proper means her suspended animation was restored, after she had been more than 20 minutes under water. A. Briggs, a lighterman, saw her throw herself in, and with assistance got her out. She is the wife of a [illegible] at Westminster, and had left her home more than a week.

On Monday, as Sir Charles Bamfylde was passing along Manchester-square, about half past four, he was shot at by a man, who, after drawing another pistol from his pocket, placed the muzzle in his mouth, and blew the upper part of his head away. The latter fell at Sir Charles's side, but supposed not to be mortal, as he was able to walk home, stemming the blood with his handkerchief. The Coroner's Jury have returned a verdict of felo de se against the suicide.

On Tuesday night, Mrs. Richards, who resided near the Asylum chapel at Clapham, was found murdered; she had only one female domestic, who happened to be out, and on her return, about half-past eight in the evening, she found her mistress lying dead on the floor; her head was dreadfully fractured from the repeated blows she had received from a poker which lay near the body, and her mouth was stuffed with a handkerchief. Every part of the house was ransacked, and several articles were missing, amongst which was her gold watch. A vestry meeting was called, and 50l. was offered for the discovery of the murderers.—A Coroner's Jury have returned a verdict of—"Wilful murder against some person or persons unknown."

At the Bristol Assizes, Thomas Day, aged 64, a Dissenting Preacher, was found guilty of bigamy, and sentenced to be transported for seven years.

At the Gloucester Assizes, David Pennington was indicted for having a bill of exchange for 100l. and defrauding Messrs. Morris of the sum. The prosecutor presented the bill at Messrs. Morris's bank in that city to be discounted, and obtained the money, saying he was Osborn, and residing at No. 10, Charles-square, Hoxton. In his defence, he said he received the bill from his father, and he gave him the money. The Jury found him guilty of uttering, but recommended him to mercy, believing his father had influenced him to commit the crime.

At the Taunton Assizes, Elizabeth Bryant, the mother, and Elizabeth Bryant the younger, aged 22, and Jane Bryant, aged 20, the two daughters, were then charged with having maliciously assaulted Anne Burgess. The parties resided at Wiveliscombe, and the prosecutrix was a very aged woman. The elder prisoner was a married woman, residing in the same neighbourhood. She had two daughters, who lived with her, two of whom were the prisoners at the bar. One of these had been afflicted by fits, and the mother applied for advice to a reputed sorceror, or conjuror, named Baker. The fellow advised her that her daughter was bewitched by a particular person in their neighbourhood, and the wretched prisoners were mutually possessed with the notion, that, to dissipate the charm effectually, it was necessary to draw blood from the witch! The prosecutrix was fixed upon as the witch, and as such published throughout the town of Wiveliscombe by the elder prisoner, who positively swore that her daughter had been bewitched by her for more than nine months! The reputed witch, Anne Burgess, a fine, hale-looking woman, 68 years of age, deposed—I know the prisoners, mother and the two daughters. They live about a quarter of a mile from me. On the 26th of Nov. I went to her house (Mrs. Bryant's) and met her in the passage, which is dark. I said "Betty Bryant, I want to ask you a civil question, whether I bewitched your daughter?" She said "Yes, you have, you d—d old witch, you have bewitched her for the last twelve months;" and she said she was [illegible] the worse, and she would be totally d—d if she would not kill me. The girls came out together and fell upon me. The little daughter drew a knife, arm and held it, whilst one of the others cut at it. The elder girl then said, "Bring me a knife that we may cut the flesh off the witch's bones." They tore my arms all over with an iron nail. The woman here described the manner in which the prisoners performed the operation. She was ill from the wounds on her arm; there was a woman who accompanied witness came in and dragged her away from their fury. Witness and her friend cried out murder, and a mob assembled in the street around the door, but they did not choose to interfere, as it was exclaimed that the old woman, on whom the prisoners were exercising their fury, was a witch. Two of the prisoners, the mother and the eldest daughter, continued to hold the old woman as she struggled on the ground for her life (as she expressed it), whilst the younger daughter, with the first instrument which came to her hand, a large nail, lacerated her arm in a dreadful manner. This was done nearly ten minutes, the mob standing by nearly the whole of the time. The apprentice to Mr. North, surgeon at Wiveliscombe, deposed that on the night in question the prosecutrix came to him to dress her arm, which he found dreadfully lacerated. There were fifteen or sixteen incisions upon it, of about a quarter of an inch deep, and others of eighth of an inch. They were from two to three inches and a half long. She bled very profusely. Witness dressed her arm, and as she was very healthy, it got well fast. She was for more than a month, in consequence of the attack, [illegible] still bound up. The Jury found them Guilty, and the Court sentenced them to be imprisoned four months in the County Gaol.

DESCRIPTION LIBRARY, 27, Old Bond-street, London.—MR. SHERS begs leave respectfully to announce that he has greatly ex- ded the arrangements at his British and Foreign Library, so that the follow- ns are accommodations are derived by Subscribers to his Establishment: 1. Every subscriber is entitled to the IMMEDIATE PERUSAL of the NEW PUBLI- ONS, &c. 2. The Proprietor engages to purchase for Subscribers any works ecial interest that may not have been previously added to the Library.— Subscribers have the right of choosing from a most extensive collection of ellent works in the various branches of English, French, and Italian Literature. 4. Subscribers are admitted to the use of a costly series of ings, embellished with highly finished and coloured Engravings, which ain, in a beautiful manner the History, Antiquities, Costumes, Sports, ures, &c. of the Ancient and Modern World; together with Maps and At- ses, &c. 5. Catalogues, with terms, to be had on application.—Books regu- ly forwarded to all parts of the United Kingdom and the Continent.

Just published, in 1 vol. 12mo. price 7s. 6d. boards,

ADVICE to YOUNG MOTHERS on the PHYSICAL EDU- CATION OF CHILDREN. By a GRANDMOTHER.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

"This book is really what it professes to be—the Work of an old Woman,— ntains, chiefly, to instruct young Mothers, how to prevent, rather what to cure, the Diseases of Children, and the Observations and Advice are the ult of the Author's own Experience."—Preface.

SCIENTIFIC INFORMATION FOR YOUTH.

Just published, a New Edition, with additions and improvements, in 6 vols. price 15s. half-bound,

SCIENTIFIC DIALOGUES, intended for the Instruction and Amusement of Young People; in which the First Principles of Natural and Experimental Philosophy are fully explained. Comprising Mechanics, As- tronomy, Pneumatics, Optics, Electricity, and Gal- vanism. Illustrative of the Works of Nature and Art. By the Rev. JOSEPH JOYCE.—London: Printed for Baldwin, Cra- dock, and Joy, Paternoster-row; and R. Hunter, St. Paul's Church-yard. By the same Author,

1. A COMPANION to the SCIENTIFIC DIALOGUES: or, the Tutor's As- sistant, or Pupil's Manual in Natural and Experimental Philosophy; containing a Complete Set of Questions, and other Exercises, for the Examination of the Scientific Dialogues and forming a Seventh Volume of that Work. 2. To which is added, A Compendium of the principal Facts under each Depart- ment of Science. 5s. 6d. half-bound.

3. DIALOGUES on CHEMISTRY, intended for the Instruction and Enter- tainment of Young People; in which the first Principles of that Science are fully explained, with Questions for the Examination of Pupils. In 2 volumes, 12mo. 9s. half-bound. A New Edition, carefully corrected according to the latest improvements in the Science.

4. DIALOGUES on the MICROSCOPE, intended for the Instruction and Entertainment of Young People, desirous of investigating the Wonders of the minute Parts of the Creation: containing an Account of the Principles of the Construction and Management of the most improved and fashionable Microscopes; illustrated with Ten Plates, in 2 vols. 12mo. price 9s. half-bound.

5. LETTERS on NATURAL and EXPERIMENTAL PHILOSOPHY, ad- dressed to a Youth setting in the Metropolis. In 12mo. with 17 Plates, price 9s. The Second Edition, much enlarged and improved.

6. The CATECHISM of NATURE; for the use of Children. By Dr. Mar- tin, Professor of Philosophy at Zutphen. Corrected and much enlarged, by Rev. J. Joyce.

"Read Nature; Nature is a friend to Truth."

The Twelfth Edition, corrected and improved, price only 1s.

Just published, in 8vo. price 13s. boards,

HIGHWAYS and BY-WAYS; or, Tales of the Road-side, picked up in the French Provinces. By a WALKING GENTLEMAN.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave Maria-lane.

There is a great deal of vivacity and humour, as well as pathos, in these Tales, and they are told with a power of national character; painting that picture more vividly from long residence in France, and from habits of social converse with the unsophisticated and country part of the French community, whom the English traveller seldom gives himself the trouble of getting ac- quainted.—New Monthly Magazine, April 1, 1823.

Just published, in 12mo. price 3s. 6d. boards,

THE CURATE'S DAUGHTER. A Tale for Young Persons. By MARY MULLION.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave Maria-

Just published, in 12mo. price 3s. 6d. boards, a New Edition of THE GREAT DUTY of SELF-RESIGNATION to the DIVINE WILL. By the late pious and learned JOHN WORTHINGTON, D.D. formerly of Lincoln. A New Edition, corrected and improved from the Au- thor's MSS. by his Son, John Worthington, A.M. To which is prefixed, a Character of Dr. Worthington, by Archbishop Tillotson.—Published by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave Maria-lane; and Longman and Co. Paternoster-row, Rivington and Parry and Son, Bristol

DR. WILSON PHILIP ON INDIGESTION.

Just published, third edition. 8vo. price 9s. boards,

TREATISE on INDIGESTION and its CONSEQUENCES, called Nervous and Bilious complaints: with Observations on the Organic causes in which they sometimes terminate.—By A. P. W. PHILIP, M.D. F.R.S. &c. &c. Third edition, with some additional observations. Printed for Longman and Co. Paternoster-row; and George Underwood, 32, Fleet-street.

BALLINGALL ON DISEASES OF INDIA.

Just published, second edition, 8vo. price 9s.

PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS on FEVER, DYSENTERY, and LIVER COMPLAINTS, as they occur among the European Troops in India; illustrated by numerous Tables and Cases, to which is annexed an improved Treatise on Cholera.—By GEORGE BALLINGALL, M.D. F.R.S.E. &c. &c.—Printed for G. Underwood, 32, Fleet-street, and Adam Black, Edinburgh.

NAPOLEON.—Fifth Edition.—Just published, in 2 vols. 8vo. with Portraits of Napoleon, dedicated by permission to Lady Holland, the Fifth Edition of NAPOLEON IN EXILE; or, a Voice from St. Helena. The Opinions and Reflections of Napoleon on the most important events of his own Government, in his own words. By BARRY E. O'MEARA, ESQ. his late Surgeon.—Printed for W. Simpkin and R. Marshall, Stationers' Hall- court, Ludgate-street; and sold by John Anderson, Jun. North Bridge-street, Edinburgh.

In a few days, An ANSWER to the Calumnious Attack of the Quarterly Re- view, by Mr. O'Meara.

Speedily will be published, in 3 vols. 12mo.

MORGAN GILHAIZE, or the COVENANTERS. By the Au- thor of "Annals of the Parish," "Sir Andrew Wylie," "The Entail," &c.

"The ordinances of torture and in death,—

"Three on Traditions's tongue still live, these shall

"To History's honest page be pictured bright

"To latest times."—Grahame's Sabbath.

Printed for Oliver and Boyd, Edinburgh; and G. and W. B. Whittaker, London.

In a few days will be published, a New and Improved Edition of MAWE'S DESCRIPTIVE, TRAVELLER, and SCHREIBER'S GUIDE down the RHINE.—Printed for Samuel Leigh, 18, Strand; and Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy, Paternoster-row. Of whom may be had,

MAWE'S NEW PICTURE of LONDON for 1823.

WALKER AND RUSSELL'S NEW SYSTEM OF ARITHMETIC.

Just published, price 3s. bound,

A NEW SYSTEM of ARITHMETIC, on a Plan entirely ori- ginal, calculated to abridge the labour of the Tutor very considerably, and facilitate the progress of the Pupil. By J. WALKER. With an Appendix, by J. RUSSELL.

AN EXPOSITION of the SYSTEM is printed and sold at 2s. sealed up; and will be delivered only to Schoolmasters or Teachers, who apply per- sonally or by Letter addressed to the publisher.

WALKER'S NEW CIPHERING BOOK, on the same System. Part I. price 1s. 6d. containing the Simple Rules; neatly printed in Script, on fine foolscap 4to.

WALKER'S NEW CIPHERING BOOK. Part II. containing the Com- pound Rules, printed uniformly with the above, price 4s.

Part III. is in the Press, and will be published, by J. Souter, at the School Library, 73, St. Paul's Church-yard, in a few days.

AN ANALYSIS of PENMANSHIP; or NEW BRITISH PENMAN- SHIP, exemplified in one Hundred Plates, with Observations on the Formation of each Letter; together with a Description of the Text Alphabet, and some Specimens of Writing.—For the Use of Schools and Young Persons. Dedicated to W. Thomson, Esq. W.M. A. Master of the Academy, Brentford, Butts. Oblong 8vo. half- bound, 5s.

THE PROJECTION of the Text Alphabet, separate. By the same, 4to. 1s. 6d. For English authors; each sufficient to fill a page in the Copy-Book, so that every copy has every writing; and each will be found to convey some A VARIETY of NEW COPY SLIPS, comprising Select Sentences from the Sacred Writings, Moral Precepts, Proverbs, &c. &c. Price 6d.

WHITTINGHAM'S DIAMOND SHARPSEARE.—In one Pocket Volume, price One Guinea in extra boards,

THE DRAMATIC WORKS of WILLIAM SHAK- SPEARE, complete in one pocket volume, being the smallest, neatest, and most correct one inch in thickness.—Chiswick: printed by C. Whit- tingham Tegg, Cheapside; Rodwell and Martin, Bond-street; and all Booksellers.

MEMOIRS OF HOWARD.—In 1 large volume 8vo. price 15s. with two highly-coloured Portraits, a 2d Edition, with additions and Corrections,

MEMOIRS of the Public and Private Life of JOHN HOWARD the Philanthropist; compiled from his own Diary, in the possession of the Executors, and from his confidential Letters; the communications of his surviving Re- lations and friends; and other authentic sources of information. By J. B. Brown, LL.D. of the Inner Temple, Barrister at Law.

"Remember them bound with them as bleased him, and when the eye saw him it gave witness to him. Because he delivered the poor that cried, and the father- less, and him that had none to help him."—Job, xxix. 11. 12.

Printed for J. and G. Underwood, Fleet-street; T. Tegg, No. 111, Cheapside; and F. Wrigley, Stationers'-court.

GENTLEMEN'S SUPERFINE BEAVER HATS.—RICHARD HITCHIN, Hat Maker, now offers to the Fashionable World some of the best GENTLEMEN'S BEAVER HATS ever presented to public inspection, now selling on the most moderate terms. Also a genteel assortment of Ladies' and Children's Bonnets, trimmed in the most fashionable style.—23, King-street, Covent garden, corner of King-street and New street.

IMPROVED SPECTACLES.—G. SCOTT, Optical and Mathe- matical Instrument Maker, removed from Butcher-hall-lane, to 98, New- gate-street, invites inspection to his extensive and superior assortment of SPECTACLES, adapted with the greatest accuracy, to near and distant sight. Also a great variety of glasses for the assistance and protection of weak sight. Persons should observe, that using improper glasses, or neglecting their use when requisite, are both hurtful to the eyes, and equally to the absurd notion of Optical and Mathematical Instruments of the best workmanship on the lowest terms.

CARPET WAREHOUSE, 32, Berners-street.—The Nobility and Gentry are respectfully informed that a large supply of very superior TURKEY CARPETS are just received, and that any size may be had, war- ranted free from moth or wear damage, on such terms as cannot be under- sive choice of the best manufactured Brussels, at low prices. Amongst which are quantities at 4s. 3d. and 4s. 6d. per yard, every other kind of Carpeting at the same rate. C. Hindley, Manufacturer, 32, Berner-street, Oxford-street.

ECONOMY in UPHOLSTERY and CABINET FURNITURE. —Ladies wishing to make up their own Curtains, Draperies, &c. may have them cut out by J. PORTER, 25, Welbeck-street, and every part so explained that they may make them up in the most fashionable manner, with the greatest ease, and at a very moderate expense. J. P. feels confident, from his practical knowledge of the business, and particularly of Design and Drawing, that his Work will be found neat and elegant. He manufactures every article in the Cabinet and Chair line, and from the late fall in men's wages, wood, &c. is enabled to offer them at very Low Prices. Curtains lined and modernized. Mattresses, Sofas, and Chairs re-stuffed. Estimates of Prices, &c. made out on the shortest notice.—An Apprentice wanted.

AN ADVANTAGEOUS OFFER.—To be DISPOSED OF, a well established PROVINCIAL NEWSPAPER, together with the ge- neral business of a Printing Office, Bookseller's Shop, &c. in one of the most opulent and respectable mercantile and manufacturing towns in the kingdom. The circulation of the paper is good and of the first respectability, and the ad- vertising extensive; the book-work and jobbing department is very lucrative. The business is highly profitable, and each branch rapidly in- creasing, and capable of still further extension; able hands are ready for superintending and conducting the various departments, and the founts of type and other materials are sufficiently extensive to execute work of every descrip- tion in the printing business.—N.B. The above presents an opportunity but rarely to be met with, and the only reason for the disposal of such an eligible concern is the death of the proprietor, and his not having left any relative to carry it on. Address, post paid, to the initials, to H. L. care of Messrs. New- ton and Co. country pew-paper office, 5, Warwick-square, Newgate-st. London

ESTABLISHED a quarter of a Century, under the highest pa- tronage, and has obtained a preference over every other house for the improved British Cassed Lace. Nobility and foreigners of distinction are respectfully solicited to inspect a large collection of superb colonade dresses, mantillas, scarfs, and veils of the most beautiful patterns and designs, and of greater durability than foreign, being in great demand for home and continental costume; also an unequalled collection of Honiton trimming and trimming laces; likewise a few great bargains in black Chantilly and sprigged lace dresses, with a numerous assortment of lace caps, dress bodies, sleeves, ruffs, and French blonde scarfs, surprisingly cheap, at Perkins's original manufactory, 236, High Holborn, (late Forrest and Perkins).—N.B. Letters immediately attended to.

SHAWLS.—Five Thousand Pounds worth, just purchased, at nearly half price, has induced the Proprietor to make this addition to his previous large Stock, being the most sumptuous and splendid col- lection of any house in the kingdom, and at such prices as never before submitted to purchasers. Among the immense variety there are a great many at the most moderate prices, such as imitation Cachemere, two yds square, at 9s. to 11.; silk do. 10s. to 2l. 10s.; those at 30s. are beautiful, and the leading colours, viz. scarlet, crimson, blue, drab, green, and black, orange, and white grounds, at 30s. to 50s. are truly superb, positively worth from 5l. to 6l. The scarf shawls, which form an elegant square, are from 20s. to 4l.; those at 50s. are very beautiful, and such as are charged generally from 4l. to 5l.; with a great many others of the most costly description, rarely to be met with, all equally cheap. China Crape Shawls and Scarfs—this beautiful article to be had in all colours. Cloth shawls, handsomely bound and tasseled, 9s.; ermi- nette, seal wool, &c. in great variety, 18s.; Braganza shawls, 6s.; Zamora do. 15s.; Angola do. 12s. &c. &c.—To be had at ROBSON'S, 64, Oxford street, corner of Wells-street.

RICH SILKS, SHAWLS, and LACE, SELLING OFF.—HUB- BARD and Co. Silk Mercers and Lacemen to the Royal Family, an- nounce to the Nobility and Public, that their Lease, under which their House is expired, and in consequence of the necessity of rebuilding the premises, their fashionable Stock is Selling off considerably under prime cost. Rich Gros de Naples, figured silks and satins, striped sarsanets and lutestrings, the much admired Tartarian cashmeres, French merinos, levantines, poplins, taffetas, the new Cyprus crape, French gauze robes for ball dresses, white satins, and silk stockings. An immense stock of curious shawls of every description, superb lace dresses, scarfs, veils, handkerchiefs, nets, French lawns, bobbin nets, and beautiful muslin dresses of Moravian work, at half price; silk stockings 3s. per pair; beautiful French flowers, and splendid tulle dresses.—No patterns cut or parcels sent unless previously paid for.—Black bombazines, crapes, sarsnets, &c. for family mourning.—Spitalfields House, 12, Henrietta-street, Covent garden

DAMASK NAPKINS, 7s. 6d. per Dozen, and a Twenty Thousand Pounds Stock of RICH DAMASK and DOUBLE DAMASK TABLE LINEN, consisting of the richest and most superb patterns that can be produced amongst which are some curious Silesian damask of ancient designs, having been purchased quite out of the ordinary way, will be sold at nearly one half their real value, and we leave the proprietor a small profit; and as FILEY is determined to increase, by extensive trade, the high character for which he has for many years sus- tained it, he has purchased to-day the following very desirable articles: 2 yds. by 2 yds. each; do. yard and half long, 3s. 6d.; do. double damask table-cloths, yard and quarter long, 2s. 2d. each; do. yard and half long, 3s. 6d.; do. two yards long, 4s. 6d.; do. two yards and a half long, 5s. 6d.; do. double damask, 12s.; do. real German damask, 15s.; do. three yards long, 14s.; do. three yards and a half long, 16s.; do. four yards long, 22s. 6d.; do. four yards and a half long, 25s. 6d.; do. five yards long, 29s.; do. six yards long, 35s.; larger sizes equally cheap (all of the proper width, with damask napkins to match); 5,000 pieces of fine Irish linens; the strongest bird's eye, Irish sheetings, from 1s. to 3s. per yard, the great 19d. 20d. and 2s. are curiously fine for gentlemen's wear; mock Russia sheeting, 6s. 6d. per pair; real Russia do. 12s. 6d. per pair; strong Lancashire sheeting, 9d. per yard; very stout and fine do. 1s.; superior sheetings for families of distinction, from 20d. to 2s. 6d. per yard; real Russia sheeting, 2s. 6d. per yard, double width, which prevents the necessity of a seam; Irish sheeting, yard and quarter wide, 1s. 3d. per yard; fine do. 4s. 6d.; yard and half wide, 3s. 6d. per yard; fine do. 5s. 6d. per yard; Irish Hol- lands, yard and half wide, 3s. 6d. per yard (an article rarely to be met with, and sold at no other house lower than 7s. per yard.) Forty bales of India long cloth, containing 25 yards, for 10s.; a beautiful fine article, in real Madras cloth, 25 yards, for 20s.; families going abroad, especially to hot climates, will find this article really worth their notice; Marseilles quilts, three yards long, 15s.; each; counterpanes, 5s. and large size do. 6s. 6d. each; Witney blankets in every size, and fine Welsh flannels in every variety; fine calicoes 6d. per yard; Irish Hol- lands, yard and a half wide, 3s. 6d. per yard (an article rarely to be met with, and sold at no other house lower than 7s. per yard.) Forty bales of India long cloth, containing 25 yards, for 10s.; a beautiful fine article, in real Madras cloth, 25 yards, for 20s.; families going abroad, especially to hot climates, will find this article really worth their notice; Marseilles quilts, three yards long, 15s.; each; counterpanes, 5s. and large size do. 6s. 6d. each; Witney blankets in every size, and fine Welsh flannels in every variety; fine calicoes 6d. per yard; Irish Hol- lands, yard and a half wide, 3s. 6d. per yard; fine cambrics, 1s. per yard; fine dresses, 6d. each; a matchless selection of Moravian worked dresses, from 15s. to 20s. each; those at 25s. are positively worth 2 guineas; cambric handkerchiefs with borders, 1s. per dozen, and fine French cambrics, ditto, 2s. per dozen; 2,000 yards of rich Gros de Na- ples, 3s. 6d. per yard; good sarsnets, French width, 2s. 9d. per yard; and every article in silk mercery equally cheap. The country orders executed, without a remittance; but a per centage will be allowed on all purchases amounting to 20l. and upwards, at RILEY'S, 118, Oxford street.

THE CHASED SHEFFIELD PLATE COMPANY ESTA- BLISHED in LONDON.—In consequence of the nefarious trade that has of late years been carried on in Sheffield Plated Goods, and for which the most respectable house has uniformly been obtained, has induced the above, under the immediate patronage of some of the most distinguished families in the kingdom, to open a Warehouse on the most extensive scale, replete with every article of their own manufacture, where the Public are supplied in such terms as defy all competition. As Silver Refiners, they are enabled to purchase the raw material at the lowest possible price; and in order to guarantee the quality of their Goods, they have, at considerable expense, erected a Plated Factory, where every article is manufactured under their immediate inspection, as no where every article is manufactured under their immediate inspection, as no Shopkeeper can warrant those made by various Manufacturers, who, not being known to the Public, are only solicitous for the sale of their goods, regardless of their durability, many of their articles having been sold by Shopkeepers for Silver, without which are merely plated being struck in the same die as the silver, rendered them so similar as to deceive the most experienced judge. In order to prevent this imposition, the Company have adopted a mark, which, upon investigation, will be found to be the only one authorized by the Company. Army, Navy, and other Clubs, East India Captains, &c. fitting out for India, will find this a most desirable house to deal with, being perfectly conversant with the necessary requisites which constitute complete services, and can execute them with dispatch. Some of the most unique services both for Plate and Glass have had the honour of furnishing to their Majesties, and the Royal Family, in this country as well as on foreign stations. They therefore pledge them- selves to furnish articles to any given pattern full twenty per cent lower than any other house.—Warehouse, 64, Long-acre, corner of Charles-street.

DR. F. HAHNEMANN, to be consulted entirely for HYSTE- RICS and EPILEPSY, gives Notice, that (in case of security) he allows, after the performance of the Cure, two years prosperume, before requiring pay- ment for attendance or medicine. South Anne-street Dublin.

SMOKY FIRE-PLACES REMEDIED.—W. and M. FEETHAM, No. 9, Ludgate-hill, and 206, Oxford-street, beg leave to inform the Pub- lic, that they undertake to remedy the above evil, and by long practice and at- tention to this important object, with experienced and careful workmen, they flatter themselves they can effectually Remedy every description of Smoky Rooms, with little or no in- convenience to the family during the process. W. and M. F. beg the Public's attention to their Warm Air Stoves, with an increased draft, for halls, large rooms, &c. Likewise Warm Baths, on a convenient and approved plan, and their Attemperating Shower Bath, by the King's Patent.

IN SIX EASY LESSONS OF ONE HOUR EACH.—MR. BRADBURY, Private Tutor at Westminster School, solicits the attention of Ladies and Gentlemen to his unrivalled and infallible system of beautiful PEN- MANSHIP, whereby he pledges himself to teach persons of all ages to write with ease, elegance, and expedition, (whatever may be the deformity of their pre- sent writing) in six progressive Lessons. This system, as it equally promotes the attainment of a bold and masculine hand calculated for business, and of a light and graceful manuscript adapted to Ladies; also secures to the Pupil the certainty of writing straight, without lines, with wonderful dispatch and accuracy, and, more- over, will steady the hand of the most tremulous writer. Upwards of 2000 speci- mens, and numerous recommendatory letters may be seen, and references given to persons of the first distinction, some of whom are upwards of 50 years of age, Private attendance at Ladies and Gentlemen's residences attended at their option. A new and practical system of Short Hand, taught in a few lessons, so as to enable the writer to decipher what he has written with inconceivable ease.— Apply, (or direct, post paid) at the Academy, 464, Strand, near Charing Cross.

WRITING PAPER, of the best quality, made by the lastly celebrated J. WHATMAN, of Turkey Mill, to be sold at the following low prices:—Excellent copy 7d. the quire, or 11s. the ream; second laid post 9d. superfine thick 9d. and 1s. the quire, or 12s. 13s. 6d. and 17s. 6d. the ream; su- perfine Bath 9d. ditto, hot pressed, 10d. and 1s. the quire, or 13s. 6d. 15s. and 17s. 6d. the ream; very best thick Bath gilt, 1s. 1d. the quire, or 20s. the ream; good foolscap 1s. the quire, superfine 1s. 2d. and 1s. 4d. a quire, or 21s. and 25s. the ream; superfine large bank and 1s. the quire, or 18s. the ream; best thick laid brief 1s. 4d. the quire, or 25s. the ream; very good copy books 6d. per dozen; best sealing wax 4s. 6d. the lb. Also for sale, the new-invented Steel Nib Pen; it has the elasticity of the quill, with the durability of the steel pen, price 1s. 4d. each. Strong brown 8d. 10d. and 1s. 6d. small hand 9d. the quire; at H. and W. SMITH'S, 192, Strand, Second House from the Crown and Anchor Tavern.—Account Books made to order, of any size or pattern; Drawing Paper, and Bristol Boards, equally low in price.

CONSOLATION to the TREMULOUS WRITER.—The Public may look to this most singular and unique Invention with confidence as an inestimable source of comfort to those who experience any difficulties in the command of the pen, occasioned by tremour in nervous affection, heat of climate, agitation of spirits, excess or over-exertion, weakness from age or otherwise, injury of the thumb or fingers by sprain or otherwise, even to the loss of part. This happy relief exists in a little INSTRUMENT the appearance of which, when in use, escapes observation, is capable of giving firmness, confidence, and freedom, and cannot fail to assist the declining powers of a good penman, and materially improve the performance of a bad one. It is honoured by the patron- age and recommendation of Sir Astley Cooper, and other highly respectable pre- fessional Gentlemen, whose testimonies practice will prove its efficacy; and it has this advantage over all medicine, its power increases by use, and one prescrip- tion will last for life. Made in elastic gold, price 25s. each.—Sold for the Patentee, by T. Pearce and Co. No. 269, facing the front of St. Clement's Church, Strand. Letters from any part of the country, post paid, will be promptly attended to.

BURGESS'S ESSENCE of ANCHOVIES.—Warehouse, 170, Strand, corner of the Savoy-steps, London.—John Burgess and Son, being apprized of the numerous endeavours made by many persons to impose a spurious article for their make, feel it incumbent upon them to request the attention of the Public, in purchasing what they conceive to be the Original, to observe the Name and Address correctly upon the labels of the above: the general appearance of the spuri- ous descriptions will deceive the unguarded, and for their detection J. B. and Son submit the following cautions,—some are in appearance at first sight; "The Genuine," but without any name or address:—some "B gess's Essence of Anchovies;"—others—"Burgess's,"—and many more without Address.

John Burgess and Son having been many years honoured with such distin- guished approbation, for their superior merit of sauces towards the Public, and earnestly solicit them to inspect the labels previous to their purchasing what they conceive to be of their make, which they hope will prevent many ill-appoint- ments.

BURGESS'S NEW SAUCE for general purposes, having given such great satisfaction, continues to be prepared by them, and is recommended as a most useful and convenient Sauce: will keep good in all climates.

Warehouse, 107, Strand, corner of the Savoy-steps, London.—(The original Fish-sauce Warehouse.)

RUPTURES RADICALLY CURED without pain, Surgical operations, or interruption to the usual avocations. MR. DUFOUR having, during a course of upwards of 30 years' extensive practice in Stric- tures cases, observed numberless instances of RUPTURES only partially relieved by himself to discover a remedy for that distressing disorder, and which he has happily effected. Mr. Dufour refers to his Treatise on the Radical Cure of Hernia for attestations, both from public bodies and private individuals, of the uniform success of his mode of treatment. Trusses on the best principles are supplied, as they are indispensable during a course of Remedies. Persons in the country stating their case fully in letters containing remittances, will have Instructions or Stricture Remedies sent to the amount, with ample directions. —No. 48, Berner's-street, Oxford street.

EASE and COMFORT in SHAVING.—To those Gentlemen who experience inconvenience in Shaving from a tender face or stiff beard, J. T. RIDGE most particularly recommends his celebrated MAGNETIC RAZOR TABLET, which, with its late improvement, he engages will produce so keen an edge as to supersede all grinding, honing, &c. and render the ope ration of shaving as easy and agreeable as it was before unpleasant and painful. Its use is simple, its effect certain; price 7s. 6d. J. T. Ridge's Aromatic Shaving Soap will also be found an invaluable addition. Manufactory, 65 Cheapside and 52, Park-street, Grosvenor-square.

WALSH'S ANTIPODAGRA, or GOUT and RHEUMATISM DESTROYER.—After numerous trials in different climates, by several eminent Members of the Medical Profession, the ANTIPODAGRA is confident- ly offered to the Public as a certain, safe, and effectual cure of those afflicting maladies the Gout and Rheumatism: Unbalanced Acidity, from which arise the greater number of the venders of exclusive medicine, the Pro- prietors of the Antipodagra have taken the precaution to ascertain the inva- luable qualities of this remedy, before making it public; and it was not until the repeated experiments of Gentlemen of the most scientific acquirements and pro- found integrity had demonstrated its positive infallibility, and its certain effects, that the Proprietors felt themselves justified in submitting it to the test of public practice, and, consequently, in encountering the attacks of public experience, should subsequent experience prove this to be incorrect in their present assertions.— Prepared and sold by the Proprietor, J. Perryman, late Walsh, 100, Strand, and by his appointment at all the respectable Medicine Venders in Town and Coun- try.—Of whom also may be had WALSH'S PATENT GINGER SEEDS, the effects of which have astonished the Profession. In all cases of debility of the Stomach, in Heartburn, Flatulence, and Bilious Affections these Seeds are of immediate service. For 50 years they have maintained their exalted rank, while the Proprietors daily witness the failure of infallible remedies, it is not only a source of congratulation to themselves, that their Medicine is rapidly rising in public estimation, but a strong inducement to them to pay the most strict attention to its manufacture.

PATRONISED by the ROYAL FAMILY, their Imperial Ma- jesties the Emperor and Empress of Russia, his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of China, by their especial authority, and most of the Nobility throughout Europe, ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, (the original and ge- nuine), which for many years has been universally admired, and is the best, as well as cheapest article for nourishing the hair, preventing its falling off, promoting a growth of a superior description of hair, &c. makes a luxuriant growth on the baldest places, whiskers, eye-brows, &c.—Curly Hair—It produces it; it makes the curl firm during exercise; or in damp weather; renders hair, that is harsh and dry, soft as silk, glossy, elegant, and beautiful.—Indispositions, Ac- couchement, &c. during which this Oil should be regularly applied, as it prevents the hair being injured.—Children's Hair.—A due attention to Children's Hair is of the greatest importance. This Oil is invaluable; it eradicates the scurf easy to any constitution, and imparts a delightful fragrance; it makes a luxuriant growth on roots, and fixes a stamina for a beautiful Head of Hair. Price 3s. 6d. 7s. 10s. 6d. and 21. 1s. per bottle.—Red Whiskers, Grey Whiskers, Eye brows, Hair on the Head, effectually changed to Brown or Black, by the use of ROWLAND'S ESSENCE of TYRE. Price 4s. 7s. 6d. and 10s. 6d. per bottle.—Sold by the sole Proprietors, A. Rowland and Son, No. 20, Hatton-Garden, Holborn, Lon- don; and by appointment, by all Perfumers and Medicine Venders.

BEWARE of Counterfeits, by A. Rowland and Son, No. 20, Hatton-Garden

LATEST NEWS.

An express arrived from Paris yesterday, bringing the following intelligence respecting the opening of the campaign in Spain on Monday last. In the Chamber of Deputies, on Thursday, the Minister of the War Department read the first dispatch which the Government received from the Major-General of the army.

"Head-quarters, St. Jean de Luz, April 7, half-past three in the morning.

"Monseigneur—I have the honour to report to your Excellency, that yesterday a troop of French and Italian Refugees made their appearance on the Bidasson, and endeavoured, by songs and seditious cries, to instigate the soldiers of his Majesty to desert. At the sight of a piece of artillery these wretches cried, 'Vive l'artillerie Française!' General Walin replied by another cry, thus—' Yes, Vive l'artillerie! but Vive le Roi!—Fire!' At this very instant a company of the 9th Light Infantry, which had been masked, debouched, and completed the dispersion of those whom the grape-shot had spared.—Thus the troops have manifested their love for the King by something more expressive than their habitual acclamations. Your Excellency will find annexed the summary of the examination of four wounded men who have been picked up; it will give a just idea of the pitiable auxiliaries whom the Spanish Revolutionists have chosen, and whom the imperial Regiment Alexander in garrison at Irun have in a manner delivered up to slaughter, as they withdrew their posts before the arrival of the Refugees on the banks of the river. A few moments after their flight, all the inhabitants of both sexes assembled together, and the communication between the two kingdoms was immediately established.—The Alcade of Irun has even informed us, that the Imperial Alexander Regiment has evacuated that city, and that the Band of Irmin has also abandoned Fontarabia.—In the number of this day's victims, who are eight killed and four severely wounded, are recognized the persons named Mallett and Delamot, already implicated in several conspiracies.—I am, &c.

"Count GUILLEMINOT, Maj.-Gen."

After the reading of this despatch, unanimous cries of "Vive le Roi! Vivent les Bourbons!" burst forth in the Chamber. The Minister, in conclusion, said, the King, who still cherishes paternal sentiments, even for his guilty children, cannot see, without a feeling of pain, that French blood has flowed in ranks where treason alone could have placed it. This blood will be on the heads of the instigators of the deplorable revolution of Spain. In conclusion, Gentlemen, every thing gives us reason to hope that this pest is going to end. Spain, which we go to succour, already recognizes us as her liberators and allies. In the Peers, M. de Villèle, the Minister of Finance, read a similar despatch from the Duke de Bellune. He descended from the tribune, amid cries of "Vive le Roi! Vivent les Bourbons!"

Madrid was perfectly tranquil on the 1st instant.

The King will hold a levee on Monday, the 21st inst. and a drawing room on Wednesday, the 23d inst. for the celebration of His Majesty's birth-day.

Sir Henry Hardinge stood for Durham last week against fellow Lambton's brother. The Whig papers told us that Sir Henry's force was quite exhausted, and that Lambton's people held back only to worry the Tories.

Lambton had 69 voters in all; and Sir Henry Hardinge took his oaths and seat in the House on Friday night. What absurd asses these Radicals are.

A letter from the Agent to Lloyd's at Alicant, states, that there has been a French fleet of several line of battle ships and frigates laying off there for several days previous to that letter leaving.

The Dorset-Fire, Capt. S. Lyde had arrived safe at Bengal, and was lying at the new anchorage in Saugar Roads, on the 3d of December.

The Dublin Evening Mail received yesterday says, the Derry Mail Coach which left town on Tuesday evening, was attacked within six miles of Drogheda, at Green Hills, and robbed of the mail and all the arms. A volley of 24 or 15 shots was fired by the robbers, by which one of the leaders was killed. Mackay, the guard, discharged his arms. Several shots were subsequently fired by the banditti, one of which took effect upon the guard, who expired in a few minutes. An outside passenger was wounded in the hand, and a ball also passed through his hat.

PRICE OF STOCKS AT THE CLOSE, SATURDAY.

This day has been a very busy one in the Money Market, and Consols for the Account, which opened at 75⅞, rose as high a 77⅛. At the close they were 77⅛. In Spanish Bonds, considerable purchases were made at 31⅛.

3 per Cent. Red. . .	75⅞ 76⅛ ⅛	India Bonds	30 31
3 per Cent. Consols	76⅛ ⅛ 77⅛ ⅛	Exchequ. Bills, 2d 1000l.	15 17
3½ per Cent. ditto . .	86⅜ ¼	Ditto	500l.
4 per Cents.	94⅛ ⅛	Small
New 4 per Cent. . . .	96⅜ 97	Con. for Acc.	75⅛ 76⅛ ⅛ 77⅛ ⅛
Long Annuities . .	19⅛ ⅛

Letters from Paris quote the prices of French Stock as follow:—

FRENCH FUNDS, April 10.

5 per Ct. Con. 22 Sept. .	84-00	Bank Sh. Div. 1 July
Recon. Div. 22 Sept. . . .		Ex. Lond. 1mo. 25-65 3mo.

The Neapolitan 5 per Cents. Div. were at Another Instance of Carroll's Extraordinary Luck.—No. 553, a grand prize of £20,000, and the only one yet drawn, was sold by Carroll at his fortunate Offices, No. 19, Cornhill, and 26, Oxford-street, on Wednesday last.—Carroll also sold in shares, on the same day, No. 3846, £1000; 2633, £1000; 1149. £500; 305/, £300; 30, £300; 3654, £200; 891, £200; 719, £200; 1934, £200, &c. &c. &c.—Wednesday, April 23, is the next day of drawing, and the Wheel contains Two Prizes of £20 000, Two of £5000, &c.

The Number of the Literary Gazette of yesterday, (April 12) contains a Review, with copious and interesting extracts, of Captain Franklin's Journey to the Polar Sea, prefaced by Epitomes of Hearne's and Mackenzie's Travels; Reviews of Neele's Poems; Scoresby's Voyage to East Greenland, &c. &c. Under the head of Original Correspondence, are—Translations of the Greek Scollum Stories of Hierocles, and a facetious letter from Dan Digemup, on Disinterment and Dissection. In Science, an Abstract and condensed Account of Mr. C Bell's New and Extraordinary Theory of the Nervous System; Dr. Roget's Seventh Lecture on Animal Physiology, and other matters. In Literature, and the Arts, Dr. Crotch's Lectures on Music; Critiques on Exhibitions and Publications together with Notices of the Royal Society of Literature, the Disposition of the Royal Library, the King's Patronage of the Anglo-Roman Academy; Poetry, by L. E. L. and other popular writers; Letters from Paris, with Remarks on the King's Pamphlet, and the Feeling in that capital: Characteristic Anecdotes of Lord St. Vincent and the Naval Service: the Humbug of Exhibition to dupe the Natives. Varieties of Literature Dramatic Criticisms, &c. &c. complete the Number.—Published, in Weekly Numbers by W. A. Scripps, 362, (Exeter Change), Strand, London; and to be had of all Booksellers, Newsmen and Postmasters throughout the kingdom: Price 8d.; or 1s stamped for Country Circulation, by post.

We understand, that Mr. John D. Hunter's Memoirs of a Captivity among the Indians of North America, from Childhood to the Age of Nineteen, will appear to-morrow in an octavo volume. With Anecdotes descriptive of their Manners and Customs, and some Account of the Soil, Climate, and vegetable Productions of the Territory westward of the Mississippi. Mr. Hunter was born of white parents, and was taken prisoner by a party of Indians at so early a period of his infancy, that he barely recollects the burning of his native village, and the massacre which made him an orphan. He was trained to the habits and pursuits of savage life, and through the vicissitudes incident to it, belonged successively to various tribes, who distinguished him for his skill in the chace by the appellation of The Hunter. In the year 1816, at which time he supposed himself to have attained the age of nineteen, he made his escape to the United States, and by the kindness of some citizens interested in his welfare, obtained the benefit of a regular education.

Invalid Landau Cot with Bed, upwards of six feet long: invented by W. Harman and Son. The peculiar principle of its construction being such that persons, however severely afflicted, may be removed from their bed without change of position or increase of suffering and conveyed to any distance, together with attendants). Reference may be made to authorities of the highest rank and profession if no choice, several of whom had suffered long confinement, and despaired of ever being able to endure removal, but who have, by means of it, travelled from 75 to 120 miles in one day; and have procured the inventors with the testimony of their high approbation.—N.B. It may be enraged for any journey by applying at W. Harman and Son's Coach manufactory, No. 1, John-street, Oxford-street.

Elegant Glasses, Furniture, &c.—The Nobility and Gentry are invited to inspect the Ware rooms of Cooper and Son, 23, Bishopsgate-street within where is exhibited a large Assortment of new and see cut hand Plate Glasses, adapted by suited to every description of drawing or dining-rooms. The prices are just reduced 40 per cent. on plates measuring 100 inches by 72, and upwards; and on those of small er dimensions the alteration will be found equally important. The extensive preference given to this Establishment is thankfully acknowledged by the Proprietors, who, in their endeavours to reduce their gratitude, by manufacturing articles in a superior manner, at prices suitable to the times, hope to merit a continuance of public support. In the furniture department is comprised every new and elegant article of upholstery, cabinet, and chair work, regulated upon such a scale of economy as to demand and ensure the patronage of rank and fashion.

Just published, in 4to with 16 Plates, price 11. 5s. in boards,

Transactions of the Royal Society of Edinburgh, vol. 9, part 2d, containing the following articles:—I. On the Mineralogy of Disko Island; by Sir G. Giesecke.—II On Marsh Poison; by Dr. Fergusson.—III. On Atmospheric Reflections and Refractions observed in the Greenland Sea; by W. Scoresby, Esq.—IV. On a Granite Obelisk at Seringapatam; by Dr. Brewster and Kenney.—V. On a Remarkable Structure in Apophyllite; by Dr. Brewster.—VI. On the Application of Analysis to the Sea Rates of Chronometers; by C. Babbage, Esq.—VII. On the Errors in the Sea Rates of Chronometers; by W. Scoresby, Esq.—VIII. On Ur-ine Irritation, and its effects on the Female Constitution; by Dr. Dewar.—IX On Indian Balmitte; by T. Cadell, Esq.—X. On Chalk Strata, and the Structure of the Weald; by John Allan, Esq.—XI. On a Submarine Forest in the Frith of Tay, &c; by John Fleming, D. D.—XII On a Monocromatic Lamp for Microscopical purposes, &c.; by Dr. Brewster.—XIII. On the Absorption of Light by Coloured Media, &c.; by Dr. Brewster.—XIII. On the Mineralogy of the Feroe Islands; &c.; by J. F. W. Herschel, Esq.—XIV. On the Mineralogy of the Feroe Islands; &c.; by J. F. W. Herschel, Esq.—XIV. On the Electro-Magnetic Experiments and Observations by W. C. Trevelyan, Esq.—XV Electro-Magnetic Experiments and Observations; by Dr. J. Traill and W. Scoresby, Esq.—XVI. On the Formation of some Ores

JOHN BULL.

" FOR GOD, THE KING, AND THE PEOPLE!"

No. 123. SUNDAY, APRIL 20, 1823. Price 7d.

GRAND MASQUERADE, ARGYLL ROOMS, WEDNESDAY, APRIL 23, 1823.—The Nobility and Public are respectfully informed, that upon the suggestion of several Persons of Distinction, the above Rooms have been selected as the most appropriate for the Splendid MASQUERADE to be given in Commemoration of HIS MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY'S NATAL DAY. The Committee appointed for superintending the arrangements of the entertainment are determined that every exertion will be made to render this Masquerade more than usually splendid and superb that has been given for many years, and such as will preserve the character of this species of amusement. Military, Pandean, Quadrille, Country Dance, and other Bands, will be placed in the different rooms. Artists from the Continent (exclusively engaged for this night) will appear in the Costume of different nations. Several Professional Gentlemen have kindly volunteered their services on this occasion.

The celebrated SIGNIOR ANTONIO and Mr. WILSON will exhibit their extraordinary talents on the Cordes Volante and Tendue. THE ROYAL FANTOCCINI will likewise perform at different periods of the Evening. In addition to the above, a great variety of Entertainments will be introduced in a style of brilliancy and novelty never excelled.—Tickets One Guinea each, to include Tea, Coffee, Ices, Jellies, Sorbets, &c.—Tickets for Ladies Tickets Two Guineas each, (Wine not included) which will be furnished by Mr. Jarvin, Supper, &c.

GAZETTE.

[This Gazette contains the appointments of William Burton, Esq. to be Page of Honour in Ordinary to His Majesty: and of the Rev. Corbet Hue, Clerk, D.D. to the Deanery of the Island of Jersey.]

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

Kirby and Ashton, Leicester, confectioners—Daniel and Ling, Beaminster, surgeons—Hawksworth and Tuten, Knaresborough, linen-manufacturers—Noakes and Laming, Southwark, coach-makers—J. and P. Pearse, Dock Head, butchers—Morley and Wilton, Halifax, surgeons—Hadfield and Davies, Liverpool—Blakey and Hunt, Baker-street, milliners—Boden and Co. Rawleigh-Mill, Devonshire, lace-manufacturers—Commons and Tresider, Penzance, Cornwall, boot-makers.

BANKRUPTCY ENLARGED.

S. ATKINS, Great Portland-street, druggist, from April 5 to April 22.

BANKRUPTS.

T. LLOYD, Herefordshire, grocer—J. SOWDEN, jun. Wakefield, corn factor—J. DICKEN, Burslem, Staffordshire, hatter—H. HEWITT, Princes-street, Drury-lane, printer—R. PRATT, Archer-street, Westminster, iron-founder—R. PETTIT, College-hill, packer—T. HOLT, Arnold, Nottinghamshire, dealer—A. T. RIGBY, Liverpool, porter-dealer—J. PURLEY, Old Kent-road, egg-salesman—J. T. CLEMENT, Winchester-House, Broad-street, insurance-broker—T. MAXFIELD, Salisbury, linen-draper.

DIVIDENDS.

At the Court of Commissioners of Bankrupts.—May 17, D. Thomas, Greenwich, china-man—May 10, J. Clough, Leadenhall-street, wholesale linen-draper. May 14, M. England, Ilkeston, butcher—May 8, P. and J. Sefton, Blackburn, cotton-manufacturers.

CERTIFICATES—May 6.

J. Westwood, Brierly, Leominster, farmer—W. Wells, Hendon, hay-salesman—J. H. Sampson, Sculcoates, merchant—J. Craig, High Holborn, linen-draper

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY.

Petitions were presented from Dudley and Tavistock against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; from Beverley, against the Roman Catholic Claims; and from the Rev. Dr. Highmore, against Ecclesiastical Persons holding Lay Offices.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL presented the papers relative to the negociations carried on between His Majesty's Government and other Powers at Verona and Paris. The Noble Lord took a review of the situation of this country with respect to Spain previous to the meeting of the Congress at Verona, and the situation of Spain from 1814, when the King was restored to his throne, down to the period of the meeting of the Allied Sovereigns. He observed that the restoration of the Constitution of 1812, had created alarm among some Powers; the manner in which it had been brought about was matter of regret: but if ever there was a case, in point of justice and equity, which ought not to provoke foreign hostility, it was that of the restoration of that Constitution, had as it might be. Since that time to the meeting of the Sovereigns at Verona no opening had occurred in which his Majesty's Government had not deprecated all interference with Spain; notonly, as it was stated in the paper issued in Jan. 1821, because the policy of this country was one of non-interference in the internal affairs of other countries unless a special case was established on the strongest grounds. The Noble Lord then stated in nearly the same terms the course of the negociations as described by the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs in the other House of Parliament—the line of conduct adopted by the Duke of Wellington according with his instructions at the Congress, which were, that if any disposition should be shewn to interfere by force or menace in the internal concerns of Spain, that His Majesty's Government were so convinced of the inutility of such interference, and considered it so objectionable in principle, and so impossible in execution, that come what way it might they were determined to take no part in it. The Noble Duke had declared that interference would not assist the cause of France, but was calculated to embarrass more deeply both the French and Spanish Governments. He expressed a strong desire that relations and amity should be restored between France and Spain, and stated that to animadvert on the internal transactions of independent states, was inconsistent with the principles on which His Majesty had always acted respecting the internal concerns of other countries. The Noble Lord then explained the policy adopted by His Majesty's Government, and the principles on which it was supported. Every attempt, it was considered, ought to be made by this country to prevent war and the peace of the world being disturbed between France and Spain. When once hostilities of such a nature had commenced no man could pretend to say how far they might not extend. We were placed in a situation which gave us a more special right to offer our mediation; for we had been called upon by Spain for our friendly interposition in her behalf. France declined our mediation, though she expressed a wish to have the advantage of our good offices. He would never, however, have advised the Spanish Government to concede one iota of their Constitution which they conceived really useful to their country. But it was well known that some modifications were necessary in its Constitution. We were also to take into consideration the existence of civil war and the fact that Spain was a divided country. Having been asked for advice, we had also a right to look at the means of resistance which she possessed. If any country ever owed any obligations to an individual, Spain owed them to his Noble Friend (the Duke of Wellington). He knew that country, he knew her parties, her individuals; he had had the experience of that very constitution during the two last years that he had carried on the war on her territory, and he would be the last man to recommend to any people any concession inconsistent with their honour and dignity. The Noble Earl then took a view of the late war in Spain, and asked what would be the consequences if England entered into a new war. Was not Spain, at present, a divided country? All enthusiasm on the one side, and all quiescence on the other; it was a war of the country against the towns, a war of the priests against the merchants; if the fanaticism of liberty was on one side, the fanaticism of religion was on the other. We had to decide therefore whether we should engage in the war with Spain, not only to drive out the French, but to support one half of Spain against the other. It was also to be considered that the present war was not popular in France with the mass of the people, with the commercial classes, nor even with the army. But could any one believe that if this country took part in it, the whole feeling of France towards the war would not be changed? The Spanish war would immediately merge into an English war. With respect to the danger supposed to menace Portugal, his Majesty's Government had most distinct assurances that Portugal would be considered neutral. He did not know what the contingencies of the war might be. Whether or when it might be necessary to interpose, it would be open for Parliament to do so; but until it was determined to draw the sword and throw away the scabbard, let not neutrality be adopted with false pretences. Let our neutrality be honest; for thus only it could be effectual.

EARL GREY was of opinion that this country had failed in an attempt to avert a war as full of danger to the essential interests and the happiness of the world, and to the principles upon which this country had so long acted and existed, as any which could be adduced either from the ancient or modern history of mankind. That failure he believed to have resulted from the course which had been taken by the Government, in not following the example of our ancestors, by maintaining those interests and principles at every peril, and by all the energies which could be brought to their support; and this, too, at a time when the means of the country were described as being unprecedented in their magnitude and extent.

LORD KING contended, that in the whole course of these negociations, Ministers had shewn all the weakness and indecision which alone could be expected from them. The end of all now appeared to be, that we should adopt a system of neutrality, and thus give to France all the advantages she could desire. This was the consequence of the corrupt state of the Government; and the only consolation they could find was, that its conduct was something better than what might have been expected from a former Administration.

TUESDAY.

Counsel were heard and witnesses examined in Allardice's Divorce Bill.—Petitions were presented from Leicester against the Insolvent Debtors' Act—from Glamorgan, complaining of Agricultural Distress—and from certain Mealmen in Liverpool, complaining of the 50th of Geo. III. respecting returns.

EARL GREY, in reference to the papers presented on the preceding evening, repeated his opinion, viz. that the interests and honour of the country had been sacrificed by the negociations at Verona and Paris, and gave notice of his intention to move for further papers on Tuesday next, and the following Tuesday to submit a motion for discussing the whole question.

WEDNESDAY.

Petitions were presented from the Dean and Chapter of Windsor, and from Bath against the Catholic Claims.—The Innkeepers' Allowance, and the Grants in Aid Bills were passed.

THURSDAY.

Petitions were presented from York and Kilkenny against the Catholic Claims.

LORD KING, in allusion to the late negociations, said, the parties conducting them seemed to labour under a frustration of understanding. The Noble Duke had been duped by the French negociations with respect to the Cordon Sanitaire, and at Verona. He then moved for an account of the extraordinary expences of the late mission to the Congress at Verona.—Agreed to.

In answer to questions from LORD HOLLAND respecting Spain and France, the EARL OF LIVERPOOL said, he knew of no treaty stipulating that the Crowns of France and Spain should never be united—but they were not to be united. He believed no treaty was in existence for sending Russian troops into France, and that the Duke of Wellington had been sent to Verona as his Majesty's Plenipotentiary, to take part in the discussions on all points connected with the Government of his country.

EARL GREY was not satisfied with the answer of the Noble Earl respecting the Crowns of Spain and France. He wished to know what directions had been given to the Noble Duke on the question respecting the affairs of Spain, and on what ground he was authorized to appear as Plenipotentiary—indeed the Noble Duke appeared, from the papers furnished, to be ignorant of what was going on, which was a singular situation for Great Britain to be placed in. He wished to know whether, as the Noble Duke had made reference to a dispatch of the 17th May, 1820, there would be any objection to produce that document, which held out an opinion that interference in the concerns of Spain would be justifiable. His Majesty's Ministers condemned the principles on which the French Government acted in attempting to compel the Spaniards to alter their Constitution, as being inconsistent with the rights of nations; but he did not find in the correspondence any thing like a direct condemnation of such interference. The Noble Earl read extracts from the Duke of Wellington's dispatches, and said that the honour of the country had not been upheld by the Noble Duke in the manner it should. There was not in the Papers any expectations of peace held out by the Government of France, but a direct avowal of the monarchical principle, by which people in chains and slavery were never to seek relief but at the will of their legitimate rulers.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL said, the statements of the Noble Earl, in reference to the Noble Duke's conduct at the negociations, were unfair. No mystery had been observed by his Majesty's Government in their sentiments towards Spain. The first notice of the change in the Spanish Government came from Russia in April 1820, and then intervention by force of arms was not called in question. With respect to the papers asked for, he wished time to make an enquiry respecting them.

LORD HOLLAND thought the House ought to be in possession of all the papers containing complaints on the part of Spain, respecting the conduct of France.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON read several passages from his note to the Allied Ministers, to shew that he had carried the principle of non-interference in the internal concerns of an independent State still farther than the State Paper issued in 1820, for he had applied it even to the act of animadverting upon those internal transactions, whilst the State Paper in question objected only to an armed interference. He did not think it possible to employ stronger terms.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH gave notice, that on Thursday next he should submit a motion to their Lordships, which would enable them to express their opinion generally upon those important subjects.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY.

Petitions were presented from Kilkenny against the Tithe System; from Lancashire, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; from South Molton, Great Torrington, Northam, and Guildford, against the Coal Duties; from Inverness, complaining of Agricultural Distress; from the Clergy of Chichester, Windsor, the Corporation of Dublin, Fermanagh, against granting further concessions to Roman Catholics; from Clonmell and Dublin, against the Leather Tax; from the Coroners of Roscommon, for more remuneration; from Sir Charles Wolseley, complaining of oppressive exactions of the Coal Duties by a Clergyman in Staffordshire; from Glastonbury, in favour of the Small Debts Bill; from Inverness, complaining of the Distillery Laws.

COL. BARRY presented a petition from —— Forbes, one of the persons charged with conspiring against the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, complaining of the conduct of the Attorney-General for that part of the empire, in having used expressions in Court tending to prejudge his case. The petition was laid on the table.

The Forgery of Wills Bill was ordered to be read a second time this day six months.

MR. SECRETARY CANNING presented the papers respecting the war between France and Spain. The Right Hon. Gent then stated the line of conduct adopted by the British Government in respect of the transactions alluded to in the papers. In the present situation of Europe an explanation on such a subject was one of considerable magnitude and difficulty, for the course of policy observed by England would be judged of, as deeply affecting all the possibilities to which the case was liable. Government had pursued one intelligible object, and had acted upon one inflexible principle. The object was the preservation of peace to the world; the principle consisted of respect for the faith of treaties, and for the independence of nations by the establishment of what was called the Balance of Power, and as insuring the honour and interest of England. In the month of September last, at which time he received the Seals of Office, a meeting of Sovereigns was held for the avowed purpose of preserving the peace of Europe. On entering into office, he found among its records a state paper, in which the principle of non-interference was broadly laid down, with certain well defined exceptions. The Right Hon. Gent said that at the Congress of Verona it was not understood that the important question respecting the affairs of Spain was to be discussed or introduced. This would be obvious from a perusal of the despatch of the Duke of Wellington, stating the introduction of that question, and asking for instructions on the subject. Until then it had been believed that the principal subject to be brought under consideration was that which related to the differences between Russia and Turkey. The instructions sent to the Duke were in these terms:—"If any project should be advanced calling for an interference with the affairs of Spain, or a sanction for such interference, His Majesty's Government is so convinced of its being excessively objectionable in principle, and impracticable in execution, that they desire you will frankly and peremptorily declare that to such an interference, come from what quarter it may, His Majesty will not be a party."—The Right Hon. Gent. observed that so far from its being expected that any proposal that that would have been the very last proposition submitted to the Congress. The English Minister stated that his instructions precluded his entering into any hypothetical engagement which would commit cause of offence actually given by Spain, and when, ultimately, the three Allied Powers agreed to despatch messengers to their Ministers at Madrid, calling for changes in the Spanish Constitution, and, on refusal to withdraw themselves from the Spanish Court, the English Plenipotentiary declined any participation with them. He stated that his Royal Master would continue his Minister at Madrid after the Allies to state the irritation, and, if possible, to prevent a war. French Court, so far from being then in a more warlike disposition than before, appeared seriously inclined for peace.—The Right Hon. Gent. then alluded to the piracies in the West Indies under South American and Spanish flags, and the fitting out of an armament under Sir E. Owen to protect that part of the world. Commodore Owen was directed to apply to the Governor of Cuba, to demand his assistance to restrain the pirates. Added to this cause of complaint, pretensions had been advanced by the commanders of Spanish vessels which had never been admitted by England—he alluded to that constructive blockade which had been most rigorously enforced against English ships; and from the year 1815 had been the basis of a series of unanswered representations on the part of the English Government to the Spanish Court. Sir W. A'Court had urged the Spanish Government with remonstrances, first with regard to the pirates of Cuba, and next with regard to the blockades; and he had stated that a further armament would be dispatched to make reprisals on Spanish property. Redress, however, was promised, and the proceedings of Sir E. Owen were countermanded just in time. As soon as all hope of effecting an understanding between France and Spain had been abandoned, the whole course of our negociation was communicated to the Spanish Government. From that time the feeling towards Sir W. A'Court became evidently changed; and he had laboured with honest, it might indeed be said with Spanish feeling, in behalf of the cause of Spain. The English Government offered its mediation; the French Government declined the offer, alleging that the grounds of difference grew out of the influence of what was passing in Spain upon the affairs of France—that this had caused a state of mutual jealousy and irritation, to which even war was preferable, as it might lead to a peace which would remove the cause of difference. England still wished to mediate between the parties, and had accordingly pose Lord Fitzroy Somerset was sent to Madrid, and had delivered a Memorandum delivered to him, containing the opinions of the Allies on such indeed, as were already known to many of the persons in Spain. This was about the first week in January. Before any thing applied for our mediation in December. Not many months afterwards an event occurred, which materially shook his hopes of accommodation—the Speech of the King of France on opening the Chambers. No man could possibly feel more strongly than he did upon the construction of that Speech. If objections were made to the Spanish Constitution on its own merits, he did not know that any offence could be justified; but when it was laid down as the principle of objection to it, that it had not emanated from the King, he was sure that no Spaniard could consent to alter it at the instance of a foreign Power. And he was convinced that no Englishman would countenance the demand to alter it. No time had been lost in communicating these sentiments to the French Government. The British Ambassador was directed to inform Viscount Chateaubriand that it was the intention of this country to maintain a strict neutrality, so long as its just interests and honour of Great Britain would permit. The Right Hon. Gentleman then proceeded to observe, that, with respect to that part of the question which involved the faith of Leaders—he considered regarded Portugal, France had never, for one moment, been led to believe formed, that an unprovoked attack upon that country would be considered draw forth the opposition of this country. It was not, however, believed, that because His Majesty's Government had declared its neutrality, that therefore they were indifferent. "Indifferent," said the Right Hon. Secretary, "we are not. We must earnestly wish that Spain may come triumphant out of the struggle." The symptoms of that success which he so ardently wished, he believed would be these changes in their civil institutions which had been commended by this country.

MR. BROUGHAM could see plain enough that the line of argument was that in which it was their intention to walk for the future—they could not learn what had been done, or what had been left undone what was done at Verona and elsewhere. He had witnessed with surprize the light and easy manner in which the Right Hon. Gentleman had gone over that part of his case which related to Verona—that they heard of it was, that the Duke of Wellington went to Verona to renew the remonstrances he had made at Verona; but what they were, he repeated, was no where to be found in the speech they had heard—that omission formed a perfect and remarkable feature in the discourse of the Right Hon. Gentleman. He hoped, therefore, that the papers presented to them could shew something beyond generalities, and expressions of good will to the Spanish cause—the papers were laid on the table.

On the question for bringing up the Report of the Naval Secretary Persions' Bill, MR. GRENFELL moved that it be brought up this day six months. Ayes, 123.—For the amendment, 87—Majority.—The Report was then laid on the table.

In a Committee of Supply:—MR. GOULBURN moved a grant of 6,500l. to defray the expense of inserting Proclamations in the London Gazette and other newspapers in Ireland.

MR. HUME moved an amendment, viz. that the sum granted be only 3,000l. but it was negatived, and the original motion was carried.

The following grants were voted for Ireland:—2,700. to defray expenses of printing and binding certain copies of the Public Acts; 24,000l. for Criminal Prosecutions; 14,200l. to make good a deficiency in ditto for last year; 8,789l. for Non-conforming Ministers; 1,600l. for seceding Ministers; 756l. for Dissenting Protestant Ministers; 1,151l. for Salaries of Lottery Office Keepers; 4,000l. for Office of Hawth; 15,000l. for Civil Contingencies; 6,130. for Inland Navigation; 27,000l. for Police of Dublin.

MR. HUME moved an amendment, which went to substitute 2,000l. for the sum originally proposed. The amendment, after a short conversation, was withdrawn.

1,651l. for the Commissioners of Inquiry into the Land Revenue of the Crown; 7,200l. for the Commissioners to inquire into the fees and emoluments of the Clerks, Officers, and others employed in the Courts of Justice; 3,500l. for the Commissioners of Records; 500l. for the Society for the prevention of Vice.

TUESDAY.

Petitions were presented from Penzance against the Hawkers' and Pedlars' Act—from Woodbridge against the Insolvent Debtors' Act—from the Clergy of Stowe, Sedbury, Glasgow, Mansfield, Granby, Wiltshire, City of Oxford, Fermanagh, &c. against granting concessions to Catholics—from Newry against the Duties on Exported East India Sugar—from the Ship Owners of Great Yarmouth against the Seamens' Apprentice Bill.—The Irish Joint Treasury Bill was ordered to be reported on Friday se'nnight.

In answer to a question from MR. KENNEDY respecting Appeals before the other House, MR. SECRETARY PEEL said, it was the desire of Government to afford relief by forwarding the hearing of such appeal.

MR. BROWNLOW brought under the consideration of the House occurrences at the Dublin theatre on the 14th of December, which he intended involved the character of the Attorney-General for Ireland—that men should be vilified because their conduct did not accord with his notions, and the King's subjects harassed by the same offence though acquitted by a Grand Jury of their country, was a case that would never be allowed to rest long unnoticed in England. The Hon. Gent. after some further prefatory observations, stated the proceedings adopted by the Attorney-General (which have been so often detailed), and said, it was the general wish in Ireland to vindicate the noble character from such an act, and to lay blame where it was due. If the men been committed upon a probable, or even possible charge, there would not have been one sentiment of sympathy for them from one end of the country to the other. The evil genius of Ireland led the Attorney-General to talk of assassination. From that moment the matter was assailed with ridicule—the proceeding became alarming. Absurd, in consideration of the circumstances of the parties and the weapons they used; and alarming, because men who were threatened upon such absurd charges. If the Right Hon. Gent was fond of ex officio informations, the proper objects to indulge him with were those witnesses whose false oaths had misled him and the late Lieut. The Right Hon. Gent. then drew a parallel in the case of Sir Jefferies, in 1689, who on a Bill being laid before the Grand Jury against Francis Smith for publishing a seditious Book, and that Jury having ignored the Bill three times. Sir George Jefferies, enraged at this, vilified and reproached the Jury in open Court. "God be with me from such Juries," was his exclamation. "I will see the face of every one of the Jury—demand the reasons on which he has acted, and thus bring the party to shame." The Grand Jury on the late occasion had been exposed in a similar manner, and had been obliged to come forward in their own vindication, in open Court assembled. The Grand Jury, being 17 in number, on being called on to pronounce their decision on the Bill, still answered ignoramus, upon which Sir George Jefferies reminded them that they were on their oath, and that the matter lay between "God and their own consciences." The effect saying "that they were guilty of perjury, and blasphemously insinuating that it was nearly impossible for God in Heaven to pardon them." After a great many observations on the conduct of the Attorney-General, he called upon the Law Officers for a clear explanation of the case, and concluded by moving the following Resolution:—"That it appears to this House that the conduct of his Majesty's Attorney-General for Ireland, in regard to the parties charged with the riot at the Theatre Royal Dublin on the 14th of December last, and particularly in bringing them to trial on an ex-officio information, after a bill of indictment had been ignored by a Grand Jury, was unwise, contrary to the practice, and not congenial with the spirit of the English Constitution, and ought not to be drawn into a precedent hereafter."

MR. PLUNKETT replied to the observations of the Hon. Member in respect to his (Mr. P.'s) filing an ex-officio information after the Bill had been ignored by the Grand Jury. If the Hon. Gentleman considered such a practice illegal or unconstitutional, he ought to let his attack upon it rest on its own foundation. He believed there was no practice known to our law of more unquestionable antiquity. If that practice went against the analogies of our constitution, it was extraordinary that the wisdom of 1000 years had not abolished it. He would appeal to the House, if it were just to compare his words with the filthy Billingsgate which had formerly been addressed to a Grand Jury by Lord Jefferies, or himself with that infamous character. He was censured for preferring a capital charge, and afterwards only prosecuting for a misdemeanour. On what grounds did the Hon. Gentleman suppose him to be answerable for this, that he proposed a vote of censure without calling for any enquiry? The law required that no man should be committed, unless there were evidence which ought to send him before a Jury; but it was not the practice of the courts fusion, or the law, that that evidence should be such as to bring irresistible conviction of guilt. The Right Hon. Gent. then defended himself for the proceedings against the parties accused which he had instituted. Whatever ridicule might be attached to the throwing of a bladder on a rattle, such implements hurled at the head of those Gentlemen while in a rattle, would not be deemed fit subjects for a joke. Had the bladder, or the piece of wood called a rattle, struck the Lord Lieut. on the head, it would have deprived him of life. He therefore contended that if it were proved such an attack were determined upon before it took place, a conspiracy was proved. When a bill had been ignored by the Grand Jury, that circumstance was no bar to any subsequent proceeding by indictment for the same offence. The bill might be preferred again and again, and still the indictment might be preferred. The Right Hon. Gent. then read from Burrows's Reports, cases where the Court of King's Bench refused to interfere with the finding of a Grand Jury where the Crown was a party, on the very ground that its interference was unnecessary, as the King's Attorney possessed the power. With respect to the late trial, he (Mr. Plunkett) would candidly put the House in possession of what he felt to be the impressions under which the Jury acted. It was his conviction—a conviction which he felt with all the force of a moral certainty—that they (the Grand Jury) conceived the plan of these rioters to be a very right and proper plan. He read an extract from the speech of the Chief Justice who tried the rioters, in which, he said, the rights of an audience at a theatre were perfectly well defined. "They may cry down a play or theatre or performance which they dislike, or they may hiss or hoot the actors who depend on their approbation or their caprice. Even that privilege, however, is confined within its limits. They must not break the peace, or act in such a manner as has a tendency to excite terror or disturbance. Their censure or approbation, although it may be riotous. But if their censorial power were to be exercised by mobs, or political characters, it would turn the theatre into a den of factious rioters, instead of a place of cultivated amusement, or, as some conceive, of moral improvement." The Hon. Member had not met the question upon its illegality, but upon the unconstitutionality of using a legal prerogative. He would appeal to all the acts of his private or political life, and defy any man to say that he had ever worn the trammels of party. It was a question of great and important public concern; but as a matter in which he was also personally interested, he felt it a necessary consequence of the delicate situation in which he was placed, to leave the House to the free and unrestrained exercise of its judgment, and he would therefore withdraw.

Mr. W. Courtenay contended that the filing of an ex officio information in the particular instance, was necessary for the safety of the country, and the genuine patriotism of the Attorney-General for Ireland had been evinced by the course of proceeding which he adopted. He had moved an amendment to the motion—that the other orders of the day be read.

Mr. D. Browne supported the amendment.

Col. Barry contended that there was no analogy between informations directed by the Court and those filed by the Attorney-General; and that the defence of the Right Hon. Gentleman so far as it rested upon the cases he had mentioned, entirely failed.

Lord Milton could not say that he approved of the conduct of his right Hon. and Learned Friend, yet he could not agree to the original motion, which would leave the grounds upon which the House decided one way or another in doubt; and on the other hand he felt a difficulty in agreeing to the amendment, which proposed to get rid of the question directly.

Mr. Goulburn supported the amendment.

Mr. Brougham in his conscience must say, that he believed the petition had been infringed by his Right Hon. and Learned friend—conscientiously he had no doubt, but that did not affect the matter. No man could say that it was ever before known, the Attorney-General filed an ex officio information after the Grand Jury had thrown out a bill. That was a fact beyond dispute.

Mr. Secretary Canning was most anxious that neither party should seem to have a triumph over the other in the decision of the present question, but the House would, he trusted, see the best mode of arriving at that end, would be by making this the final proceeding. The motion was then withdrawn.

Sir F. Burdett gave notice that on Tuesday next he would bring before the House the conduct of the Sheriff of Dublin as connected with this transaction.

WEDNESDAY.

Petitions were presented from Tyrone, Bandon Bridge, Monaghan, Carrickfergus, Dublin, Westmeath, Gloucester, Beverley, Fermanagh, Ely, Worcester, Oxford, Warwickshire, Glasgow, Archdeaconry of York, Cleveland, Cambridge, Norwich, &c. against granting further concessions to Roman Catholics—from Somerset, complaining of Agricultural Distress.

Mr. Hume presented a Petition from a set of Freethinkers in Scotland, in which they complained that Tom Paine's Works, Queen Mab, Volney's Works, and a variety of others of the same description, had been seized by the Sheriff of Edinburgh.

The Lord Advocate said the society in question was attended by the lowest description of persons, and the Christian religion at the meetings was turned into ridicule, and the name of God prophaned.

The Petition was ordered to be printed.

In answer to a question from Mr. Campbell respecting Scotch Distilleries, the Chancellor of the Exchequer said the smaller Duty would not take place before October.

Lord Althorpe moved for the repeal of the Foreign Enlistment Act, in the course of which he said he was the decided advocate for neutrality. War, in the present circumstances, was the greatest calamity that could befall this country, nor did he think it would materially benefit the Spaniards. Strong language to the Allied Powers would have avoided the necessity. With respect to the Bill, it was desirable to make some unnecessary restrictions. Previous to the passing of the present Bill, by the 9th and 29th of Geo. III. it was felony to serve in a foreign service. The law was at that time mitigated, so as to make the offence a misdemeanor, instead of a felony; and a greater power of detention was taken to meet the case of South America with regard to the fitting out ships. His object was to leave the law as it before stood.

Lord Folkestone seconded the motion, and took occasion to express the utter shame and indignation which he felt on perusing the Papers which had been laid before the House. The language held by the Right Hon. Gentleman to France amounted to a declaration that if she thought proper to attack Spain she might, but we would have nothing to do with it. This was like an individual saying to an evil-disposed person, "if you choose to rob or murder a man on the highway you may do it, but I will leave no hand in the affair." The contents of the Papers which had now been given were calculated to make an Englishman's blood boil in his veins. When he (Lord Folkestone) went home and reflected on them on the other night, twenty times while reading them had he dropped them from his hand with horror and with indignation. It could not be said that the Spanish Government had expected no more than that we should remain neutral, and on this the Right Hon. Gentleman had refused to give way to those feelings which were cherished by every Englishman, and Great Britain was seen to bend, to crouch, to cringe before the despots of the Continent, and the sacred cause of liberty in which Englishmen were formerly accustomed to bleed had been meanly abandoned. It appeared to him that no determined resistance had been opposed to the views of France, no remonstrance had been offered to the part of England.

The motion was supported by Dr. Lushington, Lord J. Russell, Sir Robert Wilson, Mr. A. Baring, and Mr. Denman, and opposed by Mr. W. Lamb, Mr. Courtenay, Dr. Phillimore, Mr. Wynne, Sir J. Yorke, &c.

Mr. Secretary Canning, in reply to the observations of the Noble Lord (Folkestone), said, he did not now decline the contest because he feared it, or he begged the Noble Lord to believe, that however he might have truckled to France, he was not going to truckle to him. The Right Hon. Gentleman then defended the Bill, and referred to a letter given by Mr. Jefferson, President of the United States, and in which he said he was willing the line of neutrality should be marked out and pursued by this country. In 1793 the Minister of this country explained that vessels were equipped and manned in the French ports against England, in the ports of the United States. President Washington wrote to the Governor of New York, desiring all such vessels to be seized and delivered over to the proper law tribunals to be dealt with. He then proceeded to animadvert on the case in the following manner:—"The arming and equipping of vessels in our ports to cruize against nation at peace with us is incompatible with the sovereignty of the United States, inasmuch as it makes her instrumental in the war of her own allies, and tends to endanger her peace." Upon this principle sentence he was prepared to defend the principle of the Bill. It was impossible without contravening the principle there laid down to repeal this Bill.

The House divided. For the motion, 110—Against it, 216—Majority, 106.

THURSDAY.

Petitions were presented from the Dean and Chapter of Peterborough, from the Archdeaconries of Bath, Wells, Taunton, Stafford, Colchester, Essex, Middlesex, Hereford, Northumberland, and Coventry, from the Clergy of Winchester, Oxford, and Dublin, from the Deaneries of Litchfield, and Carlisle, from Bristol, Nottingham, Armagh, Down, &c. and from Sir H. Lees, praying that the House would investigate the inquisitorial acts of the Catholic monasteries, nunneries, and Jesuitical establishments in Ireland.

Mr. Coke presented a petition, signed by fifty-five of the Clergy of the Diocese of Norwich, in favour of the Catholic Claims.

Sir F. Burdett expressed his satisfaction at the petition, and also his dissatisfaction at the annual farce of bringing forward the Catholic question, year after year, sowing the seeds of danger, and fermenting all the bad passions. He believed, from what the Secretary of State had said, there was no chance of carrying the question in favour of the Catholics. The Right Hon. Gentleman had stated it to be his opinion that no Administration could ever be found whose Members could be brought to agree upon this measure, which was absolutely necessary to the peace and safety of the country. But there had been instances of Administrations who agreed upon this question. There was the Administration of Mr. Fox, undoubtedly there was at least a majority in the Cabinet at that time in favour of the question. They brought in a measure in its favour, which they could not certainly carry, because they found deserters in quarter where the present Government need not fear it. He contended that no man could honestly feel alarm at the consequences of carrying this measure. There was no longer a fear of a Catholic league of Sovereigns. That triumvirate the Pope, the Devil, and the Pretender, had no longer any terrors. The Pope, he believed, was now as harmless as any old lady in Christendom. There was an Hon. Baronet, the Member for Somersetshire, who seemed indeed to have a fear of the Jesuits of Ireland. He might as well wish for a renewal of the laws against witchcraft; for they had heard lately of three old women trying to draw blood of another, to take away her charms, as they termed it—and this was in Somersetshire too. The Hon. Baronet said, with respect to the state of Ireland on the question, they had now a Lord Lieutenant who was disposed, if he had the power, to protect the Catholics and administer equal laws, and he was a much more rare bird than a black swan. And for the Attorney-General, that he was pretty generally considered, in the Cabinet, as a black sheep. He concluded by reading an extract from a speech of Mr. Plunkett, delivered in 1813, upon the Catholic question, condemning the divisions which existed in the Cabinet at that time with regard to it.

Mr. Secretary Canning understood the Honourable Baronet to have said that he (Mr. C.) had held out that the Catholic cause was hopeless. He had said no such thing; he thought no such thing. He thought it hopeless to expect the forming of an Administration to agree upon this measure. He believed the question would make its way progressively unless Government united against it. There was no man in that House, whatever might be his politics, to whom he would not give his support on this question, thus differing from the sentiments of the Hon. Baronet. The acclamations which had followed the speech of the Honourable Baronet had certainly, in his opinion, diminished the chances of success; and although he would vote for the expected Motion of his Right Hon. Friend, he would almost advise him not to bring it forward.

Mr. Tierney would be no party to any act of secession. If the Right Hon. Gentleman failed in his motion, the Catholics would see how their interests had been trifled with. He, however, should always vote for the question; and if the Right Hon. Gentleman brought it on, and God gave him (Mr. T.) strength to sit out the debate, he would stop to divide with him, though he really thought the bringing it on would not do any good.

Mr. Wynne would support the question.

Mr. Henry Grey Bennet said he should explain why he intended, upon this question to take up his hat and leave the House. He had hitherto supported the Right Hon. Gentleman, because he believed that he advocated the cause with sincerity. He now thought the affair was a perfect trick; or what in familiar language was called a humbug. It was not the Right Hon. Gentleman coming down to that house with honied words, and fine sentences, which would convince him of his sincerity. He did not believe the Right Honourable Gentleman to be sincere.

Mr. Secretary Peel would rather consent to his eternal exclusion from office than consent to the slightest compromise of his opinions on this question. He had never deviated from principle upon it. He cared not for the opinions of others. Though all the people should be unanimous in favour of this question, he, so long as he remained unconvinced, should persist in his steady opposition to it.

Mr. Brougham said, the Right Hon. Secretary of State for the Home Department had opposed the question honestly and heartily. Of him no one could complain. But it was of others he complained; for if, when the question of the Right Hon. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs was, whether he would go into honourable exile, if, instead of submitting to this transportation abroad, he preferred submitting to hard labour at home, pitied even by his own friends, when his fate depended upon Lord Chancellor Eldon, and when he exhibited the most incredible instance of monstrous truckling, and of political tergiversation he had ever heard of——

Mr. Secretary Canning here interfered, and said, "Sir, I rise to declare that that is false."—(Loud cries of "Order, Chair, Chair!")

Mr. Brougham rose to leave the House.

The Speaker addressed the Right Hon. Secretary to retract the expression.

Mr. Secretary Canning said that he had no objection to alter the word, but no consideration on earth should induce him to retract the sentiment.

The Speaker then said, that the duty which now devolved upon him would admit of no compromise. It was not for him to remind the House of the course proper to be taken in such a case as the present. He believed it was well known that such an expression as had been used must be recalled without any qualification.

Mr. Secretary Canning said he should be sorry to fall under the displeasure of the House. He must submit with resignation to any censure it might inflict upon him, but he could not in his conscience admit that his impression was erroneous as to the expression applied to him.

The Speaker said he must then implore the support of the House substantially and effectively.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer suggested to the Hon. and Learned Gent. whether the language he had used to his Right Hon. Friend was not highly irritating, and whether he could detract from his character as a Member of that House if he retracted the language as applicable in a personal sense.

After some observations from Mr. Tierney, Lord A. Hamilton, and the Speaker,

Mr. Secretary Canning repeated that he should bow to the decision of the House, and receive its censure respectfully, but he could not either recall or vary the expression he had used.

Mr. Bankes was sorry the Right Hon. Secretary had not thought fit to do that which he might have done consistently with his own honour, thrown himself on the indulgence of the House, under all the circumstances of the case. This had not been done; and he apprehended that the regular course, with a view to prevent personal consequences, was to order both the Members to be taken into custody. The Hon. Member concluded by moving "That the Right Hon. Geo. Canning, and Henry Brougham, Esq. be committed to the custody of the Serjeant at Arms."

This motion having been seconded by Mr. Serjeant Onslow, this led to some further discussion, in which Mr. Wynn, Mr. Abercrombie, Mr. Wilmot, Sir F. Burdett, and Sir R. Wilson took part, the latter Hon. Member thought the words spoken by his Hon. and Learned Friend applied to the public character of the Right Hon. Gent. as Governor of India and Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and not personally, therefore the path for mutual explanation was open, and he thought the Right Hon. Secretary should take the lead.

Mr. Secretary Canning assented to the suggestion of the Hon. Member, and apologised to the House for having infringed the orders and rules. With respect to the expressions he had used, if the language of the Hon. and Learned Gent. was not intended personally, he retracted—if an avowal to that effect was not afforded to him, he retracted nothing.

The Speaker said, the point of consideration was, whether such offence was intended to be given; and if so, they would have to take steps to prevent its proceeding further. He (the Speaker) concluded, of course, that none was intended, and it remained for the House to have that opinion confirmed from the month of the Member who used the words.

Mr. Brougham said, the only words in his memory as having used, were the words "political tergiversation," and those words, he thought, had stood out sufficiently prominent in the context to give a clue to the intention of the whole phrase. It was a strong expression, but he had felt strongly on the subject on which he used them. He confessed he had a very strong feeling on that passage in the life of the Right Hon. Gent. to which he had referred. As a private individual he was bound to say, that he had never known him in any act or relation of life that did not do him honour. But having been joined with him in the same pursuit with regard to the Roman Catholics of Ireland, he did feel most poignantly that passage in his life wherein it had appeared to him he had sacrificed their interests. He had used that expression not for party reflections, and least of all for personal purposes.

Mr. Bankes withdrew his motion.

Mr. Tierney said it would be satisfactory to the House, if the Gentlemen would have the goodness to say that they would think no more of it.

Mr. Secretary Canning readily gave the pledge required, in saying he would think no more of it.

Mr. Brougham rose with pleasure to follow the Right Hon. Gent. in the same words he had himself used. He assured him and the House he would think no more of the matter. This was not the first time there had been embattled in political hostility against each other, and if none of it remained in the breast of the Right Hon. Gent. he assured him none remained in his.

After some observations on the Petition from Mr. Hume, Mr. R. Martin, Mr. S. Rice, Sir J. Newport, and Sir R. Heron, it was laid on the Table.

On the Order of the Day being read for going into the Catholic Claims, several Members rose and left the House. Among them were Lord Selton, Mr. Creevey, Sir F. Burdett, Mr. Hobhouse, Mr. G. Bennet, Mr. Hume, Mr. P. Moore, Mr. Ellice, Sir R. Ferguson, Mr. Coke, Lord Folkstone, Sir Robert Wilson, and Mr. Hume.

Mr. Plunkett never in his life had addressed that House under circumstances of so much difficulty. He found he had to sustain the cause of all the Roman Catholics, not only against its usual opponents, but against its ordinary supporters. The serious loss of those Gentlemen who had so ostentatiously withdrawn themselves was not so serious as the conduct of those who foretold the failure of this measure because of its advocate. Let the cause be what it would, it must be condemned by such a course. Mr. P. explained the cause why he had not brought the subject forward last year. The Right Hon. Gent. who formerly had charge of this great question, did not call the attention of the House to it early in the year; and after the very elaborate discussion which it underwent in 1821, he (Mr. Plunkett) thought it might be advantageous not to agitate it in 1822. It had been thought by others, and it was his opinion, that the claims of the Roman Catholics might be sometimes advantageously suffered to lie by, to afford time for deliberation. He felt convinced that the claims of the Catholics ought to be conceded as a matter of constitutional right, and further, he was convinced the measure was expedient, and absolutely necessary. He did not mean by this, that if it were not carried there would be any danger of a separation of the two countries, nor did he mean to say that its rejection would prove the immediate cause of disturbances in Ireland.—The declared sense of the House of Commons had been given in favour of a Bill similar to that which he wished to introduce. Besides the Bill of 1821, a second Bill had been passed favourable to Catholic Emancipation. Twice the sense of that House had been declared in favour of such a change of system as he was now about to recommend, for the Bill of 1822 did not confine itself to admitting Catholic Peers into Parliament, but it extended for making Catholics eligible to the Peerage. The numbers of the Roman Catholics had, on some occasions, been much exaggerated; and if the Bill which he wished to bring in, should pass, he was confident that the youngest man in the House would not live to see twenty Catholic Members in it. So convinced were the Roman Catholics of this, that they would not object to a limitation of the number of Catholics to be allowed to sit in Parliament. He should not propose a limitation, because it would involve a deviation from principle, for the purpose of meeting a danger which he held to be chimerical; but if any other Member should introduce such a provision into this Bill, he should not, if it were adopted, consider the measure to be lost. He was of opinion, that securities were necessary; and so much did he feel this, that he should disapprove of the passing of the Bill which he desired to see carried, if these could not be obtained. His Bill, if carried, would only relieve Roman Catholics from disabilities, of which Protestant Dissenters had not to complain, and put them on the same footing with other Dissenters from the Established Church. Some argued, that if such a Bill passed, the repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts must immediately follow. If ever the repeal of the Test and Corporation Acts should be proposed in that House, he would give such a measure his entire and hearty support. The Right Hon. Gentleman then took a review of the Reformation, and contended that his measure was not incompatible with the principles of it. The repeal of the Act of Supremacy was said to be at war with the Reformation. It was true that from the period of the Reformation we were to trace the present state of the country, and the rights, privileges, and duties which attached to the Crown. He however, denied that the exclusion of any class of subjects from that Representative Body, rested on any thing but Special Enactments. It was then to the Statute Law alone that they were to call for those exclusions of which the Catholics complained. He noticed the act of uniformity making the Protestant Religion that of the State, and maintained that the oath of supremacy was intended to be the test of loyalty, and not of religion, and not to exclude Roman Catholics from sitting in Parliament, or from holding office under the Crown. He compared the oath of 1821 with the oath of supremacy, and appealed to the House if the latter were opposed to the former. The object of the Act of Elizabeth was not to exclude, but to comprehend Catholics, by framing an oath which a loyal Catholic might be able to take. It would be found that in the reigns of James II. and Charles I. the Catholics were admitted to all offices under the Crown. The law remained such as he had described it with respect to Roman Catholics down to the time of Charles II. when it became necessary, as it was thought, to exclude Roman Catholics from Parliament. This was not because the Roman Catholics were then disloyal. They were not disloyal. There was at that period no Pretender, and no Jacobites, but the King himself had become prime traitor to the State, and loyalty to him was no longer loyalty to the Constitution. Whatever danger might be supposed to attach to the influence which the Pope, as head of the Catholic Church, might exercise in his realm, that danger existed now in as great a degree as it could rationally be expected to exist after the claims of the Catholics had been granted. If the Catholic were disposed to trifle with his conscience, what could prevent him from misconstruing the oath which he was now called upon to take. He now proceeded with reluctance to notice the arguments drawn from the Revolution against Catholic Emancipation. There was no greater mistake than that which was fallen into by those persons who supposed the Revolution and settlement had any thing to do with the system established by the 25th and 30th of Charles II. So far from this being the case the Revolution was at right angles with that system. The fact was, Charles II. had ceased to be the protector of the State. The Crown had formed the project of overturning the established religion. Having enlarged upon these topics at some length, the Right Hon. Gent. called upon the House to reject the idea of danger from the admission of persons of fixed religious principles to the Legislature. There was danger in admitting Atheists, and men who professed religion without feeling any, but there could be none in the admission of Roman Catholics who acted under a strong sense of moral obligation, and concluded by moving—"That this House do resolve itself into a Committee of the whole House, to consider the state of the laws by which oaths and a declaration must be taken as a qualification for the exercise of civil offices, by His Majesty's Roman Catholic subjects, and whether it may be expedient to remove such restrictions from Roman Catholics."

Mr. G. Bankes opposed the motion.

Mr. W. Becher supported it.

Mr. Lambton in not giving his vote for those claims the Right Hon. and Learned Gentleman had stated to the House, he did not abstain because he had changed his opinion on the subject, but because he considered the manner in which the question had been brought forward made it nothing but a gross deception on the Roman Catholics, by the Right Hon. and Learned Gentleman.

The Gallery was cleared for a division, and the question was put, to adjourn the debate till Friday. The numbers were—Ayes, 134—Noes, 292—Majority, 158.

A very stormy discussion then took place, with closed doors, and the House ultimately divided upon the amendment, "That this House do now adjourn." For the amendment, 313—Against it, 111—Majority for the adjournment, 202.—This got rid of the question respecting Catholics.

Two individuals have been apprehended at Putney, under strong circumstances of suspicion of being concerned in the murder of Mrs. Richards, of Clapham. They underwent examination before the Magistrates, at the Spread Eagle Inn, Wandsworth. They gave their names Winderbank and Sianderidge, and have the appearance of cads, or attendants on stage-coaches.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Our numerous correspondents must excuse us this week.

PRICE OF STOCKS AT THE CLOSE, SATURDAY.

During the past week, Consols for Account have been, at one period, as high as 77⅛; at the close they were 76¾. In the Foreign Market, Spanish Stock on Thursday was as high as 33. Columbian Bonds, on account of the prospect of their being acknowledged by the Republic, which were doing in the early part of last month at 47⅛, are this day at 67⅛, being an advance of 20 per cent. in that period.

3 per Cent. Red. . . 75⅜ ⅜	India Bonds 35 37
3 per Cent. Consols 76¼ ⅛ ¼	Exchequ. Bills, 2d 1000l. 15 17
3½ per Cent. ditto . .	Ditto . . . . . 500l.
4 per Cent. . . . . 94⅛ ⅜ ½	Small . . . . .
New 4 per Cent. . . 97⅛ 96⅝ 97	Con. for Acc. 76⅛ ⅜ ⅜ ½
Long Annuities . 19⅛

Letters from Paris quote the prices of French Stock as follow:—

FRENCH FUNDS, April 17.

5 per Ct. Con. 22 Sept. . 84·00	Bank Sh. Div. 1 July
Recon. Div. 22 Sept. . . .	Ex. Lond. 1mo. 25·65 3mo.

The Neapolitan 5 per Cents. Div. were at

JOHN BULL.

LONDON, APRIL 20.

THE KING is come to town, and the very event of itself seems to have given a new impulse to the metropolitan world. On Monday His MAJESTY holds a Levee, and on Wednesday, being St. George's Day, upon which the Royal Birth-day is kept, a Drawing-Room at Buckingham House.

We are not without hopes, although we have heard nothing upon the subject, that His Majesty will, during his stay in London, visit the theatres and the Opera. If he were aware of the anxiety which his subjects feel to behold him, and find themselves in his Royal presence, we are quite sure that in the gracious kindness of his disposition he would not hesitate to gratify their loyal and affectionate desires.

IT is with feelings of heartfelt satisfaction that we announce to our readers and the public in general the DECISIVE and DECIDED rejection of what are stupidly called the "CLAIMS" of the Roman Catholics.

When we announce this fact, we do not publish to the world a triumph effected by the exertions of five individuals—such as the Papists boasted of, last session—but we tell the world of a defeat of the principle of the question altogether, by THREE HUNDRED AND THIRTEEN Members of our House of Commons against ONE HUNDRED AND ELEVEN.—And we sincerely thank GOD that our exertions, in common with those of the other friends of the Constitutional Religion have so completely opened the eyes of our representatives that the paltry half-measured advocacy of conciliation, which must be our ruin if persisted in, has been unavailing—and that the line has been strongly drawn in the teeth of the KING'S Attorney-General for Ireland, and some of the King's Ministers, by a majority in Parliament rarely equalled upon recent divisions.

Much, much indeed, to interest one occurred on Thursday, if we may trust the reporters—and some of the events were strongly illustrative of the opinions which we have given of the reported conduct of MR. HENRY BROUGHAM in another part of to-day's paper.

We feel that it would be highly improper to say one word touching that which we are told took place between the RIGHT HON. GEORGE CANNING and MR. LAWYER BROUGHAM—we honestly confess that not being at present in Parliament ourselves we are not prepared to state what our feelings might be at having the "lie direct" given to our assertions in that Honourable House—and as the newspapers tell us that the House was perfectly satisfied with MR. BROUGHAM'S unqualified disclaimer of any thing which could be offensive to the Right Hon. Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, we can have nothing further to do with the matter except to refer our readers to the report of the debate; unless indeed, for the sake of directing the course of their reading, we were to quote the following passages as they appear in the TIMES newspaper of Friday—which, to save the valuable time of our friends, we will do:—

"MR. LAWYER BROUGHAM" (the TIMES tells us) "said, let the conduct of the Attorney-General for Ireland have been what it might; let him have deviated from his former professions or not, he (MR. BROUGHAM) did not say that the Hon. and learned Gent. had done so, but he would assume the fact: still, let the Right Hon. Foreign Secretary have come forward at that critical time for the question, and for his own character, when the point was, whether he should go to India, into honourable exile (hear, hear), or take office in England, and not submit to his sentence of transportation (hear, hear), but be condemned to hard labour in his own country—(cheers and laughter)—doomed to the disquiet of a divided council—sitting with his enemies, and pitied by his friends—(much cheering)—with his hands chained and tied down on all those lines of operation which his own sentiments and wishes would have led him to adopt (continued cheering)—let it have been at that critical moment, when his fate had depended upon LORD CHANCELLOR ELDON, and his sentiments upon the Catholic cause—if at that critical moment he who had said on the last night that he would nottruckle to a Noble Lord (LORD FOLKSTONE), but who then had exhibited a specimen—the most incredible specimen—of monstrous truckling for the purpose of obtaining office, which the whole history of political tergiversation could furnish."

"MR. CANNING—I RISE TO SAY THAT, THAT IS FALSE."

Then proceeded, it appears, a discussion in which MR. CANNING refused to retract one single iota of what he had said.

The TIMES newspaper proceeds to tell us that by and bye—but we really cannot believe these reporters—this foul-mouthed Edinburgh Reviewer proceeded to say what follows, by way of explanation:—

"What he (MR. BROUGHAM) meant, then, to say, was this—he used the words "political tergiversation"—he described the conduct of the Right Hon. Gentleman as something which stood out in the history of Parliamentary tergiversation. The expression, he admitted, was strong; he felt strongly, and he thought it was an expression which he had heard used over and over again without its having given offence (hear, hear): he was sure he had never heard of any occasion on which it was more accurately applied. He entertained a strong feeling, and he had meant to express it with respect to the Right Hon. Member's public and political life. As a private individual, he had never known aught of him but what did him the highest honour, and as having been connected with himself heretofore in advocating this very cause of Catholic emancipation. He did feel strongly on this passage of the Right Hon. Gentleman's conduct, but he had not used the expressions which had been alluded to for party, or for factious, and least of all for personal purposes."

Why, the reporter to the TIMES deserves to be whipped—as his Master was,—by deputy—for this shameful libel;—he puts not only unworthy language into Lawyer BROUGHAM'S mouth, but downright—sheer—pure nonsense.

He makes him charge MR. CANNING with truckling for the sake of obtaining office, and with five hundred other paltry and unprincipled acts—he then makes MR. CANNING give him the lie, and concludes by making this very Lawyer not only disavow any intention of offending MR. CANNING, but say that he used the language which produced the strong and spirited—yet very disorderly—negative of the Right Hon. Secretary—"not for party, or for factious, and least of all for personal purposes."

Now, how can the TIMES paper, which, with all its political faults, gives the reports well, and may be supposed to lean towards LAWYER BROUGHAM, attribute such arrant stuff to a gentleman so well known as the Author of a book upon "Colonial Policy," in which he treats the subjects of SLAVES and SLAVERY with great ability, and of several articles in the Edinburgh Review? How can that paper make such a man say, that he charges another man with meanness, truckling, tergiversation, a thirst of place, &c. &c. &c. &c. and yet means nothing—"party," "factious," or "personal?"

If the TIMES had made BROUGHAM disclaim "personality," we could have understood why it did so, because there are places in this great town where a man may say just what he pleases to another, and explanation, and a peace officer set it right, without injury to the honour or character of the sayer or the sayee; but that a person of MR. BROUGHAM'S spirit and talent, after having said every thing offensive to which his tongue could give utterance, should disclaim any intention, politically or personally—publicly or privately, to offend the object of his vituperation, we cannot possibly believe. We know LAWYER BROUGHAM too well to fancy that he would waste his breath inefficiently, and without meaning something, and with the very great respect we have for his genius and talent, we are mortified to find, that a dirty-faced Editor of a newspaper should have it in his power so to misrepresent a man, whose integrity equals his ability, and whose magnanimity is on a par with his eloquence.

Speaking of MR. CANNING and MR. BROUGHAM as individuals, and not in their characters as Members of Parliament, in which we are the last persons upon earth to notice their conduct except with veneration, they happen to be two very extraordinary persons for those newspaper reporters to have fixed upon as the leading characters in the affair which they tell us occurred on Thursday; for it is not the first time that circumstances very similar have occurred to both of them; we mean, OUT of Parliament, of course.

It will be recollected, that SIR FRANCIS BURDETT, when in Jail for a libel, wrote to some public meeting of Jacobins at a tavern, a letter, in which the following passage occurred:

"Gentlemen, that MR. CANNING (I mention him as the champion of the party—a part for the whole) should defend to the uttermost a system by the hocus pocus tricks of which he and his family got so much public money can cause neither me nor any man surprise or anger,

"For 'tis their duty all the learned think
"T' espouse the cause by which they eat and drink."

Upon this special occasion, MR. CANNING sent to SIR FRANCIS BURDETT a letter, by the hands of LORD WILLIAM BENTINCK, requiring an explanation, upon which SIR FRANCIS returns an answer, in which are these words:—

"Not having intended, and not having made, as I read the letter, any such allusion (to PERSONAL CHARACTER) at the time, I cannot now hesitate, in a more particular manner, to disclaim having ever had such an intention."

Nothing could be more satisfactory to MR. CANNING than this explanation, and so far we have shewn a precedent—out of Parliament—for a disavowal made by the newspaper reporters for MR. BROUGHAM, as they say, in Parliament.

The other case—we mean where LAWYER BROUGHAM has been publicly accused of falsehood—occurs in a published correspondence between him and ROBERT M'KERRELL, ESQ. in the year 1812, in which, after a certain number of letters had passed between them, MR. M'KERRELL concludes the affair and the correspondence together, with this paragraph, addressed to HENRY BROUGHAM, ESQ. himself:—

"I shall now take leave of MR. BROUGHAM. In my conduct at the Bar of the House of Commons, I feel that I acquitted myself candidly, conscientiously, and honourably; and I trust the impartial public will feel, that there has been nothing in my proceedings towards MR. BROUGHAM, that should induce me to submit in silence to be the victim of his COOL, DELIBERATE MISREPRESENTATION AND FALSEHOOD. —I am, Sir, your most obedient servant,

ROBERT M'KERRELL."

We have merely quoted these two circumstances, in something like justification of the TIMES, to shew how men out of Parliament will qualify their own attacks, and submit to the attacks of others. We must be permitted, however, to remain sceptical as to the conduct of persons in the House of Commons, of which it must be clear we can know nothing but by hearsay.

Speaking, as we have just done, of SIR FRANCIS BURDETT—and now that he is nearly burnt out, we do not dislike his flickerings—the reporters do him an injustice; in their account of the same debate, they make him declare that there are "no Popish plots in Ireland"—that "the Pope is an old "woman," and so on.

Now, the fact is, that the Pope is NOT an old woman, but a much more disagreeable thing—an old man; yet his infallibility is as young, and genuine, and powerful, as it was on the first day of the Pontificate; and as to there being no Popish conspiracies in Ireland—hear the ATTORNEY-GENERAL PLUNKETT—listen to his eloquent speech, which we quoted last week. We say ditto to MR. ATTORNEY-GENERAL; we know that there are Popish plots and conspiracies; and we know that SIR FRANCIS BURDETT knows the same thing: and therefore shame be to the TIMES for misrepresenting that Honourable Member.

Moreover, the TIMES makes SIR FRANCIS BURDETT ridicule SIR THOMAS LETHBRIDGE, and laugh at him in "good set terms," whereas we do not believe that the Honourable Baronet did any such thing, because we believe SIR FRANCIS to be a man of a very forgiving disposition, and do not think that at this distance of time he would retaliate upon SIR THOMAS for having, before he ratted, moved SIR FRANCIS'S commitment to prison for a libel, which it is fresh in the memories of all our readers the Hon. Member for Somersetshire actually did "with his hair standing on end!"

Another thing the reporters tell us, of which we are equally incredulous—they say that BENNET called the Catholic question HUMBUG—this is impossible—HUMBUG is our word which we have often applied to him—we do not believe that he ever stole it from us.

Finally, they tell us that as soon as MR. PLUNKETT rose to speak upon the important topic that all the MOUNTAINEERS retired—this is another mistake surely—because there is something so indescribably ridiculous in a party giving the thing up as a bad job, and quitting the House because they could not have every thing their own way, that we never can seriously fancy the thing to be true.

In one story, however, there can be no deception—we mean the division—the numbers, as we before said, were THREE HUNDRED and THIRTEEN, to ONE HUNDRED and ELEVEN; and we think, if any thing were wanting to refute the infamous calumnies cast upon the British House of Commons, nothing could more clearly establish their absurdity, falsehood, and wickedness than the one plain simple fact—that last year, when MR. CANNING was out of power and out of place, his motion for repealing the restrictions rendering Roman Catholic Peers ineligible to sit in the House of Lords was carried—two hundred and forty-nine Members voting for it; that his Bill to the same effect was carried [illegible] reading by the votes of TWO HUNDRED and THIRTY-[illegible] and that NOW, when truth has been disseminated [illegible] real objects of the petitioning Papists laid open, MR. CANN[illegible] as Minister for Foreign Affairs, with all his weight, [illegible] and splendid talents to boot, is beaten on his favourite [illegible] tion by the voices of THREE HUNDRED and THIRTEEN [illegible] bers of the Commons House of Parliament!

When we add that the supporters of the Catholic [illegible] on Thursday evening were my LORD NUGENT and the [illegible] man who is known only as having married Miss [illegible] Covent Garden Theatre, we think we may leave the [illegible] to themselves and their reflections.

MR. BROWNLOW'S promised motion of censure upon [illegible] torney-General of Ireland, in reference to the late trials [illegible] spiracy and riot, was brought forward on Tuesday. The [illegible] of the latter gentleman, in his defence, was marked [illegible] ability for which he is distinguished; and we cannot [illegible] do we wish to do so, that he appears to have made [illegible] case in a legal and even Constitutional point of view, [illegible] say legal, and even Constitutional, because we think, [illegible] face of some opinions delivered upon the occasion, the [illegible] are legal constructions of a law of which the spirit of [illegible] stitution would revolt at the practice. In the case [illegible] however, we repeat, that the Right Hon. Gentleman [illegible] to have the law in his favour. But this does not [illegible] the great question before the public. Where it is ne[illegible] to bring proofs, or to cite authorities in support of a [illegible] quent practice, it may generally be inferred that th[illegible] something peculiar in it, from the very fact of its [illegible] and the question of right is superseded by that of [illegible] or of the peculiar urgency of the case to which it [illegible] applied. The real object of enquiry is, consequently, [illegible] present instance, whether the Attorney-General was [illegible] out by the circumstances of this special case to have [illegible] to an obsolete practice, or, in the words of MR. BROWN[illegible] motion, whether it was not "unwise" to exercise a [illegible] "not beyond the law," yet only just within its [illegible] verge? The Right Honourable Gentleman, even [illegible] produced evidence, that might stagger those who are [illegible] posed to support the exercise of extraordinary [illegible] IF the statements he has made can be substantially [illegible] we must candidly admit that he appears to have used [illegible] discretion in resorting to it.

COLONEL BARRY and MR. ELLIS, it seems, [illegible] doubts respecting the authenticity of the information [illegible] which the Attorney-General has made these statements [illegible] that active citizen, SIR FRANCIS BURDETT, the [illegible] active MR. BROUGHAM, who only talked of it, [illegible] to bring this to the test, by a specific motion upon [illegible] duct of the Sheriff, who appointed the Grand Jury. [illegible] bound, therefore, to suspend our final opinion upon [illegible] duct of MR. PLUNKETT, until evidence has been [illegible] on both sides.

The Right Hon. Gentleman, however, as he appe[illegible] anxious to stand before his country, as a man divested [illegible] party feelings—we conceive went a little out of his [illegible] evince the fashionable hatred and contempt he entertains [illegible] the ORANGE SOCIETIES of Ireland—although compelled, [illegible] he is compelled to admit, of men of the highest [illegible] most distinguished virtues! This, when coupled [illegible] being the very organ of the ROMAN CATHOLICS—[illegible] has been emphatically called, the ROCK of Popery—[illegible] an extraordinary instance of self-delusion, or, which is infinitely less defensible—of an apparent disposition to [illegible] others; but on this head the Right Hon. Gentleman [illegible] occupy a much larger and less qualified share of our attention and of our comments.

Alas! what would our forefathers have said [illegible] have anticipated the pollution of THE TEMPLE, [illegible] their pious labours!—the invasion of the SANCTUARY in their piety and patriotism they had hedged round [illegible] eternal principles of our holy faith, and every sanction [illegible] human wisdom could devise as permanently binding [illegible] CHRISTIANS and BRITONS?—What would be their [illegible] to behold all these coarsely and rudely torn aside—[illegible] floor, on which they stood the champions of PROTESTANCY and FREEDOM, and erected their firmest bulwarks, [illegible] an arena to battle the revived claims of a REPROBATE HERESY, from which they had divorced their country? "vigour beyond the law,"—by the sacrifice of hereditary succession in the person of the Monarch—and with a decided intellect and patriotism, which their degenerate descendants can as little appreciate as profit by!

These men have succeeded in an eminent degree, in modern manœuvre of throwing an air of ridicule—and over the most sacred institutions of the country—[illegible] over every popular expression, which our wiser fathers considered as the watch-words of liberty; and to appeal to people upon these laboured attempts to RESTORE THE PISTS TO POWER—is to be classed among "No Popery BIGOTS, and FANATICS!—Are these the CONSTITUTIONAL WHIGS—are these the men to whom the POET and the TRIOT equally addressed their appeals and exhortations to defend the ALTAR and the THRONE from the descendants of POPERY and DESPOTISM?—Is it to such that [illegible] could appeal—as when a nation bent in admiration to [illegible] its duty, in the rich flow of his patriotic muse!

"WILLIAM'S great hand was doomed to break that chain
"And end the hopes of ROME'S tyrannic reign.
"FOR EVER, as the circling years return,
"Ye grateful BRITONS, CROWN THE HERO'S URN:
"To his just care you every blessing owe,
"Which, or his own, or following reigns bestow."

Is it by the LIBERAL advocates for equal protection to "of all denominations" that the WHIG POET will now be tened to—by men who would PREFER—for wills they have precedence of what is established—to educate our children, and have them—

"Nurtured by proud presuming ROMISH PRIESTS,
"Taught to believe THEY only cannot err,
"Because they cannot SEE—bred up in scorn
"Of REASON and the whole lay world; instructed "To HATE whoe'er dissent from what they teach—
"To purge the world from HERESY—BY BLOOD!
"To MASSACRE A NATION! (Hear, hear, from MR. PLUNKETT)
"and believe it
"An act well pleasing to the Lord of mercy.
"THESE ARE THY GODS, OH ROME! and THIS THY FAITH!"

Let our readers refer only to EXISTING PROOFS for a justice of the poet's charge in our own days—to this Right Hon. the Attorney-General for Ireland—and to the evidences which WE produced in our last Number!—and they will decide whether

"Our Church shall veil her sacred front,
"That once from heaps of Gothic ruins rose,
"In her first native, simple majesty
"The toil of saints and price of martyrs' blood.

"——Oragain Old Rome
" Spread out her Banners, and her Monkish host
" Pride, ignorance, and rapine—
" Blind, bloody zeal, and cruel priestly power
" To scourge the land for ten dark ages more!"

The Papers and Correspondence relative to our Continental policy, were laid before Parliament by my Lord Liverpool and Mr. Secretary Canning, on Monday, according to their previous notice, by His Majesty's command.

We profess to retain little of the character of our contemporaries in the art of wire-drawing, or what is perhaps better called "splitting hairs," upon the details of political warfare. We rarely descend to them, except upon questions, whereon the "cunningness" of the artist has been exercised, to give currency to FALSE PRINCIPLES, by an ingenious adaptation of materials, and where an analysis of them becomes necessary, in order to expose the nature and obliquity of their tendency.

Ministers—whose conduct, if we were to form our opinion of it from their liberal opponents, is always suspicious, designing, and equivocal—are, in fact, the plainest and most open dealing men in the country; and setting aside the honourable motives which must ever influence the policy of those who act upon fixed and consistent principles, they could have no possible inducement to adopt a line of conduct, which we may presume is absolutely necessary—from their invariable adherence to it—on the part of a WHIG OPPOSITION!

The Papers and Documents, therefore, which are thus laid open to the public, have nothing of novelty in them, beyond the minuter details of that line of policy which the Noble Lord and the Right Honourable Secretary avowed at the commencement of the Session. All comment upon them is consequently superfluous, further than the general expression of our conviction, that every man who has the interests and dignity of his country at heart, will be fully satisfied, that BOTH have been essentially consulted and secured by the BRITISH GOVERNMENT, and her gallant and efficient negociator.

The little that was urged against Ministers by their opponents, might have been as well—though not perhaps in such rhetorical amplification—said by any old woman, who had jealously earned the character of a scold, by long village practice!—How often is a WHIG to be told, that invective has no more to do with argument, than JACOBINISM with the ENGLISH CONSTITUTION!

We might have anticipated all that was said by my LORD GREY and my LORD KING. The imbecility of Ministers, and the inefficiency of their measures, which only relieved Europe from the yoke of an universal conqueror, are topics so obvious that they may be considered as the burthen of every WHIG chaunt—and the expletives of every WHIG diatribe! So that such language as is imputed by those scandalous persons, the reporters, to MR. BROUGHAM, was ever employed by that Gentleman, WE, who can duly appreciate his talents, and the discursive flights of his most fertile imagination, when employed as a pamphleteer, or a paid advocate for libels against "Principalities and Powers," must utterly deny—under the full conviction that in the British Senate some one would have been found bold enough to call an honourable and even a learned Member to "order" for such a transgression of the common principles of decency.

Now, we conceive these reporters, (unless indeed they covertly meant to turn the tables upon the Honourable and learned Gentleman, and to libel him by way of experiment upon his patience—a very hazardous one, they must allow us to observe) must certainly have been guilty of an egregious error, in putting such words into the mouth of a senator, not only distinguished for his advocacy of liberal sentiments, but singular for his sensitiveness on the score of personal reflections!

There is only this to be said in extenuation of the offence of these persons: that some of the grossest libels, as stated, are put into the mouths (hypothetically) of Ministers, whom the Honourable and learned Gentleman is made humorously to represent in his own person. He addresses the Congress at Verona, in their name, as follows; and if our readers doubt the fact, we refer them to the official columns of the Whig records.

"Gentlemen of the Congress—Emperors of Verona, King of France, and Chateaubriand, Brummegem Minister and Pamphleteer, Scribbler of bad Pamphlets and worse Manifestoes, we will not do" so and so. We merely stop the mode of address; the matter addressed might possibly have been Mr. Brougham's, because there is nothing in it, but the sort of general Whig doctrine, that love of place is as strongly grafted in the heart of a statesman as a love of life; which feeling is no doubt perfectly sincere among those who have been denied the opportunity of making a just and personal comparison between them.

But we must again deny the possibility of even MR. BROUGHAM calling the whole race of BOURBONS and their PROFLIGATE HANDFUL OF IMBECILES," their Ministers, "WRETCHES!!!"—because though a WHIG may take great liberties with our own Ministers—it would indeed be hard if we could not take such a liberty with what is our own!—yet there are certain limits which something stronger than the conventional courtesies of life has set to this WHIG propensity; which though it do not operate in screening even "CROWNED HEADS" from the vituperation and scurrility, might in the spirit of Bienseance, be extended to men whose only crime appears to be a difference of opinion with the GREAT WHIG LEADERS of Great Britain. They should recollect how many there are nearer home who are guilty of the same offence, with the grievous aggravation of having rendered their opinion effective, in keeping these gentlemen out of office even as BRUMMEGAM MINISTERS, for the last thirty years!

Alas! we have been called libellous—and every coarse and gross invective has been resorted to by the WHIG and RADICAL PRESS—by way of illustration, we presume, to convince the world that we are "vastly indecorous," and "villanously given" to traduce high, and to degrade virtuous character!! We were unconscious of our transgression, and we have shewn in another part of to-day's paper, stood on our defence when any specific charge could be brought against us—perfectly satisfied in our own minds, that we never in one single instance invented a calumny, even to serve a present purpose, nor ever made an attack, where either the FALSE PRETENSIONS, FOLLY, or IGNORANCE, OBSCENESS, TREACHERY, or HUMBUG of the parties did not fully justify it; and which, as the friends to our King, our Constitution, our Laws, and our Liberties, OUR DUTY imposed on us; but we have discovered our error, although, like many others in a similar predicament, we do not pledge ourselves to amend it!

By a train of reasoning, peculiarly their own, the WHIGS have inferred that within the circumscribed province of BIGGERY, are exclusively to be found, ALL the virtues as well as ALL the talents of the country. It follows, of course, that any imputation cast upon them, must be founded in injustice, and a fortiori, that to render them objects of CONTEMPT or RIDICULE in the face of the public, is de facto LIBELLOUS! Nothing can be more natural, and this will account for the easy credulity of those reporters, who, without a tremor or a blush, make MR. BROUGHAM pronounce in plain and unceremonious phrase the WHIG OPINIONS respecting KINGS and CABINETS, and call them in honest English, "PROFLIGATE WRETCHES" and "BRUMMEGAM MINISTERS," for being "wickedly and maliciously" (like too many of ourselves) blind to the stoical virtues of these "children and champions" of LIBERALITY, and even obstinately averse to the patriotic dogmas derived from the unstained source of either BRUTUS, or the more modern commentaries of PAINE, ANARCHARSIS CLOOTS, or the Theophilanthropists of France, Spain, Naples, and Great Britain!

The public, as well as ourselves, however, have derived some advantage from these new lights, and the law of libel, which has puzzled and confounded so many of our lawyers and statesmen, is now so clearly defined, that he who infringes it, must needs do so with his eyes open!—It may be thus digested:—

"To discover or lay open any supposed or implied error, blot, or blemish on the reputation, principles, or motives of a WHIG or WHIG RADICAL, is ipso facto LIBELLOUS, and all persons so offending are hereby declared guilty of LIBEL. And whereas ALL EMPERORS, KINGS, MINISTERS, MAGISTRATES OF ALL DESCRIPTIONS, AND CLERGY OF ALL ESTABLISHED CREEDS, not having the fear of WHIGGERY before their eyes, or wilfully shutting their eyes against the conviction of its TRUTH and ORTHODOXY, have forfeited all the rights of 'TRUE CITIZENSHIP,' they are hereby delivered over to the just judgment of all true adherents to the 'GOOD OLD CAUSE,' who, at their own discretion, may LAMPOON, VILIFY, TRADUCE, and to the utmost of their power render them objects of PUBLIC OBLOQUY and HATRED, under the licence and allowance of the only legitimate plea and practice of—PATRIOTISM!!!"

But to be serious—we must deeply lament that MR. CANNING appears to have found it necessary to vituperate the French Government in the unqualified manner attributed to him in the newspapers—it seems to us that the conduct and language imputed by the reporters to the Right Hon. Gentleman are parts of the system which we deprecate, and which we will never cease to oppose and decry, so long as it is acted upon—we mean the system of,—what is called conciliation.

WAR is the present watch-word of the Whigs—PEACE is the strong hold for the country—why, then, when such is the case, and when it is as clear as light that a war would be as ruinous as it is unnecessary, indulge in language likely to produce a result so needless and so injurious? If, as the MORNING CHRONICLE does,—His Majesty's Ministers, or any part of them, take to abusing the BOURBONS merely because they think it may be done with impunity, we consider their attacks upon them the less excusable,—if the French Government really be in a state to endure the grossest insults and most unbounded invective and ridicule without the power of resenting them, is it manly—is it characteristic of a British Statesman to justify a determination not to interfere in their favour by a description of conduct on their part, as strong and glowing as any thing we have ever seen published in a reported speech in Parliament?

If this denunciation of the French be not preparatory to an avowal of support to the Spaniards, why is it made? If a Whig Minister had launched forth upon such an occasion in such a manner we should have attributed his conduct to a trimming love of popularity—a desire to stand well with all parties, and to shew a personal disposition towards a policy which in his official character he was unable to carry into effect.

But MR. CANNING is far above such unworthy manœuvring, and we therefore attribute, as we said before, to the conciliatory system,—to that desire of soothing an opposition which in their hearts they must despise, and over whom their triumph might be decided and complete if they choose—that language and conduct which devote the KING of FRANCE to ignominy and contempt—which have thrown a damp, if not a stigma upon the loyal Protestants of Ireland, and which have brought the sister kingdom to a state of insubordination, which nothing but DECISION and FIRMNESS will abate.

If any thing were wanting to shew the inefficacy of the HUMBUG of conciliation, we may mention, that while MR. WILLIAM CONYNGHAM PLUNKETT, the patron of the Roman Catholics, the advocate for their Emancipation! was wasting his eloquence in their cause and in their behoof, his own farms and stack-yards were actually blazing to destruction, having been fired by parties of POPISH PEASANTRY!

The manly rejection of the Popish claims! as their petitions are called—we have noticed in another part of the paper. Ministers should take a lesson from Parliament, which has boldly done its duty upon this most vital question.

IT was the fashion at one time with the Radicals to set up a cry against us for scurrility—and so sensitive did these gentry appear, that the mention of a "dead lady" set them into fits of horror and amazement.

We certainly have had, and still have, a somewhat uncourteous way of calling every thing by its right name—but we never wantonly offended a living person, or injured the memory of a dead one. Some strong cause—at a time too when mincing the matter would have lost the country—was always to be found for our violence, and as we have a thousand times said, we now repeat, that with respect to ladies, no lady's name, even in the heat of the revolutionary campaign of Brandenburgh, was mentioned by us, who had not by herself or her family been published as the supporter of vice and the advocate of infamy.

But what shall we say when we find in the columns of one of those pure papers, which animadverted with all its pigmy power upon our grossness, an article from which the following is an extract. The BOURBONS—of all the families in the world—are now objects of hatred to the TIMES newspaper, and speaking in anticipation of crimes which the connexions of the Bourbons, it is imagined by the learned editor of that luminous journal, may probably at some future period be induced to commit—he says:—

"Unhappily, a precedent may be found for such atrocities; but only in the conduct of another branch of the BOURBON race, restored to despotism by foreign aid, and that the aid of England. The Liberals of Naples laid down their arms on the faith of a British Admiral, that their lives should be spared. The Royal Family returned, and the stipulation was disregarded. The Queen herself, attended by an ENGLISH STRUMPET, feasted her eyes with the last convulsions of the gallant CARRACCIOLI."

Now, considering that the attack is here made upon the BOURBONS for the murder of CARRACCIOLI, we should have thought it unnecessary to introduce another party to the crime, because if it could be imagined that the death of that man (whose name, he having been hanged, the cockney paper constitutionally dignifies with a sounding epithet,) was brought about by English agency, the criminality charged against the BOURBONS is considerably diminished; and if this be not the case, the fact that the QUEEN of NAPLES was on the day of the execution attended by a lady who was her constant companion can hardly entitle her to a share of the blame.

But when our readers recollect that this ENGLISHWOMAN (proclaimed to the ENGLISH nation by the TIMES newspaper as an "ENGLISH STRUMPET") was the wife of SIR WILLIAM HAMILTON, the ENGLISH Ambassador at Naples—that to this wife of this ENGLISH Ambassador, the strength of her intellect, the patriotism of her heart, and the weight of her influence, NELSON, the IMMORTAL, has told the ENGLISH nation that the VICTORY OF THE NILE was chiefly owing—they will, if not surprized at the political motives which could induce a man to brand such a woman's memory with such a term, marvel at the delicacy of a paper which not long since affected to shudder at common-place allusions to ladies, who had published themselves as the partizans of vice and infamy, and yet, for the sake of traducing a branch of the Bourbons, would stigmatize in the coarsest, vulgarest, and most abominable language, a dead woman, whose private faults, whatever they might have been, were never exhibited as an EXAMPLE to the country, and whose public conduct at the time specially referred to by the Radical paper, was in the highest degree national and patriotic.

IF the moral feeling of the country is still so sunk in apathy, as to view what is daily passing, in open day, before it without being roused to active measures to counteract or repel the coming storm, we may consider ourselves as not upon the eve, but actually in the first stage of REVOLUTION. The arguments attributed to MR. HUME, in presenting a late petition from the CARLILES, betrayed so utter an ignorance of his subject, and of even the nature and principles of the Christian religion, as well as of the national Church, that we did not think them worthy of notice at the time, from the conviction, that their mischievous tendency would be effectually counteracted by the ridiculous point of view in which they would appear even to the most ignorant portion of the community. It is not, however, possible to be quite silent, although it may be impossible to express our sentiments in adequate terms of reprobation upon the views avowed even by such a man, when we consider that he is now the LEADER OF THE WHIGS in Parliament, and the official organ of their opinions upon the presentation of a petition of a society of FREE THINKERS!!!

DO, for God's sake, ENGLISHMEN, turn back to the pages of your former history, and refresh yourselves by a recurrence to the PRINCIPLES to which alone, you are indebted for that elevation among the nations of Europe, from which such awful symptoms of your impending fall are hourly presenting themselves.

Societies of impious and abandoned beings have been for two years established in Edinburgh and Glasgow, open to the lowest and most ignorant orders of the community, for the express and avowed purpose not only of "turning the CHRISTIAN RELIGION into ridicule," but of DENYING THE EXISTENCE OF A GOD, and inculcating these precious principles upon the minds of "school-boys and children introduced for the purpose by the members!"

When the Lord Advocate of Scotland was PUT UPON HIS DEFENCE by the advocate of these ILLUMINATI—these docile pupils of Scotch metaphysics, and worshippers of Messrs. BROUGHAM and JEFFREY'S Northern Star—he avowed and defended his interference upon the sound basis of moral feeling and legal authority. What say MR. HUME and his assessor, MR. MONCK—of whom we profess to know nothing.

According to the reporters—"The latter gentleman wished to know whether there were JEWS in Edinburgh? He believed there were. Now JEWS were decidedly more hostile to Christianity than those PHILOSOPHERS WHO FELL UNDER THE DISPLEASURE OF THE NOBLE LORD!!!"—The minor count of Atheism is dismissed without a comment! But MR. HUME (surely the reporters were dreaming, or the country is too soundly asleep to be roused) is made to say, that he considered "the doctrine of the law" (originating in the best periods of our history, and acted upon in the most lenient construction of it by the Lord Advocate) "IS A VERY HORRID ONE! He (MR. JOSEPH HUME) was convinced that the Christian religion could ONLY STAND UPON THE GROUND OF DISCUSSION AND FREE INQUIRY. The proceeding altogether was not to be defended!!"

If this very Honourable Gentleman and supporter of Christianity by discussion and free inquiry, can, by any possibility, be supposed to have uttered what the reporters have put into his mouth—surely, surely, some one Member of the House would have been found to shew him that the soundest maxims of policy, as well as the purest aphorisms of morality, may, by a tortuous application of them, be made the mischievous means of perverting the character of both. No one might have been disposed to puzzle the Honourable Gentleman by a reference to the known adage, that even "summum jus" is sometimes "summa injuria;" but they might, without danger of being misunderstood, have reminded him, in plain English, that, generally speaking, although the truth may not suffer from free discussion, among tolerably equal opponents, yet, that in many instances, this result will be contingent upon the inducements which the opposing party may hold out to the passions or prejudices of those who are left to decide it.—BUT, that where TRUTH is denied in limine—for example, the "advantages of morality in its influence upon "society" (we will put religion out of the question, as MR. HUME appears to do) and the opposite principle, or ERROR, is defended—as it would be in a club of HIGHWAYMEN or JACOBINS—as the MOST expedient, and therefore the most lucrative, to those who profess and maintain it, the result—we trust—cannot for a moment be questioned. No, no—as SHERIDAN, who was conversant with the SURFACES, has it—"we "shall not stand in need of YOUR MORALITY, brother JOSEPH!"—or if we should, GOD help the country out of it; for it THEN will be beyond the help of man!

EPITAPH FOR THE TOMB AT ST. HELENA.

De mortuis nil nisi VERUM!

STRANGER, behold this tomb—but spare thy tear—
No buried virtues can demand it here.
This spot, within a narrow cell, contains
The man who held half Europe in his chains!
'Till GLORIOUS WELLINGTON those fetters broke,
And freed the nations from the TYRANT'S yoke!
He lived an object both of fear and hate,
And, with unbounded power, was never great:
When proud success was his, on fortune's flood,
He proved no hero—but a man of blood.
Ambition, rapine, murder, blasted fame,
Inscribe this stone with BUONAPARTE'S name!

W. T. F——G.

THEATRICALS.

We have been called upon from several quarters to notice what is held by many of our readers to be little less than a public nuisance, and which we ourselves see somewhat in the same light—we mean the extraordinary want of delicacy—may we not say decency?—in the conduct of the Ballet at the Opera House in the Haymarket.

We have no wish to affect a squeamishness which we have not, with respect to the exhibition of the female dancers upon that stage; nor, judging by a late event, have the evolutions and revolutions of the Terpsichorean art, as practised by foreigners, the same effect upon all of us. However, it is an acknowledged fact, that Love has the power, not only to blind his votaries to imperfections, but, by a process peculiar to his vagrant Godship, to turn foibles into graces, vices into virtues, and improprieties into attractions, and therefore when the matter becomes one of the heart, the office of the head is reduced to a sinecure.

Now, not being at this present writing in love with any opera dancer, we can see with "eyes unprejudiced" that the performances to which we allude are in the highest possible degree objectionable, as referring to taste, and disgusting, as relating to decency.

First then as to taste—nobody upon earth, we should think, can be bold enough to assert that the horizontal elevation of the female leg and the rapid twisting of the body—the subsequent attitude and expansion of the arms—are graceful—we mean merely as to dancing. No man certainly, except those whose intellects and appetites are more debased than those of men in general, can feel either amusement or gratification in such an exhibition.

Woman is so charming, so fascinating, so winning, and so ruling by the attractions which properly belong to her—by her delicacy—her gentleness—and—her modesty—that we honestly confess, whenever we see a lovely girl doing that which degrades her, which must lower her even in her own estimation, we feel a pang of regret, and lament to find conduct applauded to the very echo which reduces the beautiful creature before us to a mere animal—in a state of exhibition.

But if there really be men who take delight in the "Ionici motus" of the Italian Opera, surely our own women should be spared the sight of such indelicacies—nothing which the Roman satirist mentions as tending to destroy the delicate feelings of the female sex, could possibly be worse than those which week after week may be seen in the Haymarket.

We have strenuously attacked, for its unnatural indecency, the custom of dressing actresses in mens' attire upon the English stage, but a lady in small clothes is better on a public theatre than a lady with no clothes at all.

We are quite ready to admit, without in the smallest degree lamenting, the superiority of Foreigners over the natives of England in the art and mystery of cutting capers, and if the ladies and gentlemen annually imported jumped as high as the voltenrs in POTIER'S "DANAIDES," at the Porte St. Martin—neither would our envy nor our grief be excited, but we certainly do eye with mistrust and jealousy the avidity with which "Foreign manners," "Foreign customs," and "Foreign morality," are received into our dear and much loved country.

While custom sanctions the nightly commission of waltzing in our best society, it perhaps is only matter of consolation to the matrons who permit their daughters to be operated upon in the mysteries of that dance to see, that women can be found to commit grosser indelicacies even on a public stage.

A Correspondent of the SPECTATOR, in the 67th Number, Vol. 1. describes accurately under another name the mechanical part of the Foreign Waltz of these days, and says:—"I suppose this diversion was first invented to keep up a good understanding between young men and women, but I am sure had you been here you would have seen great matter for speculation."

We say so now—but the waltz has proved bad speculation to the very dowagers who allow it to be committed; for, as can be proved by reference to fashionable parish registers, there have been fewer marriages in good society by one half, annually upon the average, since the introduction of this irritating indecency into England.

If, therefore, the public dances at the King's Theatre are looked at, merely as authorities for the conduct of private balls, the matter is still worse; but we have too high an opinion of our countrywomen in general to think this of them, and we are sure that we are speaking the sentiments of the most amiable and the most charming when we raise the voice of rebuke against the dress and deportment of the Italian Corps de Ballett.

One advocate we are certain to have in the person of an old gentlewoman next to whom we sat last Saturday se'nnight, who clearly had never been at the Opera, during the whole course of her long and doubtlessly respectable life, till that very evening.

When the ballet commenced, she appeared delighted; but when one of the principal females began to elevate her leg beyond the horizontal, she began evidently to fidget, and take a sort of see-saw motion with her head and body, in pure agitation; at every lofty jump, I heard her ejaculate a little "Oh;" at a somewhat lengthened pirouette, she exclaimed—"sotto voce"—"Ah!" with a sigh; but at length, when a tremendous whirl had divested the greater part of the performer's figure of drapery—the band ceasing at the moment to give time to the twirl—the poor old lady screamed out—"OH LA!"—which was heard all over the house, and caused a shout of laughter at the expence of a poor sober-minded Englishwoman, whose nerves had not been screwed up to a sufficiently fashionable pitch to witness what she saw was a perfect, but thought must have been an accidental exposure, of more of a woman's person than is usually given to the gaze of the million.

Witlings and whipsters, dandies, demireps, and dancers may rank us with our fat friend in the tabby silk, to whom we have just referred, if they please, but we will always run the risque of being counted unfashionable rather than immoral.

So few people moving in the world take the trouble of thinking for themselves, that it is necessary to open their eyes to their own improprieties—the natural answer to a question, "How can you suffer your daughters to witness such exhibitions?" is—Why every body else goes. why should not they? And then, the numerous avocations of an Opera House evening divert the attention from the stage—true—but there is a class of women differently situated who are subjected to the nuisance merely because those who do not care about it are indifferent to its correction—we mean the daughters and wives of respectable Aldermen and Dry-salters, and Tradesmen of a superior class, who are rattled and shaken to the Opera once or twice in the season, in a hackney coach, and come into the pit all over finery with long straws, abstracted from "their carriage," sticking in their flounces—these poor girls form their notions of "ease and elegance" upon what they see the best dancers at the "West End" (as they phrase it) do; and the consequence will be that under the authority of their superiors instead of feeling shocked, as any one of them would be if left to the impulses of nature, they will fall to imitating what they see admired, and we shall find the dowdy belles of the Hackney and Mile End assemblies monkeying

> "Women who dance in postures so obscene,
> "As might awaken shame in ARETINE!"

Since to women all civilization is owing—since we are the merest, tamest creatures in their delicate hands, we call neither upon my Lord Chamberlain, nor the Bench of Bishops, to abate this nuisance; but upon THEM—the best, the truest friends of MAN, to relieve the metropolis of Great Britain from the stigma of indelicacy, which a longer toleration of the evil we allude to must entail upon it.

Who is there who does not know that the Lady Patronesses of ALMACK'S have interdicted pantaloons, tight or loose, at their assemblies? We have seen a MS. instruction—which, alas! never was printed—from this mighty conclave, announcing their fiat in these words—

"Gentlemen will not be admitted without breeches and stockings!"

No sooner was this mandate (in whatever terms the published one was couched,) fulminated from King-street than the "lean and slippered pantaloon" was exterminated, and, as the Directresses directed, "short hose" were the order of the day.

If the same lovely and honourable ladies were to take the Opera House under their purifying controul, and issue in the same spirit at least, an order that "Ladies will not be permitted to appear without ——— (whatever may be the proper names for the drapery of females,")—we are quite convinced that they would render a great service to society, and extricate the national character from a reproach which the tacit endurance of such grossnesses has, in the minds of all moderate people, unfortunately cast upon it at present.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

FRIDAY.

Petitions were presented from Inverness and Suffolk, complaining of Agricultural Distress—from Sussex, praying for a reduction of the Hop Duties.

The EARL OF LIVERPOOL, adverting to the question put by Earl Grey, stated that he found there were some papers from the Russian Minister at Verona, and dispatches from Chateaubriand to the French Minister at Madrid. He believed there was no objection to their production. There was also a dispatch relative to Portugal, which should be produced.

The MARQUIS OF LANSDOWNE expressed his surprise that the Duke of Wellington seemed to labour under such a total want of information respecting the affairs of Spain as appeared from his letter of the 30th of October; it was also strange that Mr. Canning had not taken any notice of an important communication from the Duke of Wellington respecting the extraordinary demands of France upon Spain.

In answer to questions from Lords Eltenborough, Darnley, and Holland respecting Spain, the EARL OF LIVERPOOL said, he knew of no document that the allied powers would not proceed hostilely against Spain; that no information had been received by Government; that money had been sent from France to stir up insurrections, certainly incitements had been made to that effect.

THE EARL OF DARNLEY gave notice that he would, on Monday, move for an account of the State of the Navy at the different ports.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL gave notice, that on this day se'nnight, he should move for a Committee on the State of Appeals.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.

LORD VISCOUNT CRANBOURNE brought up the Report of the Game Laws, and said he should bring the subject on next Thursday.

Petitions were presented from Clothiers in Somersetshire, against Clauses in the Warehousing Bill; from Shipowners in Leith, against any alteration in the West India Trade; and from the parish of St. Giles, against the Coal Duties.

In answer to a question from GEN. GASCOYNE respecting the Catholics, MR. PLUNKETT said it was not clear to him that he should bring the question forward again this Session. He was only trustee for the friends of the measure, and must be bound by their opinions; but as far as he could learn their sentiments, he thought the discussion would not be renewed.

The General Turnpike Act was ordered to be further considered on Monday next.

On bringing up the Report of the Committee on the King's Library, MR. HOBHOUSE said the Royal grant to the British Museum was ill advised.

On the third reading of the Naval and Military Pensions' Bill, MR. HUME moved an amendment—that it be read a third time that day six months. For the amendment, 90—For the original motion, 140—Majority, 50. The Bill was passed.

MR. JAMES MACDONALD gave notice, that on Monday se'nnight he would probably move an address to the King on the Papers respecting the late negociations.

MR. BROUGHAM gave notice that Mr. Williams would, on the 2d of May, move to extend the provisions of the Statute of Queen Anne respecting the affirmation of Members of the Society of Friends.

On the third reading of the Merchants' Vessels' Apprentices' Bill, MR. RICARDO moved an amendment that it be read that day six months, but it was negatived, and the bill passed.

In a Committe of Supply MR. LUSHINGTON proposed a vote of 4491. for the expences of Henry the VIIth's Chapel.

MR. HUME objected to the demand of fees for visiting Westminster Abbey.

MR. LUSHINGTON said the demand of 2s. was the perquisite of an individual who purchased the office of the dean and chapter of Westminster.

MR. CROKER doubted the legality of exacting fees in Chapels, and whether the Dean and Chapter were legally authorized in cutting down the trees for the purpose of making a few pounds by letting out seats for the Coronation. The vote was agreed to.

The following sums were voted after some conversation:—10,000l. for the College of Edinburgh; 12,847l. for the Works of Port Patrick; 95,000l. for the Caledonian Canal; 3,200l. for Building the Insolvent Debtors' Court; 30,000l. for Building the New Courts in Westminster Hall; 24,926l. for the Establishment on the Gold Coast of Africa; 5,214l. for the Alien Office; 15,000l. for Commissioners awards respecting Captured Slave Ships; 1,700l. for Commissioners Salaries of ditto; 150,060l. for Bills drawn from New South Wales; 2,442l. for Colonial Services; 6,250l. for Commissioners of Enquiry into the Irish Revenue; 5,000l. for Refuge for the Destitute; 3,279l. for Bahama Islands; 1,522l. for Charges for ditto; 600l. ditto for Dominica; 12,232l. for Upper Canada; 15,223l. for New South Wales; 23,816l. for Sierra Leone; 3,530l. for Prince Edward's Island; 2,967l. for New Brunswick.

MR. HENRY GREY BENETT complained that the Courier newspaper pretended to give an account of the unpleasant transaction which took place in the House last night—he felt no hesitation in saying that he knew of nothing so bad, so false, and scandalous, or which shewed more the malignity of the writer's heart, than the article in question; that it was false must have been known to the writer, as the report of the debate in his own paper was directly the reverse of, and contrary to his statement.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

The Moniteur of Tuesday contains a Royal ordinance restoring dignity of Minister of State and Privy Councillor to Vaudreuil, "as a special mark of the Royal satisfaction." The telegraphic dispatch, dated Bayonne, April 14, which announced that Duke d'Angouleme is in good health, and that the Spanish army go on remarkably well. The two French generals who were prisoners in the affair of the 6th, have been tried by a Council and shot.

A letter from Perpignan states, that Mina had fixed his headquarters at Vich, and formed there the centre of his military and administrative operations for the province of Catalonia.

BAYONNE, APRIL 8.—The Duke d'Angouleme passed the Bidassoa on the 7th, in the morning; his head-quarters are at Irun. The Royal Highness was received by the inhabitants with cries of "Vive le Roi!—Vive le Duc d'Angouleme!"—His Royal Highness took Fort of Passage and Fort Isabella to be occupied.

A Proclamation has been issued by the Provisional Junta of Spanish Government, addressed to the Spanish nation. It is signed by Eguia, Erro, and Calderon. It calls upon the people to make common cause with the French army, in rescuing the King from the control of a faction, and in redeeming the honour of the Family from their ignominious captivity. One paragraph is as following:—"Spaniards! Your Provisional Government declares that does not recognize, and that it considers as never having existed, the political and administrative acts of the Government, emanating from rebellion, and that it establishes, therefore, provisionally, the Administration of the State which existed before the violence of March 1820."

DESPATCH OF APRIL 11—FROM THE ARMY.—"The irruptive corps, orders of General Bonselle occupy the heights which command St. Sebastian. The Prince slept on the 11th at Tolosa. He will remain two days, for the purpose of allowing the second corps, under General Molitor, to come up, which is to take the road to Navarre, and form on the Ebro, near Logrono. The second guard of the 1st corps, commanded by General Vallin, was on the 9th at Villa Real, two days' march from Vittoria. The Duke of Belluno with the 1st corps, occupies Villa Franca. The 2d corps is between Tolosa and Oyergon. The Garde Royale supports the movements of the army. His Royal Highness enjoys the best health.

Yesterday, the Duke d'Angouleme having been to reconnoitre St. Sebastian, and having distributed crosses of honour to those who had distinguished themselves in the first affair before the city, his appearance was observed from the fort; a 24-pounder was immediately ordered forward: but the Spaniards were so slow in getting it on the battery, that the Prince had already set off on his return to Ernani, when they fired it off; it was most fortunate that they were so slow; for the ball passed right through a house, and struck a gun stationed behind the buildings, precisely on the spot where the Royal Highness had been distributing the decorations; 15 men were killed and wounded.

LISBON, MARCH 24.—The Rebels have been defeated by the Rego with considerable loss. A small party of the enemy's cavalry, regiment, instigated by the Clergy of Villa Viceza, ran away, but all re-taken. News had arrived by a vessel from Pernambuco, that General Labatour had been completely defeated by the Portuguese forces; and also that the Prince Regent had been obliged to retire to Santa Cruz, in consequence of a tumult.—In the Sittins of the Cortes on the 20th, a project of law was passed to punish those deputies who should join the rebels.

APRIL 7.—On the 31st ult. the Session of the Cortes terminated when the King attended in person, and delivered the following speech to the Deputies:—"Gentlemen—The labours of the present session of the Cortes being to-day, according to the Constitution, I have to rejoice with you, at the wisdom and patriotism which you have shewn in the legislative measures which you have framed necessary for the execution and progress of the Constitution, or for the security of our liberty, and the re-establishment of order and public tranquillity which the spirit of faction dared to disturb in one of the extremities of the kingdom. This circumstance, so afflicting to my paternal heart, is affixed, at the same time, an irrefragable testimony of the patriotic and Constitutional spirit, and of the patriotism of the greater part of the nation, as well as of the spirit and firmness with which the representatives answered to the confidence of their constituents. Yes, Gentlemen! I owe to the nation, to its worthy representatives, and to the whole world, the just and consolatory declaration that the overwhelming majority of the kingdom is faithful to the oath which it took to the Constitution, and every Portuguese, who is worthy of the name, in the same manner, as his King would rather lose his life than disregard the sanctity of his oath, and the dignity of his character, so am I sure his subjects who should fail to follow his example, would be incapable of his certain indignation. I do not fear that the criminal attempts of internal or external enemies will prevail against the general will of the nation. I regret, however, that the shortness of the time, and the accumulation of business, have hindered you from passing those organic laws relative to the Court of Justice, the Finances, &c. on which the progress and the consolidation of the Constitutional regime depend. I therefore, under these circumstances, consider it necessary that the National Representation should be speedily united round the Throne, in the form determined by the Constitution, since the public security and the perfection of the system require it. I have now, Gentlemen, only to promise you, as well as the nation which you so worthily represent, a co-operation in the cause of national liberty, as faithful and efficacious as my sentiments are pure, of which I can offer you no better pledge than my conduct and my character." The embarrassed the spectators burst forth in the loudest transports at the conclusion of this speech, with cries of "Long live the Constitutional King"—"the Cortes"—"the Constitution"—"the Roman Catholic Religion"—"the Sovereignty of the Nation"—"the Portuguese Army"—"and the Portugueze who prefer death to slavery!"—Silence being restored, the President returned a suitable answer, in which he especially commented his Majesty, on the firmness of character which he had displayed under the difficult circumstances in which the kingdom had been for some time placed. He alluded to the revolt of the Prince Royal, and spoke of the state of Brazil, and the conduct of France, attempting to overthrow the Constitutions of free nations, as if she desired to destroy social order in the whole Peninsula, to have the barous pleasure of ruling over slaves and ruins; and he also spoke the attempts of a perjured faction in the kingdom itself. He expressed, however, his confidence that the cause of the Constitution would finally triumph over all its enemies both at home and abroad.

VALENCIA, APRIL 2.—On Wednesday evening, the 26th ult. a party of insurgents, under the command of Semperc, occupied the suburbs, and on the following day commenced a heavy fire on the city, which they attacked at four different points. They held it thus in a sort of siege during three days, at the end of which they withdrew to Murviedro, in consequence of having learnt that succour was approaching. The assailing party lost 100 men.

Letters from St. Peterburgh assert, that there is now a Russian army, 40,000 strong, near Teflis. The entire Russian force, on the confines of Persia, is stated at 180,000—but in a state of imperfect equipment.

On Thursday night, some daring ruffians set fire to the out offices of Riversdale house, the property of Mrs. Raymond. In a short time the whole beautiful and extensive concern—with the exception of the dwelling-house, consumed, and four valuable horses, several cows, a large quantity of oats, potatoes, turf, farming utensils, several hogsheads of cider, and many other valuable articles totally destroyed, together with two farm-houses contiguous thereto. The same night no less than ten fires were perceptible in the above part of the county Kerry.—Dublin Mail.

The dwelling-house and barn of James Waltho, weaver, on the lands of Rossgill, three miles from Newport, County Tipperary, were maliciously set on fire.—A farmer named Patrick Keating, of Kilnaman, and a man named Power, near Shanagolden, were dreadfully beaten, a few nights back, for not complying with Captain Rock's regulations.—On Tuesday night last, an out-house of Cornelius Brouder, of Farran, near Castlelyons, was maliciously set fire to by an armed party, and completely consumed, together with a quantity of potatoes.—Two horses, the property of Brouder, were taken by the party and returned on the following day. The cause assigned for this outrage is, that Brouder lately took another farm from Samuel Perrott, Esq.—On Wednesday night, a good farm-house on the lands of Knockanerah, near Dripsy, was consumed. This farm is the property of Mr. Cross, and a tenant who owed three years rent had lately been forgiven his arrears, and suffered to take away his property—the farm was then set to a new tenant, which being contrary to General Rock' knew code of laws, produced the usual punishment, burning the premises.—Limerick Paper.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The King arrived at Carlton Palace, on Wednesday evening, at half past six o'clock, in perfect health.

On Tuesday and Wednesday Cabinet Councils were held at the Foreign Office.

On Tuesday night, Mr. Hill, the King's Messenger, left town with despatches for Spain.

The Diplomatic Correspondence respecting the affairs of Spain, which was laid before the House of Commons on Monday by Mr. Secretary Canning, commences in September 1822, and concludes on the 31st of March last. It consists of dispatches from the Duke of Wellington at Paris and at the Congress of Verona, addressed to Mr. Secretary Canning, detailing the substance of his interviews and conversations with M. Villele on the relations of the French Government with Spain, (in answer to which Mr. Canning instructed the Duke to state to the French Government, that his Majesty would be no party to any forcible interference by France in the struggle going on in Spain) of any forcible interference by France in the struggle going on in Spain) the proceedings at the Congress—Notes addressed by M. Montmorency to the Duke of Wellington—M. St. Miguel to M. St. Colomb, Secretary to the Spanish Minister in England, in which he declares that there is no analogy between the Constitutions of England and Spain, complains that England and adopts "a cold insensible neutrality," and declares that "the Spaniards will never compromise the free exercise of national sovereignty." Mr. Canning replied by offering mediation on the part of Great Britain. Sir W. A'Court, our Minister at Madrid, wrote to Mr. Canning subsequently, to say that M. San Miguel, in a conversation, had said the Spanish Government would not solicit British mediation. The rest of the correspondence is between Sir Charles Stuart, Sir W. A'Court, and Mr. Canning. The last dispatch from Mr. Canning is dated the 31st of March, recapitulating the negociations, explanatory of the sentiments of the British Government on the situation of affairs, and offering the interposition of the British Government to effect an amicable arrangement.

The Dinner and Ball usually given at the Mansion-house on Easter Monday, and unavoidably postponed this year in consequence of the repairs and alterations, will take place on Wednesday, 7th May. His Royal Highness the Duke of York, and other distinguished Persons, have intimated their intention of honouring the Lord Mayor and the Lady Mayoress with their presence on the occasion. The Entertainment will be conducted in the usual manner in all respects, except that the numbers at the Ball will be much reduced, in compliance with the wish of those Members of the Corporation who have the care of the Mansion-house, of which a great part has been recently newly furnished.

The Bill for the Amendment of the late General Turnpike Act, now before Parliament, contains a provision to enable Commissioners of Sewers to take off the additional tolls which were imposed on narrow wheels.

A small squadron is reported to be fitting out at Plymouth, to cruize in the north coast of Spain.

The Prince Regent, of 120 guns, was safely launched, at Chatham, on Saturday se'nnight, in the presence of Lord Melville and a great concourse of spectators; her length is 244 feet, greatest depth, 64 feet, 3,510 feet, and burthen, 2620 tons.

The guard-ships are ordered to have their full complement of men, and the different ships employed in channel service their full establishment of guns.

Both Greenand Parsons Green fairs have both been suppressed by the Magistrates.

On Wednesday, a Court of Directors was held at the East India House, when the following ships were thus timed, viz:—the Florentia, Preston, and Orient, for Bengal; and Fame, for Bengal and Bencoolen—to be afloat on Thursday. The Royal George and Rockingham, for Bengal—to be afloat on the 10th of May.

On Thursday, the dispatches for China, by the ship Warren Hastings, were closed at the East India House, and delivered to the purser that ship.

At the Newmarket Craven Meeting, on Monday, the Cruven Stakes were won by the Duke of Rutland's b. c. by Catton; Mr. Udny's Emigrant won the Riddlesworth Stakes. On Tuesday, Mr. Wyndham's br. c. by Pioneer; Lord Grosvenor's ch. c. Adroit, and Lord Warwick's br. c. by Phantom, won the Sweepstakes of 100 gs. each. Mr. Payne's Figaro won the Oatland's Stakes; and Mr. Wyndham's filly won the Second Class of the Riddlesworth Stakes.

On Wednesday se'nnight, after General Latham had returned home to his Kildare-street Club-house, Dublin, and while in the act of undressing himself, he suddenly dropped down and expired.

On Wednesday being the first day of Easter Term, the Judges of the Courts went in procession from Lincoln's Inn Hall, to Westminster, in the usual form.—Mr. Chitty moved that a young man, clerk to an attorney, might have his articles assigned to another, upon the following grounds:—The father of the young man having quarrelled with the attorney, from henceforth the young man was removed from his master's office into an adjoining stable, in which he was ordered to sit at a desk, to eat, and to sleep. Complaining to his father of his treatment, it was proposed that the defendant should consent to give his articles to a solicitor at Dover, who had consented to take him into his office. To this proposal, the defendant refused to consent, or to assign over his articles.—The Court granted a Rule to show cause.

In the Court of King's Bench, on Thursday, Mr. Scarlett applied to the Court for a rule to show cause why a sum of 380l. paid into Court on Mr. Mar's salary of vestry clerk for the parish of Bethnal-green, should not be paid over to him as such. The Court having referred to the Master to report upon the fact, the Master decided that Mr. May should be delivered up all the books, &c. and now they refused to deliver the money which was paid in upon that issue. The Lord Chief Justice—Mr. May having complied with the order of the Court, and Mr. Sollicitor-General,) having allowed a delay of two years and a half to expose without trying whether Mr. May was duly elected or not, by the rule of Court, as it may hereafter apply to cases of money paid into Court, is that the delay you have suffered is fatal to you; and whether the Court directs the money to be paid over to Mr. May, as vestry clerk; or

At the Old Bailey, on Wednesday, William Trapp was capitally indicted for having committed an assault upon Charlotte Rooks, and inflicted divers wounds, with intent to murder or do some grievous bodily harm.—The prosecutrix was housekeeper to the vestry clerk of the parish where the assault was committed; and the wounds inflicted, a hatchet, which instrument he was seen to throw away. The prisoner, under pretence of writing a note, when her back was turned, gave several blows with the hatchet, which was covered with blood, and tripped up her heels; she screamed out 'murder' and was rescued with, when some persons burst open the door, and found the prosecutrix with blood streaming from her head, the prisoner standing over her in the passage, as if endeavouring to prevent her making any noise.—A surgeon described the nature of the wounds, one of which had reached an artery on the temple, and occasioned a great flow of blood. The office was triangular, as though inflicted with the head of a hatchet; that on the forehead was apparently scratched by the hatchet. He had attended the prosecutrix up to the present time, and considered her out of danger.—Several witnesses for the prisoner gave him as a person who had received a liberal education, had been a schoolmaster, and was remarkable for seclusion, being wrapped up in himself. About two years ago he quitted his scholastic employ, in consequence of the rupture of a blood-vessel, since which he had been in the habit of the business of a ladies shoemaker, and his manners had been much altered, and evinced temporary derangement by his actions, as described.—Other witnesses deposed as to the prisoner's character and his general turn of mind.—The Recorder summed up.—Death. The prosecutrix strongly recommended the prisoner to mercy.

On Friday, Samuel Waddington, of bill-sticking notoriety, was indicted for a libel on Ann Thomas, on the 17th of Feb. last, in the House of Correction, Cold Bath-fields. The prisoner appeared at the bar, and was attired in a blue coat and striped waistcoat. The prosecutrix was a child of diminutive size, and of prepossessing appearance. The libel was clearly proved by the unfortunate child, but the evidence given did not sufficiently bring the charge home as laid in the indictment, and the Jury acquitted him.

UPHOLSTERERS, FURNITURE, &c.—The Nobility and Gentry are invited to the Rooms of Cooper and Son, 23, Bishopsgate Within, where is a large Assortment of new and second-hand Plate Glasses, admirably adapted for every description of drawing or dining-rooms. The prices are from 40 per cent. on plates measuring 100 inches by 72, and upwards; to smaller dimensions the alteration will be found equally important. Particular reference given to this Establishment is thankfully acknowledged by Cabinet Makers, who, in their endeavours to evince their gratitude, by manufacturing in a superior manner, at prices suitable to the times, hope for a continuance of public support. In the furniture department is comprised a new and elegant article of upholstery, cabinet, and chair work, which in such a scale of economy as to demand and ensure the patronage of the Nobility.

Just published, price 6s.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW and CRITICAL JOURNAL, for March, 1823.—Contents.—1. Reflections on the State of Ireland, in the nineteenth Century, &c.—2. Moore's Loves of the Angels; Lord Byron's Heaven and Earth.—3. Grattan's Speeches.—4. Botany Bay.—5. Cobbett's Cottage Economy.—6. The Earl of Aberdeen.—7. Church Establishments.—8. Negro Slavery.—9. Virginius, a Tragedy, by James Sheridan Knowles; The Bride's Tragedy, by Thos. Juvius.—10. Duty on Sheep and West India Sugar.—11. Nomination of Scottish Dr. Phillpotts.—Printed for A. Constable and Co. Edinburgh; and Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme and Brown, London.

Just published, in 8vo. price 7s. 6d. boards,

A TREATISE on MENTAL DERANGEMENT.—By FRANCIS WILLIS, M.D. Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians. Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

PRESENT STATE OF THE MOREA.

Just published, in 8vo. illustrated by Plates, Wood Cuts, &c. price 15s. boards,

NARRATIVE of a TOUR through the MOREA, giving an Account of the present State of that Peninsula and its Inhabitants. By Sir WILLIAM GELL.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, in 12mo. price 9s. the Second Edition, of BODY and SOUL; consisting of a Series of lively and pathetic Stories, calculated to excite the attention and interest of the Religious World.—Contents—The Town Rector—Philosophical Painter—Merchant's Family—Sick Penitent—Unitarian—Clerical Conference—Lunatic Asylum—Liturgy—Assizes—Athanasian Creed—Sea Captain—Domiciliary Visits.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

In the Press, and shortly will be published, BODY and SOUL. Vol. the 2d.

Just published, in 4to. price 2l. 2s. boards,

THE THIRD VOLUME of the HISTORY of ENGLAND DURING the MIDDLE AGES, comprising the Reigns of Henry VI. Edward IV. Edward V. Richard III. and Henry VII. By SHARON TURNER, F.S.A.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Of whom may be had, the two first Volumes, comprising the History of England from the Norman Conquest to the Death of Henry V. Price 3l. 18s.—These three Volumes contain the History of England during the middle Ages, and complete the Second Series of the English History.

In the Press, and nearly ready, the Fourth Edition, of the HISTORY of the ANGLO-SAXONS, from the earliest Appearance in Europe to the End of their Dynasty in England; comprising the History of England from the earliest Period to the Norman Conquest. In 3 vols. 8vo.

Just published, in 8vo. illustrated with numerous Cases and Engravings, 13s. bds.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on the Symptoms, Causes, Discrimination, and Treatment of some of the most important Complaints that affect the SECRETION and EXCRETION of URINE. The whole exhibiting a comprehensive View, of the various Diseases of the Kidneys, Bladder, Prostate Gland, and Urethra.—By JOHN HOWSHIP, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, in London.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Of whom may be had, by the same Author, PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS in SURGERY and MORBID ANATOMY, in 8vo. with Plates. 18s. bds.

2. PRACTICAL OBSERVATIONS upon the DISEASES of the LOWER INTESTINES, in 8vo. 8s. 6d. boards.

NEW TRAGEDY.

Just published, in 8vo. pr. 4s. stitched, as performing at Covent-Garden Theatre, The Third Edition of JULIAN, a Tragedy, in Five Acts. By MARY RUSSELL MITFORD.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

The following Works will be published in the course of the present and next Months, by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane:—

1. AN ESSAY on the HISTORY and THEORY of MUSIC, and on the Qualities and Management of the Human Voice. By I. NATHAN, Author of "Musical Memoirs." In Royal Quarto.

2. The GRACES; or, a Classical Allegory, interspersed with Poetry; translated from the original German of Christ. Martin Wieland, and illustrated with explanatory Notes, &c. Cr. 8vo.

3. DIBDIN'S SEA SONGS; engraved from the original Copies in the Library of W. Kitchiner, M.D. To which will be prefixed, a Memoir of his Life and Writings. In Four Parts, price 5s. 6d. each.—"These Songs have been the solace of Sailors in long voyages, in storms, in battle; and they have been quoted in mutinies, to the restoration of order and discipline."—Dibdin's Life, page 8.

4. CLAVIS HORATIANA; or, A Key to the Odes of Horace and the Secular Poem. In which, 1. The aid of a Dictionary is rendered unnecessary, all the words occurring in each Ode being disposed in their order, with lexicographical explanations.—2. Classical Illustrations, and explanatory Notes, are interspersed throughout; with many Latin Notes, and numerous quotations from the best translations.—3. A full, concise Account, is given of every Proper Name.—

4. A large and copious Tract is prefixed on the Horatian Metres, which are set forth in the clearest and most simple manner.—5. At the beginning of every Ode in the Key, the Metre in which it is composed is expressed. A Life of Horace is likewise given for the use of Students. 8vo.

5. PETER SCHLEMIHL; a German Story. With Plates, by George Cruikshank. 12mo.

6. TALES of the OLD MR. JEFFERSON, of GRAY'S INN: Collected by the Young Mr. Jefferson, of Lyon's Inn.—Series 1. Mandeville, or, the Voyage—The Welch Cottage; or, The Woodman's Fire-side—The Creole; or, The Negro's Suicide. In Two Volumes, 12mo.

7. HERALDIC ANOMALIES. In Two Volumes, crown 8vo.

8. REMARKS on the COUNTRY, extending from CAPE PALMAS to the River SONCO, including Observations on the Manners and Customs of the Inhabitants; with an Appendix, containing an Account of the European Trade with the West Coast of Africa. By Captain John Adams. In 8vo.

9. A STATISTICAL ACCOUNT of NEW SOUTH WALES and VAN DIEMAN'S LAND; with an Historical Sketch of those Colonies, and an enumeration of the Advantages which they severally offer to various classes of Emigrants, &c. The Third Edition, embellished with a View of the Town of Sydney, and separate Maps of New South Wales and Van Dieman's Land. By W. C. Wentworth, Esq. In 8vo.

10. PICTURESQUE VIEWS on the SEVERN; from the original Designs of the late Samuel Ireland, Author of Picturesque Views of the Thames, Avon, Wye, &c. The Work will consist of Eight Parts; each part to comprise Six or Seven Views of the most remarkable objects, &c. executed in the best manner; and Seventy-six pages of Letter-press, descriptive of the Gentlemens' Seats, Scenery, &c. from the source to the mouth of the Severn. A Part will be published in the first week of every month till the whole be completed. In royal 4to. coloured, in royal 8vo. plain.

11. BAVERSTOCK on BREWING; being the several Treatises of the late James Baverstock, Esq. on the Brewery, collected into one volume, with Notes; together with an Introduction, containing a biographical Sketch of the Author; a Paper on Specific Gravities, and on the various Hydrostatical Instruments which have been used in the Brewery. By his Son, J. H. Baverstock, F.S.A. In 8vo.

12. A SERIES of LECTURES upon the ELEMENTS of CHEMICAL SCIENCE, lately delivered at the Surrey Institution; comprising the Basis of the new Theory of Crystallization, and Diagrams to illustrate the Elementary Combinations of Atoms, particular Theories of Electrical Influence, and of Flame; with a full Description of the Author's Blow-pipe, and its Instruments and Effects when charged with certain Gases, &c. &c. By G. Gurney. In 8vo.

13. An INTRODUCTION to the HEBREW LANGUAGE. By W. Heinemann, Professor of the Hebrew and German Languages, and Author of the Catechism of Hebrew Grammar, and an Introduction to German Reading. 12mo.

14 ARISTOPHANIS COMŒDIÆ, ex optimis exemplaribus Emendatæ; cum Versione Latina, Variis Lectionibus Notis, et Emendationibus. Accedunt deperditarum, Comœdiarum Fragmenta. A. Rich. Franc. Phil. Brunck. In. Three Volumes. 8vo.

15. POLYBII MEGALIPOLITANI HISTORIARUM. Græce et Latine. In Four Volumes, 8vo.

16. LEXICON POLYBIANUM, ab is, et Merico Cassanbonis olim adumbratum Indice ab Jo. Aug. Ernesti, elaboratum nunc ab J. Schweighæusero, passim emendatum plurimaque Partibus auctum. In 8vo.

17. C. CORNELII TACITI OPERA. Recognovit. Emendavit, Supplement Explevit, Notis, Dissertationibus Illustravit Gabriel Brotier. In 4 vols. 8vo.

18. A LEXICON to THUCYDIDES, containing his Words, Phrases, and Constructions, explained in Greek and English. In 8vo.

19. XENOPHONTIS MEMORABILIA SOCRATES. Ex Editione Schneideri. Benwelli, &c. In 8vo.

20. The TRAGEDIES of EURIPIDES; translated by R. Potter. New Edition, in 2 vols. 8vo.

21. A NEW VERSION of the GOSPEL according to ST. MATTHEW; with a literal Commentary on all the difficult Passages; to which is prefixed, an with a literal Commentary on all the difficult Passages; to which is prefixed, an Introduction to the reading of the Holy Scriptures, intended chiefly for Young Students in Divinity. Written originally in French, by Messieurs de Beausobre and Lenfant, by the order of the King of Prussia. A new Edition. 8vo.

22. A GRAMMAR of RHETORIC and POLITE LITERATURE; comprehending the Principles of Language and Style; the Elements of Taste and Criticism; with Rules for the Study of Composition and Eloquence, illustrated by Examples, selected chiefly from the British Classics, for the use of Schools and private Instruction. By A. Jamieson, A.M. 12mo. Second Edition.

23. PRACTICAL LOGIC; or, Hints to Young Theme Writers. By B. H. Smart, Author of Theory and Practice of Elocution, &c. 12mo

24. PINNOCK'S EXPLANATORY ENGLISH SPELLING-BOOK: calculated to assist Youth in attaining with ease a perfect Knowledge of their native Tongue; comprising numerous Spelling and Reading Lessons, progressively arranged and classed, according to the capacity of the Learner, &c. &c. The Twelfth Edition, enlarged and improved.

25. PINNOCK'S CATECHISM of the USE of the GLOBES. Part II. On the Celestial Globe. 18mo.

26. COLLECTANEA LATINA; or, Easy Construing Lessons from the best Latin Authors, for the Use of the Junior Classes in Grammar Schools, and of Latin Authors, for the Use of the Junior Classes in Grammar Schools, and of Persons who wish to become their own Instructors. The Second Edition: with Notes and other Improvements.

27. CICERO DE ORATORE, ex Recensione. J. A. Ernesti. 8vo. New Edit.

28. CICERO DE ORATORE; cura Lensdenii et Griesbachii; on fine wove paper, to correspond with the Regent's Classics. 18mo. New Edition.

WELL-WIDE Long Cloths 6d. per yard, on a Deposition of Duty, at the Pantheon Linen Warehouse, 79, Oxford-street.—In consequence of their increasing trade, MALCOTT and JAMES have been obliged greatly to enlarge their premises; the whole being completed, they now solicit a renewal of that consideration which the Nobility and Private Families have so long shewn them; their terms of business must give satisfaction, being upon so cheap a principle as to render any competition of other houses totally useless; added to which, Ladies may have the money returned for articles purchased at their house, not afterwards approved of. Their stock amounts to upwards of 40,000l. and consists of Irish linens and sheetings in sufficient quantities to supply any demand; muslins, muslin robes, and fancy muslins of all sorts, and a superb assortment of levantines, gros de Naples and sarsnets of every fashionable colour, with Hosiery and Gloves.—M. and J. recommend Ladies to be particular to the direction, Pantheon Linen Warehouse, 79, Oxford street, and the corner of Winsley-street.

SPRING FASHIONS.—ROBARTS, GRIFFITHS, and CRICK (late Robarts and Plowman) Silk Mercers and Irish Poplin Manufacturers to the Royal Family, No. 1, Chandos-street, Covent garden, respectfully solicit the honour of the Nobility and Gentry's attention to their present STOCK of NEW and FASHIONABLE SILKS, &c. for the season; comprising every description, both in pattern and colour, of the most elegant and extensive assortment of Mercery in London; also a beautiful collection of Anglo-Cachemere China crape, embroidered silks, and every other kind of Silks and Sarsnets, in the selection of which the utmost exertion has been used to present to the fashionable world a tasteful variety of such articles as they flatter themselves will, on inspection, merit general approbation.

URLING'S LACE.—COURT OF KING'S BENCH.—The validity of Urling and Co's Patent for the EXCLUSIVE PRODUCTION of this celebrated article being fully established by the late successful verdict for an infringement of the same, the King's Letters Patent, under the Great Seal of Great Britain, may be seen at Urling and Co.'s ONLY WAREHOUSE IN LONDON, 147, Strand, near Somerset House. It is presumed that five years' increasing favour with the British and Foreign Nobility, will evince the extensive concern beyond the surprise which may accompany untried pretensions. Urling and Co. have obtained a Patent in France for their Lace on its introduction to that Court, which is sold in London as Foreign Lace, by adventurers, at double the price for which the same article may be procured in the Strand. A matchless variety of novelties prepared for the season. The real Point and Brussels work will bear comparison with foreign lace, being rendered superior as to cleanness by the patent principle. Tambour and Muslin goods, with nets and laces of every kind at the reduced wholesale prices. Manufactory, Basford, Notts.

N.B. Court dresses, lappets frills, ruffles, &c. in great perfection.

CARPET WAREHOUSE, 32, Berners-street.—The Nobility and Gentry are respectfully informed that a large supply of very superior TURKEY CARPETS are just received, and that any size may be had, warranted free from moth or sea-water damage, on such terms as cannot be undersold; some of a second quality, which will be sold very cheap. Also, an extensive choice of the best manufactured Brussels, at low prices. Amongst which are quantities at 4s. 3d. and 4s. 6d. per yard, every other kind of Carpeting at the same rate. C. Hindley, Manufacturer, 32, Berner-street, Oxford-street.

SPITALFIELDS SILKS.—Ladies who are about purchasing their Spring Dresses will find an unlimited collection of RICH SILKS, not equalled by any House in Europe, for the original Manufactures in extreme splendour of beautiful colours, with the advantage of purchasing one dress length at the same price per yd as twenty pieces. 500 pieces of rich single Gros de Naples, 2s. 7d. to 2s. 10d. per yd; double do. in beautiful shades, 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d.; 400 pieces of rich levantine silks, 3 quarters wide, 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d.; 300 pieces of the new Zephrine silk, much resembling the French stormant, 4s. 6d. to 5s. 6d. commonly sold at 7s. 6d.; 700 pieces of very rich figured silks, for which the house has been long patronized, such that England never offered, and will bid defiance to all French silks, measuring 3 qrs. wide, 5s. to 5s. 6d. a yard. SEWELL and CROSS here beg to observe, that whatever price may be given for foreign silks, they will not equal this article, being made entirely of Piedmont silk, and got up under their own immediate inspection, an article which must ever do credit to a British manufacturer, and are now making an order at their Irish looms, capable of turning out 700 pieces in any pattern. With the privilege of the Assignees of G. W. and Co. two unfortunate Manufacturers in the Fields, S. and C. have on sale their Stock:—860 pieces of rich stripe Silks, 2s. to 2s. 6d. a yard, and 400 pieces of all-wide washing Silks suited for ladies morning dresses, 2s. 8d. a yard, commonly sold at 4s. and cost the Manufacturers 3s. 9d. a yard; an endless variety of yard-wide Silk Gauzes, any colour, 14d. and 18d.; 60 pieces of Persian Silks, for linings, very shade, 1s. 5d. to 1s. 8d.; 300 pieces of rich black, white, and coloured Satins, for ladies evening dresses, 2s. 6d. to 3s. 3d. a yard, worth 5s.; 20 boxes of fine Flambro' Lawns (equal to Cambric) suited for ladies pocket handkerchiefs, 1s. 6d. to 2s. the square; 80 doz. of real Cambric Handkerchiefs, 21s. the doz. to the finest quality; made at 2l.; 50 bales of India long cloths, got up entirely free from dress, 25 yards for 14s. 6d. a piece; a beautiful fine article in real Madras cloth, 25 yards for 20s.; these cloths are particularly suited for families going abroad, especially to the East or West Indies; 300 pieces of the best coloured morecns for curtains (a great bargain, any colours) 1s. 5d. a yard, worth 2s.—At SEWELL and CROSS'S, 42, Frith-street, corner of Old Compton-street, Soho-square. Ladies, by referring to the advertisement, may depend on having any article at the prices advertised.

NO. 118, OXFORD-STREET.—RILEY is selling fashionable striped sarsnets at 2s. 6d. per yard, which many houses charge 3s. 9d.; and as rich levantine silks, French width, 3s. 6d. to 4s. per yard, as are generally charged 5s. The Nobility and Families making Lyonese purchases, are respectfully invited to inspect those goods before they purchase elsewhere. The stock consists of a most splendid selection of Parisian Silk Cloaks trimmed in the most admired and prevailing fashion, from 3 to 8 guineas each: those at 4l. and 4l. 10s. are much in demand, and are very superior to any thing hitherto offered to the public. A superb collection of fancy gauzes, and gauze dresses, and singular curiosities in Chantilly sprigged lace dresses, equal in appearance, and of greater durability than foreign lace. Very rich Italian crapes, 14s. 6d.; rich velvets, 5s. 6d. per yd; very rich do. 10s. 6d.; ditto, the richest made, 16s. 6d.; Lapland cords, 4s. per yd; Gros de Naples, 3s. 6d. and 3s. 9d. per yd; very rich ditto, 4s. 6d.; rich Gros de Tours, 4s. 9d. per yd; Norwich crapes, the widest made, 1s. 3d. per yd; rich satins for dresses, 2s. per yd; poplins and lustres, 1s. 6d.; rich ditto, 2s.; Irish ditto, 2s. 6d.; figured poplins 1s. 4d. rich tabbinets, 2s. 2d.; fine coloured bombasins, 1s.; fine black ditto, 1s. 3d.; 1s. 4d.; wide sarsnets, rich colours, 1s.; rich ditto, 4s. 6d.; elegant flounce robes, 15s.; India worked muslins, 2s. per yd; fine jaconnet ditto, 19s. the piece of 20 yds; white and coloured trimmings, &c. unusually cheap; shawls and scarfs of the most chaste and elegant patterns, and scarcely to be known from the original Cachmere, from one guinea to five guineas each; those at 21s. 30s. and 3 guineas, are most superb patterns; Norwich silk shawls, 12s. and 16s. each; Bragana shawls, the largest size, 5s. each; 400 cloth shawls, bound, 5s. each; 500 ditto sewed and bound, 21s. each; every fashionable article for the season, with a superior stock of family linen drapery. The fullest value given for India shawls, turbans, and birds of Paradise, at Riley's India Warehouse, 118, Oxford-street.

CAUTION to Families about to Furnish.—The Inventors and Patentees of the Merino Satin Damask, and the Royal Coronation Silk Damask, (patronised by His Majesty and Families of the first distinction) feel themselves imperiously called upon to state, that many houses of minor consideration are hawking about imitations of very inferior quality to their Patent Damask. From the late depreciation in the value of British produce, JEREMY and BRAGG are enabled to offer their superior quality and patterns at prices comparatively low with the most humble imitation. In addition J. and B. have recently introduced a most beautiful article for drawing rooms, &c. called Cachemere Chintz, equal in appearance to Painted Velvet, and the colours warranted permanent, at prices little more than Cotton Furniture: together with a great variety of Damask and Merino Stripe; and many other articles, the most eligible for window blinds of all sizes; several hundred pieces of last year's patterns, of town printed furniture at less than the original cost. Those Families who do not intend visiting London this Spring may have specimens forwarded immediately on application.—28 and 29, Southampton-street, London.

FAMILY LINEN WAREHOUSE, Established Fifteen Years.—CRAIG and D'OYLEY (late Craig and Graham) 77, Oxford-street, Linen Drapers, Silk Mercers, &c. &c. beg to return their sincere thanks to their Friends, the Nobility, and Public in general, for that decided preference given them since the decease of the late T. Craig, and most respectfully solicit those Ladies who honoured the late firm with their commands, to continue them to the new one of Craig and D'Oyly, who will always study to merit their favours, by selling the very best articles in the above branches on such Terms as must convince those who may honour them with a call of their decided cheapness, on comparison with goods purchased at any other house. 7/8 stout Irish linen, 9d. to 12s.; fine ditto do. 14d. and 16d.; very fine ditto, 2s. per yard; 2s. 6d. and 2s. 9d. breakfast cloths, 21d. each; full two yds square, 5s. 10d. to 7s. 6d. long do. 8s. 3d.; very handsome do. 9s. 11d.; 2¼ yds wide and 3 yds long, 14s. 6d.; very beautiful do. 18s. 6d. worth 24s.; every other size, to 8 yds long, equally cheap; damask napkins, 7s. 6d. per dozen; Russia sheeting, 2¼ yds wide, avoiding the necessity of a seam, 2s. 4d.; the best quality, 2s. 10d. generally sold at 3s. 6d.; full 3 yds wide do. for noblemen's beds, 5s. 3d. common price, 6s. 6d.; glass cloths, 5s. 6d. the dozen; towels, 5s. 6d.; Russia towelling, 9d. a yd; India Nankeens, 3s. 2d. a piece; French cambric, 3s. 9d. a yd; fine for frills, 6s.; all-wide long cloths, 6d. a yd; all-wide town prints, 1s. 1d. per yd; common width ditto, 6d. per yard; with an immense choice of Cachmere and every other description of shawls; French width sarsnet, 2s. 9d. a yd.; rich Gros de Naples, Italian nets, Norwich crapes; cotton hose, 11d. a pair; ankle ditto do. 2s. 6d.—Craig and D'Oyly, 77, Oxford-street, nearly opposite the Pantheon; the name in each window.

RICH SILKS, SHAWLS, and LACE, SELLING OFF.—HUBBARD and Co. Silk Mercers and Lacemen to the Royal Family, announce to the Nobility and Public, that their Lease, under the Duke of Bedford, is expired, and in consequence of the necessity of rebuilding the premises, their fashionable Stock is Selling off, many articles considerably under prime cost. Rich Gros de Naples, figured silks and satins, striped sarsnets and lutestrings, the much admired Tartarian cachmeres, French merinos, levantines, pelisse, robettas, the new Cyprus crape, French gauze robes for ball dresses, white satins, and silk stockings. An immense stock of curious shawls of every description, superb lace dresses, scarfs, veils, and bobbin nets, French lawns, book muslins, and beautiful muslin dresses of Moravian work, at half price; silk taffeta 3s. per rair; morning dresses, 3s. 9d. each; black sarsnets, 2s. 2d.; beautiful French flowers, and splendid tulle dresses.—No patterns cut or parcels sent or less previously paid for.—Black bombazines, crapes, sarsnets, &c. for family mourning.—Spitalfields House, 12, Henrietta street, Covent garden.

LATEST NEWS.

The Paris papers down to Thursday have arrived. The latest intelligence received at Paris from Bayonne states that Pampeluna is closely invested. The head-quarters were on the 15th at Villa Franca; they were on the 17th at Vittoria. The two corps of the army were on the same day on the Ebro.—A report was spread on Wednesday evening that Pampeluna was taken, but the French Government had received nothing official on the subject. What follows probably gave rise to this rumour:—The garrison, learning that a French division was on the march to Pampeluna, retired into the citadel, amidst the hooting of the inhabitants, who exclaimed "Vive Ferdinand!"

The Mayor of St. Jean de Luz has complained to the competent authority of the shameful behaviour of the three regiments which were there on Tuesday. The Colonels selected at their own pleasure the houses which should receive them, and there were even 100 in a house. It is to be observed that these troops were to bivouac.

Letters from Sardinia mention that a squadron is to cruize on the coast of Spain, to assist the operations of the French army, and that at the same time the troops of Piedmont and Savoy are to be put on a respectable footing to take part in hostilities.

An article from Vienna states that the Austriac troops which have left the kingdom of Naples, and were on their march for Austria, have received orders to halt.

A letter from St. Thomas's of the 21st ult. states that the French have taken a rich Spanish ship, from Havannah to Europe.

At the Newmarket Meeting, on Friday, the Subscription Plate of 50l. for 2 yrs old, was won by Mr. Rogers's br. f. Scratch; and the Sweepstakes of 100gs. for colts, was won by Mr. Wilson's colt, Comus. The Duke of York's c. by Aladdin, won the Hampton Court Stud Stakes of 200gs.

In the Court of King's Bench yesterday, J. W. Trust, a young man apparently not more than 20 years of age, addressed Mr. Justice Holroyd, stating that he came up to plead to a criminal information, which charged him with publishing a blasphemous libel; and that before he should plead to it, he requested his Lordship would permit him to ask his Lordship what is the nature of the offence? The Learned Judge replied by telling him he might have a copy of the information. He bowed and retired.

At the Old Bailey yesterday, George Huggett, who held for seven years a situation under the East India Company, was indicted for stealing a quantity of pepper. On the 25th Feb. three bags of pepper were found concealed under the floor of the warehouses at Blackwall—a watch was set, and the prisoner was discovered taking them away. He was found Guilty, and sentenced to be imprisoned for 12 months in the House of Correction, and kept to hard labour.

About nine o'clock on Wednesday evening, as Mr. Joseph Bell, residing in the vicinity of Deal, was seated at a table in his own house, he was shot dead by a loaded gun fired from without side the window of the room in which he was. Three persons have been arrested on suspicion (one of them the only son to the deceased, aged 19 years), and are now under examination.

A Second Edition of the very interesting MEMOIRS of the QUEEN of FRANCE, by MADAME CAMPAN, is just published. It is considered as decidedly the best work of Memoirs since the Revolution.

The recollection of Payne and Co. having so recently sold the prize of £5,000, in a whole Ticket, (No. 12,694.) occasions their Office to be more particularly resorted to now that two Prizes of £5,000 are to be decided by the first-drawn Ticket on Wednesday next; they also engage with those who purchase a Ticket or Share of them to return a fresh undrawn one, gratis, if it should happen to be a Blank or a small Prize on the 23d of April, so that there will be no risk on that day, and the certainty of retaining an interest in the last day's drawing, consequently must have the chance of the Two £20,000 and Two £5,000 Prizes, as well as all the other Capitals, and some of these may now be had at the Lucky Corner, No. 1, Cornhill.

CARROLL respectfully invites the attention of the public to the superior advantage of purchasing for next Wednesday, when Two Prizes of £5000 will be decided as soon as the Wheel goes round, and when, if their numbers are drawn Blanks or Small Prizes, they may exchange them for undrawn numbers for the last day. The Wheel likewise contains Two Grand Prizes of £20,000, and several other Capitals.—CARROLL has already sold No. 553, the only Prize of £20,000 yet drawn, besides Nine other Capitals of £1000, £500, &c. in the present Lottery.

FOR PASSENGERS ONLY.—For CALCUTTA; to SAIL (positively) the 15th of MAY, being chartered by the Hon. East India Company, the Fine Fast sailing SHIP ABBERTON, burthen 500 tons, LUCAS PEACIVAL, Commander, (of the Hon. Company's Service); has a poop, and very superior accommodations for Passengers, and carries a surgeon.—Apply to Mr. Baxter; or the Commander, at the Jerusalem Coffee-House; or to WILLIAM ABERCROMBIE, 4, Birchin-lane.

FOR PASSENGERS ONLY.—Chartered by the Honourable East India Company to SAIL on the 15th May, direct for CALCUTTA, the fine fast sailing ship FLORENTIA, 500 Tons. JOHN WIMBLE, Commander.—Has a Poop and other superior accommodation, and carries a qualified Surgeon. For Passage apply to Henry Moor, Esq. or the Commander, at the Jerusalem Coffee House, or 22, Great Alie-street, Goodman's Fields.

EDINBURGH and LONDON STEAM PACKETS —The CITY of EDINBURGH, Capt. BAIN, starts from Blackwall, for Edinburgh, on Wednesday Morning, 23d inst. at five o'clock; and the JAMES WATT, on Wednesday, 30th inst. at same hour.—Goods received here, and forwarded to all parts of Scotland. A. MITCHELL, Agent.
Steam Packet Office, 35, Leadenhall-street.

STEAM YACHT FROM BRIGHTON TO DIEPPE.—The SWIFT STEAM YACHT, Captain HENRY SNELL, Commander, of 80 horse power, will commence Sailing from Brighton to Dieppe, on WEDNESDAY, the 30th APRIL, at Half past Nine in the Morning, and will continue to leave Brighton, at that Hour, every Wednesday and Saturday Morning, and return from Dieppe every Thursday evening and Monday Morning. The Swift is known to be a strong, well-built, fast Vessel; has been newly fitted at a very considerable expence, and her machinery put in the best possible order. Her cabin is spacious, the gentlemen's beds having been placed forward, there are three state rooms for ladies. Ladies' Cabin, 21. 2s.; Gentlemen's Cabin, 11. 15s.; Servants, 11. 5s.—For further particulars, inquire of Mr J. Lancaster, Regent-place, Pall-mall; at the Leith and Glasgow Wharf, East Smithfield; or at any of the Brighton Coach offices, where Packages and Parcels are booked.
Office, North street, Brighton.
N.B. The Chain Pier is in a sufficient state of forwardness to admit of embarkation.

THE Friends of the late MR. JOHN BETTS, Musical Instrument Maker, Royal Exchange, are respectfully informed, that he has bequeathed his entire Stock of Instruments, &c. to his Brother, Arthur Betts, and his Nephew, Charles Vernon; the business will therefore be continued, and the same workmen employed as during the life of Mr. Betts. A. Betts and C. Vernon solicit the same liberal support so many years given to their deceased relative, to merit which will be their constant endeavour. A variety of Cremona Instruments, by the first masters, are constantly on sale. A. Betts will still continue to give lessons on the Pianoforte, Viella, and Violoncello.

MUTUAL ACCOMMODATION, and MONEY ADVANCED upon approved Securities. The Nobility, Gentry, Merchants, and Tradesmen in general may be accommodated with cash to any amount, by bills of equal acceptances to any amount, and cash advanced upon approved securities, in a most expeditious and satisfactory manner. The utmost secresy may be depended upon, and will, of course, be expected. Communications from every part of the United Kingdom will be strictly attended to. None but post paid letters will be received. Address, Mr. H. No 31, Golden square. Hours of business from twelve till four o'clock every day (Sundays excepted.)—Money advanced upon all property intended for immediate sale.
N.B. Persons desirous of adding to their incomes have, through this channel an opportunity of investing their money upon the best securities.

ONLY TWO DAYS TO DRAW.—J. and J. SIVEWRIGHT are Selling Tickets and Shares warranted undrawn, at their Offices, 37, Cornhill; 11, Holborn; and 29, Haymarket, Corner of Coventry-street; where they shared and sold Seven Capital Prizes the first day of the present Lottery; also in the Last Lottery 1 467, A Prize of £16,000, and 14 315, a Prize of £10,000, drawn on the 15th of January last.—NEXT WEDNESDAY is the last day of Drawing but one: the Wheel contains Two of £20,000, Two of £5,000, besides 26 others of £1,000, £500, &c. Those who intend to adventure will do well to buy before next Wednesday; for should their Numbers be drawn either of the Two Prizes of £5,000, which are sure to be drawn on that day, or any other Capital, they may keep them; but if Small Prizes or Blanks, they may return them, and receive undrawn Tickets or Shares in exchange, without any additional charge.

A DOUBLE CHANCE.—SWIFT and Co. have the satisfaction of informing the Public that Tickets and Shares bought before the Next Day of Drawing (Wednesday Next, 23d inst.) if drawn Blanks or small Prizes on that day, will be exchanged for undrawn Tickets or Shares for the Third and Last Day, so that Purchasers may gain but cannot lose by the Drawing on Wednesday Next. The Wheel now contains Two Prizes of £20,000, Two of £5,000, Two of £1 000, Four of £500, Twenty of £200, &c. &c.—Tickets and Shares are Selling at No. 11, Poultry; 12, Charing-cross: and 21, Aldgate High-street; the old and fortunate Offices of SWIFT and Co.

ALE, STOUT, CIDER, &c.—THOMAS FIELD and SON beg to acquaint their Friends and the Public, that their genuine Burton, Edinburgh, Taunton, and Welsh Ales, Dorchester Beer, Brown Stout, Cider Perry, &c. are in fine order for use. They have also a very superior Stock of Foreign Wines, Cape Madeira, Brandy, Rum, Hollands, Geneva, and Orange Shrub; and they have been enabled to make a considerable reduction in the prices several articles.—22, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden

KALOGYNOMIA; The LAWS of FEMALE BEAUTY. By JOHN BELL, M.D. 24 Plates. Price One Guinea. The few remaining Copies of this celebrated Book may be had of Mr. Stockdale, 89, Strand, who will treat for the copyright of the greatly enlarged Edition in 4to. now in the press, with numerous additional plates. Those prints which should not be prepress, with numerous additional plates. Those prints which should not be promiscuously exposed will be put together separately as now. This edition is also elementary; the larger, which is printing, forms a complete system. The subjects are Beauty, Love, and Sexual Intercourse; and appended is a Catalogue Raisonne of what constitute defects in Female Beauty.

Just published, price 1s. 6d.
A LETTER to the KING on the Critical Circumstances of the present Times: with particular Reference to Radical Reformers, the Catholic Question, and Agricultural Distress. By a Friend to the Establishments in Church and State.—Printed for J. Hatchard and Son, 187, Piccadilly.

Just published, price 2s. 6d. 8vo. sewed.
AN APPEAL to a GENTLEMEN of ENGLAND, in Behalf of the Church of England. By AUGUSTUS CAMPBELL, A.M. Rector of Wallasey, in the County of Chester.—Printed for J. Hatchard and Son; Rivingtons; and John Richardson, London; and J. Ormandy, Liverpool. Of whom may be had, by the same author,
The RIGHTS of the ENGLISH CLERGY ASSERTED, and the Probable Amount of the Incomes estimated in a Letter to the Author of "Remarks on Amount of the Incomes estimated in a Letter to the Author of "Remarks on the Consumption of Wealth by the Clergy of every Nation." 2d Edit. pr. 2s. 6d.

Just published, price 1s. 6d.
THE Introductory Part to the JESUITS UNMASKED; displaying the Semper Eadem of Popery, and its baneful influence to Protestants when it has power.—Published by L. B. Seely and Son, Fleet-street; Hatchard and Son, Piccadilly; Rivington, Waterloo place, and St. Paul's Church-yard; J. M. Richardson, Royal Exchange; and Sams, St. James's-street.
The subsequent part of this work will be ready for delivery in about ten days.

WHITTINGHAM'S DIAMOND SHAKSPEARE.—In one Pocket Volume, price One Guinea in extra boards,
THE Whole of the DRAMATIC WORKS of WILLIAM SHAKSPEARE, complete in one pocket volume, being the smallest, neatest, and cheapest edition of Shakspeare's Dramas ever printed; and, when properly bound, will not exceed one inch in thickness.—Chiswick: printed by C. Whittingham, for Thomas Tegg, Cheapside; Rodwell and Martin, Bond-street; and sold by all Booksellers

GREECE!!!—On Thursday, the 1st of May, will be published, in 1 vol. 8vo. price 12s. boards,
THE LIFE of ALI PACHA, of JANINA. Second Edition, with considerable alterations, additions, and improvements.
Great labour and expense have been devoted towards rendering this new edition as complete as possible. It will contain much original information, and be illustrated with two fine Portraits of Ali, a view of Janina, and a Map of Greece.
Printed for Lurton Relfe, 73, Cornhill.

MILITARY MAP OF SPAIN.
Lately published, printed on four sheets of double elephant paper, price 21. 10s.
A NEW MILITARY MAP of the KINGDOMS of SPAIN and PORTUGAL, constructed in a superior style, from the most recent authorities, describing the Post Roads, their stations and distances, chains of Mountains, and military passes; likewise the places of the principal actions during the last campaign in the Peninsula. By WM. FADEN, Geographer to the King.—Published by James Wyld, Geographer to His Majesty (successor to Mr. Faden) No. 5, Charing Cross.

MOORE'S IRISH MELODIES.
Just published, in one volume, 12mo. price 8s. the Fourth Edition,
THE POETRY to the above POPULAR WORK, revised; with a new Preface by the Author.
"We are of opinion that the fame of Mr. Moore will ultimately rest upon his productions in this style of writing, because, however great his merit in others, this is the style in which he has never been exceeded, and which it is highly probable he never will be."—Quarterly Review, No. 55.
Published by J. Power, 34, Strand; and Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, Paternoster-row.

Just published, price 2s.
FIVE LECTURES on the GOSPEL of ST. JOHN, as bearing Testimony to the Divinity of our Saviour; delivered on the Fridays during Lent 1823. By C. J. BLOMFIELD, D.D. Rector of St. Botolph's, Bishopsgate, and Archdeacon of Colchester.—Printed for J. Mawman, 39, Ludgate-street; and C. & J. Rivington, 62, St. Paul's Church yard, and Waterloo place, Pall mall.

CURTIS ON SURDITAS. The Third edition, considerably enlarged and improved, price 9s. boards,
A TREATISE on the PHYSIOLOGY and DISEASES of the EAR; with new Modes of Treatment, illustrated by a variety of Interesting Cases, and accompanied with a plate of Improved Acoustic Instruments, for assisting hearing. By J. H. CURTIS, Esq. Aurist to the King. Printed for T. and G. Underwood, 32, Fleet-street, of whom may be had, by the same Author, A MAP of the EAR, for the use of Medical Students. Pr. 6s. coloured.

THOROUGH BASS.
Just published, in small 4to. price 8s. neatly half-bound,
THE Child's Introduction to THOROUGH BASS, in Conversations of a Fortnight between a Mother and her Daughter of Ten Years old. Illustrated by Plates and Cuts of Music.—London: Printed for Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy.
☞ The Author of this work enjoys, we think, the just distinction of having given to the Musical World the most perspicuous, intelligible and popular treatise upon this hackneied subject of Thorough Bass that we have yet seen. It is the offspring of a mind acute and accurate, and directed by that genuine good sense which leads its possessor to seize and preserve the valuable parts of a subject, and to give them the exact form in the most consistent with the Author's and Reader's purpose.—Quarterly Musical Review, No. IV.

HORSES AND DOGS.
Just published the 24th Edition, almost entirely recomposed, and with numerous additions, price 9s.
EVERY MAN HIS OWN FARRIER; containing the Causes, Symptoms, and most approved Methods of Cure, of every Disease to which the Horse is liable. With an Appendix, or Veterinary Pharmacopœia. By FRANCIS CLATER. To which is now first added a Practical Treatise on the most prevalent Diseases of Dogs. By F. Clater and Son.—London: published by Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy.
☞ The addition of the Treatise on Diseases of Dogs, without any increase in the price, will doubtless be received by the purchasers as a grateful return for the almost unprecedented patronage which has been bestowed on this work. The efficacy of the recipes has been ascertained by the sedulous attention of the authors, and evinced by a long course of practice.
Also by the same Author, the 5th Edition, price 10s. 6d. boards,
EVERY MAN HIS OWN CATTLE DOCTOR; being a concise and familiar Description of all the Diseases incident to Oxen, Cows, and Sheep.

CAREY AND LEA'S GEOGRAPHY OF THE WESTERN HEMISPHERE
Just published, in One Volume 8vo. illustrated with several coloured Maps Charts, and Views, price 18s. in boards,
THE GEOGRAPHY, HISTORY, and STATISTICS of AMERICA and the WEST INDIES; exhibiting a correct Account of the Discovery, Settlement, and Progress of the various Kingdoms, States, and Provinces of the Western Hemisphere, to the Year 1822. By H. C. CAREY and J. LEA, of Philadelphia.—London: Reprinted with considerable Additions relative to the New States of South America, &c. &c. for Sherwood, Jones, and Co. Paternoster-row.
"The Publication before us contains by far the most valuable condensation of American Geography, History, and Statistics, which has issued from the Press. It is constructed on a comprehensive and excellent plan; the Maps, Charts, and Plates are numerous and well executed; and when all the modern information required by the changes and revolutions on the New Continent are taken into the account, we are free to say that this Volume is a very complete Manual of the important matters which it embraces. Either for instruction or reference it is calculated to be a standard work."—Literary Gazette, March 29.

SHAWLS.—Five Thousand Pounds worth, just purchased, at nearly half price, has induced the Proprietor to make this addition to his previous large Stock, forming the most stupendous and splendid collection of any house in the kingdom, and at such prices as were never before submitted to purchasers. Among the immense variety there are a great many at the most moderate prices, such as imitation, Cashmere, two yds square, at 9s. 1.; ditto, 2½ to 2½, 1l. 1s; rose at 30s. are beautiful, and the leading colours, viz. scarlet, crimson, blue, drab, green, orange, and white grounds, at 50s. to 60s. are truly superb, positively worth from 5l. to 7l. The scarf shawls, which form an elegant square, are from 20s. to 4l.; those at 50s. are very beautiful, and such as are charged generally from 4l. to 5l.; with a great many others of the most costly description rarely to be met with, all equally cheap. China Crape Shawls and Scarfs—this beautiful article to be had in all colours. Cloth shawls, handsomely bound and tasseled, 9s.; ermine do. 15s.; ditto, in great variety, 18s.; Bras blanc shawls, 6s.; Zamora do. 15s.; Angola do. 12s. &c &c.—To be had at ROBSON'S, 64, Oxford street, corner of Wells-street.

SALE OF SILKS IN REGENT STREET.—TO-MORROW MORNING, at 11 o'clock, will be thrown open the large rooms adapted by LEWIS and CO. of Henrietta-street, for the Sale of the most rich and fashionable Silks, Court, Ball, Wedding, Morning and Evening Gowns, Millinery &c. This establishment will be conducted entirely for ready money, and every article sold at such low prices as cannot fail to ensure the most zealous patronage of the Public.—Persians, 1s. 4d.; rich do. 1s. 8d. to 2s.; sarsnets, 2s. to 3s.; rich, 3s. 4d.; double do. 3s. 6d. to 4s. 6d.; gros-de-naples, 2s. to 3s.; rich ditto, equal to French, 4s. to 6s.; the beautiful Marsalinettes, Moreen taffetas, 1s. 9d. to 2s.; Italian nets, of the best quality, at 19d.; a few pieces at only 7d; white satin for slips, 2s. 6d. to 3s. 6d.; rich do. for gowns, 5s. to 6s.; black satins from 2s. 6d.; Florence stripes and checks, at 3s. 6d. the dress; handsome worked muslin for every colour, 2s. to 20s. the dress; superb sprigged do. with flounces, 15s. to 31s. 6d.; an immense assortment of gauze dresses, from 9s. 6d. to 30s. which are regularly sold at 2 guineas and upwards; thread nets, 15s. the dress; lace dresses, 2 to 5 guineas; lace veils, 6s. to 15s.; those at 20s. to 30s. are extremely rich and handsome. Laces worked to Ladies own patterns if ever so difficult. Some handsome Edinburgh and Norwich shawls, at little less than half their value. Rich gold and silver sarsnets, tissues and Lamés for Court; also capes and cancar handkerchiefs from 15d. A just idea of prices cannot be acquired without inspection which Lewis and Co solicit.—At 195 Regent-street, four doors from Conduit-street

IN SIX EASY LESSONS OF ONE HOUR EACH.—Mr. BRADBURY, Private Tutor at Westminster School, solicits the attention of Ladies and Gentlemen to his unrivalled and infallible system of Penmanship, whereby he pledges himself to teach persons of all ages to write with ease, elegance, and expedition, (whatever may be the deformity of their present writing) in six; progressive Lessons. This system, as it equally promotes the attainment of a bold and masculine hand, calculated for business, not of a fine graceful manuscript adapted to Ladies; also secures to the Pupil the most free writing straight, with neat lines, with wonderful dispatch and accuracy. Moreover, will standby the hand of the most tremulous writer. Upwards of 50 years means, and numerous recommendatory letters may be seen, and references to persons of the first distinction, some of whom are upwards of 80 years of age. Private tuition at home. Ladies and Gentlemen attended at their own houses. A new and practical system of Short Hand, taught in a few lessons; to enable the writer to decipher what he has written with Inconceivable ease. Apply, (or direct, post paid) at the Academy, 364, Strand, near Chancery-lane.

PELICAN LIFE INSURANCE OFFICES, Lombard-street, Spring Gardens.
DIRECTORS.
Right Honourable William Heygate, Lord Mayor, M.P.
Sir William Curtis, Bart. M.P. | Sir Charles Flower, Bart. Alderman
Matthias Attwood, Esq. M.P. | John Coope, Esq.
William Cotton, Esq. | William Davis, Esq.
Hugh Hammersley, Esq. | John Hawes, Esq.
John Petty Muspratt, Esq. | Major Rohde, Esq.
William Samler, Esq. | George Shum Storey, Esq.
William Walker, Esq.
The Company continue to effect Insurances on Lives at equitable Rates without Entrance Money, or any additional Premium for sea risk to decked or open vessels to the British Isles, or to or from the opposite line of Europe between Texel and Havre de Grace included—to grant and purchase Annuities under special Act of Parliament—and also to purchase well-secured Reversions to considerable amount, and respectable parties, on liberal terms.—Agents appointed in all the Cities and principal Towns in the United Kingdom.
THOMAS PARRY, Secretary.

EUROPEAN LIFE INSURANCE and ANNUITY COMPANY, No. 10, Chatham-place, Blackfriars.—Persons affecting Insurances in this Company, for the whole period of life, are immediately entitled to participate in whatever division of profits shall take place, which, with the reduced Premium demanded, will enable all descriptions of Persons to make provision for their families on terms the most advantageous. Tables have been calculated by which the Premiums may be paid Quarterly, Half-Yearly, or Annually, at the option of the Insured. No charge is made for Entrance or Policy, except the stamp. The Insured are permitted to go in steam or other vessels, to and from any part of the united kingdom, and in time of peace to and from any part of the Continent, situated between the Elbe and Brest, without being required to pay additional Premium, nor to procure a Permit from the Directors. This Company continue to advance Money on Annuities secured on Freehold, Copyhold, or long Leasehold Property, or Monied Funds.
JOHN CLARK, Managing Director.

CHEAP and ELEGANT RETICULES.—W. MARSHALL, Manufacturer) invites the fashionable world to inspect his extensive assortment of Russia, Morocco, and Tortoise-shell Reticules, finely ornamented and lined, comprising an assortment of upwards of 500 novel and improved patterns, from 2s. 6d. to One Guinea. Rich Velvet Reticules, with clasps, 3s.; superfine Reticule Clasps, 1s. 6d.; fine polished Steel Reticule Clasps, 2s. 6d.; Ditto Snaps, 6d.; Ladies' fine polished, elastic Steel Bracelets, with fine steel clasps, only 2s. 6d per pair, equal in quality to those usually sold at 7s.; a large assortment of Ladies' Steel Waist Buckles and Clasps, 1s.; real Russia Pocket Cases, 1s.; strong Bankers' Bill Cases, 1s. 6d.; strong Russia and Morocco Purses, 6d. with steel snaps; Sovereign Purses; real Russia Pocket-books for every description, at Marshall's Wholesale and Retail Pocket-book and Reticule Manufactory, 1, Holborn Bars, the Corner of Middle Row.

PATENT OUTSIDE SUN SHADES.—The Patentees respectfully make known the improved manufacture of the Outside Sun Blinds for every description of window, and adapted for any apartment of a genteel house. The view to Nature is not interrupted; they draw up with great ease, and the construction is so simple that any workman can fix them; and they are sold at all parts, packed.—Made at Dawes and Newton's, corner of Carlisle-street, Soho-square.

THE ORIGINAL LONDON GENUINE TEA WAREHOUSE is REMOVED from No. 6, to No. 8, Ludgate hill.—FREDERICK ROBERT SPARROW and CO. in announcing to their Friends the new situation of their original Warehouse from No. 6, to those very extensive Premises, 8, Ludgate-hill, feel much pleasure in stating, that at the East India Company's Sale just ended, there was a much greater proportion than usual of fine and highflavoured TEAS, which, selling at very favourable prices, indeed to a much larger amount than usual, whereby they are enabled to offer upon most advantageous terms, both either of their Warehouses in London, or through the medium of their Country Agents, Good Genuine Teas, Cheaper and of superior Qualities at their respective prices than any other house in the kingdom; at the same time they request their Friends to be particular in the address, viz. No. 8, Ludgate-hill, nearly opposite the Belle Sauvage; No. 139, Oxford-street, between Bolles-street and Old Cavendish-street; and 2, Cornhill, a second house from Northumberland House; and to see that all Frederick Sparrow Warehouses are wrapped in printed papers, with name, address, and compound thereon, and those for the country in thin foil or lead, free of expence. Country Agents, Dealers, Families, Proprietors of Inns, Taverns, Coffee-houses, and large Establishments, supplied upon very favourable terms, by applying or addressing F. and R. Sparrow and Co. at their principal Warehouse, 8, Ludgate-hill, enclosing cash notes, bankers' bills, or orders upon London payment, when the change, if any, shall be enclosed in the Goods.

IN consequence of the great disappointment many persons have experienced from purchasing inferior TRUSSES, SALMON, ODY, and Co. most respectfully solicit the attention of the Professional Gentlemen and the Public to observe, that the genuine PATENT SELF-ADJUSTING TRUSSES are Salmon, Ody, and Co. No. 292, Strand, London," marked upon the leather case, with which they are of the spurious kind. Salmon, Ody, and Co. the sole Inventors and Patentees, have made 50,000 of their PATENT SELF-ADJUSTING TRUSSES, and still continue to have the recommendations of all the most eminent Surgeons in Town and Country. They have also the honour to supply the Army and Navy, and the Naval and Military Hospitals; the Dockyards and Ordnance; the Marine Infirmary; the Hon. East India Company; Guy's Hospital; the London Truss Society; the Mary-le-bone, Westminster, Bristol, and Dentiford Infirmaries; the Windsor General Dispensary; the Middlesex and St. George's Hospitals; Parochial Establishments, &c. &c.—Sold by one or more Druggists in every principal Town in the United Kingdom.

SMOKY FIRE-PLACES REMEDIED.—W. and M. FEETHAM, No. 9, Ludgate hill and 296, Oxford-street, beg leave to inform the Public, that they undertake to remedy the above evil, and by long practice and attention to this important object, with experienced and careful workmen, can effectually Remedy every description of Smoky Rooms, with little or no inconvenience to the family during the process. M. F. beg the Public attention to their Warm Air Stoves, with an increased draft, for halls, rooms, &c. Likewise Warm Baths, on a convenient and approved plan to their Alteneareting Shower Bath, by the King's Patent.

EASE and COMFORT in SHAVING.—To those gentlemen who experience inconvenience in Shaving from a tender face or uncertain beard, J. T. RIGGE most particularly recommends his celebrated MAGIC RAZOR TABLET, which, with its late improvement, he ventures will prove so keen an edge as to supersede all grinding, honing, &c. and render shaving a luxury instead of a torment. As it was before unpleasant and painful. Its use is simple, its effect certain; price 2s. 6d. J. T. Rigge's Aromatic Shaving Soap will also be found an invaluable addition. Manufactory, 55 Chancery-lane, and 52, Park-street, Grosvenor-square.

CHELSEA.—To be SOLD, the LEADSHED PROPERTY, a small well-built HOUSE, No. 9 in perfect repair, consisting of twelve rooms called Hermes Terrace, in the Grove of Tyes which extends to the Royal Hospital to the King's road, opposite the Royal Military Asylum, with a view of gardens and trees in front; a considerable space, not finished, to be built upon. Intervening between the back of the terrace and Smith's Row. The house contains seven small rooms, kitchen, cellars, &c. and has a small garden at the back. With the Fixtures and Furniture included. It will be sold for £300. The Furniture was on chased less than two years ago, and has been but little used. There are eighty two years and six months of the Lease unexpired on the Ground Rent: No Fines or Premiums per annum. Enquire on the premises.

BIRTHS.

At Lymington, Hants, the lady of Capt. Beckwith, R.N. of a son.
Near Edinburgh, on the 14th inst. the lady of Lieut.-Col. M'Neill's daughter—The wife of Capt. C. White, R. N. of a son.

MARRIED.

On Friday, the 11th inst. at St. George's Hanover square, Capt. R. Edwards, 13th Dragoons, of Bradfield, Suffolk, to Eliza Murry, only eldest daughter of John Murry, Esq. of Ardeley House, Herts.

On Monday, the 14th inst. in the 23d year of her age, Sarah, the wife of D. Lounder, Esq. of Red Lion square second daughter of Wm. Lowe, Esq. of the Temple, and of Montague-street.

At Courtown, Ireland, on Monday last, the Countess of Courtown—Alderton, on Friday, Alderman Thomas Smith, of the Ward of Farringdon

STOCKS.	Mon.	Tues	Wed.	Thur.	Fri.	Sa
Bank Stock	211½	211	210	211	210
3 per Cent. Reduced	76¼	75⅞	75⅞	75⅞	76
3 per Cent. Consols	76¼	76⅜	76⅜	76⅜	76⅜
3½ per Cent. Consols	87	87	87	87	88
Consols for Account	76⅛	76⅜	76⅜	76⅜	76⅜
4 per Cent. Consols	94	93⅝	93¾	93⅞	94
New 4 per Cent.	96⅛	96⅜	96⅜	96⅜	97
Bank Long Annuities	19½	19½	19½	19½	19⅝
India Bonds	35 p	34 p	34 p	34 p	1 p
India Stock	13 p	13 p	15 p	15 p	—
Ditto, 5½			—	—	—
Consolidated Annuities			—	—	—

LONDON: Printed and Published by E. SHERWOOD, No. 13, [illegible], FLEET-STREET.
Only Communications to the Editor (post-paid) are received.

JOHN BULL.

FOR GOD, THE KING, AND THE PEOPLE!

No. 124. SUNDAY, APRIL 27, 1823. Price 7d.

MR. W. KNYVETT respectfully informs the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends generally, that his ANNUAL CONCERT will be given on FRIDAY, the 2d of MAY next, at the King's Concert Rooms, Hanover-square. Particulars will be duly announced.—Tickets, half-a-guinea each, to be had of Mr. W. Knyvett, No. 21, Edgware-road; at the Music-shops of Messrs. Birchall and Co. 133, New Bond Street; Messrs. Clementi and Co. Cheapside; and at the Royal Harmonic Institution.

NEW ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE.—Mr. VAUGHAN begs most respectfully to acquaint the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that his BENEFIT CONCERT will take place on FRIDAY, the 9th of MAY, at the above Rooms, on the grand scale of former years.—The principal Vocal parts by Madame Camporese, Mrs Salmon, Miss Travis, and Miss Stephens; Mr. Vaughan, Mr. W. Knyvett, Mr J. B. Sale, Mr. Terrall, Mr. Bellamy, and Mr. Bellamy; Leader of the Band, Mr. F. Cramer; Conductor, Mr. Goodison.—Tickets to be had of Mr. Vaughan, 89, Great Portland-street, Mr. Goodison.—and at the Music-shops of Birchall and Co. Bond-street; Cleveland's, Fleet-street; and at the Royal Institution, Argyll Rooms.

NEW ROOMS, HANOVER-SQUARE.——MR. F. CRAMER most respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that his CONCERT will take place on MONDAY, MAY 12, 1823, at the above Rooms. Leader, Mr. F. Cramer; Piano-forte, Mr. Cramer. Principal Vocal Performers.—Miss Stephens, Mrs. Salmon, Madame Camporese, Mr. Vaughan, and Mr. Sapio. Principal Instrumental Performers.—Messrs. Lindley, Moralt, R. Ashley, Monzani, Lucy, Willman, Mackintosh, the Pe-Dragonetti, Jackson, &c. &c.—In the course of the evening will be performed, New Quintet (MS.) for Piano Forte, Violin, Viola, Violoncello, and Contra Bass; by Messrs. Cramer, F. Cramer, Moralt, Lindley, and Dragonetti —Cramer. The Concert will begin precisely at Eight o'Clock.—Tickets, Half-a-Guinea each, to be had at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Regent-street; at Messrs. Birchall and Co's, New Bond street; Messrs. Clementi and Co.'s, Cheapside; Messrs. Monzani and Hills, Hanover-street, Piccadilly; Mr. Betts', Royal Exchange; and of Mr. F. Cramer, 192, Oxford street, near Orchard street.

NEW MUSICAL FUND, Established for the RELIEF of DECAYED MUSICIANS, their WIDOWS, and ORPHANS. Under the immediate Patronage of his Most Excellent Majesty, their Royal Highnesses the Duke of York, Cumberland, Sussex, Cambridge, and Gloucester, Princess, Her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent ——The Nobility and Gentry, Subscribers to this Fund, and Public in general, are respectfully informed, that the ANNUAL CONCERT for the BENEFIT of this FUND, will take place on THURSDAY NEXT, the 1st of MAY, at the Opera House, Haymarket, when they hope for the assistance of their benefactors.—The following principal Performers have most kindly promised their assistance:—Madame Camporese, Mademoiselle Caradori, Miss Tree, Madame Ronzi de Begnis, Miss Goodall, Miss Paton, and Miss Stephens; Mr. Braham, Signor de Begnis, Signor Begrez, Signor Placci, Mr. J. B. Sale, and Mr. Bellamy. A Concerto on the Grand Pianoforte by Mr. Moscheles; Pot Pourri for the Violin by Mr. Grand, (his first public performance in this country) first Violin to his Serene Highness the Duke of Saxe Meiningen. A Concertante for two Violoncellos, Mr. Lindley and Mr. Sale. Lindley, Leader of the Band. Mr. F. Cramer, Conductor, Sir George Smart.—Subscriptions received, and Tickets delivered for the Pit and Boxes, at 10s. 6d. and for the Gallery, at 5s. each, by the Treasurer, Joseph Kendrick, Esq. No. 6, Upper Mary-le-bonne-street, and by the Secretary, Mr. James Hay, No. 15, Little Chapel street, Soho. Tickets may also be had at the principal Music-shops, and at Mr. Ebers' Library, Old Bond street, the Opera office.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published by E. Lavenu, 24, Edward-street, Manchester-square, the corner of Duke-street, a Second Set of Rossini's Overtures, as Quintetts for two violins, tenor flute, and violoncello, with an additional bass of Pianoforte, ad lib. arranged by N. Mori; Beethoven's seventh symphony, as a septett, arranged by ditto; favourite airs, from the ballet of "Les Pages," in which is introduced the popular boiere danced by Mademoiselle Mercandotti and Noblet, price 4s.; 'Cease your funning," with variations, as sung by Mrs. Salmon, composed by Boehm, price 3s.

NEW MUSIC.—Just published, price 3s.

THE SECOND PSYCHEAN QUADRILLE, containing Ariel Blanche, Aurelia Perditta, and Virgilia, as danced at Almack's, the Nobilities' Balls, &c. composed and dedicated, by permission, to the Right Hon. Countess Cowper, by R. TOPLIFF.

☞ The Third Edition of the First Psychean is ready for the Public.—To be had at the principal Music-shops, and of the publisher, 15, Castle-st. Holborn.

NEW QUADRILLES.—Just published, Paine's 18th Set, or New Lancers' Quadrilles, with entire New Music and Figures; also, the 19th Set of Quadrilles, the subjects taken from Pietro L'Eremita, now performing by Paine's Band at the Nobilities' Balls, each 3s. The extreme popularity of the former numbers of these Quadrilles, arising from their superior arrangement, have caused the decided preference given them by the public, and from the increasing sale, J. Paine flatters himself they have given general satisfaction. New Editions, for those that may not be supplied with them, are re-publishing, from 1 to 17, at Falkner's Opera Music Warehouse, at 3, Old Bond-street, where may be had, the Music in Eliza e Claudio, La Donna del Lago, and all Rossini's Operas.

NEW MUSIC.—Two Airs for the Pianoforte; the variations composed for, and dedicated (by permission) to her Royal Highness the Princess Augusta, by J. B. Cramer. Price 5s.—Published for the proprietor, by Birchall, Lonsdale, and Mills, 133, New Bond-street.

NEW MUSIC, just published by Mayhew and Co. No. 17, Old Bond-street. HART'S THIRD SET of SCOTCH QUADRILLES, including the celebrated and admired Airs of "The Campbells are coming," "Auld Lang Syne," "Corn rigga," "O whistle, and I'll come to you," and "Loch Lomond side," with entire new figures, composed and arranged for the Piano Forte or Harp, and respectfully dedicated to Lady Grey, by Joseph Hart. 3s.

The great success which attended the publication of Mr. Hart's First and Second Sets of Scotch Quadrilles, has induced him to offer a Third Set to the notice of the Nobility and Gentry, which he trusts will prove worthy their patronage.

Also just published, HART'S SIXTH SET of QUADRILLES, selected from Rossini's popular Opera of "La Gazza Ladra," as danced at Almack's and the Nobility's Balls. Arranged for the Piano Forte or Harp. Price 4s.

London: Mayhew and Co. Music-sellers to the Royal Family, 17, Old Bond-street, where may be obtained,

New Editions of Hart's Fifth Set, from "Il Turco in Italia;" also his Fourth Set, including, George the Fourth's Coronation Waltz," Celebrated Hussars," with the admired "La Cendrillon," and Irish Quadrilles, containing the Rose, Shamrock, Thistle, Emerald Isle, and the Sovereign, all of which are in con stant demand.

MOZART'S MUSIC.—On Wednesday next, will be published, by CLEMENTI and Co. 26, Cheapside, with an elegant vignette title of "the Jupiter," MOZART'S celebrated SYMPHONY, known by that name, newly arranged by Mr. Clementi, for the Piano Forte, Flute, Violin, and Violoncello, after the plan of his well-known adaptation of Haydn's Twelve Symphonies for the same Instruments.—☞ A New Edition of the Single Pieces from HAYDON'S CREATION, arranged by Mr. Clementi for Voices and Piano Forte, is just published.

In the Press, a Volume of Songs, entitled

MINIATURE LYRICS, the Poetry by THOMAS BAYLY, Esq. Dedicated to the Dowager Lady Thomas. The Airs composed or selected by Sir John Stevenson, Mr. Baife, Mr. Barton, Mr. Horn, Mr. Lee, Mr. Smith, and Mr. Stansbury.—Price to Subscribers, 5s.; Non-Subscribers, 7s. 6d.

The Work will appear early in May. Subscribers are requested to send their names to Mr. Willis, Royal Harmonic Saloon, Westmoreland-street. The following are the Contents of the first Number:—"In this frigid Planet," Song or Duet, Sir J. Stevenson; "Mary think of me," Song. Lee; "I'll be true to thee," Song or Duet, Sir J. Stevenson; "The Lover's Mistake," Song, Baife; "The Little Pet Bird," ditto, Smith; "The Queen of the May," Song, Barton; "Oh hear my Sweet Guitar," A Serenade, Horn. A Subscription Book is now open at Mr. Lidora, Bath.

FOREIGN MUSIC.—T. BOOSEY and CO. beg leave most respectfully to return their sincere thanks to the Nobility, Gentry, and Musical Profession, for the liberal support and patronage with which their Establishment for the Importation and Publication of Foreign Music has been honoured from its commencement in 1817 to the present time. The extent and variety of their Stock, comprising, as it does, upwards of ten thousand compositions, does not admit of their particularizing it in the short space of an advertisement; it however includes every work of merit, (at the most moderate prices) both vocal and instrumental, which has hitherto appeared on the continent, and will be published in a few days. Some copies of their General Foreign Catalogue, containing more than six thousand compositions, are still on hand. A List of Foreign Operas and Catalogue of their own Works of Foreign Composers, may be had gratis.

MISS LINWOOD'S GALLERIES of PICTURES, in Leicester-square, are RE-OPENED with new DECORATIONS, ALTERATIONS, and ADDITIONS, and will continue open every day, (Sundays excepted) from Ten o'Clock in the morning until dark. Admittance, 2s. Children, 1s.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.—Monday, Cymbeline—Tuesday, Guy Mannering—Wednesday, Othello—Thursday, The Castle of Andalusia—Friday, The Merchant of Venice—Saturday, An Opera.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.——Monday, King Henry the Eighth.—Tuesday, Much Ado about Nothing.—Wednesday, As you Like it.—Thursday, The Way to Keep Him.—Harlequin and the Ogress every evening.

THEATRE ROYAL, COVENT-GARDEN.—MR. C. KEMBLE most respectfully acquaints his Friends and the Public that his BENEFIT is fixed for WEDNESDAY NEXT, APRIL 30, when will be presented Shakspeare's Comedy of As You Like it; originally by Mr. C. Kemble: Rosalind by a young Lady, being her second appearance on the stage: to conclude with the last New Pantomime of Harlequin and the Ogress, or the Sleeping Beauty of the Wood.—Tickets, and Places for the Boxes, to be had of Mr. C. Kemble, No. 29, Soho-square, and of Mr. Brandon, at the Box office.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.—MR. MACREADY has the honour of making known to his Friends and the Public that his BENEFIT is appointed for TUESDAY, MAY 13, when will be Performed, for the first time this season Shakspeare's Play of the Merchant of Venice; Shylock by Mr. Macready, his first appearance in that character, with a variety of entertainments, in which Mr. Farren, Mr. Macready, Mr. S. Chatterley, Miss M. Tree, Miss Paton, and Miss Hallande, will perform.—Tickets and Places for the Boxes to be had of Mr. Brandon, at the Box Office; and of Mr. Macready, 69, Berner's street.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF MR. YOUNG.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY-LANE.—On Thursday, May 8, 1823, will be acted a Tragedy, in which Mr. Kean and Mr. Young will appear; and an Opera, in which Miss Stephens will perform, with other Entertainments. Tickets to be had of Mr. Young, 41, Wigmore-street, and of Mr. Spring, at the Box-office of the Theatre.

GREAT ROOM, SPRING GARDENS.—NOVELTY.—MARSHALL'S Grand Historical Peristreokic PANORAMA of the CEREMONY of the CORONATION, the Coronation Procession, and the Banquet, painted on 10,000 square feet of canvas, and displaying nearly 100,000 figures, upwards of 500 of the principal characters on the foreground the size of life. The movement of the Panorama gives such an imposing and striking illusion, that the spectators are led to believe themselves present at the different splendid ceremonies it represents; the whole accompanied by a full Military Band, assisted by a Finger Organ and Trumpets, who perform the Coronation Music.—IS NOW OPEN.—Day Exhibitions at 12, 1, 2, 3, and 4 o'clock; and in the Evening, brilliantly illuminated with gas, at 7, 8, and 9 o'clock.—Admission, Boxes, 2s. Gallery, 1s.; Descriptive Book, 6d.

PICTURE of the LATE QUEEN'S TRIAL.—MR. CAUTY begs leave to inform the Public, that, to afford greater accommodation to the Visitors who throng to the Exhibition of Mr. George Hayter's great Historical Picture of the Queen's Trial, the Great Rooms, 80, Pall-mall, will, for the remainder of the Month, be open from 9 o'clock in the morning until dusk.

CURACY WANTED.—A Beneficed Clergyman, with exemption from residence, wishes to obtain a Curacy in some healthy respectable neighbourhood, with a comfortable residence. Remuneration a very secondary consideration. Address to the Rev. A. Z. to the care of Messrs. Spence and Desborough, 6, Size-lane, Bucklersbury.

PROPRIETORS of NEWSPAPERS, MAGAZINES, &c.—A GENTLEMAN of acknowledged talent, of independently loyal principles, of extensive editorial experience, and thoroughly conversant with the routine of the Press, is desirous of treating for a Share in, or for the conduct of, a POLITICAL or LITERARY PUBLICATION.—Apply, by letter only, (post-paid) to B.X.A. Peele's Coffee-house, Fleet-street.

CONFIDENTIAL LETTERS.—Ladies or Gentlemen requiring assistance in writing or arranging papers, of however delicate a nature, may obtain it on application (if by letter, post paid) to Mr. Mansell, 89, Strand. They will be waited on personally if they prefer it, and have the fullest satisfaction as to the honour, and ability, and trust-worthiness of the advertiser.

TO AGENTS, ACCOMPTANTS, &c. &c.—A commodious OFFICE to be LET, near Bond-street. Also, Wine Stores, or Warehouse Room, to Let.—Enquire of Mr. Long, solicitor, 12, Grafton-street, Bond-street

A MEMBER of TRINITY COLLEGE, Cambridge, wishes to employ the ensuing long vacation in the INSTRUCTION of TWO YOUNG NOBLEMEN or GENTLEMEN who are prepared to read the higher classics, and are anxious to study French and English Composition, together with the first part of Mathematics.—References may be had of Dr. Tayler, Cheyne-walk, Chelsea.

FOR PASSENGERS ONLY.—For CALCUTTA; to SIAL (positively) the 15th of MAY, being chartered by the Hon. East India Company, the Fine Fast-sailing SHIP ASBERTON, burthen 500 tons, LUCAS PERCIVAL, Commander, (of the Hon. Company's Service); has a poop, and very superior accommodations for Passengers, and carries a surgeon.—Apply to Mr. Bawtree; or the Commander, at the Jerusalem Coffee-House; or to WILLIAM ABERCROMBIE, 4, Birchin-lane.

FOR PASSENGERS ONLY.—Chartered by the Honourable East India Company, to SAIL on the 15th May, direct for CALCUTTA, the fine fast sailing ship FLORENTIA, 800 Tons, JOHN WIMBLE, Commander.—Has a Poop and other superior accommodation, and carries a qualified Surgeon. For Passage apply to Henry Moor, Esq. or the Commander, at the Jerusalem Coffee House, or 22, Great Allie street, Goodman's Fields.

DINING ROOM and DRAWING ROOM FURNITURE; consisting of real rosewood chairs and tables; dining room chairs, tables, and sideboards, of the most beautiful Spanish wood; a complete suit of drawing room furniture, consisting of chairs, tables, sofas, &c.; with six of the most beautiful silk curtains in London; the principal part of which was bought at the late sale at Oatlands, and will be sold for what can be had for them, by Nias and Co. Agents, 32, Berners-street, Oxford-street.

TO LET, FURNISHED, a DRAWING-ROOM and BED CHAMBER, in the house of a private gentleman, within five minutes walk of Somerset House and the Theatres. Terms, to a single gentleman, 100 guineas per annum.—For address, apply to Mr. Huggins, 14, Howard-street, Norfolk-street, Strand.

MONEY on EQUITABLE TERMS.—The Advertiser advances Money to any extent, at moderate interest, whether on Freehold, Copyhold, Leasehold, Litehold, Funded, Church Livings, or other ample Security; and assures those who may honour him with their confidence, that they will experience treatment the most candid, liberal, and explicit, though similar business is sometimes viewed with mistrust, from the mal-practices of disreputable people.—Letters, post-paid, to A. Z. care of Mr. Williams, glover, Inner Temple-lane, Fleet-street, will receive immediate attention; where also a card of address may be had.—Reversions are purchased.

FASHIONABLE NEW and SECOND-HAND CARRIAGES, at RANDALL'S LARGE MART, Pancras-street, Tottenham-court-road, opposite Howland-street.—A great variety of new and second-hand Fashionable Landaus, Landaulets, Chariots, Barouches, Baronchets, Curricles, Poney Phaetons, and Chairs, Dennets, &c.—Also New Harness, which are to be sold on very low terms, being sent in under peculiar circumstances. Carriages taken in exchange.

Just published, price 2s.

THE SPEECH of the EARL of LIVERPOOL, delivered in the House of Lords, on Monday, the 14th of April, 1823, upon laying on the Table of the House, by His Majesty's Command, certain Papers relative to the Negociations at Verona, Paris, and Madrid, on the Differences which had arisen between France and Spain.—London: Printed by J. Hatchard and Son, 187, Piccadilly.

Just published, in 8vo. price 1s. sewed,

A BRIEF EXPOSITION of the AGRICULTURAL QUESTION. By A FREEHOLDER.—Sold by G. and W. Nicol, Pall-mall; J. M. Richardson, Cornhill; and J. Booth, Duke street, Portland-place.

Just published, in 4to. with 16 Engravings, price 11. 5s. boards, Vol 6. Part I. of SUPPLEMENT to the ENCYCLOPÆDIA BRITANNICA; edited by MACVEY NAPIER, F.R.S.E. London and Edinburgh. This half volume contains a great variety of articles and Treatises, written by John Barrow, Isaac Benjamin Blot, Member of the Royal Institute of France, William Esq., Jean Baptiste

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

[This Gazette contains the Investiture of Vice Admirals Sir T. B. Thompson, and Sir H. Neale, as Knights Grand Crosses of the Bath; and Major-Gen. Sir W. K. Grant, as Knight Commander; and the honour of Knighthood on Baron Hulbeck.]

OFFICE OF ORDNANCE, April 19.

Corps of Royal Engineers—Sec. Capt. H. A. Tapp to be Sec. Capt.; First Lieut. R. J. Baron to be Sec. Capt.; First Lieut. G. C. Du Plat to be First Lieut.; Sec. Lieut. J. Townsend to be First Lieut.; Sec. Lieut. E. Vicars to be Second Lieutenant.

BANKRUPTS.

J. WILD, Adlington, Cheshire, farmer—J. FOWLE, Sandwich, common-brewer—J. SPRENT, Gosport, builder—H. DENISON, Liverpool, money-scrivener—T. H. CARTER, Minories, victualler—B. BARGE, Clifford-street, wine-merchant—S. BECKETT, Crawford-street, St. Mary-le-bone, printer—J. ANTROBUS, Liverpool, draper—J. TITTERTON, Wilmington-square, surgeon—J. GODSELL, Winchester, linen-draper—J. HAMMON, Great Portland-street, plumber—J. FOX, Claremont-place, Kent-road, poulterer—D. EVANS, Marchmont-street, draper—M. J. JOSEPH, Fox-Ordinary-court, merchant—W. HERBERT, jun. Goldsmith-street, ribbon manufacturer.

DIVIDENDS.

At the Court of Commissioners of Bankrupts—May 27, T. Hughes, Chelsea, linen-draper—May 27, J. Roy, Wolverhampton, tea-dealer—May 24, R. Terry, Holborn bridge, haberdasher—May 13, C. Fearnley, Crutched-friars, wine-merchant—May 16, J. Wilks, Finsbury-square, merchant—May 13, J. Westbrook, St. Albans, farmer—May 13, J. Bromley, Circus-street, Mary-le-bone, ironmonger—May 13, J. Willson, Swanton Morley, Norfolk, farmer—April 26, T. Griffin, Knightsbridge, plumber—May 13, J. Mitchell, sen. Essenden, Herefordshire, dealer—May 24, J. H. Tucker, Jermyn-street, chemist—May 13, T. Ramsay, St. Mary-at-Hill, wine merchant.

May 14, R. Whittle and T. Letwyche, Liverpool, merchants—May 26, T. Roose, Liverpool, baker—May 14, T. Bird, Solihull Lodge, Warwickshire, coal-dealer—May 14, P. Dranwhite, Bristol, fringe-manufacturer—May 15, J. Vose, Hardshaw within Windle, Lancashire, ironmonger—April 26, W. and N. Baker, Portsea, grocers—May 16, S. Turner, Sheffield, mercer—May 20, E. Pearson and L. Claude, Liverpool, merchants.

CERTIFICATES—May 18.

H. Hatfield, Abingdon row, Goswell-street road, merchant—J. Drurey, Snaith, Yorkshire, coal-merchant—R. Hamilton, Liverpool, merchant.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY.

In the appeal Forster v. Blake, the judgment of the Irish Court was reversed.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL, in reference to the late negociations, informed the Noble Lord (Holland) that the two letters sent from M. La Garde to Sir W. A'Court particularly alluded to had not come into the hands of Government, but were confidential communications to Sir W. A'Court, and could not be officially communicated to Parliament.

TUESDAY.

A Petition was presented from the University of Cambridge, praying for a mitigation of the evils of Slavery in the British Colonies.

LORD HOLLAND moved for copies of all Communications made by the British Government to the King of Portugal respecting the neutrality of Portugal in the case of hostilities commencing between Spain and France, which the Noble Lord thought highly necessary for a right understanding of the situation in which this country is placed as towards Portugal and Spain.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL observed that there had been the most complete admission made, that if Portugal was attacked unprovokedly this country was obliged to protect her—that was the state of our relations with respect to that country.

LORD HOLLAND withdrew his motion.

THE MARQUIS OF LANSDOWNE asked whether the papers connected with the negociation respecting the Slave Trade would be laid before the House? and whether any arrangement for a settlement respecting the Austrian Loan had been made?

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL had no objection to lay the papers respecting the Slave Trade on the table. With regard to the Austrian Loan an arrangement was in contemplation, and the principle of compromise was in considerable forwardness for completion, but for circumstances which affected the public funds of Europe. Still he saw no reason why an arrangement might not be made satisfactory to all parties.

THE EARL OF DARNLEY had reason to believe that Mr. Pitt expected the whole of the Austrian Loan to be repaid, but now it seemed the Government offered so much in the pound.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL believed that Mr. Pitt had no such expectation, but certainly the succeeding Administration had no expectation of the repayment of the whole.

EARL GREY at no time ever expected the Loan would be repaid; but he was now glad to find that the Austrian Government intended to compound with their creditors.

LORD HOLLAND, though he had not seen the Emperor of Austria's name in the Gazette, must understand that a commission of bankruptcy had issued against him, and that he now meant to compound with his creditors.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH, alluding to the discussions with Spain (which had continued for some years) asked what had brought them to a termination so suddenly and successfully.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL said, no blame could attach to the early negociations—a strong remonstrance had been made to the Court of Spain on the South American piracies, and that produced a satisfactory arrangement.

EARL GREY asked, whether Government was not in possession of information that the French Government had employed money to foment insurrection in Spain?

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL said, that information had been received, but the French Government, subsequently to the 7th July, positively denied the charge.

THE EARL OF DARNLEY moved for a list of the Guard Ships in the ports of Great Britain and Ireland, with their respective complements of men and guns. The Noble Earl said, that from the conduct pursued by his Majesty's Ministers at Verona, sooner or later this country must be involved in war. He complained that the Guard Ships were kept in an inefficient state, and suggested the necessity of putting some portion of our naval force in a state of complete equipment, so as to be ready for any service.

LORD VISCOUNT MELVILLE objected to the motion, as the return would only relate to vessels in port, which formed but a portion of the preparations made by this country. He admitted, that at all times, it was necessary to be in a state of preparation.—The motion was then withdrawn.—Adjourned till Thursday.

THURSDAY.

The Warehousing and the Revenue Departments Bills were read a first time.

Petitions were presented from the University of Oxford against the Roman Catholic claims.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH moved an Address to the King on the subject of the late negociations in the following terms: "To offer their humble thanks for the communication which His Majesty had been graciously pleased to make to the House, of certain papers relative to the late negociations at Verona, Paris, and Madrid." To regret that His Majesty's efforts to prevent war between France and Spain had proved ineffectual; and at the same time to represent that the course taken by Ministers in the negociations had not been such as the occasion demanded, nor to afford just reason for hoping that the threatened war might be averted. That they viewed with indignation the conduct of the French King, who, in the forgetful of past circumstances and of the rights of independent nations, had proceeded to make an unprovoked war on a nation friendly to Great Britain, the independence of which had been at all times viewed as intimately connected with the well being of this country, and which was more especially so at the present moment. That that House most highly disapproved of the conduct of Ministers, in suggesting to Spain the propriety of making alterations in her Constitution, similar to those demanded by France, even without having received any assurance from France that such alterations would prevent that interference with the internal concerns of the Spanish people which had been threatened. That the success of those principles, now maintained by France, would be, in the judgment of that House, fatal to every constitutional principle of which this country had heretofore been the champion; and they therefore could not contemplate the contest now beginning but with the most ardent wishes for the success of the Spanish nation in the arduous struggle; and to state their opinion, that if a more prompt, decisive, and unequivocal tone had been taken in the negociations, it might have prevented the commencement of a war, in which they could not but apprehend that this country would be involved at no remote period, and under circumstances of greater difficulty than those with which it would have to contend, had a different course been taken."—The Noble Lord prefaced his motion for the Address by entering very largely into the subject, commenting upon the conduct of the Noble Duke (Wellington) and referring back to the year 1814, the conduct of King Ferdinand with respect to the Spanish people, the had not fulfilled the promises he held out to the Spanish people, the circumstances were matter of notoriety, which at length led to the Revolution—restoring the Constitution of the Cortes, and which, the Noble Earl (Liverpool) justly said, provoked that Revolution. The whole conduct of the Allied Powers, since 1814, clearly shewed that nothing short of the utter extinction of liberty, and the supreme triumph of despotism, would satisfy them. This conclusion he was entitled to draw from all that had taken place, from the conduct of the Allied Powers, coupled with their declarations, from all their acts up to the present period, explained as these acts were by their own notes and by their own admissions. He then remarked upon the dispatches of the Duke of Wellington, Mr. Secretary Canning, and other distinguished persons contained in the papers on the table. In the dispatch of the 28th of January, Mr. Canning had made an admission, such as had never been made before by a British Minister. He had owned that it was for the safety, and at the desire of France, that the British Government had insidiously endeavoured to obtain from the Spanish nation similar terms to those demanded by France. He had also afforded to M. Chateaubriand a mode of explicating himself from the difficulty in which the strong language put in the Speech of the King of France, had placed him, by suggesting that that Speech was open to two interpretations, a suggestion which M. de Chateaubriand immediately adopted. The Noble Lord having made a great many observations on the documents, said, if their Lordships thought it consistent with the honour of the country, not openly, but insidiously, to undermine the liberties of other nations, they would oppose the address which he was about to propose, and might posterity have mercy upon their heads! But if they were desirous to see the Sovereign of their country resume his legitimate station in Europe, not in the train of absolute Despots, but at the head of constitutional Monarchs, they would convey to-morrow to the foot of the throne, in language such as became a constitutional Monarch and a free people, the Address.

THE EARL OF HARROWBY replied to the speech of the Noble Lord, and observed, that the question for the House was this:—Was it better for this country to be at peace, or engaged in war? The Noble Lord had said much with respect to the conduct of France, and one of the accusations which he had preferred against this Government was, that it had been duped by the Ministers of France. He wished to know what meaning their Lordships attached to these words? The object of England being conciliation, a menace could not have been used with propriety or advantage, nor could more be done than had been done. It was seen what the course of England on this question had been ever since the spring of 1820. Was it for this country to go to war on an abstract question?—for the Spanish Constitution?—or for the liberties of the Spanish people? Divided as that country was at present, if England joined in the war she would have to fight against a great portion of the very people she desired to assist. Portugal stood by no means in the same situation with respect to France as Spain did. She had not been concerned in any violation of the French territory, nor was it from Portugal that that moral contagion was to be apprehended which furnished a pretext for the invasion of Spain. Unless Portugal provoked attack, could it be expected that the other powers of Europe would suffer her to be overrun? In case of her being invaded, England would then stand forth, not as the friend of revolution, but as the defender of her ally. The Noble Earl argued at some length against the policy of a more decisive tone being taken on the part of this country than had been taken in the late negociation. From the situation of the two countries we could not have done more, unless we had gone the length of insisting that France should dismiss her Army of Observation. Had this been done, it was probable that the causes of irritation subsisting between them would sooner or later have terminated in war. He concluded by saying, that if England should be eventually compelled to draw the sword in this contest, she would do so at a future period with greater advantage than at present. He trusted the House, instead of passing the proposed censure on Ministers, would, on the contrary, consider them entitled to support and approbation.

LORD HOLLAND maintained that thanks were due to the Noble Lord for the attempt which he had made to rescue their Lordships from that ignominy which must rest up on them if after such papers had been laid before them no step had been taken to mark their Lordships' feelings on the occasion. The humility and disappointment which he experienced from the perusal of these papers, almost took from him the power of expressing his thoughts. He complained that the representations made by this Government were rather dissuasions, founded on the inexpediency of the meditated attack, than remonstrances against the principle. He compared Ministers to sportsmen who pursued the chase through by-lanes and obscure paths, who if they got in at the death of the fox were considered clever fellows, but who if they chanced to be thrown out from their sly efforts to gain the credit of dexterity, were held up to merited ridicule. He admitted that the Spanish Constitution contained some things that were impolitic. The Noble Lord proceeded to condemn the steps taken to induce the Spaniards to alter their Constitution, and declared that if the Spaniards manifested a strict, punctilious, and even foolish regard for their oaths, he should hail this as an auspicious omen, as it proved a just reverence and regard for these principles on which the Constitution ought to be founded. The Noble Lord had said, he saw no grounds for going to war on account of Portugal. He, however, would contend that Portugal was liable to attack as Spain, and might be attacked on the same principles, and our hope of preserving peace must therefore rest on the notable guarantee of the assurances of a Prince of the House of Bourbon, and on the moderation of a French army in the hour of victory. He concluded by lamenting the magnitude of the failure to be remarked on the part of Ministers, and the proofs afforded that this was occasioned by errors of judgment, and want of capacity. He deeply regretted that a glorious opportunity had been lost on the part of this country for taking its proper station to defend the weak against the strong; to stand up as the champion against oppression, and the advocate for civil and religious liberty all over the world.

LORD VISC. GRANVILLE was satisfied that His Majesty's Ministers, in the late negociations, had taken that course which was best fitted to maintain the honour and further the best interests of this country; defended the policy which they had preferred, and moved an amendment, declaring the conduct of Ministers in the late negociation to meet with the entire concurrence and approbation of that House, as it embodied the principles and opinion of those principles which it had been the policy of this country to maintain; acknowledging with gratitude the unceasing efforts of His Majesty to prevent war between France and Spain, rejoicing that His Majesty was not a party to war which did not appear to them necessary for the honour and interests of England, but at the same time assuring him of their ready support whenever a war should be necessary to maintain the dignity of the Crown and the rights and just interests of the nation.

THE DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM objected to the Address, and contended that it was not the policy of England to interfere in the dispute between France and Spain. The Noble Duke, adverting to the arguments respecting the balance of power, cited the opinion of an illustrious Duke who had formerly discussed the subject. The importance to be attached to that political balance must depend on the actual state of Europe. He felt neutrality was necessary, and his prayer was for the preservation of peace; but if the country was forced into a war, he prayed to God, notwithstanding he might meet with obloquy, that if we were to be forced to take the field, it might not be to support the principles then prevalent in Spain. He could not forget that the spirit of revolution still existed to undermine and reduce all that was regular in the moral establishments of society.

THE DUKE OF SUSSEX rose to return thanks for the notice a Noble Duke had taken of him, and to say his opinion on the balance of power had differed from that expressed by the Noble Duke. His Royal Highness had discussed the subject on different principles. He was not desirous of interrupting an important debate by further observations on that point.

LORD KING supported the Address.

THE EARL OF ABERDEEN defended Ministers from the unqualified censure thrown upon them, and looking back to questions agitated within those walls during the last 20 years, he could say, he never in his life gave a more conscientious vote than he should give against the motion of the Noble Lord.

THE EARL OF DARNLEY supported the motion on the ground that the line of policy pursued could not support peace.

THE DUKE OF WELLINGTON defended the conduct he had pursued in the negociations, not only as the Negociator at Verona, but as a Member of the Cabinet. The Government had determined on neutrality, and he went to Verona to preserve the line of neutrality; and in the Congress of Sovereigns and their Ministers, he used the arguments which he thought best for the preservation of the peace of Europe. He had been blamed for not having acted on a principle laid down by the Marquis of Londonderry in 1821. In point of fact, the principle found in the paper left by Lord Londonderry was not committed by the Allied Sovereigns. He was not committed by the principle in that paper, but to with-stand all interference on the part of Spain. With respect to the charge against him of having been duped, he thanked Noble Lords for the pains they had taken to throw upon him the obligation he was under of coming to the investigation. He should, however, have left more obvious proofs than they had taken less pains to pervert his conduct, and to misrepresent which they knew did not belong to it. He had resisted the menacing Spain. He was then blamed for stating that the Government was justified in forming an army of observation, to say, when there was a civil war on the opposite frontiers, the competent for France to assemble an army on her own frontiers, he should be found in fault for having submitted a question there could really be no difference of opinion, was more With respect to the language held out at Verona, he must considered it more manly, as the representative of his Sovereign, to hold firm but respectful language. On the subject of non-intervention, founded upon a knowledge of Spain, was, that such a declaratory measure was necessary to facilitate the peace of Spain, cation in the Constitution was proposed, but the object was was detailed in the papers.

EARL GREY argued at some length in support of the Address, in allusion to the speech of the Noble Duke (Wellington) who, he said, was of misrepresentation, and declared that he was supporting neutrality. If so, why did a British Minister encourage the concessions, however, had they been made, would not have prevented military concessions. The proposition made by the Spanish Government one the country should not have made. Mediation did not exist in the proposition. It was calling for submission from Spain to the concession she could not make on any principle of honour. He deprecated all internal interference in the affairs of Spain. The of Spain was one of the most formidable dangers that could this country, even in the time of Napoleon; could the House indifference the prospect of Russia supporting France's fleet upon the consequence which might arise from the influence which Spain had adopted. The object of Spain was to the example of her invaders, and endeavour to excite a France against her Ministers. If a revolution in France again set Europe in a flame, and the Monarch of Russia should his forces again to what he called the Western Provinces, country keep out of war?

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL expressed his surprize at the Address him that Address was unintelligible. He knew not what it and it was impossible to say whether it was for peace or war the Noble Earl who last spoke had made the object clear—the meaning was this, "You ought to have gone to war rather than France to invade Spain. This ought to have been the decree of Verona—this language ought to have been firmly and decisively to France." This was the only ground upon which the Government could be impeached, and this was what the Noble ought to have embodied in his Address. But instead of this and manly course, for the sake of catching a few straw votes, shirked and blinked the only question which was really at issue, instructions given to his Noble Friend, the Duke of Wellington, that to any interference with Spain, come what may, His Majesty not be a party. The real question for their Lordships to decide whether the policy of this Government had been right or wrong going to war with France. The Noble Earl referred to the conduct and opinions of the Noble Lord (Grey) on the subject. He remembered that at a time when this country was exposed of terrible magnitude, and, he believed, with a majority in the same monarch, the Noble Earl and his friends sneered at places, because they could not effect the most important that ever was proposed to be made in the British Constitution, the name of Parliamentary Reform. The supporters of this always overlooked the difference between Spain as it was in Spain in 1808—then a united, and now a divided country. farce to say that the civil war now raging in Spain was caused French Army of Observation. Did the Noble Earl seriously was almost as large as France, and that from her localities the strongest power in Europe to resist the attack of a foreign The very defects as well as the virtues of the Spanish character bined to render her conquest most difficult if not impossible tion. It was, therefore, madness to suppose that France could obtain that kind of dominion over her which would be dangerous balance of power, or inimical to the interests of this country.

The Address was supported by Lord Alvanley and the Marquis Lansdowne.

The House divided on the Amendment. Contents, 88—Proxies—142. Non-Contents, 29—Proxies, 12—48. Majority in favour of Amendment, 94.

FRIDAY.

Petitions were presented from the Freeholders of Devon, praying for a Commutation of Tythes—from Ballinasloe against the Coal Duties Claims—from Kent and Sussex against the Hop Duties.

In answer to a question from LORD HOLLAND respecting the secret article to prevent the union of the Crowns of France and Spain upon one head, the EARL OF LIVERPOOL said, that a treaty had been signed just after the restoration of the present dynasty, whereby his Christian Majesty engaged to make no alteration in effect. The bearings of all former treaties were against the supposition that an union of the Crowns would take place.

In answer to a question from the Earl of Darnley, respecting a commutation of tythes in Ireland, the EARL OF LIVERPOOL said, he saw no reason why (the measure being before the other House) some remedial step should not be taken before Parliament separated.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL, in addition to the delay in bringing on which had, since the Committee sat in 1813, increased very considerably, suggested the propriety of investigating the matter while the hearing of appeals might be forwarded, and moved for a Committee of Inquiry, which was accordingly appointed.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY.

Petitions were presented from St. Columb, against the Hawkers and Pedlars' Act; from Sligo, against the Coal Duties; from Dublin, Wiltshire, Leeds, and Huddersfield, against the Warehousing Bill; from the inhabitants of York, praying for Reform; from the woolfactors, praying for a Repeal of the Wool Duties; from the Merchants of London, praying for a Bill to legalize the Sale of Goods.

The Quorum Magistrates Bill was postponed till this day six months.

MR. HENRY GREY BENNETT gave notice that he would on the 2d of May inst. submit a motion to do away the punishment of whipping.

LORD NUGENT gave notice that he would, on the 2d of May, move for leave to bring in a Bill to place the Roman Catholics of Great Britain on the same footing with the Catholics of Ireland.

In answer to some questions put by Sir N. Colthurst, on the present disturbed state of Ireland, MR. GOULBURN replied, that it was the intention on the 30th instant, to move for the renewal of the Insurrection Act; and then every thing connected with the subject could be discussed.

On the motion of SIR N. COLTHURST, an Address to the King for Copies of the Addresses to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland from the Magistrates and Grand Jury of Cork; and also, an Address to the King in turn of all persons tried under the Insurrection Act, were agreed to.

MR. HENRY GREY BENNETT asked whether any other remedy for the existing evils than the Insurrection Act was to be proposed in the House.

MR. SECRETARY CANNING thought it was not necessary to give an immediate answer to the Hon. Member's question, as it was an argumentative one.

On the third reading of the Warehousing Bill, MR. WALLACE proposed several clauses to relieve captains of ships from the necessity of evidence to which they are subject respecting bonds—to relieve them from certain responsibilities—to make the regulations preserved as to packing of coffee; and to leave the exemptions in favour of Irish flour as hitherto.—The Bill was passed.

On the second reading of the Irish Composition of Tythes Bill,

MR. S. RICE objected to the Bill, if it was intended to give the Clergy a compensation for claims which they did not and were never likely to receive. In the province of Connaught, the Clergy claimed a tythe on potatoes, but that tythe was never paid; yet he feared that the Bill would contain the elements of an equivalent for such claim. The Bill was committed.

MR. HUME gave notice of a motion for the 16th of May, to repeal into the Laws in force respecting Newfoundland.

TUESDAY.

Petitions were presented from Fareham, against the Coal Duties—from Halifax, York, and Lincoln, praying for Reform. (On presenting the latter petition,

Mr. A. Smith said, that including men, women, and children, 500 persons were not present at the meeting, which was a mere humbug, sed quod vidimus nefgros affair!)

Lord Milton, on presenting the York petition, said, it was signed by 11,000 persons; and he believed by two-thirds of the freeholders of the county.

Mr. S. Whittley protested against the petition, (though he admitted the respectability of the signatures to it,) because, it stated what was not the fact, viz. that the House had not done its duty.

It was not the fact, viz. that the House had not done its duty.

From the University of Cambridge, against Slavery in the West Indies; from the Manchester Chamber of Commerce, against the Orders in Council; from the Grand Jury of Westmeath, on the subject of Union Duties; from Enniskillen, against the Catholic Claims.

Colonel Trench took occasion to say, that Catholic Priests interfered at the late Elections for Dublin, denouncing eternal damnation against those of their flock who did not vote for a particular candidate, and they had harangued their congregations from the altar while on their knees in the act of public worship.

Mr. Wynn positively denied the statement; but Col. Trench and Colonel Wynn brought in the parties to hold candidates of the facts in his hand.

Mr. P. Moore brought in a Bill for preventing combinations among workmen, and settling disputes between Masters and Journeymen. To be read a first time.—Second reading on Monday.

Mr. C. Grant, alluding to some observations which fell from the President of the Board of Trade on a former night, implying what had been deemed a censure on the Government which preceded that of the Marquis Wellesley, for countenancing a partial administration of justice, wished his Right Hon. Friend (though it was hardly necessary) to explain.

Mr. C. W. Wynne assured his Right Hon. Friend that he had no intention of preferring such a charge against any Administration. What he had said was, that in joining Administration he had reserved to himself the fullest right of supporting in Council or in Parliament any proposition tending to ameliorate the condition of Ireland. The settling of the Catholic Question being an object of primary importance, the combination of the Marquis Wellesley afforded the prospect of the conduct of having her affairs conducted by a firm, impartial, and conciliatory Administration.

Mr. Secretary Peel must claim for himself, and for every individual with whom he had acted for six years, the credit of having administered justice in Ireland with strict impartiality to all classes of the King's subjects, whether Protestant or Roman Catholic; never did a Roman Catholic been excluded from office on account of his religion.

Mr. C. Wynne repeated that he did not make any charge against any individual.

Mr. Secretary Canning presented further Papers respecting the late negociations. They included a confidential minute of Viscount Castlereagh relative to the affairs of Spain, communicated to the Courts of Russia, Austria, France, and Prussia, in 1820, and various other documents.

Mr. Wynne asked whether any treaty on the part of the three Allied Powers lending their assistance to France in her attack upon Spain was in existence. In one of the Notes of Mons. Chateaubriand, he spoke of what he called a casus fœderus, and interrogated the three Powers as to the course they should pursue. He should like to know whether any treaty had been made to meet that case.

Mr. Secretary Canning said, to the best of his belief, no such treaty had been signed at Verona. Whether any thing to the effect mentioned had been understood he was unable to say, or how far any further obligations might be considered as binding upon the Powers. Secondly, with regard to the casus fœderus, the circumstances supposed never had occurred, and were put hypothetically, as being contingent and accidental.

Mr. Ellis presented a Petition from the High Sheriff and Grand Jury of the County of Dublin, stating that they had heard of the charges which had been made against them, and had immediately repaired to London, and prayed for inquiry into their conduct; six of the Grand Jury were now in attendance in the House.

The Petition was ordered to be printed.

Sir F. Burdett, in allusion to the charges brought against the High Sheriff of Dublin by the Attorney-General for Ireland on the 15th inst. moved, "That the statement of the Attorney-General, made in that House on the 15th inst. respecting the proceedings on the late trial of Forbes, the Handwiches, and Graham, renders it necessary that the House should institute an inquiry into the conduct of the Sheriffs of Dublin on that occasion." Those statements, he observed, had not been met by a direct negative on the part of the friends of the High Sheriff, and he thought it necessarily followed that inquiry should take place. He deprecated the mischievous doctrine of so acting as to give no cause of triumph to either party, which he considered a refusal of justice, and said that when the question was brought forward by the Member for Armagh there were many topics introduced which it would not be necessary for him to allude to now. That the Attorney-General and the High Sheriff were both great Constitutional authorities, ought not to form any part of their consideration. Clothed as the Attorney-General was with high authority, when he had brought charges against another Officer, quite as high as himself, constitutionally speaking, it was impossible for the House to refuse acceding to the motion. The Hon. Member for Armagh had certainly confined his motion to the particular occasion, an occasion which shewed the necessity of a Lord Lieutenant and an Attorney-General, endeavouring to protect the people against a faction. In such an endeavour it was of course a question of discretion after all; and he was free to confess, that if the Attorney-General had not stated in his defence facts which affected the character of others, he should have thought any further proceedings unnecessary.

Mr. Plunkett thought the question was one of discretion. He fully admitted the necessity of inquiry, but his justification did not at all stand upon this question. His case was complete, without reference to the subject matter of the Hon. Baronet's motion, and he did not be at all affected by it. On the occasion of his address to the House, wherein he had made the statements respecting the High Sheriff, he was not an accuser, but an accused. He was stating his own exculpation, though he was aware that it involved the conduct of other individuals. His defence was, that he believed the facts he stated to the House; and, so believing them, the question was, whether he was not bound to act as he had done? His suspicions on the subject of those charges had, up to that moment been strengthened. He now begged to inform the House that he considered the Sheriff a proper subject for prosecution; and that unless the interposition of the House took the subject out of his hands, he should institute a prosecution against him. His mode of proceeding would be the unfavoured ex officio mode; for his making a second experiment upon a Dublin Grand Jury was entirely out of the question. He should apply to the Court of King's Bench for a rule that the trial should take place at the bar of the Court; and by a jury taken by an adjoining county; and by this means he hoped to reach the substantial justice of the case.

Mr. Denman thought it most improper for the Right Hon. Gent. to resort to a proceeding ex officio after first taking his chance of getting the Bill found by the Grand Jury. The conduct of the Sheriff had very little indeed to do with that of the Attorney-General, with respect to the charges of conspiracy; if he were on the Petty Jury, he would upon his oath say, that he did not believe the persons accused went to the theatre under a previous concert to assault the Lord Lieutenant; though he had no doubt there was a previous concert to riot. The bottle he believed to have been thrown by some drunkard, who had previously swallowed its contents; and as for the rattle, it had been thrown by a boy of eighteen; an act, he thought, much more becoming the magnanimity of the Government either to overlook, or not to bring before a Jury in so heinous a shape as that in which it had been charged. The Hon. and Learned Gent. said, that a counsel, however high his rank or great his talents, forgot his duty and himself when he threw out reproachful insinuations against a Grand Jury for their decision in that character. The Right Hon. Gent. having once asked the Grand Jury to pronounce an opinion on his case, he had no right to appeal against that decision. With respect to the Sheriff the Right Hon. Gent. complained of him only when he found it convenient to do so in his own defence. He (Mr. D.) thought the Sheriff would be fully dealt with, if he had not granted to him the inquiry which he challenged. Ample reason had been stated to call for the interference of the House of Commons, and to get rid of this motion as the former had been gotten rid of would be most objectionable.

Mr. Bankes objected to the motion, as it would impose upon the House a judicial authority. The House had not the means of doing justice to the inquiry, for it could not examine the witnesses upon oath. The utmost the House could do, with any effect, had been done, and was about to be done by the Attorney-General.

Lord Milton supported the motion for inquiry; because if the charges against the Sheriff were well founded, there would be too much reason to think that the attention of the House was demanded to the general state of the administration of justice in Ireland.

Mr. Brownlow supported the motion for inquiry, in order that the persons, if proved to be guilty (he solemnly declared he believed them to be innocent), might be visited with the severest censure of the House, and that the system of abandoning a sacred duty might be eradicated root and branch. The Hon. Gent. defended the Grand Jury from the attacks which had been cast upon it; nineteen of the twenty-three were Jurors of old standing and tried and acknowledged integrity often received the thanks of the Judges for their upright and able conduct. They had been told by the Attorney-General that there was a relationship or connection between the High Sheriff and two of the prisoners so close, that he should have been justified in challenging the whole array. Now he (Mr. Brownlow) had to state, on the authority of the High Sheriff himself, that he was no more connected with any of the prisoners than the Attorney-General. Mr. Sheriff Thorpe had assured him that he was able to refute every accusation that had been made against him, and he had come over here in hopes of having the opportunity of doing so. The persons being under an oath of secrecy could not consistently give details of what passed before them; but as far as they could state any thing on the subject, they declared that every particular which had been stated as affecting them, was incorrect and unfounded.

Mr. Goulburn thought that the question no longer concerned his Right Hon. Friend, the Attorney-General for Ireland, or the Irish Government. If he could shew just grounds for imputing blame to the Grand Jury, he must stand acquitted. He conceived that he had done that the other night. His Hon. Friend (Mr. Brownlow) could not but admit that the High Sheriff had acted with much indiscretion, as to give rise to the grounds of complaint against him. The consequence of adopting the motion for inquiry by that House would be to prejudge the case, and thereby do injustice. He must vote against the motion of the Hon. Baronet, because he thought it a most inconvenient mode of proceeding, and because another course was open, and more constitutional.

Colonel Barry said, public justice could not be attained by an ex officio information in Ireland, and it was only on that ground it was demanded that that House should take the case into its own hands. If they loved justice, he was sure they would examine into the case at the bar of the House, by which means alone the calumnies vented against the honourable individuals who were then anxiously waiting to have an opportunity of clearing their character, could be dissipated.

Sir J. Newport was friendly to inquiry at the bar of the House.

Mr. S. Rice confessed he was not unprepared for the statement of that Right Hon. Gentleman relative to the conduct of the Grand Jury of Dublin. Last year he had been Chairman to a Committee of Inquiry into the Affairs of the Corporation of Dublin. In the course of his labours, he ascertained that it had been a standing practice for many years, for the High Sheriffs almost exclusively to appoint the members of the Corporation. Unless a man had this qualification, wealth, character, or rank seemed to avail nothing. When he was in Dublin, shortly after these Bills had been ignored, he met one of the witnesses. In answer to his question as to what he did there, this witness told him that he had much to tell, but that the Grand Jury only asked him one or two questions, and not allowing him to tell his story, turned him out. He should vote for the question of the Hon. Baronet, not liking any of those ingenious sideways of meeting questions in that House so often practised. Truth was never obtained that way.

Mr. Secretary Peel was of opinion the whole question was as to the way the inquiry would be most satisfactory. In the determination of that point he recommended the House to abstain from party topics, and adhere to those principles which generally regulated the conduct of Parliament. He wished to bring the question fairly to the test, and, upon established principles, the subject ought to be referred to a Court of Law. If the House agreed to the motion of the Hon. Baronet, they would exclude all inquiry upon fair principles in a Court of Justice. It was a most important question, how far they ought to inquire into the conduct of a Grand Jury. Were they to receive at the bar the evidence of every man who said he was not fairly examined by the Grand Jury? They might by such means support the charge—how would the Grand Jury be put upon their defence? If the question was to occupy the attention of the House, he saw no prospect of coming to a conclusion. Suppose they were to come to a determination that the Sheriffs had acted illegally, they must instruct the Attorney-General to prosecute, for they would not suffer a Sheriff who had acted illegally to go without a trial. His Right Hon. Friend was prepared to file an ex officio information against the Sheriffs. Under that mode of proceeding they would go to trial fairly. If they brought the Sheriffs before the House, a fair trial afterwards could not be had.

Mr. Tierney saw the question on an extended scale. It was a question whether all Irish matters of complaint were to be turned from Parliament and sent back again to Ireland. The state of the case was this: a new Administration had been formed; their bond was strict and impartial justice to all, but the departure from that bond was the source of the misery of Ireland. One part of the Administration prosecuted men for crying "No Popery!" whilst others said you are right. The Lord Lieutenant went to the play, and a riot ensued. The Attorney-General endeavoured to put the rioters on their trial, and at last was tried himself.—The High Sheriff and Grand Jury called for inquiry into their conduct, and the House was recommended to say—No. You shall be prosecuted in Ireland by the very man who calumniated you. Such a line of proceeding could not fail to excite discontent in Ireland. The House ought to take the subject into its hands, and satisfy the Irish people that justice was to be found in Parliament.

Mr. Secretary Canning had no doubt that inquiry at the bar would take a wider range than the charge against the Sheriffs, but surely that was no reason for hearing the cause in that House. He agreed that the Attorney-General for Ireland stood rectus in curia. He would have been entitled to full acquittal had he not made his statement respecting the Sheriff. After that conclusion, he (Mr. Secretary Canning) hesitated upon giving an unqualified vote, because he was not prepared to pass a vote of censure on any individuals without inquiry. He could not inculpate without investigation. By the course of proceeding proposed, the House would be precluded from examination on oath. He did not dispute the high powers of that House as the Grand Inquest of the Nation, but having the competent regular tribunal to resort to, he should resist the inexpedient course.

Mr. Brougham noticed the observations in favour of, and against the motion, and said, with respect to the state of Ireland, a patriotic Member of that House who had devoted a long life to the service of his country, had told them Ireland was distracted by faction, which Parliament alone could destroy. When she had grievances, they ought to hear her. When she asked for protection, they gave her restrictive laws. She wanted a helping hand, and found a bayonet or scourge extended towards her. In the present case there was a charge of packing a Jury, and they called for Parliamentary inquiry, which the House ought not to refuse. A compliance with the Hon. Baronet's motion would promote the peace of Ireland.

Sir Henry Parnell said a few words, which were inaudible amidst a loud and general cry of "Question!"—The House divided—Ayes, 219—Noes, 185—Majority in favour of Sir F. Burdett's motion, 34.

Adjourned till Thursday.

THURSDAY.

In answer to a question from Mr. Brougham respecting the capture of a Spanish corvette by a French cruizer, Sir G. Clerk said, the Admiralty had received no information on the subject.

Petitions were presented from Suffolk, in favour of the Game Laws; from Kent, complaining of Agricultural Distress; from Edinburgh, the City of Oxford, Selkirk, Rochdale, Huntingdon, and other places, in favour of Reform.

Mr. Coke presented a petition from the Freeholders of Norfolk, composed by Cobbett, praying for Reform.

Mr. M. A. Taylor said, that this petition was calculated to prevent any one from supporting the cause of Reform. If such principles as those contained in the petition were to be acted upon, they must lead to an entire revolution in the property and Constitution of the country. If he thought that such sentiments were entertained by any considerable body of the people, away with Reform for him—he would oppose it with all the means in his power.

Mr. H. Gurney said, the Petition did not speak the sentiments of the freemen assembled, yet it was entitled to consideration as the production of the most acute writer of the age.—It was laid on the table.

Mr. Coke then presented Petitions from the same county, disowning all connection with the one he had just presented (called "the County Petition.") The Hon. Gent. concurred with Mr. Gurney, and was not for Reform. He thought Reform should be introduced in the County Petition. anxious that Reform should be introduced in the County Petition. The Meeting was the most respectable one he had ever seen, and its proceedings were orderly until Mr. Cobbett began to address it. The noise and confusion then became so great that all he could hear from him at a few yards distance was, "I'll fill your bellies—I'll fill your bellies." It was not the Petition of the County of Norfolk; he was convinced that a large majority of that county would disclaim it.

On the motion of Sir F. Burdett the order for the attendance of the Sheriff of Dublin on Friday was rescinded, and fixed for Friday se'nnight, to give time to send to Ireland for witnesses.

Lord J. Russell brought forward his motion for Reform in Parliament. With respect to the particular question, he presumed he might advance, as a proposition not to be denied, that that House, which was the constitutional guardian of the public purse, should be as well guarded as possible against any of its Members becoming the accomplices of those whom it was their duty to check. To accomplish this there were two principal means:—One was, by excluding from that House those who held office under the Crown; the other was, by giving the people, from time to time, opportunities to re-elect their Representatives, or to choose others; and this was the way expressly pointed out by the Constitution. He did not mean to contend that the Constitution called for a representation of public opinion, as it might fluctuate from day to day. He meant—he asked for a fair mode of, and a fair time for trying the Representatives of the people. The Noble Lord repeated the opinions, and noticed the objections urged against the measure. He thought, however, with a Noble Friend of his, that the House, instead of being a representation of the people, and a check upon the Crown, was a representation of the Crown, and a check upon the people. The course which he should propose for the grievance which he had shewn, would be that which he had suggested last year—that 100 Members should be taken from the smaller Boroughs, and added to the Counties. He thought, however, that compensation should be allowed to the proprietors of those Boroughs; and he would support any proposal for such a measure, having that for its object. This was Mr. Pitt's plan, and his own opinion was, that a million would be wisely expended for such a purpose. The Noble Lord concluded by moving a Resolution—"That the present state of the Representation requires the most serious attention of this House."

Lord Normanby seconded the motion.

Sir E. H. East opposed the motion, principally on the ground that the Bill of Rights declared that the King, Lords, and Commons then fully represented the Estates of the Realm; and that the Commons were now substantially the same as they were at the time of the passing of that Bill. He did not wish to see the present system disturbed until there was a certainty of finding something better to replace it.

Mr. Ricardo was of opinion, the question of Reform divided itself into three parts. The first was the extension of suffrage; the second, the mode of election; and the third, the age of electors. The first topic he thought the least important; but on the second he considered the whole of the question to hang. It was obvious that if the few elected the majority of that House, the interests of the many must be sacrificed. He was sorry, however, that it was not in his power to coincide with the views of the Noble Lord as to the transfer of the elective franchise of boroughs to Counties.

Mr. R. Martin opposed the motion, which was supported by Sir J. Newport, Sir T. Lethbridge, and Sir F. Blake. The House divided. Ayes, 159—Noes, 280—Majority against the motion, 111.

The Irish Commutation Bill was postponed till to-morrow se'nnight.

The Division of Counties Bill was passed.

FRIDAY.

Petitions were presented from Manchester, complaining of the Use of Machinery; from Berks, complaining of Agricultural Distress; from Liverpool, Rye, Canterbury, Clerkenwell, and Brentford, against the Coal Duties; from Galway, praying for Protecting Duties on the Importation of Barilla; from Cork and Northamptonshire, complaining of the Duties on Leather; from Drogheda, for the repeal of the Union Duties; from Westminster, in favour of the Small Debts' Bill.

Lord Viscount Chandourne brought in a Bill for localizing the sale of Game, which was ordered to be read a second time on Monday se'nnight.

The Weights' and Measures' Bill was passed.

Mr. Henry Grey Bennet moved for a copy of the Letter of the Committee on the subject of Diet in the Penitentiary, and a copy of the Report relative to the state of health in the prison; complaints, the Hon. Member observed, had been made of the supply of animal and vegetable provisions to the prisoners, which were lessened of late.

Mr. Holford defended the conduct of the Committee and the supply of food.—The motion was agreed to.

The Beer Bill was recommitted.—The Chancellor of the Exchequer stated, that the proposed price of beer to be brewed under the Act was 27s. and not 28s. as printed in the Bill; and beer should not be sold in any out-house or garden. This was to prevent an evasion of the Act.

On the clause fixing the number of barrels to be brewed from a quarter of malt to be five barrels, Col. Wood moved an amendment—that the number of barrels be fixed at four.—For the amendment, 16—For the original clause, 45—Majority, 29. The Report was ordered for Monday.

On the question for going into a Committee on the Irish Militia reduction Bill, Mr. Skeffington moved that it be committed that day six months—but it was negatived, and the Bill went through the Committee.—Adjourned.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

Paris, April 21.—Telegraphic Despatch from Bayonne, April 20.—"The Major-General to the Minister of War:—'We found 31 pieces of cannon at Pancorbo, with bombs and shot. The head-quarters is at Vittoria, where the Duke d'Angoulême was received with enthusiasm.'"

Letters to the 14th state, that the army under his Royal Highness was expected to wait for some days on the banks of the Ebro, until the army under Marshal Moncey should have taken the field. The corps under Prince Hohenlohe has been dispersed through Aragon, and is to communicate with Marshal Moncey and Baron d'Erolles, who are to enter Catalonia on the 23d or 24th. The corps under General Molitor, consisting of 25,000 men, has taken possession of Logrono and Tudela. Ballesteros has retired to Tarragona.

Bayonne, April 15.—St. Sebastian holds out, and it will probably be necessary to besiege it in form; what most embarrasses us is the want of horses for the artillery, &c. A considerable number is required (9,000 for this army alone.) It is true, that 6,000 are said to have been purchased in the interior, but when will they arrive?—Pampeluna is very tranquil.—The port and citadel of Guetaria have been taken by our troops. Two hundred men, among whom were two colonels and ten other officers, have been taken, together with five pieces of cannon, and provisions. It is said, that the enemy have abandoned Burgos since the 14th. Every where the French army meets with the best reception.

A telegraphic despatch announces, that on the 18th our vanguard carried Logrono, which was defended by 900 men, and that they took a General, 200 men, a standard, arms, and baggage. Marshal Oudinot is going to Burgos. His Royal Highness will remain some days at Vittoria.

On Tuesday a Cabinet Council was held at the Foreign Office, which was attended by the Earl of Harrowby, the Duke of Wellington, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Wynn, Mr. Peel, Mr. Canning, &c.

Additional State Papers have been presented in the Lords by the Earl of Liverpool, and in the Commons, by Mr. Canning, consisting of documents divided into three classes, as regarding Spain, France, and Portugal. The first class contains the confidential communication of Lord Castlereagh, on the affairs of Spain, dated May, 1820, sent to the Courts of Austria, France, Prussia, and Russia; dispatches from the Duke of Wellington to Mr. Canning, dated Verona, Oct. 29, 1822; Mr. Canning to the Duke of Wellington, dated Nov. 8, 1822; and a Memorandum relative to the conduct of Spain, communicated by M. de Jabet to Mr. Canning, dated Feb. 18, 1823. The class respecting France, consists of Mr. Canning's despatch to Sir C. Stuart, dated March 31, 1823, enclosing a copy of the Treaty between His Majesty and the King of Spain, in 1814; and despatches from Sir C. Stuart in reply, and Mr. Canning and M. Chateaubriand.

The Committee of the House of Commons appointed to consider the state of the Game Laws, are understood, with one single exception, to approve the policy of legalizing the sale of game as a general principle, but subject to some restrictions.

A dispatch from the Marquis Wellesley to Mr. Peel has been laid before Parliament, expressing regret that the expectations of restoring tranquility in Ireland have been disappointed, and that he finds the system of outrage has been almost completely organised. He concludes by expressing his conviction that the wisdom of Parliament will not delay the renewal of the Insurrection Act.

The celebrated geographer, A. Arrowsmith, Esq. whose fame, as a constructor of maps and charts is so well known throughout Europe and America, died at his house, in Soho-square, on Wednesday morning, in his 74th year.

The library of the celebrated David Garrick, to which some valuable additions were made by his widow, the late Mrs. Garrick, is now under the hammer. Among the works on sale are some choice specimens of Hogarth, and a curious autograph of that esteemed painter. The sale attracts crowds.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Our friends from Ireland must excuse our particularising any of them to-day—we offer them generally our cordial acknowledgments.

The history of Mr. B. and the assistance *rendered is quite stale, and we are only surprised that a person like our correspondent should fancy us ignorant of the fact—*he seems not to know what actually did occur at Paris about the other party—we enjoyed the laugh at the bold assertion upon that point made to B. himself publicly some time since—but we will say nothing which can tend to annoy a set of people who are themselves as innocent as Lambs.

We beg to tell an "Inhabitant of Banff," that we do not care one single farthing for any of the proceedings of Mr. and Mrs. Ball—Mr. Ball has pleased himself, and made a much more suitable match than when he aspired more—we wish the poor girl happy.

We cannot inform Querist what Mr. Williams it might have been who addressed a letter to the Times about himself last Monday—but whether he be Whig or Tory, we care not: he certainly calls "London a popular place," and inasmuch Querist is right. The way we can account for the blunder is this—if he be a Whig he wrote it so, and if he be a Tory, the Times has misprinted it so, to make him look ridiculous.

Old Mr. Fysche Palmer, who was transported, was a Clergyman—and what then?—Are there not black sheep in all flocks?—is that a reason why Mr. Henry Grey Bennet should wish that Clergymen should not be Magistrates? Surely our liberal friend, when he inveighs against Mr. Palmer, forgets that he was transported only for High Treason.

Mr. Betty, the ci-devant young Roscius, is not going to be married to Lady Anne Hamilton, nor did we allude to that gentleman when we spoke of an actor who was about to make a great matrimonial alliance—nor to Mr. Claremont, as our fair friend Fanny seems to imagine—we have said—and we shall say no more.

Our thanks are due to Dr. —— of Edinburgh, for his cadeau, but we are no cranioloogists and do not want any more specimens. As he is a literary as well as medical man, if he would send us, in his next parcel, two or three interesting tales, they would suit our purpose much better than casts from heads; we must own, however, that his present proved to be a capital one.

Mr. Rogers's Ode on "The Opening Spring" is inadmissible. In justice to ourselves we will publish the commencement:

"'Twas in that season of the year
"When the caterpillars appear,
"And make a rout,
"And knock the cabbages about,
"When, in the space of half an hour,
"One caterpillar will devour
"A whole cauliflower!!!"

We think it right to observe that we have reason to believe the Mr. Rogers from whom we received this poem is not the author of "Italy" and "Human Life."

*Our excellent friend "Joskey" was not in time with his account of the April Fools. The idea was admirable; it represented all the Whigs at dinner at* Taylor's, relating the horrible tricks which had been played upon them on the first of April. Lord Sefton had been persuaded to drive three post-chaises tied together through the streets on that day, and did so; Peter Moore had been sent on a fool's errand; and Hume had made a fool of himself, and so on. We are quite sorry it came too late; we wish Joskey would favour us again.

We are extremely sorry not to have sent Mr. S.'s manuscript; but we were prevented doing so by unavoidable circumstances. We admire the Poem, but fear it will be rather too long for us; if Mr. S. will allow us to keep it a short time we may be able to give it a place, as, indeed, we should be glad at any time to do to any communications of his.

Our other correspondents must stand over.—Price of Stocks, see last page.

JOHN BULL.

LONDON, APRIL 27.

THE KING, we rejoice to announce, is rapidly recovering from his indisposition.

His MAJESTY'S attack of gout was brought on by standing for so many hours as he did at the Levee. We are inclined to think that the CHRONICLE newspaper experienced more sorrow at this particular circumstance than it is usually in the habit of feeling upon similar occasions, for that erudite and well-informed journal published to the world, on Wednesday, the FACT—that "more than sixteen hundred persons were present" to His MAJESTY at the Levee, on Monday, and although he CONTINUED SEATED during the whole of the tedious and lengthy ceremony," &c. &c. &c.

That the CHRONICLE should write letters to itself, and date them from Paris, does not surprise us—that it should furnish the town with accounts of insurrections and glorious revolutions all over the world, we are not at all astonished; thousands of persons never take the trouble to inquire into the reality of the statements it makes, and its falsehoods and fabrications pass for truths. But surely some probable estimate may be made of its veracity and the correctness of its information, when we perceive that it gravely announces, for two following days, that the KING remained seated during the whole of the tedious and lengthy ceremony of the Levee of Monday.

That HIS MAJESTY, with a feeling of the most delicate consideration for others, regardless of himself, declined receiving the visitors of the Levee seated, and that HIS MAJESTY STOOD during the whole of the tedious and lengthy ceremony of the Levee of Monday, is not only the truth, but the real cause of the attack which prevented the Drawing-Room on Wednesday. And we must say, that when the conductors of a paper are at once sufficiently impudent and foolish to publish twice consecutively, a statement, to the falsehood of which, upwards of two thousand living witnesses can bear testimony, we feel quite justified in doubting the multifarious statements and reports which are disseminated through its vulgar and mischievous columns, upon the bare assertion of anonymous correspondents, or the mere ipse-dixit of an "unwashed" editor.

On Thursday, with the same accuracy and good intention which characterised its statements of the preceding day, it observes—

"We have heard, that the seat of the disorder (the gout) is removed to another place, from whence it may not so easily be expelled."

—No man can be so dull as not instantly to perceive that the liberal news-writer wished it to be inferred, that the disorder had taken possession of some vital part; with what motive—with what view we ask could this additional falsehood have been promulgated?

"Men always believe what they wish to be true!"

But the CHRONICLE man could not believe the story he told, because he could not have heard it. Heard it!—mercy on us—where could a man hear any thing about the private affairs of a Court—Who does not know whether HIS MAJESTY stood or sat during a Public Levee in the open Palace?

If therefore the CHRONICLE did not hear such a report, his statement is pure invention; if he did—his information upon the subject was just as bad as it is upon all others; especially upon that, with which, in the ardour of his zeal for calumny and misrepresentation, he concludes the paragraph in which the former statement is contained.

We admit, that the "eaves-droppers" and pickers-up of the CHRONICLE may, during the stay of the Court at Brighton, occasionally collect something like a fact or two; but as there is no Steyne in London—no place to which careless vanity can resort, to talk itself into importance, (at least within the hearing of the retainers of the Whig journal)—the case is different when HIS MAJESTY is in town; and all those interesting and mysterious communications of the conduct and movements of Royalty which emanate from that paper, are equally authentic and equally true with those which we have taken the trouble to notice and expose.

OUR readers may be surprized, but very few of them displeased, by hearing that SIR ROBERT WILSON, the Member of Parliament for Southwark, has actually left his constituents in the lurch—and in the teeth of the Foreign Enlistment Bill, passed a few nights since, proceeded to Spain to take a command in the Revolutionary Army. The Neapolitan Rebels would have nothing to do with him—the Spaniards, it seems, are not so nice—and the people of this country, we conclude, have done with him.

SIR FRANCIS BURDETT brought forward his promised motion with respect to the Dublin Sheriff on Tuesday, in one of those manly strait-forward speeches which so clearly distinguish him from the herd with whom he has chosen to associate himself.

We have no hesitation in avowing that this motion for enquiry has our most cordial support, and we rejoice in the majority by which it has been carried. We think, in justice to ourselves, however, that it is necessary to explain why we feel so well satisfied with the result of this division, in which all those for whose principles and talents (and conduct, as far as it goes) we have the highest esteem and respect, were in a minority—we feel that a constitutional question was at issue, and we feel that a complete investigation into the matter is the only thing likely to re-instate the parties implicated, in their proper places, or give any thing like satisfaction to the country.

When we ran our eye over the list of the majority upon this occasion, we could not help thinking, that every man whose name appears there, was not entirely actuated by quite the same feelings as our own—we name no names, but we could point out some who would have been well content to throw all the constitutionality overboard, and support MR. PLUNKETT through thick and thin, had not spleen and anger moved them that a man of his powers should have quitted their ranks, and added to the efficiency of a Government which, under all circumstances and at all times, they feel it a duty—to themselves—to oppose.

We disclaim all party feeling; but our communications from Ireland are extremely important and numerous upon this subject, and we repeat that an enquiry is necessary, and that the country has reason to be obliged to SIR FRANCIS BURDETT for having brought forward the motion.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH (who, though a very nice looking young man, affords, in himself, a most striking illustration of the doctrine, that talent is not hereditary) brought forward, as he had kindly promised, a motion of censure against His Majesty's Ministers, touching the negociations at Verona, and their subsequent conduct with regard to Spain.

His Lordship is represented to have produced some resolutions tending towards the object he had in view, and concluding, as we read them, by a fearful apprehension that by remaining at peace this country may be driven into a war.

His Lordship is moreover represented to have expressed his tender anxiety for the character of——the DUKE OF WELLINGTON. If one could believe all the stuff which the reporters attribute to the Noble Lord, it would go nigh to rival in effect the strongest emetic DR. HUME ever compounded; but we do not credit these gentry, and we are convinced they do the Noble Lord an injustice.

Shall we give a reason why we do not credit the assertions of the reporters? We will. The same reporters who put into, or rather, extract from, the mouth of my LORD ELLENBOROUGH all sorts of incoherent trash, make LORD HARROWBY, the Lord President of His Majesty's Councils, get up in his place in the House of Peers, take out of his pocket the 46th number of a Magazine printed in Edinburgh, by Messrs. CONSTABLE, JEFFERY, and Co. called the "EDINBURGH REVIEW," and defend the conduct of his Majesty's Government by quoting out of that Radical, revolutionary, unprincipled book, the opinions of one of its hireling contributors. The reporters not only do this, but they make my LORD HARROWBY daub this hireling with his praise and commendation. Is this bearable—that newspaper writers should thus misrepresent our statesmen and ministers? that they should accuse a nobleman of high character and talent, and the friend of PITT, of such conduct as this? If it were true we should indeed be sorry and ashamed; as it is, my LORD HARROWBY can do no better than prosecute his calumniators for a gross and shameful libel.

The reporters, too, much misrepresent my LORD HOLLAND, into whose speech they have crammed a more than ordinary proportion of nonsense—after quoting a very apposite passage buried down by my Lady, his Lordship is made to say,

"This was the decided and unanimous opinion of almost every man who had heard the statements of the Noble Earl opposite."

A qualified unanimity is a novelty to us we confess, except in the case of the kind and gentle SIR JOHN MACPHERSON; but we are quite ready to place this passage to the account of those who have, as regards the earlier parts of the debate, a great deal more to answer for in the same way.

What certainly startles us is, that in the able and luminous speech of LORD LIVERPOOL, in the manly, noble, and spirited harangue of the DUKE OF BUCKINGHAM we see none of those blunders or misrepresentations by which the opposition speeches are so much injured, and we conclude that the TIMES and CHRONICLE, with a feeling of generous liberality for which those liberal journals are remarkable, bestow all their care and attention in dressing up the Ministerial oratory to the best advantage, and thus stay over and render into nonsense the brilliant emanations of the Opposition.

With respect to the motion of my LORD ELLENBOROUGH, or the objections raised against Ministers for their conduct towards Spain, we would meet them by enquiring of that Noble Lord and those who think—or perhaps we had better say agree—with him upon this particular point, what line could have been more judiciously adopted than that which has been taken? We ask this question in order to follow it up by another. What has the Spanish Government required or expected at our hands—what, in fact, was the ultimatum by which the Spaniards professed that they should be satisfied?

SAN MIGUEL, in his conversation with SIR WILLIAM A'COURT, 24th Dec. said—

"Spain cannot expect her (England) to range herself on one side, nor to send troops or fleets to assist us; but we are persuaded she never will assist our enemies, nor furnish them with the means of invading us."

It should appear that in observing the strict neutrality, which it is our interest and policy to maintain, we have precisely fulfilled the expectations of M. SAN MIGUEL, expressed to SIR W. A'COURT, and transmitted by him to MR. SECRETARY CANNING, (No. 8.) which paper we are almost inclined to believe my LORD ELLENBOROUGH, in the warmth of his patriotism, has omitted to look at.

The Noble Lord's resolutions were negatived by 142 to 48.

LORD JOHN RUSSELL brought forward his annual [mo]tion for Parliamentary Reform; but so deep [an] interest is the subject, and so thoroughly [ex]ploded quackery which for some time kept up the humbug, the question was suffered to rest upon its own merits, and [the] of those, whose powers have hitherto been so ably and successfully directed against it, though it necessary to [call] upon it.

The TIMES of yesterday attributes MR. CANNING'S [re]ference to "sulkiness," and makes a very odd floundering [allu]sion to "an injured and innocent woman the QUEEN." We not quite prepared to understand what the TIMES [would] say in its mystified paragraph, nor does it appear to us the TIMES can be quite serious in its reference to the [conduct] of the QUEEN, when it couples her late Majesty's name [with] what unnecessarily with that of MR. CANNING.

It is perhaps needless to add, that the motion of the [Hon]ourable Author of DON CARLOS; OR "Persecution," Tragedy, in Five Acts, and other works of equal merit, [was] negatived by a majority of one hundred and eleven.

ABOLITION OF SLAVERY.

IN another part of our paper we have inserted a letter [regard]ing the attempts to raise a cry for the abolition of slavery our colonies.

We confess that from the number of letters we have received upon the subject it is difficult to make a selection, but as those of our correspondents are argumentative rather than [practi]cal, and as we always prefer FACTS to dissertation, we [have] chosen for public notice a printed account of the insurrection at Grenada in the year 1795, written by MR. HAY, a [respectable] gentleman, who was on the spot, and a sufferer upon the occasion.

We subjoin a few of the prefatory remarks, as extremely pertinent—and have selected some passages from the pamphlet, which we think might do MR. WILBERFORCE and the Quakers a great service, if they would take the trouble to read it through attentively.

It may be right to observe that the prefatory remarks are not by the author of the Narrative, but by a "military man who has been nearly thirty years a resident in the West Indies!"

"The proprietors of our West Indian Colonies," (says the latter) "have for a long series of years been exposed to the continued attacks of adversaries from various quarters; among whom there were many distinguished by wealth, by education, by high attainments, and by legislative dignity and power. During the progress of the latter inevitable war, the colonists were nearly overwhelmed by the torrent of the French revolution; but the evils and losses inflicted upon them by the open hostility of the National Convention, which they with difficulty struggled through, were less dangerous than are the covert but disguised proceedings of the sectarians in England; or than are the rivalry of their opponents for trade, consolidated under the banner of the palace in Leadenhall-street. A set of men, hostile to the welfare of England—of principles which betray the liberty and independence of their country, have modestly assumed to themselves to petition the House of Commons to abolish the system by which the West Indian colonies are cultivated: these self-sufficient people—these creatures exercising their humanity free of expense, and distant benefactors they are exciting, without the smallest concern for the total destruction of the lives and property of the West India proprietors. Professions are a weak assurance of sincerity; nor can we blame trusting the motives of those who preach for reforms that may affect their own safety or property, though they be ready to risk destruction to another class. It is conceiving too much, to suppose zealots, that they are not set in motion by improper impulses.

"Of all the descriptions of men which form the British empire there is not one that more merits the good will of their country than the West India planters. It is unfair and unjust to reason the present generation with upholding slavery. This institution has descended to them from their ancestors, and they have found themselves under the most urgent necessity to continue the system themselves. With what justice shall the British Legislature condemn or have sanctioned and established by itself? or with what equity shall the people of England annihilate the property created under the sacred and faith of English laws? Impossible, so long as justice is despised unless upon the plan of indemnification. But the vast amount of the West Indian property, and the impoverished state of the finances of the empire, do not, and never can in our days, allow of the least hope of effecting it by this mode. To undertake it in any other way would be to enter upon a warfare against the sacred rights of property, which, if once begun with one class, may overturn every other.

"The colonization of the West India colonies, and the cultivation of the soil in that country; the labours borne, and the dangers surmounted by the bold and enterprising men who made the first settlements, and the energies continued by their persevering successors, form one of the most extraordinary histories of the power of human industry that the world has ever produced. The race of planters had [to] contend against the effect of climate upon the European constitution, against hurricanes, earthquakes, a constant succession of insurrections, and many minor, yet distressing calamities. Nor have been so incessantly harassed as they have been; and never so braved or suppressed these formidable evils with more manly with more devotion to their country's cause, or with more loyalty their sovereign. They have risen superior to all their misfortunes with a perseverance that has been worthy of the character of the country which gave them birth. These energies have created [one] the main branches of the wealth and power of the British Empire. The duties on their produce pour into the Treasury several millions a year; and add to this, the seamen raised in their ships form a large portion of our naval superiority; probably the glorious victories of the Nile and of Trafalgar would have been unheard of without the help of the thousands of sailors formed by the West India trade.

"Those who have resided long in the West Indies all agree [that] they be planters or military men), that the black would not work voluntarily. Indolence is engrafted in his nature; his wants are few, and cheaply procured, and these being satisfied, sleep and rest are his enjoyment. The blacks (improperly called Charibs) at St. Vincent may lately be referred to, as affording a true illustration of this indolent nature. Those men were as free and independent as man could be. From the peace of 1763 to 1796 they possessed the best half of the island, and the richest land in the colonies; yet during a space of years they never made or attempted any kind of advance in civilization. Although they had the example of the English and French before their eyes, they continued uniformly the same untamed and [unre]claimed savages from the beginning to the end of the period; and [were] concluded their wretched history by a horrible conspiracy against the English colonists, most of whom they treacherously murdered in the night, and then proceeded to burn all their estates, making that beautiful little colony one scene of horror and devastation.

"And this, or such, WOULD BE, IN ALL HUMAN PROBABILITY, the dreadful result and catastrophe in which would terminate the philanthropy of the Friends, "les Amis des Noirs." The very rumour of proposed abolition, when known in the colonies, will be pregnant with the most alarming mischief. But the measure itself, if it were [to be] taken, must inevitably convert those countries, whose beauty and cultivation is no where exceeded in the world, to the dreary condition of a wilderness. Let it be remembered also, that the English colonies possess constitutionally independent legislatures. On this very ground consideration, it is not necessary to enter farther than just to say the most important.

"Being in possession of a very valuable and authentic manuscript containing a faithful narrative of the sufferings of the inhabitants of Grenada during the years 1794, 1795, and 1796, when a most dangerous insurrection took place in that island, which narrative it has appeared to me might be at this time very seasonably offered to the public, I have unpremeditatedly been led into the reflections that I have ventured to prefix to it. In this little work, which was written by a man who was an actor in the scenes which he related, may be seen a truly drawn, a correct picture of what is preparing for all our possessions in that quarter, should we be so infatuated as to act upon the Petition of the Quakers. Five millions of national property—fifty thousand seamen—two or three hundred thousand of planters and proprietors, with their families—at least a hundred millions of property cultivated countries to become deserts possessed by a few savages—a retrogression from civilization to barbarism, will be the fruits of the error, and of sectarian workings of the Spirit."

The writer then proceeds to appeal to the good sense and right feeling of the country in a strong and powerful manner, and lays before the reader a detailed account of the effects of Slave EMANCIPATION, with which he has been furnished by a sufferer. We regret that we cannot spare more room for this interesting catalogue of horrors; but we are compelled to make way for a certain portion of the narrative, which, as we before said, we earnestly recommend to the perusal of those who have been giving signals of their intentions upon this very important subject.

MR. HAY, the narrator, was roused from his bed in the night of March 2, 1795, by a party of revolted slaves, who carried him from his house naked and a prisoner—after a series of ill-treatment he is allowed to return under a strong guard—the following passage, descriptive of the return, is highly characteristic.

"We were met by numbers of negroes of both sexes, loaded with effects plundered from the several inhabitants, amongst which were a great many of my own, carrying to the camp; their baskets were generally examined by my guard, and if they contained liquors, they helped themselves to what they wanted, offering me at the same time part. Amongst the number was my principal servant JOHN CHARLES, with a national cockade in his hat; he addressed himself to me, and said he had been pressed into the service as a drummer, which I doubted. On my arrival in Guyave, I found a woman he had a child by, busy packing up and sending away the few articles of glass and earthenware which yet remained, without either speaking or taking the least notice of me. There was only one freed negro woman in the house belonging to me, who seized me by the hand and wept bitterly, but was not permitted to speak to me. All the glass windows and many of the doors were broke to pieces, the furniture and plate carried off or destroyed, books and papers scattered about the whole house, notwithstanding that VENTOUR had pledged himself that morning for the orderly behaviour of his people, and the security of whatever I left in my house. I was hurried away to dress VENTOUR, who was locked at his friend ANTOINE ROY'S house, about a mile from Belvidere: he observed to me, that my house must have been plundered by my own servants, because he had left it entire; notwithstanding, I was asked to drink a glass of MY OWN Madeira, which I knew by the seal on the bottle, and they had spermaceti candles burning, which I had reason to believe came also from my cellar."

We cannot pretend to trace the unfortunate narrator through the protracted miseries by which he was assailed—long and painful marches, close imprisonment, and lengthened starvation—daily threats of being murdered unless the island were formally given up to the self-emancipated Blacks. But we shall give our readers the last scene of a tragedy which the quacks and humbugs of the day, in violation not only of every principle of justice, but of a solemn recorded pledge, are most anxious to revive in our West Indian Colonies.

"On the afternoon of the 7th of April a cannonading was heard, which lasted near an hour. This confirmed us more in the truth of the report. About day light next morning a few guns were heard. The prisoners, who had been let out of stocks, were immediately ordered in, the door locked, and the whole guard put under arms. Soon after the attack became more general, a voice was heard saying, 'The prisoners are to be shot.' Some who did not perfectly understand French, asked me if it was not so. To which I made no reply. Another said, it would not take place till the General came up himself, during which time the door was frequently opened, and as frequently shut with great violence. The guard was drawn up very near the prison, at the distance of not more than four or five paces. They appeared very much agitated, trembling with impatience, and some seemed to have their guns cocked. A few prisoners called out, Mercy! No reply was made. Others, who were not in stocks, were on their knees praying. Not a word was exchanged amongst us; we all knew an attack from that quarter must fail of success, which would not only prolong our misery, but endanger our lives. The door was opened; two men appeared with hammers to take the prisoners out of stocks. Those who were not in confinement, were ordered to go out. I was near the door, and immediately obeyed. The General was on a battery about twenty yards distant. He called to me to come up; I heard a musket go off before I reached him; upon looking behind me, I saw PETER THOMPSON make nearly two steps forward, and then drop down seemingly motionless. I flew to FEDON, in order to try if I could prevail on him to have mercy on the innocent. 'They have none on our people below,' replied he.

"At this time, the English troops were mixed with the coloured people amongst the Belvidere houses. I then applied to VERDET, CUZIER, and PAPIN, who said they had no influence whatever over him, and then to OLLIVIER, who earnestly prayed him to have mercy on the prisoners, or, if their doom was fixed, to have them shot on a future day. He was inexorable. He began the bloody massacre in presence of his wife and daughters, who remained there, unfeeling spectators of his horrid barbarity. He gave the word FEU himself to every man as soon as he came out; and, of fifty-one prisoners, only PARDIS M'MAHON, MR. KERR, and myself, WERE SAVED. They all bore their fate like men and Christians, and, except a young boy of twelve years of age, I did not hear a word from one of them. DOCTOR CHRISTOPHERS attempted to run, and was shot at about fifty yards distance from the prison. I think it is probable he counted them as they came out, because when the last was shot, he lighted his segar, and walked with great indifference backwards and forwards on the battery. Addressing himself to me, he said, 'You need be under no apprehension for your safety as long as I live; but you may be obliged sometimes to shift your quarters. As soon as that salopperie is removed, (meaning the prisoners shot) you shall be lodged for to-night in the same prison.' A man came up and observed to him, that some of the prisoners were not quite dead. He desired they might be despatched with cutlasses and bayonets. VINCENT, alias JEAN BAPTISTE COTTON, of Guyave, with some others, immediately executed their horrid orders with cutlasses and pikes, while the prisoners lay in a pile before the prison door, writhing over one another in the agonies of death. A negro came up who had his arm fractured by a musket-ball. Bob, a mulatto man, belonging to Revolution estate, was attempting to extract it. I was desired to assist him, which I did. Bob, or Robert, stepping over the dead bodies, went to bring a hammock from the person to carry another wounded man below: the track was so excessively deep and slippery, that he could not effect it. I told him the hammock was mine, and desired he would return it, which he did; and about the same time stript Mr. Barlow of his great coat, and put it on. He was one of the overseers belonging to Revolution Hall. He showed not the least surprize at so shocking a spectacle, nor concern for their fate.

"FEDON ordered a man to count the killed and wounded of the English troops: when he returned, he said they amounted to sixty-seven. Another messenger made them out one hundred. A mulatto woman, the wife of JEAN PIERRE FEDON, his brother, appeared weeping bitterly; he desired her to be comforted, that her husband was dead before he quitted the middle camp; that she might look out for another, the Republic would take care of her children. He called this the Camp of DEATH, the one below it the Camp of EQUALITY, and Belvidere Buildings the Camp of LIBERTY. He then left us."

Here follows the

"List of Prisoners shot by order of Julien Fedon, April 8, 1795.

1. Devernor Home
2. Alex. Campbell
3. James Farquhar
4. George Rose
5. Pat. Fothringham
6. Samuel Ought
7. George Walker
8. William Muir
9. Pat. Cumming
10. Thomas Johnson
11. William Kennard
12. Robert Webster
13. John Morrie
14. William Bell
15. Peter Thompson
16. Richard Davis
17. William Gilchrist
18. Michael M'Carty
19. Christopher M'Carthy
20. John Livingston
21. Neil Campbell
22. Anthony Kerr
23. Jenkin Rice
24. Joseph Shae
25. John Tod
26. Matt. Atkinson, 12 years of age
27. James Cuthbert
28. Edward Mathew
29. Joseph Mercer
30. John Thornton
31. Joseph Guy
32. John Wise
33. —— M'Dougal, pilot
34. Edward Johnson
35. —— Banister
36. James Heatron, sub-pilot
37. John Reid, a sailor
38. William Eames
39. Hugh M'Canll
40. Joseph Barlow
41. Francis D. Carruthers
42. John Jackson
43. —— Hawks
44. Philip Lepelley
45. James R. Linton
46. Gilbert Kerr
47. Thomas Brae
48. Benj. Johnson

Reserved.

1. Francis M'Mahon
2. William Kerr
3. John Hay, the Author of this Narrative

We consider it highly important, at this juncture, to display the effects of LIBERTY upon negroes; but we cannot refrain from adding to the horrid facts we have just quoted, the opinions of one of those liberal emancipators, whose generous spirit would prompt him to violate the right of property, and annihilate our most valuable colonies.

"From the accounts," says Mr. HENRY BROUGHAM, in his work on Colonial Policy, Vol. II. p. 414, "which have been received of FREE Negroes, it appears that their industry is still more sparing; of their invincible repugnance to all sorts of labour, the most ample evidence is produced in the report of the Committee of the Privy Council, in 1788.

"It will be sufficient," says the learned abolitionist, "to refer more particularly to the evidence from Jamaica and Barbadoes; in the former settlements Messrs. FULLER, LONG, and CHESHOLME state that FREE Negroes were never known to work for hire, and that they have all the vices of slaves; the Committee of Council," adds Mr. HENRY BROUGHAM, "besides corroborating this assertion, add, that the free Negroes are averse to work for themselves, except when compelled by immediate necessity. Mr. BRAITHWAITE, the agent for Barbadoes, affirms, that if the slaves in that island were offered their freedom on condition of working for themselves, not one tenth of them would accept of it. GOVERNOR PARRY states, that the free Negroes are utterly destitute of industry, and the Council of the Island adds that from their confirmed habits of idleness they are the pests of Society."

Of the general character of the poor, wretched, unhappy, amiable Blacks the still more amiable MR. BROUGHAM gives the following description.

"Although many of them possess land and slaves, the spectacle he (MALOUET) tells us, never was yet exhibited of a free Negro supporting his family by the culture of his little property—all other authors agree in giving the same description of free Negroes—the ABBE RAYNAL himself," adds MR. HENRY BROUGHAM, "with all his ridiculous fondness for savages, cannot, in the present instance, so far twist the facts according to his fancies and feelings, as to give a favourable portrait of this DEGRADED RACE."—Brougham's Colonial Policy, p. 416, Vol. II.

"It will be vain," says the philanthropic member for Winchelsea, "to think of securing the privileges of the Negro vassal so long as the hand of Nature has distinguished him from his LORD."—p. 432.

Now, as the Learned and Hon. Gentleman, however laudable his late unsuccessful efforts at white washing may have been, has not yet effected—nor, we presume, is he or even MR. WILBERFORCE with all his faith, able to effect—the great change in regard to the Negroes, which is to give them European complexions; it does appear to us that the circumstances of the case themselves are not greatly altered since the Learned Gentleman wrote the book whence we have selected the above passages.

The pious and exemplary MR. ZACHARY MACAULAY seems formerly to have thought something advantageous might accrue to the Blacks by copious libations of ardent spirits, and doubtlessly on account of his paternal solicitude to these unfortunate persons, a statue has been carved of him lately; but we fear when we find such men as the Member for Winchelsea repeating that—

"The faculty of speech almost alone distinguishes Negroes from the beasts which surround them;" (vol. I. p. 70.) "that the coercion of a master's arm can alone extort the necessary proportion of labour;" (p. 72.) "that their habits of industry have been formed by the constant dread of punishment; no principle less powerful can maintain them, and they must cease with the master's authority to which they owed their existence;" (p. 417.) "and advocating the actual necessity of the constant application of the driver's lash;"

we are apt to regard the proceedings of the present philanthropists with suspicion. No men, knowing as much of a Black population as MR. BROUGHAM has professed to know, and has published, can be such fools as to expect any individual advantage from emancipating such a race; nor any thing else than anarchy, insurrection, and confusion from the agitation of such a question.

We call upon our representatives again upon this question; we implore them not to listen to the specious wailings of mock humanity, but to look boldly at the facts and bearings of the case. BROUGHAM, one of the sharpest amongst the party, has declared his opinion as to the "results of Negro emancipation." When we see the subject pressed with the greatest anxiety, and see, as we said before, and as BROUGHAM himself has said before, that nothing but ruin and distress would accrue to the emancipated Black himself, we must be allowed to attribute some other motives to the ranting advocates of the measure than mere Christian benevolence.

TO JOHN BULL.

SIR—"The STATESMAN" newspaper of the 15th inst. contains the copy of a petition from SIR CHARLES WOLSELEY, presented by MR. HUME to the House of Commons, on the subject of tithes, and particularly with regard to my conduct as vicar of Colwich.

Not choosing to trust to the candour of the Editor of that paper, I will beg of you to insert in your next Number a few remarks upon the gross calumnies comprised in that petition.

It might, perhaps, have been sufficient for me to have observed, that although, happily for myself, my name has not obtained the notoriety of the petitioner, yet in our own immediate neighbourhood our respective characters are so well understood, and, I trust, so duly appreciated, that, so far as I am individually concerned, I think I might have left the misrepresentations of the petitioner, and the vulgar remarks of the Editor of the STATESMAN, together with his whining commiseration for the "calves" on the Wolseley Estate, to the contempt they so justly merit. But as their object is not merely to calumniate me, but to bring into discredit the whole sacred order to which I belong, it might be deemed criminal apathy in me to allow such aspersions to go forth into the world unrefuted. To vilify, and to misrepresent, the established teachers of religion, is the common practice of numbers in "this now unhappy country," whose ultimate object is the subversion of the altar and the throne.

If the following statement be compared with the allegations in the petition, the public will easily judge what degree of credit is to be given to the latter:—

I was inducted to this Vicarage in the autumn of 1807, and in the succeeding spring caused a valuation of the vicarial tithes to be made by an eminent land surveyor. The instructions he received from me were to fix a moderate value upon them, and upon such valuation they were all let. For several years afterwards, it is notorious that agricultural produce, and consequently my tithes, very much increased in value. As a proof of this, I may state, that the rental of the Wolseley Estate was twice advanced in the course of the following eight years. But not so the composition for the tithes of that estate, for I positively deny the assertion of the petitioner, that I have upon every change of occupancy raised "the price" of my tithes. If this had really been the case, does any reason exist why a Clergyman should be held up to the execration of mankind for increasing his composition, that does not apply with equal force to the landlord's rent? And no landlord, I conceive, considers himself bound to let a farm at a sum, never to be varied, under any circumstances, even to an old, and much less to a new, tenant. But so far from the tithes upon the Wolseley property having been continually raised, from the year 1809, up to the present time, I can clearly prove that in the year 1822 the compositions on that estate (including a small part recently sold) did not vary ten shillings from what they were in the year 1808. In order to meet the changes that must inevitably occur in the occupancy of a parish, during the lapse of fifteen years, it is evident that new arrangements of the tithes must occasionally be made, but it is a fact that I have derived no increase of income or other advantage from the petitioner's estate, in consequence of the partial alterations which have taken place.

Will he then have credit for his assertion, not merely that I have been continually raising the tithes "upon any change of occupant," but that because he found, to use his own words, "the said Pitchford proceeding in this way" he gave me notice in September last to take them in kind? I repeat, will any one believe that this was the true reason for giving the notices, when at that period the compositions on his estate had not been raised one farthing? No, Sir, the truth is, that he completely outwitted himself. He thought, and hoped, that he could deprive me of the tithes altogether. His understanding had been bewildered by the sophistries of a publication, which issued last year from the Radical Press, and he brought himself to believe, what he anxiously wished, "that where there is no profit there can be no liability to the payment of tithes." Acting under this delusion, he, in September last, compelled his tenants to give me notice to collect the tithes in kind, thus flattering himself that he should prevent me from receiving them at all.

Knowing, as I did, that the compositions, even in the present times, were reasonable; knowing that my parishioners, generally, not even excepting those who had given me notices, were satisfied; conscious too, that I had taken no advantage of better times, I felt no necessity, and certainly no inclination, to submit to the dictation of the petitioner.

To them who are unacquainted with the arbitrary dispositions of those, who, in modern times, arrogate to themselves the exclusive possession of liberal principles, it may seem inconsistent with the petitioner's well known opinions, that he, the champion of reform, the friend of the poor, the martyr of liberty, (for such he is pleased to consider himself) should interfere in the private arrangements of his tenants—should prohibit them from entering into an equitable commutation for their tithes; in short, should arbitrarily insist upon a sacrifice of their interest and their inclination, to gratify his own ill will against the Clergyman and the Church. These, Sir, may seem hard words, and a heavy charge against one who would fain be thought a liberal landlord, and the farmer's friend; but I assert nothing but what I can prove to be true, and that in a great measure under his own hand. He knew with what reluctance his tenants signed the notices, and it was only by threats of expulsion from their farms that some of them were induced to sign at all. He heard that two of them were anxious to renew the composition; and, as if to furnish arms against himself, on the 3d of April, inst. he addressed to me a note, of which the following is a copy:—

"Dear Sir—I hear that two of my tenants are about to compromise with you about their tithes. As I mean to be master of my own estate, I beg leave to say, it is not with my consent, and if they do, off they will go this time twelvemonths.—Your's, &c. &c.

"Thursday. "C. WOLSELEY."

"The Rev. J. Pitchford."

This short note, of itself, sufficiently vindicates my character in the eyes of all whose opinions I value; but I may be allowed to add, that several of the tenants, although apprised by me of the above threat, have again taken their tithes upon the former terms, trusting, I presume, that their landlord will, in his cooler moments, discover that their interest and his are the same.

I have occupied so much of your space, that I shall not attempt to expose all the misrepresentations contained in the petition. But the petitioner's sympathy for the poor calves, forms so prominent a part of his complaint, that I cannot pass it over altogether—he bewails the situation of these unoffending animals in the most pitiable tone, and amongst other things observes, that "the said vicar has insisted upon having "all the milk of the tenth day, to the utter exclusion and de- "privation of the calves;" and he prays the Legislator to alter the law of England, which bears so hard upon them! I might, Sir, expatiate upon the good fortune of the Wolseley calves, in having found so distinguished a patron, and an advocate at once so eloquent and judicious; but alas, Sir, the calves have yet to learn, that their patron and advocate is their only enemy. It will be obvious to any one possessing common understanding, who will give the subject a moment's consideration, that any other mode of collecting the tithe of milk than what the law now prescribes, would be fraught with injustice to the tithe-owner, and would enable the farmer, if so disposed, to defraud him of the tithe altogether. But in the present case, let it always be remembered, that I had no wish to collect the milk at all, but that it was forced upon me; and that, feeling for the situation in which the farmers were placed by their landlord, and in order to obviate as much as possible the inconvenience to which he had subjected them, I proposed to take half of their milk on one day, and half on the next; and it will scarcely be credited that the tenants durst not accept this indulgence. The truth is, if they had, the petitioner, even with the assistance of his echo, the editor, could not have got up the shadow of a case to present to the House of Commons, but which the aid of his new protégees, the Wolseley calves, enabled him to accomplish.

I will advert only to one topic more in this notable petition. It states that my attorney had informed the petitioner, that I should "proceed against the parties in the Court which is the "most expensive." I will merely reply, that this is another wilful misrepresentation. The petitioner well knows that he received no information from my attorney that will bear any such construction.

It is satisfactory to me to be able to prove out of the petitioner's own mouth, and by his letters in my possession, that these unpleasant proceedings have originated, and are continued, by himself alone; and I cannot envy him the reflection that he is the only obstacle to a restoration of that harmony and good will, which, for fifteen years, subsisted uninterruptedly between my parishioners and myself.—I am, Sir, your most obedient servant, JOHN PITCHFORD.

Colwich, 21st April, 1823.

THEATRICALS.

THE Anniversary Dinner of the Covent Garden Theatrical Fund was holden, most injudiciously, on Monday last, at Freemasons' Hall. We say most injudiciously, because we know that many persons were prevented from attending by the fatigues of the levee in the morning.

The illustrious patron of the charity, His Royal Highness the DUKE OF YORK, was in the chair, supported by the EARL OF TANKERVILLE: a proof in itself of the truth of our observation as to the defection of the more exalted subscribers, who, on other similar occasions, have been present.

MR. FAWCETT's speech was in every respect admirable, whether considered merely as a piece of manly eloquence, or as peculiarly adapted to the purposes for which it was spoken. The allusions to the departed actors, in whom not only the stage but the nation has, since the last anniversary, experienced so great a loss, were particularly affecting—indeed, over the feelings of a near relative of one of the objects of MR. FAWCETT's eulogium, they had an influence so powerful as to drive him from the Hall.

The day passed off with the greatest eclat: good eating—good drinking—good society—good oratory, and good singing formed the attractions; and upwards of fourteen hundred pounds (we believe) was announced as the amount of contributions.

The MORNING HERALD of Tuesday, in giving an account of the meeting, alludes to a parody on a sacred air which was sung, and which seems to have given great (and very properly too) offence to the Editor of that paper. We are at a loss to find out to what part of the evening's performance the paragraph alludes; and, we trust, he must have been mistaken.

In the present state of the stage, and at a time when we proudly uphold the moral character and personal respectability of the members of the theatrical profession, it would be the height of imprudence and folly, if any indiscreet or disreputable person belonging to it, were to be encouraged in a display of the very worst sort of ribaldry, which has in the worst times disgraced society.

We confess ourselves interested in this apparently trifling matter, because we take a pride and pleasure in putting the metropolitan players upon a footing with artists in general—we maintain that the calling or profession of an actor does not necessarily demoralize the man; and it is because we are anxious that all actors should be like some whose names we could mention, that we wish to know the full extent of the offence charged against the professional part of the company on Monday, and the person or persons who actually committed it.

Our observations upon the Opera Ballet of last week have accumulated to us a host of female correspondents—of course we shall not blab as to the parties from whom we have received such favours, but we think we may take the liberty of inserting three or four specimens for the edification of our readers.

No. I.

"——— Square, Tuesday.

"MR. EDITOR—I am mortified at your observations upon the Opera-dancers—not about them or their dresses, which are, as you justly say, extremely improper—at least I believe so, for I never before thought about it—but about waltzing—you really should not run down that dance—I have three daughters all grown up—all out—and full blown—they are extremely plain—(entre nous, they all take after their father)—and I firmly believe that they have no chance of getting husbands except by an ardent cultivation of the waltz.

"You are mistaken I think about the decrease of marriages latterly, at least I hope so—of one thing I am certain, and I think I ought in fairness to tell you, and you ought in justice to state it—that the waltz, although more graceful and interesting than the kitchen dances of our ancestors, admits of fully as much conversation—indeed rather more—and, considering all things, is fully as conducive to the great end we have in view as any other performance which can with propriety be admitted into good company."

No. II.

From a highly respectable gentleman!

——"You only told half the story, or the Old Tabby saw but with one eye, when she gave utterance to her thoughts with such naiveté at the strange and unexpected performances at the Opera—which way did your old friend look when the male moukies began their antics?—This requires a little more scourging methinks from your powerful pen—something there is which must be corrected—if summary justice were inflicted on the spot to the males by the Argumentum Baculinum it would be extremely salutary, and might correct the indecent customs of the Foreign Stage."

——"Customs—we should say—

"More honoured in the breach than the observance."

No. III.

From no less a personage than our fair favourite MISS LAVINIA RAMSBOTTOM.

——"Ma' desires me to write to you, to say that you are quite out in your reckoning as to dry-salters and citizens going to the Opera in hackney-coaches, and she hopes you will correct your calumny about our being in the straw. A friend of Pa's, who lives in the Minories, who is a great friend of MR. BROOM's, the Queen's Lawyer, says that you are very malicious, and that, after all your pretended kindness last year, in putting in Ma's account of our party gratis for nothing, you only did it to quiz us; and Ma says she shall continue to go to the Opera as long as she pleases, and she does not care whether the people have any clothes on, or none, so long as her betters countenances it.

"P.S. Pa's young men play at CARDINAL PUFF, with table-beer, after supper every night—so you see we have got that from the West-end."

No. IV.

From our old friend in the tabby silk herself.

"Keppel-street, Bedford-square, Thursday.

"SIR—I certainly did not expect to have been pointed out in your Paper so particularly as I was last Sunday—the truth is, that I never had been at an Opera since I was seventeen years of age, when, if my memory serves me, such extraordinary displays were not made as are at present.

"It is not owing to any change in my feelings with regard to public amusements that I have so long abandoned theatres, but from the circumstance of my having lived a secluded life in Cumberland, where I had perhaps forgotten the nature of the exhibition, by which, I confess, my feelings were greatly affected last Saturday se'nnight.

"By your joke about my tabby silk-gown, I conclude you mean to infer that I am 'an old maid;' but with all your penetration, Sir, you are mistaken. I have brought up and educated five daughters, and I congratulate myself that accidentally I was unaccompanied by any of them on the occasion of our meeting. I do not deny the fidgetty motion which you attribute to me upon that occasion, nor do I disclaim the ejaculation which you have reported in weaker terms than those in which I uttered it.

"I go farther, Sir, and most unhesitatingly avow the sensations which agitated me at the moment—it was not that I felt pain or anxiety for the delicacy of mothers by whom I was doubtlessly surrounded, because they came prepared to witness a repetition of performances, which night after night, and week after week, had been carried on under their eyes;—it was—and perhaps you will ridicule what I am going to say, and 'shew me up' for 'humbug'—it was, that I thought of my own daughters at the moment—of their infancy—their youth—their womanhood, and reflected that the lovely creature before me, who was exposing her person for hire to the gaze of the million, had once a mother—had once been a smiling-innocent babe, and that my children, had I so directed their minds, might have been reduced to a similar degradation with her.

"There is nobody who admires the stage more than myself—some of the most honourable women who grace the Peerage have been elevated to their rank and station from the theatre, and I am the last to censure a woman for the fair and honourable exercise of her talents and accomplishments in support of herself and family—at the present moment we have many instances of that most amiable devotion to parents and relations, which reflects unclouded honour upon the exemplary persons who act upon it—But Sir—I could not—nor am I, as I said before, ashamed to avow it—restrain a genuine Englishwoman's feelings—I could not endure to see females forgetting what is due to themselves, by an exposition—the effects of which, upon the other sex, I appreciated by that which it had on me—without being moved almost to tears.

"That decent society should tolerate such things appears to me as extraordinary as, that panders to the vicious and enervated propensities of depravity can be found amongst my own sex. It is true, that my own daughters have never been permitted to waltz—I am therefore, perhaps, liable to be dubbed 'a saint;'—they have never sung MR. MOORE's songs—I may be called 'a twaddler!'—but in both prohibitions, touching these matters, my conduct has been regulated by a conviction that indecency loses none of its vice by being set to music; nor profligacy any of its horrors by being committed to the measure of a German tune.

"I have now pleaded guilty, Sir, to the charges brought forward against me last week—even to the wearing of a 'tabby silk gown;' and so far from apologizing for the uncouth noises you represent me to have made, I only trust that every female who possesses real English feelings, and real English modesty, will follow my example, and drive these foreign despoilers of our national morality, if not from the stage, at least to their dressing-rooms, for more drapery.—I am, Sir, yours, &c.

* * * *

"P. S. I believe you were pointed out to me that night—a small, pale, melancholy-looking gentleman, in black—you were then extremely civil and attentive—and I heard Lord—somebody—whose name I have forgotten—call you 'ROGERS.'"

We conclude this article by thanking our fair friend, and assuring her that we are not the gentleman she takes us for.

TO JOHN BULL.

MY DEAR JOHN,—Your name merely imports that you are a man with a very good heart, and a reasonable share of that valuable commodity called common sense; but in conducting your paper you have risen many steps higher, and shewn yourself to be an able statesman—if MR. BURKE's definition of that character be just. He says, "I should characterize a great statesman to be one who possesses a disposition to preserve with a capacity to improve."

Your efforts have been successfully directed against innovations in Church and State, in morals and in manners, and as by your wit and argument you have laid prostrate at the feet of good sense all the impudent pretenders to patriotism, so now I hope you will perform the same duty with all fanatical reformers in the State. On one point the saints and patriots are agreed, and if they would candidly declare their real sentiments, it will be found that there is little difference between them on many others. Were the question at issue not so very serious, it would be amusing to contemplate the solemn sectary and the ragged radical joining in petitions to Parliament to condemn and stultify its former proceedings, and to venture upon one of the most uncertain and dangerous experiments that ever entered the head of a reformer—you will see I allude to the petitions to abolish slavery in the colonies.

I am no advocate for slavery in general, still less do I wish to defend any instances of cruelty which have taken place in the West Indies, more than I would palliate those crimes we see detailed in our daily papers; but I am prepared to controvert the general charges against the colonists—and to maintain that in practical effect the Negro is as happy, probably more so, than the labourer in most other parts of the world. But that is not my present purpose, I mean now to stand on the threshold of the question, and to claim what we are told every British subject enjoys, the law of the land as it exists—and to protest against the violation of my property by an ex post facto law. But be it remembered that the present Colonists are not the persons who created the system of slavery, our ancestors and those from whom we claim established it under the fostering and parental encouragement of the mother country. Permit me to state my case, and through your widely-circulated Paper to appeal to the public tribunal. I was born in the West Indies about thirty years ago, my father was an industrious man, with a small capital, and having learnt that a promising field lay open for his exertions, he went to Jamaica, and settled there as a merchant. By the honest labours of forty years in that climate he accumulated a sum adequate to the purchase of a large sugar estate. At his death he gave this to me, charged with a small mortgage, portions for my brothers and sisters, and an annuity to my mother. Even in these hard times I have, by severe economy and self-denial, prevented any arrears on those claims—and having a family, I have relied on this property as a provision for them; but I am now told that the Negroes are to be emancipated, and of course my property sacrificed. I cannot believe it possible that such an act of injustice will be done by our Legislature, if the question is fairly stated. It is simply this, by various acts of Parliament persons were expressly invited to become settlers in the Colonies. I will only name three. All foreigners settled in the West Indies a certain number of years become entitled to the rights of British subjects; capitalists are encouraged to lend money on that security by allowing 6 per cent., and by another Act creditors in general are supplied with an easy remedy against lands, tenements, and slaves in the colonies.

The Proclamations issued by Governors, in the King's name, offering advantages to settlers, are without number. It cannot be denied, that our ancestors relied on the faith of these assurances, when they invested their capitals, the fruit of their labours, and all their hopes in that country—if so, can the present Parliament either deny what has been formerly done, or annul its former acts, and confiscate my property? Will it promise protection, and practice oppression? If it does, let us hear no more of slavery on one side, and of British rights on the other. MR. WILBERFORCE does, I believe, say something of intending this as an insulting sneer; and yet he must know that such a measure is not practicable. An Income Tax of 20 per cent. for 50 years, would not indemnify those who would be directly and indirectly injured by the ruin of the Colonies. The truth is, he knows we cannot make out what he calls a case for indemnity. Suppose all Barbadoes had been destroyed when an insurrection took place, in consequence of the discussions here, about seven years ago. MR. WILBERFORCE would say, prove your case, and show the causes of this insurrection. Although we all know these, no impartial man must see the impossibility of proving the real causes of such events—indemnity, therefore, is out of the question, and a proceeding of this nature must inevitably destroy the British West Indies, without even a reasonable probability of conferring a substantial good upon the Negroes themselves.

We rely on the wisdom of our rulers, and the good sense and of Parliament too confidently to fear the result.

A COLONIST.

TO JOHN BULL.

As a Member of the British Senate has at length been found blushing enough, and sufficiently devoid of prejudice, to declare the religion of his country, and that of the whole world, to be a petition to that assembly on behalf of certain Free Thinkers, from the tenor of their petition, have been unjustly and cruelly interrupted in disseminating their principles, I feel authorised, at this moment, what I refrained doing before, through motives of effects; and that is, to lay before the eyes of the public the tenets these oppressed and harmless people, and the tenets they have so industriously and openly teaching in Edinburgh, Glasgow, most provably, other towns of Scotland and England.

By the examinations, taken upon oath, before the Sheriff Edinburgh, it appears that the Society calling themselves Thinkers had existed more than twelve months before it was nounced, and prohibited from again meeting by his orders.

It had first assembled in a private room, but as the society in in numbers it was found necessary to obtain more spacious Cordwainers' Hall, in the old town of Edinburgh, (close adjoi the University) was hired for that purpose. A certain rent was manded for this accommodation, which, it appears in evidence considerably lowered some time afterwards, on the proprietors Hall finding that the society was composed of so quiet, harmless reasonable a set of beings.

The tenets taught in this society were—that there is no God fore, that JESUS CHRIST was an impostor: consequently, that writings Christians hold as most sacred are a tissue of fra for political and other purposes. That all religion is nonsen has been the cause of every evil the world has known. That can be so meritorious as that of working to extirpate it from face of the earth.

These formed the principal subjects on which the lecturers d extemporary and from written tracts, and Sundays were clos their days of meeting, in order to give the lower classes an tunity of attending.

So truly abominable were the opinions boldly acknowledged principals and disciples of this society, whilst under examinat I really shudder at the very recollection. As, for instance, the written lectures goes on to say—"It is the belief of people Christians that God sent his Son into the world as a propitiato our sins. Good; why does he not now send his daughter? are sins quite enough for her to do away with. Suppose he why, those very Christians who follow the doctrines of the Son assuredly crucify her as the Jews did him. How was man cre there is no God? perhaps by putrefaction; or like mites in a &c. &c. &c.

Great pains, it appears from written evidence found upon the been taken to prove the falsity of revealed religion, by contrad pointing out contradictions (at least supposed ones) in the writ the Evangelists. Their library, kept in an iron chest in the and lent out to subscribers to the society, was composed of th of almost every Freethinker, from the earliest periods down to Paine, Carlile, and the most modern authors on that subject, in parts of the French Encyclopædia were not forgotten.

After a certain time the original society, either from some dis amongst themselves, or from the great increase of proselytes, g into two, and latterly three in Edinburgh; whether the same place in Glasgow, I am uninformed. The doors during the were constantly open, and so numerous were the people who to attend, that at length they found it necessary to station per the doors to drive away those who could not be accommodated others brought their children to be imbued with this new light, youth of about 18 declared before the Sheriff, that having rese time through curiosity, he was quite horrified to hear the which he had ever been enjoined to look upon as the most sacr books, ridiculed, and treated as lies and nonsense; but that ing he found there was some truth in what they said; and that was as firmly persuaded of its being so, as he had formerly b contrary opinion. One of the members declared, that before tered the society he had (as his forefathers had done before him stantly said his prayers on going to bed and rising, and a grace and after meat; but having learnt the folly of such practices now left it off; and he could assure the society, that he had fi good an appetite, and slept quite as soundly as ever he had done

This is the society that has found a Member of the British Hou Commons voluntarily complaisant enough to advocate its cause in the Legislature of the nation!—I shall make no comments.

Bath, April 20, 1823. A CHRISTIAN.

The King held a Levee on Monday, which was the most numer and brilliant since His Majesty's accession to the throne. Nearly distinguished persons were present. His Majesty left his p apartments for the Royal Closet, where Sir W. K. Grant was inves with the Order of a Knight Commander of the Bath, and Vice-Ad rals Sir T. B. Thompson and Sir H. B. Neale received the Ord the Grand Cross. His Majesty gave audiences to the Duke of Y Clarence, and Prince Leopold; the Archbishop of Canterbury, Secretary Canning, Count Munster, &c. and afterwards received compliments of the Foreign Ambassadors and Ministers, and Great Officers of State, the Cabinet Ministers, and all those who joy the high privilege of the entrée, and afterwards proceeded to general Levee Room, which was oppressive from the crowded assemblage. At the Levee all the Cabinet and other Ministers present, an immense number of naval and military officers of ranks, noblemen, and other distinguished individuals. (The presentations were numerous, but we have not space to particularize and therefore to name any one would be invidious.) The Spanish Austrian, French, Russian, Swedish, Prussian, Hanoverian, Wirtemburg, Netherlands, Sardinian, Saxon, Portuguese, and Sicilian Ambassadors were also present.

On Wednesday, His Majesty was to have held a Drawing-Room; an attack of gout, brought on by the fatigues of the Levee, occasion an unexpected disappointment to the Nobility who had intended to present. There was no time to give such an intimation of the circumstance as would prevent arrivals, but persons were stationed at different places along the line of approach to Buckingham-house, to make necessary communication as early as possible. The following Bulletin was issued:—

"The King is not able to receive company at the Drawing-Room day; His Majesty having experienced an attack of the gout in night. "HENRY HALFORD.

"Carlton Palace, Apr. 23. "MATTHEW JOHN TIERNEY.

"CARLTON PALACE, APRIL 24.—The gout, under which the King boured yesterday, is much mitigated.

"HENRY HALFORD.

"MATTHEW JOHN TIERNEY.

No Bulletin was issued at Carlton Palace on Friday, the general swer to inquiries was—"His Majesty is much better, and is fast improving in health."

THE KING'S BIRTH-DAY.—On Wednesday, being the day on which His Majesty has been pleased to command that his birth-day shall be celebrated, the morning was ushered in with a general peal of bells throughout the metropolis. The flags on the church steeples, with the standards of England, were displayed, as well as on several of the public buildings. The day was observed at all the public offices, as other places. The Blue Coat boys attached to Christ's Hospital had as usual a holiday, as well as various other establishments. At one o'clock the Park and Tower guns fired a double royal salute. In the evening there were numerous grand entertainments upon the joyful occasion. Among them were those of the Earl of Liverpool, the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Mr. Secretary Peel, Mr. Secretary Canning, the Lord Chamberlain, the Lord Steward, the Master of the Horse, and the Groom of the Stole. It was observed throughout the country with the greatest demonstrations of joy. Seventy gentlemen sat down to dinner at the White Hart, Reigate; their chairman introduced the first toast "The King," with some general observations on the occasion which had drawn them together; on the growth of the feeling in their immediate neighbourhood which recognised the claims of a Sovereign, who may be justly termed the father of his people.

Wednesday, the Hon. Artillery Company held a field-day at Finsbury-ground in the City-road, in honour of the Birth-day of His Majesty their illustrious Captain-General, after which the members dined together at the Armoury-house.

ANNUAL BIOGRAPHY for 1823.—Just published, in 8vo, price 15s. bds.

THE ANNUAL BIOGRAPHY and OBITUARY for the year 1823. Containing Memoirs of Celebrated Men who have died in 1821-22.

Contents: Marquis of Londonderry—Earl of Clarke—J. Stewart, Esq.—J. Hargrave, Esq.—K.—Sir J. B. Warren, Bart.—Sir J. Macpherson, Bart.—J. Hunter, Esq.—The Rt. Hon. Sir D. Dundas—Dr. Whittaker—Lord Kinedder—Hunter, Esq.—Mr. Garrick—Dr. Mareet—Antonia Canova—Lieut. Gen. Sir T. Coote, Esq.—Mrs. Siddons—Mr. Kemble—Mr. Cobbett—Sir W. Young—B. Hawes, Esq.—Sir G. Bromhead, Bart.—Sir S. Auchmuty—Sir W. Young—B. Hawes, Esq.—Sir G. Bromhead, Bart.—Sir S. Auchmuty—Dr. Collyer—Dr. Cullen—Dr. Aikin—The Rev. J. Owen—J. Cevosus—Dr. Cullen-wood—Mr. W. Butler—Dr. Aikin—The Rev. J. Owen—J. Cevosus—J. Perry, Esq.—Mr. J. Emery. A general Biographical List of persons who have died in 1822.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Of whom may be had,

Vols I to 6 of the above Work, price 15s. each.

Vols I to 6 of the above Work, price 15s. each.

It is requested that early applications may be made for complete Sets, as several of the volumes are nearly out of print, and a few copies only remain for sale.

Just published, in 12mo embellished with a Frontispiece, from a design by T. Stothard, R.A. Price 6s. bds.

INFEGRITY. A Tale. By MRS. HOFFLAND, Author of "Tales of the Manor," "Son of a Genius," &c. &c.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

1. TALES of the MANOR. 4 vols. 12mo. 11. 4s. bds.
2. TALES of the MANOR. 4 vols. 12mo. 11. 4s. bds.
3. TALES of the Same Author. PATIENCE. A Tale.

In the press, for the same Author.

Just published, in 3 vols. 12mo. price 18s. bds.

OTHER TIMES; or, the Monks of Leadenhall. A Romance. By the Author of the "Lollards," "Calthorpe," &c.

"The plot is good, and we may laud the ingenuity with which excellent descriptions, both graphic and moral, are introduced into the picture. A pilgrimage to the Tomb of Thomas-a-Becket at Canterbury is admirable, and there is a striking account of the insurrection in the North against the suppression of the Monasteries."—Literary Gazette.

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

1. CALTHORPE: or, Fallen Fortunes. 3 vols. 12mo. 11. 1s.
2. The LOLLARDS. A Tale of the 15th Century. 3 vols. 11. 1s.

Just published, in 5 vols. 8vo. 3l. boards, the Second Edition, of MEMOIRS of the KINGS of SPAIN of the HOUSE of BOURBON, from the Accession of Philip the Fifth to the Death of Charles the Third, 1700—1788. Drawn from unpublished Documents and Secret Papers. With an Historical Introduction relative to the principal Transactions under the Austrian Dynasty, and a Statistical Account of the State of Spain at the Accession of Charles the Fourth. By the Rev. Archdeacon COXE.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.—Of whom may be had, by the same Author,

The PRIVATE and CONFIDENTIAL CORRESPONDENCE of CHARLES TALBOT, Duke of SHREWSBURY. In 4to. with a Portrait, price 3l. 3s. bds.

MEMOIRS of JOHN Duke of MARLBOROUGH. In 6 vols. 8vo. with an Atlas, 3l. 3s. bds.

HISTORY of the HOUSE of AUSTRIA, from the Foundation of the Monarchy to the Death of Leopold II.—1218 to 1792. 5 vols 8vo. 3l. 13s. 6d. bds.

MEMOIRS of the LIFE and ADMINISTRATION of SIR ROBERT WALPOLE, Earl of Orford. 4 vols. 8vo. 2l. 8s. bds.

MEMOIRS of HORATIO LORD WALPOLE, in 2 vols. 8vo. 11. 6s. bds. the Second Edition.

Just published, in 8vo. price 12s. boards,

MEMOIRS of a CAPTIVITY among the INDIANS of NORTH AMERICA, from Childhood to the age of Nineteen. With Anecdotes descriptive of their Manners and Customs, and some Account of the Soil, Climate, and Vegetable Productions of the Territory westward of the Mississippi. By JOHN D. HUNTER.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, & Brown, London.

Mr. Hunter was born of white parents, and was taken prisoner by a party of Indians at so early a period of his infancy, that he barely recollects the burning of his native village, and the massacre which made him an orphan. He was trained to the habits and pursuits of savage life, and through the vicissitudes incident to it, belonged successively to various tribes. In the year 1816, he made his escape to the United States, and by the kindness of some citizens interested in his welfare, obtained the benefit of a regular education.

Just published, in Two large volumes, 4to. with numerous Engravings of Portraits, Costumes, Antiquities, Maps, &c. &c. Price 3l. 9s. boards, TRAVELS in GEORGIA, PERSIA, ARMENIA, COURDESTAN, ANCIENT BABYLONIA, &c. &c. during the years 1817, 1818, 1819, and 1820. By SIR ROBERT KER PORTER.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

These Travels embrace a vast extent of Country; namely, almost all that comprising the ancient Assyrian, Babylonian, and Persian Empires; the Manners, Customs, and Costumes of the present Race, in these Countries, are particularly delineated. Extensive and accurate Maps are given of the Author's Route, and of the countries diverging from it. Specimens of all the Antiquities to be found in this extensive Tract, are presented by engravings from drawings made on the spot, by Sir R. Porter himself, designed to shew the relative progress of the arts in these various realms, whether at Echatana, Persepolis, Babylon, &c. &c.

Just published in 2 vols. small 8vo price 15s. bds.

WINE and WALNUTS; or after Dinner Chit-Chat. By EPHRAIM HARDCASTLE, Citizen and Dry-salter.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

THE INQUIRER: No. IV.

Published by Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, Paternoster-row; and J. and A. Arch, Cornhill.

Just published, the Second Edition, in 8vo. price 14s. boards,

FIFTEEN YEARS IN INDIA; or, Sketches of a Soldier's Life; being an attempt to describe persons and things in various parts of Hindostan. From the Journal of an Officer in His Majesty's Service.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

DR. HUME'S CONTINUATION OF HUME AND SMOLLETT.

Just published, a new Edition, completed to the Death of the King, in 6 vols. 8vo. price 3l. 3s. boards,

THE HISTORY of the REIGN of GEORGE the THIRD.—By ROBERT BISSET, LL.D. Author of the Life of Burke, &c. &c.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

1. A New Edition of DR. AIKIN'S ANNALS of the REIGN of GEORGE the THIRD, brought down to His Majesty's Decease, in 2 vols. price 11. 8s.
2. ANDROMAIKIN'S ANNALS of the REIGN of GEORGE the THIRD, adapted for the use of schools, in 12mo. price 4s. 6d. bound.

Just published, in 12mo. price 2s. 6d. bound, a New Edition of LESSENS de la GRAMMAIRE FRANÇOISE de LHOMOND, revues, corrigés, et augmentés, par C. GATTEL, Auteur et Editeur de plusieurs livres d'Education, Cinquième Edition.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane; and Bossey and Sons, Old Broad-street.

TREATISE ON MECHANICS.

Just published, in 8vo. price 10s. 6d. boards,

A TREATISE on DYNAMICS; containing a considerable collection of Mechanical Problems. By WILLIAM WHEWELL, M.A. A.S. Fellow of Trinity College, Cambridge.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London; and Deighton and Sons, Cambridge. Also, by the same Author,

A TREATISE on MECHANICS; containing Statics and the Elementary Parts of Dynamics, 8vo. boards, 15s.

NEW HISTORY OF SPAIN.

Just published, in 8vo. price 16s. 6d. boards,

THE HISTORY of SPAIN; from the earliest Ages of which we have any authentic Records, to the Return of Ferdinand VII. in 1814. Accompanied with the Chronological and Genealogical Tables of the Visigoth and Spanish Princes and Caliphs, and a List of the contemporary Sovereigns of the rest of each Reign; also the Political Arrangements of Europe, as settled by the Treaty of Paris, with Notes. By Mrs. JAMIESON (late Miss Thurtle), Author of "A History of France," &c.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, 13, Ave-Maria-lane; and sold by N. Hailes, Museum, Piccadilly. Of whom may be had, by the same Author,

1. The HISTORY of FRANCE; 12mo. price 6s. boards.
2. The HISTORY of GREECE; 12mo. price 6s. boards.
3. ASHFORD RECTORY; or, The Spoiled Child Reformed. price 4s. bds.
4. POPULAR TRAVELS and VOYAGES in EUROPE; 12mo. price 9s. bds.
5. POPULAR TRAVELS in ASIA, AFRICA, and AMERICA; pr. 9s. bds.

NEW NOVEL.—Just published, price 21s. boards,

OSMOND, a Tale; in Three Volumes, 12mo.—By the Author of "The Favourite of Nature." Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

"The high reputation which the author of 'The Favourite of Nature' acquired, by the publication of those deeply interesting Volumes, will not, we are confident, be diminished by the publication of Osmond. The pleasure we derived in the perusal of the former work made us look forward with some anxiety to the appearance of Osmond; and, we are happy to say, our expectations have not been disappointed."—Monthly Mag. 1822.

"Considered as a tale of thrilling interest, and of the after-meeting between Osmond and his angelic wife, and their parting interview, we cannot speak in terms of high praise. We yield the author our unqualified eulogium for the good tendency of the book; and, as a parting word, we consider Osmond one of the most successful novels of that class which undertake to wean us from the follies of the world, and teach us the philosophy of virtue."—Literary Register, number 9, 1822.

FLORISTS, &c.—Just published, in 12mo. with coloured Plates, price 8s. boards, a New Edition of A CONCISE and PRACTICAL TREATISE on the GROWTH and CULTURE of the CARNATION, Pink, Auricula, Polyanthus, Ranunculus, Tulip, Hyacinth, Rose, and other Flowers; including a Dissertation on Soils and Manures, and containing Catalogues of the finest and most esteemed kinds of each Flower. Second Edition, with Additions. By THOMAS HOGG, Florist, Paddington-green, Middlesex.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

"Our readers will perceive that we have read this Work with much satisfaction; and as we see no reason to doubt of the fidelity with which Mr. Hogg has recited his experiments, we advise them to purchase his book, and reap the advantage themselves of his industry, diligence, and devotion to so agreeable a study as the cultivation of a flower-garden."—Monthly Censor, Oct. 1822.

On the 1st of May will be published, 8vo. 5s.

THE ALBUM, No. V. Contents: On Ancient and Modern Poetical Character of the Tribe of Benjamin—Stanzas on the Tomb of the Sultana; by the late Thomas Sheridan, Esq.—Human Sorrow—On the (so called) Tomb of Psammis.—On Nature and Art in Poetry—The Stratford Jubilee—Insides and Outsides—Essays, original and selected—The Review—The Journey to the Polar Sea.—London: printed for J. Andrews, 167, New Bond-street; sold by Bell and Bradfute, Edinburgh, and G. Mullins, Dublin. Of whom may be had, just published, in 8vo. price 5s.

SHIRLEY AFKUN, the First Husband of Nourmahal: a Legend of Hindostan. Also, The TWO BROKEN HEARTS. A Tale.

In a few days will be published, price 1s. 6d.

A COUNTER APPEAL, in answer to "An Appeal," from Wm. Wilberforce, Esq. M.P. designed to prove that the Emancipation of the Negroes in the West Indies, by a legislatorial enactment, without the consent of the Planters, would be a flagrant breach of national honour, hostile to the principles of religion, justice, and humanity, and highly injurious to the planter and to the slave. By SIR HENRY WM. MARTIN, BART.

"Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbour."—Exodus.

Printed for C. and J. Rivington, No. 62, St. Paul's Church-yard, and 3, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall.

Just published, in 8vo. price 3s. 6d.

THE BRIDE'S TRAGEDY; in Five Acts. By THOMAS LOVELL BEDDOES, of Pembroke College, Oxford.

"In the Bride's Tragedy, there is a succession of delightful interviews. The language of Mr. Beddoes is essentially poetical, indeed his drama betrays more promise (we ought to say, perhaps, more power) than that of almost any young poet, whose works have been before us for the first time."—Edinburgh Review, No. LXXV. Feb. 1823.

Printed for C. and J. Rivington, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, and St. Paul's Church-yard.

REV. DR. RUDGE'S LECTURES.

Next Month will be published, handsomely printed in 2 vols. 8vo. 11. 1s. bds.

LECTURES on GENESIS; or, Plain Historical Sermons on the Leading Characters and most important events, recorded in the book of Genesis. By JAMES RUDGE, D.D. F.R.S.

The Names of the Subscribers to the above Work, are received at Messrs. Rivingtons, St. Paul's Church-yard, and Waterloo-place, Pall-mall.

STEMMATA BARONIALIA.—Just published,

PROSPECTUS and SPECIMEN of a PROPOSED WORK on the PRESENT STATE of BARONIES by WRIT. By FRANCIS TOWNSEND, Rouge Dragon Pursuivant of Arms; to be had of the Author at the Heralds' College, Doctors' Commons, or of Messrs. Rivingtons, Booksellers, Waterloo-place, Pall-mall, and St. Paul's Church-yard.

In a few days will be published, in 2 vols. 12mo.

WILLOUGHBY, or the Influence of Religious Principles. By the Author of "Decision," "Caroline Ormsby," "Village Counsel," &c.—Printed for C. and J. Rivington, Waterloo-place and St. Paul's Church-yard.

LEWIS'S CHESS.—Just published, in 12mo. price 7s. bds.

ELEMENTS of the GAME of CHESS; or, a New Method of Instruction in that celebrated Game, founded on scientific principles; containing numerous general Rules, Remarks, and Examples, by means of which considerable skill may be acquired in a comparatively short time. By W. LEWIS, Teacher of Chess, and Author of several publications on the Game. London: printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; Sherwood, Jones and Co.; G. Cowie and Co.; G. and W. B. Whittaker; and E. Edwards.

HEBREW GRAMMAR, WITH POINTS.

In a few days will be published, in 8vo. price 7s. a new and enlarged Edition of

A HEBREW GRAMMAR in the ENGLISH LANGUAGE. By JOSEPH SAMUEL C. F. FREY. To which are added, a Glossary of the first Six Psalms, a Compendium of Chaldee Grammar, and other important additions. By the Rev. THOMAS BOWLES, A.M. late of Trinity College, Dublin.—London: printed for Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy, Paternoster-row.

☞ An attempt is now made to remedy a deficiency which has long existed in works of this description, the almost utter omission of Syntax; while in no language, perhaps, is this department of Grammar of such paramount importance.

NEW WORKS to be published on the First of May, by Francis Westley, 10, Stationers'-court, Ludgate-street, London; and may be had of all Booksellers.

AN ALPINE TALE, suggested by Circumstances which occurred towards the Commencement of the present Century. By the Author of "Tales from Switzerland," &c. 12mo. price 7s. bds.—Published by Francis Westley, 10, Stationers'-court, Ludgate-street, London.

MARTHA: a Memorial of an only and beloved Sister. By the Rev. ANDREW REED, Author of "No Fiction," a Narrative founded on Fact. 2 vols. crown 8vo. price 12s. boards.—London: Published by Francis Westley, 10, Stationers'-court, Ludgate-street; and Longman and Co. Paternoster-row.

NEW EDITION OF "NO FICTION."

NO FICTION: a Narrative founded on Facts. By the Rev. ANDREW REED, seventh edition, 2 vols. crown 8vo. price 12s. boards.—Published by Francis Westley, 10, Stationers'-court, Ludgate-street, London.

"The Narrative is chaste in the language at once elegant and simple; it evinces an intimate knowledge of the human heart, and we are convinced that no person can rise from its perusal without being sensibly improved both in heart and understanding."—Statesman.

AN ELEGY on the late HENRY MARTYN; and other Poems. By JOHN LAWSON, Missionary at Calcutta. Author of "Woman in India," "Orient Harping," &c. &c. with a beautiful Portrait, engraved by Fry; and an elegant Vignette, from Cobbould's design, the subject of which is "Not lone, though in a wilderness,

"For whiting angels watch."

foolscap 8vo. price 2s.—Published by Francis Westley, 10, Stationers'-court, Ludgate-street, London.

NEW EDITION OF HAPPINESS.

HAPPINESS: a Tale for the Grave and the Gay. Fourth Edition. 2 vols. price 12s. boards.—Published by Francis Westley, 10, Stationers'-court, Ludgate-street, London.

"This work contains many beautiful, some most touching, and several splendid passages. Its satire is cutting, and its aim is uniformly to do good."—Investigator, 1822.

THEOLOGY.

EXEMPLA CONCIONUM; or, Plans of Sermons; chiefly intended as Outlines to be filled up by Written Compositions, or to assist and facilitate Extemporaneous Delivery. 1 vol. 12mo. price 4s. bds.—London: Published by Francis Westley, 10, Stationers'-court, Ludgate street; and Seeley and Son, 169, Fleet-street.

BEAUTIES of DWIGHT; or, Dr. Dwight's System of Theology, abridged; with a Sketch of his Life, a Portrait, and an Original Essay on his Writings, and on a Comparative View of Transatlantic Divinity. 2 vols. 18mo. boards, 10s. 6d.—Published by Francis Westley, 10, Stationers'-court, Ludgate-street, London.

Recommended, by several eminent Divines, as a Pocket Companion to those who have, and a Library Book to those who have not, the original work.

This work contains the Beauties and substance of the 173 Sermons which are published at 3l. and are commended by the most respectable reviewers as "The productions of a superior and highly cultivated mind."—Congregational Mag.

"Eminently Scriptural both in their matter and style."—Evangelical Mag.

"An important addition to the literature of this country."—New Evangelical Mag.

"Admirably adapted to make the readers devout Christians."—Eclectic Review

NEW VOLUME OF LAVINGTON'S SERMONS.

A Supplementary Volume of Sermons, by the late SAMUEL LAVINGTON, to which is prefixed an Original Memoir of the Author; and an elegant engraved Portrait, by Woodman. 8vo. boards, price 10s. 6d.—Published by Francis Westley, 10, Stationers'-court, Ludgate-street, London.

LECTURES ON THE PLEASURES OF RELIGION. By the Rev HENRY FORSTER BURDER, Author of "Lectures on the Attributes of God." 1 vol. 12mo. price 7s. 6d. boards.—Published by Francis Westley, 10, Stationers'-court, Ludgate-street, London.

PLUMBE ON DISEASES OF THE SKIN.

Preparing for publication,

A DISSERTATION on DISEASES of the SKIN; being that to which the Jacksonian Prize of the Royal College of Surgeons has just been adjudged. By SAMUEL PLUMBE, M.R.C.S. of the Medical and Chirurgical Society, &c. &c.

FOR FAMILIES.—Just published, price 4s.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on the Superior Efficacy and Safety of STIZOLOBIUM, or COWHAGE (the Dolichos Pruriens of Linnæus), as Internally administered in Diseases occasioned by Worms, which are exhibited, Internally administered in the Symptoms of the Diseases, and the uncertainty of a correct Statement of the Symptoms of Worms, which are exhibited, a concise Statement of its powers, now in use.—To which are added, Observations on some most other Vermifuges from the Antihelmintics of the West Indies; illustrated by a variety of other Indigenous Antihelmintics of the West Indies; illustrated by a variety of other Indigenous Antihelmintics in any of the former Editions. By WILLIAM CHAMBERS, never published in any of the former Editions. By WILLIAM CHAMBERS, Member of the Royal College of Surgeons, London; Fellow of the London Medical Society, &c.—The Tenth Edition, considerably enlarged and improved.—London: Printed for the Author. Sold by Highley, 124, Fleet-street; Sherwood, Jones, and Co. Paternoster-row; and Callow and Wilson, 16, Princes' street, Soho.

In Chapter V. of this Work, are given Extracts of Letters, and Testimonials from several most respectable Medical Characters. In favour of the use of the Stizolobium, and in approbation of the Author's Practice; among whom are, Dr. Cooper, and in approbation of the Author's Practice; among whom are, Dr. Bancroft, Dr. De Valangin, Dr. Lettsom, Dr. Sims, Dr. Squire, Dr. Thornton, Dr. Underwood, Dr. Woodville, &c. &c.

For the character of this work, see Monthly Mirror, page 41, Jan. 1805; Eclectic Review, page 369, May, 1805; Universal Magazine, page 447, May, 1805; Monthly Review, page 220, June, 1805; also European and other Reviews, 1805; Monthly Review, page 220, June, 1805; also European and other Reviews, 1805; Monthly Magazine

LATEST NEWS.

Paris Papers down to Thursday have arrived. They state that Andalusia is in a state of insurrection against the Constitutional system, and that General Molitor is marching on Saragossa. The capture of Saguntum, and the agitations in Valencia, have caused great disquietude in the Constitutional troops in Catalonia. Mina's left flank is exposed, and it is supposed that he will retire beyond the Ebro. The Spanish soldiers on the frontiers wear a white ribband on the left arm.

In the Chamber of Deputies the discussions on the Budget have terminated. The law was passed by a majority of 265 to 15.

The Jamaica Papers, just received, state, that Iturbide, the late Emperor of Mexico, was stabbed on the parade.

In the Consistory Court, yesterday, the case of the Parish of Great Waltham v. the Rev. Dr. G. S. Clarke, came on. The suit is promoted against the respondent for alleged clerical irregularities; the latter, who conducts his own defence, addressed the Court in reply to the articles exhibited against him. In these he was charged with having frequently during the last two years neglected or varied from the usual church service of the parish of which he had been vicar above 20 years—with several times refusing to administer the functions of his profession. The reverend gentleman read a long address in answer, in which he strongly recriminated on the church-wardens. It was a common understanding among the Clergy that they were entitled to double fees for marriages in Lent; but both the charge relative to this practice, and to the declining to perform baptism, were in various other respects unfounded. The judgment was postponed.

The adjourned examination of Messrs. Howard and Gibbs, took place on Thursday. The Commissioners were satisfied with the conduct of Mr. Gibbs in respect of his examination, and allowed them to pass their final examination.

In the Court of King's Bench, yesterday, a rule was granted to shew cause why John Roberts, committed to Worcester Gaol, under the Coroner's verdict for Manslaughter, in killing a man in a pugilistic encounter, should not be admitted to bail.

The despatches by the Lowther Castle for China, were closed at the India House, yesterday, and delivered to the purser.

A moving Panorama of the Coronation is exhibiting daily at the Great Room, in Spring Gardens, which the proprietor denominates the Peristrephic. It is a well-executed painting, and gives a very faithful description of that interesting ceremony. The room is crowded on each exhibition with fashionable company.

PRICE OF STOCKS AT THE CLOSE, SATURDAY.

There has been some considerable fluctuations in the Money Market this week, and the transactions have been considerable. The Spanish Bonds have been as high as 34¾ during the week, but have this day declined, and the average price has been about 32¼. Consols for the Account opened at 77¾ this morning, but some very heavy sales reduced them to 77⅝; and at the close they were 77⅛.

3 per Cent. Red. . .	76⅞	India Bonds	38 40
3 per Cent. Consols	77⅛	Exchequ. Bills, 2d 1000l.	15 16
3½ per Cent. ditto . .		Ditto . . . . . 500l.
4 per Cent.	95¼	Small
New 4 per Cent. . .	97¼	Con. for Acc.	77⅛
Long Annuities .	19⅜

Letters from Paris quote the prices of French Stock as follow:—

FRENCH FUNDS, April 24.

5 per Ct. Con. 22 Sept. .	84-00	Bank Sh. Div. 1 July
Recon. Div. 22 Sept. . .		Ex. Lond. 1mo. 25-65	3mo.

The Neapolitan 5 per Cents. Div. were at

MILES and EDWARDS are now introducing, for Drawing-Rooms and Beds, the most splendid India striped Chintzes ever produced in this country, and at prices which cannot fail meeting the approbation of all purchasers: likewise the novel and highly approved article in Spanish damasks, exclusively their own manufacture, and which is infinitely superior to the different imitations of damasks advertised by other houses. Their stock of Swiss chintzes, tabbonets, &c. is the most superb and extensive ever manufactured; and the great reputation they have acquired, by selling every article at such an amazing reduction in the prices, they are determined if possible to increase by strictly adhering to the same system. Miles and Edwards have no other Establishment than the one No. 134, Oxford-street, between Holles-street, and Old Cavendish-street.

MESSRS. GLASSES, PERFUMES, &c.—The Nobility and Gentry are invited to inspect the Ware rooms of Cooper and Son, 98, Bishopsgate Within, where is exhibited a large Assortment of new and second-hand Plate Glasses, admirably suited to every description of drawing or dining-rooms. The prices are just reduced 40 per cent. on plates measuring 100 inches by 72, and upwards; and on those of smaller dimensions the alteration will be found equally important. The extensive preference given to this Establishment is thankfully acknowledged by the Proprietors, who, in the endeavours to evince their gratitude, by manufacturing articles in a superior manner, at prices suitable to the times, hope to merit a continuance of public support. In the furniture department is comprised every new and elegant article of upholstery, cabinet, and chair work, regulated upon such a scale of economy as to demand and ensure the patronage of rank and fashion.

A candid examination of professional pretensions is only to be feared by those who are conscious of incapacity. Messrs. Goss and Co. Members of the Royal College of Surgeons, confine their studies to the treatment of such disorders as arise from nervous debility. Their works, "The Ægis of Life," and "Hygeiana," (the latter addressed to females) in full explanation of these subjects, may be had at No. 20, Paternoster-row, London, Porter, 72, Grafton street, Dublin, or at any Booksellers. Medicines can be forwarded to any part, however distant, on receiving a Bank note.—11, Bonnerdie-street, Fleet-street, London.

RICH SILKS, SHAWLS, and LACE, SELLING OFF.—HUBBARD and Co. Silk Mercers and Lacemen to the Royal Family, announce to the Nobility and Public, that their Lease, under the Duke of Bedford, is expired, and in consequence of the necessity of rebuilding the premises, their fashionable Stock is Selling off, many articles considerably under prime cost. Rich Gros de Naples, figured silks and satins, striped sarsnets and lutestrings, the much admired Tartarian cashmeres, French merinos, levantines, poplins, taffetas, the new Cyprus crape, French gauze robes for ball dresses, white satins, and silk stockings. An immense stock of curious shawls of every description, superb lace dresses, scarfs, veils, and bobbin nets, French fawns, book muslins, and beautiful muslin dresses of Moravian work at half price; silk stockings 3s. per pair; morning dresses, 3s. 9d. each; black sarsnets, 2s. 2d.; beautiful French flowers, and splendid tulle dresses.—No patterns cut or parcels sent unless previously paid for.—Black bombazines, crapes, sarsnets, &c. for family mourning.—Spitalfields House, 12, Henrietta street, Covent garden.

SHAWLS.—Five Thousand Pounds worth, just purchased, at nearly half price, has induced the Proprietor to make this addition to his previous large Stock, forming the most stupendous and splendid collection of any house in the kingdom, and at such prices as were never before submitted to purchasers. Among the immense variety there are a great many at the most moderate prices, such as imitation Cashmere, two yds square, at 9s. to 11.; silk do. 10s. to 2l. 10s.; those at 30s. are beautiful, and the leading colours, viz. scarlet, crimson, blue, drab, green, black, orange, and white grounds, at 50s. to 60s. are truly superb, positively worth from 5l. to 6l. The scarf shawls, which form an elegant square, are from 20s. to 4l.; those at 50s. are very beautiful, and such as are charged generally at 4l. to 5l.; with a great many others of the most costly description, rarely to be met with, all equally cheap. China Crape Shawls and Scarfs—this beautiful article to be had in all colours. Cloth shawls, handsomely bound and tasseled, 9s.; erminetta, seal wool, &c. in great variety, 16s.; Bryaanza shawls, 6s.; Zamora do. 15s.; Angola do. 12s. &c &c.—To be had at ROBSON'S, 64, Oxford street, corner of Wells-street.

TWO THOUSAND PIECES of IRISH LINENS and One Hundred Dozen of Super DAMASK TABLE CLOTHS, to be SOLD much under the mark.—Apply to Graham and Nixon, Wholesale Drapers and Irish Linen Factors, 293, and 294, High Holborn, London.

P.S. Graham (of the late firm Craig and Graham) has entirely removed from Oxford-street

WRITING PAPER, of the best quality, made by the justly celebrated J. WHATMAN, of Turkey Mill, to be sold at the following low prices:—Excellent copy 7d. the quire, or 11s. the ream; good laid post 8d. superfine thick 9d. and 1s. the quire, or 12s. 13s. 6d. and 17s. 6d. the ream; superfine Lath 9d. ditto. hot pressed, 10d. and 1s. the quire, or 13s. 6d. 15s. and 17s. 6d. the ream; very best thick Bath gilt, 1s. 2d. the quire, or 20s. the ream; good foolscap 1s. the quire, superfine 1s. 2d. and 1s. 4d. a quire, or 21s. and 26s. the ream; superfine large bank post 1s. the quire, or 18s. the ream; best thick lined brief 1s. 4d. the quire, or 26s. the ream; very good copy books 3s. 6d per dozen; best sealing wax 4s. 6d. the lb. Also for sale, the new-invented Steel Nib Pen; it has the elasticity of the quill, with the durability of the steel pen, price 1s. 4d. each. Strong brown 8c. 10d and 1s. 6d. small hand 4d. the quire; at H. and W. SMITH'S, 192, Strand, Second House from the Crown and Anchor Tavern.—Account Books made to order, of any size or pattern; Drawing Paper, and Bristol Boards, equally low in price.

RICHARDS'S CARBONATED EPSOM SALT has the following properties, viz.:—1st. It cannot be mistaken for the poisonous Oxalic Acid. 2d. It answers in a less dose than the common Epsom Salts, and is most usefully carbonated. 3d. It is soluble in water, if stirred, in less than half a minute. 4th. It is also much more convenient as a medicine, and not in crystals that may mislead. 5th. Its superabundant fine acid renders it almost tasteless, and fit for children. 6th. Its concentrated state makes it cheaper than the common Epsom Salts, and not liable to be adulterated with the Oxalic Acid: vide Venables's Pamphlet.—Sold at his Manufactory, 193, Strand, in bottles, at 1s. 1½d., 2s. 9d. and 4s. 6d. each. Retail, by Sanger, 150 Oxford-street; Vade, Cornhill; Buckett, Bench on Croydon, Croydon; Clarke, Islington; Watkins, Pimlico.—Where may be had the Bath Digestive Dinner Pills, as recommended by the faculty, price 2s. 9d. per box. Orders by post attended to.

Just published, in 1 vol. 8vo. pr. 11s. 6d. boards, dedicated by permission to the Lord Bishop of Winchester,

DISCOURSES on the KING'S PROCLAMATION for the Encouragement of Piety and Virtue, and for preventing and punishing of Vice, Profaneness, and Immorality: with additional Discourses on the Necessity, the Nature, and the Evidences of Revelation. By the Rev. HENRY ATKINS, A.M. Vicar of Arelon, and formerly Fellow of New College, Oxford.—Printed for J. Hatchard and Son, 187, Piccadilly.

THE MONTHLY MUSICAL WORK.

On the 1st of May will be published, with a Portrait of Sebastian Bach, No. V. price 2s. 6d. to be continued Monthly, of the HARMONICON. Contents:—I. New Glee, Attwood. II. The Fairies, Song and Chorus, Weber. III. New Song, Linley. IV. Air, Mercadante, sung by Signora Caradori in Elise e Claudio. V. Funeral March, Beethoven. VI. Quadrilles, Rossini, from La Gazza Ladra, arranged for the Pianoforte by Gustave Carulli.—Life of Cimarosa. History of the Italian Opera in England. Royal Academy of Music. Translations of Italian Songs. History of Music in Germany. Review of Music. The Theatres, Concerts, Foreign Intelligence, &c. &c.—London: published by W. Pinnock, 267, Strand; (by whom communications will be received), and sold by all Book and Music-sellers.

Nos. II. III. and IV. contain new compositions by Mr. Attwood, Mr. Fawcett, Mr. Cramer, and Mr. Ries: and an exclusive selection of classic and classical Music by British and Foreign composers.

On the 1st of May will be published, in imperial octavo, price 12s. 6d. and royal quart (the latter containing proof impressions of the plates, upon Indian paper.) price 25s.

PORTRAITS and BIOGRAPHY of the MOST ILLUSTRIOUS PERSONAGES of GREAT BRITAIN; from the earliest period. Engraved in the finest style from Original Pictures in the Galleries of the Nobility, and the Public Collections of the Country.

Part I. containing Sir Philip Sidney: from the Duke of Bedford's Collection.—Sir Walter Raleigh; from the Marquis of Bath's Collection.—Queen Jane Seymour; from Mercers' Hall, London.—Sir Thomas Gresham; from Mercers' Hall, London.—With Biographical Memoirs of their Lives and Actions. By EDMUND LODGE, Esq. Clarenceux King of Arms, F.S.A.

☞ Persons desirous to possess the finest impressions of the Plates are requested to be early in giving orders to their booksellers, as the choicest will be devoted to earliest Subscribers.—Harding, Mayor, and Lepard, (Lackington's) Finsbury-square, London. Sold also by the principal book and print sellers throughout the kingdom.

Shortly will be published, in 8vo. price 4s.

DELMOUR; or, the Tale of a Sylphid. A Poem, in Two Cantos. Printed for James Carpenter and Son, Old Bond-street.

Just published, in 8vo. with a Portrait and Maps, price 7s.

THE MILITARY EXPLOITS, &c. &c. of DON JUAN MARTIN DIEZ the EMPECINADO, who first commenced and then organized the System of Guerilla Warfare in Spain. To which is added, that Chieftain's celebrated representation to the King of Spain. Translated by a General Officer.—London: printed for James Carpenter and Son, Old Bond-street.—Of whom may be had,

The CONSPIRACY of the SPANIARDS against the REPUBLIC of VENICE.

"The Conspiracy against Venice by the Abbé St. Real is the most interesting of publications."—Butler's Reminiscences.

Just published,

VIEWS in SWITZERLAND. Six Numbers, to be complete in Ten.—Printed on India paper, folio super royal, price 8s. each.

"These are well selected, and sweet landscapes, and are the prettiest specimens of the stone we have seen produced in England."—Literary Gazette.

"In the above we trace all the loveliness and magnificence of nature, expressed with a degree of fidelity nothing can surpass."—Morning Post.

To be had of the publishers, N. Chater and Co. 33, Fleet-street, Lithographic Printers and Publishers.

Just published, in 8vo. price 12s boards,

PRINCIPLES of CONVEYANCING; designed for the use of Students; with an Introduction on the Study of that Branch of Law. By C. WATKINS, Esq. of the Middle Temple, Barrister at Law. The 4th edition, with the Author's last Corrections, and with very considerable Additions. By R. PRESTON, Esq. Barrister at Law.—☞ Since the publication of the last Edition, the publishers have received from Mr. Watkins's executor (Robert Studley Vidal, Esq.) the copy of the Work as finally revised by the Author himself; they have, therefore, availed themselves of this opportunity of introducing such additions into the pre-end addition as are not contained in any former edition.—London: printed for J. and W. T. Clarke, Law Booksellers, Portugal-street, Lincoln's-Inn.

Just published, in royal 8vo. price 9s. Part I.

AN ESSAY on the OPERATION in WILLS of the WORD "ISSUE," and also of the Words "HEIRS at the BODY DYING WITHOUT ISSUE," and "DYING WITHOUT LEAVING ISSUE;" with three chapters on the Nature of Estates at Common Law. By JAMES HAWKSHEAD, Gent.—London: printed for J. and W. T. Clarke, Law Booksellers Portugal street, Lincoln's Inn.—☞ This Work will be completed in Two Parts

Just published, beautifully printed in royal 8vo, price 11. 8s. boards,

BALLANTYNE'S NOVELIST'S LIBRARY; Volume the 5th; containing the Novels of Sterne, Goldsmith, Dr. Johnson, Mackenzie, Horace Walpole, and Clara Reeve; to which are prefixed, original Memoirs of the Lives of the Authors.—Printed for Hurst, Robinson, and Co., 90, Cheapside; and 8, Pall mall, London. Of whom may be had,

Vol. I. containing Fielding's Novels complete, price 11. 8s.; Vol. II. and III. containing Smollett's Novels and Translations, price 2l. 16s.; Vol. IV. containing Gil Blas, and Le Diable Boiteux, and Voltaire's Romances; and the Adventures of a Guinea, by Charles Johnstone, price 1l. 8s. boards.

Just published, in 18mo. the Seventh Edition, with numerous Additions and Improvements, price 6s 6d. bound,

A NEW BIOGRAPHICAL DICTIONARY, containing a brief Account of the Lives and Writings of the most eminent persons and remarkable Characters, in every Age and Nation. By STEPHEN JONES.—London: printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; J. Scatcherd; J. Nunn; T. Cadell; Harris and Son; J. Mawman; Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; Haynes and Son; Peacock and Bampton; and W. B. Whittaker; Simpkin & Marshall; J. Souter; and Wilson and Sons, York.

GENUINE EDITION.

Just published, in 4 vols. 8vo. price 2l. 2s. boards, a new edition, (to which is prefixed an account of the Life of the Author) of

A NEW LITERAL TRANSLATION from the ORIGINAL GREEK, of all the Apostolical Epistles. With a Commentary, and Notes, Philological, Critical, Explanatory, and Practical. To which is added, a History of the Life of the Apostle Paul. By JAMES MACKNIGHT, D.D.

with the Original Greek, and Old Translation, in 6 vols. 8vo. price 3l. 3s. boards.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; Ogle, Duncan, and Co. and G. and W. B. Whittaker, London: and Ogle and Co. Edinburgh. Of whom may be had, by the same Author,

A HARMONY of the FOUR GOSPELS; in which the natural order of each is preserved. With a Paraphrase and Notes, in 2 vols. 8vo. the fifth edition, price 21s. boards.

Just published, price 13s.

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on the BATH WATERS, tending to illustrate their beneficial effects in Chronic Diseases, particularly in Gout, Rheumatism, Paralysis, Lead, Cholic, Indigestion, Biliary Affections, and Uterine and Cutaneous Diseases, confirmed by Cases; containing likewise a brief Account of the City of Bath and of the Hot Springs. By JOSEPH HUME SPRY, Surgeon, &c.—Bath: printed by R. Cruttwell; and sold by Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, in 8vo. price 7s. bds. with the plan of a Farm of 242 acres,

THE ART of VALUING RENTS and TILLAGES; wherein is explained the manner of valuing the Tenant's Right on entering and quitting Farms, in Yorkshire and the adjoining Counties. The whole is adapted for the Use of Landlords, Land Agents, Appraisers, Farmers, and Tenants. By J. S. BAYLDON, Land Agent and Appraiser.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London; and G. Ridge, Sheffield.

Price 2s.

REMARKS on COLONEL STEWART'S SKETCHES of the HIGHLANDERS; chiefly respecting the Jacobitism of the Highlanders —the Military Transactions of Montrose—and the Charges against Argyle.—Printed for Bell and Bradfute, Edinburgh; and sold by Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London; Reid and Henderson, Glasgow; J. Duncan, Stirling; C. Sidey and Son, Perth.

In a few days will be published, Part II. price 10s. 6d. boards,

ELEMENTS of the THEORY and PRACTICE of PHYSIC, designed for the use of Students. In Two Parts. By GEORGE GREGORY, M.D.: printed for Burgess and Hill, Great Windmill-street, Haymarket; where may be had, lately published, Part I. of the same Work, price 10s. 6d.—Also,

A LECTURE on DROPSY, price 2s.

Just published, in 1 vol. 8vo. price 15s. boards,

CONSPECTUS MEDICINÆ THEORETICÆ, or, a View of the Theory of Medicine. By the late J. GREGORY, M.D. Formerly Professor of the Practice of Medicine, afterwards of the Practice of Medicine, in the University of Edinburgh. In Two Parts. Part I. containing Physiology and Pathology.—II. Therapeutics. Translated from the Original Latin. Edinburgh: Printed for Stirling and Slade; G. and W. B. Whittaker; T. and G. Underwood, London; and Hodges and M'Arthur, Dublin.

CHAMPAGNES.—CHARLES WRIGHT, Wine Merchant to His R. H. the Duke of Clarence, next to the King's and opposite the Haymarket Theatres, Opera Colonnade, London is now landing CHAMPAGNE SS, growers, 4l. 4s. per doz. CLARET, ST JULIEN ET LA ROSE 63s. PORT, 36s. SHERRY, superior, 36s.; an CAPE MADEIRA, 16s. per hamper. A 3-dozen hamper, containing one dozen of each of these wines, CALCAVELLA, 40s. per dozen; OLD COGNAC BRANDY, 23s. 6d. per gallon pealed, and no credit given.

ECONOMIC LIFE ASSURANCE SOCIETY, 39, Bridge-street, Blackfriars.

DIRECTORS.

Sir James Mackintosh, M.P. Chairman.
Robert Chaloner, Esq. M.P. Deputy Chairman.

Launcelot Baugh Allen, Esq.
Stephen Nicolson Barber, Esq.
Thomas Farncomb, Esq.
Captain George Harris, R.N. C.B.
Francis Kemble, Esq.
Thomas Frankland Lewis, Esq.
Worcester Phillips, Esq.
Thomas Mears, Esq.
Henry Prescott, Esq.
Godfrey Wentworth, Esq.
George Farren, Esq. Resident Director.

ADVANTAGES EXCLUSIVELY BELONGING TO THIS INSTITUTION.

A temporary precautionary capital of 200,000l. which will be ever kept up as an adequate security for the surplus capital shall have been accumulated in the fund; it being a distinguishing feature of this Association, that the capital shall not permitted to remain a permanent charge on the Society.

At present, three-fourths of the savings and profits, divided annually for the whole period of life, by additions to their policies, and lessening additions deducted from their premiums.

A PERMANENT SURPLUS CAPITAL of 200,000l. for the security of the Insured, accumulated from the profits on policies for limited terms.

The subscribed precautionary capital, the permanent surplus capital, the premiums and property, invested in the names of the trustees, with the security in order to give the insured AN IMMEDIATE REMEDY AGAINST THE FUND ITSELF.

When the permanent capital shall be increased to 200,000l. the shareholders are paid 6l. the ENTIRE PROFITS DIVIDED AMONGST THE INSURED.

To prevent loss to the insured from inability to continue the regular premiums, the Society CONTRACT to purchase policies at their then value, which will be indorsed on every policy at the time it is granted; the Society also ENGAGE to advance money on the security of the policy, to the extent of two-thirds of its value, to enable the insured to continue the minimum without inconvenience.

In cases of bankruptcy, the Society are not bound to purchase the policy. In the event of its being given up to the bankrupt by the assignees, the Society have power to apply the reduction of future premiums the accumulation of savings and profits which would otherwise be payable to additional insurance.

Directors not at liberty to litigate or dispute any claim, but all disputes submitted to general meetings of the Insured.

An entirely new table of premiums has been calculated expressly for the use of this Institution, in which the rates of Assurance for young and middle aged lives will be found to be considerably lower than in any office in Europe. The Society being established upon such principles as to present the most economical mode of assurance to the public, combined with perfect safety.

Proposals may be had at Messrs. Sir John Perring, Dart, Shaw, Bevan, and Co. Bankers, Cornhill, until the premises in Bridge-street shall be ready for occupation, which will be on the 24 of June.

EUROPEAN LIFE INSURANCE and ANNUITY COMPANY, No. 10, Chatham-place, Blackfriars.—Persons effecting Insurances in this Company, for the whole period of life, are immediately entitled to participate in whatever division of profit shall take place, which, with the reduced Premium demanded, will enable all descriptions of persons to make provision for their families on terms the most advantageous. Tables have been calculated by which the Premiums may be paid Quarterly, Half-Yearly, or Annually, at the option of the Insured. No charge is made for Insurances to any part of the Continent, situated between the 42d and 57th degrees of latitude, except the stamp. The insured are permitted to go in steam or other vessels, to and from any part of the united kingdom, and in the Mediterranean, and from any part of the Continent, situated between the 42d and 57th degrees of latitude, without being required to pay additional Premium, or to procure leave from the Directors. This Company continue to advance Money on Mortgage, secured on Freehold, Copyhold, or long Leasehold Property, or Monies in the Funds.

JOHN CLARK, Manager.

EXTRACT from the Returns of Duty paid by the undermentioned Fire Offices, for the Christmas quarter, 1822.

1. Sun	£27,908	11	10
2. Sun Fire Office	18,576	14	1
3. Phœnix	16,171	13	11
4. Royal Exchange	13,832	6	3
5. County	11,149	19	4
6. Imperial	9,387	4	1
7. Globe	6,548	3	1
8. Union	4,111	4	8
9. Guardian	4,095	0	10
10. Atlas
11. Hand in Hand
12. Hope
13. Eagle
14. Albion
15. Bri tish
16. Westminster
17. London
18. Beacon

TO BE SOLD, the Property of a Gentleman, an Elegant CHARIOT, good as new, having scarcely been used twenty-four guineas. Lowest price 200 guineas.—To be seen at 5, Devonshire-street, Devonshire street, Portland-place.

HORSE BAZAAR, King-street, Portman-square.—To Coachmakers.—The Trade is respectfully informed, that on Monday this Establishment will be opened for the sale of Carriages by Commission and by Auction.—The AUCTION will take place Every Saturday, at 12 precisely.

ROYAL METROPOLITAN INFIRMARY for SICK CHILDREN. Patronized by His Majesty, and consecrated to the memory of the late Princess Charlotte.—A GENERAL BOARD of DIRECTORS and GOVERNORS will be held at Sayle's Rooms, Leicester-square, on WEDNESDAY, the 30th day of APRIL inst. at 12 o'clock precisely. The Right Hon. Lord Bishop of Chester in the Chair.

19, Great Ormond-street. ARCHIBALD ROSSER, Hon. Sec.

Proper objects of this Charity are admitted, (without letters of recommendation) at the Central station in Soho-square; at the Mary-le-bone-lane, Shoestreet, Manchester square; and at the Westminster station, Barnes' College street, Westminster. Since this Charity has, within the two years and a half elapsed, since its operations commenced, relieved upwards of 11,000 patients.

Subscriptions are received by the Rev A. Hamilton, St. Margaret's, Westminster, and John Harris, Esq. Savile House, Leicester square, from Messrs. Herries, Farquhar, and Co.; Messrs. Drummond and Co.; Messrs. Coutts and Co.; Messrs. Hammersley and Co.; and Messrs. Marsh, Sibbald, and Co. bankers; and by Mr. Thomas Eglinton, 44, St. John street, the collector.

ALE, STOUT, CIDER, &c.—THOMAS FIELD and SON beg to acquaint their Friends and the Public, that their genuine Burton, Burgh, Taunton, and Welsh Ales, Dorchester Beer, Brown Stout, Cider, &c. are in fine order for use. They have also a very superior Stock of Old White Cape, Madeira, Brandy, Rum, Hollands, Geneva, and Orange, and they have been enabled to make a considerable reduction in the price of several articles.—22, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden

SMOKY FIRE-PLACES REMEDIED.—W. and M. PERRY, No. 9, Ludgate-hill, and 296, Oxford-street, beg leave to inform the Public, that they undertake to remedy the above evil, and by long practical attention to this important object, with experienced and careful workmen, can effectually Remedy every description of Smoky Rooms, with little inconvenience to the family during the process. W. and M. P. beg the particular attention to their Warm Air Stoves, with an increased draft, for halls, rooms, &c. Likewise Warm Baths, on a convenient and approved plan. Their Attempt-rating Shower Bath, by the King's Patent.

EASE and COMFORT in SHAVING.—To those unacquainted with the experience inconvenience in Shaving from a tender face or cross beard, J. T. RIGGE most particularly recommends his celebrated MAGIC RAZOR TABLET, which, with its late improvement, be ensures will be found so keen an edge as to supersede all grinding, honing, &c. and render the operation of shaving as easy and agreeable as it was before unpleasant and painful. Its use is simple, its effect certain; price 7s. 6d. J. T. Rigge's American Shaving Soap will also be found an invaluable addition. Manufactory, 43, Crown-street, and 52, Park-street, Grosvenor-square.

PRICES of the PUBLIC FUNDS.

STOCKS.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thur.	Fri	Sat.
Bank Stock	210½	211		211
3 per Cent. Reduced	75⅞	75⅞		75⅞
3 per Cent. Consols	76⅛	76⅛		76⅛
3½ per Cent. Consols	—	88		88
Consols for Account	76⅛	76⅛	Holiday.	76⅛	Holiday.
4 per Cent. Consols	94⅛	93⅞		94⅛
New 4 per Cent.	97	96⅛		96⅛
Bank Long Annuities	19⅛	19⅛		19⅛
India Bonds	36 p	34 p		34 p
Exchequer Bills, 2d.	15 p	13 p		15 p
Ditto, 24th	—	—		—
Columbian Bonds	—	—		—

BIRTHS.

The Lady of Gen. Vansittart, of a son—Lady Catharine Long, of a daughter.

MARRIED.

The Hon. W. K. Barrington, eldest son of Viscount Barrington, to the Hon. Jane Elizabeth Liddell—Lucy Rumsey, Esq. to Elizabeth, third daughter of the Hon. John Spencer—In Dublin, Capt. Patton, of the Royal Lancers, to Miss Kline, daughter of Capt. Wilkinson.

DIED.

On Monday, the 14th inst. in the 23d year of her age, Sarah, the wife of D. Lowndes, Esq. of Red Lion square, second daughter of Wm. Lowndes, Esq. of the Temple, and of Montague-street.

On Sunday, the 20th inst. at his house in Chapel-street, May Fair, in the 70th year of his age, James Sayers, Esq.

Charles Grant, Esq.—Gen. Grenville—In her 74th year, Lady Gardner, relict of Admiral Lord Gardner—Capt. Maxwell, R. N.—At Edinburgh, Sarah, daughter of the late Major Lloyd Hill, of 1st Reg. Guards—At Cheltenham, of consumption, in her 17th year, Anne, only daughter of Capt. Sydney—In Clarissa Ann, only daughter of Capt. S. Jackson, R. N.—The Right Hon. Viscountess Torrington—Joseph Nollekins, Esq. R.A and sculptor—Frances Tyrrell, Esq.—Sir T. Preston, Bart.

LONDON: Printed and Published by E. SIBERY, at No. 11, JOHNSON'S-COURT, FLEET-STREET. Communications to the Editor (post-paid) are requested.

JOHN BULL.

"FOR GOD, THE KING, AND THE PEOPLE!"

No. 125. SUNDAY, MAY 4, 1823. Price 7d.

MISS COOKE (Daughter of Mr. T. COOKE) most respectfully informs her Friends and the Public that her CONCERT will take place at the ARGYLL ROOMS, on THURSDAY EVENING, the 8th of May, 1823, when will be performed, a Selection of Vocal and Instrumental Music, by several eminent Professors.—Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, to be had of Miss Cooke, 22, Seymour-street, Manchester square; at the principal Music Shops; and at the Argyll Rooms.

KING'S CONCERT ROOMS, HANOVER SQUARE.—Under the Patronage of His Royal Highness the Duke of Cumberland, His Royal Highness the Duke of Cambridge, and the Noble Directors of the Antient Concerts.—MR. VAUGHAN begs most respectfully to acquaint the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends in general, that his Annual BENEFIT CONCERT will take place at the above Rooms, on FRIDAY NEXT. The Performance will be supported by the Vocal and Instrumental Strength of the Antient Concert Orchestra, and will be complete in every Department.—Overture. (Occasional.) "Parto ma tu ben mio." Clarionet Obligato, Mr. Willman. (Clemenza di Tito.) Mozart.—Air, "The moon had climbed;" harmonized for four voices by Greatorex.—Miss Stephens, Messrs Knyvett, Vaughan, and J. B. Sale.—Venetian Air, Mrs. Salmon. "La Biondina:" (with variations by Boehm.)—Quartet, Miss Travis, Messrs. Terrail, Vaughan, and Bellamy, "Lo! my shepherd." Grand Chorus, "O! sing unto Jehovah." (Judah.) Haydn.—Handel's Favourite Ice-soo, arranged for a full orchestra by Greatorex.—Glee, Messrs. Terrail, Vaughan, Goulden, and Bellamy, "The Crier." Horsley.—Song, Miss Stephens, "What airy sound." Bishop.—Chorus, "God Save the King." (Redemption.) Mr. Lindley, Leader of the Band. Mr. F. Cramer; Conductor, Mr. Greatorex.

The Concert will commence at 8 o'clock precisely. Tickets Half-a Guinea each, to be had of Mr. Vaughan, 89, Great Portland-street; at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Regent-street; at the music shops of Messrs. Birchall and Co. New Bond-street, and Messrs. Clementi and Co. Cheapside.—Mr. Townsend will be at the head of the peace officers.

OXFORD UNIVERSITY GRAND MUSICAL FESTIVAL.—The Public are respectfully informed, that a GRAND MUSICAL FESTIVAL will be held this year, in the Theatre, Oxford, during the Commemoration week. THREE CONCERTS will be given on Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday, the 10th, 11th, and 12th of June. The First will consist of a Selection from Palestine, the Seasons of Haydn, and Mozart's Requiem. The Two last with a Miscellaneous. Principal Vocal Performers: Miss Stephens, Miss Travis, Madame Ronzi De Begnis, Signora Caradori, and Signor De Begnis, Messrs. Wm. Knyvett, Vaughan, and Bellamy. Principal Instrumental Performers: Mr. F. Cramer, who will lead; Messrs. Lindley, R. Ashley, Willman, Mackintosh, Anfossi, Erskine, Monzani, Marlotti, the Petrides, Harper, and Jenkinson. The Band will consist of 150 Performers. TWO BALLS will be given in the Town Hall; one on Tuesday Evening, the other on Thursday.—N. B. Tickets of Admission to the Concerts and Balls, Half a Guinea each.

NEW MUSIC in the VISION of the SUN, composed by W. H. Ware, Theatre Royal, Covent-Garden:—"Say what is most dear," as sung with universal applause by Miss Love, arranged for the Piano-forte, pr. 2s.—"Beneath the citron tree," the admired Ballad, as sung by Miss Povey, arranged for the Harp or Piano forte, price 1s.—"The favourite Overture, in which is introduced Rossini's celebrated March from Moses in Egypt, pr. 2s. 6d.

Also just published, the much admired Overture to the Ogress, or the Sleeping Beauty of the Wood, price 2s. 6d.—To be had of the Author, No. 4, Charles-street, Covent-garden, and sold by W. Dale, at his Music and Musical Instrument Warehouse, No. 19, Poultry.

FOREIGN MUSIC.—WESSEL and STODART, Foreign Music Sellers to H.R.H. the Duchess of Kent, No. 1, Soho-square, respectfully announce to the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public, that they have always on hand, an extensive Selection of compositions by the most celebrated Authors of Germany, Italy, or France; comprising every description of Music, for Military Bands or Orchestra, Organ, Piano-forte, Harp, Violin, Violoncello, Flute, and Guitar. W. and S. particularly recommend to the attention of the Public their collection of Guitar Music, of which they have IMPORTED very extensively, in consequence of the increasing celebrity of that Instrument in this country. Correct and elegant editions of Operas, by Mozart, De Weber, Rossini, &c. for the Piano-forte, with and without the words, on very reasonable terms. A Catalogue of the above, may be had gratis, No. 1, Soho-square, three doors from the Manor.

NEW HARP MUSIC.—Rossini's beautiful Song, "Aurora che Sorgerai," from the celebrated Opera, "La Donna del Lago," arranged for the Harp, by N. C. Bochsa, with a Grand Introduction, in which is introduced the favourite "March" in the same Opera, dedicated to P. Meyer, Esq. price 6s.; "Amusement pour les Dames," on Recueil Periodique de Pièces Choisies pour la Harpe, non publées auparavant en Angleterre. No. 1 contains the popular Austrian Waltz, by Gallenberg; Alaacien Melody, by P. Sherzer; Weber's Mancienne, by ditto; Je suis encore dans mon printems, by Spohr, price 6s.—Published by R. Cocks and Co. Importers of Foreign Music, 20, Princes-street, Hanover-square, of whom may likewise be had all the Operas of Rossini and Mozart, at exceeding low prices, best Foreign Editions.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.—MR. MACREADY has the honour of making known to his Friends and the Public, that his BENEFIT is appointed for TUESDAY, MAY 13, when will be Performed, for the last time this season, Shakspeare's Play of the Merchant of Venice; Shylock by Mr. Macready, his first appearance in that character, with a variety of entertainments, in which Mr. Farren, Mr. Macready, Mrs. Chatterley, Miss M. Tree, Miss Paton, and Miss Hallande, will perform.—Tickets and Places for the Boxes to be had of Mr. Brandon, at the Box Office; and of Mr. Macready, 69, Berner's street.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT-GARDEN.—MISS PATON respectfully informs her Friends and the Public, that her BENEFIT is fixed for WEDNESDAY, 14th MAY, 1823, when a favourite Opera of Two Acts will be performed for the first time this season; previous to which will be presented, The Belle's Stratagem. Dorlecourt, Mr. C. Kemble; Letitia Hardy, Miss Paton, (sister to Miss Paton) being her first appearance in that character, and second on any stage. A Concert of Vocal and Instrumental Music, in which Miss Paton will be supported by several of the most eminent Professors.—Other particulars will be duly announced.—Tickets may be had of Mr. Brandon, at the Box-office, and of Miss Paton, 23, Leicester square.

FOR THE BENEFIT OF MR. YOUNG.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL DRURY-LANE.—On THURSDAY NEXT, 8th MAY, 1823, will be acted the Tragedy of Venice Preserved; Jaffier, Mr. Kean; Pierre, Mr. Young; Belvidera, Mrs. W. West. After which will be revived the Dramatic Romance of Cymon; Dorus, Mr. Liston; Sylvia, Miss Sidgons. To which will be added the Comedy of Three Weeks after Marriage; Sir Charles Racket, Mr. Elliston; Drugget, Mr. Bowton; Lady Racket, Mrs. Davison.—Tickets to be had of Mr. Young, 41, Wigmore-street; and of Mr. Spring at the Box-office of the Theatre.

MR. HAYDON'S Great Picture of LAZARUS RISING FROM THE DEAD is NOW OPEN.—Egyptian Hall, Piccadilly, ground floor to the right.—Admission 1s. Catalogues 6d.

GREAT ROOM, SPRING GARDENS.—NOVELTY.—MARSHALL'S Grand Historical Peristrephic PANORAMA of the CEREMONY of the CORONATION, the Coronation Procession, and the Banquet, painted on 10,000 square feet of canvass, and displaying nearly 100,000 figures, Portraits of 500 of the principal characters on the foreground the size of life. The movement of the Panorama gives such an imposing and striking illusion, that the spectators are led to believe themselves present at the different splendid ceremonies it represents; the whole accompanied by a full Military Band, assisted by a Pinger Organ and Trumpets, who perform the Coronation Music.—NOW OPEN.—Day Exhibitions at 12, 1; 2, 3, and 4 o'clock; and in the Evening, brilliantly illuminated with gas, at 7, 8, and 9 o'clock.—Admission, Rooms, 2s. Gallery, 1s.; Descriptive Book, 6d.

CORONATION.—HENRY ASTON BARKER'S PANORAMA, Leicester-square.—Now Open, a Grand Representation of the CORONATION PROCESSION, with Portraits of His MAJESTY, GEORGE the FOURTH, the ROYAL DUKES, and several others; particularly of the late Marquis of LONDONDERRY, in the full Habit of the Order of the Garter; The Panorama exhibits at least Thirty Thousand Figures!!!—A VIEW of LAUSANNE, with the LAKE of GENEVA, is also open.—Admittance to each Painting, 1s.

On the First of May was Published, Part II. of

PICTURESQUE VIEWS on the SEVERN; (To be continued on the First of every succeeding Month until completed, in Eight Parts, Royal Quarto, and Royal Octavo) from Original Designs of the late MR. SAMUEL IRELAND, Author of Picturesque Views on the Thames, Avon, Medway and Wye, with Illustrations, Historical and Topographical. By MR. HARRAL. This work, the intended publication of which was announced some years ago, and suspended only in consequence of the lamented death of the artist, has been long sought for as a companion to the late Mr. Ireland's Thames, Medway, Avon, and Wye, and is completing the series of that gentleman's Picturesque Delineations of River Scenery. Mr. Ireland's Designs, in number, Fifty-two, embrace the Scenery of the Severn, from the source of that river, on Plynlimmon Hill, and in its progress through the counties of Montgomery, Salop, Worcester, and Gloucester, till it falls into the Atlantic Sea, at King Road, Bristol. These Views are now submitted to the public, coloured, or on tinted paper, in the first style of lithographic execution, so as to present perfect fac-simile of the original drawings. The respective Parts of the Publication (price Fifteen Shillings each, in Royal Quarto, coloured, or Seven Shillings and Sixpence, in Royal Octavo, plain) will alternately comprise Seven Views, with Seventy-two Pages of Letter-press, and Six Views, with Eighty Pages of Letter-press. Thus the Plates, with their connected Historical and Topographical Illustrations, will form Two handsome Volumes, corresponding with Mr. Ireland's preceding works. The accompanying Text historically and topographically illustrative of the Cities, Towns, and Villages—of the Churches, Castles, Seats, and other distinguished Buildings—which enrich the natural Scenery of the Severn, will be arranged by Mr. Harral, from the Manuscript Notes of the late Mr. Ireland, taken in the course of his tour; from the original communications of resident Individuals; and from various other sources of actual survey and literary research.—Orders are received by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London; and all Booksellers.

Speedily will be published, by W. and C. Tait, Edinburgh; and Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London,

PETTICOAT TALES; Volumes I. and II. containing, 1. Dora —2. Constantia, a Roman story.—3. Flirtations of a Fortnight in August.—4. Confessions of a Punchbowl.—5. The Miller of Calder.

Shortly will be published,

MAMMON IN LONDON; or, the Spy of the Day. A Characteristic and Satirical Romance on the Model of Le Diable Boiteux. 3 vols. 12mo.

2. The LIFE OF A SOLDIER; a Narrative and Descriptive Poem, embellished with 18 Plates, etched by, and highly coloured after the drawings of, William Heath. Handsomely printed in imperial 8vo.

Lately published, NAVAL and MILITARY ANECDOTES, dedicated, by permission, to the Dukes of York and Clarence, one neat volume, with Engravings, 6s. boards.—Printed for W. Sams, Royal Subscription Library, 1, St. James's-street.

GAME LAWS!!—Price 1s.

A LETTER to the CHAIRMAN of the COMMITTEE of the HOUSE of COMMONS, on the GAME LAWS.—By the Hon. and Rev. WILLIAM HERBERT.—Printed for J. Ridgway, Piccadilly. Also, BEAUTIES of the GAME LAWS, exhibited in a short View of their Enactments as to the Right of Property in Game, the Qualification for Sporting, and the Penalties on Unqualified Persons, with Remarks on several proposed Remedies, 1s.

WEST INDIES.—5s.

A NARRATIVE of the INSURRECTION in the ISLAND of GRENADA, which took place in 1795. By JOHN HAY, an Inhabitant of the Colony, and one of the Prisoners taken by the Insurgents. With an Introduction, by a Military Man, resident for nearly Thirty Years in the West Indies. Printed for J. Ridgway, Piccadilly. Also,

A LETTER to EARL BATHURST, on the Condition of the Colonies in New South Wales and Van Dieman's Land. By the Hon. HENRY GREY BENNET, M. P. 5s.

VISCOUNT ERRINGTON AND NAPOLEON.—Second Edition, 2s.

MEMORANDUM of TWO CONVERSATIONS between the Emperor NAPOLEON and Viscount ERRINGTON, at Porto Ferrago, on the 6th and 8th of December, 1814. Second Edition.—Printed for J. Ridgway, Piccadilly. Also,

The LAST REIGN of the Emperor NAPOLEON, being the Substance of some Letters addressed principally to the Lord Byron. Third Edition, with a prefatory Address in Answer to Mr. Gifford and the Quarterly Review, and an Appendix of Official Documents. By JOHN HOBHOUSE, Esq., M. P. Two vols. 8vo. 24s.

NORTH CAPE.—Just published, in 4to. with numerous Plates, price 2l. 10s. or Proofs, on India Paper, price 3l.

TRAVELS through SWEDEN, NORWAY, and FINMARK, to the NORTH CAPE, in the Summer of 1820. By A. DE CAPELL BROOKE.—Printed for Rodwell and Martin, Bond street.

Of whom may be had, Part I. of NORTHERN SCENERY, containing five Plates; price 12s or proofs on India paper, 15s. super-royal folio.

SPAIN.—Just published, in Imperial 8vo. price 8s. or proofs, in 4to. price 12s. the First Number of VIEWS in SPAIN, from Drawings by E. H. Locker, Esq. F.R.S. containing—SARAGOZA, MONTSERRAT, TOLEDO, PASS of VILATE, TOBOSO.

Printed for Rodwell and Martin, New Bond-street.—This Work will be completed in twelve Numbers, each containing five Views, published every six weeks.—A very limited number, on India paper, price 16s.

Just published, a new Edition, with plates, price 10s.

A PLAIN and PRACTICAL TREATISE on the CULTURE and MANAGEMENT of the AURICULA, POLYANTHUS, CARNATION, PINK, and the RANUNCULUS; with full Directions for Preparing the most approved Composts, Raising New Varieties from Seeds, &c. founded upon thirty years' successful experience. To which are added, Instructions for dressing, packing, conveying, and arranging Auriculas, &c. for Florists' Shows. By ISAAC EMMERTON, of Barnet.—Printed for Harding, 38, St. James's-street; where may be had,

MADDOCKS'S ESSAY on the CULTURE of the FANCY FLOWERS. A New Edition, considerably enlarged by Curtis, with ten coloured plates, price 20s.; or plain, 12s.

HAYNES' ESSAY on SOILS, MANURES, and COMPOSTS, for the Use of Gardeners and Flower Fanciers. 5s.

Just published, in 8vo. price 5s.

EMANCIPATION! a Poem in Two Cantos, embellished with Explanatory Notes and Caricature Designs, for the instruction of His Holiness Pope Pius To which is added, The PLAIN MAN'S REPLY to the CATHOLIC MISSIONARIES, dedicated to Lord Chancellor Eldon, by the Ghost of Martin Luther.

"Pestis eram vivus; moriens ero mors tua Papa."

London: printed for the Author, and sold by James Smith, 163, Strand.

Just published, in a neatly printed foolscap 8vo. volume, embellished with an Engraving, price 8s.

THE CAMBRIDGE TART.

"Verum ubi plura nitent in carmine, non ego paucis offendar maculis."—Hor. A. P.

A collection of Epigrammatic and Satiric Poetical Effusions, &c. &c. Dainty Morsels served up by Cantabs on various occasions. Dedicated to the Members of the University of Cambridge. By SOCIUS.

"Oxford has its Sausage, and why not Cambridge its Tart."—Preface.

London: printed for James Smith, 163, Strand, and John Anderson, 40, West Smithfield, London.

Just published, price 1s. 6d.

A REPLY to the Article on Church Establishments, in the last Number of the Edinburgh Review. By AUGUSTUS CAMPBELL, A.M. Rector of Wallasey, in the County of Chester.—London: Printed for J. Hatchard and Son, No. 187, Piccadilly.—Of whom may be had, by the same Author,

1. The RIGHTS of the ENGLISH CLERGY ASSERTED. Second Edition. 2s. 6d.

2. An APPEAL to the Gentlemen of England on behalf of the Church of England. 2s. 6d.

TO THE LANDED INTEREST!!

Just published, in 1 vol. 8vo. price 7s. 6d. boards,

RELATIVE TAXATION; or Observations on the Impolicy of Taxing Malt, Hops, Beer, Soap, Candles, and Leather; with a View of the Manner in which the Duties imposed upon them affect the different Kinds of Land, whether in Grass or Tillage, and their constant Tendency to Increase Land; whether in Grass or Tillage, and their constant Tendency to Increase Land; whether in Grass or Tillage, and their constant Tendency to Increase Land;

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

[This Gazette contains the appointments of Major-Gen Sir E. Barnes, K.C.B. to be Governor and Commander-in-Chief of Ceylon: and A. Macnamara, Esq. to be Sheriff of Brecon: and J. Wynne, Esq. to be Sheriff of Merioneth.]

Commission in the Royal Regiment of Fifeshire Yeomanry Cavalry—Capt. R. Douglas to be Capt. vice Avton, res.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

W. and J. Pritchard, Regent-street, hat manufacturers—Bolton and Lister, Bradford, Yorkshire, plasterers—Terry and Holl, Botley, Hants, vinegar-makers—Kirk and White jun. Sunderland, linen drapers—Nouchett and Hunt, Southampton, milliners—Denman and Wainwright, Lower Crown-street, tailors—Evans, sen and Co. High Wycombe, coach-masters—Wilks and Co. Swillington Bridge, Yorkshire, earthenware-manufacturers—M. and W. Jones, Manchester, sisters—Allsebrook and Freeman, Worthing, merchants—Lowe and Bullock, Congleton, Cheshire, surgeons—Nisbick and Latham, Bath, woollen-drapers.

E. DODD, Manchester, painter—W. LOMER, jun. Southampton, printer.

DIVIDENDS.

At the Court of Commissioners of Bankrupts—May 27, T. Clive and S Richardson, Token-house yard, merchants—May 24, M. Abithol, Bury-street, merchant—June 3, J. Callow, Princes street, Soho, medical book-seller—May 31, P. and C. A. Thomson, Tom's Coffee-house, wine merchants—May 20, J. Shackle, Milk-street, hosier—May 24, Q. and J. Dick, Finsbury-square, merchants.

May 22, P. Lawson, Bowness Hall, Cumberland, corn factor—May 24, W. Hudson, Camberwell, bricklayer—May 21, T. Bedson and R. Bishop, Birmingham brass-founders—May 21, T. Bedson, Birmingham, brass-founder—May 26, J. Turney and W. Bates, Selgebrook, merchants.

CERTIFICATES—May 20.

J. Allersey, Liverpool, grocer—W. Ramsden, Leeds, victualler—W. Franklin, Trowbridge, fuller—E. Chapman, Bridgewater-square, leather-seller—W. Wells, Brighton, farmer—W. Haviland, Plymouth, printer—B. Copley, Doncaster, iron-founder—R. Ealand, Stourbridge, hatter.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY.

Petitions were presented from Suffolk, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; from Neath, against the Marriage Act; from Brecon, complaining of Agricultural Distress; from several of the Clergy of the Diocese of York, in favour of the Catholic Claims; from Cirencester, praying for protecting duties on the products of the soil; and from the West Down District, against the Transit Duties.

In answer to a question from LORD KING respecting forgeries committed on Bank Notes, the EARL OF LIVERPOOL said no expence had been spared to prevent forgeries, from 20 to 30,000l. had been expended in experiments, but nothing effective had been accomplished—the withdrawing 1l. and 2l. notes had proved very effective in diminishing forgeries.

On the third reading of the Naval and Military Pensions' Bill LORD KING objected to the Bill, which he denominated a very foolish one, and moved an amendment that the Lords of the Treasury may have power to increase the revenue to raise from the Bank any sum not exceeding 10,000,000l. a-year for the time of 100 years, to be repaid by a defined stock. This amendment was negatived.

LORD BEXLEY defended the Bill, contending that the bargain had been made on favourable terms.

LORD ELLENBOROUGH thought the Noble Lord had been overreached by the Bank in the arrangement.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL said the terms made with the Bank were the same as those of last year—four per cent. in peace was a pretty fair average of interest for money.

THE MARQUIS OF LANSDOWNE contended that the present was not a beneficial bargain to the public.

The Bill was passed.

TUESDAY.

The Revenue Department's Consolidating and Allardyce's Divorce Bills were passed.

LORD ROLLE presented a petition from Oakhampton against the Duty on Coals carried coastwise.

Several Noble Lords sat in Committee upon the question respecting the Judicial Business of the House of Lords. The Earl of Harrowby was President.

WEDNESDAY.

The Ireland Charitable Loans' Bill was read a first time.

LORD CAWDOR gave notice that he would on Tuesday next submit a motion respecting the Administration of Justice in Wales.

THURSDAY.

EARL STANHOPE presented a petition from Charles Andrew Thomson, stating, that having purchased landed estates a few years since, he had been reduced from a state of affluence to one of ruin, in consequence of the depreciation in the value of landed property occasioned by the measures adopted for the resumption of cash payments. He prayed for the protection of the House and for an equitable adjustment of contracts between man and man. The Petition was laid on the table.

The Profane Swearing and Cursing Prevention Bill was passed.

The Weights and Measures Bill was read a second time.

FRIDAY.

The Royal Assent was given by Commission to the Military and Naval Pensions', the Grants in Aid for 1823, the Revenue Departments' Consolidation, the Innkeepers' Allowance Bills, and several private Bills.

A Select Committee was appointed on the General Gaols' Bill, to meet on Tuesday next.

The Bridport Harbour and the Scarborough Harbour Bills were passed.

Petitions were presented from the Ship-owners and Traders of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, against the Coastways Duties on Coals; from the Governors of Bethlem Hospital, praying to be heard by counsel against the General Gaols' Bill.

On the third reading of the Warehousing Bill,

THE EARL OF HARDWOOD hoped, when a more liberal system was to be pursued respecting Foreigners, it was not too much to ask the House to impart as great a boon to our own manufacturers. It was the intention of the woollen manufacturers to address Parliament on the subject of wool, for it was impossible that the growth of English wool could prosper, if the duty remains as it at present stands. He had just learned that 5d. per pound additional duty had just been imposed upon the exportation of the raw material from Spain; this he thought was neither just nor proper.—The Bill was passed.

Adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY.

Petitions were presented from Barton-upon-Humber, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; from Cork, against the Leather Tax; from the Grand Jury of Wicklow, complaining of the state of the mail coach roads; from the Dean and Chapter of Peterborough, Boroughbridge, Borrisoken Tipperary, against the Catholic Claims; from Sudbury, complaining of slavery still existing in the West Indies; from Newcastle-upon-Tyne, against the Coal Duties; from George White, complaining of being dismissed by the Board of Taxes, (as a surveyor) without enquiry; from Capt. Manby, praying for remuneration for his life preserving invention.

GEN. GASCOYNE gave notice for the 6th of May of his motion relative to Half-pay Officers.

MR. HUME postponed his motion respecting the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland to the 27th of May. He also gave notice of a motion respecting Promotions in the Army for the 14th of May.

MR. GRATTAN presented a Petition from a parish in Dublin, complaining of the interference of the Yeomanry during divine worship.

MR. HUME called the attention of the Secretary for Ireland to the Petition, which stated that the Yeomanry were brought into the church to turn out the congregation.

MR. GOULBURN observed that the Lord Lieutenant had instituted enquiry, and justice would be done.

The third readings of the Scotch Sheriff Court, and the Scotch Commissary Court Bills, were fixed for the 9th of May. The third reading of the Apprenticeship Bill was fixed for Monday.

MR. JAMES MACDONALD brought under the consideration of the House the Papers respecting the late negotiations. He recalled to its recollection the circumstances which had brought the country to the situation in which it now stood, and said, the war in 1793, which terminated in 1815, had forced England from her natural policy, and associated her with all the most despotic Governments of the Continent. He then went over and detailed the subsequent conduct of the Allied Powers in respect of the Governments on the Continent, and the share which Great Britain took in the proceedings thereon, which he contended had committed the principles of integrity which generally governed this country; and he charged the British Government, with respect to the affairs between France and Spain, with being ignorant of what was going forward. He then commented on the conduct of the Duke of Wellington in the negociations—arraigned Ministers for the instructions they had sent out to the Noble Duke, who ought to have been instructed to have negociated on the subject at Paris with the French Government alone, and not to shelter himself under any thing that would admit of a doubt—to have reminded the French Monarch of all that had been done for him by England, and to have pressed on his consideration how little was required from him in return. The Hon. Gentleman noticed the demands made on the part of the French King by M. de Chateaubriand, and commented on the French King's Speech to the Legislative Bodies, which struck directly at the root of the English Constitution. Having commented on the Papers at some length, the substance of which is embodied in the Address, he concluded by moving it, to this effect:—stating that the House had taken into its most serious consideration the Papers relative to the late negociations, representing their disappointment at finding that his Majesty's benevolent solicitude for preserving the general peace of Europe, in a great measure, to have arisen from the failure of Ministers to enter into the most earnest, vigorous, and solemn protest against the pretended right of the Sovereigns assembled at Verona to make war upon Spain, to compel her to alter her political institutions, as well as the subsequent pretext of the French Government, that a nation could not enjoy civil privileges except from the spontaneous grant of its Sovereign, as being destructive of the rights and independence of nations, as striking at the root of the British Constitution, and as being subversive of the right by which his Majesty held his title—expressing surprise and sorrow at finding Ministers had advised the Spanish Government to make concessions and changes in her Constitution, without any assurance from France that she would then desist from her unprovoked aggression. And, finally, representing that a more dignified course would have been better calculated to insure the peace of the Continent, and thereby have better secured this nation from the calamities of joining in war.

MR. STUART WORTLEY said that with respect to all that the Hon. Member had said on the conduct of other powers, and even of the conduct of France, there was much difference of opinion between them. He felt as strongly as the Hon. Member that the conduct of the Allied Powers for the last few years had been striking against the principles of our Constitution. With regard to France, he could scarcely believe what he saw of the course she was pursuing. He was convinced, however, that those who guided her councils would be stopped in their career, and that the infamy of their acts would recoil on their own heads. The Hon. Member then defended the conduct of Ministers, and moved an amendment to the address, in substance assuring His Majesty of its entire concurrence in the principles repeatedly declared respecting interference with the internal concerns of other nations; and the just application of those principles in the negociations relating to Spain—expressive of gratitude for His Majesty's earnest endeavours to preserve the peace of the world, and while they deeply regretted that these efforts had been unavailing, rejoicing that His Majesty had not become a party to a war which neither honour, treaties, nor the welfare of his dominions required; and assured His Majesty that, highly as they appreciated the value and the blessings of peace, they were, nevertheless, ready at all times to afford their zealous and affectionate support in any measures which he might find necessary to preserve the national faith, to vindicate his Crown, and to maintain the rights and interests of his people.

MR. T. WILSON seconded the amendment. With respect to the papers, his matured conviction was, that Ministers had done all that honour, consistency, and firmness of character required, and that they had thereby deserved the thanks of the nation. He wished not to be understood as defending the conduct of France. He could find no word less severe to express the feeling with which he regarded it, than execration.

MR. HOBHOUSE had to congratulate the House, that neither in the Amendment nor in the speeches of the two Hon. Members who supported it, had their British ears been offended by a repetition of that language which had been spoken in another place, to the utter debasement of the British name. They had at least spoken out like Englishmen, and expressed their abhorrence of the atrocious conduct of the tyrants of Europe in their attack on the liberties of Spain. The Hon. Member read and commented on the papers, and complained of the manner in which the claims of this country had been enforced when Spain was oppressed with difficulties on all sides. Was this a time to demand pecuniary compensations, when Spain came gallantly forward in her distress, and said, "we find ourselves sinking, come and help us." Conditions too, were stipulated for the safety of the King. The King! They never heard an English Minister now speak about the people. It was all the King—that cursed monarchical principle—it was an accursed principle as the tyrants of the Continent had expounded it—and that it was which created the misery and slavery of man. The Hon. Member next described the feeling expressed on the Continent against the policy of the late Marquis of Londonderry, and the hopes entertained by the people of those countries that the new Secretary for Foreign Affairs would not suffer himself to be surrounded by those who occupied the anti-chambers of the Allied Sovereigns. Every where abroad he was told of the liberality which was to be expected from him, and indeed he had positively assured them that they had got a Radical at the head of the Government.

SIR W. DE CRESPIGNY said, he should certainly oppose any measure tending to embroil this country in war.

MR. BANKES was perfectly satisfied that nothing short of war on the part of England would have had any influence on the infatuated councils of France. We had no right, by any law of nations, to make ourselves the arbiters of the world. He thought the danger, as between France and Spain, was greater to the Dynasty of France than to the Spanish cause; and he should be as little surprised, as he should be sorry to find that just punishment would overtake the former. After taking a short review of Spanish history from the time of the Grandson of Louis the Fourteenth ascending the throne, the Honourable Member observed that he thought many fears of the union of France and Spain were altogether visionary. He supported the amendment.

MR. ALEX. BARING thought, that on the conduct of the Allies, but one opinion was maintained in that House. So much did these Allied Sovereigns dread the progress of what were called liberal principles, that Russia now looked on Turkey with indifference, and Austria and Prussia, two countries hitherto so much at variance, were now united. If, in the result, they should make the Kings of Spain and Portugal despotic Monarchs, it would be their interest to check the only remaining Power which had a free Constitution. He admitted that no great fear was to be inspired by this circumstance; but he would not, in such a case, say, as had been said, "Let them come on!" He thought the negociations were most disgraceful to the councils of the country, and he should therefore vote in favour of the original motion.

LORD F. L. GOWER could not concur in a censure upon Ministers, whose conduct had received the approbation of the Spaniards themselves. He did not think that any good would have resulted from the use of language any stronger than that which had been used. The Noble Lord shortly referred to the note of the Duke of Wellington to the Spanish Government, and contended that there was nothing in it which could be considered as at all offensive to the Spaniards. He should vote for the amendment.

MR. WILBERFORCE was of opinion, that the conduct of France to the unfortunate Spaniards was marked by singular duplicity. When her attention was called to the affairs of Naples, not a word was said about Spain which could lead to suspicion that France meditated an attack on that country. Having thrown off the mask, his Majesty's Ministers stood forward, and it was impossible to deny that they had shewn a strong and sincere disposition to preserve peace; but he was concerned to find a stronger representation had not been made to the French Government. With respect to the Duke of Wellington, he was convinced that Noble Duke had ably discharged the important duties entrusted to him. The Duke of Wellington did every thing with coolness and moderation to prevent the attack of France upon Spain. He opposed the motion.

MR. H. SUMNER considered the line of policy adopted by the Duke of Wellington highly beneficial to the country. Neutrality was the most desirable in a country recovering from a long conflict; and he gave his Majesty's Ministers sincere thanks for the candid, open, manly and honourable part they had taken.—The Debate was then adjourned.

TUESDAY.

Petitions were presented from Brecon and Cirencester, complaining of Agricultural Distress—from Exeter and Dublin, praying for a duty on Foreign Yarn—from Aberdeen, Elgin, Annan, &c. praying for the repeal of the Duty on Stones carried coastwise—from several parts of Ireland, praying for a measure to encourage the growth of Flax.

The Bethnal-green Vestry Bill was passed.

MR. ABERCROMBIE postponed the motion respecting W. M. Berthwick till the 8th of May.

In answer to a question from MR. HUME respecting the Duties on Stones, the CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said, he intended to repeal the Duties.

MR. CREEVEY postponed his motion respecting the Four and a Half per Cent Duties till the 22d May.

A Committee was appointed to consider the line of road from Glasgow to Ayr, and thence to Port Patrick.

On the motion of MR. HUME, certain papers respecting the dismissal of Mr. George White by the Board of Taxes, and also of certain frauds in the collection of the Assessed Taxes, and relative to the amount as the Hon. Member stated of 300,000l.

MR. HENRY GREY BENNET postponed the notice relative to the resumption of Cash Payments to the 3d of June.

The Debate on the Papers relating to the Negociations was resumed.

MR. W. WHITMORE supported the Address, and declared it to be his deep conviction, that although it was not now the policy of this country to go to war, it was always necessary for us to assume that tone of independence which was the reverse of what appeared to be the case in the negociation.—MR. DENROWE supported the Address.

Mr. Canning, MADERLEY said, he viewed with shame and disgust the contents of the Papers which shewed that the strongest language used by the Duke of Wellington at Verona was, that "this country should not become a party" to the nefarious scheme in agitation. He supported the Address, because he thought Ministers had not carried it sufficiently through the late negociation with that dignity which was due to the cause. Although they had conducted the country to peace, it was not a durable peace.

MR. CROWEN certainly should have liked to have seen a greater degree of moral feeling pervade our share of the negociation: but he was bound in fairness to ask himself this question—whether our interference would have prevented the war? and he was bound to answer in the negative his conscience he believed that it would not. He supported the amendment.

Mr. Robertson and Mr. J. Williams supported the original motion.

THE CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER said, His Majesty's Ministers were sensible that a renewal of war would affect considerably the most valuable and dear to this country; that it would affect the country to which we were bound by the most solemn ties of alliance and treaty; in defence of which country we had expended much valuable treasure, and had shed our best blood. For these reasons they had considered it their bounden duty to act with caution. No circumstances would contribute to render war lightly decided upon by us, and he denied that the question of "peace or war" was a matter of consideration in looking at the question before the House. The Right Hon. Gentleman then noticed and replied to the arguments advanced by Hon. Members who supported the motion. Let us look at the situation in which we stood with respect to the Allied Sovereigns. They had formerly been united with us against us. Our relations with those Sovereigns were of a peculiar nature; it was unwise to say that we ought to break off alliance with them, if our object was to preserve peace. The line we had held towards them was undoubtedly that of negociation rather than menace. If the House would look at the [illegible] first of the second series of those before the House, they would find that it contained an argument—a reasonable argument—on the unjust principles by which they were actuated in the [illegible] This document was the more important, because it had been [illegible] the Noble Author of it was leagued with Foreign Despotism to the liberties of Europe. He had been strongly attached to the Noble Lord; he knew the sterling nature of his mind—and especially important services he had rendered the country. Never [illegible] been more publicly misrepresented than that illustrious Lord. He undertook the management of our foreign affairs under unparalleled circumstances of difficulty, and conducted them with equanimity and decision of temper peculiar to himself. To those who knew how he checked all angry feelings, and conquered [illegible] personal prejudices against him. In this document there was [illegible] manly and vigorous protest against the interference of the Allied Sovereigns. He called upon the House to remember the [illegible] down in the answer of the late Marquis of Londonderry to the [illegible] issued by the Allied Sovereigns after the conferences at Troppau in 1821. When the Duke of Wellington referred to that [illegible] was entitled to say that they had kept principles out of sight, contented themselves with making representations of interest, or mild deprecation of the attack upon Spain. But one [illegible] which they had a right to rely, and one much more [illegible] words they could have used, was the effect to be expected from the separation of sentiments and momentous a question as [illegible] Powers. With respect to the subsequent course of proceeding by this country in the negociations, they had told the House at the moment that if they recommended any alterations to Spain [illegible] never suffer her to acquiesce in that principle laid down in the [illegible] of France's Speech, which made all free Constitutions a mere [illegible] paper unless coming from the mouth of a Sovereign. A more erroneous proposition it was—and certainly such a one as [illegible] said to strike at the root of the British Constitution. Upon the view of the case, convinced as he was, that neutrality [illegible] was the right and honourable line of conduct for them to pursue, no other course of policy would have produced any other result. He was sure the House would reject the motion, and not consider the [illegible] ment to its censure, because, after a long and anxious [illegible] discharge their duty by upholding the honour and dignity of the country, and to maintain the peace of the world, they had not failed in securing the latter object.

SIR J. MACINTOSH said, though he did not agree in the [illegible] which had been laid before the House, nor in the reference [illegible] been made of them, able as it was, he could not refrain from congratulating the House of Commons upon that concurrence of opinion which pervaded all sides and all parties, in reprobation of the atrocious and unprincipled aggression of France upon the unoffending people of Spain. With respect to the note of the late Marquis of Londonderry, in answer to the circular of the Allies, it was a strong protest, and to refer to that was sufficient. In [illegible] the question there was something quite ludicrous; for, in proportion as the necessity for firmness increased, and the objectionable [illegible] came stronger, our language grew weak and feeble. The Hon. Member maintained, that, from referring to the papers, it was clear [illegible] abstain from violating the independence of nations as [illegible] been done, and that the balance of power had never been [illegible] or thought of. He could not argue with any one who could [illegible] the occupation of Spain by France would not destroy the [illegible] power in Europe. Ministers had absolutely done nothing [illegible] for that friendly power which had been three times destroyed [illegible] upon the brink of destruction on our account. He concluded by pressing his warm hopes for the personal safety of King Ferdinand. Next to his own King, there was not another whose [illegible] so much anxiety. He wished him to live unharmed through perils of the country, that his safety might so down to [illegible] the eternal monument of the moderation and forbearance of this nish nation. In the midst of their glorious struggle they [illegible] opposed by fraud, treachery, and deceit; whilst to their enemies had been merciful,—forgiving, almost to blindness. He [illegible] that he almost envied the illustrious Arguelles in his sufferings in the cause of his country and of freedom; he was sure he envied [illegible] his talents and his eloquence; but most of all he envied him the exalted feeling which led him to treat with forbearance, with [illegible] and even with delicacy,—that Sovereign who had sent him as a private soldier in a miserable fort, beneath the burning sun of [illegible]

MR. SECRETARY PEEL said, after the admirable and unanswerable defence of his Right Honourable Friend, he should be well content to leave the question in the hands of the House. But in reference to the arguments advanced in favour of the motion by Hon. Members he asked, Did the honour and interest of the country require war? he should answer—No. Did the voice of the people of England require war?—No. Did the Spaniards require this country to go to war?—He answered—No. If neither honour, interest, nor treaties required war, was it competent to criminate the Government on such grounds? The single question on which the supporters of the motion relied was one of degree; namely, whether or no the tone of the Minister during the negociation was too submissive. He protested against any man could, against the doctrine of the Holy Alliance having the internal affairs of foreign nations. He adverted to the motion, and observed that nothing appeared in that transaction, but a sincere desire to mediate in a manner advantageous to Spain. He asked what was to be gained by agreeing to the motion? Was it right, on a question on which Europe had formed its decisive opinion, that the House of Commons should condemn the policy of the British Minister? After the conflicts of the last twenty-four years strict neutrality was the best course for this country, whilst it could be preserved with honour. The Government had acted in support of the interests of the country, and notwithstanding the proposition submitted by the Hon. Gentleman, they would doubtless enjoy the approbation of the nation, and public confidence.

SIR F. BURDETT agreed with the Right Hon. Gentleman, that in order to take a correct view of the question, it was better to look to times and circumstances. He could not but express his satisfaction that the general unanimity of sentiment respecting the aggression

France was not broken by the Right Hon. Gentleman. He knew not whether it was prudent to make war the result, but it certainly was not the duty of Ministers to abandon the high spirit of the country. War had nothing to do with the question. There was a line of proceeding short of war, which would have saved the dignity and moral character of the country from being put into the state in which it then stood. This line should have said, "we must take these steps without transgressing the strict line of neutrality which may counteract your designs, and whilst you are determined on this odious purpose we must withdraw our Ambassador. We will do all that is not a breach of neutrality." Such a line of proceeding would have been more consistent with the character of England. It would have been a check to the detestable project of France, more forcible than the answer of the Duke of Wellington, which only conveyed a hint that France was taking upon herself unnecessary responsibility. He contended that Spain had been infinitely treated by England, and far from thinking the honour and dignity of this country had been properly upheld, he was of opinion that the part we had taken was dishonourable to our national character. He anticipated it would yet plunge the country in a war under more unfavourable circumstances than those under which we had been exhorted into the contest if we had at once made common cause with Spain.—The Debate was then adjourned.

WEDNESDAY.

Petitions were presented from Northampton, praying for a reduction of the Leather Duties; from Armagh, praying for a Duty on Foreign Grain; from Chatteris, in the Isle of Ely, against the Slave Trade; from Dartmouth, for a repeal of the Coal Duties.

The Poor Laws' Amendment Bill was postponed till the 9th inst.

Lord Lyndhurst's motion on the same subject till the 29th inst.

Mr. Wood's motion on the same subject till the 29th inst.

Mr. Henry Grey Bennet moved for leave to bring in a Bill to prevent Bribery. The Hon. Member said that within the last six years nearly 7000 persons had been flogged, to the disgrace of the age in which we live.

The motion was opposed by the Attorney-General, Mr. Dawson, &c. and supported by Mr. Curwen, Mr. Hobhouse, &c. The House divided. For leave being given, 37—Against it, 76.

Leave was given to bring in a Bill to reclaim Waste Lands in Ireland.

The debate on the late negociations was then resumed,

Mr. C. Wynne, at some length, replied to the arguments adduced by several Hon. Members on the preceding evenings, contending that Ministers could not have pursued another course—their duty was to advise the Crown on the subject, and then submit the result of the negociations to Parliament. With respect to the conduct of France towards Spain, he was ready to admit that the invasion of Spain would justify Ministers in declaring war, if the interests of England demanded such a hostile exertion.

Mr. Leveson supported the motion.

Mr. W. Williams felt much gratitude to Ministers for the line of conduct they had pursued in the negociations.

Mr. W. Peel entertained similar feelings.

Lord Palmerston contended that the British Government had acted so as to induce Spain to take measures to prevent a rupture with France. There was no person better calculated to interfere in the affairs of Spain than the Duke of Wellington, for in that country his brightest laurels had been gathered.

Col. Davies thought that England could not long keep aloof from war. He supported the motion.

Mr. H. Twiss supported the Amendment.

Sir F. Blake was of opinion if Ministers had used spirited language, Spain would not have been attacked by France.

Lord Folkestone expressed his readiness to apologise for any warmth of expression he might have used on a former occasion, which filled forth the talent for sarcasm and quizzing of the Right Hon. Secretary for Foreign Affairs. The Noble Lord disapproved of the Papers, because they lowered the tone of the country.

Mr. Litteron thought the language in the Papers sufficiently high.

Mr. Secretary Canning rose and addressed the House amidst universal cheering. The Right Hon. Gent. said, he felt grateful to the Hon. mover for the perfectly manly and candid manner in which he had brought these negociations under the consideration of the House; and he hoped that he would turn out the instrument, however unintentional, of adding to the approbation of the country the recorded opinion of the House of Commons.—(Cheers.)—Almost all the Members who had addressed the House from the opposite side—he believed all but two honourable exceptions—had admitted that this was a question of peace or war. The denial came with a suspicious singularity from those who had before been clamorous for war. Occasions had been taken to tell the House that cries had been raised, and caps flung up for arms;—(a laugh)—but the cap which had been flung down was picked up by neither of the Hon. Gentlemen.—(Laughter.)—He denied that, upon a fair construction of the negociations, any man could for a moment assert that it was a question of peace or war. The negociations were to be judged with reference to the war which was to be avoided, and the peace to be obtained.—(Hear, hear!)—How, he would ask, was it possible that these negociations could be discussed, unless, in the first instance, the object was admitted to which they were directed?—(Hear!)—They were directed to peace—(Hear!)—to peace, if possible, for all the world—to peace, in the second place, for the nations around us—and, lastly, to peace, at all events, for this country, and that peace consistent with its faith, its interest, and its honour.—(Hear, hear!)—The first question to be determined was, as to the rectitude of our object; and the second point was—did we go the right way about the accomplishment of that object? Now, in looking at these papers as directed, in the first instance, to the preservation of the peace of Europe; in the second instance, to the preservation of peace between France and Spain; and, lastly, to the preservation of the peace of this country, they would find that the negociations naturally divided themselves into three stages. In the first place, as to what had been done at Verona. In the second place, as to what related to France; and, thirdly, as to that part of these negociations which related to Spain.—The great object of our negociation was to prevent the joint union of the Allied Powers, and to bring it down to the insulated point of France and Spain; our object was to diminish the hostility of the joint Powers against one to a separate cause, and from the intentions of the Alliance at Verona to reduce the question to nation and nation; to bring impending evils within their ordinary size and within the scope of usual diplomacy. The Right Hon. Secretary alluded to the arguments used by the Hon. Baronet, who, adopting an argument which he had heard in another place, and which, as he had borrowed it, was the only weak and useless part of his argument—following up that argument with the air and gesture of the noble proprietor of the idea, and causing in the minds of his hearers, from the very infection of his manner, an involuntary recurrence to the line of the poet—

"Quid dignum tanto feret hic promissor hiatu."

"Come what will," exclaimed the Hon. Baronet, "His Majesty will be no party to any interference." If the Hon. Bart. conceived that that instruction applied to the whole of the negociations—if he supposed that it applied to the interference of France with Spain, or that it referred to an advanced state of the proceedings—though such an opinion he admitted, if well founded, would make something for his argument—yet it really did happen to apply merely to the Allies in their corporate capacity. When the invasion of Spain was proposed as a subject in which the interest of all were concerned, the declaration was then made—that His Majesty to such a proceeding would form no party to interference, even though the dissolution of the Alliance should prove the consequence of that refusal. If then the Hon. Baronet would have the goodness to follow up that experiment in bathos, that act of seeking in instruction, he would find that the proceedings of the Allies had been paralysed by that declaration, and that from that moment all thoughts of making the invasion of Spain a joint operation were abandoned.—(Hear!)—If in politics, as in mechanics, success consisted in achieving the greatest object by the least power, the negociations had proved eminently successful.—(Hear, hear!)—They had used menace adequate to its object, and no idle waste of words had been displayed, where such an exhibition must have proved injurious or at least useless—calculated rather to irritate the temper than to convince the understanding. And who were the witnesses of this declaration and its result? The first was the Duke Montmorency, who distinctly declared in his Note to the Duke of Wellington that England had actually discountenanced and disdained all connection with those principles which led to the invasion of Spain. His words were—"the success of which measures would have been completely secured, if England had thought she could concur in them." "He thinks that with such feelings that Government may render essential service to Europe, by offering in the like manner to the Government of Spain, advice, which by leading them to entertain more calm views, might produce a happy influence on the internal situation of that country." In the next place he had the testimony of Sir William A'Court in his report from M. de San Miguel, thanking England for the part she had taken, and looking forward to her interference and effectual assistance, and trusting that the exercise of her influence to prevent war would not be denied. His third witness, for whose favourable testimony he was certainly not prepared, was the Hon. Member for Westminster (Mr. Hobhouse). He, fortunately for the Government, had wandered quired information upon this subject, which had much more of truth had there ascertained that the intention of invading Spain as a joint operation of the Allies had been given up in despair, and that he (Mr. Canning), the liberal Minister of England, was to blame for the failure of so popular a project.—(Cheers.)—The Right Hon. Gent. said "With respect to this part of our case, how stands the charge against us? Admiss, but that we spoke in too low a tone—a tone in which our success might however be frustrated, but by the moderation of which, we secured our object. I conjure the House not to be directed to its vote on conformity with this address by any philological, elegiac, and grammatical nicety in its construction; but let me, and His Majesty's Government with me, have our conduct at Verona exempted from censure, because we did not use a higher tone than was necessary, and which if we had used, would have been altogether misplaced. Such was a charge made by many Honourable Members, amongst whom must not be omitted my Honourable Friend the Member for Bramber. He said strong language was necessary on our part. But I, who have watched with reverence every thing that comes from his lips—I, who am quite aware that my Honourable Friend had more in view the solemn air of animadversion on the principle for which he contended than the danger of its tendency—know that his topics were of a higher cast. Something of ill taste might be used in applying them to countries not feeling the moral elevation of his mind; if we had urged those moral topics, we might have incurred the charge of indulging in that cant and hypocrisy—with having torn a leaf from the book of that Holy Alliance, which, to cover difference views had resorted to those topics. I know that my Hon. Friend (Mr. Wilberforce) whom I altogether distinguish from others, did not think, that to conciliate those Powers we should call them despots, tyrants, haters of freedom, and willing to put down the rising liberties of the world. He could hardly expect that, like Shylock in the play, if we said to them—

'Fair Sir, you spat on me on Wednesday last,
You spurned me on such a day, another time
You call'd me dog———
And for these courtesies——I'll yield to you'— that such an appeal would do nothing. You, gentlemen, to whom I address myself, would despise the use of such language, and still more perhaps, decry the policy of those who could so speak.—(Hear, hear!) The principles of morality were not the less enforced, if enforced by rhetoric and ornament, rather than by flowers of Billingsgate sown deep—

Medio de fonte leporum
Surgit amari aliquid quod in ipsis floribus angat.

—Such was not our language at the Congress of Verona; if we had used it, our object would have been altogether defeated.—(Cheers.)—The cases foreseen at Verona were, in the first place, any attack by Spain on France—any violence to King Ferdinand or his Family—or any forcible change of the reigning dynasty. The grand object of England had been to destroy the joint character of the hostility to Spain—to keep within reasonable bounds the jurisdiction of the Alliance, and to do away with that areopagitical spirit of superintendance over the Government of independent States which had manifested itself. This had been accomplished.—(Hear, hear!)—A Congress at Verona had originally been determined upon, solely to take into its consideration the affairs of Italy. When he accepted the seals of office, the grand object in view was to prevent the commencement of hostilities between Russia and the Porte.—(Hear, hear!)—It had been asked, why, when we found Spain the subject of negociation at Verona, we did not call upon Spain herself to send an Agent there? He could only answer as to this, that our object was not to countenance any discussion of her affairs at all; and that if we did so, it was morally certain that Spain being so called upon, would altogether in a great degree destroy the efforts we had previously made in her favour.—(Hear, hear!)—The British Government was glad to avoid all discussions upon the difficulties in which Spain was entangled—a King, Constitution, and People divided against each other; besides the careful avoidance on our part not to lead the Allied Powers into the assumption with regard to an interference with Spain, which the whole of our policy went to deny. The Congress of Verona ended by replacing in British hands the charge of reconciling two of the greatest empires in the world—Russia and the Sublime Porte—a charge which evidently shewed there was nothing in our conduct at Verona to lower our character, to weaken our power, or lessen the political influence of Great Britain.—(Cries of hear, hear!)—Congress did not close till the 29th November, and the moment it was ended, he thought it his duty to impart to the Spanish Government, by its Charge d'Affaires, all communications as to what had been passing at Verona. He assured them the disposition of His Majesty's Government was favourable to Spain, but declined giving information as to the subjects of discussion. He did so because they were still negociating with other Powers on the Spanish question. The Right Honourable Secretary then argued upon the documents, and said that some of the Members of the French Cabinet hoped to avoid a war, and that, up to the latest period, the smallest loop-hole from which they could have escaped would have induced them to avoid a war. Ministers were considered dupes, because some gentlemen ascribed to the French Government an unalterable line of conduct from the beginning to the end, and held their course right on. M. de Montmorency went to Verona, high in the confidence of and countenanced by the Holy Alliance—on his return to Paris he was created a Duke for his able services in the view of France and the Allied Powers; but, strange to say, in three days after his return he was dismissed from office, and his despatch, concerted with the Ministers of the Allied Powers, was signed by another officer. From this change he, (Mr. C.) believed in the prospect of a peace, and so far must have been a dupe. The fact however was not so; for the question thenceforward turned from being an European to a mere French question. M. de Montmorency, like a man of honesty and honour, quitted office when he found he could no longer accomplish his object. This conduct completely negatives the charge of Lord Hon. Gentlemen opposite read over our correspondence with the key, they would clearly understand the difference between the Note of M. de Montmorency to the Duke of Wellington, and that of M. de Chateaubriand to me. M. de Montmorency said the policy to be pursued was European! M. de Chateaubriand, in explanation said, rather singularly, it is toutes Francaises et tous autres—an explanation, in truth, which I do not well understand.—(Hear, hear! and laughter.)—I only speak of M. de Chateaubriand with respect for his private worth—with admiration of his talents and genius—with the most perfect conviction of his untainted honour, and his capability to fill the highest station. Whatever I may think of the conduct of France, or of the French Ministry, I cannot individually say of him that he is capable or been guilty of duplicity. With respect to the seizure of a Spanish corvette by a French vessel of war; the first intimation he had of the transaction was in this House; and must needs own the event looked a little strange, inasmuch as if any orders for such seizure had been given, it must be when the French Government had expressed such warm dispositions for peace. But looking to the war of 1756 and that of 1804, it was not for this country to throw the first stone.—(Hear, hear! from Mr Brougham.)—He immediately sent off a messenger to Paris to ask an explanation on the subject. This explanation had just arrived by Telegraph, and was put into his hands as he was coming to the House. The despatch is dated, "Paris, April 28, 1823. Nothing official has been received by the French Government as to the seizure of a Spanish corvette by the French ship of war Le Jean de Bart. No instructions for such seizure were sent out, and if any such prize were made, it must be under very particular circumstances. In any case, however, the French Government will see justice done."—(Hear, hear! from both sides of the House.) In respect of some objections which have fallen from my Hon. and Learned Friend (Sir James Mackintosh) who seemed almost to exhaust the powers of his mind in that able eulogy which he pronounced on M. Arguelles. I allude more especially to that part of his eulogy where he so much praised that Minister for sparing King Ferdinand's life.

Sir James Mackintosh—I used the word as sparing the delicacy of King Ferdinand.

Mr. Canning—I have no doubt my Hon. and Learned Friend must have so intended, for no man can be more aware how fatal it is to associate in the mind and render familiar to less gifted persons the danger of lightly treating Kings. If they advised a change in their Constitution to the Spaniards, they had done it in the mildest and least offensive way. The case between France and Spain stood thus: France alleged that the internal state of Spain alarmed and affected her interests; Spain alleged that the existence of the Army of Observation on the Spanish frontier alarmed and affected her interests. This was a state of things which admitted of nothing but war or mutual concession. But was it for our Government to say that we could not, owing to some stupidity which palsied our councils, advise Spain to make her internal state in some degree acceptable to France; when we were perfectly aware that by so doing she would have obtained from France most important advantages in the nature of concessions as to the external condition of that country? France had, for instance, as good a right to say she would distribute her army as she liked, as Spain had to say that she would maintain to the letter her Constitution. This was inferred throughout the whole negotiation, as might be collected from the Note of Sir W. A'Court; one from the Spanish Minister San Miguel; and a Note of his own. With respect to the state of neutrality, France was kept in utter darkness as to our intention to remain neuter from the time the French King made his well-known speech to the Chambers up to the very period and after the period of the French army entering Spain. Before that speech our intended neutrality had been avowed, but after that profession of our intention to remain neutral was withdrawn, and he himself, in an interview he had with the French Charge d'Affaires, told him it was in consequence of the purport of the French King's Speech that the pledge of our neutrality was withdrawn. Was this truckling to the French Government?—(Loud Cheers.)—The object of Ministers was to maintain peace; and this they thought could be best attained, not by professing themselves ready to aid Spain in her struggle, but by calling themselves off every opportunity that might arise to prevent both countries from coming to extremities. By remaining at peace themselves, they would best secure Portugal; and more effectually retain the power of circumscribing the ravages of war, best enable the country to take an effectual and decisive part in any future contest, and best secure the supereminent station they had long enjoyed, of a country whose freedom had been long established, and hold the balance in their hands among nations either struggling for freedom, or pertinaciously opposing it. Powerful as were these considerations, he should have been the last to decline a contest if the honour or the interests of the country required it. Mr. C. concluded with commenting on the Address—the object of it being to displace Ministers, and fill their places with the gentlemen opposite, every one of whom maintained that this was a question of peace or war. If they were prepared for war this would be the first instance in which Parliament came to the Throne with an Address of this nature, without a conditional pledge of supporting it with all the resources of the country. He rested with perfect security upon the justice of the country, and he was sure that their conduct, directed as it had been with a view to the interests not only of this country but of the world, would be stamped with the approbation of the House.

Mr. Brougham hoped the House would not forget the real merits of the question in the brilliance and eloquence of the defence. The Right Hon. Gentleman asserted, however, that his engine worked well at Verona. But was this the case? did the threat that, come what might, we would not be a party to the aggression on Spain succeed?—It did not. Without meaning to refer as largely as the Right Hon. Gentleman to the Papers, he could not help doing so for an elucidation of this point of the Right Hon. Gentleman. By the answer of the Allied Monarchs, it appeared that "they said they would act as France did with regard to their Minister at the Court of Spain, and that they would give France any countenance and assistance she would require—the cause for such being reserved to be specified in a treaty." Was this nothing? From those documents, he would ask any Hon. Gent. whether more could be granted to the Holy Alliance than had been conceded to them, as stated by the Duke of Wellington? Most exorbitant, indeed, must these High Powers be if not content with that. If a commentary upon those concessions were necessary, he would give it. The Duc Mathieu Montmorency was the person who had represented France at Verona, on his return from which sadly he was made a Duke; but on his return, another person, his son-in-law, Mr. Pitt, was appointed to his situation, for the Government was not satisfied with the answer which he had brought back. The Duke then resigned, and left a more moderate person to fill his place—a stronger proof could not be given that the French Government was not satisfied with their success at Verona.—The Hon. Member contended that the state of England was unknown on the Continent, and quoted some passages from a book that had been originally published in a foreign language, and the author of which was a person of celebrity. Speaking of the dispositions of the people of this country, it said, that "such was the delight which those sombre islanders take in melancholy exhibitions, that they frequently assemblied for the purpose of being entertained by the spectacle of a funeral;" and that he proved, by referring to the fact, that on many labels displayed at the doors of tradesmen's houses in London were to be found those words, "Funerals performed here."—(A laugh.)—The writer next described the then political parties into which he was pleased to divide the Members of that House—the Ministerial—the Opposition—and another of which he (Mr. Brougham) never heard before—the "Anglican."—(Laughter.)—These last were one hundred in number, and at their head was his (Mr. Brougham's) Honourable Friend the Member for Bramber.—(Continued laughter.)—They were men of strong religious feelings; but then it was a religion of their own.—(A laugh.)—The creed of the men was like that of the Quakers, and they, both husbands and wives, (and here only did the narrative speak truth) gave all their revenues to the poor.—(Loud laughter.)—Of that party Mr. Pitt was one—his wife also belonged to it—(a laugh)—and it was by force only that the Anglican party was able to hold their situations in the State. The Opposition was wholly destitute of talent, influence, weight, or information—(a laugh)—and Mr. Fox, its head, was, from age and infirmity, unequal to exertion.—(Laughter.)—How would the House be surprized, on being informed, that the author of that book was no other than that very person who had been so ably eulogized by the Rt. Hon. Gentleman—neither more nor less than that very Chateaubriand was the narrator, from whose work he had selected those passages.—(Loud and continued laughter.)—It had been said that the Duke of Wellington had been the fittest person to negociate with Spain. He (Mr. Brougham) felt that the Noble Duke had been a proper person: but his objection was, that the Duke had been improperly employed. It was with pain that he perceived what the Duke had done in this negociation. The Spaniards were under the highest obligation to him—no person had done so much for Spain—no person could have done more. Good God! only think of the counsel which had been given. A message had been sent by the Duke to one of his old companions in arms, recommending a submission to Ferdinand, to arm him with fresh powers, and to enable him to do as he had done before, to requite with a dungeon or exile the men who had restored him to the Throne. The Learned Gent. then said, with respect to what had been said of French Councils, the only symptom of steadiness in French Councils that he had observed, was a steady, obdurate, consistent, vigorous determination never to listen to England—always joining the Allies, and opposed to us. Throughout the whole of these Papers was exhibited a consistent, uniform system of dupery: first was the cordon sanitaire, that acme of dupery, collected at the foot of the Pyrenees. There was another part of this system in France having uniformly concealed from us all they were doing. And the third part of the system was, that throughout, whilst the French Government were taking rapidly succeeding strides towards the consummation of war, they were daily covering up their real motives and objects by concomitant assurances to our Ministers that peace was what they wanted, and all they meant. The Hon. and Learned Gentleman then argued that Ministers were wrong, inasmuch as they had never called upon France to account for her Army of Observation, which had distributed money to corrupt some of the Spaniards.

The Lord Mayor spoke in favour of the Amendment.

Mr. Macdonald replied. There was but one expression in the Amendment in which he could not concur—it was the word "earnest," as applied to endeavours of Ministers. If it meant merely that Ministers were themselves earnest in their endeavours, he did not quarrel with it, and, if therefore the House had no objection, he would withdraw the motion and allow the Amendment to stand as an original motion.

Mr. Secretary Canning said, that after three nights of constant, unremitting lectures, he must beg to decline the offer. He would endeavour to profit by the lesson they had taught him, and would not now be of too accommodating a disposition.

The House divided on the Amendment, when there appeared—For the Amendment, 372—For the original motion, 20—Majority in favour of Ministers, 352—Tellers for the Ayes, in favour of the Amendment, Mr. S. Wortley and Mr. Lushington; for the Noes, in favour of the original motion, Mr. Hume and Lord A. Hamilton.—Adjourned at half-past five o'clock in the morning, to Friday.

MILES and EDWARDS are now introducing, for Drawing-Rooms and Beds, the most splendid India striped Chintzes ever produced in this country, and at prices which cannot fail meeting the approbation of all purchasers: likewise the novel and highly approved article in Spanish damasks, exclusively their own manufacture, and which is infinitely superior to the different imitations of damasks advertised by other houses. Their stock of Swiss chintzes, tabberets, &c. is the most superb and extensive ever manufactured; and the great reputation they have acquired, by selling every article at such an amazing reduction in the prices, they are determined if possible to increase by strictly adhering to the same system. Miles and Edwards have no other Establishment than the one No. 134, Oxford-street, between Holles-street, and Old Cavendish-street.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Our numerous correspondents must excuse us this week.
For Price of Stocks see last page.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL DRURY-LANE.—Monday, Othello—Tuesday, The Cabinet—Wednesday, The Hypocrite—Thursday, Venice Preserved—Friday, The Play of Riches—Saturday, The Travellers.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.—Monday, Macbeth—Tuesday, Comedy of Errors—Wednesday, Much Ado about Nothing—Thursday, A New Opera, called Clari; or, the Maid of Milan.—The Vision of the Sun every evening.

ROYAL GARDENS, VAUXHALL.—This celebrated Place of Amusement WILL OPEN on MONDAY, the 12th inst. and the Proprietors will have the honour of addressing the Public in the daily papers of Tuesday, on the commencement of their second Season.—3d May, 1823.

JOHN BULL.

LONDON, MAY 4.

WE rejoice to hear that HIS MAJESTY's health is so very much improved that enquiries at the Palace have ceased.

Orders have been received for laying down the moorings for the Royal Yacht, at Cowes, Southampton, and Spithead, which have been joyously hailed by the inhabitants of the neighbouring coasts as indicative of HIS MAJESTY's intention of visiting those places in the course of the summer. The newspapers say, that HIS MAJESTY will confine his aquatic excursions to smooth water.

A report appears in the CHRONICLE of yesterday, which it says it has heard, of a conversation said to have passed between HIS MAJESTY and VISCOMTE MARCELLUS at the Levee. We know the statement to be UTTERLY FALSE; but we cannot conceive how a paper which did not know whether HIS MAJESTY sat or stood during the Levee should affect to repeat a conversation which took place upon the occasion.

ALAS, the poor WHIGS! What a miserable hodge-podge have they made of it this Session! In vain have peace and plenty spread themselves over the land, and furnished them with pathetic appeals in favour of agricultural distress! In vain have the Roman Catholics of Ireland done all that was necessary on their part to dislocate the fabric of Protestant ascendancy, which their liberal advocates assured them was tottering to its fall, and would receive its last blow from their exertions! In vain has the Marcellus, the fair hope of Whig tutelage, LORD JOHN RUSSELL, undergone three full months hard Scotch discipline to collect all that had been uttered for the last ten years on the glorious topic of Reform! Nothing would do—not only have they been baffled—not only defeated—but with such a degree of ignominy and degradation, that with the common feelings of our nature we cannot but feel—aye, honestly and deeply—for the few individuals of character and respectability, who still suffer themselves to be dragged at the wheels of "A MUD CART," in which the putrid materials of JACOBINISM are made to stink under the very nostrils of the Constitution.

We are never very much disposed to give the WHIGS of our days much credit for sincerity—and if we did, their unblushing effrontery in belying their own principles whenever it suits their purpose or convenience, would effectually put it out of our power to do so; but we are ready to make an exception in favour of their professions respecting a REFORM IN PARLIAMENT! That men should hate, detest, and abhor those who Session after Session evince their contempt of them, and who night after night uphold them to the country by their votes of censure—for such in fact they are—as unprincipled partisans who have no single view beyond the narrow limits of faction—nor a scruple of conscience to interpose between the Constitution, and their insatiate and needy appetence for power, is too natural a consequence upon minds habitually selfish and sectarian, to excite a moment's wonder.

That they cordially wish for REFORM IN SUCH A HOUSE, therefore, we can readily believe; and if they can persuade the good credulous people of this country, that instead of being the guardians of our constituted rights, in opposing the ambitious encroachments of the most desperate faction that ever yet aimed at their overthrow—THIS REPRESENTATIVE BODY of the PROPERTY, PRINCIPLE, and TRUE INTERESTS of the PEOPLE of Great Britain, is a MASS of CORRUPTION, engendered and nourished for the mere wanton purpose of oppressing and tyrannizing over them—they may effect their purpose au pied de la lettre upon the political and law maxim laid down by that pre-eminent publicist, HENRY BROUGHAM, that, "reckless of consequences to the Constitution itself," the interests of a client may be prosecuted to their utmost limits!

One only hope remains to the country—namely, the proverbial consequences of a man—and it is equally applicable to the gregarious machine called a party—who is HIS OWN LAWYER; which, to say the truth, was never more clearly illustrated than in the prodigious waste of lungs and paper incurred by the pleadings of the very gentlemen in question, in setting forth their own claims and pretensions to public favour!

Thus stood the Whig "Prices" up to Monday evening last, when their BULLS—(JOHN was not among them)—boasted of "the rise" about to take place, and the "rod in pickle" with which they were about to lash "those gentlemen"—meaning, no doubt, by way of ironical periphrasis—the Ministers! We speak what we know, and what we ourselves have heard!—Hey, MR. ——!

One night was not sufficient to expend even a third part of the ammunition in store. Too often had a coup de main failed—the citadel was to be attacked by regular advances;—the SAINTS were first devoutly invoked, and their "mock representative," half assured of their success, half blessed the enterprize, and piously condemned Ministers for not using the classical and energetic language of his Learned Friend MR. BROUGHAM—of which he had recently afforded so splendid a specimen—instead of the old diplomatic forms, which, in his opinion, were not sufficiently firm or authoritative!—Then came the sappers and miners, the HOBHOUSES, and BURDETTS, and FOLKSTONES, each turning a complaisant eye upon the Saint, to observe which way it was looking at the moment, and how far their vice was likely to follow in the same direction! —The "forlorn hope" was led in person by a gay young —, who was pretty well acquainted with the interior of the garrison, having passed his entire youth within its entrenchments, and been well fed and clothed from its stores; but he was repulsed with considerable loss by a gallant Yorkshireman, single-handed—and there was no rallying the troops—a retreat was sounded, and a fresh attack deferred to the following night—but with no better success!—A single arm was again destined to frustrate their hopes, and send them back howling to their camp!

Like all discomfited men, they became superstitious, and like desperate insurers in the "little go's," fancied that a charm lay under the mystic number of three. Here success and victory were pledged to the drooping phalanx—and the "WELLINGTON" of WHIGGERY—he who—as he boasts—had brought a much more splendid edifice about the ears of those who were bound to uphold it—vowed to devote himself to the completion of the enterprize—and vowed upon—yes, "upon his CONSCIENCE!" that he desired nothing more than that the cause should stand or fall upon the fulfilment or non-performance of his pledge or promise!!!—Poor man! his forfeiture was signed by his own deserters!—and as he was hurled back upon the flying squadrons, he howled forth his submission, and after the third and most signal disgrace agreed to withdraw from the field!—But this was not permitted—he and the only remnant of his scattered force, "some score, or thereabouts," were compelled to pass under the YOKE, which others more nimble and adroit escaped only by fairly taking to their heels. Even the medical staff, in its flight, had not a "STINKPOT" left to throw at their pursuers!

The poor WHIGS will say—and naturally enough—this may be "sport to you, but death to us," as the frogs observed to the frisky gambols of OTHER BULLS—but it is for the good of US ALL—and so we "cannot choose but laugh."

As to the matter of fact of the debate, which by Whig ingenuity was thus spread over three long and tedious nights, it might, we humbly conceive, have been comprised in half a column of our own best and largest type. Every body on every side seemed to agree that the French were great blockheads for going to war with Spain—few were the shades of difference with respect to the policy of our own neutrality, for it would have been difficult then to have afforded the French the exclusive credit of being the only fools in Europe—and even the WHIGS, who have been preaching up war in the pot-houses and club-houses to all who would attend to them—and have sent forth one of their "great cap'ains" to give effect to it—did not venture to speak out, in plain terms—when the WHOLE COUNTRY was to form a jury upon them! In the point of fact, therefore, without pretending to the accurate powers of JEDEDIAH BUXTON, or even the American phenomenon—we may affirm that millions of words—thousands of what are called arguments—tens of thousands of fiery epithets—to say nothing of gesture, lungs, the exhaustion of oxygen, and the loss of sleep—at least in bed—have been sacrificed to ascertain whether Ministers do or do not merit IMPEACHMENT for having omitted to take certain strong epithets—unquestionably useful upon particular occasions, by way of expletive—and a certain energy of language, from the vocabulary and note-book of MESSRS. BROUGHAM, BENNET, HUME, HOBHOUSE and Co.

Upon this, and this only, (and we refer our readers to our only means of information—the printed reports) we do affirm did the debate turn; and as we do not suppose there is sufficient tenderness entertained towards either the feelings or persons of Administration to warrant the supposition that any thing has been kept back, in this wordy warfare, which could possibly wound, or irritate, or injure them, we have only to say, that if men arraigned before the tribunal of public opinion were ever entitled to a triumphant verdict in their favour, it is upon the present occasion, where even an apology for the few names which appear in the list of the minority is offered by the organ of the WHIGS, who, in the most humble terms, assigns as a reason, that ALMOST THE WHOLE OF THE OPPOSITION VOTED WITH MINISTERS! Because WHY, think you, gentle reader? Because the WHIGS WISHED MINISTERS to have an UNANIMOUS VOTE IN THEIR FAVOUR!!! If ever impudence—even WHIG IMPUDENCE, exceeded this, we have not been fortunate enough to have picked up the instance; but we may venture to prognosticate that posterity (should it ever reach them) will be disposed to rank it among the other veritable affirmations of the pre-eminent chronicler of truth, the Holland House Journal!

One gleam, however, breaks through this tissue of falsehood and sophistry. Even the CHRONICLE cannot garble the most splendid, argumentative, and galling speech to Whig policy, ever uttered within the walls of the House, by MR. CANNING. Here the question is exhausted and scattered to the winds; and the defence of Ministerial policy is no less cleared from even a blot or speck, than that of the WHIGS from every shade or shadow of a plea founded on common sense or common honesty.

We say common honesty, Because every thing uttered by the WHIGS, upon the whole question of our late Continental policy, is in direct and undisguised hostility to their GENERAL PROFESSIONS; and because this bouleversement of principle is as undisguisedly adopted to give currency to the tenets of Jacobinism, under the plea of advocating the cause of freedom; by adopting the arguments which were legitimately applied to check the usurpation of the Government of Spain by a CROWNED JACOBIN to a people in a state of revolution, who hold their Sovereign in chains, and have followed, step by step, as far as they have yet gone, the regular process of their dark archetypes, the Jacobins of France!

But we have talked too much upon a question which may fairly be supposed to have been talked out during three such long and tedious nights; and we shall only add, that if MR. CANNING had not been roused into that mighty strain of eloquence which exposed and dispersed the whole HUMBUG—with the exception of the HUMBUG which followed, of Lawyer BROUGHAM's pledge to answer him, and for which his bottleholders had been holding him back—one single sentence, no less perfect in illustration than pithy in substance, would have been sufficient, by way of answer, to all the bellowing diatribes of his accusers!—"It was equally true," (he said) "in politics, as in mechanics, that, that which executed the greatest purpose with the least power was to be preferred!"

The country will decide, whether those who so eagerly condemn this principle—the very test, in private as well as public life, of true courage and dignity—would have been likely to do honour to their country, by substituting, in the place of a manly, firm, and gentlemanly tone, a sort of diplomatic language, which should address a foreign Minister, as "a Brummagem pamphleteer;"—or, by stigmatizing a Sovereign, because we differ with him on certain points of policy, "as the "dupe of vile and sordid wretches." Be it remembered—this was the language of triumphant JACOBINISM; and we all know how language may be applied to affect PRINCIPLES.

But—let us for a moment suppose that MR. CANNING, having been disposed—and well he might have been, from the specimens afforded him—to refer, not only to the recorded opinions of a Noble Lord, (which we shall notice in another place, in order to place WHIG PRINCIPLE and CONSISTENCY on its proper base)—not only to arguments to refute all that the WHIGS have been saying upon the present question—but had gone a step further, and quoted some notable instances of WHIG DIPLOMACY, during their short-lived and ominous controul of public affairs!—Leaving Sweden—and the Continental Powers out of the question—their sueing too for peace at the feet of BUONAPARTE—and their contemptuous neglect and ignorance of all that could tend to preserve the balance of Europe—he need only have simply referred to one single instance, in which the effects of BULLYING and IMBECILITY would have been found more strongly illustrated than perhaps in any one instance ever recorded to the [illegible] and discredit of our Councils and our arms—One rendered [illegible] eminently conspicuous, from the shameful predicament in [illegible] placed one of our bravest and most distinguished commanders—the temporary shade it threw over the laurels won by a NELSON, a ST. VINCENT, and a DUNCAN—he need only have pronounced the word—DARDANELLES!!!

IN the preceding article, we have endeavoured to express our feelings upon the general question of the conduct of Government with regard to Spain and France. We now proceed to a detail of facts with respect to the conduct of the debate, especially to the conduct of the DIVISION on Wednesday night.

We have received several sharpish, almost angry letters in consequence of having made some remarks upon the Patriot minority in the House of Commons; and we are not surprised: for if our correspondents be to be credited—at least from their rank and station, we conclude they be—half the number of those who divided with MR. PLUNKETT a staunch Protestants. This, to be sure, may have been considered an excellent way to dispose of an Irish question; but we were weak enough to imagine that a division of the honourable House had necessarily some relation to the debate which preceded it. We find that, in the innocence of our nature, we have been deceived, and therefore, lest we should fall into another error, we have made it our particular business to inform ourselves of the facts relative to the utter defeat of the Whigs and Radicals upon MR. MACDONALD's important motion of censure against ministers.

MR. MACDONALD, encouraged by a select party of the oppositionists, determined to make an experimental attack upon the government, upon the plan of my LORD ELLENBOROUGH; and, not the least abashed or disconcerted by the signal defeat of that amiable and noble Lord, in another place, produced, in a speech of infinite labour and adequate length, that motion to which we have already alluded.

Of the debate, too, we have spoken. The debate ensued—continued—continued, and was adjourned. A second debate took place, continued, continued, and was adjourned. A third debate took place, continued, and continued till half-past five o'clock in the morning, and concluded with the DIVISION which we are about to treat.

It was part of the settled plan of attack, that BROUGHAM should not speak till MR. CANNING had spoken; and that BROUGHAM pledged himself to answer, refute, and annihilate pieces all that that Right Hon. Gentleman might happen to say.

Every body must perceive the justice and propriety of this course. The government were accused of misconduct, to the ten thousand other crimes and misdemeanors. Their defence was in the hands of MR. CANNING. Would it not be proper, fair, honourable, and equitable, that the whole mass of charge should have been submitted to the house before the defence began?—one would think so; and so would the opposition of thirty years ago have thought: but no—MR. CANNING was to defend the Government against the assaults of three consecutive nights, and then his principal accuser was to reply to him—to plead in aggravation—to refute, and cut to pieces all he had said.

MR. MACDONALD had the final right to reply, nobody can doubt—nobody would have wished to deny him that right; but MR. MACDONALD, although good for a speech, was not sufficiently strong for an answer to Mr. Canning, and therefore the prime mover of the accusation, the concealed head of the whole affair, reserved himself in the hopes of battering down the last defence of the enemy, in order that MR. MACDONALD might march over the ruins without danger or difficulty.

MR. CANNING did speak. We have already expressed our opinion of his speech—the world rings with it. MR. BROUGHAM did reply,—and a more incoherent, rambling, inconsequential oration, never sounded within the chapel walls. So far from defeating MR. CANNING, he studiously avoided the points he had touched; and with respect to his noble friend, my LORD GREY, he either forgot him altogether, or despaired of making out any thing like a case, to heal the wounds his Lordship had received from the powerful and overweening attack of the Right Hon. Secretary for Foreign Affairs.

BROUGHAM's speech settled the business:—many Whigs had left the House even before he began to speak. CALCRAFT, SIR M. W. RIDLEY, Pascoe GRENFELL, all the betterment of the set, had given the thing up as hopeless, in an early stage of the business; but when BROUGHAM had "said his say," and his friends found out that—that was all! a sudden panic came upon them, and MR. MACDONALD finding, that after the accouchement of the mountain, and the production of MR. BROUGHAM's "ridiculus mus" nothing was to be done, replied—by begging to be allowed to WITHDRAW HIS MOTION!

"No, no," says MR. CANNING, "you have been reading me lectures upon CONCILIATION for the last three nights, and I have benefited by the lesson. You shall not withdraw your motion."

Then it was that terror came upon the party; they resolved not to divide, knowing full well what an exposure a division would make of their weakness; in the hope of concealing which they adopted the retreating system, and the whole faction, headed by GEORGE TIERNEY, rose to leave the House, abdicated their places, and proceeded towards the door; a shout of triumph from the Ministerial side of the House hailed this manœuvre, such a shout as has seldom been heard to peal within those walls. It struck upon the ears of those who were gliding out like a death knell—the effect was most curious—it paralyzed them—they halted in their march—stared upon each other—staggered about bewildered: and after a doubt, returned to the places which they had left, and which were occupied then by others: they bestowed themselves as they most conveniently could, and resolved to sit quiet spectators of their own defeat, and by preserving silence provoke no division which would tell tales, but let the motion be lost NEM DIS; and there, good easy souls, they hoped would have been an "end on't."

No such thing; the question on MR. MACDONALD's motion was put by the Speaker; and NOT ONE INDIVIDUAL—no, reader, not even MR. MACDONALD himself could be found to vote for it.

The amendment, bestowing the highest praises upon the Ministry was then put, and appeared to be carried much to the satisfaction of the Whig "Hole and Corner" party, who shunned the light of day, when some inconsiderate or perhaps conscientious Whiggamore cried out NO—a cry of "the Noes have it" was raised, and a DIVISION FORCED.

Will it be believed, when the events of this night are recorded to after ages, that rather than stand upon the ground they had taken up, rather than shew the world the real strength of their party, those men who for three nights consecutively had been loading the government with invective, grossness, and scurrility: will it be believed, we say, that these very men, these high-minded, bold, generous, lofty-toned Whigs actually voted the thanks, the praises, and the congratulations of the country at the end of a debate to the very Ministers whom, in the beginning of it, they had IMPEACHED!

Was there ever such a scene exhibited to the British public? Was there ever such a sacrifice made by men? The trick of mingling with the conquerors to hide a defeat may be an allowable ruse de guerre; but that men who have been telling us, night after night, of the imbecility, of the wickedness, of the unworthiness, of the folly, of an administration, should vote almost unanimously in their favour—does seem so far beyond all human calculation of Whig conduct, that, unless we had seen MR. CANNING squeezing with BURDETT, MR. PEEL with BROUGHAM, MR. ROBINSON with TIERNEY, MR. TWISS with DENMAN, MR. MARTIN, of Galway, with HOBHOUSE—all crowding eager to vote the same way, in the same lobby, (which was too small to hold them), we could not have credited the facts which we have stated.

It is true, as we have already said, that most of the respectable Whigs had given up the cause as hopeless, after BROUGHAM'S speech; but it is equally true, that amongst the crowd of oppositionists supporters of MR. MACDONALD'S motion, there were some persons honest and fair enough to keep their ground—they were but ten in number: whether the whole of this little knot intentionally made part of the minority we know not, but we think it an act of justice to MR. HUME and CAPTAIN MABERLEY (no great favourites of ours it is true) to state, that both these gentlemen disdained the mean subterfuge adopted by the majority of their party, and remained to the last opposing the motion of thanks to Ministers. We state this, because in such a complete rout of party, it is due to men, who appear to act upon principle, not to confound them with those, who for the sake of concealing their hopeless unpopularity, speak one way, and vote another.

We repeat that such a scene never was acted in the same theatre before, and if any thing could have added to the effect it produced, it was the march homewards through the streets of the defeated performers. It was a fine bright sun-shiney morning, the peaceful inhabitants were moving through the streets, and the Whigs, beaten, broken, mortified, and annihilated, exhibited in their countenances the most hideous expression of their feelings. We could not describe MR. MACDONALD'S appearance, if we would; TIERNEY himself in distress at six o'clock in a spring morning, was well worth looking at; but to depict the HOBHOUSES, and the PALMERS, and the LAMBTONS, and the BROUGHAMS, bursting into daylight, under all the circumstances, would require greater artists than we are.—FUSELI is the only man who could do justice to the subject.

ADVERTISEMENT EXTRAORDINARY.

R. T. WILSON, mob-leader to her late MAJESTY, begs to return his grateful thanks to the inhabitants of Southwark and its vicinity, for the patronage he has received; and respectfully informs them, that circumstances have compelled him to relinquish his extensive patriot manufacture in England, an opportunity offering in the GENERAL LINE on the Continent.

R. T. W., in taking leave of his customers, feeling that his return at a future period is uncertain, begs to recommend to their notice and favour, his former assistant JOHN GEORGE LAMBTON, who will undertake their jobs on the shortest notice, and the most reasonable terms.

R. T. W. begs, also, to solicit their favours for his successor in the coal trade—J. G. L. having been for some time concerned in that line.

Present price—best Wallsends, 51*s.* per chaldron; Houghton Main, 49*s.* ditto.

COKE, BIRCH, WOOD, and BROOM, as cheap as usual, at the same place.

THE EARL GREY is a clever man, and a wise man, and as amiable in private life as he is distinguished in public—his Lordship is, moreover, consistent, and consistency is a political virtue of the brightest water.

Last week his Lordship was pleased to advocate the necessity of our taking a decided part in favour of Spain—the power of his eloquence was turned against Ministers for suffering any thing to interfere with a chivalrous feeling for the Spaniards.

The last time his Lordship was pleased to deliver his sentiments upon the interference of England in favour of Spain, BUONAPARTE was invading that country, and Ministers felt the necessity of supporting the Spaniards—Pray, gentle reader, hear his Lordship upon that occasion!—

"I cannot concede to the sentiments of the Noble Marquis (WELLESLEY)," says my LORD GREY, "the inference which his declarations assumed, that, in order to warrant this country to embark in a military co-operation with Spain, nothing more was necessary than to show that her cause was just. In my mind, my Lords, in passing judgment upon such a policy, it was not enough that the attack of France upon the Spanish nation was unprincipled, perfidious, and cruel; that the resistance of Spain was dictated by every motive honourable to human nature; that it made every English heart burn with a holy zeal to lend its assistance against the oppressor. There were other considerations of a less brilliant and enthusiastic, but not less necessary and commanding nature, which should have preceded the determination of putting to hazard the most valuable interests of the country. It is not with nations as with individuals. Those heroic virtues, which shed a lustre upon individual man, must in their application to the conduct of nations be chastened by reflections of a more cautious and calculating cast. Nations cannot afford to be chivalrous and romantic. Before they engage in any enterprize which is to be supported by the exertions and the energies of the people, it is the duty of the Government so see, first, that there exist the means of rendering them effectual; secondly, that there is a sufficient policy to warrant the application of those means; and lastly, that there are grounds of probability to induce a hope of success. Before we embarked an army, with the view of assisting the war in Spain, we should have felt the necessity of ascertaining whether there was a Government in Spain capable of affording such efficient support to the dispositions of the people, and to our efforts, for their assistance, as was likely to bring the contest to a successful termination. It was incumbent upon us to be informed whether there existed resources sufficient to supply a British army with those necessary provisions, without which no military operation could have been expected to prove successful. We should have duly considered whether we were not liable to be left without the required support, by being treated as principals in the war: and whether, in fact, Spain herself was not destitute of those means without which no war can be carried on. I ALLUDE IT AS MATTER OF CHARGE AGAINST HIS MAJESTY'S MINISTERS, that they have indulged feelings, which, however honourable when considered abstractedly, ought NEVER TO BE GRATIFIED AT THE EXPENCE OF A NATION'S MOST VALUABLE INTERESTS—and that in YIELDING TO THE INFLUENCE OF SUCH FEELINGS THEY HAVE RASHLY EMBARKED IN EXPEDITIONS the most fatal and disastrous, and from which it was impossible to ANTICIPATE or EFFECT ANY advantageous result to the country."

We say nothing upon this passage so happily quoted by MR. CANNING in his admirable speech of Wednesday, but leave our readers to decide in their own minds whether it be more valuable, as shewing the consistency of the Noble Lord, when proving, when compared with the events which have occurred since the commencement of the Peninsular war, his Lordship's stupendous powers of prognostication.

ALARMING OCCURRENCE.

THE West end of the town was thrown into an unusual degree of alarm on Thursday, by the report that a dreadful fire had broken out in Pall-Mall, near St. James's Palace. A large body of smoke was seen issuing from a part of the neighbourhood, where such a thing had not, for many years, been seen before; and the inhabitants were judiciously preparing to effect a retreat for themselves and their baggage, when it was luckily found out that His Royal Highness the PRINCE OF SAXE COBOURG was about to have a dinner on that day—a circumstance at once so unusual and surprising, as never to have entered into the heads of the surrounding neighbours, as the cause of the alarming symptoms which were so dreadfully evident.

The MORNING POST gives a most edifying description of this "rare" feast, which, according to the phraseology of that paper, appears to have been a masquerade instead of a dinner. The POST announces, that amongst the distinguished "characters" were the EARL and COUNTESS OF LIVERPOOL, LORD SIDMOUTH, the Vice-Chancellor, SIR ROBERT GARDINER, BARONESS SPAETH, and BARONESS HANSIEM, &c. We suppose the POST puts "characters" for "persons"—a trifle in itself, to be sure, but which throws an air of absurdity over the whole affair to those who enter into such jokes as we do.

The plateau (which our country readers may not know occupies the space which in less delicate society is filled with dishes) was of—"white marble," a judicious and economical substitute for the gaudy and expensive metals of which such articles, in extravagant establishments, are usually constructed. The taste of the ornaments may be conceived by the fact, that "Figures of the Graces held up a large basket of——REAL "FLOWERS!!! while at either end was a smaller basket, "supported by——HERCULES!"

The liberality which could have adorned at this season of the year the classical designs of the artist with the living gifts of FLORA, deserves all the praise which it cannot fail to obtain.

The POST informs us that His Royal Highness has added two new silver candlesticks to his stock of plate, made to imitate pine-apples surrounded by acorns!—and that some new tabbinet window curtains have been put up in the dining-parlour; it also states that there are two new or molu lamps in the hall—but this appears at present to want confirmation.

The dinner was extremely dull—not particularly good in itself, and the most joyous moment of the day was that in which the "distinguished characters" betook themselves to their respective homes.

It is supposed a similar event is not likely to occur for a considerable time to come.

By the merest chance in the world we yesterday saw a criticism upon the Third Number of the LIBERAL, in a periodical work called the LITERARY REGISTER, which attracted our notice to the publication of that new effort of the demoralizing junta. The Reviewer describes it as the most stupid of all stupid things, and quotes the following portion of a poem contained in it, called the "Blues." We extract his extract and remarks together:—

"In the article in question, the BLUES, a party, are supposed to have been at a lecture—the language and conduct of the early part of the poem is equally admirable with that which we are about to quote—the party return from this lecture to luncheon, which variety, and which luncheon, as exhibiting good taste, knowledge of good society, a display of good feeling, and good English, we select as a choice morceau, well worthy the pen whence it flowed—

'Enter Lady Bluebottle, Miss Lilac, Lady Bluemount, Mr. Botherby, Inkel, Tracy, Miss Mazarine, and others, with Scamp, the Lecturer, &c. &c.

'Lady Bluebottle. Ah! Sir Richard, good morning; I've brought you some friends.

'Sir Richard bows, and afterwards aside.

'If friends, they're the first.

'Lady Bluebottle. But the luncheon attends.

'I pray ye be seated, sans ceremonie.

'Mr. Scamp, you're fatigued; take your chair, there, next me.

[They all sit.

'Sir Richard aside.

'If he does, his fatigue is to come.

'Lady Bluebottle. Mr. Tracy—

'Lady Bluemount—Miss Lilac—be pleased, pray, to place ye;

'And you, Mr. Botherby—

'Botherby. Oh, my dear lady,

'I obey.

'Lady Bluebottle. Mr. Inkel, I ought to upbraid ye;!

'You were not at the lecture.

'Inkel. Excuse me, I was:

'But the heat forced me out in the best part—alas!

'And when——

'Lady Bluebottle. To be sure it was broiling; but then

'You have lost such a lecture!

'Botherby. The best of the ten.

'Tracy. How can you know that? There are two more.

'Botherby. Because

'I defy him to beat this day's wondrous applause.

'The very walls shook.

'Inkel. Oh, if that be the test,

'I allow our friend Scamp has this day done his best.

'Miss Lilac, permit me to help you?—a wing?

'Miss Lilac. No more, Sir, I thank you. Who lectures next Spring?

'Botherby. Dick Dunder.

'Inkel. That is, if he lives.

'Miss Lilac. And why not?

'Inkel. No reason whatever, save that he's a sot.

'Lady Bluemount? a glass of Madeira? !!

'Lady Bluemount. With pleasure!" &c. &c.

* * * * * * *

'Sir Richard. But this place——

'Inkel. Is perhaps like friend Scamp's,

'A lecturer's.

'Lady Bluebottle. Excuse me—'tis one in "the Stamps:"

'He is made a Collector.

'Tracy. Collector!

'Sir Richard. How?

'Miss Lilac. What?

'Inkel. I shall think of him oft when I buy a new hat; !

'There his works will appear——

'Lady Bluemount. Sir, they reach to the Ganges.

'Inkel. I shan't go so far—I can have them at *Grange's.

'Lady Bluebottle. Oh, fie!

'Miss Lilac. And for shame!

'Lady Bluemount. You're too bad.

'Botherby. Very good!

'Lady Bluemount. How good?

'Lady Bluebottle. He means nought—'tis his phrase.

'Lady Bluemount. He grows rude.

'Lady Bluebottle. He means nothing; ne'er ask him.

'Lady Bluemount. Pray, Sir', did you mean

'What you say?

'Inkel. Never mind if he did." &c. &c.

To this succeeds one of the silliest, vainest, and stupidest pieces of prose which we ever remember to have seen printed—it is merely a narrative of MR. HAZLITT'S first acquaintance with MR. COLERIDGE. The reviewer says—

"The minor Silly Billy—we mean BILLY HAZLITT—contributes to the present number of Messrs. HUNT, BYRON, HUNT and Co.'s magazine, an article called 'MY (BILLY HAZLITT'S) First Acquaintance with Poets!'

"The vast importance of the subject to society in general, to whom this said BILLY is as entirely unknown as his own maid-servant, of course justifies the occupation of three-and-twenty pages of a five-shilling book. Some people may think it too much money; but we will extract one of BILLY'S touches at sublimity, which is worth the 'tottle of the whole,' as the Doctor says.

"It is an 'inspired description' of MR. COLERIDGE, the poet. We first have him preaching a sermon, in which 'poetry and philosophy met together, truth and genius embraced.' At the time of his preaching, BILLY thought MR. COLERIDGE had a strange wildness in his aspect, and 'thought him pitted with the small pox.'—p. 27. There's a thing to know! that when BILLY HAZLITT first saw MR. COLERIDGE preaching in an Unitarian chapel, he thought he was pitted with the small pox!

"On the Tuesday following, COLERIDGE called upon BILLY'S father; and here follows the 'inspired description' of that extremely mild and amiable gentleman. The impious and blasphemous allusion to the SAVIOUR, towards the conclusion, we leave standing, in order to shew how the fools labour systematically in their detestable avocation of reducing and lowering the respect and devotion which Christians should feel towards the most sublime and exalted objects.

"His complexion was at that time clear, and even bright—

'As are the children of yon azure sheen.'

His forehead was broad and high, light as if built of ivory, with large projecting eyebrows, and his eyes rolling beneath them like a sea with darkened lustre. 'A certain tender bloom his face o'erspread,' a purple tinge, as we see it in the pale thoughtful complexions of the Spanish portrait painters, MURILLO and VELASQUEZ. His mouth was gross, voluptuous, open, eloquent; his chin good-humoured and round; but his nose, the rudder of the face, the index of the will, was small, feeble, nothing—like what he has done. It might seem that the genius of his face as from a height surveyed and projected him (with sufficient capacity and huge aspiration) into the world unknown of thought and imagination, with nothing to support or guide his veering purpose, as if COLUMBUS had launched his adventurous course for the New World in a scallop, without oars or compass. So at least I comment on it after the event. COLERIDGE in his person was rather above the common size, inclining to the corpulent, or, like LORD HAMLET, "somewhat fat and pursy." His hair (now, alas! grey) was then black and glossy as the raven's, and fell in smooth masses over his forehead. This long pendulous hair is peculiar to enthusiasts, to those whose minds tend heavenward; and is traditionally inseparable (though of a different colour) from the pictures of Christ. It ought to belong, as a character, to all who preach Christ crucified, and COLERIDGE was at that time one of those!"

"We will not trust ourselves to characterise this comparison of our blessed Lord with a "fat and pursy" Unitarian ranter, but we will trust ourselves to ask why MR. BILLY HAZLITT calls the "nose the rudder of the face?"

"It may be necessary to inform BILLY, whose nautical experience, perhaps, is bounded by the shores of Chelsea Reach or Limehouse Hole, that the rudder of a vessel is uniformly in the stern; and, as usually a man in this world 'follows his nose,' and his nose does not follow him, it consequently follows, that his beautiful imagery has the misfortune of not being well founded. If he had called BOBBETT'S nose a cut-water, we should have understood the allusion; but calling COLERIDGE'S nose a rudder, seems more than ordinarily silly on the part of this MR. HAZLITT.

"It will be observed that poor COLERIDGE'S eyes—and we are really sorry to be obliged to lug in his name, but it is impossible to avoid it—'were like the sea.' If HAZLITT'S figure were correct, au pied de la lettre, before COLERIDGE could attempt to steer he must put his nose into his own eye, which, as MR. HAZLITT obligingly tells us, the nose 'was small, feeble, nothing,' it would seem particularly difficult for him to do.

"What does MR. HAZLITT mean by COLERIDGE'S nose being feeble?—What does he mean by its being nothing?—Does he mean to say that COLERIDGE has no nose—no rudder—no cut water? We believe he does. The apology for nose which the poet offers to view, 'is the index of his will'—a kind of codicil to his face; but then, in order to recompense him for this button of a nose, the 'genius of the face surveyed him and projected him (with sufficient capacity and huge aspiration) into the world unknown of thought and imagination,'" &c. &c.

The critic, in this Register, then goes on thus:—

"We shall add one more passage from this article, because it gives a remarkably good idea of the nature, the value, and the results of learned conversations between the parties mentioned:—

"'Returning that same evening, I got into a metaphysical argument with Wordsworth, while COLERIDGE was explaining the different notes of the nightingale to his sister, in which we neither of us succeeded in making ourselves perfectly clear and intelligible. THUS I PASSED THREE WEEKS at Nether Stowey and in the neighbourhood, generally devoting the afternoons to a delightful chat in an arbour made of bark by the poet's friend, Tom Poole, sitting under two fine elm trees, and listening to the bees humming round us, while we quaffed our flip.'

"Humming indeed: was there ever such a cockney! 'quaffing flip;'—what flip is we really cannot say, but we conclude it to be some pot-house stuff—in 'an arbour,' or 'harbour,' as the writer most probably would call it. Only conceive a man spending three weeks in drinking flip and hearing bees hum, and never succeeding in making himself clear or intelligible; for so he writes, and therefore we believe the story."

This critique is tolerably good as far as it goes. But why did this registering critic stop here? He is mistaken if he supposes the public are easily tired of ridicule when honestly and conscientiously applied. We shall take up the Liberal precisely where the man in the Literary Register laid it down, and we will shew that he does but half his duty, who exposes the folly only of such an abominable work.

It is true, that to succeed, even vice must be talented—a stupid libertine is a grovelling sot, and is doomed to the cockney attributes of tobacco-smoking, flip-drinking, and dirty linen—your accomplished man without principle, carries his head differently, and flies in higher circles round the world——as it is an acknowledged principle, that the great artist is he who hides his art, so the greatest and most successful libertine (or liberal if ye will,) is he, who best conceals his libertinism or liberality—by the insidious advances of affected humility and assumed sentiment, the most amiable, the most enlightened, the most generous woman upon earth may be betrayed; but from the bold presuming vulgarity of a professed sensualist, full of native timidity, she shrinks with disgust, and flies with all the indignation of offended dignity and virtue.

While the Italian faction, after the manner of the country which they have so judiciously chosen for their exile, could envelop their poison in rose-leaves, or, in plain English, convey their infernal designs in winning terms, graceful language, and flowing verse, their efforts might have been dangerous to the good order and well-being of society; but when their wit is ribaldry—their descriptions common-place—their blasphemy unveiled, and their ferocious malignity unqualified, there is little to be apprehended from their unholy and mercenary labours.

We are all for facts and proofs—we never advance that, which we cannot maintain—and, first, we will produce a passage which occurs at page 64:—

"Poor LORD CASTLEREAGH (for you will readily believe, that in the abstract, and setting aside his Six Acts and other tyrannous doings, the Liberal can pity even him) had had his buttered toast, I see, served up for breakfast the day he killed himself; a very unsuccessful help, I allow, towards a political catastrophe; but not the less likely for that. If wars have been made, and balances of power overturned, by a quarrel about a pair of gloves, or a tap of the fan from a king's mistress, it is little to expedite the death of a minister by teazing his hypochondres with fried butter!

"GOD BLESS YOU and all friends. If I write another word, my illegitimate signature will stare the postman in the face."

——GOD!—does the fellow who writes this paragraph talk of

* Grange is or was a famous pastry-cook and fruiterer in Piccadilly.

GOD!—We remember there was an appeal to the Divinity from one of these people upon the death of the atheist SHELLEY.

If one makes a remark upon the awful exit of that unhappy infatuated fool, the Italian faction are loud and bitter in their reproaches and abuse; and yet they can gloat, and gloat, and gloat again upon the end of LORD LONDONDERRY'S valuable life with joy and rapture. He was a man of honour, and the KING'S faithful servant—he was an affectionate husband, a kind master, a generous friend, and a good CHRISTIAN!—these of themselves are sufficiently strong incentives to abuse from this herd of denaturalized libellers—he was moreover a TORY!—still more, a MINISTER—therefore, every grossness, every heartless allusion to an infirmity from which it is by no means clear that some of these southern writers are themselves quite free, and which would be their best and only excuse for the conduct they pursue—is levelled at his name and heaped upon his memory.

Let these infatuated people remember the names of those who have fallen in a similar manner; let them look inwards—but we say no more: but only that such persons should venture, upon any occasion, an appeal to a providence which they affect to ridicule, or pray to a GOD whose existence it is part of their philosophy to disbelieve, is too absurd—too disgraceful.

Puerilities and absurdities are innumerable in the book we are talking of: we will instance a few for mere amusement.—A portrait of POPE (at page 104) is a fair specimen:—

"Pope was a true-born poet, modified
"By his infirm complexion and small sphere;
"But then so great in that, that he could hide
"Scores of us dwarfs in our savannahs here:
"His rooms were not mere rooms, but worlds beside
"Of spirits, who hung pearls in every ear;
"Wit, lover, friend, his lays were like his tawns;
"His face, as rich and sensitive as a fawn's."

A simile of a poet and a swan is equally good:—

"I like all poets who thus seem to swim
"Into their subject, proud of the sweet play:
"The lordly swan let out on his own river,
"Feels not the dimpling with a sweeter shiver."

Upon what river swans are "let out" like boats we really do not know; but this we know, that there is no such substantive in the English language as shiver; shiver (as the cockneis pronounce it) occurs several times in MRS. RUNDELL'S Cookery Book, but she erroneously spells it shewer, which would not jingle with river.

This difficulty reminds us forcibly of a tomb-stone in one of the churches at York, whereon is the following epitaph:—

"Here lies the body—more's the pity,
"Of JOHN AUGUSTUS WELLS NEWCITY."

Note.—His name was Newtown, but that would not rhyme.

If, however, we were to go on citing instances of such clumsiness we should fill our paper, and leave no room for MR. MACDONALD and his motion; therefore we will content ourselves with the following specimen, which we are inclined to believe far outdoes all the out-doings of all the scribblers, from the beginning of letters down to LEIGH HUNT himself:

"Dear MOLLY, who art the best comingest lass,
"With a foot not so big as the slipper of brass,
"Or as her's, whom a wag, strangely gifting WITH WRONG CLO'ES,
"Calls, most unbecomingly, Ninon de Long-clo'es!"

Now, really and seriously, we declare that we never saw—nor could conceive it possible that we ever should see, printed and published, at this period, such stuff as this. What are "clo'es?"—What are "wrong-clo'es?"—What is a girl "who art the best comingest lass?"—What does it mean?

Cheatery and imposition! and that's the truth on't. These fellows get a name—not of their own, but of one who hates and despises the creatures with whom he associates—and upon this name they are to get bread. A few lines from the Magnus Apollo of the gang justify the knavery, and the grubs in their own territory make up the measure.

The expedient cannot long succeed; for, independently of the visible demerits and worthlessness of the matter, to be purchased for five shillings, the author of the long poem says—

"But I digress—so here I stop: for FINIS
"CONONAT OPUS—'a good end's a crown.'"

The obtaining which, in the current coin of this country, is, in truth, the end of the labours of the LIBERAL; which, unless supported by the milch cow of the party, who has been pretty well drained in England, without suckling all MR. LEIGH HUNT'S children—and all MR. SHELLEY'S children, and some of its own children, and all the hangers-on of the Magazine into the bargain,—we prognosticate have arrived at that point—so much envied by the writer of the BOOK OF BEGINNINGS,—we mean their termination.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

FRIDAY.

A division took place on the Newport Pagnel Road Bill, on a clause exempting a village from the particular toll. Ayes, 15—Noes, 43.

MR. HUME divided on the second reading of the Borough Court of Requests Bill. Ayes, 114—Noes, 2.

Petitions were presented from Islington against the Sewers Rate; from Belfast, against the Union Duties; from butchers in Whitechapel praying for a protecting duty on Foreign tallow: from Essex against the Coal Duties coastways; from the same county complaining of agricultural distress; from the Coroners of Cork praying for higher remuneration; from Marlow against the Sale of Game Bill; and from the County Treasurers in Ireland for higher remuneration.

MR. SECRETARY CANNING presented at the Bar the answer of the King to the Address of this House, on the subject of the late negotiations.

MR. ELLIS asked the Right Hon. Gent. (Mr. Plunkett) if he would furnish a copy of the affidavit, or the name of the person making it, in which he charged the Sheriff of Dublin with packing the Jury.

MR. PLUNKETT said, he would give no such information, when the Hon. Bart. made his motion, he would give such a list of witnesses as he should think requisite to support his case.

In the course of conversation on a motion of MR. SPRING RICE for summoning two additional witnesses to the Bar on the 9th inst. to give evidence in the case of the Sheriff of Dublin, MR. PLUNKETT alluded to his filing the ex-officio information in question, and said that when Mr. Saurin was Attorney-General in October, 1811, a similar proceeding had taken place in the case of a person named Leech, charged with offering to bribe the Under Secretary of War; the Bills were ignored by the Grand Jury—Mr. Saurin, on the 18th of November, 1811, filed an ex-officio information against the same person, for the same offence, and repeating the three very counts he had quoted to the House, as having been ignored by the Grand Jury. He had an attested copy of the bill of indictment, and of the ex-officio information.

On the order of the day being read for enquiring into the conduct of the High Sheriff of Dublin,

SIR F. BURDETT proposed that Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays should be the days fixed for examination; but it was understood the days fixed should depend on the adjournment of each day's enquiry.

The witnesses were directed to withdraw from the House, with the exception of Mr. Sheriff Thorpe.

Mr. Benjamin Riley was examined at the Bar. The witness is Clerk of the Crown for Ireland; produced the lists of the Commission Grand Juries for the last four years, which consisted generally of Aldermen and Sheriffs' Peers; viz. those who had served the office or fined for it. The Corporation elections were triennial. The witness then stated the numbers serving on each Grand Jury: in 1819 six Common Councilmen were sworn on the Grand Jury—nine on the panel; in February, 1821, nine were sworn on the Grand Jury, and thirteen on the panel; in April, two sworn, and two on the panel. He then described the numbers on the subsequent panels (with the exception of Feb. 1820) up to January, 1823, when the Grand Jury was obtained out of the first twenty-six names called over. Witness did not recollect any such circumstance having previously occurred, nor the Common Council on the Commission Pannel to form a majority.

In answer to a question from MR. PLUNKETT, the witness said in August, 1821, the number consisted of 79, out of which number 40 were impannelled, and that was at the time the King visited Ireland. The pannel preceding January, 1823, consisted of 73 persons. Witness was not able to account for the pannel of Feb. 1820, being missing. He stated the pannel of Oct. 1822, to be the first he had received from Mr. Sheriff Thorpe—the next, that of 1823, was signed by both Sheriffs—was not aware that any irregular or unusual practice had been resorted to on the last occasion in Jan. 1823, except the small number of names, and that more than half were members of the Common Council; did not know whether any Roman Catholics were on that pannel; was not aware of the two Atkinsons having been summoned to support the late indictment. On being examined by MR. BROUGHAM, witness spoke to the indictments mentioned, as preferred in 1811, by Mr. Saurin, the then Attorney-General, on the same charges, judgment went against Leech for want of a plea. In the Grand Jury of the City of Dublin there were three kinds of Grand Juries: the Term Grand Jury, the Commission Grand Jury, and the Session Grand Jury.—The Term Grand Jury presented all monies for public works; the expenses of jails and penitentiaries, and other things. The Term Grand Jury and the Session Grand Jury presented money for the payment of public officers; such officers were appointed by the Corporation. Amongst other purposes to which the Money levied by the Term Grand Jury was applied, was the clothing and providing for the convicts. The Grand Jury appointed the contractors for those supplies. He did not know whether the supplies were made by open bidding, or by close contract. In the Grand Juries who tried the bills for the riot, he did not think that the members of the Corporation had generally the precedence on the pannels; because, in looking over the pannels, he found that there were sometimes none, or only one or two. In one instance, the numbers on the pannel were one hundred and seven, and although one hundred and five answered to their names, only two of them were members of the Corporation. The witness, after answering several more questions, not immediately in point, withdrew. The Chairman reported progress, and the farther inquiry was fixed for Monday.

The Freeholders' Bill was committed for the 12th inst.

On bringing up the Report of the Irish Constables' Bill, SIR G. HILL proposed to strike out the clause repecting the re-issuing of warrants.—For the clause, 14—Against it, 27. The Report was agreed to.

Leave was given to MR. WILLIAMS to bring in a Bill to render the affirmation of Quakers admissible in Criminal Cases.—Adjourned.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARIS.—The Cour Royale, in its solemn sitting of the 28th ult. has passed judgment on the Courier Francais. That Journal is suspended for fifteen days.

It was reported at Paris, on the 28th ult. that M. de Marciliac, an officer on the Duke of Angoulême's Staff, had quitted the headquarters, at Vittoria, for Seville, on an important mission to the Cortes.

The Moniteur of Sunday contains the following telegraphic despatch from Bayonne, dated the 26th instant:—"The Major-General to his Excellency the Minister of War: The Fort Santona is closely invested. Fort Laredo was taken on the 21st inst. which makes us masters of the roads. The 2d corps, which is marching against Saragossa, communicates with us by the right bank of the Ebro. Nothing new relative to the blockades of Pampeluna and St. Sebastian. According to letters from Madrid, the King arrived at Seville on the 10th instant."

Private letters from Paris state, "that in the night of the 20th ult. a party of horse (belonging to Mooney's army), led by an ignorant or perfidious guide, fell into an ambush laid by the Constitutionalists infantry. Five or six Chasseurs were killed or wounded. Amongst the latter the Captain of the party is mentioned as having received a wound on the head, and another officer, whose thigh was pierced through. The guide was shot. This is the only encounter there has been with the enemy."

ARMY OF THE PYRENEES, Vittoria, April 25.—Our troops have entered Tudela.—"GENERAL ORDER—The army is informed, that his Royal Highness the Commander-in-Chief, wishing to recompense the good services of the Mareschal de Camp, Viscount Vallin, commanding the Brigade of the van-guard of the first division of the first Corps d'Armé, has raised him to the rank of Lieutenant-General by an Ordonnance, dated the 19th of this month, the head-quarters Vittoria.

"By order of his Royal Highness,
(Signed) "Major-Gen. Count GUILLEMINOT."

By another general order, military distinctions are conferred by the Duke d'Angouleme, upon several officers, non-commissioned officers and privates, for their services.—The regiments of heavy cavalry who were cantoned between Pau and Bayonne, commenced their march for Spain on the 15th. Already, several regiments of Dragoons and those of the Cuirassiers of the Guard have passed through Bayonne. It is thought, that the Garde du Corps will leave Pau on the 25th for the same destination. Two hundred prisoners taken at Guettaria, passed on the 20th inst. through Pau, towards the interior.

Marshal Moncey summoned the Commander of Figueras to surrender on the 22d ult. but the Commander, San Miguel, replied in these terms:—"Senor General,—The fortress of St. Fernando de Figueras, which the nation has intrusted to my care, and to whose confidence I desire to make a return becoming a true Spaniard and a free man, shall not be surrendered, nor placed in the hands of the royal armies of France and Spain, as your Excellency requires in your letter of this date, delivered to me by Capt. Lasera, your aid-de-camp; and its garrison, penetrated with the same sentiments as myself are resolved to bury themselves under its ruins rather than fail in the observance of their honour and their oathe."

A private letter, dated Paris, Wednesday evening, says, "It is announced that the French troops have entered Saragossa."

On Sunday night the sentinel of the Royal Guard, posted on the Place du Carousel, near the Louvre gate, perceiving an individual looking near him, called out several times, "Who goes there?" and ordered him to retire. The man continued to approach, and the sentinel fired and killed him.—Gazette de France.

PERPIGNAN, APRIL 22.—There was yesterday a sedition in the camp of the Spaniards—there was an attempt to place some French officers in the corps of the Faith—but some leaders and soldiers, who were discontented at it, tried to excite the rest to share their indignation. They cried out that it was necessary to set out for Spain. The principal malcontents were immediately arrested; Cargol and two other officers have been carried to the prisons of Castillet.

MADRID, APRIL 22.—When the courier left, Madrid was quite tranquil. Count Abistal was redoubling his efforts to assemble his troops. The Garde du Corps, confined in the prisons of this capital, have contrived to make their escape. The last number of the Universel states, that the strength of the third army, under the orders of Abisbal, amounts to 15,410 men. This calculation is evidently exaggerated. The Supreme Junta of Spain, which accompanies his Royal Highness the Duke d'Angouleme, will cease its provisional functions at the commencement of next month, at which time the French troops will have arrived at Madrid.

Letters from Lima contain a full account of the dispute between that Government and the British merchants. When San Martin resigned the Directorship of Peru he embarked on board a Peruvian vessel, carrying with him the whole of the money in the Treasury, amounting to 45,000 dollars; the Government, in consequence, levied 400,000 dollars on the city. The merchants offered 15,000, but the Government insisted on the whole, of which 230,000 were demanded of the British merchants, who applied to Captain Prescott for protection. After some altercation the latter were excepted from the levy.

BAYONNE, APRIL 22.—Letters from Pampeluna say, that the Governor is resolved to defend himself to the last extremity. The place is very far from being yet closely invested, and some time will still elapse before the siege can be commenced. Heavy artillery must be brought before it, as well as before St. Sebastian. A soldier also who has just arrived from the corps before that place, says, that nothing is yet in train to attack it. Meantime the bivouac was detestable. The country is destitute of every thing, and the distributions of the rations not very regular. Only single individuals can approach the walls; any number, however small, is fired at. However, measures are arranging for the regular conveyance of supplies, but the expence is very great. Letters from Madrid to the 16th inst. speak of all that is doing in the interior to make a good defence. The army of Count Abisbal daily receives reinforcements, especially of cavalry. The news of the entrance of the French army into Spain had not caused any sensation at Madrid.

IRELAND.

The Irish Papers mention that the whole body of [illegible] number, who had been concerned in robbing the Belfast [illegible] winter, and more recently that on its road to or from Derry [illegible] which cases the guard was severely wounded, and in the [illegible] dead, have been taken prisoners and lodged in the gaol of Derry.

The following atrocities have been committed in the [illegible] extensive farm house at Kilcullane, in the county of Limerick, [illegible] set on fire on Thursday night last, and consumed, with the [illegible] pigs, poultry, and farming utensils.—A farm house in the [illegible] bourhood was attacked on Tuesday night by an armed party, [illegible] burned to the ground.—A house within half a mile of Shrule, [illegible] the property of J. C. Heffernan, Esq. was totally consumed.—The house of Mr. Leake's, near Kilfinane, and two out-houses, [illegible] burned down on Wednesday night.—On Sunday night last, [illegible] maliciously burnt on the lands of Glenshalrolde, near Ardfert, the property of W. R. Yielding, Esq.—On Tuesday night, at Kilcoran, [illegible] tails of several cows belonging to a tenant on the lands, were [illegible] by whiteboys.—Several young ash trees were cut down on Wednesday night, at Hollypark, the property of Richard Taylor, Esq.—On Wednesday morning, about six o'clock, the Shanagolden post-boy, bearing the mail from Limerick and Rathkeale, was stopped, [illegible] miles from Rathkeale, by two men, one of whom was armed with a sword, and robbed him of the mail. On Sunday night last, at Stoneville, about a mile from Rathkeale, was maliciously set on fire. Seven respectable farmers' houses near Kilcorrery, were visited by a large armed party of insurgents, and several sums of money, amounting to 111. 9s. 2d. extorted from them.—On the night of Monday, the house of Edmond Walsh, situate near Six-Mile-Water, county of Limerick, two horses and three cows, was set on fire and the entire consumed. Patrick and James Minnane, were apprehended on Monday last, at Rathkeale, charged with the murder of Major Hare, of Mount Hare, in the county of Limerick.—A threatening notice was served on a farmer near Newcastle, desiring him to quit, on pain of destruction to his property, and instant death to himself, if not obeyed at the appointed time.—An extensive range of offices, with a great quantity of flax, potatoes, threshed oats, and farming utensils, were totally consumed on the lands of Loughlea, near Buttevant, the property of Henry Sherlock, Esq. of Woodville.—A house lately occupied by Woodranger of Adam Newman, Esq. of Dromore, containing [illegible] furniture and a quantity of turf, was set fire to and destroyed on Sunday night, a house, the property of Sir R. Longville, Bart. on the lands of Sonlot, near Liscarrol, was set fire to and consumed, a dwelling, at Shandrum, near Charleville, the property of Mr. [illegible] was set on fire on Thursday night, and consumed.—Freeman's Monday.

In the Court of King's Bench, Dublin, on Friday, the 25th, the case of O'Hara v. O'Hara, which had been at trial during [illegible] four days.—The Jury found a verdict for the defendant: thereby confirming his title to the Crebilly Estate in the county of Antrim.

MISCELLANEOUS.

On Thursday another Council was held at the Foreign Office, [illegible] was attended by all the Cabinet Ministers.

On Sunday morning Mr. Kruse, a messenger, arrived in Downing-street with dispatches from Sir Wm. A'Court at Seville. The messenger came by Cadiz

On Thursday the Russian and Austrian Ambassadors had audiences of the King.

Monday, Sir Robert and Lady Wigram gave a grand entertainment in Connaught-place, in honour of the Christening of their infant daughter, to whom Her Royal Highness Princess Sophia Matilda was sponsor. The same etiquette was observed, as on the occasion when His Majesty condescended to stand sponsor to Master George Augustus Frederick Wigram.

Their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Gloucester and Princess Sophia have honoured the Kensington Lace Works and Manufactory, Kensington-square, with their presence, to view the machinery, the lace-works, and were graciously pleased to express their high gratification; since which a long list of the Nobility and Gentry are daily visiting and viewing the establishment, and the beautiful laces and patterns there on sale.

THE ARMY.—The 8th (or the King's Royal Irish) Regiment of Dragoons has arrived off Weymouth on board the Dorsetshire, Eastindiaman, from Bengal.—The detachments belonging to the undermentioned Regiments of Infantry, which embarked on board the Richard Transport, and sailed from Cowes on the 22 Nov. last, for the Mediterranean, viz. the 8th, 18th, 28th, 32d, 36th, 51st, 56th, 66th, 90th, have safely disembarked, and joined their respective regiments. The detachments belonging to the 64th and 75th Regiments of Foot, which also embarked at Cowes, on board the John Richard transport, for Gibraltar, have been safely disembarked at that station.

On Wednesday a Court of Directors was held at the India House when the Buckinghamshire was taken up and consigned for China.

A meeting of Merchants was held on Thursday at the London Tavern, to adopt measures against the fraudulent conduct of foreign merchants. Resolutions were agreed to for that purpose, and the merchants and bankers present signed a petition to Parliament.

Nollekins, the Sculptor, recently deceased, has left 50,000. to the present Majesty, 50,000l. to Dr. Kerrick, the public librarian at Cambridge, 50,000l. to that most excellent person, Francis Douce, Esq. who is also made residuary legatee, by which he will get 90,000. in addition. Nollekins died worth 300,000l.—Morn. Paper.

The King of the Netherlands, determined to preserve strict neutrality will not permit either French or Spanish cruisers to enter the ports of the Netherlands.

In the Court of King's Bench, on Thursday, Charles Tracy was sentenced to be imprisoned in Newgate for six calendar months, and fined 20l. for publishing a blasphemous libel called "Palmer's Principles of Nature."

Wm. Benbow, convicted of publishing an immoral and infidel book, was brought up for judgment. The Court asked the defendant would he undertake to suppress all the editions in circulation, or this it was answered for the defendant that he would give up all in his possession. It was then understood that he should be brought up for judgment next Thursday—in the meantime to do his best to suppress further publication.

On Thursday, Mr. Pearson applied for a criminal information against the Coroner of the County of Salop, whose name he omitted to say. The circumstances were these:—Some time ago, a quarrel took place between a man named Newton and his wife, in which the husband inflicted a wound upon the wife which terminated in her death. At the coroner's Inquest, at which the defendant presided, brought in a verdict —"Died by bleeding." Reports were afterwards in circulation that the woman had been murdered by her husband, in consequence of which the county Magistrates ordered him to be committed for trial. He was tried at the Assizes and found guilty. The ground of application was, that the Coroner had neglected to admit such evidence as ought to have been received. The question was, whether [illegible] was occasioned by a wound inflicted in the generative organ, she [illegible] then in a state of pregnancy. The Learned Counsel went on to describe the anatomical inspection of the surgeon who opened the body, and upon which the Coroner said, "I see this is a very slight case, and therefore I will dismiss one half of the Jury,"—and he accordingly did so.—The Court granted a rule nisi.

In the Insolvent Court, on Thursday, Thomas Griffin, a [illegible] dealer, was sentenced to be imprisoned twenty months within the walls of the prison, for fraud.—On Friday, George Scott, who had been discharged, was again brought up. The insolvent formerly possessed the lease of a house and garden at Hackney-wick, which he stated, in his schedule, to have given over to Mr. White'ey, as collateral security for 10l.; the creditors supposed, that by disclosing the lien they should possess themselves of the property; but it came out, that although the insolvent declared that he had made no assignment, he actually conveyed over all his interest in the premises the very day he was arrested. The judgment of the Court was, that the insolvent's discharge (procured on false evidence) be revoked and 2dly, that he be committed to custody for the space of two months, and be confined during that time within the walls of the New Debtors' Prison.

In the Arches Court, on Monday, the Judge pronounced that the suspension of Mr. Clarkson (which had taken place in the Prerogative Court of Canterbury) for the space of 12 months, from the exercise of his profession as a proctor, and which suspension had been confirmed by this Court according to the Judge's directions, should take place and endure in the Arches Court also for the same term.

In the case of Gill v. Gill, the Judge pronounced that Mr. Gill [illegible] not complied with the Court's injunction to take his wife home and treat her with conjugal affection. It therefore rejected the certificate brought in by Mr. Gill, pronounced him contumacious, and ordered his contempt to be signified.

On Wednesday next, the 7th inst. will be published, in 8vo.

FABLES for the HOLY ALLIANCE, RHYMES on the ROAD, &c. &c. By THOMAS BROWN, the Younger, Secretary of the Pococurante Society, and Author of the Fudge Family and the Two-penny Post-bag. Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

The FUDGE FAMILY in PARIS, 9th Edit. fc. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

COMYNS'S DIGEST, a NEW EDITION.

Just published, in 8 vols. royal 8vo. 10l. 10s. bds.

A DIGEST of the LAWS of ENGLAND. By the Right Honourable SIR JOHN COMYNS, Knight, late Lord Chief Baron of His Majesty's Court of Exchequer. The Fifth Edition, corrected, (with considerable Additions to the Text,) and continued from the original Edition to the present time; to which is added, a Digest of the Cases at Nisi Prius. By ANTHONY HAMMOND, ESQ. of the Inner Temple.—London: printed for Joseph Butterworth and Son; Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; T. Cadell; J. and J. Cuthell; J. Nunn; R. Pheney; J. Richardson; J. M. Richardson; W. T. Clarke; Cradock, and Joy; A. Maxwell; H. Butterworth; S. Brooke; Sweet; R. Stevens; H. T. Hodgson; W. Walker; G. and W. B. Whittaker; R. Saunders; C. Brown; G. Wilson; and Wilson and Sons, York.

Just published, price 6s.

THE EDINBURGH REVIEW and CRITICAL JOURNAL, No. 75.—Contents: Reflections on the State of Ireland, in the nineteenth Century, &c.—2. Moore's Loves of the Angels; Lord Byron's Heaven and Earth.—3. Grattan's Speeches.—4. Botany Bay.—5. Cobbett's Cottage Economy.—6. An inquiry into the Principles of Beauty in Grecian Architecture, &c. by the Earl of Aberdeen.—7. Church Establishments.—8. Negro Slavery.—9. Virginius, a Tragedy, by James Sheridan Knowles: The Bride's Tragedy, by Thomas Lovell Beddoes.—10. East and West India Sugar.—11. Nomination of Scottish Juries.—12. Duty on Slates and Stone carried Coastwise.—13. Spain.—Note on Dr. Phillpotts.—Printed for A. Constable and Co. Edinburgh; and Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, in 8vo. price 11s. bound,

P. VIRGILII MARONIS OPERA. Interpretatione et Notis illustravit Carolus Ruæus, Soc. Jesu. jussu Christianissimi Regis, ad usum serenissimi Delphini. Juxta Editionem novissimam Parisiensem. Hoc Editioni accessit Index accuratissimus. ante editis longe locupletior. Accessit Jasper Clerii Metrica Virgiliana. Studio et opera JOANNIS CAREY, LL.D. in Usum philotum Juventutis comparata.—Londini: Impensis C. et J. Rivington; J. Cuthell; J. Scatcherd; Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, et Brown; T. Payne; J. Richardson; J. M. Richardson; E. Williams; Harding et Sec; W. Gilmer; J. Mawman; Baldwin, Cradock, et Joy; Sherwood, Jones, et Co.; G. et W. B. Whittaker; T. Hamilton; J. Robinson; Simpkin et Marshall; et G. et W. B. Whittaker: T. Hamilton; J. Robinson; Simpkin et Marshall; et Whittaker et Fil. Ebonacl. Of whom may be had the following Delphin Classics: Cornelius Nepos, 6s. 6d. bd.—Sallustius, 6s. bd.—Ovidii Epistolæ, 8s. bd.—Ovidii Metamorphoses, 10s. 6d. bd.—Cæsar, 12s. bd.—Ciceronis Orationes Selectæ 10s. 6d. bd.—Terentius, 10s. bd.—Horatius, 12s. bd.—Juvenalis et Persius, 9s. bd.—Justinus, 8s. bd.—Phædrus, 4s. 6d. bd.

BRITISH NOVELISTS.

Just published, a new Edition, in 50 vols. royal 18mo. uniform with the British Essayists, 10l. 10s. bds.

THE BRITISH NOVELISTS; with an Essay, and Prefaces, Biographical and Critical. By MRS. BARBAULD.

This collection includes the most esteemed works of Richardson, Fielding, Smollet, De Foe, Goldsmith, Horace Walpole, Hawkesworth, Johnson, Graves, Moore, Mackenzie, Miss Burney, Mrs. Radcliffe, Mrs. Inchbald, Mrs. Charlotte Smith, Mrs. Clara Reeve, Mrs. Brooke, Miss Edgeworth, &c.

London: printed for C. and J. Rivington; W. Lowndes; J. Scatcherd; J. Nunn; J. Cuthell; Jeffery and Son; Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; T. Wilkie; T. Cadell; J. and W. T. Clark; Otridge and Rackham; Harding and Co.; S. Bagster; J. Murray; J. Booker; Kingsbury and Co.; J. Richardson; J. M. Richardson; R. Scholey; J. Mawman; R. H. Evans; A. K. Newman and Co.; J. Carpenter; J. Gilbert; J. Wingar; Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; T. Hodgson; J. Bohn; J. Ebers; Sherwood, Jones, and Co.; G. and W. B. Whittaker; J. Sechell; Whitmore and Fenn; R. Hunter; G. Cowie and Co.; R. Saunders; T. and J. Allman; T. Boone; C. Brown; J. Brumby; E. Edwards; T. Hamilton; G. Mackie; W. Mason; Ogle, Duncan, and Co.; Rodwell and Martin; Hurst, Robinson, and Co.; Wilson and Sons, York; and Sterling and Slade, Edinburgh. Of whom may be had the following Novels, separately:—

1. SIR CHARLES GRANDISON. 7 vols. 11. 15s. 6d. CECILIA, by Miss Burney. 5 vols. 15s. SIMPLE STORY, by Mrs. Inchbald, 4s. NATURE and ART, by Mrs. Inchbald, 4s. CLARISSA HARLOWE, 8 vols. 1l. 16s. FEMALE QUIXOTE, 2 vols. 7s. HUMPHREY CLINKER, 2 vols. 7s.

MOGG'S EDITION OF PATERSON'S ROADS.

Dedicated, by Permission, to his Majesty, just published, in 8vo. with an entirely new set of Maps, price 16. boards, or half bound, with parchment back, 16s. 6d. the 16th Edition of PATERSON'S ROADS of ENGLAND and WALES and the SOUTHERN PART of SCOTLAND. By EDWARD MOGG.

This Edition is arranged upon a plan entirely novel, and the whole remodelled, augmented, and improved by the addition of numerous new Roads and new admeasurements; with original and correct accounts of Noblemen and Gentlemen's Seats, Antiquities, remarkable Scenery, Curiosities, and other remarkable objects throughout the kingdom.

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; J. M. Richardson; Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; J. Booker; Rodwell and Martin; G. and W. B. Whittaker; J. L. Cox; J. Sharpe; and E. Mogg.

BOMBAY TRANSACTIONS. Volume III.

Just published, in 4to. with numerous Plates, price 3l. 13s. 6d. bds. Vol. III. of TRANSACTIONS of the LITERARY SOCIETY of BOMBAY; containing Papers and Essays, by Major Vans Kennedy; Capt. J. Stewart; Capt. W. H. Sykes; Major-General Sir J. Malcolm; T. Coats, Esq.; J. Babington, Esq.; T. Marshall, Esq.; Dr. Taylor of Bombay; Capt. G. T. Sadlier; W. Erskine, Esq. With a Biographical Sketch of Captain Macmurdo, by James Hadaway, Esq. and a List of the Members.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

BOMBAY LITERARY TRANSACTIONS. Vol. II. with Engravings, price 3l. 3s. boards.

SOUTHEY'S LIFE OF WESLEY.

Just published, in 2 vols. 8vo. with Portraits, price 1l. 8s. bds. the 2d Edit. of THE LIFE of WESLEY, and the RISE and PROGRESS of METHODISM. By ROBERT SOUTHEY, ESQ.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown. Of whom may be had, by the same Author, POETICAL WORKS, 14 vols. fc. 8vo. 5l. 15s. 6d. bds.

HISTORY of BRAZIL, 3 vols. 4to. with a Map, price 7l. 15s. bds.

A NEW VOLUME OF "BODY AND SOUL."

Just published, in small 8vo. price 9s. bds.

BODY AND SOUL. Vol. Second.—Contents:—Filial Affection.—The Suicide—Philosophy and Religion—The Recovery—The Executive—Evangelism—Grace—Matrimony—The Penitent Woman—The Rector's Death. Also a new Edition of Vol. First, price 9s bds.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

Just published, in 3 vols. 12mo. price 1l. 1s. bds.

THE KING of the PEAK. A Romance. By the Author of "the Cavalier," &c.

"The truth is, I have a Plot for you."—Cutter of Coleman Street.

Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had, by the same Author,

The CAVALIER, a Romance. In 3 vols. 12mo. price 1l. 1s. bds.

MARMION, or Le Poursuivant D'Amour. A Romance. In 3 vols. 12mo. price 1l. 1s. bds.

Just published, in 8vo. with a Portrait, price 12s. bds. the 2d Edit. of MEMOIRS of the late MRS. CATHERINE CAPPE. Written by HERSELF.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London, and Wilson and Sons, York.

"Mrs. Cappe was one of those characters who are the real ornaments of Society, and on whom its happiness and respectability greatly depend. It is impossible that the faithful delineation of an example like this can be useless; such candour and truth are manifested by the Author, such purity and elevation of character, such strong good sense, and such animating and benevolent views of human nature. The book abounds with incidents and anecdotes which would furnish ample materials for volumes of fiction."—Monthly Review, April, 1823.

WALKER'S GAZETTEER, BY CAPPER.

Just published, in 8vo. price 15s. bound. (with 14 Maps) a New Edition of THE UNIVERSAL GAZETTEER; being a concise Description, alphabetically arranged, of all the Nations, Kingdoms, States, Towns, Empires, Provinces, Cities, Oceans, Seas, Harbours, Rivers, Lakes, Canals, Mountains, Capes, &c. &c. in the known World: the Government, Manners, and Religion of the Inhabitants, with the Extent, Boundaries, and Natural Productions, Manufactures and Curiosities of the different Countries. Containing several Thousand Places not to be met with in any similar Gazetteer. By JOHN WALKER, ESQ. Revised, considerably enlarged, and improved, by B. P. CAPPER.—London: printed for C. and J. Rivington; J. Nunn; J. Scatcherd; Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; Harvey, and Darton; Harding, and W. J. and J. A. Arch; John Richardson; J. Mawman; T. Haynes and Son; A. K. Newman and Co; Sherwood, Jones, and Co.; Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; R. Scholey; G. Cowie and Co.; Ogle, Duncan, and Co.; G. and W. B. Whittaker; R. Saunders; G. Mackie; Wilson and Sons, York; and Stirling and Slade, Edinburgh. Of whom may be had,

WALKER'S UNIVERSAL ATLAS, for the Use of Schools: containing twenty-seven coloured Maps, price 12s.

Just published, in 8vo. price 12s. boards,

MEMOIRS of a CAPTIVITY among the INDIANS of NORTH AMERICA, from Childhood to the Age of Nineteen. With Anecdotes descriptive of their Manners and Customs, and some Account of the Soil, Climate, and Vegetable Productions of the Territory westward of the Mississippi. By JOHN D. HUNTER.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, & Brown, London.

"For Mr. Hunter, whom we have had the pleasure of meeting in company, it is unnecessary not to entertain a deep interest; and a history more calculated to attract the public has not, in our opinion, been given since De Foe made Alexander Selkirk his own, under the Fiction of Robinson Crusoe.—Lit. Gaz.

Just published, price 6s. No. VIII. of THE NEW EDINBURGH REVIEW. Contents:—1. Abstract of the Information laid before the House of Commons on the subject of the Slave Trade.—2. The Epistles of Paul, the Apostle, translated; with Notes, &c. tion.—4. Cuvier's Theory of the Earth; with Mineralogical Notes, &c. By Professor Jameson.—5. Memoir of the Operations of the Allied Armies under Prince Schwarzenberg and Marshal Blucher, in 1813 and 1814.—6. Isabella; a Novel. Spanish Ballads. Translated by J. G. Lockhart.—7. Nolan's Speech on the Poor landers.—11. Bowring's Specimens of the Russian Poets. Part the Second.—12. Ventaroli's Mechanics. Translated by D Creswell, M.A.—13. Dr. Barclay's Inquiry concerning Life and Organization.—14. Colonel Hodgson's Account of the Mosquito Territory.—15. Remarks on the Declaration of the Allied Powers from Verona. By an Englishman.—16. Elmes's Lectures on Architecture.—Postscript relative to the Foreign Contraband Slave Trade.—List of New Publications, &c.

Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London; and Waugh and Innes, Edinburgh.

Just published, in 2 vols. crown 8vo. price 20s. boards,

HERALDIC ANOMALIES; or, Rank Confusion in our Orders of Precedence. With Disquisitions, Moral, Philosophical, and Historical, on all the existing Orders of Society. By IT MATTERS NOT WHO.

Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci
Lectorem delectando pariterque monendo.—Horace.

Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave Maria-lane.

Just published, in 12mo. price 3s. bound,

COLLECTANEA LATINA; or, Easy Construing Lessons, from the best Latin Authors; for the use of the junior Classes in Grammar Schools, and of Persons who have become their own Instructors. By the Rev. W. ALLEN, M.A. late Head Master of the Grammar School, Bolton.—Second Edition, with Notes and other Improvements.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave Maria-lane; and T. Baker, 18, Finsbury-place.

On the 6th of May will be published, by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, in three volumes 12mo.

SEVENTY-SIX. By the Author of "Logan."

"Our country!—right or wrong."

"However successful an author may be, he will be a hypocrite or a fool if he pretend to feel any gratitude to the Public for their favour. He ought to remember that the obligation is much theirs as his; and that they would see him and his family perish, inch by inch, in starvation and wretchedness, before they would buy his book, unless they had their money's worth.—Vide Author's Preface.

BROTIER'S TACITUS.

Just published, in 4 vols. 8vo. price 2l. 16s. boards, a new Edition of CORNELII TACITI OPERA recognovit emendavit, supplementis explevit, notis dissertationibus, illustravit, GABRIEL BROTIER. Editio nova et auctior—curante et imprimente ABRAHAMO JOANNE VALPY, A.M. Collegii Pemb. Oxon. Nuper Socio.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave Maria-lane.

Just published, price 21s. boards,

VALPERGA; or, the Life and Adventures of CASTRUCCIO, PRINCE of LUCCA. By the Author of FRANKENSTEIN. In three volumes, 12mo.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave Maria-lane.

"Valperga is a work which only requires to be read, in order to be ardently admired; and we venture to prophecy that it will maintain its station upon the favourite shelf of every good library, when thousands of works of a similar description, that have had some popularity, shall have sunk into eternal oblivion. —Literary Chronicle, Feb. 22, 1823.

Just published, in 2 vols. 12mo. price 15s boards,

TALES of OLD MR. JEFFERSON, of GRAY'S INN. Collected by Young Mr. Jefferson, of Lyon's Inn. The First Series.

Licuit semperque licebit
Parcere personis, dicere de vitiis.

Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker Ave-Maria-lane.

Just published,

BLACKWOOD'S EDINBURGH MAGAZINE. No. LXXV. For April, 1823.

Contents: Remarks on Mr. Alison's Theory of Beauty, as explained by Mr. Jeffrey—II. The Proud Shepherd's Tragedy—III. Letter from a Yarrow Shepherd—IV. News from Paddy—V. Specimens of the Italian Art of Hoaxing No. 3. The Fourth Novel of the Second Supper—VI. Time's Whispering Gallery. No. 3. Maternal Tenderness. No. 4. Richard Plantagenet—VII. M'Queen on the Course and Termination of the River Niger—VIII. Letters from Italy. No 7—IX. A Professional Visit to Ali Pacha in the Autumn of 1809—X. Calcutta. Chap. 8. The Supreme Court. Chap. 9. The Exchange—XI. Davis's Chinese Novels—XII. The Age of Bronze—XIII. A Hint to the Gentlemen of the Daily and Hebdomadal Press—XIV. Pythagoras and his Beans—XV. A Visit to the Shakers—XVI. My Evening—XVII. Louis the Eighteenth's Account of his Escape—XVIII. Letter to the Editor from the Rev. H. Phillpotts, D.D. inclosing Remarks on Mr. Jeffrey's Note in No. LXXV. of the Edinburgh Review—XIX. Works preparing for Publication—XX. Monthly List of New Publications—XXI. Appointments, Promotions, &c.—XXII. Births, Marriages, and Deaths. Printed for Wm. Blackwood, Edinburgh, and T. Cadell, Strand, London.

Just published, in 12mo. price 5s.

DEFENCE of the USURY LAWS. With a Proposal to Reduce the Legal Rate of Interest to Four per Cent. By ROBERT HANNAY. Printed for Wm. Blackwood, Edinburgh, and T. Cadell, Strand, London.

Just published, in 1 vol. 12mo. price 5s.

THE AYRSHIRE LEGATEES; or, the Pringle Family. By the Author of "Annals of the Parish," "The Entail," &c. The Second Edition. To which is added, The Gathering of the West.—Printed for William Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, Strand, London.

☞ The Gathering of the West may be had separately, price 2s.

Lately published, by the same Author,

1. ANNALS of the PARISH. 2d Edit. 12mo. 8s.
2. SIR ANDREW WYLIE OF THAT ILK. 3 vols. 12mo. 2d Edit. 1l. 1s.
3. The PROVOST. 2d Edit. 12mo. 7s.
4. The STEAM BOAT. 12mo. 7s.
5. The ENTAIL: or, the Lairds of Grippy. 3 vols. 12mo. 1l. 15s.

Just published, in post 8vo. price 10s. 6d. the Second Edition of THE TRIALS of MARGARET LYNDSAY. By the Author of "Lights and Shadows of Scottish Life." Printed for Wm. Blackwood, Edinburgh; and T. Cadell, London. Of whom may be had,

The LIGHTS and SHADOWS of SCOTTISH LIFE. The Third Edition, post 8vo. 10s. 6d.

Just published, in 1 large vol. 8vo. with a Portrait of the Author, price 12s bds.

SERMONS. By the late Very Rev. WILLIAM PEARCE, D.D. F.R.S. Dean of Ely, Master of Jesus College, Cambridge, and formerly Master of the Temple.—Published by his Son, the Rev. Edward Seacold Pearce, M.A. Curate of St. Mary le-bone.—Printed for T. Cadell, in the Strand, and W. Blackwood, Edinburgh.

Just published, price 9s. in bds. a new Edition, being the 9th, carefully revised and corrected, of ROMAN ANTIQUITIES; or, an Account of the Manners and Customs of the Romans; designed chiefly to illustrate the Latin Classics, by explaining Words and Phrases from the Rites and Customs to which they refer. By the late ALEXANDER ADAM, LL.D. Rector of the High School at Edinburgh.—Printed for T. Cadell; C. and J. Rivington; Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; Lackington and Co.; W. Ginger; J. Mawman; J. Booker; Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; T. Tegg; and G. and W. B. Whittaker, London; J. Parker, at Oxford; Constable and Co; Manners and Miller; Bell and Bradfute; and J. Fairbairn, at Edinburgh. Of whom may also be had, by the same author,

1. A SUMMARY of GEOGRAPHY and HISTORY, both Ancient and Modern. Fifth Edition, with Maps, price 14s. in boards.
2. A CLASSICAL BIOGRAPHY. Second Edition, price 7s. boards.

GENUINE EDITIONS of HUME'S HISTORY of ENGLAND, Complete, and SMOLLETT'S CONTINUATION.

Just published, and sold either together or separate,

MR. HUME'S HISTORY of ENGLAND; from the Invasion of Julius Cæsar to the Revolution in 1688. With the Author's last Corrections and Improvements, and a short Account of his Life, written by himself. Handsomely printed, in eight volumes octavo, with a Portrait of the Author. Price 1l. 16s. boards.

2. DR. SMOLLETT'S CONTINUATION of the History to the Death of King George II. Handsomely printed, in five volumes octavo, with a Portrait of the Author. Price 1l. 15s. boards.

London: printed for T. Cadell; C. and J. Rivington; J. Cuthell; Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; J. Richardson; J. M. Richardson; J. Booker; J. Carpenter; Jeffery and Son; W. Baynes and Son; S. Bagster; J. and A. Arch; R. Scholey; Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy; W. Stewart; J. Bohn; Sherwood and Jones; T. Hamilton; Ogle and Co.; R. Saunders; Harding, Mavor, and Lepard; R. Hunter; G. and W. B. Whittaker; Simpkin and Marshall; W. and Lepard; R. Hunter; G. and W. B. Whittaker; Simpkin and Marshall; W. and Mason; Kingbury, Parbury, and Allen; J. Collingwood; T. Brown; Lloyd and Son; Black and Young; L. Relfe; J. Hearne; W. Pickering and J. Parker, Oxford. Of whom may also be had,

3. The HISTORY of ENGLAND, from the Accession of King George III. to the Conclusion of the Peace in the year 1783. By John Adolphus, F.S.A. Handsomely printed, in three volumes, octavo. Price 1l. 11s. 6d. in boards, or on royal paper, price 2l. 2s.

☞ These Three Works form a complete Series of History from the earliest accounts to the year 1783.

Just published, elegantly printed in three pocket volumes, with engravings from designs by Leslie, price 1l. 1s. in bds.

THE POETICAL WORKS of ROBERT BURNS, including the Pieces published in his correspondence and reliques; with his Songs and Fragments. To which is prefixed a Sketch of his Life.—Printed for T. Cadell, London; and A. Constable and Co.; Manners and Miller; Fairbairn, A. Black; W. Blackwood; W. and C. Tait; and J. Anderson, jun. Edinburgh. Of whom may also be had,

The WORKS of ROBERT BURNS. Eighth Edition; to which are now added, some further particulars of his Life, new Notes, illustrative of his Poems and Letters, and many other additions, by Gilbert Burns, in 4 vols. 8vo. with a Portrait. Price 1l. 10s. in bds.

DAMASK NAPKINS, 7s. 6d. per dozen, and a Twenty Thousand Pounds' Stock of rich Damask and Double Damask Table Linen, consisting of the richest and most superb patterns that can be produced, amongst which are some curious Silesian damask of ancient designs, having been purchased quite out of the ordinary way, will be sold at nearly one half their real value, and yet leave the proprietor a small profit; and as RILEY is determined to increase his extensive trade, he has procured to the public every possible advantage of this event. Rich damask napkins, 7s. 6d. per dozen; damask table cloths, yard and quarter long, 2s. 2d. each; do. yard and half long, 3s. 6d.; do. two yards long, 4s. 6d.; do. two yards and a half long, 5s. 6d.; do. double damask, 12s.; do. real German damask, 15s.; do. three yards long, 14s.; do. three yards and a half long, 16s. 6d.; do. 2½ yards long, 9s. 6d.; do. 3 yards and a half long, 25s. 6d.; do. five yards long, 21s.; do. six yards long, 35s.; large sizes equally cheap, all of the proper width, with damask napkins to match; five thousand pieces of linens, the strongest and best fabrics Ireland produces, from 1s. to 3s. per yard, those at 19d. 20d. and 2s. are curiously fine for gentlemen's wear; most Russia sheeting, 6s. 6d. per pair; real Russia do. 12s. 6d.; strong Lancashire sheeting, 9d. per yard; very stout ditto, 11d. and 12d.; superior sheetings, for families of distinction, from 20d. to 2s. 6d. per yard; real Russia sheeting, 2s. 9d. per yard, double width, which prevents the necessity of a seam; Irish sheeting, yard and quarter wide, 1s. 3d. per yard; fine do. 1s. 6d.; yard and half wide do. 2s. 4d. and 2s. 6d. per yard; real German hollands, yard and half wide, 3s. 6d. per yard (an article rarely to be met with, and sold at no other house lower than seven shillings per yard). Forty bales of India long cloth, containing twenty-seven yards, for 18s.; a beautiful article, in real Madras muslin, 25 yds for 20s; families going abroad, especially to hot climates, will find this article really worth their notice; Marseilles quilts, three yards square, 15s. each; counterpanes 5s. and large size do. 6s. 6d. each; Witney blankets in every size; and fine Welch flannels at very reduced prices: fine calicoes, 6d. per yard; robe dresses, 2s. 6d. each; ditto, two and three flounces, 6s. 6d. each. A matchless selection of Moravian worked dresses, combining the French style and elegance and duration, 2s. 6d. to six guineas each; these are positively worth four guineas; cambric handkerchiefs, with borders, 12s. per dozen, and fine French cambrics, ditto, 21s. per doz.: 2000 yards of rich gros de Naples, 3s. 6d. per yard; good sarsnet, French width, 2s. 9d. per yard; and every article in silk mercery equally cheap. No country orders executed without a remittance: but a per centage will be allowed on all purchases amounting to 20l. and upwards, at RILEY'S, 118, Oxford-street.

SIX HUNDRED BREAKFAST CLOTHS, 18d. each; four hundred dozen of damask napkins at 7s. a dozen, with the largest cheapest, and best stock, or Drapery in England, at HODGE and LOWMAN'S, Argyll House, Regent-street, to enumerate the prices of which would far exceed the limits of an advertisement, a few will be sufficient to shew the decided cheapness of all:—Rich dinner cloths, 2¼ long, 7s.; double damask, 9s.; 3 yds long, 2s. 9d.; strong sheets, 2s. per pair; fine do. 3s. 6d.; real Russia, 10s. 6d.; Russia sheeting, 5-8 a yard; real Russia, full 5-8ths wide, 11d. well worth 16d.; 73 pieces from 14d. to 2s. 2d. those at 15d. 16d. and 19d. are very stout and fine, equal to any other house at 2s.; a few pieces the full width, which requires no seam, 2s. 4d.; Irish sheeting, 5-fourths wide; 14d.; very fine, 16d. and 18d.; full 6 fourths do. 22d.; elegant Marseilles quilts, 3 yards square, 14s.; good large counterpanes, 6s. 6d.; furniture dimities, 6½d.; fine do. yard wide, 9d.; 17 pieces fine Celerain linens, the best Ireland ever produced, from 10d. a yard to 3s. 6d., those at 10d. and 12d. are very stout, at 16d. 18d. and 20d. fine, and from 2s. to 2s. 6d. beautifully fine, and well worth 3s. 9d.; about 350 pieces of long cloths for shirting, at 12s. 6d. the piece of 25 yards; real India do. 14s. 9d. with every other article connected with the trade, by the piece at the wholesale price. Seven boxes of French cambric handkerchiefs at 21s., 25s., 30s. to 50s. 6d. the dozen, finer ditto, 4 to the inch, 63s.; fine do. yard wide, 17s.; three

LATEST NEWS.

An express arrived from Paris with the intelligence that a telegraphic despatch reached Paris on the 2d inst. to this effect:—"The Vanguard of the 2d Corps entered Saragossa on the 25th. The Citadel of Jaca is in possession of the army of the King. The revolutionary Chief has been arrested; his troops offered their submission."

An article from the Head Quarters at Vittoria, dated the 26th ult. says:—"We have been in possession of Burgos since the 22d inst. The Duke of Reggio took up his quarters here upon the 23d, and pushed his advanced guard in the direction of Aranda and Palerma. Our troops are every where received with the liveliest transports of joy. General Molitor left Tudela on the 23d. in order to prosecute his movement on Saragossa. The head of the cavalry divisions arrived here to-day."

It is expected that the King will hold a Drawing Room on Thursday. The half-pay to Admirals, Captains, and their Attornies, will be made to morrow, Tuesday, and Wednesday; to Lieutenants, Chaplains, and their Attornies, on Thursday, Saturday, Monday (the 12th), Tuesday, and Wednesday following; and to Masters, Pursers, &c. on the 15th and 17th inst.

A Court of Alderman was held on Friday, when John Key, Esq. and John Crowder, Esq. the newly-elected Aldermen, were sworn in. Mr. Alderman Cox was appointed Receiver of the Orphan Dues on Wines.

At the Newmarket meeting, on Friday, the Newmarket Stakes were won by Mr. Rogers' ch. c. Nicolo.

On the morning of the 7th of April, 56 houses were burnt down in the city of Comorn, in Hungary.

In the Court of King's Bench, yesterday, a rule was granted to shew cause why a criminal information should not be filed against an individual at the instance of a solicitor named Wood, who had married a relation of the person against whom the application was made; a family quarrel had arisen between them; Mr. Wood received a letter in which his cousin designated him a dirty scoundrel, and that compliment not being noticed, he proceded to post him at Leicester as a coward.

In the Court of Common Pleas, yesterday, the Judges recognized the rule that no person attending as a witness was entitled to any remuneration for loss of time, except solicitors and medical men.

In the Insolvent Court, yesterday, John Roberts, (who had been opposed and remanded,) was again brought up; the Court was of opinion that at the time he represented himself to be worth 2,000l. he must have been insolvent, and therefore he was sentenced to be imprisoned within the walls for 18 months.

In the Consistory Court, yesterday, the Judge expressed his dissatisfaction at the conduct of two parties, each of whom appeared according to admonition, but neither of them defended or assisted by Counsel. The names of the cases were Hayworth v. Hayworth, and Winnington v. Winnington; the one for nullity of marriage, and the other for divorce by reason of adultery, and each suit promoted by the wife. Sir C. Robinson observed, that if Mr. Hayworth was, as he stated, unable to employ Counsel, he should appear in forma pauperis, which was a case provided for by the law. The inconveniences to which the Court was subjected, on being thus obliged without any discussion of the merits to pronounce a decision guided only by written representations, and perhaps raising points of law at the very outset, were immense. He trusted, that if the causes stood over till next Court day, a more regular course of proceeding would be adopted, and that whatever might be the ground of defence, which was not likely to be strengthened otherwise, would be carefully and distinctly pointed out.

ELEGANCE IN DRESS.—The most fashionable display of Leghorn and Fancy Straw Hats in the true Parisian style are at Vyse's, 30, Ludgate-street.

A PLAIN FACT.—Within the short period of three months three prizes of £20,000, one of £10,000, and 23 other capitals, have been sold by CARROLL, at his fortunate Offices, No. 19, Cornhill, and 25, Oxford-street. No. 553, a Prize of £20,000, and the only one yet drawn, was sold by Carroll in the present Lottery. The last grand day, and finish of the Lottery, will be Thursday next, when both the prizes of £20,000, and all the other capitals must be decided.

PIDDING'S Office, No. 1, Cornhill, has been decidedly the favorite with the Purchasers of whole Tickets, since two Capitals in last Contract were sold there in one day, and both in whole Tickets, (No. 4,936 and 12,694,) and these out of so small a number, that if one person had purchased all of them, he would have gained many Thousand Pounds beyond the original cost; this is some encouragement for those who are disposed to speculate for the Two Prizes of £20,000 and other Capitals which must all be decided Next Thursday, the 8th inst. and there is no reason to doubt but Pidding's Office will continue to maintain its pretensions to the title of the Lucky Corner.

PRICE OF STOCKS AT THE CLOSE, SATURDAY.

During the past week the scarcity of Stock has occasioned a material advance in the British Securities. Consols for the Account were doing at the opening as high as 78¾; and at the close they were 79.—Spanish Bonds have also advanced considerably, this being caused by a similar scarcity of Bonds and several large purchases which were effected yesterday. Upon the whole the Money Market has been brisk during the week, and although some failures took place in the Foreign Market, nothing serious resulted from them.

3 per Cent. Red. . . 78¾	India Bonds 36 38
3 per Cent. Consols 78⅝ ⅞ ⅝ 79	Exchequ. Bills, 2d 1000l. 15 16
3¼ per Cent. ditto . .	Ditto . . . . . 500l.
4 per Cent. . . . . 96¾ ⅞ ¾	Small . . . . .
New 4 per Cent. . . . 99¼ 56⅝	Con. for Acc. 78⅝ ¾ ⅝ 79
Long Annuities . . 20⅛

Letters from Paris quote the prices of French Stock as follow:—

FRENCH FUNDS, May 1.

5 per Ct. Con. 22 Sept. . 84-00	Bank Sh. Div. 1 July
Recon. Div. 22 Sept. . . .	Ex. Lond. 1mo. 25-65 3mo.

The Neapolitan 5 per Cents. Div. were at WHITE CHIP HATS and FANCY FLOWERS.—The new and fashionable House of ASKEW and Co. have received from their Manufactory, in Tuscany, a choice Selection of the above excellent Articles, which they beg leave to offer to the inspection of the Nobility and Gentry.—85, Oxford-street.

ELEGANT GLASSES, FURNITURE, &c.—The Nobility and Gentry are invited to inspect the Warerooms of Cooper and Son, 23, Bishopsgate Within, where is exhibited a large Assortment of new and second-hand Plate Glasses, admirably suited to every description of drawing or dining-rooms. The prices are just reduced 40 per cent. on plates measuring 100 inches by 72, and upwards; and on those of smaller dimensions the alteration will be found equally important. The extensive preference given to this Establishment is thankfully acknowledged by the Proprietors, who, in their endeavours to evince their gratitude, by manufacturing articles in a superior manner, at prices suitable to the times, hope to merit a continuance of public support. In the furniture department is comprised every new and elegant article of upholstery, cabinet, and chair work, regulated upon such a scale of economy as to demand and ensure the patronage of rank and fashion.

JAPANNED TIN and WROUGHT IRON DEED BOXES, strongly recommended to Solicitors, Bankers, Merchants, &c. as the only means of effectually preserving deeds and papers of importance from dust and vermin. A large assortment constantly on sale at Jackson's manufactory, No. 6, Fleet-street, six doors East of Temple Bar.—N.B. Those made of wrought iron are fire-proof.

A GREAT PERSONAGE has often remarked a Nobleman, about 50, in his suite what a fine head of hair he had of his own, and on inquiry, was informed that he had used, for years constantly, Prince's celebrated Russia Oil: that great Personage replied, she would have given millions if he had done the same; in short, there are various articles puffed in the newspapers for the hair, but being of no service to the hair; but Ladies and Gentlemen may rely on it, that Prince's celebrated Russia Oil, is so improved with an extra valuable ingredient, through which it has made the Russia Oil the greatest nourisher and preserver to the hair in the Universe, will make it grow thick and long, and prevent its falling off or ever turning grey, and is such a nourisher to the roots of the hair, that if it even has begun to turn grey, will restore it again to its natural colour, and is sure to clear the scurf, from infancy to old age, and when dressing with it, will always keep the Head and Hair clean and beautiful. Gentlemen who have lost their hair, and have the least sign of roots of hair remaining, by using regularly, for a few months, Prince's Improved Russia Oil with the extra valuable ingredient, will be sure to restore it, and produce a fine head of hair, which hundreds have experienced. Even Medical Gentlemen have published, in the Gazette of Health, that Prince's Russia Oil is superior to any oil for the hair; and will do, in cases of baldness and weak hair, what can possibly be done.

It is no wonder that Ladies and Gentlemen have complained of late of the Russia Oil not being of service to the hair, as they have found out that unprincipled persons have sold them counterfeits; therefore Ladies and Gentlemen ought to be particular and have it of a respectable person. Ask for Prince's Improved Russia Oil. The ounce bottle 5s. or a large bottle, containing five ounces for one pound, is a saving.—Sold by the sole Proprietor, A. Prince, No. 9, Poland-street, Oxford-street, near the Pantheon; and by Mr. Smyth, Perfumer to His Majesty, New Bond-street; and by most principal Perfumers and Medicine Venders.

PARTNERSHIP.—Just published, in 1 vol. royal 8vo. price 21s. boards,

A PRACTICAL TREATISE on the LAW of PARTNERSHIP. By NEIL GOW, Esq. of Lincoln's Inn, Barrister at Law.

Contents.—Chapter I. Of the Contract of Partnership.—Chapter II. Sec. 1. Of Acts by which one Partner may bind the Firm; one Partner binding the Firm by Deed; by a Release; by Simple Contract; by a Guarantee; by Deed; by a Release; by Bill or Note; by Simple Contract; by Sec. 3. Legal Remedies between Partners in Legal Proceedings; in Bankruptcy between Partners.—Chapter III. Legal Remedies. Sec. 1. Equitable Remedies between Partners. Sec. 2. Equitable Remedies for Partners against Strangers; Equitable Remedies for Strangers against Partners; Equitable Remedies against Partners at the Suit of Strangers.—Chapter IV. Sec. 1. Legal Remedies against Partners at the Suit of Partners against Partners. Sec. 2. Proceedings against Partners at the Suit of the Crown.—Chapter V. Sec. 1 The Causes of a Dissolution of a Partnership. Sec. 2. The Consequences of the Dissolution of a Partnership. Sec. 4. The Consequences of a Dissolution by Bankruptcy. Sec. 5. The Consequences of a Dissolution by Death.—Printed for Charles Hunter, Law Bookseller, 26, Bell-yard, Lincoln's Inn.

MEMOIRS OF A POET.—Just published, in 8vo. price 6s. 6d. bds.

POETICAL MEMOIRS—THE EXILE; a Tale. By JAMES BIRD, Author of The Vale of Slaugden; Machin, or the Discovery of Madeira; and of Como Duke of Tuscany, a Tragedy.—London: printed for Baldwin, Cradock, and Joy, Paternoster-row.

PHARMACOPŒIA LONDINENSIS, &c.

In a neatly printed pocket volume, price 7s.

PHARMACOPŒIA IMPERIALIS, sive Pharmacopœia Londinensis, Edinburgensis, et Dublinensis, collata; cum notis Anglicis, dedinensis, Edinburgensis, et Dublinensis, collata; cum notis Anglicis, de-compositionesque chemicus exponentibus.—Johannes Anderson, 49, West Smithfield.

"This little volume, which would at any time have been a valuable present to those who, from inclination or other motives, are anxious to become acquainted with Pharmacy, is particularly well timed at present, when the London Pharmacopœia is very difficult to be procured. We can confidently recommend it, as possessing great advantages."—London Medical and Physical Journal, January.

See also the London Medical Repository for this month.

NEW PUBLICATION.

THE ENGLISH CONSTITUTION PRODUCED and ILLUSTRATED. By JOHN CARTWRIGHT.

"No such thing as a Constitution exists in England. Can Mr. Burke produce the English Constitution."——PAINE.

Published by T. Cleary, No. 129, Chancery-lane (the 3d door from Fleet-street) where is sold this book only; attendance daily (Sundays excepted) from 10 to 4 o'clock.

IN SIX EASY LESSONS OF ONE HOUR EACH.—MR. BRADBURY, Private Tutor at Westminster School, solicits the attention of Ladies and Gentlemen to his unrivalled and infallible system of beautiful PENMANSHIP, which he pledges himself to teach persons of all ages to write with ease, elegance, and expedition, (whatever may be the deformity of their present writing) in six progressive Lessons. This system, as it equally promotes the attainment of a bold and masculine hand calculated for business, and of a light and graceful manuscript adapted to Ladies; also secures to the pupil the certainty of writing straight, without lines, with wonderful dispatch and accuracy, and, moreover, numerous recommendatory letters may be seen, and references given to persons of the first distinction, some of whom are upwards of 50 years of age. Private tuition at home. Ladies and Gentlemen attended at their own residences. A new and practical system of Short Hand, taught in a few lessons, so as to enable the writer to decipher what he has written with inconceivable ease.—Apply (or direct, post paid) at the Academy, 464, Strand, near Charing Cross.

ROYAL GEORGE STEAM YACHT.—PASSAGE FROM BRIGHTON TO DIEPPE.—The Public are most respectfully informed that the beautiful and very powerful new Steam Yacht the ROYAL GEORGE, 300 tons burden, coppered and copper fastened, completely rigged as a sailing ship, and fitted in a style of elegance combined with comfort that can hardly be equalled, will commence running on the above passage on SATURDAY NEXT, MAY 2.—The Proprietors, by this conveyance may rely on the strictest attention being paid to their comfort and accommodation in every respect.—Fares:—Cabin, 2 guineas; Deck, 27s. including all charges of shipping and landing luggage; 4 wheeled carriage, 4 guineas; 2 wheeled ditto, 2 guineas; horse, 3 guineas. Wines, liquors, and other refreshments to be had on board.—M. STENHOUSE, Agent.

EUROPEAN LIFE INSURANCE and ANNUITY COMPANY, No. 10, Chatham-place, Blackfriars.—Persons affecting Insurances with this Company, for the whole period of life, are immediately entitled to participate in whatever division of profit shall take place, which, with the reduced rate of Premium demanded, will enable all descriptions of persons to make a provision for their families on terms the most advantageous. Annuities have also been established by which the Premiums may be paid Quarterly, Half-Yearly, or Annually, at the option of the Insured. No charge is made for Entrance or for Policy, except the stamp. The Insured are permitted to go in steam, or other decked vessels, to and from any part of the united kingdom, and in time of peace to and from any part of the Continent, situated between the Elbe and Brest, without being required to pay additional Premium, or to procure a licence from the Directors. This Company continue to advance Money on Annuity, secured on Freehold, Copyhold, or long Leasehold Property, or Money in the Funds. JOHN CLARK, Managing Director.

PELICAN LIFE INSURANCE OFFICES, Lombard-street and Spring Gardens.

DIRECTORS.

The Right Honourable William Heygate, Lord Mayor, M.P.

Sir William Curtis, Bart. M.P.	Sir Charles Flower, Bart. Aldermans
Matthias Attwood, Esq. M.P.	John Coope, Esq.
William Cotton, Esq.	William Davis, Es
Hugh Hammersley, Esq.	John Hawes, Esq.
John Petty Muspratt, Esq.	Major Rohde, Esq.
William Samler, Esq.	George Shum Storey, Esq.
	William Walker, Esq.

The Company continue to effect Insurances on Lives at equitable Rates without Entrance Money, or any additional Premium for sea-risk in decked vessels to or from the British Isles, or to or from the opposite line of coast between the Texel and Havre de-Grace included—to grant and purchase Annuities under a special Act of Parliament—and also to purchase well-secured Reversions of considerable amount, and respectable parties, on liberal terms.—Agents are appointed in all the Cities and principal Towns in the United Kingdom.

THOMAS PARKE, Sec.

BONNET A LA JOLIE FEMME.—This Cap, so highly becoming, may be had in the Brussels fabric at DISON, WILLSON, and Co.'s, who likewise produce this Week a new Article for Ball Dress or Fancy Costume, analogous to the present Month. D. W. and Co. with deference remark, that in order to render these Novelties truly select, they make but a very limited number of each, therefore they recommend an early call. Another Mary Stuart Bonnet and Spenser are also ready.—Foreign and British Lace Warehouse, No. 237, Regent-street, facing the Argyll Rooms.

DRAWING ROOM.—R. MATHEW and SON (late of Oxford-street) respectfully inform the Nobility and Gentry they have now some of the best long white French kid gloves, fresh from the manufactory, at 30s. per doz.; extra long, with ribbons, 36s. and 42s. per dozen; also a variety of short gloves, French kid, 17s. 6d. per doz.; Limerick, 12s. per doz.; gentlemen's and children's of all kinds equally cheap; rich silk hose, from 4s. 6d. per pair; beautifully fine at 7s. to 8s. 6d.; some beautiful cotton hose; a quantity of French fans, flowers, handkerchiefs, &c.; a beautiful variety of new gauze and other ribbons; superior gassed bobbin nets, laces, veils, &c. and a variety of articles too numerous for insertion, on the lowest terms. for ready money. Superfine Hyderabad silk, low at any house in town.—No. 2, Hollis-street, Cavendish-square, near Oxford-street.—N.B. A variety of new and fashionable Millinery.

CHEAP and FASHIONABLE CABINET, CHAIR, COUCH, and SOFA MANUFACTORY.—Fifty different Patterns, and from twenty to thirty dozen of well-seasoned mahogany, and rosewood, stained rosewood, cottage, and bed-room chairs, of all colours, ready for inspection. Real rosewood chairs nearly as cheap as stained; card, sofa, and loo tables, and cabinets to match. A large assortment of mahogany patent dining tables of all sizes; sideboards, wardrobes, drawers, and all other articles of furniture, too numerous to mention. All manufactured on the premises, and warranted of the best quality, at ROBERT WALKINGTON'S, 214, High Holborn, opposite Southampton-street, Bloomsbury-square. All Goods sent free of expence within twelve miles of London.

SMOKY FIRE-PLACES REMEDIED.—W. and M. FEETHAM, No. 9, Ludgate-hill, and 296, Oxford-street, her leave to inform the Publick, that they undertake to remedy the above evil, and by long practice and attention to this important object, with experienced and careful workmen, they can effectually Remedy every description of Smoky Rooms, with little or no inconvenience to the family during the process. W. and M. F. beg the Public's attention to their Warm Air Stoves, with an increased draft, for halls, large rooms, &c. Likewise Warm Baths, on a convenient and approved plan, and their Attempt-rating Shower Bath, by the King's Patent.

FINISH OF THE LOTTERY NEXT THURSDAY.

HAZARD and CO. who sold the first Drawn Ticket, entitled to £5000, the last day of drawing, inform the Public, that all the Capital Prizes now in the Wheel (as under) must be drawn NEXT THURSDAY, May 8, and 16 of £200, &c. &c.—Hazard and Co. sold the First Drawn Ticket the last day of Drawing, No. 6,407, entitled to £5000: also in the last Lottery, 4,467, a Prize of £20,000; and in the last year's Lotteries, Three other Prizes of £20,000, four-street, end of Regent-street.

FARINACEOUS FOOD, (prepared from the finest Wheat) for Infants, and Persons with impaired Digestion; highly approved and recommended by the Faculty. Manufactured by James Hards, Dartford, Miller to his signed by James Hards.—Sold by Messrs. Butlers, Chemists, No. 4, Cheapside, and 229, Regent street, London; Waterloo place, Edinburgh; and Sackville-street, Dublin; Baker, Gale, and Co. Salisbury square; and by the principal Druggists in the United Kingdom, in packets 1s. and 2s. each.—☞ This preparation will be found preferable to Arrow Root, Biscuit Powder, &c. and will keep good in any climate

HERO and VICTORY MARGATE STEAM YACHTS.—The Proprietors of the original Margate Steam Yachts respectfully call to the public that the above much-admired Steam Vessels have undergone considerable alterations and improvements are fitted on the most approved principle for the ensuing season. The VICTORY, CAPT. [illegible] will commence her FIRST VOYAGE for MARGATE on SATURDAY, the 9th of MAY, at eight o'clock in the morning precisely, from the Tower Stairs, Custom House; return to London on Monday, proceed to Margate the same day, and return on Friday, which arrangement will continue to the end of the season. Fares:—Chief Cabin, 14s.; Fore Cabin, 12s.; Children under 12 years of age, half-price. Pier Duty included.—This Yacht has a State Cabin for the accommodation of small parties. Dinners and other refreshments to be had on board of a superior quality.—☞ No charge being made for the conveyance of Parcels, the proprietors will not be responsible in case of loss or damage.

The HERO will be ready in the course of this month, and the time of her starting will be notified in a future advertisement.—Tickets to be had for both vessels may be had on application to M. Z. Gibbs, at the Original Steam Packet Office, 62, Lower Thames-street, or of Mr. Abgrall, Margate Parade, Margate.

DESIREABLE RESIDENCE, Seven Miles from London, to be SOLD, by PRIVATE CONTRACT, a most desirable FREEHOLD PROPERTY, consisting of an excellent Family Mansion, in complete repair, with every possible convenience attached, and about 100 acres of meadow land, laid out in a Park-like manner. The gardens, plantations, timber, &c. are of the first superior. Excellent water.—For particulars, enquire of Robert Mylne, Esq. architect, Furnival's inn, if by letter, post-paid.

N.B. Immediate possession may be had, and the furniture, plate, and live stock may also be sold, if required.

SURREY INSTITUTION.—The extensive Library, Philosophical Instruments, Furniture, and Fittings up of that well known Literary Establishment.—By Mr. SAUNDERS, on the Premises, Blackfriars-road, on Monday, May 9, and 12 following days, Sundays excepted, at Half-past Ten o'clock precisely.

THE LIBRARY comprises Costly, Useful, General and Valuable Books in Biblical and Critical Divinity, an unusually large assemblage of Dictionaries, Classical and Grammatical, Memoirs, Journals, and Transactions of Philosophical Societies, Belles Lettres, Mathematics, Biography, Topography, Natural History, Bibliography, Arts and Sciences, Voyages and Travels, Atlases, Political Economy, Botany, Jurisprudence, with most of the best English and Foreign Periodical Publications in every branch of literature; the whole in the finest condition and appropriately bound.—Also, a valuable Collection of MISCELLANEOUS, SOPHICAL and CHEMICAL INSTRUMENTS; consisting of a 4-feet Orrery, Air Pump, Cylinder and Plate Electrical Machines, Mechanical, Galvanic, and Magnetical Instruments, with the various Apparatus belonging thereto, by the most celebrated Makers, Dollond, Adams, Cuff, Watkins, Hadley, Nairne, and Blunt, Globes, Library Tables, Chairs, Writing Desks, ranges of Book-shelves, &c. &c.—To be viewed three days preceding the Sale; Catalogues had on the Premises, and at the Office of Mr. Saunders, No. 39, Fleet-street, price 3s. 6d. each. Catalogues will be delivered Gratis to Proprietors, on application at the Office of Admission only.

The Property of the late Mr. and Mrs. Garrick.—By MESSRS. [illegible] their Spacious Rooms, Piazza, Covent-garden, on Tuesday, May 3, and following day, at 12, DRESDEN, Sevre, Oriental, and Chelsea China, and [illegible] Porcelain, service of Old Plate, valuable Jewels, Rings, Miniatures, Cameos, Intaglios, Organ, Ancient Screens, fine Clocks, Antique Chairs, &c. of the late David Garrick, removed from the Adelphi and Hampton Garrick, to be viewed two days prior.

Freehold House, near Cheapside; absolute Reversion at the death of a Lady aged 82; and Two Dwelling-house Shares, with Free Admissions.—By MESSRS. ROBINS, at the Mart, on Tuesday, 17th May, at 12, in lots,

FREEHOLD HOUSE, Little St. Thomas Apostle, on a Lease, which expires in four years, at only 10l. a year. Term to version to 1000l. on the death of a lady aged 82, and most respectable Also Two Shares in Drury-lane Theatre, with the Admission for two persons to be named.—Particulars at the Mart and in Covent-garden

Oxfordshire.—An undeniable Investment, even at present prices. Freehold Land, at Little Milton.—By MESSRS. ROBINS, at the Tuesday, May 13, in Lots, by order of the Mortgagee, VALUABLE FREEHOLD ESTATE, within three Tetsworth, consisting of 457 acres of superior Land, of which will be sold with the house, which is adapted for a gentleman's abundant offices, gardens, and pleasure grounds, &c. The remaining let off in small farms, producing 275l. a year. The present annual at only 800l. a year, and has been lately estimated at 1200l.—Particulars Mart; of Messrs. Hanrott and Metcalfe, Lincoln's-inn; and of Messrs. Covent-garden.

Costly Theatrical Dresses of an Amateur Company, and all the Scenery Brandenburg House.—By MESSRS. ROBINS, at their Specious Piazza, Covent-garden, on Thursday Next, at 12, COSTLY THEATRICAL WARDROBE, embracing the equipment for an extensive line of business; the dresses for characters got up regardless of expence at Brandenburg House, during the Brandenburg Theatre, painted expressly by De Loutherbourg. May be viewed and catalogues had at the rooms.

At the Castle Inn, in the city of Bangor, in the county of Carnarvon, on TUESDAY, MAY 28, 1823, unless previously disposed of by private contract, of which due notice will be given, subject to Conditions to be produced at Sale.

THE FREEHOLD AND INHERITANCE OF ABERGORPHWYSFA, near Bangor Ferry, in the county of Carnarvon, a desirable property is distant 25 miles from Holyhead, five from Beaumaris, from Carnarvon, and two from Bangor, and consists of an elegant Family Mansion (with garden, stable, coach-house, and offices of every description) situated upon the Southern Bank on the Straits of Menai, in a lawn of the richest of excellent land, highly ornamented by an oak wood, in the rear of the house, and other plantations, judiciously arranged in various parts of the demesne. The house is situated within a quarter of a mile of the New Suspension Bridge, 500 feet span, now nearly erected over the Straits, of which, and of the surrounding scenery of the Menai, it commands a full view. The communication by land, Liverpool, London, and Shrewsbury, is direct and certain, and the various recommendations which the property possesses, are far too numerous within the limits of an advertisement. Immediate possession may be had, and particulars known, on application to R. A. Poole, Esq. Solicitor, Bangor, or to Messrs. Jenkins, James, and Abbott, No. 8, New Inn, London. The House is complete'y and elegantly furnished, and the furniture may be taken at a valuation, if desired by the purchaser.

Near Mincing Lane, City.—Fashionable solid rosewood Furniture, Time Harness, brilliant Chimney and Pier Glasses, carved pedestal Sideboard, beautiful Spanish wood patent Dining Tables, 12 feet long; rich 8-8 cent Chintz Drawing Room Curtains, lined with crimson, 20 Chairs Couches to match; superb Card, Sofa, and Loo Tables, with Fancy Cabinets, inlaid, &c. &c. fine Wardrobe, French Clock, cut Glass, &c. the genuine property of Alexander George Philpott, going to Sea MESSRS. WILLIAMSON and Co. upon the Premises, No. 3, Market-street, Bloomsbury-square, near Queen's Head, Holborn, on Monday, May 5, and two following days, at Twelve each day.

THE HOUSEHOLD FURNITURE includes large Turkey and other carpets, nearly new; three hand-some, lofty, four-post Bedsteads with chintz drapery hangings, and clean, white goose and down beds, mattresses, and bolsters; two capital Feather beds, with mahogany and other bedsteads; cottage and tent ditto, with suitable bedding; three elegant sofas, 14 red morocco chairs, couch, and curtains to match; mahogany wood pole fire-screens, work and other tables; lady's and gentleman's dressing cases, fitted up; large secretaire and book-case, double and single chests of drawers, basin stands, tables, and chairs to match; a few bedsteads and bedding; long dinner service of blue and white, bronzes, do. double-light Girandoles, plated articles, an 8-day dial, kitchen coppers, fowling-piece, &c. &c. May be viewed the morning of sale, and catalogues had on the premises, and of the auctioneers, Holborn.

PRICES of the PUBLIC FUNDS.

STOCKS.	Mon	Tues	Wed.	Thur.	Fri.	Sat.
Bank Stock	214½	214½	214½			213
3 per Cent. Reduced	76¾	76¾	76¾			76
3 per Cent. Consols	77⅜	77⅜	77⅜			76
3¼ per Cent. Consols	89⅛	89⅛	88⅞			88
Consols for Account	77⅜	77⅜	77⅜	Holiday		76
4 per Cent. Consols	95⅞	95⅞	95⅞			95
New 4 per Cent.	97⅝	97⅝	97⅝			96
Bank Long Annuities	19⅝	19⅝	19⅜			19
India Bonds	40 p	38 p	37 p			37
Exchequer Bills, 3d.	17 p	15 p	14 p			14
Ditto, 2d	—	—	—			—
Columbian Bonds	—	—	—			—

BIRTH.

On the 30th of April, Mrs. William May, Artillery-place, of a son.

MARRIED.

At St. Nicholas Church, Brighton, on Saturday last, by the Very Rev. the Dean of Hereford, St. Leger Hill, Esq. to Miss Nugent, daughter of the late Regent Esq. of Epsom, and niece of the late Right Hon. Edmund Burke, Register's Court, Beaconsfield, Bucks.

On Thursday, at Chelsea Church, by the Rev. Thomas Shrubsall, Rector of Bradwell, Emily, eldest daughter of Major-General Sir John Cameron, to Charles Schreiber, Esq. of Hinchelsea Lodge, Hants.

John Warrender, Esq. to Lady Julian Maitland.

DIED.

On the 20th instant, at Sidmouth, Maria, wife of John Charles Darling, Esq. Kingston Russell, Dorsetshire.

On the 1st of May, Lord William Gordon, Deputy Ranger of the Green Park.—Lord Viscount Dudley and Ward.—Lieut.-Gen Hussey.—Capt. Thomas Shreiber, R.N. Hydrographer to the Admiralty.—Countess Dowager Morton.—Sir William Bart.

LONDON: Printed and Published by E. SHACKELL, No. 11, JOHNSON'S-COURT, FLEET-STREET. ☞ only Communications to the Editor (post-paid) are received.

JOHN BULL.

FOR GOD, THE KING, AND THE PEOPLE!'

No. 126. SUNDAY, MAY 11, 1823. Price 7d.

IONS of the CLERGY.—The REHEARSAL of the MUSIC to be performed at the ANNIVERSARY MEETING of this SOCIETY, in the Cathedral Church of St. Paul, on TUESDAY, the 13th, and the ANNIVERSARY on THURSDAY, the 15th of MAY, 1823; when a Sermon will be preached before his Royal Highness the Duke of York, his Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury, their Lordships the Bishops, the Right Hon. and Lord Mayor, Sheriffs, Aldermen, Clergyen, &c. by the Rev. George D'Oyly, D.D. the Rector of Lambeth, in Surrey, and Sundridge in Kent.

STEWARDS.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF YORK.

e Grace the Lord Archbishop of Canterbury, (second time.)
e Right Hon. Lord Kenyon. Second time.
e Right Hon. Frederick John Robinson, Chancellor of the Exchequer, M.P. e Right Hon. William Heygate, M.P. e John Singleton Copley, K.C. His Majesty's Solicitor General.
e John Sheppard, D.D. Dean of Hereford and Rector of Brighton.
e Very Rev. Robert Carr, D.D. Canon Residentiary of St. Paul's.
e Rev. F. W. Blomberg, D.D. Canon Residentiary of St. Paul's.
e Rev. Geo. Shepherd, D.D. Preacher of Gray's Inn, and Rector of St. Bartholomew, Exchange.
e Rev. Charles Parr Burney, D.D. F.R.S. and F.A.S. e Rev. John Heath, D.D. Prebendary of St. Paul's, and High Master of St. Paul's School, F.R.S. and F.A.S. rry Forster, Esq. M.P. in Galey, Esq. F.R.S. and F.A.S.
illiam Fox, Esq.
illiam Cotton, Esq.

The Music will consist of the Overture of Esther; Mr. Handel's grand Dettingen Te Deum, and Jubilate, with the Chorus from the Messiah, "Hallelujah, for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth," an Anthem composed on purpose for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth," an Anthem composed on purpose for the Lord God Omnipotent reigneth," an Anthem composed on purpose

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

BANKRUPTS.

W. BROOM, Walcot, Somersetshire, builder—G. WEILD, Nottingham, draper—P. PILEY, Aylesbury, Buckinghamshire, corn dealer—R. READ, Newcastle under-Lyme, carpenter—J. ANNSELL, Deptford, shoe-maker—W. SHAW, Thornhill Lees, Yorkshire, boat-builder—J. THOMPSON, Manchester, beadle-dealer—J. and J. ALLOWAY, Bedminster, dealers in earthenware—W. JENKINS, Lanvithen, Glamorganshire, dealer—May 27, G. Waiter, Isling-ton, ale-draper—May 31, J. Masterman, Hatton-garden, music-seller—May 31, C. Grill, Dunster court, Mincing-lane, merchant—May 31, J. J. Richardson, Fleet market fishmonger—May 31, J. G. Bowring, Fenchurch-buildings, broker —June 3, M. Perkins, Lymington, grocer.

June 3, J. Clagg, Whitehaven, ironmonger—May 30, J. Travis, Oldham, grocer —May 29, J. Mattram, Bristol, hop-merchant—May 29, R. Halliley, Lumby, York-shire—dealer—June 23, W. Holman, Totnes, Devonshire, ironmonger—May 29, W. Fare, Settle, Yorkshire, cabinet maker—May 28, E. Jenkins, Picket-zione, miller—May 23, J. Billingham, Uttexeter, nail manufacturer—June 6, H. Langher, Birmingham, button-maker—May 28, T. Clarke, Nottingham, lace-manufacturer.

CERTIFICATES—May 27.

W. Cleghorn, Ratcliffe Highway, cheesemonger—J. H. Hopkins, Liverpool, merchant—J. Cruckshanks, Gerrard-street, Elderado sash-manufacturer—T. Meredith, sen. Bishopsgate-street Without, leather seller—F. Dalton, Wakefield, flour-merchant—B. Holmes, Thrum Hall, Halifax, Yorkshire, merchant.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY.

Petitions were presented from Selby, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; from Pembrokeshire, complaining of Agricultural Distress; and from Plymouth, praying for the Abolition of Slavery.

TUESDAY.

Petitions were presented from Bath, against the General Gaol Bill; and from Bury, and Hadleigh, against the Slave Trade.

EARL GREY postponed his motion respecting papers in the late negotiation till Monday.

LORD CAWDOR moved that the Report on the state of Administration in Wales be referred to the Committee now sitting on Appeals.

The motion was objected to by the EARL of LIVERPOOL (on the ground that the Committee was already over-burthened with business,) and negatived.

WEDNESDAY.

The Ireland County Treasurer and the Apprentice Regulation Bills were read a first time.

Counsel were heard in the Appeal case from Scotland, of the Earl of Seafield v. Sir George Abercromby; and in the case of Reid v. Reid or Laing.

The Ireland Charitable Societies Loan Bill was read a second time.

A petition was presented from Salisbury, praying for the Abolition of Slavery.—Adjourned till Friday.

FRIDAY.

Petitions were presented from Bristol, against the General Gaol Bill; from York, against the Abolition of Slavery; from the Archdeaconry of Berks, against the Catholic Claims; from the Silk-manufacturers of London, praying for an alteration in the Acts injuring a rate of wages.

The Irish Militia Reduction Bill was ordered to be read a third time this day week.

In answer to some questions put by the MARQUIS of LANSDOWNE respecting the state of Ireland, the EARL of LIVERPOOL stated, that the Bill for renewing the Insurrection Act would be brought in on Monday, and that was the only repressive measure in contemplation; but measures were in progress of a remedial nature, viz. to effect a commutation of tythes and an alteration in the system of collecting the Revenue. He was not prepared to say whether the military force would be augmented or diminished—that must depend on the description of tumults which existed.—Adjourned till Monday.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY.

Petitions were presented from certain Graziers, against the Importation of Foreign Tallow; from Sheffield, Topsham, Chelmsford, Leominster, Ipswich, Callington, Shaftesbury, and Bury Saint Edmund's, against the Slave Trade; from the Severn and Wye Canal Companies, against the Coal Duties; from Derby, against the East India Sugar Duties; from Clare, in Ireland, against the Leather Tax.

MR. ABERCROMBIE presented a petition, signed by 7000 Householders of the City of Edinburgh, calling the attention of the House to the peculiar state of their representation; the Hon. Member stated, that out of a population of 100,000, nineteen persons, self-elected, met and chose their members, and this was their cause of complaint. He should, however, this Session, move to bring in a Bill founded on the petition.

MR. W. DUNDAS observed, that the City of Edinburgh enjoyed the privilege of electing their Members in the manner stated, by chartered right, ratified by the Act of Union.

MR. KENNEDY and MR. CALCRAFT supported the petition.

LORD BINNING was surprised, that when means had been taken to obtain the signatures of men, women, and children, no more than from 6 to 7000 names had been procured.

SIR JI. FERGUSON said, no person had been allowed to sign the petition who was not a householder paying five pounds rent and upwards; there were 21,000 houses in Edinburgh so rated, and many of them were held by women.

MR. HUME said, the petition was signed by three-fourths, if not four-fifths of the population of Edinburgh. The petition was laid on the table.

The House went into Committee to enquire into the conduct of the Sheriff of Dublin. Benjamin Richey produced the returns of the pannels from Feb. 1819 to Feb. 1823. He stated that the bills of indictment had been altered after they had been prepared by the Crown Solicitor, and sometimes by himself; an error in the present bills was that the occurrences of the 14th of December were said to have taken place in the fourth year of the King's reign, and the alteration was made to the third.

Terence O'Reilly, an attorney, remembered the bills being sent up to the Grand Jury—frequently saw Mr. Sheriff Thorpe in Court, who announced in the office of the clerk of the peace that the bills were ignored; the Sheriff was in conversation with a Mr. Ward—when he came into the office he said, "There will be no bills found—haven't I managed well? The business being done you need have no further fear." He was dressed as sheriff, with his cocked hat and sword, which he took off in the office. Several persons were present, but all he could name were Mr. Ward, Mr. Macnamara, the sheriff, and himself; mentioned this fact to young Mr. Plunkett, the Attorney-General's son, on Monday or Tuesday last. Did not recollect that he had mentioned it to any one particularly before; believed he did to many, but cannot name one person except young Mr. Plunkett, whom he saw this morning, and who sent him to Mr. Blake: that gentleman told witness the shortest way would be to write down the evidence he intended to give. The witness, in answer to questions, said he had not resided in Cotton Garden since he came to London, and that he came with reluctance to give his evidence, but Mr. Plunkett peremptorily said he must attend.

Mr. Macnamara, an attorney, confirmed the evidence of Mr. O'Reilly. Some gentlemen present asked if the bills were come down from the Grand Jury—Sheriff Thorpe said, "No, but you may make yourselves easy as to the result." The Sheriff seemed well pleased at it. Witness thinks he went away immediately. In another office was a list of the Grand Jury, some persons were looking at the list, and calculating how many Orangemen were on it—some said there were 15, others said 17. Has mentioned this conversation to several persons; one person he recollects in the Four Courts. Witness went with Mr. O'Reilly to Mr. Blake, and thinks the latter told him to write down his evidence. Witness admitted that, some years back, he made application to Mr. Mansfield to get some particular individuals on a Jury in a criminal case, where a client of his was to be tried, but Mr. Mansfield said it was out of his power, the case being in the hands of the Crown Officers. He did not get the bribe, because he did not do what was wanted, and his client was transported.

Peter Tomlinson, a boot-maker at Black Rock, was in conversation in his shop with a Mr. Smith during the trials, when a person came by, whom Mr. Smith addressed thus—"Good morning, Mr. Sheriff," who said he was going to the office to make out a list of the Jury; that who said he was going to the office to make out a list of the Jury; that they (the traversers) should have as good a Petty as they had a Grand Jury. He should know this Sheriff again, though he had never seen him before nor since, for he eyed him particularly. Is certain Mr. Sheriff Cooper is not the person addressed by Mr. Smith. Mentioned the circumstance on the same day to several persons.

John MacConnell, a silk manufacturer in Dublin, recollects seeing Mr. Sheriff Thorpe, before the trials, at Mr. Sibthorp's, in Dublin; heard the Sheriff say—"I have the Orange pannel in my pocket." Witness asked young Mr. Sibthorp when these unfortunate fellows would be brought to trial, but he made no answer. Sibthorp is a painter and glazier. The Sheriff left the room at the same time as the witness. William Graham, one of the traversers, was present, and the Sheriff was near him. His remark was made in a loud tone of voice, and witness thought he acted as a party friend; and was certainly surprised at the expression. The Sheriff used other remarkable expressions—he said, "I wish the devil had the Marquis of Wellesley out of this." Communicated the expressions on the following day to Wadden and M'Nally, but does not know whether these facts were communicated to the Attorney-General for Ireland before the trials. Graham is connected with some newspaper office.

Peter Tomlinson was recalled, and corrected his former evidence by saying, that he had in fact seen Mr. Smith twice, but did not know whether he was on the Jury.

Mr. Sheriff Cooper was then examined:—Recollected striking the Grand Jury relative to the present enquiry, at the request of Mr. Sheriff Thorpe, whose turn it was, and who requested him to do so, lest some observations might be made upon him. Witness is a coachmaker, and had belonged to the Corporation 17 years. From his general experience of Grand Juries in Dublin, he considered the one in question respectable, and competent to discharge the duty of Jurors. He felt he had conscientiously discharged his duty to the public in striking the pannel. Since the striking he had seen Sheriff Thorpe in company with the Lord Lieutenant more than once, and he was received with the usual distinctions. He should not suppose Sheriff Thorpe capable of packing a Jury; did not believe the Sheriff was an Orangeman, nor was he (the witness) one. He believed at the public dinner in Dublin Sheriff Thorpe gave the "glorious immortal memory." In striking the Jury, he had never questioned a man's political principles.—In answer to questions put by MR. PLUNKETT, the witness said, he thought the ordinary course of returning the Commission Grand Jury was not by the Clerk; but in respect of the Petty Jury, the High Sheriff in ordinary cases makes the return. Some of the pannel on the trials were men of strong political feelings on the question of dressing the Statue, and some were not. There had been a strong agitation in the public mind on the election of the corporators, and the dressing of the Statue had been prevented by the Lord Mayor, who was censured for so doing. (MR. PLUNKETT handed a list to the witness, headed "Good men in bad times." King William was represented treading on the knave of clubs, which was the Lord Mayor.) The witness described seven out of this list sworn on the Jury in January, viz. J. H. Moore, Davy, Hicks, Adams, Lamphrey, Graham, and Lodge. These men he considered fit and impartial men to sit on a Jury, and he should not object to any man for his political bias, unless he was violent. The Sub-Sheriff was not influenced by a violent party feeling—of the pannel, containing 60, 30 were returned by the Sub-Sheriff. Did not think he would alter the names on the Petty Jury at the request of Stokes, clerk to Alderman King. Had heard that one Poole had taken part in preventing the dressing of the Statue, but never heard Sheriff Thorpe say he could not put him on the pannel because he was a conciliator.

The witness was then examined by other Members. In the present state of Dublin he said it was impossible to find a Grand Jury who had not formed an opinion on the dressing of the Statue; the election of Sheriff was promoted by the Amicable Society, but he did not know of any understanding with them to keep certain persons in office; the fees to the sub-sheriff amounted to about 700l. a year. As to the petty jury, there was no canvassing for jurors on account of political feeling. At a dinner he (the Sheriff) had declined to give the obnoxious toast, and the company in consequence behaved very rude to him; he did not consider any man favourable to the Catholic Claims incompetent to sit on a Grand Jury. Did not know that Mr. Moore (one of the Jury) was a relation to Cullman, one of the prisoners tried. Should not consider Sheriff Thorpe a high party man; he knew little of him, but if he had been on the Jury he was perfectly eligible to try the prisoners.

The Chairman then reported progress.

TUESDAY.

The Shadwell Church Bill (to which was added a clause authorizing the election of additional Church Wardens.) was passed.

On the second reading of the Portsea Fishery Bill, MR. BERNAL moved an amendment, That it be read this day six months."

For the amendment, 97—Against it, 39. The Bill was lost.

The House went into a Committee of enquiry into the conduct of the Sheriff of Dublin. Barrett Wadden, a silk-manufacturer, in Dublin, knew Mr. Connell, the witness; met him on the Saturday subsequent to the trial, and expressed his surprise at the conduct of Sheriff Thorpe. His words were these—"The Sheriff not only showed great ignorance, but his conduct was so extraordinary that I thought he could not have the right use of his senses. There were present in company on a Tuesday the Sheriff, the Sheriff's Lady, Mrs. Sibthorpe, and her daughter, John M'Connell, and William Graham, one of the rioters. They were playing at cards. Graham turned up the knave of clubs, and said, that was the Lord Mayor, and he wished he was out of office, and that he could hang him up. Mrs. Sibthorpe asked him how he could do that, Graham being a little man. He answered that he could jump up and reach his throat. The Sheriff said, "Damn the Marquis of Wellesley, he'll do no good for this country till he's out of it." Some one asked the Sheriff what was likely to be done with the persons concerned in the riot. He answered they were in safe hands, for he had the Orange pannel in his pocket. When Sheriff Thorpe went out, they all said, "Be damned to the Marquis of Wellesley." On the Thursday following, he stated to the Attorney-General the principal part of what he has stated now. Has been a bankrupt, and the commission was superseded; has never been compelled to leave Ireland or his house to avoid his creditors: his only two creditors; that is, if all his other debts, such as any man keeping house must have, they would not amount to 15l.

William Poole, a Member of the Corporation of Brewers in Dublin, had some conversation with Sheriff Thorpe, before the riot took place, about the middle of November; wished to be on the Jury, and the Sheriff said he should, but he was not called. Witness told the Sheriff he had broken his word for party purposes, and was not fit for his station. The Sheriff replied, it was impossible to please all parties, and he had a hard card to play, that conciliation men would not do for that Jury. Witness had assisted to oust Mr. Sutter from the Brewers' Company; that person had assisted in dressing the Statue. The witness further said, there had been no difference between me and the Sheriff, except political differences; I did not see him until the quarter day afterwards; he then took my hand, and said he hoped we should be good friends; I went away without saying any thing. He asked me to his Civic Dinner but I did not go. There has been another Assembly since; I saw the Sheriff there. A vote of censure was proposed upon the Attorney-General; I moved an Amendment, but the Sheriff declared the original motion to be carried.

In answer to questions by several Members, he said, that his reason for wishing to be on the Jury was on account of a cause between Lord Rossmore and a Mr. O'Meara. Sheriff Cooper told him that his being a conciliation man shut him out. He considered Sheriff Thorpe as a Protestant ascendancy man; he thought it becoming his station to wish to be on the Grand Jury; but did not tell the Sheriff he knew O'Meara; did not make any offer to Sheriff Thorpe to induce him to put him on the Jury.—[The witness then wished to advert in explanation to a statement made respecting him last night by the Hon. Member for Armagh.]

An irregular conversation arose, in the course of which

MR. HENRY GREY BENNET thought the witness ought to be admonished, as he considered his conduct to be highly indecent.

The witness was called in, and informed by the Chairman, that in his answers he was to avoid making any allusions to the persons who put the questions, and to consider them as put through the Chair; but say to his justification.

The witness expressed his willingness to proceed with his statement, but could not find a way of doing so, without adverting to the Hon. Member for Armagh.

MR. BROWNLOW said, that he, for one, was most anxious that the witness should be allowed to advert to any thing he (Mr. Brownlow) might be supposed to have stated to the prejudice of his character.

The witness stated, that he had seen something imputed to him in a newspaper, relative to his having offered a compromise to be put upon the Grand Jury, which he declared in the face of that Hon. Assembly to be as gross a libel as ever was uttered.—A printed list of the Jury was then handed to witness: perusing them he saw most of the Conciliation men, and but few Catholics. One of them he knew went to church, which he understood the "glorious and immortal memory" was to be drank, with a placard on his hat with that toast in large letters. He wore his hat during the whole time of dinner. On the whole of the Roman Catholics of great respectability, one of whom was worth 100,000l. the majority were respectable, and of a higher rank in society than believed that from the state of party feelings, the Jury were likely to have strong ones. The witness had drank the "glorious and immortal memory;" but lately abstained from attending the city dinners, having given his word he would not drink that toast; should consider himself unfit for society if he did. He believed there were two Conciliation men on the Grand Jury.

James Troy, a silk manufacturer in Dublin, spoke as to the transaction at the Tavern in Essex-street; was present at the Theatre the night of the riot, and was examined before the Grand Jury the morning of the day the bills were ignored. He knew the names of several persons at the tavern; did not state all he knew to the Grand Jury, because they interrupted him, and told him not to name a person whom he did not know on the night of the riot.

George Farley, an attorney in Dublin, was examined before the Grand Jury respecting the riot at the Theatre, as to a conversation which took place at a tavern in Essex-street. Mr. Forbes and Mr. Graham were present—he stated every fact which he knew relative to the tavern conversation, save and except the name of Forbes, which he only knew by hearsay; the bill against that person was ignored. He did not recollect having said to one Brocas that he was ignorant as to high against the Attorney-General; nor that he (the witness) had three guineas a day; heard Brocas say he would go for and say the bottle was not thrown by the man who was charged with doing it. Witness told Brocas not to be too busy about the matter. The foreman of the Jury showed the witness the door, but with great politeness.

James Troy was again examined. He said he laid an information against Forbes.

The Chairman then reported progress.

WEDNESDAY.

GENERAL GASCOIGNE postponed his motion on the subject of the Half-pay till the 23d inst.

Petitions were presented from Arbroath, Cupar, Dundee, and Lincardine respecting certain legislative regulations in the Linen Trade; from Maidstone and Folkestone against the Duty on Coals; from Hertfordshire, praying for an open trade in Beer; from certain butchers, against the importation of Foreign Tallow; from Belper praying for the equalization of the Sugar Duties; and from various parts of the country against Slavery.

MR. F. BUXTON postponed his motion on the Slave Trade till the 15th instant—Lord Nugent his motion respecting British Colonies till the 28th, and Mr. Abercrombie his motion respecting Windsor-park till the 30 June.

MR. BROUGHAM presented a petition from Wm. Cobbett respecting the Game Laws. It stated that the calender for Berkshire assizes now approaching contains a list of 77 prisoners, 22 of whom are poachers, and nine had been convicted by clergymen acting as magistrates for the county; that of 22 persons convicted in Hants five for poaching; and the only two persons who suffered death were convicted for resisting gamekeepers. The petitioner prayed the House to consider well before they passed the Bill for giving the property of wild animals to lords of manors and others.

LORD PALMERSTON observed that the two young men alluded to in the petition were executed for murder, and not for poaching; one had killed a gamekeeper, and the other wounded another gamekeeper, who with proper treatment recovered. The petition was ordered to be printed.

The House resumed the enquiry into the conduct of the Sheriff of Dublin.

Mr. Sheriff Cooper was examined respecting the interference of Sheriff Thorpe in removing the witness Pool from the pannel. The witness, and the sub-sheriff were present at the striking. The witness conceived that O'Reilly was wrong as to the cause of removing Poole for being a conciliation man. He believed that a promise had been made to Poole to put him on the pannel. There were more than five conciliation men on the pannel—was present at a dinner at Thorpe's health was drank.

Serjeant-Major Harris, of the 4th Hussars, was examined before the Grand Jury in a very "threatful manner." Witness deposed that the man who threw the rattle from the gallery. One of the Jurors he did not think it possible that witness could identify him; as evidence was contradicted expressly by one of the Jurors. When he left the Jury-room, several gentlemen about the door asked witness how he had been used, to which he replied very badly—to which he rejoined that they had been treated in the same manner. Admitted that he had often been to the Castle of Dublin—had dined at the Mess there once or twice—never had any communication with a Mr. Johnson respecting the riot at the theatre. Had been a private person on the 14th of Dec. but was promoted since for prior good conduct. Was not expected, and complained of the treatment he received from the Grand Jury, and positively stated that George Graham was the person who threw the rattle, and he was seated in the first row of the gallery when he broke the rattle, and then threw a part of it, which might weigh from a pound to a pound and a half.

Terence O'Reilly was called to depose to a conversation with Sheriff Cooper on the preceding night, in which the latter said, that he was not put upon the Jury because he had solicited the office.

R. Moran was examined before the Grand Jury shortly, and was sent out of the room, not being allowed to describe the riot.

Nicholas Murray Mansfield, Clerk in the Sheriffs' Office, read over the pannel in question; considered the Jury well selected to dispose between King and Country. Had heard both Sheriffs say that no violent party feelings ought not to be on the Jury. He thought the majority of the Jury were moderate men. Ex-Sheriffs did not like to consent to become foremen of the Jury. Sir W. Smith by name was a conciliation man.—In answer to questions put by Mr. Plunkett witness said he told Sheriff Thorpe that the persons selected were strong party men. Knew that considerable influence had been used by the Merchants' Guild in November to send persons to the Corporation favourable to dressing the Statue. Remembers a list of 60 persons circulated in the Guild as "Good men in bad times;" but did not know what bad times meant, whether present or past. Several of this list were put on the Jury—they were calm and dispassionate men for the duty. He did not conceive a sworn Orangeman fit for the Jury. Did not know whether Joseph Lamphrey was an Orangeman—knew Cusack to be a sworn Orangeman, but he would not have been returned if that had been known—knew Samuel Lamphrey to be a Protestant. Application had been made on the trial of O'Meara for conciliation men to put a list of names on the Jury, and promised that whatever could be done should be done. Such proposals were often made, and he felt indignation at it; certainly the application was for him to resist the most sacred duty, and he thought the best way to get rid of it was to say he would do his best—he tore the list. Did not believe any consideration was received by any one in the Office to get persons on the Grand Juries. Believed the Grand Jury of January 1822 to be as respectable in rank as those before. Should not know an Orangeman if he were to see one—never knew what a conciliation man was until that night.

Some conversation arose as to the propriety of calling the foreman of the Grand Jury, which ended in the determination to call Sir George Whitford, the foreman.

Sir George Whitford was then examined: had a general recollection of what passed before the Grand Jury relative to certain persons concerned in the riot of the 14th of December. Witness was not an Orangeman, nor a man of strong party feelings; he wished for conciliation—for Irishmen to be at peace with one another. Sheriff Thorpe applied to him to be foreman about three weeks before the trial had never seen a grand Jury more anxious to do their duty; saw no symptoms of party feeling among them; if he had, he should have thought it his duty to check them; had heard a report that Sheriff Thorpe said, he had got an Orange pannel—that one Thomas Poole made affidavit to that effect before the Privy Council. Sheriff Thorpe declared to witness upon his honour, he had never made such declaration; if he had not so declared, witness would not have served as foreman; had dined at Sheriff Smith's, but did not take an Orange pocket handkerchief; held in veneration the memory of King William, approved of dressing the Statue; wished all irritation avoided, but not think it necessary to put a stop to the dressing. He might have expressed an opinion that those who did this had acted improperly, but he certainly expressed his feeling that such a step was not calculated to produce conciliation. That they caused the riot at the theatre was a matter of notoriety. He did not mean to say that he had the same feelings to those of the parties who made the riot; he expressed his disapprobation of the conduct of those who stopped the dressing of the statue of King William.—[Here witness was reminded of what he had previously stated, viz. that he had certainly expressed his feeling the conduct of the authorities was not calculated to produce conciliation.] Witness belonged to the Amicable Society in Dublin, the principles of which were loyalty to the King and Constitution; did not know there were Orangemen in it, nor any Catholic to be admitted a Member; did not know the rules of the Society. Witness was at Mr. Sheriff Thorpe's dinner. "The pious and immortal memory of King William" was drank there. He joined with the others in drinking it. It was a standing toast of the Corporation. He was asked if that toast was calculated to allay irritation, but the answer was inaudible. He was there when Mr. Sheriff Thorpe's health was drunk. Did not recollect hearing any part of the Sheriff's speech; there was a great noise in the room; two or three hundred people were present; those who were further from the Sheriff than he was, might applaud the speech, but he did not recollect that they did; he could not say whether Sheriff Thorpe spoke in a loud or in a low tone. Witness was Sheriff two years ago; he formed the pannels, selecting the names of the Jurors from a book, and sending them to the other Sheriff for his approval, and then they were forwarded to the Sub-Sheriff. Grand Juries had been struck fourteen or sixteen times while he was in office. The Sub-Sheriff paid the High Sheriff the fees to which he was entitled. He certainly wished to see the dressing of the Statue discontinued. The Lord Mayor stopped the practice in November.

Thomas Tyserress, a jeweller in Dublin, had served on the Grand Jury of Dublin in January. He was not an Orangeman; he should be happy to see Catholic Emancipation to-morrow, if it could be done with propriety; he had taken no part in the strong party politics of Dublin. In the Grand Jury there was an anxious wish to discharge the duty fairly. The finding of the bills was unanimous.

Joseph Henry Moore, a stock-broker, served on the Grand Jury in January; he was employed by the Grand Jury to take notes; he was not an Orangeman. He attended to the proceedings of the Grand Jury; it appeared to be their intention to investigate fairly the charges; he saw no attempt to browbeat any witness. They were occupied until five o'clock on the first indictment, and had not then decided. On the second indictment 57 witnesses were examined. Every witness was protected by the Foreman giving his evidence. None of the Jury interrupted the witnesses. He could not answer the question, whether a person was interrupted who said he heard the name of another. The witness withdrew, and the Chairman reported progress.

Mr. Scarlett brought in a Bill to extend the jurisdiction of the Sheriff's Court of the County of Lancaster. The Bill was ordered to be read a second time on the 15th instant.

THURSDAY.

Mr. R. Martin gave notice, that he should on Monday, move to abolish bull-baiting.

Petitions were presented from Nottingham, the Archdeaconry of Leicester, Stoke-upon-Trent, Salisbury, Pembroke, Hull, York, Yeovil, Retford and Warrington, against the Slave Trade; from Leicester, for a Bill to recover small debts; from Liverpool, praying that the last Bread Act might be extended to that town; from Nottingham for an equalization of the Sugar Duties; from Pembroke, for an alteration of the title system; and from Cornwall and Epsom, against the coal duties.

Mr. Hume presented a petition from Richard Carlile, now confined in Dorchester gaol, praying for the House to address the Crown for his discharge. The Hon. Member said, he was an excellent husband, and a most exemplary head of a family, and that until he was prosecuted, the sale of Paine's works was trifling, but that rose it to 10,000 copies; the Republican, by the same means, rose to 15,000 per week. He (Mr. H.) entreated those who were advocates for prosecution to attend to these facts. The subject, however, of the present petition, was principally a complaint that he had been interrupted in his defence by the Judge who tried him. The Hon. Member, at some length, contended that this was an improper practice, and destructive of the rights of Englishmen. He was sentenced to be imprisoned three years and fined 1500l. but his property was seized, and he was unable to pay the fine.

The Solicitor-General denied that Carlile had not been allowed full opportunity of making his defence; he would just observe, that the trial took up three days, and these were principally occupied by Carlile himself in his defence. The prosecution took up but one hour. Carlile was heard in mitigation of punishment, fully and uninterruptedly; but he said, that nothing should deter him from going on—that he would defeat the law—that his wife would delight in being a martyr in the cause—that if she were to be convicted, his sister would go on with the publishing—and that if she too were to be convicted, he would still be able to obtain persons at a small expence, who would gladly continue the business. The House well knew that he kept his word; that his wife and sister had been convicted; that several of his shopmen had been convicted; and another person was now under prosecution for publications in a shop with Carlile's name over the door. With regard to the seizure of the property, advice had been taken by the Sheriff as to what part of the publications it might be safe to sell; and those that were not illegal were sold for 35l. As to the inability of the defendant to pay those fines, and as to their being excessive, he would only observe, that if so many copies of the work in question had been sold, the fines imposed were not greater in amount than the profits realized by the sale.

Mr. Lennard hoped the wretched man would be liberated. It was not likely if he could pay the fine that he would stay in prison.

Mr. Denman thought that some of the prosecutions instituted in consequence of these publications were greater nuisances than the publications themselves. Courts of Justice were bound to pass sentence on the case as it appeared from the verdict of the Jury, and without regard to the motives of the prosecutors.

Mr. Secretary Peel said, that Carlile had, on his trial, admitted the sale of 3000 copies of the work, at half-a-guinea each. This led the Court to a belief of his having realized at least 1,500l. by his sales. A part of the sentence was, that he should find security for his future good behaviour; and from his conduct in prison, there was every reason to believe that it would be extremely hazardous for any one to become security for him.

The petition was laid on the table; but the motion for printing it was objected to, and Mr. Hume withdrew it.

In answer to a question from Mr. Henry Grey Bennet respecting the Administration of Justice in the Island of Guernsey, the Attorney-General said certain regulations were to be instantly carried into effect.

Col. Barry complained of a gross libel in an obscure daily Morning Paper, which stated, in allusion to the examination at the Bar of the House, "that in proportion as the inquiry advanced the case against Mr. Sheriff Thorpe became more strongly made out; that it had been proved from the mouth of witnesses called by the Orange party, that he had in reality carried the pannel about in his pocket; and that the Orange party, who were fit for any thing, had the other night entered into a conspiracy to ruin the character of one of the witnesses against the Sheriff, by a series of questions which the rest of the House had unanimously resolved to have expunged from the minutes."—He moved that the printer be called to the Bar.

Sir M. W. Ridley, Mr. Wynn, and Mr. Abercrombie thought the matter was not worth the consideration of the House.

Mr. Secretary Peel suggested to his Hon. Friend to withdraw his motion. A malignant attempt of this contemptible writer could not injure. It would be far better to treat it with the contempt it deserved than to enter into a contest with parties so unworthy.

Col. Barry agreed, in compliance with the feeling of the House, to withdraw his motion.

The House then resumed the enquiry into the conduct of the Sheriff of Dublin.

Henry Handwich, sen. father to Henry and Mathew Handwich, who were tried for the riot, was examined. He denied that he was related to Sheriff Thorpe, but there was a relationship between another branch of his family and the Sheriff.

Upon H. J. H. Moore, one of the Grand Jury, being called in,

Mr. Plunkett thought it necessary the House should decide before the examination of this witness commenced, whether Grand Jurors should be questioned as to what passed in the Grand Jury Chamber. (This led to some conversation.)

Mr. Secretary Peel strongly doubted whether it was good policy to hold out to jurors or others, that any power on earth, but their own conscience, could absolve them from the obligation of an oath.

Sir James Macintosh contended that religion, in cases of oath-taking, only lent its aid to a civil obligation as long as that obligation in a civil point of view continued binding. He was of opinion that an oath taken to promote civil matters could not be absolved, even when those very matters required it.

Mr. Wetherell considered that the oath was altogether a civil obligation, with a pledge to the Deity as to its observance. The State and King were those to whom the security was given, the Deity being a third party. He was rather disposed to think that the meaning of an oath of a Grand Jury was that he would maintain secresy till the ends of justice were answered, viz. till the delinquent was tried.

Mr. Secretary Canning conceived the House, in considering this question, ought to bear in mind how it would be popularly viewed out of doors with respect to the obligation of an oath, and with respect to the authority of that House. The practical question before the House turned on two points. The first of these was—how far was the House authorised to examine a Grand Juror; the second, what was the discretion which they ought to exercise? The power of that House to absolve from an oath on certain State emergencies was a question, the discussion of which, on the abstract principle, he really thought would be attended with more danger than advantage. At length it was agreed to forego the examination of the witness.

John Davis was then examined, and stated, that a person named Hone requested the Sheriff to put him on the pannel, but the Sheriff objected because he was a man of strong party feelings.

William Carpenter said, that the Sheriff refused to put Mr. Poole on the pannel, because he said he was interested in a case coming on. Witness was on the pannel, and belongs to an Orange Association; he took an oath, the principle is to support the King and Constitution; he could not recollect the precise words of the oath.—[The witness was ordered to withdraw.]

Mr. Scarlett observed that it was irregular to cheer a witness.

Mr. Brougham said, on the trial of an Illustrious Person (when some evidence was given against her, since proved to be as false and perjured as it was foul) the cheering from the Right Reverend Bench was most disgusting. He said this in extenuation of the improper cheering in that House.

The witness was again called in:—He knew some of his brother Orangemen, and of the fourteen Common Councilmen, one only served on the Jury; that was Mr. Cusack; he did not know Joseph Lamphrey was an Orangeman; he had never heard that Samuel Lamphrey was an Orangeman; one of them he had reason to believe was an Orangeman; Graham and S. Warren are not Orangemen to his knowledge; he believed Connor was a Protestant Ascendancy man. He heard "the Glorious Ascendancy" given by a Member of that House. He was at Mr. Sheriff Thorpe's dinner. Mr. Holmes was not an Orangeman nor a Protestant Ascendancy man; Mr. A. Perrin was an Orangeman. There was nothing taken in the oath of an Orangeman that was not made public.

Mr. Hume asked if any money was subscribed to the Orange Institution?—(A laugh.)—There was.

The Hon. Mr. Smith.—Do you think any saving could be made in the appropriation of their fund?—(Laughter.)

Witness said, Sheriff Thorpe pledged himself to support that party which is called Glorious Memory Men in the Common Council.

The Chairman reported progress.

FRIDAY.

Petitions were presented from Leeds, Ashborne, Rochdale, Barnard Castle, and other places, against Slavery; from the Catholic Prelates in Ireland for regulations in Catholic Charities; from the Silk Manufacturers (similar to the one in the Lords).

The motion for the repeal of the Leather Tax was postponed to the 26th inst. and notice was given of a motion on the Catholic Prelates' Petition for the 7th of June.

The Sale of Game Bill was ordered for a second reading on this day fortnight.

In a Committee on the Scotch Linen Manufacturers' Act, leave was given to bring in a Bill to amend the Acts on the subject.

Mr. Brougham gave notice for Mr. Western, that he would, on the 10th June, move for some measure to remedy the inconvenience felt from the want of Jurors, in consequence of the addition to the number of Circuits.

Mr. Secretary Canning stated, in answer to a question from Mr. Hume, that owing to the divided state of Portugal, no arrangement had been made as to the fees of British Consuls in the Brazils.

In answer to a question from Mr. Brougham, Mr. Sec. Canning admitted, that Russian troops had assembled on the banks of the Vistula, and that the Austrian troops had evacuated the Neapolitan country; but he could not say whether they had marched out of the Milanese territory.

The Union Duties Bill was passed.

In a Committee on the enquiry into the conduct of the Sheriff of Dublin,

John Jackson, a toyman in Dublin, was present at Mr. Sheriff Thorpe's on the 17th December; John M'Connel was also there; witness did not hear Sheriff Thorpe say he had an Orange pannel in his pocket; is sure that such an expression could not have been used without his having heard it, for he was near to the Sheriff than Mr. M'Connell; witness played with Sheriff Thorpe at cards at fives and tens. Heard a little man, when he threw the knave of clubs down, say, "Damn the Lord Mayor;" there were six gentlemen and three ladies present. A question was asked by him of Graham about who threw the bottle, and that fixed it in his memory. Did not hear any one say, "I wish the devil had the Marquess of Wellesley." The witness was closely questioned on these points, but he adhered to his examination in chief.

William Graham, a printer, was also at Sibthorp's on the 17th Dec.; confirmed the evidence given by Jackson. The bill of indictment preferred against witness, he said, had been ignored; admitted that he had used abusive expressions to Serjeant Harris—he said that "if witness were heard to make use of certain expressions which escaped him, he might be ducked." The expressions which he (witness) had used were not directed against the witnesses, but generally against people of bad character. When in the witnesses room, witness had a cane in his hand; he had no sword-stick; he might have had one in his hand belonging to another person; he might have been flourishing and brandishing it about in the witnesses room; he might have said, that he would do some execution with that stick before he left London."—(Witness was here admonished by the Chairman.)—Did not attend particularly to what Sheriff Thorpe said. There was no conversation about who threw the bottle at the theatre. Remembered playing the Knave of Clubs, and said, "There's the Lord Mayor and be-damned to him." Had been in the habit frequently of damning the Lord Mayor. Had never damned the Lord Lieutenant, nor wished him in heaven nor elsewhere. Did not know till a week afterwards that there was a charge against him for a riot.

[The witness was ordered to withdraw, and the officers of the House were directed to keep him apart from the other witnesses.]

The Right Hon. Wm. Plunkett was then examined (by Colonel Barry) in his place. The Right Hon. Witness identified a letter handed to him, as his writing, he wrote it fearing the Sheriff of Dublin might not procure a fair pannel. A Juror being an Orangeman was in his mind a sufficient objection to his being on the pannel. Had printed extracts of the Orange Societies' rules and regulations laid before him; did not know whether those extracts were from the books of the Lodge 1612. Witness declined to say whether they were made by persons named Atkinson.

Thomas Sibthorpe was then examined. He described the company at his house on 17th December. Did not hear Sheriff Thorpe use the words imputed to him. Remembered no gross expression used, except some observations on the Lord Mayor, such as wishing him to the Devil, and the exclamation of "Bad luck to Hugh Fleming!" Had not heard Sheriff Thorpe say, "he had an Orange pannel in his pocket." Had told M'Connell so on the 26th or 27th of December. Had talked with Sheriff Thorpe the whole night.

John Crosby Greaves, Esq. spoke to the apprehending of Forbes at the theatre; admitted that public indignation was high at the time, and it was difficult to get a pannel of impartial men. Witness said, as a Magistrate, he should not have considered the information on which the committal of the prisoners took place, sufficient to warrant a capital charge.

William Leaden, a tallow-chandler in Dublin, was called to impeach the evidence of two witnesses respecting Graham, and the throwing of the rattle. He stated that James Ormsby threw the rattle, and he died some time after. Witness was an Orangeman and a Purplerman.

Robert Gilbert stated that Ormsby was identified by Lewis as having thrown the bottle. The witness pointed out Graham as the person, but Lewis, who was Sub-Sheriff of Kildare, said Ormsby was the man, so did Mr. Stoddart, a Dublin Magistrate.

Sheriff Cooper was then called in. The witness said he told Poole to go to Mr. Sheriff Thorpe, if he wanted to be on the pannel, who was in the Sheriffs' Court.

The Chairman reported progress, and the Committee was ordered to sit again on Wednesday.—Adjourned to Monday.

A valuable seizure was made on Sunday by Mr. Mottley, officer of the Customs at Portsmouth, at Nutham, in Southampton River. The Customs at Portsmouth, at Nutham, in Southampton River. The Customs at Portsmouth, at Nutham, in Southampton River. The

PRICE OF STOCKS AT THE CLOSE, SATURDAY.

There has been considerable business doing in the Foreign Securities during the past week. The admission of the Foreign Secretary in the House of Commons on Friday night, that a Russian army had been formed on the Vistula, caused a considerable depression in the public securities on the following day, and Consols for the Account, which opened at 78⅞ to 79, were done, as early as the middle of the day, at 78¼ ⅜. Spanish Bonds were also depressed, and at one o'clock were doing as low as 36. At the close of the Market Consols for the Account were 78⅜.

3 per Cent. Red. . . 78¼ 78	India Bonds 40 39
3 per Cent. Consols 78⅜ 79 78¾	Exchcq. Bills, 2d 1000l. 20 19
3½ per Cent. ditto . . 90½	Ditto . . . . . 500l.
4 per Cent. . . . . 96¼ ⅜ ⅜	Small . . . . .
New 4 per Cent. . . 99¼ 99	Con. for Acc. 78⅜ ⅜ 79 78⅜
Long Annuities . 20½ 20

Letters from Paris quote the prices of French Stock as follow:—

FRENCH FUNDS, May 8.

5 per Ct. Con. 92 Sept. . -	Bank Sh. Div. 1 July
Recon. Div. 22 Sept. . .	Ex. Lond. 1mo. 25-65 3mo.

The Neapolitan 5 per Cents. Div. were at

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We are extremely sorry to be obliged to postpone our notice of the Exhibition at Somerset-House till next week.

The article in BLACKWOOD'S MAGAZINE for the present month to which AMICUS refers, is well worthy attention—we only regret that we have not space to make the extract AMICUS wishes for.

Our other numerous friends must remain unanswered.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL DRURY-LANE.—Monday, King Richard the Third, with Love, Law, and Physic—Tuesday, The Travellers, with (last time) Killing no Murder: Apollo Belvi, Mr. Liston—Wednesday, The Hypocrite, with (first time) £8. 10s. 1d. If Quite Convenient—Thursday and Friday, The Travellers—Saturday, A Selection of Ancient and Modern Music, under the direction of Mr. Bochsa.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.—Monday, Clari; or, the Maid of Milan.—Tuesday, Merchant of Venice—Wednesday, The Belle's Stratagem.—Thursday, Clari, with Katherine and Petruchio.

SIR WALTER SCOTT'S NEW NOVEL.

THE LITERARY REGISTER, published YESTERDAY, contains a lengthened Critique on, and interesting extracts from, Quentin Durward, the forthcoming Novel, by Sir Walter Scott. Critiques on Willis's Treatise on Mental Derangement—Recollections on the Peninsula War—and Hunter's Memoirs of a Captivity among the Indians—The File, No. 2.—Theatricals, Fine Arts, and a great variety of Notices on interesting subjects of Literature. Published by E. Shackell, No. 11, Johnson's court, Fleet-street; and may be had of all Newsvenders. Price 8d.

BRITISH MERCURY AND WEDNESDAY'S EVENING POST.—On Wednesday evening next will be published No. 887 of the above paper. The BRITISH MERCURY is printed in the same form and is of the same size with JOHN BULL; and both Papers will be conducted by the same persons, on the same principles, and published at the same place, No. 11, Johnson's-court, Fleet-street, by E. Shackell.

JOHN BULL.

LONDON, MAY 11.

THE stupid and malevolent observations upon the alleged indisposition of HIS MAJESTY, which are made in the Morning Chronicle, are wholly and utterly groundless and false. HIS MAJESTY'S health is rapidly improving, and it appears almost certain that next week not only will there be a Drawing-room, but that the KING will honour the Theatres with his presence.

It is quite necessary to caution the public with respect to the reports which appear in the paper to which we have just alluded—the condition and character of its late editor gave him opportunities of occasionally picking up intelligence in St. James's-street, which (as far as persons who betray confidence can be believed) was very often to be relied upon—the case is different now, and although, as we have said before, the scoundrels may collect occasional rumours at Brighton, they have no chance in London. A long detailed paragraph, concerning an alleged arrangement with respect to the Deputy Rangership of the Park, in which there is not one syllable of truth, appeared in the Chronicle last week, and on the following day an authorised and authenticated contradiction of the whole story was published in the same paper.

Let the public never forget that the Chronicle, only a fortnight ago, asserted in two following papers that HIS MAJESTY sat during the Levee—when it is considered that His Majesty stood during the whole ceremony—that not only the Chronicle did not know that fact at the time, but that two days elapsed, and that it had no acquaintance or friend aware of its blunder to set it right, we think we are justified in advising the public to receive with great caution any information which may appear in its columns touching the Sovereign and his Court.

THOSE who read BULL need not be told how heartily, how warmly, how affectionately we love the KING and CONSTITUTION—we say nothing about Ministers; we have faith in them—we respect them—but we dislike the conciliatory system they seem to have adopted, and often feel disposed to find fault with them for sins of omission—we hate half measures—great ends are never to be obtained without firmness and decision—draw a line and move upon it—get sight of an object, go straight-forwards to it—The moon pursues her course undisturbed by the baying of the dogs—so wrote CATHERINE of Russia—and "right pithie" is the application.

It is true, and thousands are attesting witnesses to the fact, that our exertions have been eminently successful in the war against Radicalism—but we never found one single individual in the Government who had the courage openly to espouse or defend us—nay, when we were threatened with imprisonment for mistaking a single word, my LORD LONDONDERRY himself was pleased to disavow us with extraordinary warmth, and the Treasury Benches, which would have been crowded to evince a liberal feeling towards a liberal libeller, were deserted when we were brought to the bar, and accordingly, on the motion of the Hon. HENRY GREY BENNET, we were committed to an eight weeks incarceration in Newgate, for writing the word "apology" instead of "explanation,"—which eight weeks incarceration, by a curious coincidence, commenced two years ago this very day!

We care little for the smiles or frowns of these gentry it is true—we have established to ourselves a rule of action, and we will abide by it—we war with Radicals, Liberals, and REVOLUTIONISTS. Why use the three terms—the last comprehends the former two? We know that the factious leaders are at this moment as energetic in their efforts against public tranquillity as ever—every means, every stratagem is resorted to, to inculcate their horrid doctrines—to disseminate their abominable principles.

We belong to no Association, no Constitutional Club—we have never thought much of the system, and if there were real public spirit in the world, such things would be wholly useless. We are however quite aware that the existence of an efficient RADICAL PRESS is the great hope of the demagogues and demoralizers of the day, and that while they can command the majority of weekly papers in the metropolis much mischief may be done among the lower classes—we must not slumber on our posts because the enemy seems quiet.

Feeling as we do, and seeing that neither the Government nor those who care too little for the power of the press—nor the Constitutional Society, who talk too much about it—choose to avail themselves of proper opportunities for weakening the influence of the enemies of the country, we have taken upon ourselves the performance of a duty which it seems to us ought not to have been left for us to do.

First of all, then—and we will take them in order of seniority—there exists a violent radical paper called the BRITISH NEPTUNE—a paper established nearly five and thirty years since, which every Sunday flaunts and blazes through the streets of the metropolis, and disseminates all sorts of odious doctrines and anti-social sentiments—we have purchased the copyright of that Paper!

Secondly, there exists a Sunday paper called the NATIONAL REGISTER—established more than sixteen years, and which a short time since indulged in the grossest calumnies upon the most illustrious personages—it also a little fortnight ago charged us in round set terms with "lying and slandering," vilified persons in the Government as connected with us, with whom we have no more to do than we have with UGO FOSCOLO, or MR. BULLOCK'S long-horned Wapeti—we have bought the copy-right of that paper!!

Well—then there exists a paper of fair pretension, called the "BRITISH MERCURY; OR, WEDNESDAY'S EVENING POST," established some fourteen or fifteen years, all in the same strain—not done without talent, although the talent is sadly misapplied—we have bought the copy-right of THAT paper!!!

Moreover there exists a portly, full-sized journal, called the LONDON AND PROVINCIAL SUNDAY GAZETTE AND POLITICAL INQUISITOR, made up in its leading article with charges of villainy and folly upon Government, and decorated with the official advertisements of the Admiralty and Ordnance!! (a favour never conferred upon ourselves)—we have bought the copy-right of that paper!!!

In addition to these there exists a paper surmounted with a Bible and Crown, much after the fashion of our own, called the "BRITISH FREEHOLDER." By these goodly indications we suppose this must have originally been a loyal publication—it has, as well as the NATIONAL REGISTER and the BRITISH NEPTUNE, the advantage of the Government advertisements, and contained, on the 19th ultimo, an attack upon MR. CANNING, unequalled in grossness and invective—we have bought the copy-right of THAT paper!!!!

In the rear of these, is a modest, quiet sort of twaddling Radical, called the "LONDON Moderator," or NATIONAL Adviser! which does not appear to have been favourably noticed by the Treasury—which, as its principles are decidedly hostile to Government, seems odd—we thought it was a doubtful affair, and, therefore, we have bought the copy-right of THAT paper!!!!!

But moreover, and above all this, we discovered that about thirteen years since MR. COKE, of Holkham, and his present exemplary father in law, my LORD ALBEMARLE, established a Whig county paper, called "THE NORWICH COURIER AND NORFOLK GENERAL ADVERTISER." COKE, however, too happy, and LORD ALBEMARLE too poor just now to interfere in politics—we have bought the copy-right of THAT paper!!!!!!

With what view, what intention, will our readers suppose we have purchased these things—to increase our gain, to make money by them?—No!—We have purchased them for the express purpose of ANNIHILATING FIVE OF THEM ON THE INSTANT.

This day, therefore, terminates the mischievous career of—
THE BRITISH NEPTUNE,
THE NATIONAL REGISTER,
THE BRITISH FREEHOLDER,
THE LONDON MODERATOR,
And the LONDON AND PROVINCIAL SUNDAY GAZETTE.

And thus, at one "fell swoop," have we destroyed a phalanx of political depravity.

The "NORWICH COURIER," we may, perhaps, cause to be continued in the County of Norfolk, because it will be admirable matter of jest to turn the weapons of Holkham against the Whigs; of this, however, we are by no means certain, it was a vile incendiary, and perhaps its entire demolition may be the most serviceable act we can perform. We will, however, thank our excellent friends and correspondents at NORWICH, to give us their opinions upon the subject as early in the week as may be convenient, since we shall be greatly influenced by the judgment of those for whom (as we beg them to believe) we have the highest esteem.

So many absurd reports have been circulated about contributors to BULL, that we think we should in justice say, that this observation does not apply to BISHOP BATHURST.

THE BRITISH MERCURY, a Wednesday paper, we shall preserve, and we hope, in spirits. During the early part of the week hundreds of things occur to us which necessarily get stale by the Sunday following, and which are consequently lost; therefore, we shall take the "BRITISH MERCURY" into our special keeping, and publish it every Wednesday evening, making it, as it were, "a tender to the flag ship;" we shall moreover decorate it with our own "figure-head," and "bring it forward" under our own special surveillance. Persons, therefore, having abuses to expose or oppressions to complain of, may now, by application before Wednesday morning, secure notice in the "BRITISH MERCURY, OR WEDNESDAY EVENING POST."

It may be necessary to mention to the few persons who happen never to have heard of this "BRITISH MERCURY," that its shape is that of BULL, in order that those who would wish to bind it up with this paper, may see at a glance that there is no "let or hindrance" to their so doing.

When it is considered that we never have received the smallest favour from Government—not even an advertisement—that we were the only paper in London NOT honoured with a ticket for the CORONATION!—that we have no patrons but the public—that we are wholly uninfluenced and free—we trust that the proof we have just announced of our unrelaxing efforts in the good cause will meet the approbation of our numerous friends and subscribers.

WE perceive by the newspapers, that LORD LIVERPOOL, on Friday night, stated it to be the intention of Government to persist in the Irish Tythe Commutation Bill. We feel it our duty to lay before our readers as much as we are able of a communication which we have received from Ireland, and which appears to us deserving of great and immediate attention.

The official document which we lay before the public, is the following Address to the Lord Lieutenant:—

"TO HIS EXCELLENCY THE MARQUIS WELLESLEY, K. G. LORD LIEUTENANT GENERAL AND GENERAL GOVERNOR OF IRELAND.

"We, the undersigned Archbishops and Bishops beg leave to express to your Excellency our grateful acknowledgments for the communication made to us, through your Excellency's Chief Secretary, of a bill to provide for the establishing of Composition for Tithes in Ireland.

"At the present stage of the business, and in the first instance, we should account it not sufficiently respectful to your Excellency to adopt any public steps relative to the proposed measure; but we shall, with due deference to your Excellency and to the Church, that we should wish to avoid delay, submit to your Excellency our private sentiments on the subject; and we are confident that your Excellency will receive the communication with kindness, and weigh with candour, the representation which we have the liberty to lay before you.

"We entreat permission to say, that a legislative enactment, without their previous consent, would withdraw the property of the Clergy from their own management, and compel them to sue for rights which have been guaranteed to them from the first origin of our constitution, to a doubtful, and, in the natural course of things, unfriendly arbitration, destructive, as it would unquestionably be of the independence of our Church establishment, must, in our opinion, be equally destructive of its respectability, its utility, and its permanence.

"Hitherto the estate of the Church has been incorporated and identified with the mass of private property; nor has the Legislature exercised authority over it, further than in the case of dominion, by the very first enactment of the proposed Bill changes the nature of that estate, and leaves it open to future and indefinite measures. It is this which constitutes the essential difference between the Tythe Leasing Bill of the last Session, and the measure now in contemplation. The former was an optional modification—the latter is a compulsory change; and it appears to us that the beneficial effect of the Tythe Leasing Bill has not yet received any trial whatsoever. A single term of trial would, under any circumstances, have been inadequate; but the unexampled distress and difficulties of the last year, and the times themselves, have stayed the adoption of all new experiments; and the practical operation of the measure was altogether precluded by the notoriety of the fact, that a further plan was held in contemplation.

"But we have this additional, and, in our apprehension, insurmountable objection to the new Bill, that it would dissolve the union of the Church of England and Ireland, which forms a fundamental article of the solemn compact by which the kingdoms themselves are united. In England, an establishment maintained in the undiminished enjoyment of its ancient rights;—in Ireland, the very existence of an establishment destroyed by an invasion of its property, and the consequent subversion of its independence;—there would be no reverence for the preservation of that identity in doctrine, worship, discipline, and government, which, to both countries, is the great bulwark of the reformed Catholic Faith.

"We have felt it our duty thus to make the earliest possible communication of our sentiments respecting the proposed Bill; and we are not without an earnest hope, that through your Excellency's interference, its provisions may not pass into a law, and the property of the United Church may be maintained in its integrity unviolate and inviolable.

(Signed) "W. DUBLIN. J. ELPHIN.
"POWER, TUAM, &c. R. OSSORY.
"CHARLES, KILDARE. R. WATERFORD.
"GEORGE, KILMORE. JAMES, DROMORE.
"NATHANIEL, DOWN & CONNOR. RICHARD, KILLALA.
"ROBERT, CLOGHER. THOMAS, FERNS.
"I. CORK AND ROSS. W. RAPHOE.
"JAMES, KILLALLA. T. LIMERICK.

"It may be proper to state to his Excellency, that the Archbishops and Bishops who have subscribed their names to this Paper, constitute the whole of those who are at present in Ireland, with the exception of the Lord Primate, whose sentiments are known to coincide entirely with those expressed in this communication, but whose state of health (precluding, by medical authority, all application to business) has prevented this paper from being submitted for his Grace's signature.

Having submitted this paper, little more remains for us to add, except to observe upon the compulsory character of the proposed Bill, which is to take the controul and management of the property out of the actual proprietors' hands, and subject it to the arbitration of an inimical judge, by whose decision the original proprietor is to receive a maintenance out of his own property.

Surely, something of this apparent injustice might be mitigated, if the consent of the incumbent himself were necessary to the commutation; not but even then, knowing as we do the conduct which would certainly be adopted by an hostile vestry, the decision could hardly be expected to be amicable as far as regards the Clergy. Supposing too, that the appeal is made to the umpire, to be appointed by Government, that will, in all probability, stand personally, in the same situation as the vestry did corporatively, i. e. he would be a layman and confirm the lay decision of the vestry.

It has been suggested to us, that if the Bishop of the Diocese had the power of objecting to the nominee of Government, it might obviate much difficulty; for, under present conditions, it would save much time and trouble if the Government were at once to establish a Commission for the purpose of commuting the tythes, without the intervention or interference of any vestry at all.

The Bill leaves to the arbitrators, in the first instance, discretionary power to give what in their judgments they deem a sufficient recompense for tythe;—by what standard by what valuation is the arbitrator to be guided?—If there is an apparent standard fixed by the Bill, but the Government umpire is, as the dernier resort, left entirely discretion without any standard whatever!

We have hastily run our eyes over the Bill, and we intended to consider the subject more fully than we have been enabled to do; but seeing yesterday the observation of LORD LIVERPOOL reported in the newspapers, we have no time in saying that we firmly believe it to be the most desperate measure ever suggested by a conciliatory Government; that in its present shape the Bill strikes fatally at the root of PROPERTY; and by subverting, changing, and threatening the character and attributes of the Established Religion bids fair to give to POPERY, that universal dominion in IRELAND, which the agitators so anxiously desire, and which will only produce the most dreadful results to both countries.

PEOPLE, in these days of waggery, should be very cautious how they spread reports without being sure of their authenticity. We profess to know nothing of the truth of the story that the public cabriolets have been started by that active and meritorious Member of Parliament, MR. MABERLEY—but such has been the effect of the rumour, true or not—for while private carriages of similar construction are quietly called CABS, the new-invented "jingling jarvies," upon two wheels, have universally acquired the nick-name of MABERLEYS.

WE honestly confess that we regard the examination going forward at present in the House of Commons with a jealous eye, which we feel to be ENGLISH and CONSTITUTIONAL; for it appears to us that an inquisitorial investigation into the conduct of domestic life is as little likely to "conciliate" as any proceeding we remember to have witnessed in this soothing age.

That the WHIGS should feel angry with a man because he is attached to a party seems strange—and we should like to hear what MR. BROUGHAM or MR. BENNET would say if Ministers were to turn one individual out of a situation because he held under Government because he happened to be a Whig man."

The Treasury, the Admiralty, the Audit Office, the Stamp Office, the Navy Office abound in Radicals

ment we suggested in case of reductions in those establishments, that a distinction should be made in favour of the loyal servants of the Crown, the Whigs and Radicals were the first victims!

We abstain at the moment from making any farther remark upon this affair, because, from intelligence which we have received from Ireland, we suspect there will soon be a necessity for further and stronger measures with respect to that country. After obtaining a detailed account of MRS. SIBTHORPE'S tea party, or collecting a mass of information, touching the imposing facts of who played PAM, and who damned the Lord Mayor of Dublin.

MR. HUME presented, on Thursday night, a Petition from the monster CARLILE—of whom moreover he was pleased to say—that though his religious opinions—the religion of an ATHEIST—might differ from that of some other persons—that did not affect his MORAL CHARACTER, and that he (HUME) would dare any man to contradict him when he said, that as a husband, as head of a family, and as a neighbour, MR CARLILE might challenge calumny itself!—Nay, so far did MR. HUME go as to say, that "MR. CARLILE was one of the BEST MORAL CHARACTERS IN ENGLAND!!!

We could not certainly have believed that a man, and a Member of the British Parliament, could be found, who would openly in his place in the House of Commons uphold to society, as one of the BEST MORAL CHARACTERS IN ENGLAND, the man who published the following placard, which was posted in his shop windows in Fleet-street on Friday, Dec. 28, 1821.

"Two shopmen arrested this afternoon by the Bridge-street watchmen without knowing their names—worse than the Inquisition, because one of the blessed systems of the late Six Acts—PLENTY OF VOLUNTEERS TO COMBAT the VILE CREW, and the same obnoxious pamphlets may be had in spite of them—'Tis a NOBLE CAUSE and MUST PREVAIL; they shall not with their combined power shut up the TEMPLE OF REASON—Odious base gangs, you'll do no harm to the CAUSE but good rise—THIS IS THE MART FOR BLASPHEMY AND SEDITION. —Thursday, Dec. 27, 1821."

The writer of this paper is stated in the House of Commons by MR. HUME to be one of the best moral characters in England!

Perhaps, since MR. HUME is so valiant a defender of this avowed vendor and disseminator of SEDITION and BLASPHEMY, he may be able to explain what the "CAUSE" may be to which his moral friend so frequently refers. We honestly confess that when we find an Honourable Gentleman, who more than his neighbours busies himself in the affairs of CHURCH and STATE, declaring openly that BLASPHEMY and SEDITION are mere peccadillos, and that a man may deal by wholesale in both, and yet be one of the BEST MORAL CHARACTERS in England, we think it necessary, if possible, to discover what "CAUSE" it is HE himself advocates, and what the end may be to which his indefatigable industry tends.

WE lament to perceive that the canting violation of the pledge about Negro emancipation has done considerable mischief, and that petitions are accumulating in Parliament praying the abolition of slavery. We could certainly argue this point, and prove the injustice, the wickedness, the madness of such a measure, and go even so far as to shew the abominable intentions of many of those, who, under the sanction of a name, are endeavouring to create in the colonies a feeling of disorganization, and a desire for revolt, which they find it impossible to excite in the mother country. It is part of the great system—and while the amiable and exemplary West Indian Planter is held up as an object for popular hatred and attack, MR. CARLILE, the Republican and Atheist, is exhibited to the nation as "one of the best moral characters in England!"

We repeat, that the canting cry for slave emancipation is a part of the great scheme—and that, with the exception of one or two narrow-minded Methodists and drivelling Quakers, who are fooled into a mock humanity by the advances of second childhood, the body of those who advocate slave emancipation are knavish agitators and disturbers, who, finding nothing of which to complain, are anxious to induce the Government to commit a shameful injustice, in order that they may at least excite indignation, and perhaps induce the loss of our most valuable mercantile possessions by doing so.

An able pamphlet has been put into our hands, which was published in the year 1816, upon the occasion of the introduction into Parliament of the Slave Registry Bill. It is by MR. JORDAN, and we really feel that we can do no better at a moment when the vital question is pending than lay before our readers part of his well-written work.

"Of this," (says MR. JORDAN) "as a question of magnitude and of misery unparalleled—of vital importance to all in the Colonies and in Great Britain—to the consideration—to the contemplation—to the decision of this question, we are compelled, by a necessity which we deprecate, under a responsibility at which we tremble for ourselves and for all. For ourselves, therefore, and for all, and for itself, we invoke the justice of the nation for all consequences upon the heads of those who have moved it.

"The question is to be considered as it respects national interests—individual interests, even of those for whom it is proposed—and the means proposed for effecting it.

"If all national interests, emancipation, however, and whenever effected, gives the death-blow. The naval power which depends upon the commerce, the commerce which depends upon the agriculture, will fall with the agriculture. Never can the agriculture of the Colonies, and the EMANCIPATION OF THE LABOURERS CO-EXIST. Never can the agriculture be maintained under any state that shall deny to it the control over persons, and the possession of powers, which it now retains, and by which, during every day of labour in the year, it is enabled to command and to apply them. Even now the agriculture in all its daily and exactly commensurate to the extent of these powers and of this control, and the assured possession of them during the whole succession of days, months, and years. The labours of West India cultivation continue through the whole period of crops which require more than a year to begin and be completed. On every one of the six days of every week, in every month, in the whole year, the whole of the population of every plantation or village, for such it truly is, has allotted labours to perform, adapted to the powers of the various classes into which the persons are distributed. These works, at times or seasons require, are for the first classes, the most laborious preparing, planting, or reaping the crop which should repay the capitalist, or provisions to sustain the population; and for the other classes, works of inferior labour, or auxiliary to those of the first classes.

"Notwithstanding these arrangements for the year, the urgency of particular occasions frequently renders it necessary to procure auxiliary labour, that whilst one essential work is in progress, another equally indispensable may, in due season, be accomplished. All these prove that without them they would languish, and must FAIL. I appeal to all, who know the West Indies, for a confirmation of these things; AND I APPEAL TO POSTERITY UPON THE RESULT OF AND AGAINST THE EXPERIMENT, IF THE EXPERIMENT SHALL EVER BE TRIED.

"Under absolute emancipation this control can never exist—under established or supposed emancipation which shall maintain this control, all the evils complained of, and MAGNIFIED in the existing slavery, will remain. They will always remain whilst a power of coercion over man remains, which wicked persons and passions will not fail to use as now to abuse. Neither the apprenticeships of England or of Sierra Leone afford any hope, that West India apprenticeships would produce better treatment or afford more protection than is now enjoyed. That under any thing short of absolute emancipation, evils will continue—that under absolute emancipation neither the agriculture, the commerce, or the naval power will continue, I STATE; not intending to infer or decide, that this or that is to be preferred, or doned. To those to whom the fates of empires are committed I leave the decision. Towards them, towards my country, I have performed my duty by this exposition.—It yet remains to be performed towards individuals. Attachment to the soil, the state of villeinage, proposed for limitation and adoption, would yield, whilst it continued, no additional protection against evils similar to the present, to be derived from lords and bailiffs.

"Emancipation must of necessity be immediate and direct, or future, and to be produced by the insensible operation of time and circumstances effecting the change.

"That it can be immediate and direct is impossible. This is inconsistent with all the individual as well as national interests implicated, and is even by the agitators themselves of the Colonies admitted so to be.

"In the first place, the train of compensations it would naturally draw along with it, for property taken, or destroyed, or rendered of no value, exceeds all the ability of the United Kingdom to discharge, even were the Colonies called upon to contribute their full share of the expence. Great Britain never takes, for public uses or objects, individual property, without a full and duly estimated compensation. Compensation the Colonists are unquestionably entitled to demand, and beyond all doubt they are equally entitled to demand from Parliament, and do now demand protection and safety for property, and respect for rights, by declarations that shall guarantee them against all future attacks to be made thereon, under cover of parliamentary proceeding.

"To the unfortunate slaves themselves NO PROCEEDING COULD BE MORE FATAL OR DISASTROUS. The wretched white population might be withdrawn by a middle voyage of miseries and deaths to other countries the black population would proceed through massacres and destruction to establish another Africa in the American islands, and convert the settlements of British power and wealth into provision grounds of Arum and Convolvulus-Batatas roots."

We lament that we have not more space for MR. JORDAN'S observations—but we feel that we do nothing but our duty in recommending the perusal of his pamphlet to those who, led away by the impulse of a feeling sufficiently generous to dispose of other men's property, may be induced to support a measure which can only lead to murders, conflagrations, and rebellions in our colonies, and the eventual and entire loss of some of the most valuable possessions of the British Crown.

MR. FOSCOLO'S Italian Lectures are to be the fashion; they are patronized by the BLUES; and we are requested to observe, that the principle upon which they are to be conducted is the same as that adopted at the Opera. A total ignorance of the language in which they are to be delivered is not the slightest objection to a subscriber. It is a whimsical age in which we live.

BY one of those "curious coincidences" which occur in human life, we have been reading, during the last week, two books.—each the production of a MR. MOORE. It is extremely curious, moreover, to observe that both these books are political, and on the same side; the difference between them is this —one is written in prose, the other in verse; one by PETER MOORE, a gentleman who is returned for Coventry—the other by THOMAS MOORE, a gentleman who has just returned from it. The one assumes to be extremely grave, and is irresistibly comical—the other struggles to be gay, and is insufferably dull.

The two MOORES, it is most certain, have nothing in common, except a malevolent desire of attacking and degrading their betters. PETER is stupid and vulgar—TOMMY clever and accomplished; PETER is heavy and dull—TOMMY light and lively; PETER labours hard to get a reputation—TOMMY works still harder to knock a reputation down.

PETER'S motives to writing we do not pretend to analyze.—TOMMY'S are pretty evident; but we think that neither of them will find his end answered by the performances which it is our business, or rather our pleasure, at the present moment to consider. PETER MOORE'S book, called "a Voice from England," is written to prove that BUONAPARTE was anxious for peace with us; a fact pretty well established by conversations of his own, retailed in all the pamphlets, Memoirs, Manuscrits, and Voices, which have been published from St. Helena; but when the views and objects which he avowed upon the same occasions are taken into consideration, we think PETER might have spared this terrible exposition of himself, without injuring the memories of the Statesmen he (unfortunately for them) has undertaken to defend.

We will quote some of his book, in order to give our readers an idea of the style, diction, doctrines, and sentiments, of which it is made up.

The preface, which constitutes the principal part of the work, indeed the whole of it, since the rest is a mere compilation of old State papers—runs to a great length; the first thirty pages are made up of information of this nature.

"SOCRATES, TULLY, NEWTON, lived to instruct, to delight, and improve the mind." (P. ix.)—"CYRUS, ALEXANDER, AUGUSTUS, JUSTINIAN, ALFRED, had some of the infirmities incidental to our nature." (Ib.)—"ALEXANDER, when he had vanquished PORUS, desired to see that Prince." (Ib.)—"Custom-house duties are as useful a branch of taxation in one government as another." (P. xv.)—And at page xviii. the learned author justly observes, that "every one knows that he who buys may sell again—the rule is general, and may apply to any case!"

At p. xx. he cites COKE upon LITTLETON, and alludes to WINDEBANK'S seizure of the former's papers. At p. xxii. and xxiii. he refers to the histories of Judea, of Athens, of Rome, of Carthage, of France—the Thirty Tyrants who poisoned SOCRATES—MOSES and PONTIUS PILATE!—and that in a manner which forcibly reminds us of LINGO'S jumble in the farce—"MOSES, HERCULES, HELIOGABALUS, JULIUS CÆSAR, and WAT TYLER!"—When MR. MOORE, however, gets warm with his subject—whatever it may be—he bursts into a superior strain—for instance, at p. xxx. we have this clear, brilliant, and powerful passage:—

"If it be to dictate a civil polity and constitution to an independent people that the Cordon Sanitaire or Army of Observation was drawn up at the Pyreneean frontier, then it is clear that this Cordon is no more nor less than a nucleus of incendiary influence and movements, whose focus inflames the torch of disloyalty and treason to the acknowledged constitutions of Spain and of Portugal—a centre of appui, to which traitors and malcontents may fly for shelter and support."

This is in the writer's best style—the Cordon being a nucleus whose focus inflames a torch, and is yet a centre of appui, is happily imagined and beautifully expressed—but his account of the change of the French Directory to a Consular Government is perhaps even more intelligible—the author says (p. xxxii.):—

"The excesses committed by the French will ever sully their national glory, but all this confusion yielded in its turn to the formation of an oligarchy in the persons of the five Directors, and this again soon merged in the Consulate of three."

Now, we confess that except in the instance of a well-dressed waiter—we mean no personal allusion to the author—who screws a bottle of claret into a pint decanter, and charges nothing for the legerdemain, we do not exactly remember to have seen a greater object merge in a smaller. According to PETER'S definition, it would seem that as five Directors merged in three Consuls, each Consul must

"Have looked like a tun,
"Or two single gentlemen rolled into one."

—We really do not wish to cast an air of ridicule upon that which PETER means to be extremely grave and powerful, but the thing strikes us exactly as we express it, and may afford a satisfactory reason to the curious, for the increased size of the illustrious BUONAPARTE in his latter days.

At page xxxvi, after indulging in an extremely long and somewhat inflated panegyric upon this said BUONAPARTE and his "ancestors," who, in point of fact, were very little more respectable than his own, the author makes this observation, upon which we shall take the trouble to make one or two more. He says—

"There exists a closer affinity between MORAL and POLITICAL integrity than statesmen appear to conceive;—the maxims of private life ought to regulate public conduct," &c.

This is very good, and very proper, and very true too; but why PETER, when he sat down to praise BUONAPARTE and FOX—being the sworn friend of the party to which the last belonged—the faithful but humble attendant in his family—should have written it, we cannot exactly understand; because, as matter of history, we need only refer to the moral integrity of BUONAPARTE, contrasted with that of GEORGE THE THIRD, whose conduct, as well as that of his Ministers, is the object of PETER'S vituperation. We need only compare the moral integrity of MR. PITT (designated by PETER "the Heaven-born Minister," by way of ridicule) with the moral integrity of MR. FOX, his idol, or with that of my LORD HOLLAND, or even with that of my LORD HOLLAND'S father, and we shall find, that however just PETER'S reasoning upon the point may be, neither the friends we have just named, nor the friends of another whom we will not name, will feel particularly thankful to him for advocating a principle which cannot fail to lower them in the political world to a comparative rank with that which they hold in private society.

One thing is unfortunately evident—that zeal or ambition to do something, has very strongly excited PETER, upon this occasion; and accordingly he exposes his woeful ignorance with the most callous indifference, or, we should say, hardened resolution. What will the reader think of an eminent Whig diplomatist who says this—

"But let MR. MASSARIA'S narrative stand as in the autograph. I am content that the public judgment should be formed on it as it is. The autograph (in the hand-writing of MASSARIA) is in my possession."—p. lxxxvii.

PETER clearly does not know what an autograph is—how should he? The curious part of the thing is, that the old body, at his time of life, should thus put himself so completely at the mercy of the public.

Hear PETER'S account of his own preface—

"The reader will perceive that this preface is not the offspring of a heartless, cold, calculating policy, but the effusion of a heart bleeding for the distresses of his fellow-citizens; and a mind indignant at the wrongs put upon a generous and confiding, but pillaged and deluded people."

Did any body hear such stuff before? This legislator of the servants' hall; this diplomatist of the pantry; this man, who could not administer the affairs of a play-house, (the height of his ambition) who does not know the meaning of the words he uses, affects to tell us that his heart bleeds for our distresses—and moreover that his heart is a citizen. What absurdity! What wrongs do the people of ENGLAND suffer? Where upon earth are people so free and so happy as we? Who cares one straw about the catchpenny autographs (manuscripts he means) which he has published, or of what interest can an address to the People of France, printed in 1788, be at the present moment? What advantage can accrue from the perusal of an autograph of his own to LORD MACARTNEY, or LORD MACARTNEY'S autograph in answer?

PETER had better never dabble with pen and ink, and least of all speak of moral integrity, and "a heart bleeding for our distresses." We would advise PETER to look at home, and study the government of his own family—a man whose heart bleeds for distress where it does not exist, will get very little credit for his high-flown ungrammatical bombast, so long as that heart is callous to the calls of nature—to the implorings of a broken-hearted son and a wretched family—we have no patience with such humbug. "Cedant Arma Togæ" is PETER'S motto, which he repeats perpetually, so pleased is he with his bit of Latin. "Cedant Arma Togæ" again and again, quoth he, and of this, MR. MASSARIA'S autograph in his own hand writing, and five Directors merged in Three Consuls he may be proud and happy, but he must serve up his heart to us—the qualities of his head are quite enough to make us laugh. We do not wish to cut deeper, and therefore recommend him not to make any thing worse of himself than a fool, towards the consummation of which character, nature, it must be confessed, has done every thing for him.

From this dull and dronish person turn we to his once light, bright, and fluttering name-sake, and as we have shewn the absurdity of PETER'S seriousness, we will now exhibit the dulness of TOMMY'S gaiety.

We see in the Liberal, things curiously corresponding with things in this book, the leading feature of which is, one which we were not prepared to encounter, we mean downright stupidity. That TOMMY meant to be bitter may be easily understood by the fact, that DENMAN has legally edited the work—the LONGMANS trembled for their ears till this censor had given an opinion upon the dangerous parts of the libels which they were so proud to publish—it may be owing to this emasculation that the Fables are incorrigibly dull. They are flat, and so unlike the last productions from the same pen, that instead of exciting disgust they only provoke contempt.

One is a Fable about looking-glasses, the point of which turns upon the necessity of seeing one's own face, in order to ascertain whether another person is handsome.

This—if not to the purpose, is pat—and as national as the suicide of TOMMY'S countryman, who looked at himself in a mirror and shot it to pieces, intending thereby to destroy himself.

Some ribaldry called the little LAMA is distinguished by nothing but grossness of expression and indelicate descriptions of the correction of a child in the nursery, unless indeed we except a ridicule of HUME and BENNET, who are described as indulging in

"Long debates
"Upon the nursery estimates—
"What cutting down of swaddling clothes,
"And pinafores in nightly battles—
"What calls for papers to expose
"The waste of sugar-plumbs and rattles!"

The "Extinguishers" follow this, the ground-work of which is attributable to the wit of one LUTTRELL, a Whig-wag, on whom his friends were once pleased to bestow the title of editor of this paper. This LUTTRELL is very popular with the writers against legitimate Monarchs, and is in truth better than most of the set, but rather too fine—considering.

"Rhymes on the Road" are dullest of the dull. The only part which is tolerable is the pun about the "Unfortunate Attachment," and "Doctors' Commons," which will be lost upon most readers. What surprizes us most, however, is the frequent recurrence of platitudes, of bungling metre and unjingling rhymes—take now for instance this couplet,—

"Regular gratia DEI blockheads,
"Born with three kingdoms in their pockets."

Or this concluding stanza of the "FLY and the BULLOCK:"

"'No wonder,' said t'other, 'you stare at the sight,
"'But we as a symbol of monarchy view it,
"That Fly on the shrine is legitimate right,
"And that Bullock's the people that's sacrificed to it!"

That's the people that's sacrificed—this may be mighty good Irish, but it is not English.

The spirit of ridiculing established institutions developes itself in the most contemptible puerilities throughout the whole work—for instance—

"The Bishops, who of course had votes,
"By right of age and petticoats."

Or,

"One must have seen them ere one could
"Imagine properly JUDGE WOOD,
"Performing in his wig so gaily
"A pas seu de chat with JUSTICE BAILEY."

The object of endeavouring to render ridiculous in the eyes of the people, the attributes of divinity and law, is quite evident, but whatever the design may be, the execution, in the present instance, is beyond measure lame and impotent.

The "Rhymes on the Road" affect a vast deal of religion and morality here and there, and, dull as they are, are evidently added to induce decent people to read, or at least purchase the fables which precede them; this is a good sign, for morality; if not in the writer, at least in the public—and affords a striking instance of the weakened influence of Whig scurrility, and the unwholesome state of radical ribaldry, which cannot now get access to society unless under convoy of something assuming to be better than themselves.

The fifth extract is, to be sure, on the other hand, much after the manner of the late MR. LITTLE—the seventh is the history of MARY MAGDALENE—the eighth an account of ROUSSEAU'S Ménage, full of jokes against ladies, who "Would bridle up their virtuous chins,

"In horror at her sin of sins," &c. &c.

And praises of freedom,

"Sounding her timbrels to set free,
"This bright world labouring in th' eclipse
"Of Priestcraft and of slavery!"

In short, the book is a book of contradictions from beginning to end. At page 143, we have a panegyric upon LORD JOHN RUSSELL, followed by a supposed epitaph upon LORD ERSKINE! at p. 148, some extremely childish lines upon "My Birth-day;" "A ridicule of Marriage," in his worst style, fit only for MR. POWER in the Strand; a dull translation from CATULLUS; and some pretty lines to "My Mother," which lie like a pure pearl, deep in the mud by which they are surrounded; it is worth while soiling one's fingers, however, to pick them out, but lest we should excite too much curiosity, and tend to the circulation of such a book, we will extract them.

"They tell us of an Indian tree,
"Which, howsoe'er the sun and sky
"May tempt its boughs to wander free,
"And shoot and blossom wide and high,
"For better loves to bend its arms
"Downward again to that dear earth,
"From which, the life that fills and warms
"Its grateful being, first had birth.
"'Tis thus, though woo'd by flattering friends,
"And fed with fame, (if fame it be),
"This heart, my own dear mother, bends
"With love's true instinct, back to thee."

Nothing can be prettier than the idea—than the sentiment: why is it that a man who, as a son, could write this, and who, as a husband and a father is kind and affectionate? why is it that such a man should be the author of the "Twopenny Post Bag"—the "Fudge Family"—and the "Fables for Congress?" We are afraid, for the honour of human nature, to answer the question.

A "Speculation" on "LAMBTON" is not bad; "Lines on the Entry of the Austrians into Naples" is after the manner of MR. CHARLES PHILLIPS at the Old Bailey; a bad joke of poor TOM SHERIDAN'S is badly versified, and introduced with bad taste; the "Country Dance and Quadrille" is borrowed in idea from MISS FANSHAWE'S "Death of the Minuet." We discover, however, from it, upon the subject of quadrilling, that there is better authority than our own for the late falling off in marriages.

"SIR WILLIAM SCOTT—now BARON STOWELL,
"Declares not half so much is made
"By licenses (and he must know well)
"Since vile quadrilling spoil'd the trade."—p. 183.

We have, however, no more room for TOMMY, nor do we require it. The verse and prose of the Messrs. MOORES will do no harm to any body, if, indeed, we except their publishers. In the one there is not talent sufficient to make it intelligible; in the other, not wit enough to make it saleable. The third great author of the same name (we mean the Almanack-maker) this year beats his namesakes hollow in both departments.

THEATRICALS.

AT length we have a novelty to announce. To the fine weather, which makes every thing come out, we suppose we are indebted for this bud of genius—an Opera called "CLARI," from the pen of an American body of the name of PAYNE, which was produced at Covent Garden on Thursday, is the object of our criticism.

This piece, during the last week, has been studiously disowned by MR. BISHOP, the musical composer, which circumstance of itself prepared us for the sort of thing we were to expect.

Everybody has seen CLARI at the French Opera—every body who has seen it must have admired it; it certainly is one of the most affecting and effective ballets we ever remember. The moral, on the French stage, is objectionable—here that fault is got rid of; but nevertheless the thing is spoiled by the introduction of dialogue and songs, which latter are thrust upon the audience after the true English fashion; that is to say, they occur at times and under circumstances, when no human being would think of singing, and are ushered in by set speeches, which themselves render the coming air wholly unnecessary, even by way of chorus.

MR. PAYNE is the person, we believe, who made that exquisitely comical piece called BRUTUS, where Lightning enters and knocks off a pasteboard man's head—a five act pantomime, in which MR. KEAN was irresistible as Clown; he has been at his old tricks in CLARI—marring effects by bungling dialogue, and putting "tropes and figures" into the mouth of an old farmer.

The pleasure which the writers of MR. PAYNE'S school feel in having slaps at the aristocracy, even in a melo-drame, is extremely great, and accordingly MR. FAWCETT, as ROLARMO, (which, to be serious, must be pronounced ROLARMO, and not ROLEYMO!) deals out many of those finger-shaking growls which COLMAN first gave him the habit of doing in JOB THORNBERRY. We beg MR. COLMAN'S pardon for mentioning his name in a critique upon CLARI; but he will excuse us when we also mention even a greater author than himself—we mean SHAKSPEARE; for from HAMLET did the French ballet-master steal the incident of the play at the chateau, and which was so managed on the French stage as most ingeniously to shew the audience what had occurred to the heroine previous to her abduction from her father's house. In the ballet, where no words were used which could convey the story to the audience, the incident was most effective; here, where the thing is all destroyed by trashy writing, the play becomes useless and absurd, because it is only a scenic repetition of facts of which the audience are previously aware, and is moreover loaded with MR. PAYNE'S dialogue.

Nothing could palliate the crime of making this pretty thing into a dull Opera, but the opportunity it affords MISS TREE of shewing the scope of her talents, and the force of her genius. In the scene where Rolarmo sees Clari on her return, FAWCETT was admirable—MISS TREE beyond her-self; but to us who remember the disposition of the French stage at this point of the piece, the inimitable acting (without the aid of words) of the French Corps de Ballet, we confess, with all its excellence, it was disappointing.

MISS TREE sang, and sang most delightfully. one song which we may fairly rank amongst BISHOP'S happiest efforts—not that we admire BISHOP'S songs in the same degree as we admire what we believe are called in stage cant, "combined pieces"—his finales—his quartetts, quintetts, choruses, are far and away the best English compositions we ever heard; but the same superiority is not to be found in his songs generally speaking; nor can we in justice say, that the music of Clari is at all in his first style—save and except the song to which we allude, which has the double merit of being not only the best in the Opera, but the best we remember to have heard from the same composer. Of the Overture, we would rather say nothing.

MR. KEELEY had assigned to him the arduous task of enlivening the mortal dullness of the evening, and he succeeded admirably. This actor is not yet sufficiently known to the town, but as we prophesied the first time we saw him, so we continue to predict, that in a certain line of humorous characters, MR. KEELEY will hereafter be as popular as ever were WESTON, SHUTER, or LISTON himself.

The English under-plot, made up of Valets and Soubrettes, is as absurd and tiresome as English operatical under-plots usually are. MISS LOVE, however, looked and sung prettily, and MR. PEARMAN did his "little all" to support the piece, which was received with approbation, and will run about eight nights—at least, if it goes to the ninth it will be attributable rather to the liberality of the managers than to the merits of the importer.

We are extremely sorry to hear that ELLISTON still continues seriously ill—we lament it upon many accounts; we are also induced to notice a melancholy occurrence relative to theatrical matters, which took place last week, in hopes of being serviceable to a large and destitute family. The Prompter of Drury-lane, whose name was KERR or CARR, and who was also, we believe, at one time a player, died suddenly on Saturday se'nnight, leaving a widow and fourteen children. A subscription has been entered into for their relief, to which we have contributed our mite; and we cannot resist this opportunity of calling the attention of the "gifted and giving" portion of our subscribers to a case which seems one of bitterness and sorrow.

Those persons who have seen ANATOLE dance at the Opera will perceive the advantages we have secured to the decent part of that fashionable assembly—we will ask whether the delicate appearance of that exquisite performer does not afford what the Cocknies call a "refreshing" contrast to the gross and abominable exhibitions at which our remarks have been levelled? We are secure of the answer, nor will we cease our observations till we have succeeded either in shaming the performers from their indecency, or shaming decent society from tolerating it.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARIS, MAY 6.—The Moniteur of the 5th contains the following telegraphic dispatch:—"The advanced guard of General Molitor has advanced upon Fraga. The Royalist garrison of Mequinenza has taken possession of the fort and town of Alcaniz. Ballesteros has retreated from Caltagud upon Roca. Several battalions of Royalists are organizing at Saragossa."

The French continue to extend themselves along the line of the Ebro, and the Spaniards, under Ballesteros, to carry on their systematic retreat, inclining towards New Castile.

The private letters from Paris state, that the plan of operations is altered for the first corps of the invading army. The Duke of Angouleme, it appears, has sent orders to Gen. Molitor to advance on Catalonia, with the view of drawing Mina from his present positions, and attacking him on one side; thus leaving Marshal Moncey to pursue his operations in Catalonia on the other. The 2d corps will thus remain separate from the 1st and 3d, to repulse Mina and Ballesteros; and while with the 1st corps and the whole of the reserve, the Commander-in-Chief advances on Madrid, the third corps will continue the blockade of St. Sebastian and Pampeluna.

The Drapeau Blanc has an extract of a private letter from Frankfort on the Oder, dated April 23d, which says, "it is quite true that Russia is assembling an army of observation on the frontiers of Poland; an army, it is said, of nearly 120,000 men."—The Duchess of Angouleme arrived at Montauban on the 2d.

Yesterday morning, Count Pozzo di Borgo, the Russian Ambasador, despatched a courier extraordinary for Petersburgh.—Journal des Debats.

VITTORIA, MAY 2.—The advanced guard of General Molitor has proceeded to Fraga.—The Royalist garrison of Mequinenza has occupied the fort and city of Alcaniz. Ballesteros has retired from Calatayud on Daroca. Many battalions of the Royalist Spaniards are forming at Saragossa.

Ballasteros has precipitately retired on Valencia, without defending the fort of Alcaniz, which is in our power. Marshal Moncey and General Molitor have made a movement on the flank and rear of Mina.—Etoile.

PETERSBURGH, MARCH 30.—The differences which hitherto subsisted between our Court and the Porte have been amicably adjusted; and M. de Tatischeff is mentioned as the Minister destined to proceed to Constantinople."

TO JOHN BULL.

SIR—We beg to inform you, our friends, and the public, that CLARKSON, "whose suspension from practice as a Proctor in the Commons, for malpractices, was reported in your Paper of the 4th inst. is in no way connected in business with William Clarkson, and Frederick Clarkson, Proctors in Doctors' Commons, under the firm of "Clarkson and Son."—We are, Sir, your Servants, CLARKSON AND SON.

Doctors' Commons, 6th May, 1823.

MISCELLANEOUS.

On Tuesday the Duke of York, as Commander-in-Chief, held a Levee at his Office in the Horse Guards, which was attended by Lord Grey, Lord Churchill, Generals Lottus, Gascoyne, Colborne, Generals Sir J. Dalrymple, Sir W. Robinson, Barlow, Donkin, Stevenson, Sir J. Erskine, Thomas, Major-Generals Sir D. Pack, Anderson.

On Tuesday night a King's Messenger left town with despatches for Spain, to Sir William A'Court.

On Sunday night, about ten o'clock, Mr. Hamilton arrived in Downing-street, with dispatches, said to be from Spain.

On Friday the Lord Chancellor had an audience of His Majesty.

The Lord Mayor gave his usual Easter entertainment on Tuesday. The Duke of York, Prince Leopold, most of the Cabinet Ministers, and a long list of persons of distinction, were present at dinner. The Ball in the evening was opened by the Baronet's son and Miss Hunter.

NAVAL APPOINTMENTS.—Capt. J. Ryder Burton, to the Ocean, and Capt. A. P. Arbuthnot, to the Jupiter.

Rendezvous houses have been opened on Tower-hill, for the election of able and ordinary seamen, for 11 ships of the line, three frigates, six sloops of war, and two cutters.

The Thomas Coutts, East Indiaman, in coming up the River Thursday, took the ground, and very soon went over on her beam ends; great part of her cargo, it is feared, will be lost.

General Pepe took his departure from the metropolis on Wednesday for the Peninsula.

The Anniversary Meeting of the Bible Society was held on Monday at Freemasons' Hall; Lord Teignmouth in the Chair. The Earl of Harrowby, Lord Bexley, the Bishop of Gloucester, Lord Calthorpe, and other distinguished persons were present.

NEW SOUTH WALES.—The arrival of His Majesty's ship Success brings letters and papers from Sydney to the 23d Sept. Captain Gray, the Commander, has returned to England to lay before the Lords of the Admiralty the full results of his voyages of discovery on the western coast of Australia, Holland, in completion of those performed by Capt. Flinders.

We learn that by the fall of a tree near New Brunswick, on Monday last, Mr. Mathews, the comedian, received some injury, and that Mr. Price, the manager of the New York Theatre, had his leg broken. These gentlemen were going from Philadelphia to New York in a private carriage.—Washington Gazette, April 3.

About four o'clock on Saturday evening last, Mr. Webb, of the East India Dock, went to shut up and lock the large iron gate, and one of the hinges, fell upon and crushed him almost to death; the weight of his fob was smashed to pieces. He lingered in extreme agony till five o'clock on Sunday morning, when he expired.

On Monday last as some workmen were digging a drain at the entrance of the stable-yard opposite St. John's College, Cambridge, the skull of the skeleton of a human being was discovered about two feet and a half below the surface of the ground. The skull was perfect, and appears to be that of a woman. No vestiges of a coffin were found.

On Tuesday afternoon, Mrs. Baxter, a widow lady, 72 years of age, who resided at 91, White Lion-street, Clerkenwell, entered a hackney coach for the purpose of going to the Bank to receive a dividend, when the servant was shutting the door, she fell off the seat lifeless.

On Friday se'nnight, a fire was discovered in the threshing machine belonging to the Grange Farm, near Romford, occupied by Mr. H. Gibbons, which communicated to a barn and granary adjoining, which, with the threshing machine, were destroyed.

On Thursday, a fire broke out in the back shop of Mr. Dupree, copper-plate printer, Tottenham-street, during the absence of the family at their dinner, which destroyed the whole of the plates, printing materials, presses, &c.

On Tuesday last, a fire broke out upon Barshot Heath, in the vicinity of the Royal Military College, which continued to rage for several hours, and caused great consternation. Had it not been for the well-timed exertions of the Gentlemen Cadets of the Royal Military College, it must have occasioned considerable damage. It is said to have been the act of incendiaries.

On Wednesday se'nnight a fire broke out in the malt-house of Mr. Lovelock, in the parish of Speen, which consumed the same, together with upwards of 60 quarters of malt, and 26 pockets of hops.

On Tuesday evening, the tower of the Church of Weston near Cambridge, falling upon the roof of the church, broke through it, destroyed the seats and pews; the other part fell to the West, where the tower contained five bells, four of which were broken by the fall.

On Saturday last as a woman, named Elizabeth Bire, was collecting sticks for fuel in a field near Hayle, Devon, she was stung in the hand by an adder, which, notwithstanding the efforts made to prevent the progress of the poison, occasioned her death on Tuesday last.

The drivers of the two new Colchester coaches were fined each 3l. 7s. each, including costs, for furiously driving at the extraordinary rate of from 14 to 15 miles an hour. Henry Lucell, servant to Mr. Mabbs, of Ramsden, was fined 18s. including costs; and another was fined 2l. for riding in their waggons without reins.

On Tuesday, as Mr. Henry Chase, brewer, of Parson's-green, Fulham, was returning from Chelsea, on horseback, in trying to save two children, who were crossing the road, near Butters-shaw, he pulled his horse up so suddenly, that he lost his seat, pitched on his head, and was so injured that he died the next day.

In the Court of Chancery on Friday, an Injunction had been moved for to restrain proceedings in an action at law, on a bond in the sum of 11,000l. by the executor under the late Mr. Pickford's will, against the son of the testator. Mr. Pickford, Jun. was indebted to his father in 16,000l. and he gave a bond as a security for part of that sum, amounting to 11,000l. The will directed that he should pay, as interest on the bond to his executors, 800l. a year for five years, and then 1200l. a year for three years, but the executors had thought proper to bring an action for the immediate payment of the whole bond. His father was clearly of opinion that the executors were not entitled to have any thing more than the instalments of the 800l. a year for five years, and 1200l. a year for three years; and that therefore they must be restrained from proceeding at law.

In the Court of King's Bench, on Wednesday, Counsel moved for a rule in the case of the King v. Kenworthy (which came before the Court from the Chester Assizes upon writ of error.) It was an indictment for perjury, on which defendant was found Guilty. The question before the Court was, that the defendant should be transported for seven years to New South Wales or islands adjacent. The ground of error was, that this sentence was not conformable to the provisions of the Statute, which should have been expressed "to such place beyond the seas as his Majesty the King in Council shall appoint." It was contended that there having been no judgment given, the only course for the Court to pursue was, to quash the writ of error, as being improperly sued out.—The Court said the proper course, no judgment having been given, was to transmit the record back to the Court below that thereupon it might pass judgment.—On Friday, in the case of the King v. the Mayor and Aldermen of the Borough of Truro, which was a quo warranto information, calling on the defendant to show what authority they elected certain persons to serve the office of Aldermen of the said borough. The question turned upon the construction of the Corporation Charter. The Court decided that no person not a number of capital Burgesses should be present at the election of the Alderman than at the election of a Mayor; and the sense with regard to the office of Recorder or capital Burgess. The Court directed Judgment to be entered for the Crown.

The premises of Messrs. Graham and Browne, at Riverston, about five miles from Cork, was attacked by a party of five persons, who fired through the door; three slugs lodged in the wall. Mr. Browne then opened the door, and they demanded arms; he gave them his old gun and a fowling-piece.—Patrick and James Minnane (brothers) whose comrade (the notorious Oliver Fitzgerald) was executed last summer at Quebec, in America, have been found in the house of William Power, of Craigyard, near Shanagolden, concealed between a feather bed and the sackcloth bottom, and two females, one a fine young woman, lying on the bed over them. Patrick (the elder) is represented as a well-spoken fellow; in the streets of Rathkeal he harangued the people, and desired them never to despair, that he was true, and would be so to the last. These two men, with others, are charged with the murder of Major Hare, of Mount-Henry, in this county, last year, and many other offences.—Limerick Chronicle.

NEW SYSTEM OF GEOGRAPHY.

Just published, price 7s. 6d. Part the Seventh,

A SYSTEM of UNIVERSAL GEOGRAPHY. By M. MALTE BRUN, Editor of the "Annales des Voyages," &c.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London; and Adam Black, Edinburgh.—The Work is to be completed in Seven Octavo Volumes.

Just published, in small 8vo. illustrated with fifteen Plates, price 8s. 6d. bds.

AN EASY INTRODUCTION to SHORT-HAND, in which the Sounds of the English language are analyzed and expressed in a new manner; combining facility and expression with neatness, brevity, and elegance. By JOHN MOON.—Published by Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London; and Batchelier and Rigden, Dover.

Just published, in 12mo, price 4s. boards, the Second Edition of FAMILY DEVOTION; a Course of Morning and Evening PRAYERS, for four weeks; chiefly selected from the Devotional Writings of Prayers, for four weeks; chiefly selected from the Devotional Writings of Prayers, for four weeks; chiefly selected from the Devotional Writings of Prayers

LATEST NEWS.

Paris papers down to yesterday have arrived; they contain an Order of the Day, dated Vittoria, May 2, prescribing the line of march to Madrid for the different corps. General Bourk's corps will remain at Burgos to maintain the communication between Santander and Madrid. Prince Hohenlohe's corps is to continue the blockade of St. Sebastian and Pampeluna; General Molitor's corps will remain on the Ebro; and the Duke de Reggio's corps will proceed by Palencia, Valladolid, Segovia, Guardarma, and Galonagas. The head-quarters of the Duke d'Angouleme are to be successively at Burgos, Aranda, Ruirago, and Alcovendas, the last position being seven or eight miles north of Madrid. The Duke was to break up from Vittoria on the 5th inst.; Amarante and Rego have both entered Spain, the former to aid the Royalists, the latter to make cause with the Constitutionalists.

In the Court of King's Bench, yesterday, Richard and Samuel Northcote, (smugglers) were sentenced to be imprisoned 13 months in Dorchester Gaol for smuggling, and obstructing revenue officers.

Wm. Benbow, the publisher, was brought up for an obscene publication. The defendant now delivered up a number of copies, stitched and in sheets, and put in an affidavit stating that he had, in compliance with the intimation thrown out by the Court, obtained all the copies of the work in his power. The Chief Justice intimated to the counsel for the prosecution that the opinion of the Court was, that no judgment should be prayed. It would then hang over the head of the defendant, who would understand that should the work be re-published he would certainly be brought up for judgment.

The King v. Barry O'Meara.—This was a prosecution for libel against the defendant at the instance of Sir Hudson Lowe. The Court ordered that the rule should stand over to next term.

In the Common Pleas, yesterday, the rule obtained against the Warden of the Fleet was discharged; the Court being of opinion that the table of fees laid down near a century ago by Chief Justice Eyre must be abided by.

A Meeting was held on Friday at the Freemasons' Tavern of the Society for Converting the Jews to Christianity. Upwards of 500 ladies were present. The Report was read, which stated the subscriptions for the last year to be 10,000l. and called for more money.

The dispatches were closed on Friday at the East India House, and delivered to the Pursers of the Marquis of Wellington and Princess Charlotte of Wales, for Madras and Bengal.

A fire broke out at Windsor on Wednesday, in the premises of Mr. Disbrow, bookseller, which consumed the same, together with that of Mr. Clode, corn-chandler. Mr. Roberts, a grocer, Mr. Blunt's, saddler, and greatly damaged a Mrs. Ward's, adjoining; it was then got under. Every assistance was rendered by the cavalry and foot in barracks.

Twenty Thousand Pounds a Month!—CARROLL again. The Lottery finished Drawing on Thursday last, when No. 8778, another Grand Prize of £20,000 was sold in shares by Carroll, being the Fourth that has been sold in the last Four Months, at his fortunate Offices, No. 19, Cornhill, and 28, Oxford-street, where the fortunate holders may receive their money on demand.

A Translation of the MEMOIRS of the celebrated and eccentric GENERAL RAPP, the First Aide-de-Camp to Napoleon, written by himself, will be published in a few days.

The MEMOIRS of the late WILLIAM HAYLEY, Esq., the Friend and Biographer of Cowper, we hear are to be published in a few days,—Of this important work, which formed a principal object of Mr. Hayley's attention, during the latter part of his life, the Author speaks thus, in his Introduction:—"The life of a respectable author, free, and of privacy in all the periods of his existence, seems at first to offer materials for nothing more than a short and simple history; but incidents, very singular in themselves, and productive of consequences no less extraordinary, befell the subject of this Memoir, and though ever devoted to retirement himself, he had so much intercourse with many of the most memorable characters of his time, that a fair and full account of him must inevitably be a work of considerable interest."

We are requested to state that the 5th and 6th Parts of LAS CASES' JOURNAL of the CONVERSATIONS of NAPOLEON are now published, and contain, among a variety of other curious details, Napoleon's own relation of his return from Elba and arrival at Paris; his escape from Egypt; his projects had he returned conqueror from the invasion of Russia; his political defence sketched by himself, &c. &c. &c.

KING GEORGE IV.—The Nobility, Gentry, and Public are respectfully informed, that an admirable executed Portrait of his present Majesty, and of the strictest fidelity in its resemblance of the Royal original, will be shortly published, at Sams's Royal Subscription Library, St. James's street, when he trusts that this elegant production will be deemed acceptable to those who may be unprovided with an accurate likeness of our Gracious King.—N.B. A few remaining copies of the celebrated Pictorial Representation of the Coronation Procession may be had as above.

The fashionable house of Askew and Co. have received from their manufactory in Tuscany a new importation of White Chip Hats and Foreign Flowers, which they beg leave to offer for the inspection of the Nobility and Gentry.—95, Oxford street.

RUDINGOTE DU MATIN.—This entire new article is offered as an elegant finish to dress for Public breakfasts, Vauxhall, &c. It is lace of British manufacture, the pattern worked to the bust, and has the recommendation to the fashionable world of being unique; it never having been introduced previous Dixon, Willson, and Co., grateful for the patronage of those novelties, respectfully announce their exertions shall not slacken to render their establishment the most fashionable Mart, of the kind, in London. Real Brussels sprigged Veils from 30s. Just imported, a large collection of Mechlin and Valenciennes laces, decidedly cheap.—Foreign and British Lace Warehouse, No. 237, Regent Street, facing the Argyll Rooms.

FLOWER STANDS, GARDEN AND RUSTIC SEATS, SUMMER HOUSES, and Tubs complete for Aloes, Orange, and all other Fancy Trees, the largest assorted choice and the greatest variety of Patterns ever seen at one place, are now on show at John Gray and Son's Flower-Stand, Guard, and Turtle Seat Manufactory, Japanned, Dyed, and Windsor Chair, Couch, Sofa, Venetian, and Parlour Blind, and Bedstead Manufactory, and very cheap general Furniture Warehouse. Very liberal allowance to Merchants, Captains, and Shippers of Chairs and Furniture.—Rustic House, 29, City Road, near Finsbury-square.

ELEGANT GLASSES, FURNITURE, &c.—The Nobility and Gentry are invited to inspect the Warehouse of Cooper and Son, 32, Bishopsgate Within, where is exhibited a large Assortment of new and second-hand Pier Glasses, admirably suited to every description of drawing or dining-rooms. The prices are just reduced 40 per cent. on plates measuring 100 inches by 72, and upwards; and on those of smaller dimensions the alteration will be found equally important. The extensive preference given to this Establishment is thankfully acknowledged by the Proprietors, who, in their endeavours to merit their gratitude, by manufacturing articles in a superior manner, at prices suitable to the times, hope to merit a continuance of public support. In the furniture department is comprised every new and elegant article of upholstery, cabinet, and chair work, regulated upon such a scale of economy as to demand and ensure the patronage of rank and fashion.

A candid examination of professional pretensions is only to be feared by those who are conscious of incapacity.—Messrs. Goss and Co. Members of the Royal College of Surgeons, confine their studies to the treatment of such disorders as arise from nervous debility. Their works, "The Ægis of Life," and "Hygeiana," (the latter addressed to females) in full explanation of these subjects, may be had at No 20, Paternoster-row, London, Porter, 72, Grafton street, Dublin, or at any Booksellers. Medicines can be forwarded to any part, however distant, on receiving a Bank note.—11, Bonverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

UNDER THE ESPECIAL PATRONAGE OF HIS MAJESTY.

VAUXHALL GARDENS WILL OPEN TO-MORROW. The Proprietors respectfully announce that during the recess they have spared neither pains nor expence to make the Gardens worthy the support so liberally bestowed last season, (the first and only one of their being in possession of the present Proprietors)—The Amusements will, as usual, commence with a grand VOCAL and INSTRUMENTAL CONCERT—TWO NEW THEATRES have been erected, one with appropriate Scenery and Decorations, wherein Juvenile Ballets will be represented. The celebrated Monsieur Hullin, of the Royal Academie of Music at Paris, and late Ballet Master of the Italian Opera House, will conduct this department, and, under his direction, a numerous Corps of Ballet has been engaged. Their performances will commence with the Ballet of CENDRILLON.—In the other Theatre, in the Rotunda, a NOVEL ENTERTAINMENT will be presented, diversified with Dialogue, Songs, and Imitations. The French Mechanical Theatre has been re-modelled and improved, and the immense space occupied last season by the Sub marine Cave, presents now a View of the Bay of Naples by Moonlight, with a Grand Representation of MOUNT VESUVIUS in a state of active Combustion; a Revolving Illuminated Fountain, and other Hydraulic Exhibitions, will be produced on a superior scale.—Several New Cosmoramas have been added and placed in eligible situations, which will be changed during the season, so as to present a variety of interesting Views and Scenery.—A magnificent new Castellated Moorish Tower has been erected, from whence the Fire Works are to be exhibited.—The Ascent on the Rope, which has been heightened twenty feet, will be made to a Triumphal Arch at the top of the Moorish Tower, by Mr. Blackmore, well known as the surprising young American; and at this immense height he will exhibit his wonderful powers on the Tight Rope.—The FIRE WORKS will also be much encreased in splendour, the Proprietors having sent an Artist to the Continent with a view to Novelty and Improvement, and those of the Royal Gardens will not exceed any ever before exhibited in Europe, and will be conducted by Chevalier Southby, Madame Hengler, and Signior Mortram.—The Illuminations will also far surpass those of any former season.

The Wines and Refreshments shall be, as heretofore, of the very best description; and although enhanced in price since last season, they will be continued at the same moderate charges.—The Police will be under the superintendance of the same vigilant Officers that attended last season.

Supper Boxes may be engaged, and Free Admissions for the Single Night or entire Season may be had.

The Gardens will be open as usual, on the Evenings of Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, throughout the Season.—Admission 3s. 6d.

CHILE LOAN.—Messrs. HULLETT, BROTHERS, and CO. beg leave to inform the Holders of Chile Bonds, that they have received an Official Communication, of which the following is a translation:—

"The Minister of State and Foreign Affairs of the Republic of Chile writes, under date the 24 of January last, to the Minister Plenipotentiary, Don Ant. Jose de Yrisarri, the following:—

'In consequence of the contract entered into by your Excellency with the house of Messrs. Hullett, Brothers, and Co. in London, to raise a Loan of one million pounds sterling for account of this State, by virtue of the Powers conferred on your Excellency, the Supreme Government, desirous to secure the investment of the principal in such a manner as to benefit the nation, and at the same time to insure to the lenders the punctual fulfilment of its obligations, has submitted to the most excellent supreme House of Representatives (Corte de Representates) all the official letters, bonds, &c. which you have transmitted to this Government relative to the said Loan. After a mature examination, the House passed an Act, which I have the honour to transmit to your Excellency, in order that, after having taken cognizance of the contents, you will communicate the same officially to Messrs. Hullett and Co. for the purpose of their honouring the drafts which will immediately be issued on them, it being clearly understood, that after the same are duly paid out of the funds in their hands belonging to this Government, they will be relieved from all responsibility. The present Resolution adopted by the House of Representatives being only provisional, until the Bank shall be established, the Directors of which will be charged with managing every thing connected with the Loan, and with the redemption, as well as the payment of the interest, &c. I reserve to myself in order that, after having taken cognizance of the contents, you will communicate to you Excellency all further instructions that may be necessary.'

"In the absence of Don Antonio Jose de Yrisarri, I have the honour to transmit to you the above, as also a Copy of the Act to which it refers, for your information and satisfaction. I renew to you the sentiments of my most distinguished consideration. (Signed) A. BELLO.

"To Messrs. Hullett, Brothers, and Co.

'Ministry of State and for Foreign Affairs.—Copy of the Act addressed by the Most Excellent the Supreme House of Representatives to his Excellency the Supreme Director of the State of Chile, on the 23 December of the year 1822.

'The House of Representatives, assembled in the extraordinary sitting of the 23d of this month, at eight o'clock at night, took the following official communication of his Excellency the Supreme Director into consideration:

'Santiago de Chile, Dec. 21, 1822.

'Most Excellent House of Representatives.—The measures which the House has been pleased to point out in its note of the 19th inst. seem to me the most fit and adequate for the good results which the Loan, raised in London by the Minister Plenipotentiary, Don Antonio Jose de Yrisarri, by virtue of the full powers which were conferred on him for the purpose, will produce to the country. Anxious, however, to conduct this transaction with all the prudence, frankness, and rectitude which may insure the success of operations on which depend, as well the prosperity of the State as the opinion which they are to produce abroad, I have ceded and do cede to the most excellent supreme House of Representatives all the faculties which in me reside, as head of the executive power; in order that the said House may, after the most mature consideration of the subject, designate the persons which it may deem the most fit to direct the National Bank, which is to be established, and may also prescribe all the laws and regulations necessary to give to that important establishment all the consistency, effect, and public confidence, without which the benefits which ought to accrue to the nation cannot be obtained.

'The Supreme Director, &c.

'BERNARDO O'HIGGINS.'

"Accordingly, and until the establishment of the Bank already decreed shall be carried into effect, it is ordered, that the funds produced by the Loan negociated in London, and on the eve of arriving, shall be deposited in the Treasury of the Mint, at the sole disposal of this House, and to that end authorize, as hereby is authorized, the superintendant, Don Jose Santiago Portales, the comptroller, Don Anselmo de la Crus, and the treasurer, Don Silvestre Martinez de Ozhagavia, for issuing drafts against the funds of the said Loan, which may be in the hands of the house of Messrs. Hullett, Brothers, and Co. which drafts are to be countersigned by Mr. Humphrey Bunster, as agent for that house.

"Ordered, That this resolution be communicated to his Excellency the Supreme Director, to be printed, published, and circulated.

"(Signed) Francisco Ruiz Tagle, Joaquim Bieto, Casimiro Alvaro, Francisco Antonio Valdivieso y Vargas, Jose Santiago Monte, Jose Tadeo Mancheno, Secretary,

"(A true copy.)

"Mancheno, Echevarria, Portalles, Anselmo de la Crus, Silvestre Martinez de Ochagarias.

"A true copy of that transmitted by his Excellency the Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs of the State of Chile, Don Joaquim de Echevarria, to his Excellency the Minister Plenipotentiary of the same State, to the Courts of Europe, Don Antonio Jose de Yrisarri, which I certify for all necessary purposes.

"(Signed) ANDRES BELLO, Sec. of Legation."

JARRIN, ITALIAN CONFECTIONER, No. 123, New Bond-street, acknowledging with gratitude the patronage he has experienced in his new Establishment, begs to acquaint the Nobility and Gentry that his Refreshment Room is now supplied with Ices of various kinds, of very superior quality and flavour, produced by an improved management of their art, lately discovered by himself, peculiar to himself; he has an assemblage of French Pastry, including fowl, veal, and ham patties, new buns buns, &c. always ready. Jarrin furnishes, as usual, Dinners, Suppers, Balls, Routs, and Parties of all kinds, and to be found at a very considerable abatement of the usual expence, as he is resolved to make no charge whatever for table ornaments and decoratious.

MONEY on EQUITABLE TERMS.—The Advertiser advances Money to any extent, at moderate interest, whether on Freehold, Copyhold, Leasehold, Litehold, Funded, Church Livings, or other ample Security; and assures those who may honour him with their confidence, that they will experience a treatment the most candid, liberal, and explicit, though similar business is sometimes viewed with mistrust, from the mal-practices of disreputable people.—Letters, post-paid, to A. Z. care of Mr. Williams, glover, Inner Temple-lane, Fleet-street, will receive immediate attention; where also a card of address may be had.—Reversions are purchased.

EUROPEAN LIFE INSURANCE and ANNUITY COMPANY, No. 10, Chatham-place, Blackfriars.—Persons affecting Insurances with this Company, for the whole period of life, are immediately entitled to participate in whatever division of profit shall take place, which, with the reduced rate of Premium demanded, will enable all descriptions of persons to make a provision for their families on terms the most advantageous. Tables have also been calculated by which the Premiums may be paid Quarterly, Half-Yearly, or Annually, at the option of the insured. No charge is made for Entrance or for Policy, except the stamp. The Insured are permitted to go in steam, or other decked vessels, to and from any part of the united kingdom, and in time of peace to and from any part of the Continent, situated between the Elbe and Brest, without being required to pay additional Premium, or to procure a licence from the Directors. The Company continue to advance Money on Annuity, secured on Freehold, Copyhold, or long Leasehold Property, or Money in the Funds.

JOHN CLARK, Managing Director.

CHEAP and FASHIONABLE CABINET, CHAIR, COUCH, and SOFA MANUFACTORY.—Fifty different Patterns, and from twenty to thirty dozen of well-seasoned mahogany, real rosewood, stained rosewood, cottage, and bed-room chairs, of all colours, ready for inspection. Real rosewood chairs nearly as cheap as stained; card, sofa, and loo tables, and cabinets to match. A large assortment of mahogany patent dining tables of all sizes; sideboards, wardrobes, drawers, and all other articles of furniture, too numerous to mention. All manufactured on the premises, and warranted of the best quality, at ROBERT WALKINGTON'S, 214, High Holborn, opposite Southampton-street, Bloomsbury-square. All Goods sent free of expence within twelve miles of London.

ALE, STOUT, CIDER, &c.—THOMAS FIELD and SON beg to acquaint their Friends and the Public, that their genuine Burton, Edinburgh, Paunton, and Welsh Ales, Dorchester Beer, Brown Stout, Cider, Perry, &c. are in fine order for use. They have also a very superior Stock of foreign Wines, Cape Madeira, Brandy, Rum, Hollands, Geneva, and Orange Shrub; and they have been enabled to make a considerable reduction in the prices of several articles.—22, Henrietta-street, Covent Garden

EASE and COMFORT in SHAVING.—To those Gentlemen who experience inconvenience in Shaving from a tender face or strong beard J. T. RIGGE most particularly recommends his celebrated MAGNETIC RAZOR STROP, which, with its late improvement, he engages will produce so keen an edge as to render shaving pleasant and painless. Several testimonials of shaving as easy and agreeable as it was before unpleasant and painful. Strop will also be found an invaluable addition. Manufactory, 65 Cheapside and 52, Park-street, Grosvenor-square.

PATRONISED by the ROYAL FAMILY, their Imperial Majesties the Emperor and Empress of Russia, his Imperial Majesty the Emperor of China, by their especial authority, and most of the Nobility throughout Europe, ROWLAND'S MACASSAR OIL, (the original and genuine) which for many years has been universally admired, and is the best and cheapest article for nourishing the hair, preventing its falling off, or turning grey; preserves it to the latest period of life; promotes a luxuriant growth on the baldest places, whiskers, eye-brows, &c.—Curly Hair—It produces and makes the curl firm during exercise, or in damp weather; renders hair that is harsh and dry as soft as silk, glossy, elegant, and beautiful.—Indispositon, &c. the hair being injured.—Children's Hair—A due attention to Children's Hair is of the greatest importance. This Oil is invaluable; it eradicates the scurf easy roots, and fixes a stamina for a beautiful Head of Hair. Price 3s. 6d. 7s. 10s. 6d. and 11. 1s. per bottle.—Red Whiskers, Grey Whiskers, Eye brows, Hair on the FACE, effectually changed to Brown or Black, by the use of ROWLAND'S ESSENCE of TYRE. Price 4s. 7s. 6d. and 10s 6d. per bottle.—Sold by the Proprietors, A. Rowland and Son, No. 20, Hatton-Garden, Holborn, London; and, by appointment, by all Perfumers and Medicine Venders.

☞ Ask for Rowland's Oil or Rowland's Dye, and particularly observe the signature on the label to each bottle, as impostors sign their trash A. Rowland. Hatton-garden.

LITERARY FUND SOCIETY, Instituted 1790, Incorporated by Patron, His Majesty the King.—The ANNIVERSARY FESTIVAL of this Institution will be celebrated at Freemasons' Hall, on WEDNESDAY, 14th of MAY, when the company of such Noblemen and Gentlemen as friendly to the benevolent purposes of the society is earnestly solicited to Grace the Duke of Somerset, K.G. President, will take the Chair.

Stewards.—The Right Hon. the Earl of Strathmore.—the Right Hon. Lord of Normanton.—Lord Glamis.—Maj.-Gen. Sir John Malcolm, G.C.B.—Sir Wm. Tennyson, Esq. M.P.—the Rev. Dr. Penrose.—Rev. T. Frognall, F.R.S. A.S.—Rev. G. Croly, M.A.—Henry Blanshard, Esq.—John Gurney, Esq.—Richard Gilbert, Esq.—John Thomas Hope, Esq.—James Heywood Markland, Esq.—Wm. Mudford, Esq.—Bryan Wm. Proctor, Esq.—John Aikin, M.D.—Wm. Wastell, Esq.—Henry Weyman, Esq.

Tickets, 20s. each, to be had of the Stewards; also at the Chamber of the Society, 4, Lincoln's Inn Fields, and at the bar of the Freemasons' Tavern.

No. II. New Bridge-street, May 9th, 1823.

METROPOLITAN LITERARY INSTITUTION.—The Proprietors and the Public are respectfully informed that the following Gentlemen will give Lectures at this Institution in the course of the present and succeeding months:—Mr. Partington, on Mechanical Philosophy; Mr. Brande, on Chemistry; Mr. Gurney, on Christology; and the Honorary Secretary, on Poetry.

By order of the Committee,
JAMES JENNINGS, Hon. Sec.

Just published, price 2s. sewed,

ELLIAN; a Fairy Tale. By WINTHROP MACKWORTH PRAED, of Trinity College, Cambridge.—London: printed for Charles Knight, 7, Pall-mall, East.

MEDICAL EDUCATION.—WANTED immediately, by a SURGEON to a Public Dispensary, in general Practice in London, a HOUSE PUPIL, to be articled for a term of years.—A card is left at No. 3, Burton Crescent.

COMMUNICATION WITH DUBLIN.—The Public are respectfully informed, that the ST. PATRICK Steam Packet will resume her line of SAILING throughout this Month (May) as follows:—From Dublin, Thursday, 15th May; Tuesday, 20th; Saturday, 24th; Thursday, 29th. From Dublin, Saturday, 17th May; Thursday, 22d; Tuesday, 27th; Saturday, 31st. For further information, apply (post paid) to the following agents:—At the St. Patrick Steam Packet Company's Office, No. 17, Lancaster, 12, Regent-street, Pall Mall, London; Mr. C. E. Davis, Dublin; Mr. D. M'Vicar, Liverpool; and Mr. Protheroe, Bank-end Coal Wharf, Bristol.

GARDEN and PORTABLE GREEN HOUSE ENGINES. R. BAKER and SON respectfully acquaint the Public, they have manufactured a large Assortment of Engines on different principles, and of various sizes and shapes, to water Gardens and Green Houses, or to extinguish Fire likewise Garden Rollers, Syringes, Insect Destroyers, and Garden Tools, together with Agricultural and Domestic Machines of every description to be seen at their Patent Mangle Manufactory, 65, Fore street, Cripplegate, and 309, Oxford street, three doors from Bond street.—Old Garden Engines repaired or exchanged.

CRAWFORD'S SLIDING TUBE PARASOL.—The admirers of the Sliding Tube or Telescope Parasol over the common ones are now known that the inventor and manufacturer, J. Crawford, 28, Cheapside, has it only necessary to inform the Nobility, Ladies of fashion, and his friends in general, they continue to be manufactured on the same principle that has met such satisfaction heretofore. In the silks there are several new patterns introduced this season, and all warranted fast colours. An immense quantity of common parasols of every price and quality.—Shippers and the trade supplied as usual. Crawford, 28, Cheapside, near St. Paul's.

SALE of SILKS in REGENT-STREET.—Just opened the Lace Warehouse adapted by LEWIS and CO. late of Henrietta-street, for the Sale of Silks, Silk Shawls, Ball, Wedding, Morning and Evening Gowns. The business of this establishment is conducted entirely for Ready Money, and Lewis and Co. being the Manufacturers of their own Silks, can vouch for their being made of the best Materials, and that every one carries an additional profit which is saved on by Mercers and Drapers who buy manufactured goods; the following sketch of their prices will evince:—Good Persian, rich gros de Naples, 4s. to 4s. 6d.; 3 wide levantine, 3s. 6d.; Italian ditto, 4s. 6d. the best quality at 18d.; white satins from 2s. 6d.; black and colored, 2s. 4d.; gauze dresses, 9s. 6d. the gown; lace dresses, 42s.; thread net dresses, 15s.; 10,000l. worth of full dresses, French net handkerchiefs, new Spring colours in gros de Naples, levantines, shaded stripe lustring, and all fashionable goods; also extensive Millinery Rooms.—Gauze Scarfs, 4s. 9d.—95, Regent-street, corner of Pays from Conduit-street.

N.B. A great many Remnants from the Old Stock remarkably cheap.—Buyers will find it convenient to call in the morning.

TO BUILDERS and OTHERS.—LAND to be LET for Building upon, one mile and a quarter from Oxford-street, most eligibly situated on high dry gravelly ground at Bayswater-hill, overlooking the green fields of Kensington-gardens, and part of it fronting the Chapel, Bayswater.—Enquire of Mr. Orme, Bayswater, or a plan may be seen, and particulars had at No. 9, New Bond-street, corner of Brook street.

CITY.—To LET, short LEASE of a HOUSE, (which may be extended) No. 65, Paternoster-row, Cheapside. (Two penny Rentals.) To save trouble, Rent Ninety Guineas per annum. The Fixtures to be taken. May be viewed between the hours of eleven and four, Mr. Wetton, the present occupier, removing to No. 21, Fleet-street.

SALES BY AUCTION.

The Swan Brewery, with Dwelling-house, and Offices, Whitechapel.—By Mr. JOSEPH BANKS, at the Auction Mart, on THURSDAY NEXT, May 15th, Twelve, by direction of the Proprietor, quitting business,

THE Valuable LEASE for about 30 Years which relates to an eligible and spacious BREWHOUSE, store house of an extensive pass, tun-rooms, mill-track, malt, and hop chambers, stabling, large yard, closed by folding-gates, comfortable dwelling-house, counting-house, &c. The plant as erected, consists of a 22-barrel copper, and all other suitable stock. This property, from peculiarity of situation and internal arrangements, is deserving the general attention of the trade. Between 3 and 4000 strong ale and beer are consumed by the present returns.—Printed particulars may be had on the premises; of Messrs. Gregory and Son, solicitors, Wax-chandler-hall, Maiden-lane; of Mr. Joseph Banks, brewers' surveyor and auctioneer, 27, Princes-street, Bank, Auction Mart, and Clapton, Middlesex.

Select and Modern Cottage Residence, with compact Brewhouse, Stable, Coach-house, extensive Garden, &c. &c. Mile End-road.—By MR. JOSEPH BANKS, at the Auction Mart, on THURSDAY NEXT, May 15, at Twelve, by direction of the Proprietor, who has retired into Essex.

A Very Neat and SOCIAL ESTATE, in every respect suitable for a Gentleman of respectability and moderate income, delightfully situated at the extremity of Alfred Terrace and Beaumont-row, near the Mile Road, with a Lease of upwards of 60 Years to run, at only 3l. ground-rent. The property may be viewed until the sale, by application to Mr. Weston, on the Premises on the spot. Particulars may be had of Mr. Argill, solicitor, 71, Wilderness-road; at the New Globe, facing the Canal, Mile End road; Commercial Tree, near the West India Docks; Nelson Tavern, Blackwall; George, or Half Moon House, Commercial road; and of Mr. Joseph Banks, auctioneer, 27, Princes-street, Bank, Auction Mart, and Clapton, Middlesex.

Long Leasehold Houses, Mile End-road.—By MR. JOSEPH BANKS, at the Auction Mart, on THURSDAY NEXT, May 15, at Twelve,

TWO Delightful and Healthy DWELLING-HOUSES, with Gardens, Pore Courts, &c. being Nos. 2 and 3, Beaumont row, Mile End-road, contiguous to Bancroft's school, embracing an amusing and interesting view of the adjacent fields, canal, and distant hills, let to Mr. Nodin, &c. at 36l. per annum, held for upwards of 90 Years, at a trifling ground-rent. May be viewed by leave of the occupiers, of whom particulars may be had; also at the Golden Eagle, and New Globe, Mile End-road; Mr. Argill, solicitor, 71, Wilderness-road; and of Mr. Joseph Banks, auctioneer, 27, Princes-street, Bank, Auction Mart, and Clapton, Middlesex.

Borough.—To Plumbers, Painters, and Gasfitters.—By MR. JOSEPH BANKS, at the Auction Mart, on THURSDAY NEXT, May 15, at Twelve,

THE LEASE and ESTABLISHED TRADE in an advantageous and desirable BUSINESS, many years conducted by Mr. Dance, Plumber, situate and being No. 27, Red Cross-street, near Union-street, Borough of Southwark; held for a long term, at a low rent. The premises may be viewed till the Sale, where Particulars may be had, and of Mr. Joseph Banks, auctioneer, 27, Princes-street, Bank, Auction Mart, and Clapton, Middlesex.

PRICES of the PUBLIC FUNDS.

STOCKS.	Mon.	Tues.	Wed.	Thur.	Fri.	Sat.
Bank Stock	218	218	218½		218	218
3 per Cent. Reduced	79	78½	79¾		79	79
3 per Cent. Consols	79¾	79¾	79¾		79	80
3½ per Cent. Consols	—	90½	91½		90	90
Consols for Account	79¾	79¾	79¾		79	79
4 per Cent. Consols	97½	96½	96½		96	96
New 4 per Cent.	92½	92½	92½		92½	92
Bank Long Annuities	20½	20½	20½		20	20
India Bonds	38 p	39 p	39 p		39 p	40 p
Exchequer Bills, 1d.	19 p	19 p	20 p		19 p	20 p
Ditto, 2d.	—	—	—		—	—
Columbian Bonds	—	—	—		—	—

Holiday.

DIED.

Lately, at her residence, Westerham, Kent, Mrs. Ann Green, in her 82d year. On the 20th of April last, aged 22, on board His Majesty's Packet Hunter, on his passage from Malta to England, whither he was coming for the benefit of his health, Mr. Wm. Henry Brame, second son of Mr. Brame, surgeon of Lowestoft, Suffolk, lately deceased. His manners were of the most amiable description, which, while they secured the esteem and respect of all who knew him, have caused his loss to be deeply and sincerely regretted.

LONDON: Printed and Published by E. SHACKELL, at No. 11, JOHNSON'S-COURT, FLEET-STREET, where only Communications to the Editor (post-paid) are received

JOHN BULL.

" FOR GOD, THE KING, AND THE PEOPLE!"

No. 127. SUNDAY, MAY 18, 1823. Price 7d.

ADELPHI ENTERTAINMENT, NEW ARGYLL ROOMS.

MR. TOPLIFF has the honour to announce to the Nobility, Gentry, and the Public, that on FRIDAY, the 23d inst. he will submit to their patronage an entirely novel Entertainment, entitled the AQUATIC EXCURSION, in the course of which will be given a variety of Songs and Recitations, expressly written for the occasion; the Music composed by Mr. Bonnaffon, and strictly appropriate to the Scenery, Dresses, and Decorations, which will display a Panorama on the Piano Forte; several Airs on his Tenor Flageolet; introduce a Storm; Musical Glasses; Shakespeare's Description of a Storm; Musical Dissertation; Comic Song; "Loves of the Boil in a-l" Song; Air on the Musical Pipes; Pastoral Recitation; Lord Byron, Southey, &c.; Peter Project; Song; Dissertation and Mathematics; Piano and Bow Bells; Rainy day in London; Peter's Lessons; Logical Dispute; and Inviolate Law Case—Charge to the Jury by Counsel; with a variety of other Entertainments, full particulars of which see Bills, with a variety of other Entertainments, full particulars of which see Bills, which are in the Bills.—Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, to be had of Mr. Ebers, Old Bond-street; Messrs. Chappell and Co. New Bond-street; Mr. Power, Strand; Messrs. Goulding and Co. Cheapside; Goulding and Co. Soho-square; and at the Royal Cornwall and Co. Chesapeake; Goulding and Co. Soho-square; and at the Royal Cornwall Polytechnic Institution, Regent-street.

MOZART'S SIX GRAND SYMPHONIES.—Just published for the Proprietors by Messrs. Chappell and Co. 50, New Bond street, and to be had of all the Music Sellers of the Metropolis in a beautiful edition,

MOZART'S GRAND SYMPHONY, No. I. in D. arranged for the Piano-forte, Flute, Violin, and Violoncello, by J. N. Hummel, of Vienna; price 8s. 6d.; without accompaniments, 6s. The other Five Symphonies, Vienna; price 8s. 6d.; without accompaniments, 6s. The other Five Symphonies, arranged by the same celebrated Master, are nearly ready for the Press, and will be published in regular succession. No. VI. called Jupiter, will appear in the course of the present month.

Jupiter' this day Fortnight, and No II in G Minor this day month.

NEW MUSIC, at Mitchell's Music Shop, 28, New Bond-street.—Just published, "The lovely Lily of the valley," sung as sung by Miss Stephens, in the Opera of "Maid of the Mill," price 1s. 6d.; Il Desio di possedervi, a ballad, canzonetta by Signor Morlini of Rome, 1s. 6d.; the favorite Polacca, a duet, sung by Miss Carew and Mr J. B. Sale, the music by Dr. Callcott, 3s.; Rossini's Overture to La Donna del Lago, arranged as a duet for two performers on the piano, with flute accompaniment, 3s. 6d.; a 5th set of Pandean Airs, for harp and piano, with flute accompaniment, by F. L. Hummell, 3s.; "Duranddarte and Belerma," arranged as a divertimento for the piano, by Venanzio Ciampechini, 3s.; a set of German Airs, by ditto, dedicated to Madame Catalani, 4s.; Le retour a Londres a sonata, with violin accompaniment, by Fr. Clementini, 3s.; several Italian Songs, by ditto, and two Duets; the celebrated air of Mr Lodeing, with variations, by J. J. Jones, 3s.; the Moscow Chimes, with variations, by ditto, 3s.; a variety of easy Pieces for beginners, 2s. and 3s. 6d. and eight sets of Italian ariettas for the Spanish guitar and piano forte, by Signor Ruffoli, each 3s. 6d.

NEW HARP MUSIC.—Rossini's admired Romance, "Aurora che Sorgerai," sung by Signor Curioni, from La Donna del Lago, arranged for the Harp by N. C. Bochsa, with a Grand Introduction, in which is introduced the favourite March from the same Opera, dedicated to W. Ayrey, Esq. (very pleasing, and not difficult), price 4s.; Amusement pour les Dames, on Recueil Periodique de Piece Choisies non publiees auparavant en Angleterre, No. I. (a very neat wrapper) contains four elegant and pleasing compositions, price 4s.—Published by R. COCKS and Co. Importers of Foreign Music, 20, Princes-street, Hanover-square.—R. C. and Co. have likewise just imported from the Continent an extensive Assortment of all the choice Works of every celebrated Foreign Composer, which (owing to their extensive and late ready-money purchases on the Continent) they are now selling at exceedingly low prices.—Rossini's Othello, Pians and Voice 22s. 6d.—A Catalogue of R. Cocks and Co.'s Select Stock of Foreign Music may be had on application.

NEW DUETS.—Just published by Mayhew and Co. 17, Old Bond-street, Klahlmark's universally admired air Rosanella, adapted for two performers on the Piano Forte, by the author, price 4s. No. I. Select Airs from Rossini's new Opera, La Donna del Lago, arranged as duets for the Piano Forte, by Wm. Hammans, price 4s. The 2d and 3d Books of this celebrated work will be published in a few days. Also new editions of Latour's unrivalled production Le Retour de Windsor, adapted for two performers on the Piano Forte, by D. Bruguier, 4s.; the popular air of Cease your funning, with Klahlmark's admired Melton, for two performers on the Piano Forte, by D. Bruguier, 3s.—N B. The above Duets are particularly recommended to the notice of the musical world, being arranged by the first masters of the present age.—Lucian: Mayhew and Co. music-sellers to the Royal Family, 17, Old Bond-street; where may be obtained, Hart's Seventh Set, from Rossini's beautiful Opera, "Pietro L'Eremita," price 4s.; a Sixth Set, from La Gazza Ladra, price 4s.; 6th Set from Il Turco in Italia, 4s.; Fourth Set, including George the Fourth's Coronation Waltz: Third Set, or celebrated Hussars, with the favorite La Cendrillon, and every new work as soon as published.

NEW QUADRILLES.—Just published, Paine's 18th Set, or New Lancers Quadrilles, with entire New Music and Figures; also, the 18th Set of Quadrilles, the subjects taken from Pietro L'Eremita, now performing by Paine's Band at the Nobilities' Balls, each 3s. The extreme popularity of the former numbers of these Quadrilles, arising from their superior arrangement, have caused the decided preference given them to any other, and from the increasing sale, J. Paine flatters himself they have given general satisfaction to the Nobility, for those that may not be supplied with them, are re-published, from 1 to 17, at Paliner's Opera Music Warehouse, at 3, Old Bond-street, where may be had, the Music in Elisa e Claudio, La Donna del Lago, and all Rossini's Operas.

CLARI; or, the MAID of MILAN.——The admired ballad, "Home! sweet home!" sung by Miss M. Tree; "Little Love is a mischievous boy," sung by Miss Love; and the serenade, "Sleep, gentle lady," in the above Opera, composed by Henry R. Bishop, are published: and it is respectfully announced, that the remainder of the Music will be ready in a day or two.—Goulding, D'Almaine, Potter, and Co. 20, Soho-square.

NEW MUSIC.—PIANO FORTE.—J. B. Cramer's new Rondos, Op. 65 and 66, price 3s. 6d. each; Rondo on the admired duet in "Maid Marian," by F. Kalkbrenner, pr. 3s.; Rondo on the popular duet "As it fell upon a day," by F. Ries, pr. 3s.; "German Air," with variations by ditto, pr. 3s. Chrysele Recossois, with "Kelvin Grove," and "Over the water to Charlie," pr. 3s. 6d.; and Caledonian Fantasie, with "Scots wha hae," price 3s. by G. Kiallmark; airs in "Beggar's Opera," by ditto, Boosey, in 3 books, price 3s. 6d. each; Airs in "Maid Marian," as duets, by D. Bruguier, in books, price 4s. each.—HARP—Rondo as "When the wind blows," price 3s. 6d.; Caledonian Fantasie, with "Scots wha hae," price 3s. 6d.; fifteen brilliant and short preludes, pr. 4s.; Variations on a French air, "Celle que j'aime tant," price 3s. 6d.; Fantasie with "Bid me discourse," price 3s. 6d. all by N. Chisholm.—HARP and PIANO FORTE DUETS.—The Music in Macbeth, by J. F. Burrowes, price 10s. 6d.; Airs in the Opera of "Elisa," by N. C. Bochsa, in 2 books, price 6s. each; Airs in Rossini's Operas "Il Tancredi" and "Otello," by J. F. Burrowes, in books, price 5s. each.—VOCAL—The whole of the Music in "Maid Marian," composed by Henry R. Bishop, price 18s.; the Songs, Duets, and Glees may be had separate. "The Vocalist," a new elementary work on Singing, calculated to prepare Students for more elaborate treatises, by J. Parry, price 5s.—Published by Goulding, D'Almaine, Potter, and Co. 20, Soho-square.

MUSIC COMPOSED BY T. ATTWOOD,

And published by the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street.

"TWAS on an ever blithesome day," a Glee, as performed at the British Concerts, Argyll Rooms, price 3s. 6d.: "Qual silenzio nella spiaggia," Terzetto, with a double accompaniment for the Piano Forte, price 4s.; with single ditto, price 3s.: "I was glad," an Anthem in full score, with a separate Piano Forte or Organ part, composed for and performed at the Coronation of his present Majesty, price 10s. 6d.; the same Anthem may be had, arranged as a Duet for the Piano Forte, by the Author, price 3s.; Sweet Charity, a song, as sung by Miss Stephens, price 1s. 6d.; The Sea Boy, a song, 1s. 6d.; The convent bell thro' forest drear," a song, 1s. 6d.; Tears that exhale, a song, 1s. 6d.; The waves retreating, a duet, 2s.

NEW MUSIC, published by the Royal Harmonic Institution, Argyll Rooms, 246, Regent-street.

A SELECTION of the most favourite Airs from the celebrated Ballet of Cendrillon, as performed with unbounded applause at the King's Theatre, arranged for the Harp, by N. Charles Bochsa, price 5s.; the first series of Mr. Hawes's Scottish Songs, arranged as duets for the Piano Forte, by J. W. Holder, in 2 books, price 2s. 6d. each; "Che faro senza Eurdice," an air by Gluck, arranged as a rondo for the Piano Forte, by J. B. Cramer, price 2s.; Oh! nannie's wi' Yo and awa Willie," a Scotch air, arranged as a rondo for the Piano Forte, by F. Ries, price 3s.; There is a thought, a song, composed by F. W. Crouch, 2s.; O Sister, sister, come and see, duet composed by F. W. Crouch, 2s.; a set of popular Quadrilles, selected from the celebrated Opera of La Donna del Lago, by J. T. Craven, price 3s.

FINGER and BARREL ORGAN.—An Excellent FINGER and BARREL ORGAN to be Sold remarkably cheap, containing 6 stops of pipes with shifting movement, 9 feet, 5 inches high, 5 feet wide. The barrels set by Messrs. Flight and Robson, with sufficient power for a small Church or Chapel. To be seen at Messrs. Gunther and Horwood's Piano Manufactory, 31 Little Queen-street, Lincoln's-Inn-Fields.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.—Monday, Romeo and Juliet, with the Vision of the Sun—Tuesday, Clari, or the Maid of Milan—Wednesday, Twelfth Night, with The Marriage of Figaro—Friday, The Antiquary, with Paul and Virginia—Saturday, Much Ado about Nothing.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL DRURY-LANE.—Monday, Hamlet, with the Hall of the Caravan, and Love, Law, and Physic—Tuesday The Travellers—Wednesday, The Harpoonery, with Simpson and Co.—Thursday, The Travellers—Friday, Pizarro—Saturday, The Travellers.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT-GARDEN.

MRS. CHATTERLEY has the honour of making known to her Friends and the Public, that her BENEFIT is appointed for TUESDAY the 10th of JUNE, when will be performed a favourite COMEDY, and other Entertainments.—Tickets and Places for the Boxes to be had of Mr. Brandon, at the Box-office, and of Mrs. Chatterley, No 13 Craven-street, Strand.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.

FOR the BENEFIT of MR. BLANCHARD and MR. CONNOR, On TUESDAY, MAY 27, 1823. The Provoked Husband; a new which, The Irish Tutor; with other Entertainments, as will be expressed in future advertisements.—Tickets to be of Mr. Blanchard, 22, Brook-street, Long Acre; of Mr. Connor, 4, Bedford-street, Bedford-square; and of Mr. Brandon, at the Box-office, Bart-street.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.

FOR the BENEFIT of MISS M. TREE.—Miss E. Tree and Miss A. Tree will, on this occasion, have the honour of making their first public appearance.—On WEDNESDAY, MAY 21, 1823, will be acted, Twelfth Night; previous to which, Cherubini's Overture to Anacreon The Music, (with a few exceptions) composed by Mr. Bishop. In the course of the Comedy will be introduced, Songs, Glees, and Choruses; the Poetry selected entirely from the Plays, Poems, and Sonnets of Shakspeare. Viola, Miss M. Tree; Olivia, Miss E. Tree (being her first appearance in public). Miss Sharp has kindly consented to play a Fantasia on the Harp.—In the course of the Evening a variety of Songs. To conclude with the Opera of the Marriage of Figaro; Cherubino (the Page) will, on this Evening, be attempted by Miss A Tree (being her first appearance) in which character she will introduce "No joy without my love;" Countess Almaviva, Miss Eaton; Susanna, Miss M. Tree, with the Song of "Rose d'Amour," in which she will introduce a Castanet Dance.—Tickets and Places to be had of Miss M. Tree, 3, Torrington square, Keppel-street; and of Mr. Brandon, at the Box-office.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.

MISS F. H. KELLY most respectfully acquaints her Friends and the Public that her BENEFIT is fixed for JUNE 7, when will be presented a favourite Tragedy, in which Mr. C. Kemble, Mr. Macready, and Miss F. H. Kelly will perform. To conclude with a popular Entertainment, as will be expressed in future Bills and other Insements.—Tickets, and places for the Boxes, to be had of Miss F. H. Kelly, No. 31, Newman-street, Oxford-street; and of Mr. Brandon, at the Box-office.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.

MR. W. FARREN has the honour of most respectfully announcing to his friends and the Public, that his BENEFIT will take on FRIDAY the 23d inst. when will be performed the Opera of the ANTIQUARY, Jonathan Oldbuck, Mr. W. Farren. To conclude with a Musical Entertainment, in which Madame Vestris, Miss Paton, and Mrs. M. Tree will perform.—Tickets and places for the Boxes to be had of Mr. W. Farren, No. 3, Duchess street, Portland-place, and of Mr. Brandon, at the Box-office.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT-GARDEN.

FOR the BENEFIT of MRS. GIBBS, and MR. YATES, on WEDNESDAY, 28th MAY, 1823, will be acted the Comedy of the School for Scandal. New Introductions, Personifications, and Imitations, (for this night only,) by Mr. Yates. And a Musical Entertainment, in which Madame Vestris, (who has kindly consented to perform) and Miss M. Tree, will sustain principal characters.—Tickets and Places to be had of Mrs. Gibbs, 5, Mellina-place, Westminster-road, St. Yates, 60 Charlotte street, Bathbone-place, and of Mr. Brandon, at the Box-office of the Theatre.

ROYAL GARDENS, VAUXALL, (Under the Especial Patronage of His Majesty), WILL OPEN TO MORROW EVENING, the 19th of May, when the whole of the Entertainments as already advertised will take place.—The proprietors have made such arrangements that should the weather at any time prove unfavourable, nearly all the Amusements will be given under cover. Awnings having been prepared which can be put up in a few minutes, and will accommodate many thousand persons. The walks have been raised and entire'y new gravelled.—Admissions for the Season, or Single Nights, may be purchased, and Supper Boxes engaged.—Doors will be open at 7, and Concert commence at 8 o'clock.—Admission 3d. 6d. The Gardens will continue open on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays.

NEW MELO DRAMA.—BILLY BUTTON AND HIS HORSE, TALLY HO.

First time this Season ALEXANDER and THALESTRIS.

DAVIS'S ROYAL AMPHITHEATRE.—To morrow, a new Melo Dramatic Romance, called The Man of the Wood or Fair Maniac, and the Dumb Brother and Sister. Equestrian exercises, vaulting, and leaping. The Burlesque of the Hunted Tailor, and grand historical melo drama called, Alexander the Great and Thalestris the Amazon, introducing the incomparable stud of horses.

CORONATION.—HENRY ASTON BARKER'S PANORAMA, Leicester-square.—Now Open, a Grand Representation of the CORONATION PROCESSION, with Portraits of His MAJESTY, GEORGE the FOURTH, the ROYAL DUKES, and several others; particularly of the late Marquis of LONDONDERRY, in the full Habit of the Order of the Garter. The Panorama exhibits at least Thirty Thousand Figures.—A VIEW of LAUSANNE, with the LAKE of GENEVA, is also open.—Admittance to each Painting, 1s.

BRITISH INSTITUTION, PALL-MALL.—The Gallery, with a selection of Pictures by Sir Joshua Reynolds, and of the Italian, Spanish, Flemish, and Dutch Schools, WILL BE OPENED on MONDAY, the 19th inst. from ten in the morning until six in the evening. (By order)

Admission 1s. Catalogue 1s. JOHN YOUNG, Keeper.

The subscribers to the print from Mr. West's picture of "Our Saviour healing the Sick in the Temple," who have not already received their impressions, may receive them upon payment of the remainder of their subscriptions, at the British Institution.

GREAT ROOM, SPRING GARDENS.—NOVELTY.—MARSHALL'S Grand Historical Peristrephic PANORAMA of the CEREMONY of the CORONATION, the Coronation Procession, and the Banquet, painted on 10,000 square feet of canvas, and displaying nearly 100,000 figures, rewards of 500 of the principal characters on the foreground the size of life. The movement of the Panorama gives such an imposing and striking illusion, that the spectators are led to believe themselves present at the different splendid ceremonies it represents; the whole accompanied by a full Military Band, assisted by a Finger Organ and Trumpets, performs the Coronation Music.—IS NOW OPEN.—Day Exhibitions at 12, 1, 2, 3, and 4 o'clock; and in the Evening, brilliantly illuminated with gas, at 7, 8, and 9 o'clock.—Admission, Boxes, 2s. Gallery, 1s.; Descriptive Book, 6d.

THE COSMORAMA is RE-OPENED at No. 209, Regent-street, (5 doors north of Conduit-street) where galleries have been constructed so as to admit day-light, which considerably improves the illusion, and obviates the heat and obscurity produced by the use of artificial light. 14 Views are equally divided between two galleries; one appropriated to those of Europe and America, amongst which are Mont Blanc, the Palace and Gardens of Versailles, and the Moorish Mosque at Cordova: the other to those of Asia and Africa, amongst which are three of the magnificent Ruins of Palmyra, and one of the Forest of Lebanon.—Open from ten till dusk.—Admittance to each Gallery, one shilling.

WELSH BARDS.—A meeting of WELSH BARDS and MINSTRELS will be held at the Freemasons' Tavern on THURSDAY, May 22, at 11 o'clock, LORD OYNEVOR, President. The Anniversary Dinner of the CYMMRODORION will be on the same day, at 5 o'clock. LORD KENYON, President. J. Parry (Bardd Alaw) Conductor.—Tickets to be had at the Tavern.

ETON ANNIVERSARY DINNER.—This Meeting will be holden at Willis's Rooms, King-street, St James's, on SATURDAY, the 24th of May, at six o'clock. EARL of BRECKNOCK in the Chair.

STEWARDS.

The Right Hon. the Speaker	W. Mackworth Praed, Esq.
Lord Clifton	H. Handley, Esq.
Sir Frederick Baker, Bart.	Digby Neave, Esq.
Sir Frederick Henniker, Bart.	C. J. Pennington, Esq.
Hon. John Henniker	P. Grenfell, Esq.
John Reeves, Esq.	A. G. Campbell, Esq.

Tickets, 15s. each, to be had at the Bar of the Thatched House Tavern, or of the Stewards, till 5 o'clock on Friday, the 23d, before which time Gentlemen are earnestly requested by the Stewards to apply.

LAST N GIFT'S GAZETTE.

[This Gazette contains the appointment of the Rev. Reginald Heber, D.D. to the Bishoprick of Calcutta.]

WAR OFFICE, May 17, 1823.

4th Reg. of Light Dragoons—To be Captains: Lieut. R. Burrows, vice Jarvis, dec.—To be Lieuts.: Lieut. W. Fitzmaurice, vice Harrison, who exch. Brevet C. H. Doyle, vice Burrows, prom.; Lieut. H. Cochrane, vice Robinson, who exch.—Sth Ditto—To be Lieuts.: Lieut. R. Robison, vice Cochrane, who exch.; Cornet the Hon. C. Westenra, vice Fergusson, who retires.—13th Ditto—To be Capt.: Capt. F. Grove, vice Savage, who exch.; To be Lieuts.: Cornet R. Ellis, vice Brown, dec.; Lieut. G. Mayners, vice Lyman, who exch.; Cornet W. Hisbop, vice Cockburne, prom.—3d Reg. of Foot Guards: Lieut. C. H. J. Hamilton to be Capt. and Lieut.-Colonel, vice Dashwood, who exch.—14th Reg. of Foot: Brevet Colonel W. T. Edwards to be Lieut.-Colonel, vice Macbride, who exchanges; Lieut. J. H. Ainsworth to be Captain, vice Raynsford, who retires; Ensign J. Watson to be Lieutenant, vice Ainsworth, prom.; To be Ensigns: H. S. La Roche, Gent. vice O'Neil, dec.; A. Donald, Gent. vice Watson, prom.—15th Ditto: Brevet Major G. Finch to be Lieut.-Colonel, vice Grace, who exch.—17th Ditto: Lieut. Col. A. Macdaine, to be Lieut. Col. vice Edwards, who exch.—Lieut. P. S. Nugent to be Lieut. vice Gray, exch.; Lieut. J. O. Clunie to be Adjutant, vice Evans.—20th Ditto; Maj. T. C. Green to be Major, vice Hogg, exch.—23d Ditto: Lieut. Hon. C. Grey to be First Lieut. vice Smith, exch.—24th Ditto: Maj. J. Hogg to be Maj. vice Green, exch.—30th Ditto: Lieut. W. Sullivan to be Capt. vice Machell, dec.; Ens. C. Deane to be Lieut. vice Sullivan; C. W. Alcock, Gent. to be Ens. vice Deane.—31st Ditto: Lieut.-Col. R. B. Fearon to be Lieut. Col. vice L'Estrange, exch.—44th Reg. of Foot—To be Lieuts.: Lieut. A. W. Gray, vice Nugent, exch.; Ensign W. Sargent vice Twinberrow, dec.—49th Ditto: Lord C. J. F. Russel to be Ens. vice Fraser.—54th Ditto: Lieut. J. Lynam to be Lieut. vice Manners, exch.—59th Ditto: Lieut. J. E. Peake to be Lieut. vice Barlow.—65th Ditto; Lieut. T. Harrison to be Lieut. vice Fitzmaurice, exch.—67th Ditto—To be Capts.: Lieuts. E. Cassidy and T. J. Aylar; To be Lieut. Ensign P. Brannan, vice Cassidy; To be Ensign: W. Child Gent. vice Brannan; To be Quarter-master: Serj.-Major J. Johnston, vice Gummer, dec.—69th Ditto—Capt. G. W. Savage to be Capt. vice Grove, who exch.—2d West India Regt.—Capt. M. J. Sparks to be Capt.—Cape Corps (Cavalry)—Cornet W. J. St. John to be Lieut.; W. C. Sheppard, Gent. to be Cornet.—Capt. E. Molesworth, of the Cape Corps of Cavalry, to be Major in the Army.—Capt. F. I. Weeks to be Town-Major of Montreal, vice Hughes.

Commission signed by the Lord Lieut. of the County of Kent—G. Gosselin, Esq. to be Deputy Lieutenant.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

M. GLASS, Polterne, Wilts, victua ler.

BANKRUPTS.

J. THOMPSON and W. WALKER, Wolverhampton, drapers—A. GLIDDON, King street, tobacconist—S. VIVIAN, Tywardreath, linendraper—G. BURGES and J. GATE, Portsmouth, brewers—J. VINEY, Bristol, cabinet maker—T. LIDGETTER, Southwick, corn and coal merchant—E. TODD, Liverpool woollen draper—T. SYKES, Bath Easton, clothier—J. MIDDLETON, New Tottelfi-street, smith—S. LOWE, Burton-upon Trent, scrivener.

JOHN BULL.—To be SOLD, the First and Second Volumes of JOHN BULL, (ORIGINAL COPIES), bound, and in excellent condition. Lowest price Seven Guineas. Letters to be addressed to G. R. (Post Paid,) at Mr. Wright's, No. 46, Fleet-street.

JOHN BULL.—A perfect Copy to be Disposed of. Apply by letter (post-paid) to M. T. Alcester, Warwickshire.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

MY pretensions to the honour of a seat in the direction of your affairs, have been already submitted to you. I beg respectfully to acquaint you, that it is not my intention to proceed to the ballot on the present vacancy.—Allow me to express my grateful acknowledgments for the very flattering support with which I am honoured by you—a support the most gratifying to my feelings, and which inspires me with the confident hope of being on the next vacancy placed, through your kindness, in the distinguished situation to which I aspire. I have the honour to be, Ladies and Gentlemen, your very faithful humble servant,

Camden-hill, Kensington, May 14, 1823. CHARLES MACKINNON.

TO THE PROPRIETORS OF EAST INDIA STOCK.

Ladies and Gentlemen,

I EMBRACE the earliest opportunity respectfully to acquaint you, that it is not my intention to solicit the favour of your VOTES, for the SEAT in the EAST INDIA DIRECTION, now vacant by the resignation of your late highly esteemed Director, Joseph Cotton, Esq.—I cannot however omit this opportunity, of gratefully acknowledging the very flattering reception I have experienced during my canvass, which encourages me, to look forward with confidence, to you support upon the next vacancy, when it is my determination to proceed to the ballot.—I have the honour to subscribe myself, Ladies and Gentlemen, your most obedient humble Servant, JOHN MASTERMAN.

35, Nicholas-lane, Lombard-street, 13th May, 1823.

MISS LINWOOD'S GALLERIES of PICTURES, in Leicester-square, are RE-OPENED with new DECORATIONS, ALTERATIONS, and ADDITIONS, and will continue open every day, (Sundays excepted) from nine o'clock in the morning until dark. Admittance, 2s. Children, 1s.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—The rude and unskilful attempts constantly made to supply these substitutes for the masticatory organ, and the disgust which delicacy suffers from the unpleasantry attending them when permanently fixed, have deterred many from adopting the aid and comfort they are capable of affording, independent of the assistance they may contribute to digestion and consequent health. The Ostealine application of mechanical science will enable us to obviate all these inconveniences, and allow the wearer at all times to keep the mouth in a state of perfect cleanliness, and to perform the functions of mastication, articulation, &c. with decided ease and comfort.—Mr. NICHOLLS begs to state, that he is in constant attendance from ten to four, and will be happy to give ocular demonstration of the comforts derived from his efforts, under every circumstance of simple and complicated deficiency.—115, Fleet-st.

MR. IMRIE, SURGEON DENTIST, (late assistant to Mr. Cartwright) has the honour to announce to the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends, that he has removed from Rathbone place to No. 10, Woburn-place, Russell-square; and in soliciting a continuance of their patronage, takes this opportunity to express his warmest gratitude for the considerable encouragement he has hitherto experienced.—10, Woburn-place, Russel-square.

No. 2, OLD BURLINGTON STREET.

IT having been erroneously circulated that the BUSINESS of the late Mr. WAITE, DENTIST, had ceased to be continued, Dr. White begs to assure the Nobility and the Public that it is carried on, in all respects, the same as practised by his late brother.

DR. CLUTTERBUCK will commence his Summer Course of LECTURES on the Theory and Practice of Physic, Materia Medica, and Chemistry, on MONDAY, the 2d of June, at Ten o'clock in the Morning, at the General Dispensary, Aldersgate-street: where further particulars may be had.

EXHIBITION of TULIPS.—GROOM, (late Milliken and Groom) Florist, Walworth, respectfully informs the Public that his Superb Collection is now in full bloom, and may be viewed every day during the month of May from 9 o'clock till 6. Sundays excepted. Admittance 1s.

TWICKENHAM.—To be LET, FURNISHED, for Six or Seven Weeks of July and August, a good FAMILY HOUSE, with large walled Garden, Coach-house, Stables, &c. ten miles from London.—Letters to be directed for J. W. Post-office, Twickenham.

TO LET, UNFURNISHED, in the immediate vicinity of Savile-row, to a Single Lady or Gentleman, a Small, Genteel HOUSE, with the exception of the Ground Floor. For address, &c. apply at Messrs. Harris and Pierce, 21, Cavendish-square, Hanover-square.

A COMPLETE SUIT of DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE, consisting of Silk Curtains, real Rosewood Chairs and Tables; two very superior Chandeliers, with the handsomest Pier Glass and Table in London; and will be sold at half the usual price by Nias and Co. Agents, 32, Berners-street, Oxford-street.

A MARRIED and BENEFICED CLERGYMAN, formerly Tutor to a Nobleman of the highest rank, and subsequently receiving a few Pupils into his house, a moderate distance from London, has now a VACANCY. Letters to be addressed to the Rev. A. B., Mr. Hayes, bookseller, 9, Hertford-street, Covent-garden, London.

A SINGLE LADY, or Two Sisters, may be accommodated with BOARD and LODGING, and a separate sitting room, if required, in a respectable family, whose residence is delightfully situated on Herne Hill, near Camberwell.—For cards of Address, apply to Mr. de la Salle, Watch-maker, Cannon-street. Respectable references will be required.

In a few days will appear, with ten Engravings, and a View of Rio Janeiro, a Second Edition of a PICTURESQUE PROMENADE round DORKING, in Surrey, with numerous Additions. By JOHN TIMBS.—Published by Sir Richard Phillips and Co. Bridge-street; and to be had of all Booksellers.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

G. and T. Brown, jun. New Sarum, Wilts, leather-cutters—Benson, Fawcett, Harris, E. and I. and M. Crosthwaite, Greysouthern, Cumberland, lime-merchants—Walmsuse and Rigg, Halifax, dyers—Andrew, jun. Hitchen, Richards, and Wood, Congleton, Chester, silk throwsters—Miller, Downie, and Ferguson, Glasgow—Wheelhouse and Bradstreet, lightermen—Markland, Fawcett, and Cookson, Leeds, worsted-spinners—J. and G. Edwards, Halifax, attorneys at law—Mills and Simpson, Birmingham, platers—Fawcett, H. and H. Littledale, Liverpool, founders—Bassett and Cutforth, Leighton-Buzzard, linen-drapers—M. and J. Berlin, Prescott-street, Goodman's-fields—Godefroy and Tilleaudino Cleveland-street, Mile-end, silk-dyers.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

T. CHARLESWORTH, Clare-street, grocer.

BANKRUPTS.

T. HEWITT, Whitechurch, farrier—P. R. BOWMAN, Arundel, tanner—T. GILBERT, jun. Long-acre, coach maker—T. BUCKLE, Leeds, merchant—J. NICHOLS, Finchingfield, tanner—J. THOMAS, Kent-street, builder—C. LUCAS, Kennington, dealer—G. BURN, Maidstone, pastry-cook—G. LAMBERT, Sloane-street, schoolmaster.

DIVIDENDS.

At the Court of Commissioners of Bankrupts—May 17, S. A. Bennett, Worship-street, coach-manufacturer—June 3, J. Power and it, Warwick, Finsbury-square, merchants—May 27, T. G. and D. Asquith, Bermondsey, and T. Mellish, New Kent-road, ship-owners—May 24, C. L. and H. A. Spitta, and F. and G. Meyer, Laurence Pountney-lane, merchants—May 21, W. Urquhart, Sion College gardens, merchant—June 7, T. White, Regent-street, whitesmith—May 24, S. P. Seager, Maidstone, dealer.

June 8, T. Hope, Sandwich, hoyman—June 9, J. Pawson, Bury, linen-draper—June 3, L. Claude, Liverpool, merchant—June 6, E. Body, Morice-town, merchant—June 4, T. Small, Alnwick, common brewer—June 3, J. Beadey, Wotton-Underedge, clothier—June 6, W. Toll, St. Germans, Cornwall, miller.

CERTIFICATES—June 3.

A. Smith, Bath, grocer—J. Smith, Liverpool, leather-cutter—W. G. Jackson and W. Hardley, Great Surrey-street, linen-drapers—C. Clarke, Bristol, baker—A. J. C. Cumming, High-street, Borough, cheesemonger—M. Pike jun. Sidmouth, Devon cabinet-maker—T. Griffith, Liverpool, merchant—D. Reeves, Wardour-street, Soho, grocer—T. Sweet, Frith-street, Soho, carver and gilder.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

MONDAY.

The Royal Assent was given by Commission to the Warehousing, the Merchants' Vessels' Apprentice, the Edinburgh and Glasgow Canal Union Bills.

Petitions were presented from Shaftesbury and Arran against Slavery.

Earl Grey, adverting to the war between France and Spain, trusted their Lordships would see the necessity of having every information on the subject. A report had been current for some time of the capture of a Spanish ship in the West Indies by a French cruizer, which must have sailed from France before the commencement of hostilities, and must have had her orders from the French Government at a time when they were amusing us with negociations. He asked for information, to afford Ministers an opportunity of defending France from a charge of such manifest injustice and violence. He then moved for copies or extracts of any correspondence between Russia, Prussia, and Austria, with this country, relative to any determination on the part of those three Powers to make a common cause with France in the war against Spain; and also for any information respecting the assembling of a Russian army on the Vistula, and an Austrian army in Piedmont.

The Earl of Liverpool replied to the observations of the Noble Earl. With respect to the capture of a Spanish vessel by the French ship Jean Bart, the French Government had shewn the greatest anxiety, even before any application had been made to them, to say that they had no knowledge of the act, and afterwards to declare, in answer to Sir Charles Stuart's inquiries, that no order whatever had been given to the French Admiralty to make captures. Our own Commander in the West Indies had stated, that the capture of the Spanish letter of marque had been occasioned by her attacking the Jean-Bart at night, when the latter fought and took her. With regard to the consistency of the Noble Earl's opinions, it had never been meant to say that he had not had the feelings of a man and of an Englishman when the original attack was made upon Spain: but that while his opinions and his conduct were then consistent together, his present opinions and conduct were no longer so. The Noble Earl then defended the conduct of His Majesty's Ministers during the late negociations. As to the assembling of armies, it had certainly been stated, that Russia had collected troops in Poland, and Austria detained hers in the Milanese, but he saw no reason to believe that those Powers had any object in view but of a defensive nature. The Noble Earl concluded by declaiming his dissent from the motion before the House.

Lord Holland said, that the Noble Earl's speech was to deprecate the going to war with France in behalf of Spain. He defended his Noble Friend (Grey's) opinions formerly, as being conformable to those he had now expressed; and declared, that the person who attacked them had gone greatly out of his way to do so.

Lord Eldon agreed in the conclusions drawn by his Noble Friend the Earl. He could not view this war as a contest between France and Spain; he must consider it as a consecutive war of the Holy Alliance. It was a war which threatened the Constitution of this country more than any other.

Lord Calthorpe supported the motion. He took a review of the British negociations at Verona, expressing a hope that peace might be preserved, but deprecating the mild tone in which our expostulations were made.—The Address was negatived without a division.

TUESDAY.

The Rochdale Gas Light, the Union Duties and the Quorum Magistrates Bills, were passed.

The Archbishop of Canterbury presented the Report of the Committee of Enquiry to investigate the different acts respecting Marriages. The Report stated, that the Committee were satisfied of the inconveniences which had resulted from the Act passed last Session, in consequence of the oaths therein appointed to be taken by the parties marrying, and recommended a recurrence to former practices which had endured for seventy years: the Committee recommended in future Bill to expunge unnecessary forms and processes, that no alteration should be made in publishing the Banns of Marriage, except authorizing them to be made in the New Churches and Chapels. Marriages by License to be solemnized by new forms, and secured by banns on either side, and in either case if not acted upon in three months from the period of granting the same, then they are to be void, additional penalties on persons falsely pretending to be in Holy Orders performing marriages, providing a moral security for parents and guardians, which renders all improper marriages voidable within twelve months, and making the perjured party on either side, liable to the forfeiture of property obtained by such marriage.—The Committee recommend no provisions in relation to Roman Catholics, Unitarians, and Dissenters, the latter mi, at themselves provide some separate and distinct remedies, for their difficulties.

On moving that the report be printed,

Lord Ellenborough protested against the provision making the marriages of minors avoidable by law, and he thought it would be nugatory, as improper marriages may be contracted by banns, he was of opinion that it held out inducements to profligate young men of rank, to seduce and then get rid of, under the guise of law, the weaker party, and in most cases the innocent and deceived. He should therefore in every stage, oppose the proposed clause of nullity.

The Bill was then read a first time, ordered to be printed, and his Grace gave notice that on an early day after the holidays he should move the second reading.

The Earl of Shaftesbury presented a Petition from Samuel Thornton, Esq. Governor of the Russia Company, stating that although his marriage had been solemnized by the Chaplain to the British Embassy, yet there were doubts of its validity, and he prayed for some legislative enactment to render it binding.

Lord Stowell was of opinion, notwithstanding the Petitioner's apprehensions, that the marriage was valid. The Petition was laid on the table.

WEDNESDAY.

Petitions were presented from Gloucester, against the Slave Trade; from Chester, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; from the Treasurers of counties in Ireland, praying for remuneration.

THURSDAY.

Petitions were presented from Higham Ferrars, Birmingham, and Norwich, against Slavery—from Norwich against the Insolvent Debtors' Act.—The Magistrates Quorum, the Union Duties, and the Belfast, Liverpool, and Dublin Gas Light Bills were passed.

FRIDAY.

Petitions were presented from Royston against Slavery; from the Chamber of Commerce at Glasgow, against the Weights and Measures Regulation Bill.

In answer to a question from Earl Grosvenor, respecting West Indian Sinecures,

The Earl of Liverpool said, many sinecures had been abolished, and persons holding others, had been obliged to reside on the spot. A commission had been appointed to inquire into the offices in the Revenue Department. The Noble Lord said, no pensions had been granted on the four and half West Indian Duties.

On the third reading of the Irish Militia Reduction Bill,

Lord Gosford, the Earl of Caledon, and Lord Lorton, objected to the Bill, on the ground that it bore hard on certain Non-commissioned Officers in the Militia, who were turned adrift.

The Earl of Liverpool denied that the fact was as stated; out of 800 Non-commissioned Officers, 550 received pensions. The House divided—For the Bill, 18—Against it, 9.—The Bill was passed.

Adjourned till Thursday next.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

MONDAY.

The Speaker, attended by the Members present, went to the House of Peers to hear the Royal Assent, (for which see the Lords).

Mr. Jervis presented a petition from owners and occupiers of land in the County of Southampton, complaining of Agricultural distress, and praying for a Reform in Parliament, and an equitable arrangement with respect to the Public Debt and Church Property.

Sir Thomas Barrse, though he approved of the petition generally, objected to that part which related to an arrangement of church property, he could not agree to any seizure of church property, because he considered the clergy to have suffered as much as any other class of persons from the pressure of the times.

Mr. Monck disapproved of a general seizure of church lands; but he thought those in the gift of the Crown, or in that of the Lord Chancellor, might be properly sold for the public benefit.

The Petition was ordered to be printed.

Petitions were presented from Alton, praying for a repeal of the Coal Duties—from West India Planters residing in London and Carlisle, against Slavery.

Sir I. Coffin observed, that many petitions were presented for and against the abolition of slavery, but he had never heard of one which proposed to give a compensation to the present holders of slaves, and to feed 100,000 slaves when they should be emancipated.

Mr. Baring said it was an important question, and he would warn the House on one point. The petitions coming in on this subject, while left undecided by the House, might occasion the most serious consequences to the black population. The desire of emancipation in the West Indies was creditable to this country, but a vague rumour of the event had some time ago occasioned an insurrection of the blacks in the Island of Barbadoes, on a rumour that Mr. Wilberforce had emancipated them, which was not quelled until some lives had been lost.

Petitions were also presented from Lancaster against equalizing the Sugar Duties—from the Butchers of Leadenhall, complaining of the glut of foreign tallow—and from the Merchants of Liverpool, praying for an alteration of the Law of Principal and Factor.

Mr. Secretary Canning laid on the table certain papers relative to the Slave Trade, and in answer to a question from Mr. Holhouse, respecting the detention of a British subject at Rome, and the interception of Mr. Bowring's letters, replied he certainly had heard of Mr. Bisquiere being interrupted, and was utterly at a loss to know on what grounds it could have taken place.

Mr. Denison presented a petition from certain brewers of ale and table beer against the Bill now before the House, which prevented them from brewing an intermediate beer without erecting new brewhouses at least two hundred yards from those used in brewing their other beers. They wished the measure to be put off for one year, that they might lay their case before a Committee. The Hon. Member suggested that to avoid all difficulties, it would be better to take the duties off beer altogether and place them on malt.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer said, the present measure was only a modification of the existing law; and an attempt gradually to improve it. He would be ready to discuss the subject in a future stage of the Bill.

Mr. Maberly asked whether the Chancellor of the Exchequer would allow a Committee to be appointed to take into consideration the propriety of placing the duty on malt instead of beer.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer was not prepared to answer in the affirmative.

Mr. Maberly then gave notice that he should upon an early occasion, move for the appointment of a Committee.

The petition was ordered to be printed.

The second reading of the Usury Laws' Repeal Bill was put off to this day fortnight.

Mr. Goulburn moved for leave to bring in a bill to continue the Insurrection Act in Ireland for a time to be limited. The Hon. Member lamented with deep regret, that in some parts of that country there was a general combination of the peasantry against the law, and all the duties of private property. The first object, therefore, was to give protection to the rural, and to leave for subsequent periods the other measures of improvement and amelioration. In other parts of the country the Act had produced the greatest benefit, by tranquillizing the general state of society. The House would recollect that in the county of Limerick, only eighteen months ago, these outrages were perpetrated, with the addition of a system of assassination with which he was happy to say the present disturbances in the county of Cork were not contaminated. The application of the Insurrection Act had already restored tranquillity to a great portion of the county of Clare. The same might be observed of the county of Tipperary, which had been among the most disturbed of all the counties.

Lord Althorp observed, that from the system of Government adopted with regard to that country, Ireland had been a source of weakness rather than of strength to this country. He did not wish to deprive Government of any powers that might be necessary, but he moved a Resolution, in the shape of an amendment—"That as all the measures of coercion had failed, it was necessary to go fully into the whole state of Ireland."

Mr. J. Smith seconded the Amendment. It was impossible to suppose that the cause of the disturbances could not be ascertained. Scotland had suffered in the year 1817 from famine, and yet no disturbance had taken place there.

Sir N. Colthurst said, the question now was, whether disturbances amounting almost to rebellion, should or should not be put down. He considered that the situation of Ireland fully called for and justified the motion of his Right Hon. Friend.

Lord A. Hamilton condemned the system pursued towards Ireland, and opposed the motion.

Mr. Plunkett said, the measure was intended only as a temporary one.

Lord Milton thought the House ought to look cautiously at the speech of the Noble Lord.

Mr. Secretary Peel enumerated the various measures passed to relieve Ireland from the great inconvenience under which she was placed.

The House divided—For the amendment, 82—Against it, 162—Majority, 80.—The original motion was then agreed to.

TUESDAY.

At four o'clock the Speaker counted the House, and there being only 24 Members present, an adjournment of course took place.

WEDNESDAY.

In a Committee on Allardice's Divorce Bill Counsel were heard and witnesses examined to prove the adultery.

Petitions were presented from Bridgewater, Manchester, Colchester, Coggeshal, Lutterworth, various places in Suffolk, Greet and Little Bolton, Rochester, Chatham, Whitehaven, Cheltenham, Stroud, Hitchen, Watford, &c. against the Slave Trade; from Leith, Rochdale, and Warwick, against equalizing the Duties on Sugar; from Ware, against the Coal Duties; from Leicester, for the repeal of the Malt Duties; from the Chamber of Commerce in Bristol, praying for an alteration of the law of Foreign Consignments; from the merchants of Bristol for an alteration in the mode of stamping linens; and from Guildford against the Game Laws.

Sir J. Sebright presented a petition from Sir John Sinclair against the repeal of the Duty on Foreign Wool. The Hon. Member, in order to convince the House of the excellence of the wool manufactured from Sir John Sinclair's sheep, had on his back a coat made from the wool, which the House might examine, when he brought up the petition—and further, he would go into the lobby to give them a better opportunity. The petition was ordered to be printed.

Sir H. Parnell gave notice that he should, on Friday se'nnight, move for a Secret Committee to enquire into the Disturbances in Ireland.

Sir Thomas Baring presented a petition from Mr. M'Adam, praying for further remuneration for improving the public roads. A former petition of this gentleman had been referred to a Committee of the House, who had favourably reported on his claims, and recommended a remuneration; 4,000l. were in consequence paid to him by the Treasury, but it was thought no further sum ought to be advanced without the sanction of Parliament.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer was aware of the merits of Mr. M'Adam, and was not hostile to his claims; he should not object to referring the Petition to a Committee, but he could not pledge himself to support it.

Mr. Curwen, Mr. Maberly, Mr. Brougham, Mr. D. Gilbert, Mr. H. Sumner, Lord Lowther, &c. supported the Petition, and Mr. Henry Grey Bennett opposed it. The Petition was laid on the table.

Lord A. Hamilton complained that a person in the interest of Hon. Members opposite, had been instrumental in preventing those being made the preceding evening, in consequence of which his motion on Scotch Representation fell to the ground.

Mr. Goulburn, Mr. Secretary Peel, and the Lord Advocate, disclaimed any knowledge of interference.

Sir J. Newport gave notice that he should, early in the next Session, move for the appointment of a Committee to enquire into the state of the Established Church in Ireland, the Resident Clergy, and the First Fruits.

On the motion of Mr. Henry Grey Bennett, a Committee was appointed to enquire into the State of the Penitentiary at Millbank.

Mr. Williams complained that the Dublin Evening Mail had inserted the whole of the obnoxious examination of the conduct of the Sheriff Waddon at the bar, on the enquiry into the conduct of the Sheriff of Dublin, although that examination related to domestic matters, and had been expunged from the minutes. He moved to call the printer to the bar.

Colonel Barry had doubts whether the publication was a breach of privilege.

Mr. Brougham observed, that the Gallant Member who had just sat down was very much mistaken in his notion of the privileges of the House. There could be no doubt this printer was guilty of a breach of privilege, for by simply printing he was guilty of one.

Mr. C. Hutchinson said, that he was commissioned by the individual who had offended to state, that the post hour which conveyed the proceedings to Dublin had passed before the decision of the House had been come to, to expunge the obnoxious evidence from the minutes.

Mr. Secretary Canning thought that as a technical breach of privilege had been committed, he could not vote against any further proceeding; but, as it was committed in ignorance, he should think he might be dismissed with a very lenient reprehension.

Mr. Williams had no wish to press the matter, and withdrew his motion.

Mr. Hume gave notice of a motion, for Mr. Maberly, for the 28th inst. to transfer the duty on beer to malt.

The Sheriffs of London presented a petition from the Lord Mayor and Common Council against the London-bridge Rebuilding Bill, which was ordered to be printed.

The House resumed the enquiry into the conduct of the Sheriff of Dublin.

William Hewitt, an attorney in Dublin, remembered going to Newgate with Major Tandy shortly after the riots, identified a man, in dress and appearance, as the one who threw the mace; but could not say that George Graham was the man.

Joseph Henry Moore was called to prove that the Grand Jury were aware that a capital charge was to be preferred against the prisoners.

Colonel Barry then examined Mr. Plunkett.

The Hon. Member remembered a Grand Jury being examined prior to the trial of the ribbandmen. Some of the Jurors were challenged; had not heard Waddell objected to as a Grand Juror; the rules and regulations furnished to him (Mr. P.) relative to the Orange Lodges, were furnished subsequent to the riot.

J. Crosby Graves had been examined by the Grand Jury, was treated with courtesy, had seen the Dublin Almanack for 1821, and the Annals of Dublin, had seen the accounts of the riot at the theatre in those publications. In one was asserted that a piece of timber had been thrown at the Lord Lieutenant, and in another a log of wood. Witness believed that a piece of wood had been thrown, he had seen it in the Police Office, and had once agreed it, to make the Attorney-General acquainted with its size, he described it to be a cattle, such as a person would purchase at a shop to take to a masquerade. A great part of the examinations were taken before the Law Officers of the Crown at the Castle, and sent to witness and the other Magistrates from time to time. The parties were sworn to their examinations. Witness had in no case refused or denied to sign any information committed. He had not seen in the theatre the bottle which was thrown; still it was held out as having been thrown on. There was then a cry of "Shame!" Witness went to the gallery where he found the disturbance extended to the boxes. He had seized a person in the act of whistling, and he must have been while he was taking that person to the watch-house that the bottle was thrown. It had never occurred to him that any attempt was made to assassinate the Lord Lieutenant while he was present in the theatre. Witness had been a magistrate eight or nine years, had never received orders from Government to prevent the harassing of the streets—did not remember any particular disturbance on any occasion, till the one immediately preceding the King's visit to Ireland.

Christopher Gelleley, a peace-officer, was examined before the Grand Jury in January, 1821, who heard his whole story; had apprehended Henry Handwich in the gallery of the theatre; was not a member of any Orange Lodge.

William Irwin, another peace-officer, confirmed this testimony.

Benjamin Ricky presented the panel of February 1819, which had been struck when he presented the panel as a former examination. After the Corporation election in 1819, out of a panel of 48 names but one Common Councilman appeared. Did not remember how the Grand Jurors answered consecutively on the trial of the Sheriff in 1798, nor in the case of Emmett.

The Chairman reported progress.—To sit again on Wednesday.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer moved the House to go into Committee on the Customs' Acts.

Mr. Hume called the attention of the House to the state of Newfoundland, which contains a population of from 80,000 to 100,000 souls. The manner in which it was governed had long been a cause of complaint, particularly as to the administration of justice. Masters of ships and naval officers had been appointed Judges, to expound the law, and decide between the inhabitants in all cases of dispute. The inhabitants complained that various fines were exacted of them by the Admiral, and that within the last year such fines had been levied by Sir Charles Hamilton. There was a most injurious grievance complained of also in the tenure of land in this colony. He knew that no one could sell land without the consent of the Governor for the time being. This was an hardship upon the planter which existed in no other island, and a considerable increment to the value of their property. He therefore moved, that a Select Committee be appointed to take into consideration the state of the colony of Newfoundland, of the laws, revenues, and of the administration of justice; and to report the evidence to the House, together with their opinion thereon.

Mr. Wilmot Horton said, a Bill had been prepared by the Government for remedying the defects in the administration of justice, and the removal of the Surrogate Courts. With regard to a local legislature it was almost physically impossible. There were no roads in the island, and during the winter no means of communication; and in the summer the persons belonging to that class who must form the representation, were occupied by the peculiar duties of their situations. With regard to the charges against Sir Charles Hamilton and other Officers, the Honourable Member must not assume that because he brought forward these charges and they did not meet with contradiction on the instant, a Committee was therefore necessary to enquire into them.

Mr. M. A. Taylor declared that he had never heard a stronger case made out for a Committee since he had been in Parliament.

Captain Gordon thought it extremely unjust that the feelings of Gentlemen and men of honour should be wounded upon investigation of such a nature as that which the Hon. Member appeared to possess.

The motion was supported by Mr. Bright and Mr. Butterworth. The House divided—For the Motion 27, against it 43. Majority against the Motion, 16.

The House then went into Committee.

The Chancellor then moved several resolutions to alter certain duties included in the Schedule; viz. to increase the duty on book paper; in respect to articles of curiosity, only a nominal duty would be made to prevent imposition at the Custom-House; a provision would be introduced to regulate agents, and provide against pilfering those articles; the duty on sulphur to be reduced 1s. 6d. per cwt. These regulations were agreed to.

THURSDAY.

Petitions were presented from Durham, Frome Selwood, Bridport, Gloucester, Worcester, Dover, Buxton, Great Yarmouth, Pontefract, Huntingdon, Bath, Chester, Calne, Norwich, Dudley, Bristol, Saxmen, Loughborough, Thetford, Belfast, Witham, &c. &c., against Slavery from Bridport, against the Insolvent Debtors Act; from Perth, and other towns in Scotland, against the Repeal of the Linen Laws; from Norwich, against the Coal Duties.

Mr. HENRY DAVIES presented a Petition from the Merchants, Bankers, and respectable inhabitants of Bristol, praying the House not to regard the petition just presented in favour of the abolition of Slavery as containing the sentiments of the majority of that city.

Mr. HERRISSON presented a petition from the most respectable inhabitants of Liverpool, recommending such measures as would secure the slaves gradual instruction and improvement, and prepare them for the enjoyment of civil rights. The Right Hon. Gent. expressed his concurrence in the sentiments of the petitioners.

Mr. BARING presented a petition from the Agents of the West India Colonies, praying the House to act with deliberation in the discussion respecting slavery. The Hon. Gent. pointed out to the House the importance of this momentous nature, involving the property and the fate of the Colonists, could not be treated with too much caution.

The CHANCELLOR of the EXCHEQUER gave notice, that on the 30th of May he should move in Committee of Supply, a vote for the New Building, in addition to the British Museum.

Mr. HERRISSON gave notice, that on Friday next he should move a Resolution, tending to equalize the Duties on Goods imported in English and Foreign ships.

On the motion of Mr. J. SMITH, a Committee was appointed to inquire into the state of the law between Merchant and Factor.

Mr. SERJEANT OSWALD expressed his entire concurrence in it.

Mr. MARRYATT doubted the expediency of altering the law on this subject. A great deal was said about the situation of merchants and factors in discussing this subject; but the truth was, neither merchants nor factors were materially interested in the question.

Mr. T. F. BUXTON brought under the consideration of the House the state of the slaves in our colonies, and moved the following resolution:—"That the state of slavery is repugnant to the principles of the British Constitution, and of the Christian religion, and that it ought to be abolished gradually throughout the British Colonies, with as much expedition as may be found consistent with a due regard to the well-being of the parties concerned." He observed it might be asked, Why are you now standing foremost to bring forward this question, when there is an individual near you so much more able, and who has already triumphed on this important measure? In reply he would say, he had not come forward unsolicited, but had done it in compliance with the expressed wish and desire of his Hon. Friend—(Hear, hear! from Mr. Wilberforce.)—He denied that any danger existed now in bringing the subject forward, and he assured those Gentlemen connected with the West Indies, that he had no personal feeling towards them; on the contrary he felt that they were placed in a situation extremely unfortunate—their predecessors having embarked their property in a bad cause, in a cause which could not stand against investigation. The Hon. Member took a review of the labours of his Hon. Friend (Mr. Wilberforce) who commenced them in 1787, and then there was a prediction that there would be an insurrection of the Negroes, which was however completely falsified. All the changes produced by his Hon. Friend's exertions were conducted with the utmost tranquility among the Blacks. In 1805, Lord Seaforth, Governor of Barbadoes, discovered a series of the most horrible cruelties practised by the planters against their slaves. He inflicted the punishment of the law, which was something less than the fine for killing a partridge in England, namely, 11l. 12s. He applied for a law to make the murder of a slave a capital offence; but the Colonial Assembly inflicted upon him a severer censure than ever was before or since cast upon his Majesty's Representative. The Hon. Gentleman proceeded to shew, that the opposition offered, in 1804, to the motions then made in favour of slaves, was couched in almost the very same terms as that against which he had now to contend. In 1817, only five years ago, Mr. Maxwell, Governor of Dominica, wrote home that many undue and unlawful acts of severity towards slaves had occurred, particularly in making them wear iron collars and chains, after having been severely whipped. He instanced cases of girls, boys, and old men (Negroes) being loaded with chains above 20lbs. weight, in the island of Dominica. For going to see these things the Governor, Mr. Maxwell, was presented by the Grand Jury of the island as a nuisance for, as they called it, interfering unjustifiably between master and servant. One of their objects was to have a day set aside for religious instruction to the Negroes, and another set aside for cultivating his provision-ground. They meant also to make his children free; to abolish the use of the cart-whip; and he should be astonished if such bounties would induce the Negroes to disaffection or insurrection. Besides the Negroes saw another island in which 800,000 negroes had obtained the freedom to which they were, he would say, entitled. The Hon. Member concluded with a strong appeal to the feelings of Ministers and of the House, on the score of humanity, to abolish the traffic, and submitted his Resolution for adoption.

Mr. SECRETARY CANNING said, the appeal with which the Hon. Gentleman had concluded his speech to his Majesty's Ministers, made him feel it his duty to address the House thus early, to state the opinions of the Government on this most fearful question, in which a rash word or an ardent expression might raise a flame which would not be easily extinguished. He did not say this to stifle discussion, but as a caution to those who might speak in a more advanced stage of the debate, not to go into a colouring of statements which the Hon. Gentleman had sketched with no light hand. When he looked at the state of the question, he found there a great preponderating slave population; and he was obliged to consider how best he could confer the greatest sum of happiness on them without danger to the Whites of our own nation and blood; and who could cut his way shortly to that end, merely by an appeal to passions and to sentiment? It was impossible not to see that there were knots and difficulties to be untied and surmounted before they could arrive at their object. The Hon. Gent. began by stating that slavery was repugnant to the British Constitution and the Christian religion. God forbid that he should say otherwise; but the Hon. Gent.'s proposition was not correctly true, for the British Constitution had admitted slavery in some of its dependencies. The Christian religion did not encourage slavery; but it was not historically true that it could not exist with slavery, for while it gilded the sceptre it consoled the slave. It was, therefore, not true that the Christian religion was emphatically opposed to slavery. The Right Hon. Gent. said, his opinion, made up with that of his colleagues after the most earnest and mature deliberation, was, that in order to work with more certainty and secure effect, these operations had better be left in the hands of the Executive Government. With that view he should move certain resolutions for the adoption of the House. The Honourable Gentleman asked, whether it were proper that there should be driving to the field with a cart-whip? and he should say, certainly not. He was for abolishing in toto that degrading punishment as applied to females. He would have the Sabbath more strictly appropriated to devotion and religious instruction, and a greater time should be allowed for recreation. The resolutions were to this effect:—"1st. That it is expedient to adopt efficient and decisive measures for ameliorating the condition of the slave population of his Majesty's Colonies. 2d. That in their determination to persevere in the timely, judicious, and temperate enforcement of such measures, this House will look forward to the gradual and progressive improvement in the condition of that population, such as will prepare them for a participation in the civil rights and privileges enjoyed by the other classes of his Majesty's subjects. 3d. That this House is anxious to accomplish such change, at the earliest period consistent with the well being of the slaves themselves, the safety of the colonies, and a fair and equable regard to the rights of property involved." The Rt. Hon. Gentleman concluded with saying, there was one other topic upon which he would detain the House for a short time: he meant the conduct to be pursued by the Executive. There were some colonies in which the Crown held authority without independent Legislatures; and there the measures decided upon might be carried into effect without obstruction. What was done there, he trusted, would operate with the force of example upon the other colonies.

Mr. WILBERFORCE said, when his Right Hon. Friend alluded to the state of Slavery in the Roman Empire, as compared to that which existed in the West Indian Colonies at the present time, he overlooked one material difference—that he was then addressing a Parliament of Christians, whose bounden duty it was to act upon and promulgate the principles of the Christian religion. Their object was to abolish working on Sundays and Sunday markets. Whatever danger they might have to apprehend from a discussion of this question, it was not equal to the long continuance of slavery in the West Indies. In all our West India Islands there was reason to believe that the population was gradually decreasing. This the West Indians attributed to the great disproportion of the sexes, there being far more men than women; but it was ascertained that though the sexes had been brought from Africa in nearly equal numbers, the women were now more in number than the men. Something must be done to effect an emendation of the system, not simply for the cause of humanity, but for the sake of sound policy itself. He congratulated his Hon. Friend upon the degree of success with which his object had already been attended. He did not hold out against the resolutions of his Right Hon. Friend.

Mr. ELLIS, as a West India Planter, did not consider himself answerable for the commencement of slavery. They had property in those islands under the sanction and protection of the Parliament and Government of Great Britain. He conceived them only bound to mitigate and improve the condition of their slaves for the benefit of their own property. Should the Negroes be led to believe that Parliament wished to give them that freedom which the Colonial Assemblies withheld, would they not be tempted to assert that freedom by force of arms? He admitted that on former occasions more might have been done by the Colonial Legislatures, when he himself had, in 1797, moved an address on the subject. But in that year a law had passed for the better moral and religious instruction of the slaves—subsequent Acts had passed for ameliorating the condition of the slave. The good effects of these enactments were visible in the great and progressive improvement of the Slave population. He did not believe the whip to be used as a stimulus to labour, but as a symbol of authority; and he was confident there would be no objection to the prohibition of its use. The Hon. Member supported the resolution of his Right Hon. Friend.

Mr. W. SMITH admitted that the emancipation should be gradual, he must at the same time contend that it ought to be certain. To the want of that certainty he chiefly objected to the Resolutions of the Right Hon. Gentleman.

Mr. BRIGHT defended the conduct of the West India Proprietors, and contended that they were anxiously employed in endeavouring to improve the condition of their Slaves. He stated that manumissions in the respective islands had of late years greatly increased.

A MEMBER said, that much good had arisen from the labour of the Wesleyan Missionaries; particularly in the great diminution of corporal punishment in the estates where the Negroes had the advantage of these instructions. If the Wesleyans had ample funds they could do still more good.

Mr. SYKES deprecated any allusion to works of authors which were not before the House. The Negroes were called to labour by the sound of the whip, which was suspended over them during the day, and by it they were dismissed to rest. The evidence of no Slave could be taken in a Court of Justice. He hoped Ministers would keep a watchful eye over the Colonial Legislatures.

Mr. MARRYATT read the Reports of the Governors of many of the Islands; by which it appeared, that the condition of the Negro Population had been greatly improved, in consequence of the abolition of the Slave Trade. Indeed he believed that the slaves of the West India islands are better off than the labourers of this country. With regard to the two motions before the House, he thought the difference between them was rather as to the mode than as to the end in view. He thought the original Motion would give just ground of dissatisfaction, and that the Amendment would cause good will between the planters and their slaves, and induce the gratitude of the latter towards their masters. He should support the Amendment.

Mr. BROUGHAM bore testimony to the candour of the Right Hon. Gent. in his sincerity for abolishing the slave trade; but he lamented that no provisions were made for carrying the resolutions into effect. Past experience had on this subject taught him distrust. The Hon. Gentleman then commented on the reports read by the Member for Sandwich, especially on that from Jamaica, in which it was stated, that the Negroes were so well satisfied with their situations, that they would not be liberated. This told well on paper; but it was unfortunate that he held in his hand a Jamaica Newspaper, which contained numerous contradictions to this statement; for in this Paper were advertized no less than 40 runaway slaves.

Mr. BUXTON consented to withdraw his Motion, and the Resolutions of Mr. Canning were carried.

FRIDAY.

Petitions were presented from the Merchants and Ship-owners of Newcastle-upon-Tyne, against erecting a toll for ships passing through the London New Bridge—from Cromer against the Slave Trade—from the Chamber of Commerce in Limerick, praying for a protecting duty on Foreign Yarn—from John Clark, of Skipton in Yorkshire, complaining that he had been kept to hard labour in prison 200 days before trial, at the instance of certain Magistrates—another Petition was presented from a Magistrate named Staples, complaining of his brother Magistrates.—The York Gas Light Bill was passed.—The Grand Jury Presentment Bill was ordered for further consideration on Wednesday.

Mr. BROUGHAM brought in a Bill for regulating the sale of Beer, which went to allow all persons, whether brewers or not, to sell Beer by retail.—The Bill was ordered for a second reading on Friday next.

The Committee for enquiring into the state of London Bridge had leave to report on Monday se'nnight.

The Commissary Court of Scotland Bill was re-committed for Friday next.

Mr. SECRETARY CANNING presented additional papers relative to the Slave Trade, which were ordered to be printed.

Mr. C. WYNNE presented the Report of the Committee appointed to enquire into the state of the Courts of Law in Ireland.

Mr. S. RICE observed, that two years ago he originated a charge against a very high legal character in Ireland, he pressed forward enquiry till it had been recognised by the House. He trusted that Government would take up the enquiry and prosecute it.

Mr. SECRETARY CANNING said, if the Hon. Member meant that the executive were to proceed by prosecution, he must state that that was neither Parliamentary in practice nor in principle. Mr. Burke, in the impeachment of Mr. Hastings, did not expect to have the assistance of the Government; and Mr. Whitbread, in the case of Lord Melville, pursued the same course. If they were dealing with a removeable officer, and a case of corruption had been proved, then he admitted they were bound to remove such officer, as members of the Executive, but not as members of that House. For himself he would now declare that he would not stir in this case, and he trusted none of his colleagues would do so. The Hon. Gentleman had brought forward the charge, and must be prepared to meet it if he could.

Sir J. NEWPORT thought it hard that the whole burthen should be thrown on one individual member.

Mr. ABERCROMBIE asked, with what prospect of success could any individual hope to prosecute such an enquiry to a successful issue, when the Right Hon. Gentleman had declared himself favourable to the accused party?

Mr. SECRETARY CANNING repelled such an insinuation. He had made no such declaration—he had declared a decidedly different opinion. He had formed no opinion on the case—he knew nothing of the individual concerned, but by report, which stated the individual to be adverse to His Majesty's Government in politics.

After some further observations the report was ordered to be printed.

Mr. GOULBURN moved, that the House should go into Committee on the Irish Tithe Commutation Bill.

Mr. V. FITZGERALD regretted the thinness of the House on so important a subject. He stated his objections to the Bill, which were principally to a particular clause, which obliged a valuation to be made if the incumbent was dissatisfied with the assessment. He deprecated the tithe on potatoes, on which nine-tenths of the population subsisted, in some counties it had not been exacted. He wished tithes to be fixed on the land to be paid for by the Catholic tenant, as a part of his rent only, and not in the shape of tithes.

Mr. GOULBURN defended the principle of the Bill, though he was aware of the difficulties which it created; still these might be remedied in the Committee. The great evil of the tithe system in Ireland, arose from its bringing the Clergyman in immediate contact with the cultivator of the soil.

Mr. WETHERELL said, the object of the Bill, was to compel the Church of Ireland to exchange their freehold rights for a pecuniary payment; and to put their stipends on the same footing as the poor-rates in this country. By the present Bill the Church of Ireland would be deprived of its property, and the Member for Aberdeen, wished that country to be deprived of her Chief Governor.—The principle of spoliation if applied to Ireland, would soon extend to England.

Mr. SECRETARY PEEL observed, that in every part of Ireland an amicable composition had been entered into for the payment of tythes. The Right Hon. Gent. mentioned the names of several parishes, where, for upwards of 20 years the tythes had been compounded. What had taken place in particular parishes it was the object of the Bill to make general throughout the country.

After some observations from Sir J. Newport, Col. Barry, &c. the House went into Committee.—The Bill passed through pro forma, and was ordered to be reported on Wednesday.

The Report of the Customs' Acts was agreed to, and Bills ordered accordingly.

Mr. GOULBURN brought in the Irish Insurrection Bill, which was ordered to be read a second time on Thursday next.

Adjourned till Wednesday.

Just published, in 3 vols. 12mo. boards,

RINGAN GILHAIZE, or the COVENANTERS. By the Author of "Annals of the Parish," "Sir Andrew Wylie," "The Entail," &c.

"Their constancy in torture and in death.—
"Those on Tradition's tongue still live, these shall
"On History's honest page be pictured bright
"To latest times."—Graham's Sabbath.

Printed for Oliver and Boyd, Edinburgh; and G. and W. B. Whittaker, London

Just published, 8vo. 2s. the Third Edition of OBSERVATIONS on the STUDY of the CIVIL LAW. By DAVID IRVING, LL.D.—Printed for Oliver and Boyd, Edinburgh; and G. and W. B. Whittaker, London.

MAWE'S GARDENER'S CALENDAR.

Just published, in 12mo. price 8s. bound, a New Edition of

EVERY MAN HIS OWN GARDENER; being a new and much more Complete GARDENER'S CALENDAR and GENERAL DIRECTORY than any one hitherto published. Containing Directions for all Work necessary to be done in the Kitchen Garden, Orchard, Hotbeds, &c. Flower Garden, Pleasure Garden, Shrubberies, &c. Greenhouses, Hot-houses, Vineries, &c. for every month in the year; and best Practical Directions for Raising, Propagating and Forcing, in each department; and also relative to Soil and Situation, To which is added, Complete Catalogue of Plants. By THOMAS MAWE and JOHN ABERCROMBIE.—The Twenty second edition, brought down to the present state of Horticultural Knowledge.—Printed for C. and J. Rivington; J. Cuthell; J. Nunn; J. Scatcherd; Longman and Co.; T. Cadell; J. Richardson; J. M. Richardson; Baldwin and Co.; G. and W. B. Whittaker; Harding and Co.; J. Mawman; Sherwood and Co.; J. Booker; Harvey and Darton; S. Bagster; W. Stewart; T. Hamilton; H. Corrie; E. S. Kirby; Gale, Duncan and Co.; R. Saunders; R. Scholey; S. Edwards; and Simpkin and Marshall.

Just published, in 8vo. price 1s. 6d.

IMPRESSMENT; an attempt to prove, why it should, and how it could be abolished. By LIEUT. R. STANDISH HALY, R.N.—Published by Moore and Sydenham, Poole; and G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London.

Just published in 8vo. price 1s.

AN ADDRESS to the PROTESTING CATHOLICS of the British Empire. By MILES BRITANNICUS.—Published by Bowes, Wimple-street, Plymouth; and G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London.

Just published, in 8vo. price 12s. boards,

THE LUCUBRATIONS of HUMPHREY RAVELIN, Esq. late Major of the * * Regiment of Infantry.

"Wolves to Lyke French falconers, fly at anything we see."—Shakespeare.

Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

"The best papers in the Volume are unquestionably those of a general character. The Essays on Modern Extravagance and Charity are evidently the work of a man who has read life with an eye of wisdom. The observations are faithful to fact, and the remarks either ingenious or sound."—Literary Gazette, March 22, 1823.

Just published, with a striking likeness of General Riego, 8vo. price 7s. 6d. boards,

ANECDOTES of the SPANISH and PORTUGUESE REVOLUTIONS. By COUNT PECCHIO, an Italian Exile, with an Introduction and Notes, by EDWARD BLAQUIERE, Esq. Author of "Letters from the Mediterranean," "An Historical Review of the Spanish Revolution," &c.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane. ☞ Proof Impressions of the Portrait may be had separate, price 2s. 6d.

"This work appears to be the offspring of an elegant, ardent, and sprightly mind: they are distinguished by prettiness of remark, or bon mot, rather than by depth of view or seriousness of reflection. The well-wishers to the cause of constitutional Spain, will be glad to find Count Pecchio an authority for very considerable resources against foreign interference, contained in the national character of that country."—Literary Register, March, 15, 1823.

In 8vo. price 12s. extra boards,

INTEREST TABLES at FOUR PER CENT. PER ANNUM, rising progressively from one day to three hundred and sixty five. Calculated and arranged by JAMES ROAZ and WILLIAM JEFFREY, Accountants, Glasgow. To which are prefixed, Tables of Currency, Deposits, Annuities, &c. Also, a Bill Card for the present Century.—Printed for the Authors, and sold by Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown; and all other Booksellers.

Just published, in fc. 8vo. price 8s. 6d.

FABLES for the HOLY ALLIANCE, RHYMES on the ROAD, &c. &c.—By THOMAS BROWN, the Younger, Secretary of the Peacurante Society, and Author of the Fudge Family and the Two penny Post-bag. Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London. Of whom may be had,

The FUDGE FAMILY in PARIS, 9th Edit. fc. 8vo. 7s. 6d.

Just published, in 8vo. wit. a Portrait, price 12s. bds. the 2d Edit. of MEMOIRS of the late MRS. CATHERINE CAPPE. Written by HERSELF.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London, and Wilson and Sons, York.

"Mrs. Cappe was one of those characters who are the real ornaments of Society, and on whom its happiness and respectability greatly depend. It is impossible that the faithful delineation of an example like this can be heeless, such candour and truth are manifested by the Author, such purity and elevation of character, such strong moral sense, and such animating and benevolent views of human nature. The book abounds with incidents and anecdotes which would furnish ample materials for volumes of fiction."—Monthly Review, April, 1823.

MAWE'S CONCHOLOGY, &c. &c.

Just published, in 8vo. with 36 Plates, plain, and coloured Frontispiece, price 11. 1s. or the whole beautifully coloured, 2l. 12s. 6d. boards,

THE LINNÆAN SYSTEM of CONCHOLOGY, describing the Orders, Genera, and Species of Shells, arranged into Divisions and Families; with a view to facilitate the Student's attainment of the Science. By JOHN MAWE.—Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, Paternoster-row; and for Mr. Mawe, 149, Strand.

Just published, by the same Author,

1. A TREATISE on DIAMONDS and PRECIOUS STONES, in 8vo. with coloured Plates, 15s. the Second Edition.

2. An INTRODUCTION to the STUDY of CONCHOLOGY. Second Edit. 8vo. with 7 Plates, 9s. plain, or 14s. coloured.

3. INSTRUCTIONS for the BLOW PIPE, with Improvements from Berzelius, and coloured Frontispiece, Third Edition, 4s. boards.

4. FAMILIAR LESSONS on MINERALOGY, with coloured Plates, and Explanation of Lapidaries' Apparatus for Cutting, Polishing, &c. 12mo. Fourth Edition, 7s. boards.

5. SHELL COLLECTOR'S PILOT, or Voyager's Companion, describing where the finest Shells are found: With coloured plates. Also, Instructions for collecting Insects preserving Shells, &c. &c. Third Edition, 5s.

6. NEW DESCRIPTIVE CATALOGUE of MINERALS, with Diagrams of their Simple Forms. Fourth Edition, price 7s.

7. TRAVELS in the INTERIOR of BRAZIL, with an Account of the Gold and Diamond Districts. Second Edition, in 8vo. with coloured Plates and Map price 18s. boards.

8. DESCRIPTION of LAPIDARIES' APPARATUS, shewing the Method of cutting and polishing Agates, &c. with coloured Plate, 1s.

Just published, in 2 vols. 8vo. price 1l. 4s. boards,

A TREATISE on NERVOUS DISEASES, comprising the History and Method of Cure of the various Species of Apoplexy, Palsy, and Epilepsy, together with an introductory account of the opinions of ancient and modern Physicians, concerning the Nature and Use of the Nervous System. By JOHN COOKE, M.D. F.R.S. F.A.S. Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, —Printed for Longman, Hurst, Rees, Orme, and Brown, London.

The TREATISES on APOPLEXY, PALSY, and EPILEPSY, may be had separate.

JUVENILE AND SCHOOL LIBRARY, 190, OXFORD-STREET, NEAR NEWMAN-SQUARE.—Third Edition,

A NEW and INSTRUCTIVE GAME, being a Genealogical and Chronological History of England, consisting of Two Maps, with suitable Counters, and a hand-some printed Volume as a Book of Reference to Genealogy and Chronology, or Key to the Game, price 14s.

"We consider the rising generation to be eminently indebted to the compiler of this little work, and we cordially recommend it to the attention of every capacity."—European Magazine

2. FRIENDSHIP. A Moral Tale. By Miss Sandham, Author of Twin Sisters, &c. &c. Price 5s.

3. The GRANDFATHER; or the Christmas Holidays. By Miss Sandham. Price 3s. 6d.

4. A NEW VOCABULARY of FRENCH VERBS. By Elizabeth Billard. Price 2s.

5. PAULINE, OU LA VERTUEUSE ORPHELINE. Par Elisabeth Billard. Price 3s. 6d.—Printed for Bowdery and Kerby; where may be had, gratis, their Juvenile Catalogue, comprising a List of the most approved Works for the Use of Young People.

Dedicated, by permission, to the King; executed on four sheets, price 21. 12s. 6d. in case,

MOGG'S New MAP of the County Forty-five Miles round London, completed in a style of unusual beauty, and at once worthy of the subject it embraces.—Published by Edward Mogg, No. 51, Charing-cross; where may be had, MOGG'S New and Improved edition of Paterson's Roads, price 16s. boards.

TO THE LANDED INTEREST!!

Just published, in 1 vol. 8vo. price 7s. 6d. boards,

RELATIVE TAXATION; or Observations on the Impolicy of Taxing Malt, Hops, Beer, Soap, Candles, and Leather; with a View of the Manner in which the Duties imposed upon them affect the different Kinds of Land, whether in Grass or Tillage, and their constant Tendency to Increase Pauperism; with Reasons for substituting a Tax on Property; concluding with an Inquiry into the Effects arising from perpetuating the Land Tax. By T. VAUX.—Printed for Lupton Relfe, 13, Cornhill; and J. Harding, St. James's-st.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

Our numerous correspondents must excuse us this week.
For Stocks see last page.

JOHN BULL.

LONDON, MAY 18.

OUR readers will learn, with pleasure, that His Majesty is convalescent, and has received the visits of several of his Royal Family.

THE question of Negro Emancipation is put to rest for the moment. We last Wednesday published, in the "British Mercury," two affidavits which appear highly important, and on Sunday next we shall continue the subject in this Paper.

MR. GOULBURNE, on Friday night, moved the Order of the Day for going into a Committee upon the Irish Tithes Composition Bill. This was opposed by MR. VESEY FITZGERALD, who appears to take a view of the Bill somewhat similar to our own; MR. WETHERELL also regarded the measure rather as an irritative, than a sedative. The observations of both these Gentlemen were directed towards the compulsory nature of the Bill, which MR. PEEL, who supported it, combatted, by informing them, that "the compulsion was voluntary."

It really is worthy of remark, that whenever Irish affairs come under discussion, the principal actors upon the occasion appear to assume an appropriate nationality of language and conduct. MR. PLUNKETT, when attacked, forgot a precedent which completely justified his apparently unconstitutional conduct; and MR. PEEL, when speaking of compulsion, tells us, that in Ireland, compulsion is voluntary.

Now we, although not in the House of Commons, and therefore unable to state (as we should certainly do were we there,) a few unanswerable objections to the Bill in its present shape, shall take the liberty of shewing here the danger and impolicy of the measure, as well as the irritating tendency of its provisions—we think it but just, however, to observe that MR. PEEL only requests fair discussion in the Committee, and an interchange of information. This is candid enough, but when a Right Hon. Gentleman in MR. PEEL'S particular situation indicates anything like an affection for a measure, the sympathy he creates in a certain class of our representatives is wonderful; we shall, therefore, state a few of the objections to which our attention has been called, in the hope of weakening MR. PEEL'S attachment to this Bill, or at all events of lessening the hope he seems to entertain that it is likely to be a conciliatory one.

In the first place, as the Bill stands, the Lord Lieutenant, at the desire of a few landholders, may force an incumbent to give up the management of his own property in tythe to a Commission, which is empowered to allow him a pittance out of it; and if the incumbent, with a feeling not entirely unnatural, should seem desirous of keeping that which is his own, and hesitates to afford the necessary facilities for his own extraordinary ejectment, he is fineable, and the proceedings go on without his consent or concurrence; and thus not only is every incumbent in every parish where five kind-hearted landholders express an anxiety to take away his property from him, and to pay him an income out of it, forced to submit to the arrangement, but is liable to penalties for even wishing to oppose it.

Thus it will appear that the Clergy of Ireland are to be reduced to the state of lunatics, infants, and idiots, under peculiar disadvantages, which we shall proceed to notice.

In the public appropriation of private property, whenever for the advancement of any great national work, such a measure is, by Act of Parliament, resorted to, it is on the principle of doing a little wrong to do some great right; and however personally inconvenienced persons at times may be by the operation of such an act, a legal valuation is always made, and made, generally speaking, with a liberal feeling towards the peculiar circumstances of the case. But in this measure what is the valuation?—who are the assessing Jury? Commissioners from a Lay Vestry, in the first instance, with an appeal to a Lay umpire, to be nominated by the Lord Lieutenant. This is the course to be pursued; and by this tribunal, subject only to that appeal, is to be decided how much per annum a man can live upon, and which, at their will, is to be allowed him out of his own property.

If this be not compulsion, (as MR. PEEL says it is not) it is surely very like it.

But suppose an incumbent compelled by necessity to concur in the primary measures set forth in the Bill—when once he has concurred, he can only postpone the operation of the Bill against him for two years; at the end of which time, the Lord Lieutenant is competent, by a Commission of his own appointing, to determine finally the sum the incumbent MUST ACCEPT, as compensation for his tithes, for twenty-one years to come; so, that not only are the consequences forced compulsorily upon the incumbent, but he may be forced to entail them upon his successors!

It is true a standard is established in the Bill, by which compensations are to be regulated by a reference to the average receipts of the incumbent for the seven preceding years; but after this inquisitorial revival of the income tax has been acted upon, if it prove unsatisfactory to the umpire to be appointed by Government, he is not bound by any standard, but is left free to award what he pleases, or as he may be commanded by the Lord Lieutenant!!

If MR. PEEL does not perceive the compulsory nature of all this, we will shew him that the parish commissioner can always, by refusing to concur with the incumbent's commission, FORCE the decision into the hands of the Government umpire, and that, consequently, they can force the incumbent into submitting his property to the care of a person over whom he has no controul, who may be hostile to the interests of the Church, and who, moreover, has an arbitrary discretion to award him whatever consideration he chooses, for turning him out of what is his own.

It is not, however, merely the compulsory nature of the measure which renders it dangerous, it is to the degradation of the Protestant Clergy consequent upon it, that we look with anxiety—the Clergyman is submitted to the examination of a vestry, compelled to make oath over and over again before a lay tribunal, which nine times in ten in Ireland will be found to be inimical to him.

The fact of compelling a Clergyman to take no less than three oaths before this lay tribunal, and to render up to a lay inquisition an attested account of his income arising from tithes—the fact that even the Irish Bishops of the Church of England, having property of that nature, are subjected to the same jurisdiction, are in themselves sufficient to induce those Members who really are anxious for the maintenance of the Protestant ascendancy to discountenance the Bill as it now stands.

But it is not only in a political view that this part of the proceeding is objectionable—let us ask, what have the Irish Protestant Clergy done, that their condition should thus be changed in a moment? What acts have they committed, that they are to be deprived of their rights, to be dragged from their peaceful homes, and cross-examined by a select party of their parishioners, upon oath? What an answer is it to give to such a question, to say, that in the course of proceedings which are to despoil them of their own property, it has been found expedient to submit them to such degrading usage.

But our readers may not know, although MR. PEEL does, that the parish commissioners may be Dissenters or ROMAN CATHOLICS!—When it is remembered that hardly a day passes in which the Protestant clergyman in Ireland is not insulted by the Papist in the exercise of his sacred functions, that especially at funerals the lower classes force themselves into the church yards and interrapt the ceremonies there performing—(have we not recently heard of the shameful violation of a Protestant church during an interment?) when it is recollected, that in ordinary vestry meetings the mixture of Protestants and Papists uniformly produces disturbance and confusion, when it is beyond doubt that the Popish Commissioner will always be hostile to the claims of the Protestant clergyman, and above all, when the subversion of the Constitution, THE MASSACRE OF THE PROTESTANTS AND THE LOSS OF IRELAND, would necessarily be the results of ROMAN CATHOLIC ASCENDANCY, are there men to be found who, for the sake of conciliating certain persons, or of tampering with MR. HUME, the patron and advocate of MR. CARLILE, will consent to put the Protestant incumbent of an Irish living UPON OATH AT THE BAR OF A TRIBUNAL on which a ROMAN CATHOLIC COBBLER MAY BE A JUDGE.

The incumbent is subject to three examinatione upon oath, touching his income, all of which are carefully to be kept and compared with each other, after the manner of the Audit Office in England, and the Inquisition in Spain, in order that, if possible, he may by failure of memory, or want of precision, contradict himself:—thus are traps ingeniously laid to rob the Protestant of his respectability, as well as his property.

The consideration of fair adjustment, or equitable commutation, we pass over at the moment, because they form the details of a bill, which is objectionable in the highest degree in its general principle; but it is quite evident, that where the incumbent consents to the arrangement, he has no chance of getting one half of what is due to him, even as income; for, as Irishisms prevail in every part of Irish measures, so we find that the person called an arbitrator, is no arbitrator at all. Two persons are indeed, in the first instance appointed, yet as the ultimate decision is referred to a third person appointed by neither of the contending parties, all the preceding forms, and shew of equity, are a mere farce; and the question, as we said before, comes to an umpire nominated by Government, whose discretionary decree is final!

Even, however, supposing that a rare case should occur, where the claims of the incumbent were fairly considered in the first instance, and the necessity of the ulterior reference obviated—the incumbent's income then would be regulated by a reference to the receipts of the last seven years!

When the events of the last seven years in Ireland are recurred to, the spoliations of property, the acts of violence which have been committed, the burnings and destroyings, the plagues of idleness and insurrection, of famine and sickness, which have afflicted Ireland during that period, does it appear just, that that period should have been selected, from the income of which to strike an average, and award a remuneration?—we say no,—but when it appears that by the losses of the last seven years, the income of the next twenty-one years is to be regulated, the nature of the arrangement becomes clearer and more evident.

Surely the prospective and retrospective periods should be the same—how can the legislature justify the establishment of a remuneration upon a rate of income derivable from seven years of famine and distress, and then entail the disadvantages arising from the event of that period upon the Protestant Clergyman and his successors alone of all subjects, for a term of twenty-one years to come, let the improvements in agricultural property, the increase of traffic, or even of the charges of living, be what they may during that length of time?

But there is another objection to the principle of the Bill, which should operate with those who have a real regard for the Protestant Church in England, as well as in Ireland. When MR. HUME, (because it is idle not to avow that to his flounderings this measure owes its origin), began his attack upon Irish Tythes, we did not know his estimation of MR. CARLILE—but we knew that whatever great measures he might have in view in support of "The Cause," he would commence his operations upon Ireland, and having once weakened the hold of the present clergy upon the actual property of the Church, would proceed, as he, indeed, will be easily able to do, if this bill passes, to apply the same principle to the Clergy of England.

MR. HUME, indeed, has resigned the conduct of the affair to the Government. But the measure loses none of its point, —none of its value as a precedent, by this unnatural transfer.

The meddling with tithes by Act of Parliament destroys the PRINCIPLE OF THE CLERGYMAN'S PROPERTY!—this Bill takes out of his hands what he derives from ANCIENT ESTABLISHED RIGHT, and gives him an income in lieu of it, —that income is now to be settled by lay commissioners—by Popish commissioners. Another modification of the same Bill may reduce or annihilate that income—the power that gives can take away; and at all events another Bill, next Session, may apply the same enactment to the ENGLISH CLERGY.

If this Bill be passed, it is not difficult to anticipate the consequences—and we do call upon those temporizing, moderate, and conciliating men, who fancy such a measure fraught with anything but injustice, danger, and impolicy, to open their eyes, and see for themselves—and if they have not the fruits of CONCILIATION in Ireland now, and remember above all, that this very question of Irish Tithes was first agitated by MR. JOSEPH HUME, the apologist and eulogist of MR. CARLILE, of that MR. CARLILE who designated his house "the Mart of SEDITION and BLASPHEMY," and Honourable Gentleman a public declaration in the British House of Commons, that he IS ONE OF THE BEST MORAL CHARACTERS IN ENGLAND!

SEVERAL violent attacks have been made upon us [illegible] exertions against the Radical Journals, which we [illegible] and of which we shall take no notice. The Quarterly [illegible] CURY has been eminently successful, and, as the [illegible] will be regularly continued each succeeding Wednesday.

ENGLAND is an improving nation.—Who, twenty [illegible] ago, would have supposed that in the year 1828, ladies [illegible] gentlemen would be forced from London Bridge to Cha[illegible] twelve hours, by a kettle of boiling water, or that while [illegible] were stirring our drawing-room fire, we should be fresh[illegible] lamps at our ball door?

Every thing has improved—how much is public taste [illegible] fined?—Instead of barrell organs, grinding English [illegible] through the streets, we have Savoyards, gaily dressed, pla[illegible] foreign airs. Instead of two long parallel rows of p[illegible] jumping awkwardly about a room, by way of dancing, [illegible] have now the attitudinizing quadrille, and the twirling [illegible] our shops are saloons—our warehouses emporiums—[illegible] packets are yachts—our country boxes villas—a man who [illegible] deafness, is an aurist—a man who cooks one's dinner [illegible] artist—a gig, with a head, is a cabriolet—a boys' scho[illegible] seminary, and a girls' school, an establishment.—An [illegible] benefit is appointed, now—not fixed (like Sylvester Da[illegible] wood's). Instead of common place exhibitions such as [illegible] had of old, we have fourteen coloured prints stuck on a [illegible] and called a cosmorama—we have a perispherick panorama [illegible] the coronation—we have equestrian exercises instead of [illegible] manship, and gymnastia instead of tumbling; even Pa[illegible] himself has grown genteel.

One thing, however, appears to have retrograded in a [illegible] proportion to the advances of others,—we mean the art; [illegible] mystery of oil painting, for not only is the present Exhi[illegible] tion at Somerset House the worst we ever remember to [illegible] seen, but the painters, who heretofore have held respectable places in the art, have so fallen off, as to render it doubtful whether they have not entirely forgotten the secret of their calling. We shall, however, do better, perhaps, by making a few remarks upon the pictures as they occur in the catalogue.

No. 1. is a "Portrait of Judge Best," by PICKERSGILL —which, joking apart, we beg leave to say, is by no means the best effort of the same painter; the details are slovenly, and the likeness is by no means good.

No. 3. is a "portrait of Sir Charles ALDIS and his Son." We never had the pleasure of seeing this most redoubtable personage: but, if he resembles his effigies, he is, indeed, as plain a knight as one could expect to meet with in a midsummer's day. The picture is execrable—the painter is ROBINSON. A dramatic scene, by CLINT, (3) is poorly wasted, because, although MRS. HARLOWE is a lovely actress, the TAG is not familiar with the public eye, and the "Pickle" is not sufficiently prominent in the picture; there is, however, much talent in the painting.

No. 14 is the "Portrait of a Young Gentleman," with hair and a blue checked waistcoat—painted by J. NORTHCOTE, R.A.; such a picture for colouring, taste, and general execution, never, we believe, came into Somerset House supported by an academician's name and authority, as this we saw, by the same pencil, a portrait of DR. JENNER, having a book on vaccination, opened at a place where is exhibited a coloured print shewing "pustules in progress" could not have imagined it to be the work of the Northcote whom we once remember. There is a peculiarity of manner in the painter, and of matter in the last subject, which makes this disgusting illustration for NORTHCOTE'S own.

No. 66 is a most interesting picture by MR. BRISTOW, consists of "Portraits of men employed in a Nursery Ground at Slough;"—it is impossible to behold the likenesses of the men without a feeling which we will not attempt to describe, but which must equally pervade the hearts of foreigners and Englishmen—MR. BRISTOW deserves well of society for having transmitted to posterity subjects of such importance.

No. 64 is a portrait of a gentleman deceased, whose sympathy for the fate of a pair of falling compasses is beautifully expressed—the catalogue does not mention whether the gentleman was actually deceased when he was painted, or whether he has departed this life since the picture was finished: in the same manner we have a large likeness of a scarlet Coat, with gold lace suitable thereto—and a Cuirass and a Helmet, and a MR. NICHOLSON in them, who is designated as late of the Dragoon Guards; if late of the Dragoon Guards why not him in the uniform of a regiment he has left. This picture, which is by MR. REINAGLE, would well answer the purpose of any respectable publican who might be inclined to set up the sign of the NICHOLSON'S Head—it is very showy, and when a little subdued by the rain and dust of a high road, would be well worthy the attention of the thirsty traveller.

(No. 42) is a masterly portrait of a Naval Officer, by HENRY RAEBURN, which does him infinite credit; would could say as much for the "Bay of Baie," by TERNIER here is a lamentable falling off—it is perfectly unintelligible—it is blue, and pink, and yellow,—and grey, and green and red,—but why or wherefore, "none save only he" who painted it, could we should think explain.

WILKIE'S DUKE OF YORK is a beautiful picture, in management of the light—the idea of which Wilkie borrowed from a bad picture, by a man called Goodall, admirable,—the details accurate and delicate beyond description,—the likeness striking, but we should say not flattering—it is however a gem, and worthy the pencil of PARISH BEADLE,—we must be candid,—is a falling-off—he has attempted a change of style, and substituted for his delicate clearness which characterised his former works, grimy depth of shadow, inconsistent and unnatural—the effect produced, is that of a coloured mezzotinto print—the shades are actually black,—we lament this, and entreat our admirable artist, to be 'himself again.'

(No. 93.) "A Portrait of J. Carpue, Esq. F. R. S. I. STUMP." If MR. CARPUE says with satisfaction "I am after having sat for this picture, he is easily satisfied—only equalled in demerit, by a devil of a thing with a pressure waist, by Mrs. ANSLEY, who has also a large picture of a naked woman in a strange position, called a "Backante." In our catalogue it was misprinted "a Back-ante," and honestly confess, however prettily some parts of it are painted, we would rather that the female artists of England should bestow their talents upon the human figure clothed, than in a state of nudity.

"Draught Horses," (No. 111), by COOPER, are admirably painted—but if we were to select a picture as the most abominable thing ever exhibited in a civilized city, we should cite (No. 117) "The Muse Erato," by T. STOTHARD, R.A.—a daub below contempt, and out of drawing into the bargain. We have no hesitation in saying, that if the executive of picture entails disgrace upon the artist, the hanging Committee deserve to be hanged for allowing it a place. We suppose STOTHARD is himself one of this very committee, and that accounts for the conspicuous situation it occupies, while many admirable works of art are consigned to the lower rooms and comparative obscurity.

"Hesitation" (No. 156) is a picture by that steam-engine artist, Mr. DRUMMOND, whose works cover thirty-seven thousand nine hundred and forty-eight square feet of the Soho Bazaar—it represents one lady smelling a rose, and another lady smelling a rat—it is in his best style of serious painting, and is eminently comical.

A picture of poor ROSCOE, by a painter of the name of LONSDALE, is melancholy;—but we have a picture—"Gad, Mawm, he is a bumper," as Mungo says—of "J. T. BARBER BEAUMONT, ESQ. painted by order of the Members of the Provident Life Assurance Office," by H.W. PICKERSGILL, A. Provident Life Assurance Office," by H.W. PICKERSGILL, A. Assurance indeed!—MR. PICKERSGILL appears to have a patent for painting Radicals and Humbugs—WILSON sat to him, and he was accordingly depicted with every star, and cross, and ribband he had in the world, and a little freemason's medal into the bargain—a year or two ago, he produced MR. WILLIAM WILLIAMS, in all the tom-foolery of a Provincial Grand Master, with trowels and compasses, and stars and aprons, and now, to crown all, here is this wholesale dealer in Assurance, by the same artist, filling up a great space in a public exhibition room. What the policy of the Members who have ordered it to be painted may be, we cannot say, but we lament that MR. PICKERSGILL'S time should have been wasted upon a subject so little likely to add to his reputation.

A small picture of MRS. STEPHEN (miscalled in the catalogue, STEVENS) is extremely pretty; the countenance itself is beautiful, and the animation infused into it by the artist is brilliant and captivating: but since we are touching upon MR. PICKERSGILL, we will venture to call the public attention to a picture from his pencil in the "SCHOOL OF PAINTING"—'L'Improvisatore," No. 261.

This picture appears to us to be one of the very best in the whole exhibition; there is a chasteness and delicacy in the composition—a skilful distribution of light—a great display of taste in the embellishment, and a character of superior talent and genius pervading the whole; it is said to be a portrait of one of the artist's own daughters; and being a portrait, we attribute to the closeness of the resemblance, what otherwise would appear a slight defect in the drawing—we mean the very close approximation of the eye to the nose; it is, however, a beautiful thing; and we only grieve that a man able to produce such a piece of art as this, should be doomed to transfer to canvas, such Goths and Vandals as MR. WILLIAM WILLIAMS in a fool's coat, or MR. BARBER BEAUMONT, residing on the first floor of the "Bureau de Diligences, Piccadilly;" for such, considering the view we get of his fireoffice in the back-ground, must have been his position while sitting for his portrait.

"Portrait of his Father," by MR. BROWN, (No. 226) is worthy of notice: MR. BROWN is a respectable person, in a wig of the family colour, and as we suppose the picture is a tribute of filial piety, we say nothing more than call attention to its intrinsic merits. "Mr. Hookery, of Southampton," by MR. GAUGAIN, (No. 218) is an interesting picture.

"You may nose him i'the lobby."

(No. 130) is a picture called "Instruction thrown away," by J. CLOVER; and if the performance is meant practically to illustrate its title, we think the purpose is entirely answered. The portraits of COUNT and COUNTESS MUNSTER are in the peculiar style of MR. STROEHLING—that it may continue to be peculiar it is most earnestly to be prayed.

The President has outdone his former outdoings in a portrait of the ARCHBISHOP OF YORK. (No. 29)—this picture of itself would immortalize a painter. We cannot continue our unqualified praise, however, to the likeness of LADY JERSEY—it is an unsatisfactory picture—the colour of the drapery is not pleasing—MRS. BROOK says—

"The morn returns in saffron dress;"

but why the lovely and fascinating Countess should adopt the same uniform, we cannot see; the figure too does not appear to advantage—it has all the witchery of LAWRENCE in the management of the countenance; but it is not so catching a picture as many of his female portraits are.

A beautiful likeness of the LADY MARIA CONYNGHAM, (No. 445), in the Anti-room, by the same hand, brings us back again to our worship of its superior merit—it is exquisite. The subject itself is lovely, and the beautiful expression of countenance common to the female part of the same family, has been caught and transferred to the canvas with equal taste and ability.

MR. MARTIN, the celebrated painter of Belshazzar's Feast, &c. has a picture called the "The Paphian Bower," and if MR. MARTIN'S colour-grinder had painted it, he would have deserved as sound a horse-whipping as MR. MARTIN could have bestowed upon him for his pains. The Graces are caricatures of three skinny lanky old maids, Cupid is a May-day chimney-sweeper—the surrounding trees and flowers are a beautiful exhibition of fire-works, and the clouds, the smoke resulting therefrom.

We do not think we shall have room for all our remarks this week, and as we are stinted for space, we will vary the scene of our observations for the purpose of noticing some works which have been consigned to the antique Academy.

"A Study in Chalk," by WILKIE, is extremely clever—spirited, and living. A Portrait of SIR HENRY WHITE, K.C.B. by S. LANE, exactly the reverse. A Picture, by P. NAMYTH, (No. 553), most disadvantageously placed, is full of merit; indeed, we rank it with the very best productions of the season, and lament that favoritism should have placed it where we find it.

No. 610 is "Fruit and Flowers, with an owl—Clara Maria Pope." The flower painting of this lady, who is the wife of the talented artist and popular actor of the same name, has often attracted our notice; but it was reserved for this season to shew the full power of her talent. The performance before us is one of the most beautiful specimens of the art we ever saw—the crown and leaves of the pine-apple are the parts which delight us least; but they are only faulty when compared with the excellence which surrounds them. The colouring and finishing of the "Dirum mortalibus omen" are equally skilful: and the whole work reflects the highest credit upon the accomplished artist. Our favourite MISS TREE appears in this room also, in the character of the Fair Gabrielle, (511) by MR. FOSTER; the likeness is extremely good—perhaps hardly sufficiently favourable to please us; a little more attention to the drapery would have made this an admirable picture: as it is, the marks of genius are strong upon it.

HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS THE DUKE OF SUSSEX—looking as if he had just heard "GOD SAVE THE KING" sung with roars of applause—painted by a MR. LONSDALE, is pasteboard caricature of HIS ROYAL HIGHNESS, and stuck it upon canvas, it would have been more like nature—the "poked down stairs;" and in order to get it a better place, being put into the antique academy—the answer he got from the Hanging Committee, was an observation, that "if the Royal Family chose to be painted by such artists, they must take the consequences."

(To be continued.)

A MEETING was held on Thursday at the Crown and Anchor tavern in the Strand, for the purpose of talking about the Greeks, which was attended by MR. HENRY HUNT, SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH, MR. WEATHERSPOON, LORD MILTON, MR. WILKS, and several other distinguished Whigs.

LORD MILTON took the Chair, and several persons made speeches. We must confess that MR. HUNT was pre-eminently successful in ridiculing the DUKE of BEDFORD, and in alluding to public subscriptions confided to patriotic committees—he also touched upon the Manchester riots, the great soul of the late Queen, Ilchester Jail, the borough-mongering system, and almost all the other genuine Whig topics which bore upon the war between Turkey and its rebellious subjects.

MR. HUME advocated the Greeks because they were Christians—MR. HOBHOUSE because they were a fine race of men—SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH was anxious for a subscription—LORD ERSKINE did not attend, because he was ill—and MR. WILBERFORCE absented himself for fear of making himself so.

The Meeting was thinly attended—nothing worth notice occurred; several gentlemen who went to hear the fun lost their snuff boxes and pocket-handkerchiefs; and MR. HUME subscribed TEN POUNDS!

If it were necessary to add any thing to the absurdity of this ridiculous assembly, we should adduce the following resolutions—who worded them we know not, but the men who were such asses as to move and second them stand recorded. We lament to see that LORD W. BENTINCK was of the party.

The first resolution is exquisite.

Moved by J. SMITH, Esq. M.P. and seconded by SIR JAMES MACKINTOSH, M.P.!!!

"Resolved, 1. That the present state of Greece is highly interesting to the friends of humanity and religion"—Carried unanimously.

Moved by LORD JOHN RUSSELL, M.P. and seconded by LORD WILLIAM BENTINCK, M.P.!!!

"Resolved, 2. That the liberation of that unhappy country affords the most cheering prospects of being able to enlarge the limits of Christianity and civilization"—Carried unanimously.

Moved by J. CAM HOBHOUSE, Esq. M.P. and seconded by J. S. TAYLOR, Esq.

"Resolved, 3. That it is the bounden duty of the Members of every Christian community, and of the subjects of every civilized state, to contribute to the promotion of those objects by every legitimate means in their power"—Carried unanimously.

Moved by LORD A. HAMILTON, M.P. and seconded by C. B. SHERIDAN, Esq.!!!!!

"Resolved, 4. That the dreadful nature of the contest in Greece renders it highly important that endeavours should be made to put a stop to the ravages of a war, which, if successful on the part of the Turks, will in all probability lead to the extermination of the Greek nation"—Carried unanimously.

Moved by W. SMITH, Esq. M.P. and seconded by — HARTOPP, Esq.

"Resolved, 5. That the exertions making in their behalf on the Continent of Europe, and in America, imperiously call for the co-operation of the British public."—Carried unanimously.

Moved by J. MAXWELL, Esq. M.P., and seconded by J. WILLIS, Esq.

"Resolved, 6. That a subscription be entered into for these purposes."—Carried unanimously.

Moved by CAPT. MABERLEY, M.P., and seconded by Mr. Butt.

"Resolved, 7. That the Committee who have convened this Meeting be requested to continue their exertions and to add to their number as their discretion may direct, and that the subscriptions be placed at their disposal, and that they be requested to open a correspondence with other parts of the United Kingdom on this interesting subject."—Carried with one dissentient.

"Resolved, 8. That the cordial thanks of this meeting be given to the Noble Chairman, for his great services to this liberal and Christian cause, and for his conduct on this occasion."—Passed unanimously.

We are obliged to let LORD GREY and his floundering harangue slip through our fingers to-day—the Whigs are now nearly innocuous; the Tories, however, require a little looking after this week, and as our readers will see, we have devoted a portion of our paper to the cause of "the Protestant Church, versus, His Majesty's Government."

TO THE CURIOUS IN BEES.

AT this season of the year, ladies and gentlemen of a rural turn of mind sometimes addict themselves to practical illustrations of the natural history of Bees; nothing can be more surprising than the devoted attachment of this race to the QUEEN of the hive; nothing more interesting than the method and activity observed in their building and storing their honey, and the rapidity with which they form their combs; the apparent rationality of the little animal is strikingly wonderful, and the contemplation of one of their colonies is at once agreeable and interesting.

A remarkably clever naturalist, who has devoted himself to the subject, has been enabled to classify the tribe of Bees with greater precision than any of those who have preceded him in the investigation. REAUMUR, SHIRACH, WILDMAN, WARDER, and DEBRAW, are at variance upon certain points; but the gentleman to whom we now allude has reconciled the jarring authorities of these eminent men, and has secured a collection of BEES in a case, which he is ready to submit to any amateur of distinction:

The catalogue handed to us is as follows:—

No. I. The SILLY BEE.
II. The Twitching BEE—found in Birds-nests.
III. The Radical Bee—(Westminster's Pride)
IV. The Little Grey BEE—Called the Weaver, easily mistaken for a Wasp.
V. The Baron BEE—Deposits his sting in damp leaves.
VI. The BISHOP BEE—(Norwich) known by his buzz.
VII. The Woburn BEE, or Johnny BEE—Notoriously afraid of wasps.
VIII. The Barber BEE, or Fire-fly.
IX. The Jew BEE—one of the HIVITES.
X. SIR ROBERT, the old Justice BEE—A Drone; turned out of his hive when Honey was lost.
XI. The CAM Hop. BEE—Curled proboscis.
XII. The NORMAN BEE—A deserter from the old stock.
XIII. The ESSEX BEE, or K. C. BEE!—ditto.
XIV. The Whittington, or WOOD BEE!
XV. The Humming BEE, or BAW-BEE!
XVI. Davies, the Great Boo BEE!
With a variety of others too numerous to mention.

TWO more parts, being V. and VI. of LAS CASES' book about BUONAPARTE, are just published. We should think the trick is stale now, and that this farther continuation of the old gentleman's twaddle about his idol and his "ATLAS" will not answer the purposes for which it is published.

We have no intention of carrying on our review of the work regularly through the new volumes, but we cannot refrain from selecting here and there a line or two illustrative of the character of the great man and his little historian.

The following cool and deliberate display of delicacy and morality we think may not be unsatisfactory.

"The conversation turned upon masked balls, of which the Emperor was peculiarly fond, and frequently called for them. He was there always sure of a certain rendezvous, which never failed to take place. He was, he said, regularly accosted by the same mask, who reminded him of old intimacies, and ardently entreated to be received and admitted at court. The mask was a most amiable, kind, and beautiful woman, to whom many persons were certainly much indebted. The Emperor, who continued to love her! always answered, 'I do not deny 'that you are charming, but reflect a little upon your situation; be 'your own judge, and decide. You have two or three husbands, and 'children by several of your lovers. It would have been thought a happiness to have shared in the first fault; the second would have caused 'pain, but still it might be pardoned; but the sequel—and then 'and then! * * * be the Emperor, and judge. What would you 'do in my place? I, who am bound to revive and maintain a certain 'decorum.' The beautiful suitor either did not reply, or said, 'At 'least, do not deprive me of hope;' and deferred her claims of happiness to the following year. 'And each of us,' said the Emperor, 'was 'punctual at the new rendezvous.' "—p. 146.

The barbarity of banishing the much injured hero to a rock, without a spiritual comforter, has more than once been touched upon by such of his advocates as upon all other occasions have distinguished themselves by an avowed contempt for religion and its attributes. We will hear how the illustrious man himself regarded this privation.

"During our ride in the Calèche, somebody observed that it was Sunday. 'We should have mass,' said the Emperor, 'if we were in a 'Christian country, if we had a priest; and that would have engaged us for an instant during the day. I have been always fond of the sound 'of bells in the country. We should,' he added, in a gay tone, 're olve 'upon choosing a priest among us—the curate of St. Helena.' But how ordain him, it was said, without a Bishop? 'And am I not one?' replied the Emperor; 'have I not been anointed with the same oil— 'consecrated in the same manner?' "—p. 185.

His Imperial Majesty's perfect knowledge of English manners and customs, may be gathered from the following passage:—

"The Emperor played at chess, before dinner, in the saloon. He had taken some punch. It was late when I arrived. He told me, on entering, to take my share of the punch; but it was observed that there were no more glasses. 'O, yes,' said he, handing me his, 'and he 'will drink out of it, I am sure.' He then added, 'This is the English 'fashion, is it not?' In our country one seldom drinks after any one, 'but one's mistress.' "—p. 196.

Which was the greater fool, BUONAPARTE who made this speech, or old CAS who has repeated it, we shall not pretend to determine.

As modesty is universally allowed to be the companion of merit, we will copy, for our readers, an observation made by BUONAPARTE upon himself.

"'In a few years,' says Buonaparte to SIR HUDSON LOWE, 'your LORD CASTLEREAGH, your LORD BATHURST, and all the others,—you who speak of me—will be buried in the dust of oblivion; but your names be remembered, it will be only on account of the indignity with which you have treated ME. While the EMPEROR NAPOLEON shall, doubtless continue FOR EVER the subject, the ornament of History, and the star of civilized nations.' (p. 221.)

One may say of him as FIELDING says of TOMMY THUMB—

—"His modesty is a flambeau to his merit,
It shines itself and shews his merit too."

The paragraph immediately following this absurd piece of Corsican bombast, is not unworthy of attention.

"The emperor admitted that he had during this conversation seriously and repeatedly offended SIR HUDSON LOWE, and he also did him the justice to acknowledge that SIR HUDSON LOWE had not precisely shewn IN A SINGLE INSTANCE any want of respect!" (p. 222.)

The fifth part of the work concludes with a very elaborate essay to prove that the Battle of WATERLOO ought not to have been won; which is much on a par with the stuff talked by a scientific chess-player, after he has been beaten in five minutes, who tells you that "that is not the game." The object in playing all games, as far as we understand the thing, is to win them, and we are not surprised that BUONAPARTE was displeased with the check-mate of Waterloo.

The first characteristic trait worth recording of BUONAPARTE in the 6th Part, we find at page 176.

"To-day the Emperor took advantage of a short interval of fine weather, to take a walk in the Company's garden—I was alone with him—I made certain representations to him, after which I ventured to suggest some ideas, but he rejected them as absurd—'Go my dear LAS CASES, you are a SIMPLETON, but be not offended at the epithet,' he added 'I do not apply it to every one—with me it is nearly synonimous with an HONEST MAN!'"

This is by no means bad in its way.

It appears, amongst many ills which were accumulated upon BUONAPARTE, in his exile, the want of rest was one which he felt bitterly, and we are told, in many places, that "he did not sleep" all night—that he had passed a wretched night, &c. &c. At page 258 we have this—

"'He had never been kept awake,' he said, 'by an involuntary preoccupation of mind. If I wish to sleep, I shut up all the drawers, 'and I am asleep,' so that he had always, he added, slept when he wanted rest, and almost at will."

We presume that M. LAS CASES' admiration of BUONAPARTE'S egregious vanity, and the avidity with which he publishes repeated instances of his self-puffing, must arise either from a blindness to the folly of such conduct, or sympathetic affection for the great man's failing. We have before said, that LAS CASES talks of his Atlas whenever an opportunity offers—or, indeed, where no opportunity offers. At page 259 he commences a chapter thus—

"Tuesday, October 1.—When I entered the Emperor's room he had 'MY ATLAS' in his hands—he turned over several of the geographical maps, whose relation and correspondence he now (1816) understands remarkably well—on closing the book he said, 'What a concatenation, how each part results from and corroborates what goes before it! How every part unfolds itself and remains fixed in the mind! LAS CASES, if you had done nothing more than point out the true method for instruction you would still have rendered a most essential service—every one may now clothe the skeleton as they like; it will, no doubt, be improved upon, but the first conception is yours,' &c. &c. (p. 259.)

There is a simplicity and bonhommie about the old gentleman's self-praise which is irresistible, but it is little more absurd than the confidence which he reposes in the reader touching his ablutions—he says,—(p. 311.)

"The Emperor came to me about ten o'clock—he looked in at my room door, and blamed me for not having risen earlier; he found me using a foot-bath—to—I was not well!"

We could have excused the Baron for washing his feet occasionally in a hot climate without either this explanation or apology—but we have no room for further observation upon him; we can easily imagine that a man shut up at Longwood with BUONAPARTE would habitually begin to fancy him the greatest creature in the world—particularly if he chose to butter his hanger-on regularly three times per week about a favourite "Atlas;" and LAS CASES' praises of the hero are quite excuseable; he is evidently a weak, silly person, and in the confusion of his ideas publishes to the world traits and observations of his idol, which, instead of exalting his character, or increasing his popularity, evince more clearly than anything we ever saw the vanity of his disposition, the narrowness of his intellect, the depravity of his mind, and the blackness of his heart.

THEATRICALS.

LISTON has made more farce-writers than any man living. "His face is his fortune," as the girl says in the song; and the dry indescribable humour with which his acting abounds—the unspeakable self-possession of which he is master—in short, the combination of qualities which exist in his mind and person, have brought authors into notice at the regular Theatres, who else had been doomed to the obscure drudgery of adapting German melodramas for the Royalty Theatre, Goodman's-fields; or making facetious summer nonsense for the Lyceum, No. 350, Strand, opposite Waterloo-bridge.

Jokes, however, may be carried too far—public patience may be overstretched, as indeed an experiment tried at Drury Lane, on Wednesday, most clearly proves:—a thing, miscalled a farce, was produced, under the title of "£3 10s. 1d. if quite convenient," which MR. LISTON was to perform himself; that is to say—upon his fun, his face, and his facetiousness, the whole piece rested; and accordingly he made faces, was funny, and facetious, and the farce was hooted off the stage; we should rather say, it was treated more contemptuously even than it would have been, had the whole audience staid to express their indignation at such an attempt to impose upon their intellect. The truth is, that it was so vulgar, so low-lived, so abominably gross, that all the persons who had paid for going in, or who were not paid for staying in, left the theatre before the conclusion of the first act.

We have not heard, and perhaps never shall hear, the name of the unhappy person who committed this abominable piece; but it is one of that class of dramas to which we have occasionally referred with disgust, in which an author attempts to entertain a respectable enlightened audience with scenes, incidents, and conversations, which never can occur in decent society. Our remarks upon the foolish mistake, that comicality is necessarily vulgar, have had a due effect, and the public shrank with disgust from the stupid importunity of a dunning tailor with a droll face, which, however important as a subject to a Drury Lane farce writer, is not at all likely to interest the generality of a British public, who are not ordinarily dunned by their tailors, and seldom find it inconvenient to pay 8l. 10s. 1d.

ELLISTON we know is ill, and, of course, cannot be supposed to meddle much at the moment with the "administration" of the theatre; but his Manager is an established author, and we should think as competent to judge of the probable effect of farces as any man alive—how he could have suffered the exhibition of Wednesday to take place we cannot understand. We believe that actors have their way a little too much in the republic of Drury—we have heard it said, that a most excellent Opera, by KENNY, which was read and in preparation, has been withdrawn, because MR. BRAHAM insisted upon playing a youthful lover, at once an Adonis, a wit, and a hero—a part requiring personal appearance, sentiment, and humour, and, at all events, a proper pronounciation of the English language—because this part—without music—was not appropriated to MR. BRAHAM, that gentleman declined playing the character which was very judiciously assigned to him, in which he had a good deal to sing, very little to say, and still less to do.

This ought NOT to be. We remember to have seen an excellent song, by one of the SMITHS, called "Private Theatricals," in which the universal desire to play the best part in every piece is admirably delineated; and in private theatricals, where the greater the absurdity the greater the amusement, this is all very well, but in a public concern like Drury Lane, it is most shameful that any performer, because he happens to have got rich in the service of the public, should be suffered to paralyze the exertions of a manager, or set aside the labours of an author like KENNY, from the fruits of whose pen the town might justly anticipate a fund of entertainment.

MR. KENNY has, we also hear, transferred his Opera to the HAYMARKET, which will open with great eclat. JONES, MUNDEN, TERRY, CONNOR, LISTON, HARLEY, CHARLES KEMBLE, YOUNG, KEELEY, MRS. DAVENPORT, MRS. CHATTERLY, MISS CHESTER, MISS PATON, MRS. GIBBS, MISS M. TREE, MADAME VESTRIS, and MISS KELLY, are engaged by the spirited manager of that beautiful little theatre.

We congratulate the public upon liberality which thus combines, for their entertainment, dramatic talent in all the branches of the art. Nothing is so likely to ensure patronage as the evidence of zeal in acquiring it; it is not by the paltry economy which would haggle for sixpences in the salary of an established actress, or by the gratification of small feelings, which would suffer private pique to interfere with public business, that a playhouse manager can expect to thrive. We saw an instance, not of haggling, nor want of liberality, but of a failure in the management of the Haymarket, two years since, when an "independent company" was collected, and the people of London presented with the cream of DUNSTABLE and the flower of BOLTON-LE-MOORS.

This bold attempt at novelty and independence did not succeed—but still it was abstractedly very meritorious—because it was a bold attempt, and made certainly without reference to economy. The case is now different, and the Haymarket people seeing that provincial "stars" are metropolitan rush-lights, have wisely resolved to congregate, within the walls of their little temple of mirth, all that is best worth seeing in London. We wish the concern every success it deserves, and anticipate most anxiously the treat, which plays cannot fail to afford, acted as they will be this season in the Theatre Royal Haymarket.

TO JOHN BULL.

SIR,—If at this period you may conceive the following information, respecting the way in which the NEGROES are taken care of up in the Island at LA RECONNOISSANCE, (the property of my son) in the Island of TRINIDAD, the following, part of a letter recently received from him, from that Island, is very much at your service for insertion in your valuable paper.—Your Constant Reader, W. G.

Trinidad, Christmas of the year 1822.

MY DEAR FATHER,—I now sit down with great and unfeigned pleasure to wish you and all your family a merry Christmas and a happy new year. We are all here carousing it at La Reconnaissance. My family are preparing our Christmas dinner, and I am superintending and keeping order amongst eighty Negroes, who are all dancing, old and young, big and little, around me, as hard as they can put feet to the ground.

I spent last Christmas here, and finding that the Negroes were most happy and contented, I determined to make them so this year, and I have succeeded. Early this morning, the 25th, we were awoke by salutes of small arms, and as soon as the day broke all the children were brought to the house, to say their Catechism, and sing psalms, which to me was a very pleasing sight; this plan I have adopted since I purchased the estate, as I conceived that the knowledge and existence of a SUPERIOR BEING above would do no harm for them to know, and I have seen the happiest effects resulting from it.

At nine o'clock, whilst at breakfast, the whole of the Negroes came dressed in their gayest clothes to wish us a merry Christmas, and a piece of beef and an allowance of flour and raisins was distributed to all of them, with a proportion of rum for the men, and wine for the women and children. They then began dancing, and the whole house is seen and heard. They then began dancing, and they are enjoying made free for them for three or four hours, and they are enjoying themselves in the hall, &c.

It is a most fortunate thing for me, that I have not one sick on the estate,—but I suspect there will be a few head-aches to-morrow. I have the Manager, the Overseer, and the Doctor of the Estate, to dine with me.

1st January, 1823. Now for a happy new year to you, and to all friends who are deserving of the wish.—This day is another day devoted to the Negroes, dancing is again the principal order, and I have been three hours engaged in fitting the whole of the men with two suits of clothes each, viz: a hat, a woollen cap, a woollen shirt, linen shirt, blue cloth jacket lined with flannel, blue trowsers, and a pair of duck trowsers;—the manager's wife supplying the women and children with hats, handkerchiefs, two shifts, blue wrapper, and blue petticoat, and a linen gown;—the boys supplied according to their ages.

With this supply they all seemed most delighted: but I have been more delighted than they can imagine, to see the whole of them go in procession, of their own accord, to the graves of their departed Master and Mistress, and strew flowers over their graves, and say their prayers for the repose of their souls—this they also did over the grave of our poor lamented friend R. B.—which is close to the others. This shews that their hearts are as capable of as fine feelings as our own. They will be allowed to dance until 10 o'clock at night, for they have to be at work by day-light in the morning, and as I am now getting in my principal crop, no time must be lost.

This is, perhaps, the most beautiful spot in the Island, and the estate in the form of a large punch bowl, at the top of the highest mountain, and several miles distant from any other plantation; its cultivation is principally cocoa and some coffee. I have about 350 acres of land, but not all cultivated, situated about twelve miles from Trinidad. In the valley my houses and store-houses are built: and the Negro houses, five-and-twenty in number, are all arranged in a street about one hundred yards from my dwelling house. It is acknowledged to be one of the best cocoa establishments in the Island, and I daily feel more and more interest in it. W. G.

FOREIGN INTELLIGENCE.

PARIS, MAY 12.—"From the Major-General of the Army to the Minister of the Interior.—The head-quarters have been at Burgos since the 9th. The reception given to his Royal Highness was very brilliant. The first corps has made its movement upon Valladolid."

One of our frigates has captured, off Corunna, a small Spanish vessel, laden with 5,000 muskets and ammunition, on account of the Cortes.

The Moniteur contains the law relative to the fixing of the Budget of receipt and expenditure for 1824. The expences of Consolidated Debt and of the amortissement are fixed at 277,086,208 francs. The general expences of the service are 525,982,809 fr.—Collecting, management, deficiencies, &c. 126,704,489 fr.—Reimbursements, &c. 6,489,000 fr.—The total of which is 658,776,348 fr. The amount of the Revenue for 1824 is estimated at 896,334,190 francs.

MAY 14.—The following is a despatch from the Major-General to his Excellency the Minister of the Interior:—"According to the report of Marshal Moncey, dated the 8th, General d'Eroles and Romagosa are in pursuit of Mina in the direction of Campredon. The Constitutional Divisions of Milans and Llobera have retired upon Hostalrich. Marshal Moncey, who is at Gerona, occupies Santa Colonna, and pushes his reconnoissances up to the very walls of Hostalrich. Gen. Donadieu entered Vich on the 6th inst.; his troops were received with acclamations by the inhabitants."

FROM THE MINISTER OF FINANCE.—"According to the last report from Marshal Moncey, arrived to-night, the Constitutional divisions of Milans and Llobera, have retired to Hostalrich. Mina had avoided, or given the slip to (esquivé) our troops with his own, and ascended the Ter by Besora, in the intention of approaching the frontier. On the 7th he was in Volfogona, in the direction of Campredon. Count Curial was the same day near Olot, where he was making arrangements to follow and attack Mina. Baron d'Eroles was following Mina at a day's march distance by Besora; Romagosa was in position at Ripol. Thus Mina will find himself surrounded by troops superior to his own; and if he is pressed, as there is reason to believe, he must fight to extremities, or throw himself into Cerdagna, through extremely difficult defiles, and without resources. Count Curial has determined to pursue him unceasingly, in concert with Baron d'Eroles and Romagosa, till he be overtaken. The posts in advance of Gerona, where the Marshal is, occupy Santa Colonna, and our hussars push reconnoitering parties to the walls of Hostalrich. General Donadieu entered Vich on the 6th, at ten in the morning; our troops have been received with acclamations of joy."

The army of Mina has been divided in two by the manœuvres of our Generals. One part has thrown itself upon Hostalrich, where our cavalry has made a reconnoissance. The other part, under the immediate orders of Mina, has been obliged to re-ascend the Ter, and is followed by Gen. Curial, the Baron d'Eroles, and Romagosa. Mina has behind him all our Catalonian Army; for Gen. Donadieu, of whom so many fables have been told, has entered Vich, amid the acclamations of the inhabitants.—(Journal des Debats.)

BAYONNE, MAY 8.—We have no official accounts to enable us to form an opinion of the state of affairs in Spain, but a courier is said to have arrived with despatches from the Prince for Marshal Moncey. This courier affirms that Mina, with the 14,000 men of which his army now consists, is entirely surrounded by the French army, upon a mountain, the name of which he has forgotten.

Ten waggons, heavily loaded with money, arrived here yesterday, for the use of the army. They are said to contain twenty millions in ready money, which, if we may depend on the calculation of persons who understand these matters, will not suffice for the expenses of one month.—A person pretends to have seen, the night before last, four waggons pass through full of sick or wounded.—The head-quarters are to remain at Burgos till the 13th, and the army is to advance to Madrid by the road of Lerma.

GERONA, MAY 3.—Letters from Palermo of the 3d of April mention, that on the 27th of March there was a severe shock of an earthquake on the island of Favignano, at a small distance from Trapani. A part of the ancient fortress fell, and 22 persons perished under the ruins. On the 31st there was another shock in Messina, which, however, did no damage.

An article from Vienna communicates the arrival there of a Colonel Scheffer, from the Brazils, the bearer of letters to the Emperor from his daughter and son-in-law. The former, it is said, signs herself "Empress." It is further added, that the Emperor of Austria was solicited to obtain for the new Empire of Brazil its recognition by the European Governments; but the request was refused.

VITTORIA, MAY 4.—Every thing is perfectly arranged for the arrivals, from different points, of 60,000 men at Madrid. We are nearly masters along the whole line of the Ebro. The corps of Gen. Molitor occupies the southern part of Catalonia; so that it is almost certain that Mina, pressed by the corps of Marshal Moncey, will find it impossible to escape with his army. He may still, indeed, shut himself up in Barcelona, if he succeeds in escaping a rencontre with our troops.

NORTH-WEST PASSAGE EXPEDITION.—The following is from the Frankfort Journal of the 4th inst. dated Hamburgh, April 28:—We hasten to publish the following declaration; "In English and French Journals, which have been copied by the German, and, among others, by the Hamburgh Papers, it has been stated that I sent word, both to Paris and London, of the arrival of Capt. Parry on the coast of Kamtschatka. I therefore consider it my duty to declare, that I have never written a line on the supposed arrival of Capt. Parry to any person whatsoever.

KRUSENSTERN,
Captain, Commodore in the Imperial Navy.

"St. Petersburgh, March 26th, 1823."

IRELAND.

When Serjeant Torrens had pronounced sentence of transportation on a man named Curtin, convicted under the Insurrection Act, at Mallow, (county of Cork) the wretch in the most hardened and vindictive tone, was heard to exclaim, "the Devil transport yourself, my Lord."—Dublin Evening Mail.

An aggregate meeting of Roman Catholics was held on Saturday the 10th, in Dublin, Lord Killeen in the chair. At which an Address to the King was carried, and a vote of thanks to Mr. Plunkett was passed.

Last week a very large number of men went to the Church-yard of Dungarvon, Kilkenny, and disinterred the bodies of some near relations of a person whom they believed to be disobedient to the orders of General Rock. They strewed the bones of other members of his family throughout the burying-ground, broke the head-stone that marked the place of repulchre, and committed other indignities which (to those who are aware of the feeling, bordering on veneration, with which an Irish peasant regards the "last home" of his forefathers) must be esteemed as tokens of the most envenomed hatred.

MISCELLANEOUS.

On Monday, the King received a visit from the Duke of [illegible]. The King held a Court on Tuesday at his palace in Pall Mall, which was attended by all the great Officers of State. The Earl of [illegible] and Mr. Secretary Peel had audiences.

The King was so much indisposed on Tuesday that the [illegible] announced the distressing intelligence in the following [illegible]:

"Carlton Palace, May 14, 1823, [illegible] o'clock.

"The King has passed a restless night, but His Majesty is [illegible] rather less this morning. "HENRY HALFORD,
"MATTHEW BAILLIE."

"Carlton Palace, May 15, 1823, 9 o'clock.

"The King has had some refreshing sleep in the [illegible] fever is much abated."—Signed as before.

On Thursday, at 12 o'clock, the following bulletin was issued: "His Majesty was better last night, and continues so this morning, having had some refreshing sleep."—Signed as before.

"Carlton Palace, May 16, 1823, 11 o'clock.

"The King is free from fever to-day. His Majesty is [illegible]." (Signed as before.)

On Thursday afternoon, at three o'clock, a Cabinet Council was held at the Foreign Office, in Downing-street, which was attended by all the Cabinet Ministers. The Cabinet broke up at [illegible] o'clock.

A monument is to be erected in St. Paul's Cathedral to the memory of Dr. Middleton, Bishop of Calcutta.

A Committee of the House of Commons is investigating the state of the Penitentiary at Millbank.

By a recent return of the House of Commons there appears to have been 3,250 persons discharged during the last four years under the Insolvent Act, within the Bills of Mortality.

General Hulse has received the appointment of Ranger of Hyde Park, vice General Grenville, deceased.

The 34th anniversary of the Literary Fund was celebrated on Wednesday by a dinner at the Freemasons' Tavern, at which the Duke of Somerset presided, supported by a numerous assemblage of [illegible] letters and persons of distinction.

His Royal Highness the Duke of York has graciously consented to permit the dedication to himself of His Majesty's portrait, by Wivell, engraved by Woolnoth, and has encouraged the undertaking by his Royal Highness's favorable opinion of its execution and resemblance, to anticipate the public approbation of this loyal and meritorious undertaking. The portrait will be published very shortly, at Sams, Royal Subscription Library, 1, St. James's-street, where specimens of subscribers may be seen. An early application will be necessary in order to secure proofs.

A musical entertainment, called "Una Voce," by Mr. Topliff, the composer, is to be served up to the public on Friday next, at Argyll Rooms. Mr. Topliff possesses merit: in addition to [illegible] comic songs, which he accompanies on the Piano Forte, [illegible] admired performance on the musical glasses.

It is said that the Duke of Polignac is to be accredited Minister of France to this country.

On Thursday the Anniversary Meeting of the Patrons of the Sons of the Clergy, took place at St. Paul's. At the conclusion of the service, great part of the company retired to Merchant Taylors' Hall to dine, the Lord Mayor in the Chair. Among the company were Prince Leopold, the Archbishops of Canterbury and York, the Bishop of London, Worcestershire, St. Asaph, Ely, Chester, and Gloucester, Lord Kenyon, Chief Justice Abbott, Mr. Justice Park, &c. &c. The collection at the Rehearsal, amounted to 126l., and that at the Cathedral and Dinner were very liberal.

A meeting in favour of the cause of the Greeks was held on Friday at the Crown and Anchor Tavern, Lord Milton in the chair. Sir J. Mackintosh, Lords J. Russell and W. Bentinck, Mr. Hobhouse, &c. were present. Several resolutions were passed in furtherance of the object of the meeting.

Two steam vessels, of about 120 tons each, intended for the service of the Post office, are about to be built in the Naval Yard at Deptford.

Ascot Races will commence on Tuesday.

The trade of Wilton is fast recovering its wonted activity. The manufacturing of carpets more hands are at present employed than some time past.

Wanstead House was sold by auction, on the premises, on Friday last, for 10,000l.; one of the conditions of sale binds the purchaser to clear every thing away, even to the foundation, by Lady-day. The mansion cost, in its erection, more than 350,000l.

The Dutch Government have at last agreed to restore the specie found in the wreck of the Lutine frigate (1,000,000l.), McKinnon and Canning having threatened to enforce the demand if not [illegible] complied with.

The Schooner, Supply, from Whitehaven to Liverpool, [illegible] shore on Sunday last, at Dring's Scar, about three leagues [illegible] St. Bees, and soon filled with water. thirteen women and [illegible] were drowned, the crew and men passengers were saved.

On Thursday week, while twelve men and five boys were [illegible] in a coal-pit, at Bryncoed colliery, near Mold, one side of the [illegible] was forced in by an immense body of water from an adjoining [illegible] men, out of the seventeen, caught hold of the rope attached to the machine at the pit's mouth, and were safely drawn up, the remaining eleven, six women and five boys were drowned: one man has [illegible] children, another 10, another 8, another 7, another 6, another [illegible].

An extraordinary robbery was effected on Saturday of a [illegible] marble tablet, of a mural monument, lately erected in the parish church of Charsfield, in Suffolk, was stolen and carried away. A reward has been offered for the discovery of the thieves.

On Thursday morning, about two o'clock, a fire broke out in a house in Little Clarendon-street, Somers Town, which consumed that and an adjoining one.

Tuesday, the Recorder made his report to the King in Council of the convicts under sentence of death; 22 cases were reported, 19 were reprieved except George Elliott, for highway robbery, who is to be executed to-morrow.

In the Court of King's Bench, on Tuesday.—Dr. Lewis v. Veitch.—The plaintiff, a physician, brought this action to recover damages for ill treatment, while under the care of the defendant, a physician also. The plaintiff had laboured under a delusion of mind, and was placed under the defendant's care at Rosslyn House, Brompton. After some time it came to the ears of his father that he was treated with a degree of violence, totally unnecessary. The defendant's servant Richard, was in the habit of putting him in a strait waistcoat, and practising other severities, for which [illegible] treatment this action was brought. This gentleman being of a delicate constitution, was reduced by this treatment to a situation of extreme debility, which occasioned his friends to be alarmed for the safety of his life. Witnesses were examined who proved these facts. On the part of the defendant it was contended that the evidence for the plaintiff did not go to impeach the medical character of the defendant, what he had in his best skill prescribed for the peculiar complaint of his patient; and that this charge of mal-treatment and cruelty was to be completely answered by the honourable and high professional character which this gentleman possessed. Witnesses were called to prove that in the spring of 1821 the defendant had the plaintiff's mother for three months under his care, and cured them—but the plaintiff relapsed; he had a liver complaint, and recommended.—It was proved that he was treated with kindness, at least in the opinion of the witness,) two physicians believed the defendant to be a skilful, humane, and judicious physician. The jury found a verdict for the plaintiff—Damages 50l.

OLD BAILEY.

On Friday, John Lake, aged 27, and Charles Butler, were indicted, the former for feloniously killing and slaying Norman M'Cleod, the latter for aiding and assisting in the said felony. The parties were journeymen bakers, and quarrelled at the Bedford Head, Upper King-street, Bloomsbury, at a singing club, when they went out to fight, and the deceased received a blow which killed him. The Jury returned a verdict of Guilty against both prisoners.

In the case of F. J. H. Norton convicted in the February Sessions of a burglary, the Judges this day delivered their judgment that Mr. Justice Bayley, on the case reserved as a point of law. The prisoner had been indicted for a burglary in the house of a person named [illegible] in the indictment "Mary Johnson;" that for the last five years she had gone by the name of Johnson. On the trial the prisoner's counsel took an objection to the form of the indictment, on the ground that the real name of the Prosecutor was Davis, and consequently the prisoner was entitled to an acquittal. The point was reserved for the opinion of the twelve Judges, and the result was, that their Lordships were of opinion that the indictment was properly framed, and the conviction ought to stand.

NEW SCHOOL MAPS, GEOGRAPHY, ATLASES, &c.

Just published, only 6d. each coloured,

MAPS (Rev. T.) new World, from the latest and best Authorities.
Throughout the World; 2. Mercator's Chart of the World; 3. Europe; 4. England; 5. Ireland; 7. France; 8. Russia; 9. Spain and Portugal;
Switzerland; 11. Poland; 12. Holland and the Netherlands; 13.
Denmark; 15. Germany; 16. South Switzerland; 17. Italy;
Norway; 19. Sweden; 21. East Indies; 22. Africa; 23. North
Hindoostan; 25. South America; 26. Canaan, or Judea; 27.
West Indies; 28. Roman Imperium; 29. Travels of St. Paul; Italia
Romanorum Imperium; 29. Travels of St. Paul; Italia
Antiqua.

Compiled into Maps, on the same scale as the above, and in which Towns, Rivers, Lakes, and Mountains are all laid down, but Names. Intended for the exercise of Junior Pupils, at each.

Intended for the exercise of the above, for Senior Projections on the same scale as the above, for Senior

NEW GENERAL SCHOOL ATLAS; exhibiting
(Rev. T.) NEW GENERAL SCHOOL ATLAS; exhibiting of the World, with the chief Empires, Kingdoms, and Maps carefully corrected from the latest and best Authorities.
Maps; carefully corrected from the latest and best Authorities.
19, plain, 8s. 6d.; royal 8vo. coloured 10s. 6d. plain, 7s.
accuracy, and cheapness, these Atlases cannot be equalled

MODERN GEOGRAPHY and HISTORY; containing an Present State of the Kingdoms of the World, with the political Congress of Vienna; to which is annexed a Series
Examination of the Student. Price 4s. 6d.
Exercise and Examination of the Student. Price 4s. 6d.
EUROPE. 12mo. with Maps and Plates. Abridged by the ASIA. 12mo. with Maps and Plates. Abridged by the Rev.

AND OBSERVATIONS of HAREACH, the Wandering Events in the History of Destruction of the Temple of Jerusalem by Titus, with Maps
Rev. T. Clark; 3s.
Sumner, School Library, 73, St. Paul's Church-yard.

On the 1st of June will be published, price 6s.

KNIGHT'S QUARTERLY MAGAZINE. London: Printed for Knight, 7, Pall Mall East.

CHEAP NATIONAL PUBLICATION.

Just published, price 2d. the Eleventh Weekly Number of PORTFOLIO of Entertaining and Instructing Varieties in Literature, Science, the Fine Arts, &c. Containing an Engrav-
Windsor Castle and the Royal Exchange. The First and Second Parts, consisting of one hundred and forty-four closely-printed octavo pages, of fifteen elegant and interesting engravings, stitched together with a wrapper, price eighteen-pence, with the current numbers, either of the Magazines may be had of the publisher, J. Dinn,
Queen-street, Holborn; Simpkin and Marshall, Stationers'-
Little Queen-street, Holborn; Simpkin and Marshall, Stationers'-
Sherwood and Co. Paternoster-row; and of all Booksellers and Newsmen in all parts of the united kingdom.

THE CAMBRIDGE TART.

Published, in foolscap 8vo. price 8s. embellished with an Engraving,
CAMBRIDGE TART.—Epigrammatic and Satiric-Poetical
&c. &c. Dainty Morsels served up by Cantabs, on various oc-
Addressed to the Members of the University of Cambridge. By SOCIUS.
"Object is to Sausage, and why not Cambridge its Tart."—Preface.
Printed for James Smith, 163, Strand; and John Anderson, 40, West
Just published, in 8vo. price 2s. 6d. with an Engraving, INQUIRY into the Comparative Forces of the Extensor and Muscles, connected with the Joints of the Human Body. By M.R.C.S. &c.—London: Printed for John Anderson,
Bookseller, 40, West Smithfield; and Adam Black, Edinburgh.
Just published, handsomely printed, in one volume, royal 18mo, price 6s.
CREDITED GHOST STORIES; collected and edited by
C. M. JARVIS, Esq.—Contents: The Apparition of James Haddock—
Wayside Inn—Gezzel to Desfontaines—Sir George Villiers to Secret to the first Duke of Buckingham—Konigsberg Professor—The Old Londonderry—Parson Ford, related by Dr. Johnson—Lord Lyt-
Walter—Lord Tyrone and Lady Beresford—Plotinus to Marcella,
Dr. Johnson Bridge, after the Irish Massacre—Story of Second Sight,
Richard Rolet—Lady Pennyman and Mrs. Atkins—Dr. Ferras—Mrs.
Bloomberg—Mr. Wesley—Mr. Vesi—Chevalier de Saxe, &c.
Many of these stories are now first printed from private MSS.
Published by J. Andrews, at his Circulating Library, 167, New Bond-street.
Just published, in 1 vol. octavo, price 12s boards,
NEW TRANSLATION of ARISTOTLE'S RHETORIC;
with copious Introduction and Appendix, explaining its relation to his exact and establishing that Philosophy, by proofs that all departures from Conclusions into error. By JOHN GILLIES, LL.D. F.R.S. and S.A.
F.R.S. Edinburgh, Historiographer to his Majesty for Scotland.—
Cadell, in the Strands and W. Blackwood, Edinburgh. Of whom may be had, by the same Author,
HISTORICAL ETHICS and POLITICS; comprising his Practical Phi-
Morals, illustrated by the Greek and Roman Classics. 2d Edit. 2 vols 8vo. price 11. 1s. in bds.
the HISTORY of ANCIENT GREECE; its Colonies and Conquests,
Commercial records, to the extinction of the Greek Kingdoms by Augus-
Fourth Edition, 2 vols. 8vo. price 2l. 18s. in bds.

AND QUARTO EDITION OF GEORGE IV. REGIS.
Just published, the Eighth Edition, greatly improved, price 19s. in boards, or 22s.
handsomely bound,
OXFORD'S ENGLISH LAWYER; or, Every Man his own
Lawyer: containing a Summary of the Constitution of England; its Laws
Statutes, particularly those relative to Arrests; Bankruptcy, Benefit So-
Insolvent Debtors; the Office of the Crown; Sheriffs, the Game Laws, Executors
Administrators and Wards; Husband and Wife, Insolvent Debtors;
Landlord and Tenant; Libel; Master and Servant, Nuisances, Parent and Child;
Parish, Savings Banks; Tithes, Wills, &c. &c. Also, the Criminal Law
Offences, with every species of Punishment, and Offences, with their Punishments.
Illustrated by an Appendix, containing the most approved Forms of Agree-
Leases, Wills, and Testaments.—Notices between Landlord and Tenant,
Lodgers, Tradesmen, &c. &c. &c.

LATEST NEWS.

The Paris paper, L'Etoile, arrived yesterday by express. The Count D'Espagne is appointed Viceroy of Navarre. General Rego had returned to Portugal, having pursued Amarante as far as Leon, without overtaking him. San Miguel had set out from Seville to join the Constitutional army. A letter written by Milans to Mina, had been intercepted, it is dated from St. Coloma Desermes, advising him to retreat, as all the artillery and the army of the French were in his front, about two and a half leagues distant. Count Abisbal was, on the 7th, at Calapuga, a village between the Escurial and Madrid; the men, consisting of several thousand, waited a favourable moment for deserting him. Morillo had not more than 400 men under him. The news of the taking of Valencia wants confirmation.

A letter from Havre, dated the 13th, says, that at the Havannah the merchants would not make shipments of goods in French vessels, two French vessels had been plundered off St. Domingo, by pirates.

An article from Berlin, dated May 3, brought by the Flanders Mail, says that a letter has been received from St. Petersburgh, dated the 16th of April, which mentioned that Couriers had brought news from the Ottoman Porte, that it was intended to accede to the propositions proposed by the Russian Cabinet, which news was confirmed by letters from Constantinople direct.

A New Lottery has been contracted for, by Messrs. Ricardo and others. It is to consist of 20,000 tickets.

Some thieves broke into the Foreign Post Office, on Friday night, and stole about 20*l*.

Fifty-two casks of pitch were imported the other day, by a Frenchman, who was anxious for the safety of his cargo; this created suspicion at the Custom House, the casks were proved, and each barrell contained a ten gallon keg of brandy.—Monsieur was so alarmed at this discovery, that he fled down Thames-street with the utmost celerity from the grasp of the officers.

In the Court of King's Bench, yesterday, an action was tried, (the East India Company, v. Tritton and others,) to recover 35,000*l*. in some bills, the amount of which they had paid over to a Mr. Murray, as administrator to Mr. Hope, who was lost in one of their ships. A verdict was taken, (subject to the opinion of the Court on the law of the case), for the defendants.

At Bow-street, yesterday, William Benbow appeared to answer an information exhibited against him by Mr. Power, the Music-seller, in the Strand, for printing and publishing Moore's Irish and National Melodies. Mr. Power being entitled to the copy-right. The publication having been proved, the Magistrate observed, the manner in which Mr. Benbow had acted, was defrauding Mr. Power out of his property, and he should convict the defendant in the mitigated penalty of 10*l*.

John Gotte, the man whose house was burnt down in New-street, Covent Garden, on Monday night was brought up for further examination, but no further evidence was proceeded in, and he was again remanded.

At the Old Bailey, yesterday, Mary Ann Strange was tried for robbing the House for the Destitute, (of which she was an inmate), of certain clothes; she was found Guilty, and sentenced to be transported for seven years.

At the Middlesex Sessions, yesterday, Samuel Waddington, of well-known notoriety, was tried for assaulting Ann Thomas, a child, 10 years old, with intent to violate her person, on the 18th of February.—The witnesses on both sides were, at the desire of the prisoner, ordered out of Court.—Ann Thomas, the prosecutrix, was then sworn, and examined, but her evidence was of a nature totally unfit for publication. Waddington made a very long unconnected defence roundaining of his persecution in this affair, and the loss of friends thereupon. He called two witnesses, which very much contradicted the testimony of the little girl. The Jury found the prisoner Not Guilty.

PRICE OF STOCKS AT THE CLOSE, SATURDAY.

In the British Securities, a considerable rise took place on Thursday and Friday, but an abundance of Money Stock subsequently caused a depression. The highest price for Consols for the Account was 79⅞. A good deal of business has been done in the Foreign Market during the week, particularly in Spanish Bonds, which on Friday were doing at 36⅜. They have, however, been lower since, being opened to-day at 35⅜, and been as low as 34⅜. At the close Consols for the Account were 79⅜.

3 per Cent. Red. . . 77⅝	India Bonds 38 36
3 per Cent. Consols 78⅜ ⅛ ⅜ ⅜	Exchequ. Bills, 2d 1000*l*. 15 13 15
3½ per Cent. ditto . .	Ditto . . . . . 500*l*.
4 per Cent. . . . . 95⅛ ⅜ ⅜	Small . . . . .
New 4 per Cent. . . 98⅛ ⅛ ⅛	Con. for Acc. 78⅞ ⅛ ⅛ ⅜
Long Annuities . . 19⅝

Letters from Paris quote the prices of French Stock as follow:—

FRENCH FUNDS, May 12.

5 per Ct. Con. 22 Sept. . . 87-30	Bank Sh. Div. 1 July
Recon. Div. 22 Sept. . .	Ex. Lond. Imo. 25-65 3mo.

The Neapolitan 5 per Cents. Div. were at

THE ETONIAN.—A Third Edition of this amusing work, which reflects so much honour on the various writers, is just published, printed uniformly with the Sketch Book: to which it has not inaptly been compared, on account of its spirited delineations of life and manners.

THE HERMIT IN THE COUNTRY.—We are requested to state that a third Edition of this amusing Work, by the celebrated author of the "Hermit in London," which has been so long called for, is at length published, considerably improved and comprised in 3 vols. In this New Edition, all the papers on Scotland are classed together in the third volume, which will be found to exhibit a lively sketch of Society and Manners among our Northern neighbours.

It is, we believe, no generally known that Hayley the poet, and the friend and biographer of Cowper, was for many years engaged in writing the Memoirs of his own Life. These Memoirs, which, we understand, are nearly ready for publication, are enriched by a variety of letters and anecdotes of the most illustrious men of his age; for Hayley, though rather a recluse, was in constant correspondence with all the eminent men of his time. This Work, as a literary history, written with fidelity by an accomplished scholar and most amiable man, will, no doubt, prove a rich treat to all lovers of genius and distinguished talent.

KNIGHT'S QUARTERLY MAGAZINE, the First Number of which will appear on the 1st of June, is we hear, likely to be supported by many gentlemen of very distinguished talent, some of whom have already excited the public expectation by their early productions, and others by their academical honours. In the list of names attached to the Prospectus, we recognize the noms-de-guerre of several of the most brilliant writers in The Etonian; and shall be glad to hail them displaying matur d powers and ripened knowledge.

The most brilliant and extensive display of India stripes and Swiss chintzes, damasks, tabbarets, &c. &c. at a reduction in the prices of at least one-third. MILES and EDWARDS'S system being so generally known and so much encouraged by all the principal Nobility and Gentry, they have only to repeat, that nothing shall tempt them to forfeit their great reputation by deviating from it. In fitting up drawing and dining room curtains, beds, &c. families have an opportunity of effecting a most important saving: equal, in many instances, to one half in consequence of the extraordinary difference which exists the prices of this entirely new Stock, and the terms obtained by other establishments for the same articles, manufactured at a time when they must have cost double their present value. M and E. have no connection with any other house. No. 134, Oxford-street, between Holles-street and Old Cavendish-street.

Another case of the Pearl, White, Fancy, Silk, and Clarified Whale-fin Hats have been received from Lamartinere, of Paris, by the fashionable house of ASKEW and CO. 87, Oxford street.

BEES.—The cultivation of Bees, so very interesting a branch of rural economy, particularly from its connection with the instinct and manners of one of the most curious of the insect tribe, and valuable from the resources it offers to the cottager as well as to the other inhabitants of the country, although much improved within the few last years, a great difference of opinion still prevails with bee-keepers, and also with authors, as to the most advantageous method of managing these valuable insects, and assisting them in their indefatigable labours; It is, therefore, highly gratifying to learn that an Apiarian Repository has been established at 175, Strand, where a newly invented double topped Straw Hive, to be used with glasses if required, may be viewed, and where the fullest information and every necessary apparatus connected with the Apiary may be obtained together with a short Treatise by the Inventor on the general management of Bees, tending considerably to promote and further this desirable object.

ELEGANT GLASSES, FURNITURE, &c.—The Nobility and Gentry are invited to inspect the Ware rooms of Cooper and Son, 83, Bishopsgate Within, where is exhibited a large Assortment of new and second-hand Plate Glasses, admirably suited to every description of drawing or dining-rooms. The prices are just reduced 40 per cent. on plates measuring 100 inches by 72, and upwards; and on those of smaller dimensions the alteration will be found equally important. The extensive preference given to this Establishment is thankfully acknowledged by the Proprietors, who, in their endeavours to evince their gratitude, by manufacturing articles in a superior manner, at prices suitable to the times, hope to merit a continuance of public support. In the furniture department is comprised every new and elegant article of upholstery, cabinet, and chair work, regulated upon such a scale of economy as to demand and ensure the patronage of rank and fashion.

A candid examination of professional pretensions is only to be feared by those who are conscious of incapacity. Messrs. Goss and Co. Members of the Royal College of Surgeons, combine their studies to the treatment of such disorders as arise from nervous debility. Their works, "The Elgin of Life," and "Hygeians," (the latter addressed to females) in full explanation of these subjects, may be had at No. 20, Paternoster-row, London, Porter, 72, Grafton street, Dublin, or at any Booksellers. Medicines can be forwarded to any part, however distant, on receiving a Bank note.—11, Bouverie-street, Fleet-street, London.

Just published, price 12s. 6d. in boards, Volume the Second of SERMONS, Doctrinal, Practical, and Occasional. By the Rev. W. SNOWDEN, Perpetual Curate of Horbury, near Wakefield.—Printed for C. and J. Rivington, St. Paul's Church-yard, and Waterloo-place, Pall-mall; for C. and J. Rivington, Royal Exchange.

Of whom may be had, a Second Edition of the First Volume, price 10s. 6d.

The Editor of the Christian Remembrancer (January, 1822) gives the following account of this volume:—"The style is clear and perspicuous; the doctrine is sound and uncorrupt; and the matter is judiciously adapted to popular edification. There is in this volume so much of good sense and principle as cannot fail to produce their effect in the meditation of the individual, and the instructions of the family."

Just published, in two volumes, price 15s. in boards,

WILLOUGHBY; or, Reformation the Influence of Religious Principles. By the Author of "Decision," "Caroline Ormsby," &c. Printed for C. and J. Rivington, Waterloo place, Pall-mall, and St. Paul's Church-yard.

Just published, in 3 vols. 12mo. 24s.

ISABELLA. A Novel. By the Author of Rhoda, Plain Sense, and Things by their Right Names. Also a Second Edition of Rhoda, 4 vols. 28s.

"The reader of sensibility who wishes to see the human heart developed in the natural circumstances of life, will find a rich entertainment in the present work, which exhibits with great force the superior influence of art over nature in the fashionable world. Like the Cecilia of Miss Burney, the characters in Isabella are chiefly elicited by dialogue, which, in a most excellent and animated strain, pervades the work. The character of Rhoda is more happily drawn, because truer to nature than that of any heroine that has for a long time appeared before us."

Printed for Henry Colburn and Co. Conduit-street.

Just published, price 1s.

THE SPEECH of the VISCOUNT DE CHATEAUBRIAND, Minister of Foreign Affairs, delivered in the Chamber of Peers, on Wednesday, 30th April, 1823.—Printed for J. Hatchard and Son, No. 187, Piccadilly. Of whom may be had, price 1s. 6d.

The SPEECH of the VISCOUNT DE CHATEAUBRIAND, on Tuesday, 25th February.

Just published, in 3 vols. post 8vo. price 1l. 11s. 6d. boards.

QUENTIN DURWARD. By the Author of Waverley, Peveril of the Peak, &c. &c.

La guerre est ma patrie,
Mon harnois ma maison,
Et en toute sa son
Combattre c'est ma vie.

Printed for Archibald Constable and Co. Edinburgh; and Hurst, Robinson, and Co. 90, Cheapside, and 8, Pall Mall, London.

UNDER the Patronage of His Majesty.—Magnificent PAIR of GLOBES, 36 inches in diameter!—Messrs. J. ADDISON and CO. Globe makers, by appointment to his Majesty, No. 116, Regent-street, respectfully inform the nobility and gentry, that they are honoured by his Majesty's gracious permission to dedicate the above work to him, of which prospectuses may be had, and a specimen seen at their manufactory. They have added to their various sized new editions of Globes, a pair of two-inch, at the low price of three guineas; these, as well as the others, contain the recent discoveries by Parry, Franklin, and Scoresby. Have also just published, an improved projectible Horizontal Sphere, almost equal to a Celestial Globe in utility, with instructions for its use, price 10s. 6d. Maps of the Stars, from 1s. 6d. to 5s. ☞ Old Globes refitted with the new editions.

METROPOLITAN BENEFIT INSTITUTION, 157, Benchurch Street.—The following Benefits may be secured by Monthly or Quarterly payments.—Allowance during Sickness.—Sums of Money at Death.—Endowment of Children.—and Deferred Annuities.—Books, containing rules, regulations, tables, and other particulars, may be obtained at the office, from 10 in the morning until 7 in the evening

FOR PASSENGERS ONLY.—SAILS from Gravesend this day, for CALCUTTA, being chartered by the Hon. East India Company, the Fine Fast-sailing SHIP ASBERTON, burthen 500 tons, LUCAS PERCIVAL, Commander, (of the Honourable Company's Service); has a poop, and very superior accommodations for Passengers, and carries a surgeon.—Apply to Mr. Bawtree; or the Commander, at the Jerusalem Coffee-House; or to WILLIAM ABERCROMBIE, 4, Birchin-lane

FOR BOMBAY, to sail on the 20th of May, the regular trader, KATHERINE STEWART FORBES, A 1, 500 tons; INGRAM CHAPMAN, Commander. Lying in the City-canal. Has a poop, and very superior accommodations for passengers, and carries a surgeon. For freight or passage apply to the commander, at the Jerusalem Coffee-house Cornhill; to Messrs. Inglis, Forbes, and Co. 2, Mansion House-place; or to John Chapman and Co. 2, Leadenhall street.

ROTTERDAM and LONDON STEAM PACKET.—The Public are respectfully informed the KING OF THE NETHERLANDS, CAPT. N. B. BULL, has resumed her station for the convenance of passengers carriages, and luggage, and will proceed from off the Custom House for Rotterdam, on SATURDAY MORNING NEXT, at 8 o'clock, and on each succeeding Saturday from the same place, returning from Rotterdam every Wednesday morning. This beautiful vessel is elegantly fitted up for the convenience and comfort of passengers, and has private cabins for families and parties. For further particulars, and to secure places, application to be made at the General Packet Office, 357, Strand, No. 12, Regent street, Pall Mall, or to N. W. Symonds, 37, Crutched-friars.

COMMUNICATION WITH DUBLIN.—The Public are respectfully informed, that the ST. PATRICK Steam Packet will pursue her line of Sailing throughout this Month (May) as follows:—From Bristol, Thursday, 15th May; Tuesday, 20th; Saturday, 24th; Thursday, 29th. From Dublin, Saturday, 17th May; Thursday, 22nd; Tuesday, 27th; Saturday, 31st; For further information, apply (post paid) to the following agents of the St. Patrick Steam Packet Company:—Mr. J. Lancaster, 12, Regent street, Pall Mall, London; Mr. G. E. Davis, Dublin; Mr. D. M'Vicar, Liverpool; and Mr. Protheroe, Park-end Coal Wharf, Bristol.

ROYAL ACADEMY.—Visitors from the country who intend to view the annual display of British genius in the Fine Arts, at Somerset House, which is now Open, are respectfully reminded, that this Institution is within four doors of URLING'S LACE Establishment, 147 Strand, where attention is invited to a daily succession of fashionable novelties, under the exclusive patent of the King and patronage of the Royal Family.—N.B. Court Dresses, Lappets, Ruffles, &c.

THREE THOUSAND of the most superb SHAWLS in Europe, Twelve Hundred real India Nankeens at 3s. 2d. the Piece, with 90 Pieces of curious and beautiful India Muslins at 1s. 6d. 2s. and 2s. 6d. a yard, being one-third of the usual retail prices. Apply to GRAHAM and NIXON, Wholesale Drapers, Agents, and Irish Linen Factors, Nos. 293 and 294, High Holborn, London.—P.S. Graham most respectfully solicits those Families who formerly patronized the late Firm of Craig and Graham in Oxford-street

MONEY on EQUITABLE TERMS.—The Advertiser advances Money to any extent, at moderate interest, whether on Freehold, Copyhold, Leasehold, Ecclesiastical, Funded, Church Livings, or other ample Security; and assures those who may honour him with their confidence, that they will experience treatment the most candid, liberal, and explicit, though similar business is sometimes viewed with mistrust, from the mal practices of disreputable people.—Letters, post-paid, to A. B. C. Messrs. Williams, glover, Inner Temple-lane, Fleet-street, will receive immediate attention; where also a card of address may be had.—Reversions are purchased.

DAMASK NAPKINS, 7s. 6d. per dozen, and a Twenty Thousand Pounds' Stock of rich Damask and Double Damask Table Linen, consisting of the richest and most superb patterns that can be produced, amongst which are some curious Silesian damask of anchor devices, having been purchased quite out of the ordinary way, will be sold at nearly one half their real value, and yet leave the proprietor a small profit; and as RILEY is determined to increase his extensive trade, he has procured to the public every possible article of this description, viz. Rich damask napkins, 7s. 6d. per dozen; damask table cloths, yard and quarter long, 2s. each; do. yard and half long, 3s. 6d.; do. two yards long, 4s. 6d.; do. two yards and a half long, 5s. 6d.; do. double damask, 12s.; do. real German damask, 15s.; do. three yards long, 14s.; do. three yards and a half long, 18s.; do. four yards long, 21s. 6d.; do. four and a half long 25s. 6d.; do. five yards long, 29s.; do. six yards long, 35s.; large sizes equally cheap, all of the proper width, with damask napkins to match; five thousand pieces of linen, the strongest and best fabrics Ireland produces, from 1s. to 3s. per yard, those at 18d. 20d. and 2s. are curiously fine for gentlemen's wear; mock Russia sheeting, 6s. 6d. per pair; real Russia do. 12s. 6d.; strong Lancashire sheeting, 9d. per yard; very stout and fine do. 1s.; superior sheetings, for families of distinction, from 2s. 6d. to 2s. 6d. per yard; real Russia sheeting, 2s. 9d. per yard, double width, which prevents the necessity of a seam; Irish sheeting, yard and quarter wide, 1s. 3d. per yard; fine do. 1s. 6d.; yard and half wide, 2s. 4d. and 2s. 6d. per yard; real German hollands, yard and half wide, 3s. 6d. per yard (an article rarely to be met with, and sold at no other house lower than seven shillings per yard). Forty bales of India long cloth, containing twenty-five yards, for 16s.; a beautiful fine article, in real Madras cloth, 25 yds for 20s.; families going abroad, especially to hot climates, will find this article really worth their notice; Marseilles quilts, three yards square, 15s. each; counterpanes 5s. and large size do. 6s. 6d. each; Witney blankets in every size; dresses, 2s 6d. each; ditto, two and three guineas; flannels, 6s. 6d. each. A matchless elegance, from 15s. to six guineas each; those at 25s. are positively worth 25 two guineas; cambric handkerchiefs, with borders, 12s. per dozen, and fine French cambrics, ditto, 21s. per doz.; 2000 yards of rich gros de Naples, 3s. 6d. per yard; good sarsenet, French width, 2s. 9d. per yard; and every article in silk mercery carriage will be allowed on all purchases amounting to 20l. and upwards, at RILEY'S, 118, Oxford-street.

THEATRE of ANATOMY and MEDICINE, Webb's Mazeppa-ground, Borough.—The Summer Course of Lectures delivered at this Theatre will commence on MONDAY, JUNE the 2d 1823. On Anatomy and Physiology by Mr. Edward Granger, daily at seven o'clock in the morning. On Introductory Lecture will be given on the 2d of June at a quarter before 8 A.M.—On the Principles and Practice of Physic by Dr. Armstrong, every Monday, Wednesday, and Friday, at half past four in the afternoon.—On Midwifery and the Diseases of Women and Children by Dr. D. D. Davis, every Tuesday in the morning.—On Materia Medica by Dr. Armstrong, every Saturday, at half past four.—On Chemistry and Pharmacy by Mr. Phillips, every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday, at a quarter before one in the morning.—Tickets to admit to all the Lectures apply at the Theatre, or to S. Hichley, Medical Bookseller 170, Strand.

RAPHAEL'S CELEBRATED FRESCO DESIGNS IN OIL, and NEW TESTAMENT.—The Nobility and Public are respectfully informed by Mr. T. H. R. CAUTY, that the celebrated Series of highly finished Water Colour Drawings, executed on vellum, from the admired application by T. De Meulenaecster, the distinguished Professor of the Royal Academy of the Fine Arts at Antwerp, from the great Designs by Raphael for the Old and New Testament, painted on the Plafond Ceilings of the Vatican at Rome, will OPEN for Public Exhibition at the GREAT GALLERY, 80½, PALL-MALL, on WEDNESDAY the 21st inst. The original Designs of Raphael have been for nearly three centuries the theme of universal admiration, and these Copies were esteemed so at Rome by the most eminent judges in Europe.

N.B. The Exhibition of Mr. GEORGE HAYTER'S great Historical Picture of the QUEEN'S TRIAL continues open.

MARBLE and PORTLAND SLAB.—Surveyors, Builders, and others, are invited to inspect a large and select Collection of various qualities, cut by Machinery with greater accuracy than has been cut by hand, which will be sold at reduced prices, at 91, M'Mahon-street, Marble and Slab Yard, Regent-street, Horseferry-road Westminster.—Several large Blocks of good Statuary Marble fit for sculptors, to be sold.

☞ Orders transmitted from the country are punctually attended to.

CIDER, PERRY, ALE, &c.—THOMAS FIELD begs to acquaint their Friends and the Public, that their genuine Cider, Perry, Barton, Edinburgh, Taunton, and Welsh Ales, Porchester, Brown Stout &c. are in fine order for use. They have also a very superior Foreign Wines, Cape Madeira, Brandy, (white and coloured) Hollands, Geneva, and Orange Shrub; and have been for many years in constant use at the redoutean in their prices generally.—22, Henrietta-street, Cavendish-square.

W. S. SARGENSON, No. 5, Coventry, Piccadilly, respectfully entreats the curious to look at his WINES and SPIRITS, lately present to PUBLICK, which has already met the approbation of many connoisseurs. The Selections are made from the first Vineyards in Europe, and are particularly solicitary the following:—Hermitage of St. George, reduced to 40s. per dozen; Old Port, from 40s. to 45s. ditto: Superior Crusted, 48 ditto; Sherry, 30s. ditto. W. I. Ditto, 52s. ditto: Fine Old Sherry 40s. to 45s. ditto; Pale Sherry, old, 48s. ditto; Cape Madeira, a fine Table Wine, 19s. to 21s.; Rum, Brandy, Hollands, finest flavours, and import strength. Orders from the Country and Trade punctually attended to. Inspectors and connoisseurs with any Foreign Merchandize invited to a competition with any House in London.—Champagne just imported, in the highest perfection.

TWO BUILDERS and OTHERS.—LAND to be LET or Sold upon, one mile and a quarter from Oxford-street, most eligibly situated on high dry gravelly ground at Bayswater-hill, overlooking the grounds of Kensington-gardens, and part of it fronting the Chapel, Bayswater.—Apply at Mr. Orme, Bayswater, or at his Office, 9, Bond-street, corner of Brook street.

CURIOUS SHAWLS.—INDIA PATTERNS, 228, Regent-street, Oxford-street.—J. JAY begs respectfully to inform the Nobility and the Public, that he has now on sale an elegant assortment of the most curious and scarce, at British manufacture, some of which are fac-similes of those expressly by his own directions; Gros de Naples, lavantines, and other scarfs, plain handkerchiefs, plain and figured sarsnets, Crepon and Crape crapes, poplins, lustres bombasins, &c. with every fancy article of the best quality, and most modern patterns. An immense stock of counties, and pelisses, dinner and dansak table cloths, netting, Musselles quilts towels, and muslins, and muslins; the whole of which having been purchased for cash he pledges himself to offer at such unprecedented low prices, as to defy competition by any other house in the trade.—N.B. Just imported, a few pieces of Irish linen, sheeting, French cambricks and cambrick handkerchiefs, very cheap.—☞ 2 Doors from Regent-circus, south of Oxford street.

SUPERB LACE DRESSES.—DISON, WILLSON and CO. have just finished several entire new designs in colonade and flounced dresses, which, for correctness of pattern, and beauty of work, has never been equalled by British Manufacture. They have likewise received from their manufactory at Brussels, a new collection of patterns in Brussels's sprigs, veils, scarfs, squares, &c at unusual low prices.—No. 237, Regent street, exactly facing the Lyceum Rooms.

KENSINGTON LACE WORKS, under the immediate Patronage of their Royal Highnesses the Duchess of Gloucester, Princess Sophia, Duchess of Kent, who having honoured this Establishment with their presence, and being graciously pleased to express their high approbation, and grant their appointment and special warrant to the proprietors as Manufacturers to their Royal Highnesses, is a decided proof of their superiority over every other in the country, in every elegant and fashionable lace production for dress. It is impossible but lace genuine, retail as well as wholesale, at the manufacturing prices of any where but at the Lace Works and Manufactory, 14, Kensington-square, Kensington and the Warehouse, 30, Southampton-street, Strand, exists. The Nobility, Gentry, and Ladies in general visiting this establishment, are respectfully informed that the hours to view the machinery and process are from 8 to 11 and from 2 till 5. Orders made to match any kind of lace.

TWO HUNDRED DOZEN of elegant DAMASK TABLE CLOTHS; one thousand pieces of grass bleached linen, with one hundred pieces of splendid chintz furnitures and excellent moreen to the match under the mark. Apply to GRAHAM and NIXON, importers of the above table cloths, Irish linen factors, and furniture printers, Nos. 293 and 294, High Holborn, London.—P.S. Graham (late of Oxford-street,) most respectfully solicits those Ladies who formerly patronized the late firm of Craig and Graham.

SALES BY AUCTION.

Freehold Ground Rents, producing about 400*l*. per annum, most amply secured on Dwelling Houses, in Kent-road.—By MESSRS. DRIVER, at the Auction Mart, on THURSDAY, JUNE 12, in 13 Lots, by direction of the Devisees in trust, of Mr. P. J. Driver, deceased,

VERY Valuable INVESTMENTS in Net FREEHOLD GROUND RENTS, producing about 400*l*. per annum, most amply secured, and arising and arising out of upwards of 100 Dwelling Houses, comprising the whole of Friendly place, Swan-place, Cornbury-place, Orford-row, Brunswick-place, Alfred-place, in the Old Kent-road, and Stanford-place, in East-street, also part thereto, the whole laying together, and held on twenty separate leases, above one moiety of which are for terms whereof only 52 years are unexpired, and the remainder are about 65 years unexpired, and may be sold in Lots for the convenience of purchasers.—Printed particulars, with engraved plans annexed, may be had after the 20th of May, at the King's Arms, Kent-road; Elephant and Castle, Newington Butts; of Messrs. Vines and Adey, solicitors, Southbuildings, Lincoln's Inn; at the Auction Mart; and of Messrs. Driver, surveyors and land agents, 13, Bridge-street, Blackfriars.

Valuable Library of Books, &c. for sale, by MR. CORNISH, Jun. (under authority of the Sheriff) on TUESDAY, JUNE 3, and following days, at his Subscription Rooms,

THE VALUABLE LIBRARY of SCARCE BOOKS of the late Dr. Cleeve, removed from Oakford House for the convenience of sale; among which are, Thornton's Botany, with the Plates and Illustrations, 3 vols. Tennant Scrips, 4 vols. folio; Donovan's British Birds, in numbers; Cook's Hogarth, folio, early Impressions; Lavater's Physiognomy, by Hunter, 5 vols. 4to.; Clarke's Travels, 5 vols. 4to.; Grose's Antiquities, 8 vols.; Dibdin's Bibliotheca Spenceriana, and Typographical Antiquities, 8 vols.; Theophilus Inskeri, Cicero, Oliveti, Geneva 1758. 9 vols.; Euripides, Beckii, 3 vols.; Theocritus, Moschus, et Bion, Valpy, 2 vols.; Horatius, Combe, 2 vols.; Virgilius Heyneii, Lips. 1800, 6 vols.; Scapulæ Lexicon, Oxon. 1633; Shakspeare, Boydell, Valpy, 20 parts; Voyages of Beveridge, Barrow, Clarke, Howe, &c. with Commentaries on the Bible by Henry, Patrick, Lowth, Whitby, Burkitt, Mant, Clarke, Hawker, &c.; numerous Works on Divinity, a good collection of English Classical Literature. Also some Silver Coins, a large quantity of Coins, and a philosophical and electrical Apparatus.—Catalogues may be had at 1s. each, to be returned to purchasers, of the Auctioneer, 19, Fleet-street-hill, after Thursday, May 29, and the books, &c. viewed the Saturday and Monday preceding the sale. Dated Exeter May 5, 1823.

PRICES of the PUBLIC FUNDS

STOCKS.	Mon.	Tues	Wed.	Thur.	Frid.	Sa
Bank Stock	216½	216	216½	217½	—	—
3 per Cent. Reduced	77¼	77⅛	78	78⅛	79	79
3 per Cent. Consols	78⅛	78⅜	79⅜	79⅝	80	80
3½ per Cent. Consols	—	90	90½	90½	90½	90
Consols for Account	78⅛	78⅜	79⅛	79½	80	80
4 per Cent. Consols	96½	95⅝	96½	96⅝	96⅞	97
New 4 per Cent.	95⅞	98⅛	98⅝	99⅛	99	—
Bank Long Annuities	20	19½	19⅝	20	20	—
India Bonds	39 p	40 p	40 p	39 p	34 p	—
Exchequer Bills, 2d	17 p	17 p	19 p	—	15 p	—
Ditto, 2½d	—	—	—	—	—	—
Columbian Bonds	—	—	—	—	—	—

MARRIED.

On Thursday, the Rev. Walker King, to Miss Heberden.

At Demarara, Capt. Hoare, of the Dotterel, 6o, to Miss Fahie, daughter of Rear-Admiral Fahie.

DIED.

Major Mathew Sutton, of the 57th Regt.—On Monday, aged 76, at his house in Worcestershire, Earl Beauchamp.—On Saturday se'nnight, in Dublin, in the 84th year, Dr. John Thomas Troy.

LONDON: Printed and Published by E. SHACKELL, No. 11, JOHNSON'S-COURT, FLEET-STREET. Only Communications to the Editor (post-paid) are received.

JOHN BULL.

"FOR GOD, THE KING, AND THE PEOPLE!"

No. 128. SUNDAY, MAY 25, 1823. Price 7d.

TO the PROPRIETORS of EAST INDIA STOCK.—Ladies and Gentlemen, the ELECTION, of a DIRECTOR of your Affairs, in room of Mr. Cotton retired, being fixed for WEDNESDAY, the 28th inst. I respectfully solicit the favour of your support at the Ballot on that day:—I have the honour to be, very respectfully, Ladies and Gentlemen, your most obedient servant, J. BAILLIE.

Devonshire-place, 22d May, 1823.

KING'S THEATRE.

MR. KELLY'S ANNUAL BENEFIT, and positively for this Night only, at Play-house prices, MONDAY, JUNE 9th, 1823. The Entertainments will consist of La Donna del Lago (the Lady of the Lake); the Characters by the principal Singers of the Establishment; after which a popular English Entertainment; to conclude with Alfred, Roi d'Angleterre (Alfred, King of England), performed by all the principal Dancers, assisted by the whole Corps de Ballet.—Boxes and Tickets of Mr. Kelly, 25, Great Russell-street, Covent-garden; and of Mr. Ebers, Books-seller to his Majesty, 27, Old Bond-street.

NEW ARGYLL ROOMS.—MR. MORI most respectfully acquaints the Nobility, Gentry, and his Friends, that his First ANNUAL BENEFIT CONCERT is fixed for MONDAY NEXT, MAY the 26th. Vocal Performers:—Madame Camporese, Madame Ronzi de Begnis, Signora Caradori, Signor Curioni, and Signor de Begnis; Mrs. Salmon, Miss Stephens, Miss M. Tree, Miss Goodall, Mr. Saplo, and Mr. Kellner.—Instrumental Performers—Messrs. Kalkbrenner, Bochsa, Nicholson, Puzzi, Spagnoletti, F. Cramer, Vacari, Lindley, Pengonetti; Signor Vimercati, will play one of his extraordinary Solos on the Mandoline; Reader, Mr. Mori; Conductor, Sir George Smart. The Band will consist of nearly the whole of the Performers at the Philharmonic Concerts.—Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, with particulars of the Concert (which will begin at Eight o'clock precisely) to be had at all the principal Music Shops. Places of six, and upwards, may be accommodated with boxes by an early application to Mr. Mori, 24, Edward-street, Manchester-square.

MR. CRAMER has the honour to announce that his MORNING CONCERT will take place at Willis's Rooms, King-street, St. James's, on FRIDAY, the 6th of June next, at One o'Clock.—Tickets, 10s. 6d. each, to be had at the Royal Harmonic Institution, Regent-street; Birchall and Co. New Bond-street; Cramer and Co. Soho-square; Addis, Royal Exchange; and at Cramer's, No. 1, Old Quebec-street, Portman-square. Particulars of the Concert will be published in due time.

NEW VOCAL MUSIC, for Schools and Private Families, just published, by CLEMENTI and CO. 26, Cheapside.—A Series of MORAL SONGS, written by W. F. COLLARD, the Music composed and adapted by J. CLIFTON, price 1s. 6d. each.

No.
1. The Sensitive Plant
2. My pretty Anne, good night!
3. Awake, O sleepy rewaret, awake!
4. The pure heart's cheerful smile
5. O! the eye that's bright
6. The Wandering Minstrel (with chorus)
7. Then of goodness, O! never
8. delay the hour (with chorus)
9. The dear delights of duty
10. The Swan
11. The Nightingale

This series of Moral Songs will be continued, avoiding the objection so justly made against the subject of passion, and cultivating those natural, cheerful, and affectionate feelings, which are equally calculated for musical expression.

DEDICATED by Permission to his MAJESTY.—PAROCHIAL PSALMODY, being a SELECTION of the most approved PSALM TUNES, newly harmonized for Four Voices; adapted to the authorized versions of the Psalms, and arranged as an Annual Course for the use of Congregations; by T. GREATOREX, Conductor of his Majesty's Concerts of Ancient Music, and Organist of Westminster Abbey. N. B. An Organ part is placed with each Psalm; and some Chaunts; a Kyrie Eleeson, and a Sanctus are added to the Work. Price 12s. in sheets, or 14s. bound.—Published for the Editor, by the Royal Harmonic Institution, and sold at the principal Music Shops throughout England; as also by T. Greatorex, No. 70, Norton-street, Portland-place, where Musical Professors and Provincial Music Dealers are requested to address their orders, as no allowance will be made at any other place.

NEW MUSIC.—Published by John Gow and Son (by special appointment), Music and Musical Instrument Sellers to His Majesty, 162, Regent-street, opposite New Burlington-street, for the Piano-forte—Rondo Brunet, with an Introduction, by Ferd. Ries, 4s.; Air, with Variations by Mayseder, 3s.; L'Offande aux Graces, an Air with Variations, by F. W. Crouch, 3s.; the much admired favourite Quadrilles from La Donna del Lago, in which is introduced "Aurora che sorgeral," composed by Rossini, 4s.; Gow's original First Set of Scotch Quadrilles, arranged as Duets for the Piano-forte, by D. Bruce, 4s.—N.B. Piano-fortes and Harps let on hire.

QUENTIN DURWARD.—The favourite SONG of "County Guy," from the above popular Novel, composed by G. F. Graham, Esq. is just published at Chappell and Co.'s Musical Repository, 50, New Bond-street.

NEW DUETS.—Just published by Mayhew and Co. 17, Old Bond-street, Kiallmark's universally admired air Rosanella, adapted for two performers on the Piano Forte, by the author, price 4s. No. 1: Select Airs from Rossini's new Opera, La Donna del Lago, arranged as duets for the Piano Forte, by Wm. Hammans, price 4s. The 2d and 3d Books of this celebrated work will be published in a few days. Also new editions of Latour's unrivalled production Le Retour de Windsor, adapted for two performers on the Piano Forte, by D. Bruguier, 5s.; the popular air of Cease your funning, with Kiallmark's admired variations, for two performers on the Piano Forte, by D. Bruguier, 3s.—N.B. The above Duets are particularly recommended to the notice of the musical world, being arranged by the first masters of the present age.—London: Mayhew and Co. music-sellers to the Royal Family, 17, Old Bond-street; where may be obtained, Hart's Seventh Set; from Rossini's beautiful Opera, "Pietro L'Eremita," price 4s.; a Sixth Set, from La Gazza Ladra, price 3s.; Fifth Set from Il Turco Italia, 4s.; Fourth Set, including George the Fourth's Coronation Waltz: Third Set, or celebrated Hussars, with the favorite La Cendrillon, and every new work as soon as published.

NEW QUADRILLES.—Just published, Paine's 18th Set, or New Lancers' Quadrilles, with entire New Music and Figures; also, the 19th Set of Quadrilles, the subjects taken from Pietro L'Eremita, now performing by Paine's Band at the Nobilities' Balls, each 3s. The extreme popularity of the former numbers of these Quadrilles, arising from their superior arrangement, have caused the decided preference given them to any other, and from the increasing sale, J. Paine flatters himself they have given general satisfaction. New Editions, for those that may not be supplied with them, are re-publishing, from 1 to 17, at Falkner's Opera Music Warehouse, at 3, Old Bond-street, where may be had, the Music in Eliza e Claudio, La Donna del Lago, and all Rossini's Operas.

MUSICAL CABINET, for the new Patent portable, DITAL HARPS, &c. the most desirable little instruments ever invented. These elegant little HARPS have, not only all the effect and fine tone of the large Pedal Harps, but require hardly any instruction to play on them, &c. they also accompany the voice, as the Cabinet, &c. delightfully, and are every thing else to be wished. Are also be had only of E. LIGHT, the inventor, No. 8, Foley-place, Cavendish-square, where all Ladies, lovers of Music, are respectfully solicited to see and hear them; the above are so highly approved and admired, that very many of the Nobility and Ladies of Fashion have already engaged them, and who are also pleased to honour Mr. L. with their patronage.

NEW FOREIGN MUSIC.—The first QUARTERLY APPENDIX to T. BOOSEY and CO.'S GENERAL CATALOGUE of FOREIGN MUSIC is now ready for delivery, at 29, Holles-street, gratis. It contains their Recent Importations from Vienna, Leipsic, and Paris, and includes the latest compositions for the Orchestra, Violin, Violoncello, Flute, Piano-forte, and Voice. Some copies of T. Boosey and Co.'s General Catalogue, containing more than 3000 compositions, are still remaining unsold, and may be had, price 2s. 6d. which is returned to purchasers. A considerable Reduction has been made in the prices of most of the articles in T. Boosey and Co.'s General Catalogue, the principle of which has been acted upon in regulating the prices of the works which form the present Appendix.

To morrow will be published,

A DICTIONARY of MUSICAL CHORDS, by which every modulation through the twelve half tones may be instantly found done, in upwards of fifty circles, plain and diversified. Also a new classification of the Diminished Seventh, Rules for comprehending Rhythms and Accent thoroughly; Suspension, anticipation, arrangement of a full score, &c. &c Prefatory Remarks, and a few simplified rules of Musical Science, price One Guinea. By GEORGE WARE. To be had of the Author only, at No. 12, Tavistock-row, South side of Covent Garden.—NEW MUSIC FOR THE PIANO FORTE, Dalkeney Park, Scottish Air, with variation, Dedicated to the Right Hon. the Countess of Rosebery. Fully Allen, Rondo. Dedicated to the Hon. Georgina A. H. Elphinstone. La Merlo, Dedicated to Miss Dunscombe. Preludes, &c. &c. Shortly will be published, TWELVE STUDIES for the VIOLIN, and a Work on Singing, and the Management of the Human Voice.—N.B. Pupils Educated for the Profession.—May 25, 1823.

MAGNIFICENT MASQUERADE and CARNIVAL, under the immediate patronage of several of the Nobility.—The Nobility and Public are respectfully informed, that a Magnificent MASQUERADE and CARNIVAL will take place at the ARGYLL ROOMS, on Thursday, the 5th of June next. Full particulars will be duly announced. For tickets, &c. apply to the COMMITTEE, at Mr. Charles Wright's, wine-merchant, next to the King's Theatre and Opera Colonnade, Haymarket, who will supply the Wine on the above occasion.

CLARI; or the MAID of MILAN.—The following Music in this Opera is published:—The highly popular Ballad, "Home! sweet home!" and the Song, "O light bounds the heart!" sung by Miss M. Tree; "Little Love is a mischievous boy," sung by Miss Love; the Duet with Master Longhurst, "Yes, yes, I read it in those eyes;" the Duet, "No smiles more bewitching to morrow;" and the Serenade, "Sleep, gentle Lady!"—all composed by Henry R. Bishop. It is respectfully announced that the rest of the Music will be ready in a day or two.—Goulding, D'Almaine, Potter, and Co. 20, Soho-square.

UNDER THE PATRONAGE OF HIS MOST GRACIOUS MAJESTY.

MR. CHARLES EGAN, PROFESSOR of the HARP to Her Royal Highness the Princess Augusta, most respectfully begs to announce, that he continues to give instruction on the Harp. His residence is 26, Bryanstone-street, Portman-square; where may be had the Royal Portable Irish and other Harps, manufactured by the Inventor, John Egan, Dawson-street, Dublin. Harp-maker to His Majesty.

DOCTOR CALLCOTT.—The Public are most respectfully informed, that, in the course of the present year, the Family of the above eminent Composer intend to PUBLISH a COLLECTION of his most admired WORKS, with a Memoir of the Author, written by WM. HORSLEY, Mus. Bac. Oxon. The Subscriber's Copies only will be accompanied with a Portrait of Dr. Callcott, engraved by F. C. Lewis, after a Picture painted by A. W. Callcott, R.A.—Further particulars may be had at all the principal Music Shops throughout the kingdom, where also Subscriptions are received.

ROYAL GARDENS VAUXHALL.—The Grand Gala and Amusements which have given such universal satisfaction last week, will be repeated TO-MORROW, WEDNESDAY, and FRIDAY Evenings; on the latter Mr. Brown's Engagement terminates. The Ballet increases nightly in attraction, and Mr. Blackmore's astonishing skill on the Slack and Tight Rope draws forth bursts of applause every night. The Fire Works to-morrow are by Mr. D'Ernst, one of the principal engineers at His Majesty's Coronation, being the first night of his displaying his Pyrotechnical skill at Vauxhall.—Doors open at 7, Concert commences at 8; admission 3s. 6d.: Supper Boxes may be engaged. Admissions for the season or single night may be had.

ADELPHI THEATRE, STRAND.—On Monday, and during the week, an Entertainment, in Three Parts, called, Trifles Light as Air. Part I. and Part II. by Mr. Wilkinson. Part III. by Mr. Reeve. The whole to conclude with Mr. Reeve's admired Imitations of the principal London Performers.

PRIVATE TUITION.—A Member of Trinity College, Cambridge, wishes to undertake the early EDUCATION of the Son or Sons of any Nobleman or Gentleman, provided his situation in the Family be rendered comfortable.—Address (if by letter post-paid) Y. Z. Messrs. Harwood and Swale, Booksellers, No. 21, Great Russel-street, Bedford-square, or Post-office Bedford.

A MARRIED and BENEFICED CLERGYMAN, formerly Tutor to a Nobleman of the highest rank, and subsequently receiving a few Pupils into his house, a moderate distance from London, has now a VACANCY. Letters to be addressed to the Rev. A. B., Mr. Hayes, bookseller, 8, Henrietta-street, Covent-garden, London.

CORONATION.—HENRY ASTON BARKER'S PANORAMA, Leicester-square.—Now Open, a Grand Representation of the CORONATION PROCESSION, with Portraits of His MAJESTY, GEORGE the FOURTH, QUEEN CAROLINE, and several others in particular of the late Marquis of LONDONDERRY, in the full Habit of the Order of the Garter. The Panorama exhibits at least Thirty Thousand Figures!!!—A VIEW of LAUSANNE, with the LAKE of GENEVA, is also open.—Admittance to each Painting, 1s.

MISS LINWOOD'S GALLERIES of PICTURES, in Leicester-square, are RE-OPENED with new DECORATIONS, ALTERATIONS, and ADDITIONS, and will continue open every day, (Sundays excepted) from nine o'clock in the morning until dark. Admittance, 2s. Children, 1s.

BRITISH INSTITUTION, PALL-MALL.—The Gallery, with a selection of Pictures by Sir Joshua Reynolds, and of the Italian, Spanish, Flemish, and Dutch Schools, IS OPEN daily, from ten in the morning until six in the evening. (By order)

Admission 1s. Catalogue 1s. JOHN YOUNG, Keeper.

The subscribers to the print from Mr. West's picture of "Our Saviour healing the Sick in the Temple," who have not already received their impressions, may receive them upon payment of the remainder of their subscriptions, at the British Institution.

GREAT ROOM, SPRING GARDENS.—NOVELTY.—MARSHALL'S Grand Historical Perispheric PANORAMA of the CEREMONY of the CORONATION, the Coronation Procession, and the Banquet, painted on 10,000 square feet of canvas, and displaying nearly 100,000 figures, upwards of 100 of the principal characters on the foreground the size of life. The movement of the Panorama gives such an imposing and striking illusion, that the spectators are led to believe themselves present at the different splendid ceremonies it represents; the whole accompanied by a full Military Band, assisted by a Finger Organ and Trumpets, who perform the Coronation Music.—IS NOW OPEN.—Day Exhibitions at 12, 1, 2, 3, and 4 o'clock; and in the Evening, brilliantly illuminated with gas, at 7, 8, and 9 o'clock.—Admission, Boxes, 2s. Gallery, 1s.; Descriptive Book, 6d.

THE COSMORAMA is RE-OPENED at No. 209, Regent-street, (3 doors north of Conduit-street) where galleries have been constructed so as to admit day-light, which considerably improves the illusion, and obviates the heat and obscurity produced by the use of artificial light. 14 Views are equally divided between two galleries; one appropriated to those of Europe and America, amongst which are Mont Blanc, the Palace and Gardens of Versailles, and the Moorish Mosque at Cordova; the other to those of Asia and Africa, amongst which are three of the magnificent Ruins of Palmyra, and one of the Forest of Lebanon.—Open from ten till dusk.—Admittance to each Gallery, one shilling.

THEATRE of ANATOMY, Blenheim-street, Great Marlborough-street.—The Summer Course of LECTURES on ANATOMY, PHYSIOLOGY, and SURGERY, will be commenced on Monday, the 9th of June, at 7 o'clock in the morning. By JOSHUA BROOKS, F.R.S. F.L.S. Soc. Cæs. Nat. Cur. Mosq. Soc. &c. &c.—☞ The inconveniences usually attending Anatomical investigations are counteracted by an antiseptic process.

ORIENTAL LANGUAGES.—The HINDOOSTANEE and PERSIAN LANGUAGES TAUGHT by a Gentleman educated at the College of Fort William, in Bengal. Schools attended in the neighbourhood of London.—For cards of address apply to Mr. Toby, Bookseller, 18, King's-road, Sloane-square, Chelsea.

EMPLOYMENT suitable for a WIDOW, or any Female of respectability.—A most respectable Lodging House, complete, to be disposed of, by which, if managed by an industrious female, as it has been for the last 15 years, a genteel and comfortable living may be obtained. The house is situate near Soho-square, and is convenient and roomy. A reasonable premium is expected for the Lease; the Furniture and Fixtures as they stand to be taken at a fair valuation. It will require about 250l. to take possession.—Address (post paid) A. B. care of Mr. Lindsay, 7, St. Martin's-lane, Charing-cross.

No. 11, New Bridge street, May 24, 1823.

METROPOLITAN LITERARY INSTITUTION.—The Proprietors and the Public are respectfully informed, that the Honorary Secretary's Second Lecture on Poetry will be given on Friday Next, the 30th inst. at seven o'clock in the evening precisely; and the Third on Tuesday, the 6th of June; that Mr. Wood's Second Lecture on Phrenology will be given on Tuesday, the 27th inst.; and on Tuesday, the 3d of June; all at the same hour of the evening.

JAMES JENNINGS, Hon. Sec.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—Mr. W. BEACALL, Surgeon Dentist, respectfully informs his Friends, the Nobility and Public, that he has REMOVED to No. 13, Newman-street, Oxford-street, where he hopes, by continued exertions in the mechanical science of his profession, to merit a continuance of that patronage he has hitherto so liberally received. Mr. B. continues to supply the loss of Teeth, with Natural or Artificial in a superior manner, without the least pain, from a single tooth to a complete set, AT LITTLE MORE THAN ONE HALF THE REGULAR PRICES. Teeth cleaned, if ever so discoloured, and rendered white and beautiful. Decayed teeth or stumps extracted or stopped, to prevent irritation on the nerve. Every operation on the Teeth and Gums. Attends at home from Ten till Four.

A COMPLETE SUIT OF DRAWING-ROOM FURNITURE, consisting of Silk Curtains, real Rosewood Chairs and Tables; two very superior Chandeliers, with the handsomest Pier Glass and Table in London, and will be sold at half the usual price by Nias and Co. Agents, 32, Berners-street, Oxford-street.

LAST NIGHT'S GAZETTE.

WAR OFFICE, May 24, 1823.

1st Reg. of Dragoon Guards: Lieut. G. F. Clarke to be Lieut. vice Smith, exch. —4th Ditto: Brev. Lieut.-Col. R. Ross to be Lieut.-Col. vice Sherlock, ret. Capt. T. Hutton to be Maj. vice Ross; Lieut. D. L. Beamish to be Capt. vice Hutton; Cornet H. Faunt to be Lieut. vice Beamish; Brev. G. C. Ogle to be Cornet, vice Faunt.—8th Reg. of Light Dragoons: Lieut. J. Smith to be Lieut. vice Clarke, ex.—Coldstream Reg. of Foot Guards: Lieut. W. Serjeantson to be Lieut. and Capt. vice Bligh, ret.—19th Reg. of Foot: Capt. M. W. Ford to be Paymaster, vice Bonkes, ex.—42d Ditto: Ens. C. Clarke to be Lieut. vice Strange deo. C. K. Macdonald, Gent. to be Ensign, vice Clark.—55th Ditto: G. Knox, Gent. to be Ensign, vice Dixon.—67th Ditto: Lieut. W. Blair to be Paymaster, vice Pitford, dec.—88th Ditto: Sub-Major Duff to be Adj. (with the rank of Ensign), vice Hinds, dec.—91st Ditto: Brev.-Major J. M. Wardrop to be Major, vice Waterhouse, dec.; Lieut. S. Jenkins to be Capt. vice Wardrop.—Cape Corps: Major G. S. Fraser to be Lieut.-Col.—Cape Corps (Infantry): Brev.-Major Lord G. Lennox to be Major, vice Fraser, prom.—Royal African Colonial Corps: M. O'Meara, Gent. to be Ensign, vice Edwards, dec.—Royal Reg. of Artillery: First Lieut. T. Desbrisay to be First Lieut. vice Boyle.—Commissions in the Montgomeryshire Yeomanry Cavalry: R. Jeffries and J. D. Corrie to be Cornets.

BANKRUPTCIES SUPERSEDED.

P. MORGANTI, East-street, Brighton, jeweller—S. FIELD, Richmond, wine and spirit-merchant.

BANKRUPTS.

R. PUGLAN, Leeds, merchant—J. COLE, Wolverhampton, carrier—G. LEIGH and W. TOPPIL, Tyldsley, Lancashire, cotton-printers—S. FIELD, Spur Inn, Southwark, wine merchant—W. and J. SPARKS, Frome-Selwood, grocers—J. HUTTON, Abchurch-lane, painter and glazier—L. J. GOUDAU, Hay-Market, hotel keeper—W. NELSON, Albion-place, brewer.

ARTIFICIAL TEETH.—The rude and unskilful attempts constantly made to supply these substitutes for the masticatory organ, and the disgust which delicacy suffers from the unpleasantry attending them when permanently fixed, have deterred many from adopting the aid and comfort they are capable of affording, independent of the assistance they may contribute to digestion and consequent health. The ingenious application of mechanical science will enable us to obviate all these inconveniences, and allow the wearer at all times to keep the mouth in a state of perfect cleanliness, and to enjoy, in the business of mastication, articulation, &c. with decided ease and comfort.—Mr. NICHOLLES begs to state, that he is in constant attendance from ten to four, and will be happy to give ocular demonstration of the comforts derived from his efforts, under every circumstance of simple and complicated deficiency.—115, Fleet-st.

A VERY GREAT SAVING.—GENUINE LAVENDER WATER and ESPRIT de ROSE may be had retail at the Manufactory, 3 Gloucester-place, near Smith-street, King's road, Chelsea, at about half the usual cost, of such superior strength and fragrance as to defy all competition. Sold also by Mr. Sharpus, china man, Cockspur street; Miss Cole, 30 Speldhurst-street, Burton-crescent; and Mr. Lotts, 32, Cornhill.—All orders by post to be addressed to the Manufactory, and less than 1 dozen pints of Lavender Water can be had at the exportation price.

CHAMPAGNES.—CHARLES WRIGHT, Wine Merchant to His R. H. the Duke of Clarence, next to the King's and opposite the Haymarket Theatres, Opera Colonnade, London, is now landing CHAMPAGNES: ROUGE ET BLANC, first quality, brilliant condition, (G. Pris, Suleau Avize, growers,) 41.4s. per doz.; CLARET, ST. JULIEN ET LA ROSE 63s.

OLD PORT, 36s.; SHERRY, superior, 36s.; and CAPE MADEIRA, 16s. per dozen. A 3-dozen hamper, containing one dozen of each of these wines, bottles, &c. for 5l. and so in proportion. MADEIRA, VIDONIA, TENERIFFE, CALCAVELLA, 40s. per dozen; OLD COGNAC BRANDY, 23s. 6d. per gallon, and fine OLD RUM 15s. 6d. Fresh empty Wine Pipes 17s. each. Postage to be paid, and no credit given.—CYDER, 7s. 6d. per dozen, by 2 dozen.

W. S. SARGENSON, No. 5, Colonnade, Pall-mall, respectfully entreats the curious in rich old WINES and SHERRY, to inspect his present STOCK, which has already met the approbation of many connoisseurs. The Selections are made from the first Vintages for the last twelve years, particularly the following:—Hermitage of St. George, reduced to 100s. per dozen: Old Port, from 40s. to 45s. ditto: Superior Crusted, 48 ditto; E. I. Madeira, 60s. ditto: W. I. Ditto, 52s. ditto: Fine Old Sherry 40s. to 45s. ditto: Pale Ditto, very old, 48s. ditto; Cape Madeira, a fine Pale Wine, 19s. to 24s.; Rum, Brandy and Hollands, finest flavours, and import strength. Orders from the Country and the Trade particularly attended to. He invites a competition with any House in the Metropolis.—Champagne just imported, in the highest perfection.

COMMUNICATION WITH DUBLIN.—The Public are respectfully informed, that the ST. PATRICK Steam Packet will pursue her line of SAILING throughout this month (May) as follows:—From Bristol, Thursday, 15th May; Tuesday, 20th; Saturday, 24th; Thursday, 29th. From Dublin, Saturday, 17th May; Thursday, 22d; Tuesday, 27th; Saturday, 31st; for further information, apply (post paid) to the following agents of the St. Patrick Steam Packet Company:—Mr. J. Lancaster, 12, Regent-street, Pall Mall, London; Mr. G. Hyde, Dublin; Mr. D. M'Vicar, Liverpool; and Mr. Protheroe, Park-end Coal Wharf, Bristol.

STEAM PACKET between SOUTHAMPTON, PORTSMOUTH, and HAVRE. The large and fast-sailing Steam Packet, TRITON, will leave Southampton on TUESDAY, June 2, and continue her trips twice a week.

PASSAGE to CORUNNA, LISBON, and CADIZ.—The remarkably fine STEAM PACKET, ROYAL GEORGE, 300 tons, will SAIL from the River, for the above Ports, on the 4th June, calling at Plymouth and Guernsey. This vessel was built expressly for the Foreign Trade, and is fitted up in the most commodious and elegant style for Passengers. Is now lying at Blackwall; GEORGE LIND, Commander.—For Freight or Passage, apply at the Steam Packet Office, No. 12, Regent-street, Pall-mall, or to JOHN PIRIE and Co. 3, Freeman's-court, Cornhill.

DR. AGER, Fellow of the Royal College of Physicians, &c. will begin his next Course of LECTURES and Examinations on the Theory and Practice of Physic, Chemistry and the Materia Medica, at his Theatre, 69, Margaret-street, Cavendish Square, on Monday, June 9, at 8 in the Morning.—Three Courses are given every year, each occupying nearly 4 months. Further particulars may be known by applying to Dr. Ager, at his residence, above-mentioned.

MONEY on EQUITABLE TERMS.—The Advertiser advances Money to any extent, at moderate interest, whether on Freehold, Copyhold, Leasehold, Litehold, Funded, Church Livings, or other ample Security, and assures those who may honour him with their confidence, that they will experience treatment the most candid, liberal, and explicit, though similar business is sometimes viewed with mistrust, from the mal-practices of disreputable people.—Letters, post-paid, to A. Z. care of Mr. Williams, glover, Lower Temple-lane, Fleet-street, will receive immediate attention; where also a card of address may be had.—Reversions are purchased.

TWO ELEGANT CARRIAGES to be SOLD, the property of a Gentleman.—A LIGHT BAROUCHE, with dos-a-dos seat inside, barouche seat in front, pole, and handsome harness, complete for a pair of horses, in complete repair, and equal to new.—Also, a new an elegan CHARIOT, finished in a superior style, with a barouche seat in front, to remove behind at pleasure and a high dashing leather; will form a complete town or travelling carriage. May be seen at Messrs. Slade and Son, 9, High-street, Islington.

THE NEW MONTHLY MAGAZINE, for June 1, will contain an interesting Memoir of the present Lord Chancellor-General, Mr. Joy—Two Songs, by Thomas Campbell, Esq. and nearly 30 other Original Articles.

The Public are respectfully informed, that the Numbers of this Work, which were out of print, having been reprinted, Complete Sets, from the commencement in 1821, may now be had, price 3s. 6d. each Number, or in Volumes, handsome half boards, 7s. 6d. each, and those who desire to commence taking it are requested to send their orders forthwith to any Bookseller, Stationer, or News-vender, in their neighbourhood, by whom it will be regularly supplied. It may also be exported to Friends abroad, by application to the General Post Office, or to any local Post Master.

This Magazine, which was commenced on the 1st of January, 1821, on a new and very improved plan, has the advantage of being conducted by a gentleman of distinguished eminence in the literary world, aided by an extensive circle of contributing friends, among whom are also many of the first celebrity in the republic of letters.

Each Number contains about 150 pages of letter-press, handsomely printed, (comprising more matter than is usually contained in an ordinary 8vo. volume) 100 pages of which are devoted to Original Papers on Subjects of Literature, Philosophy, Morals, Manners, &c. and the remaining 50 to a Review of all interesting New Publications, Foreign as well as English—Biographical Notices of Distinguished Characters—Essays on the Fine Arts, Music, and the Drama—Literary and Scientific Varieties, New Inventions, Discoveries, and Improvements—Rural Economy—Meteorological, Agricultural, and Commercial Reports, Political Events, and Important Occurrences, throughout Great Britain, arranged under the several Counties.

London: Printed for Henry Colburn and Co. Conduit-street; and sold by Bell and Bradfute, Edinburgh; and John Cumming, Dublin.

TUESDAY'S GAZETTE.

PARTNERSHIPS DISSOLVED.

J. and J. Seagrim, jun. and H. J. Seagrim, Wilton, Wilts, and Newgate-street, London, carpet-manufacturers—M'Lachlan and Carson, Derby, drapers—White and Walton, Sheffield, carpenters—Gladwin and Aikin, Derby, painters, —R. and W. Town, Ulverston, Lancaster, mercers—Dale and Bibby, Weinetb, Chester, bleachers—A. and A. Dickson, jun. and sen. Beattie, D. and A. Laing, Denholm, and Wilton mill, near Hawick, stocking manufacturers—Dixon J. and W. Taylor, and Brandon, Packer's court, Coleman-street, woollen-warehousemen—Wilkinson and Hazledine, Stayley-bridge, Lancaster, machine-makers—Jenking and Simpson, Birmingham, coach-builders—Thorneycroft and Page, Willenhall, Stafford, iron merchants.

BANKRUPTCY SUPERSEDED.

W. R. GLASIER, Park-street, Westminster, money-scrivener.

BANKRUPTS.

E. BURGES and J. GATE, Portsmouth, brewers—T. BURRY, Little Hampton, Sussex, grocer—G. HALFORD, Shipton-upon-Stower, auctioneer—J. MILBURN, Newcastle-upon-Tyne, woollen-draper—J. ROWLEY, Stourport, timber-merchant—G. BROWN, New Bond-street, oilman.

DIVIDENDS.

At the Court of Commissioners of Bankrupts:—June 10, W. C. Keene, Marylebone-lane, farrier—May 24, W. Tate, Caleston-street, bookseller—June 10, W. Bewley, Manchester, tailor—June 17, W. G. Peyton, Upper Thames-street, merchant—June 17, G. Leyburn, Bishopsgate-street, provision-merchant—June 14, S. Garrod, Paddington street, Marylebone, bookseller—June 14, T. Moss, Vauxhall, potter.

June 11, E. James and R. Weston, Manchester, hop-merchants.

CERTIFICATES—June 10.

W. Ladkin, Leir, Leicester, victualler—E. Glover, jun. Bitteswell, Leicester, horse-dealer—J. Penfold, Watling-street, warehouseman—R. Paterson and W. Nicol, Harrow-road, Paddington, nurserymen—J. Bainbridge, Queen-street, Cheapside, woollen-draper—O. Mills, Warwick, wine-merchant—J. Wilson, Norland-hall, York, farmer.

IMPERIAL PARLIAMENT.

HOUSE OF LORDS.

THURSDAY.

The Magistrates Apprentices, and the Bristol and Brighton Gas Bills, were read a first time.

Petitions were presented from Windham and East Dereham, in Norfolk, against slavery.

THE MARQUIS OF LANSDOWNE asked, whether Ministers had any knowledge of a treaty for the military occupation of Switzerland by Austria.

THE EARL OF LIVERPOOL had never heard of such a report till the Noble Marquis mentioned it, nor did he believe such a treaty existed.

FRIDAY.

The Royal Assent was given, by commission, to the Irish Militia Reduction, the Quorum Magistrates, the Apprentices, the Union Duties, Allardyce's Divorce, and above seventy Private Bills.

Petitions were presented from Newcastle-under-Lyme, against slavery, and from Newark-upon-Trent, against granting concessions to Roman Catholics.

The Irish Commercial Intercourse Bill was passed.

The Marriage Act Amendment Bill is fixed for Tuesday, when the Lord are summoned.

The Irish County Treasurers' Bill passed through a Committee.

HOUSE OF COMMONS.

WEDNESDAY.

Petitions were presented from the Linen Manufacturers in Scotland, against any alteration of the Linen Laws; from Cornwall and Bristol, against the Coal Duties; from Leicester, against the Warehousing Bill; from Poole and Durham, against the Slave Trade; from Haddington and Fife, complaining of the low price of tallow; from Kendal, praying for a repeal of the Wool Duties; from the Ship-owners of Hull, respecting the Duties on East India Sugar; from the inhabitants of Westminster, (signed by 3000 persons) and Barnard Castle, against the Insolvent Debtors' Act; from the Agriculturists of Devonshire, complaining of distress: from Sudbury, against the Silk Manufacturers' Bill.

MR. F. BUXTON presented a petition, signed by 11,000 persons, against the Silk Bill. The Hon. Member said it had been signed within three days, and not one of the persons signing was under twenty years of age. He wished the petitioners to be heard by Counsel.

MR. HUME and MR. ELLICE deprecated any impediment to the progress of the Bill.

MR. HALDIMAND, MR. RICARDO, and MR. W. SMITH were of opinion the Bill would be useful.

MR. S. WORTLEY recommended an examination of witnesses on both sides, in a Committee up stairs.

MR. PHILLIPS and MR. D. BROWNE wished for time to consider the Bill.

MR. HUSKISSON observed that delay would not be useful. When the Act originally passed, there were no manufacturers in the country, now, if it was not repealed Spitalfields would be deserted, for manufactures were established in various parts of the country. To postpone the Bill would be prejudicial to the manufacturers and petitioners.

MR. CALCRAFT thought that time ought to be given to all parties to understand the Bill.

MR. S. RICE said, the silk manufacturers in Ireland prayed to be entirely exempt from the operations of the Bill.

The Petition was laid on the table.

Petitions to the same effect from the Tradesmen of Spitalfields, from the parish of Bethnal Green, and Mile End New Town, were presented.

SIR J. MACINTOSH, in reference to the pretensions of Russia to certain maritime rights over a tract of ocean, extending from the North West Coast of America to the North East Coast of Asia, asked, whether the British Cabinet had received any information of American vessels being warned off that portion of the ocean, and whether any answer had been received to the protest of the Marquis of Londonderry to the Russian Government on the subject.

MR. SECRETARY CANNING replied, that no official information had been received, but the protest alluded to had been renewed at the Congress at Verona, and since with the Russian Government. At present negotiations were pending at St. Petersburgh, in consequence of instructions sent to our Minister.

MR. BROUGHAM asked why two houses, in New-street, Spring-Gardens, were retained for the service of the Admiralty.

SIR G. COCKBURN said, one of the houses was retained for an office, the other was occupied by the Paymaster of Marines; but a saving of 500l. would be effected when the new house in progress should be built.

MR. S. RICE presented a petition from Belfast, complaining of certain charges on the Irish Coasting Trade. He wished to refer the petition to the Committee on Foreign Trade.

MR. HUSKISSON assured the Hon. Member that the attention of the Committee was directed.

MR. ELLICE was anxious to ascertain if Government intended to lower the rates of shipping charges in the Colonies on British vessels.

MR. HUSKISSON could not make any declaration on the subject—most of those charges were imposed by local colonial regulations, with which it was difficult to interfere. With respect to the Petition, the Hon. Member might depend upon attention being paid to the prayer, and that a perfect equality should subsist in the harbour charges.

MR. ELLICE said there were no colonial governments in Demerara, Trinidad, and St. Lucia, and in those islands the charges were highest.

The Petition was referred to the Committee on Foreign Trade.

MR. SYKES moved for leave to bring in a Bill to repeal the Duties on Tallow Candles. The Hon. Member contended that the agriculturist had not been relieved by the repeal of the Assessed Taxes—the repeal of the duty on tallow would be of material benefit to agriculture, as the tax on candles for England and Scotland, paid into the Exchequer, amounted to 329,000l. In Ireland there was no tax on candles, while in England the expence of collecting the tax was 17 per cent. on the gross, and 20 per cent. on the net receipts; all other branches of the excise were collected at the rate of 3l. 16s. 1d. per cent.; it was a tax which fell peculiarly heavy on the poor man, for in winter, if he earned only 20d. per day he had 3d. to pay for light. He thought a substitute could be found for this tax if the House would consent to the repeal.

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE EXCHEQUER thought the tax was not so oppressive as the Hon. Member imagined, besides, it was impossible to take off so large a sum as 320,000l. In the course of the session there had been a reduction of 2,300,000l. He had also expressed the intention of the Government to make a large reduction in the duty on Irish and Scotch spirits. As the tax had gone on increasing for a century, that was a proof that the tax had not fallen very heavily on the public. The remaining tax on salt would cease in 1825, and the House would look to the state of the Revenue, if both taxes should finally cease was also his intention to propose that the Lottery should finally cease after the present year. But should the present tax be repealed, it would be impossible for Ministers to carry their other plans into execution. Much had been done, and he hoped much would still be done, in an economical collection of the Revenue.

MR. CURWEN admitted that the higher classes had been relieved, but not the poor in the same proportion. At all events he thought the tax on candles used by the poor should be taken off, though it was still left on the candles (the moulds) used by the rich.

MR. MONCK supported the motion, but Mr. Sykes would not press it to a division, and the question was put and negatived.

SIR J. MACINTOSH brought the state of the Criminal Law under the consideration of the House. The Hon. Member observed, that it had been formerly said on a motion made by SIR SAMUEL ROMILLY on the same subject, that if a foreigner were to judge of the English from their penal code, he would say they were a nation of fierce barbarians. Such a person might well say that our laws were infamous in theory and impotent in practice. Such a person if he were told that the security of the subject was guarded by Habeas Corpus, and we had also discovered the principle of Representative Government, must be strongly impressed by such contradictions. In the year 1819, the House had, on his motion, appointed a Committee to inquire into the Criminal Law. In 1820, some Bills had passed in consequence of the recommendation of that Committee. His expectations had indeed been disappointed; but the little done then was all that had been effected since the reign of Edward the Sixth. Ten capital enactments had been removed from the Statute Book. In the last year the House came to a resolution to inquire into the nature of the Criminal Code. He was happy to find, that in the new Marriage Bills, no less than five of the felonies he had proposed to do away had been removed by those by whom, at one time, they had been most vehemently opposed.—The Hon. Member contended for the necessity of diminishing the severities of the Penal Code. He had a series of determinations of four years in that House in favour of the reformation he meant to propose. He was called on to propose to the House resolutions founded on its own determinations. No principle could be more erroneous than that the mischief of the action should be the sole measure of the punishment. Every attempt to force the maximum of punishment beyond the sympathy of mankind must invariably prove unavailing. It was on that account that religious persecution not only failed to produce the sought for effect, but are directly opposite. The blood of the martyr had been always the seed of the Church. The man who should imbibe his moral feelings from the inimical Code of England, would learn to regard the cutting down of a tree, or the forging of a bank-note, in the same light as the murder of a parent, or the betrayal of one's country. The hearts of all good men were alienated from such cruel laws, for there was no proportion between the punishment and the crime. In his view, every capital punishment, for a minor offence, weakened the security of human life. He appealed to the whole experience since the revolution to shew, that the extension of power of pardon in the Crown, had increased the numbers of crime. The venerable law-giver of the Hebrews had inflicted the punishment of death for the stealer of man. Thus, he denounced the utmost vengeance of the law against those who dealt in the infamous Slave Trade. It was well known that in France there were only 6 capital felonies while we had 800; and the disproportion of capital convictions shewed the folly of the one code, and the proportionate wisdom of the other. In France capital offences had decreased, though their penal laws were so few, while ours were increasing.—The Hon. Member then detailed the substance of his resolutions. He wished modifications in cases of forgery, and in felonies created by the Marriage Laws, in horse-stealing, sheep-stealing, cattle-stealing, and in stealing from shops and dwelling-houses. In these cases one man out of 66 only was executed, and this was absurdly thought to operate as a warning on the 65 who escaped. Wherever there was large property, there was a larger power of protecting it; and therefore, he was not sure if he would not wish the crime of stealing from the poor more penal than stealing from the rich. He then enumerated the Acts which he wished to have repealed, relating to threatening letters, cutting down banks of rivers, Greenwich Out-pensioners, and others. With respect to sheep-stealing, the facility of getting into grounds was much greater before 1740 than now.—Hore-stealing was the only case of cattle-stealing which had the merit of antiquity. With respect to the crime of forgery there had been a great abatement since the withdrawing of the small notes from circulation, which must be a very great consolation to the advocates for a return to cash payments. No case that could be mentioned had excited general compassion more than cases of forgery; he therefore wished to relieve the laws from that odium. He would say nothing respecting secondary punishments, because the law of transportation would soon be brought before the House. The number of our capital offences, and the infrequency of the executions, rendered them, when they occurred, as only so many frivolous ceremonies; for while the precepts of religion and morality were lavished on the convicts, they knew that execution was not to pass upon them. He wished to relieve the judges from the painful necessity of passing sentence of death when they knew that execution would not follow. The last point was, the treatment of the bodies of suicides and traitors. These were punishments on that which could not feel, and must, therefore, only have the effect of punishing those who felt an affection for, or an attachment towards the offenders. He would not touch the punishment in the case of high treason, but he would wish to take away the punishment of goods and chattels in cases of suicide. The principal guilt of a suicide was his withdrawing his affectionate support of a father from his family; and what did the law of England do, but step in to make them more miserable by depriving the children of the small savings of the father, while if he died possessed of large landed property, the law could not and did not touch that. In the very last case of high treason, the persons entrusted with carrying the whole sentence into effect seemed conscious of its odiousness, for the operation was masked—the first time that justice was executed in disguise in this country; and there was no sound heard from the populace until a burst of indignation arose from them when the first bloody head was held up to their view.—In almost all cases of suicide by the rich, verdicts of insanity were returned; while among the poor alone verdicts of Felo de se were given in by the Jurymen. He would ask any man to say whether suicide was—whatever its moral turpitude might be—an offence cognizable by human laws: the effect of which was to relieve and withdraw the person from all human punishment. The Hon. Member concluded with proposing certain resolutions, viz.:—That it is expedient to take away the punishment of death, in cases of larcenies committed in shops, in dwelling-houses, and on navigable rivers; to repeal the 9th of Geo. 1. commonly called the Black Act; that of Geo. 2. commonly called the Marriage Act; that of James 1.; also of Geo. 2. inflicting the punishment of death on persons for breaking down the banks of rivers; to take away the punishment of death in cases of horse-stealing, sheep-stealing, and forgery; and in lieu thereof, substitute the punishment of transportation or imprisonment; to take away the punishment on felons returned from transportation. Also, to provide that Judges should not pass sentence of death, in any case, where it was not likely that the punishment would be inflicted; and to do away the forfeiture of the goods and chattels of persons who may have committed suicide.

MR. SECRETARY PEEL considered the resolutions as nothing less than sweeping off the most important parts of the criminal laws of this country. He had no objection to accede to a proposition for taking liberation, and he should propose a measure for amending the criminal laws. The Hon. and Learned Gent. would be deceived in his expectations, if he thought that crime would be decreased by depriving the Government of its power of pardoning crimes of themselves by law punishable by death. The Hon. Gentleman did not intend to touch the crime of arson; yet, out of 65 convictions for that offence, there were only 30 executed. In the case of burglary, which the Hon. Gent. also left untouched, the difference between the convictions and executions were far more apparent. He quoted the opinion of Mr. Burke, as to the rioters in 1780; and the number of circumstances pressed by him to reduce the number of executions, none of which could be taken into consideration by the law. This shewed the necessity of leaving a wide discretion to the Executive Government to make a strong distinction between convictions and execution.—The Right Hon. Gent. then enumerated the capital punishments consequent upon conviction. In the case of maliciously killing and maiming cattle, only two instances of execution had taken place in 16 years; but, as a change had been urged, he was inclined to alter this punishment to transportation. So in the case of maliciously cutting down trees, he was prepared to change the capital punishment to transportation for life. In 16 years there had been two convictions and one execution for this offence. So, in the case of cutting down the bank of a river, which was, at present, a capital offence, but for which there had not been an execution for 16 years; he was ready to mitigate the punishment in this case to transportation. The offence was that of sending threatening letters. If a man sent a letter demanding venison he was liable to be hanged; whilst for sending a letter, accusing an individual of an abominable crime, the punishment was transportation for seven years. He considered the last as by far the most atrocious crime, and he should propose an increase of punishment in that respect. The Right Honourable Gentleman then adverted to the course which had present prevailed, of bringing up a number of individuals to receive sentence passed on them, when there was no intention of carrying sentence into effect. He could not but consider this practice as tending greatly to destroy the solemnity of the sentence. He had a Bill now under preparation, which had for its object, to release the Judges from the necessity of passing sentence in such cases. He intended to convert to the punishment of the Hulks, which he contended, was a most efficient one; those on board the Hulks were usefully occupied at times, on the public works, and he had it in contemplation to bring in a Bill, to enable the Court to expatriate these individuals under certain regulations, and to employ them on public works.—He would, therefore, move the previous question on the Hon. Gentleman's proposition, and leave him to bring in Bills upon any particular case, if he thought fit. He concluded, therefore, by moving the previous question.

MR. F. BUXTON expressed the disappointment he felt at the speech of the Right Hon. Gent. which, he said, went to effect nothing in the way of saving human life, and must declare his hopes that the Right Hon. Friend would press his motion to a division.

MR. SCARLETT had felt great satisfaction in hearing the Right Hon. Gent's Speech, which, although it did not go so far as he had hoped, still conceded much. His late excellent friend Sir S. Romilly had said the best mode of repressing crime would be not by severity of punishment, but by making the punishment agree with the feelings of mankind. He was most happy to find this principle now adopted, though his Hon. and lamented Friend had not lived to see his principle carried into effect.

THE ATTORNEY-GENERAL said, the resolution of the Hon. mover on this occasion proposed to the House to adopt a sweeping resolution applying to all larcenies, though to some of them neither the House nor the Learned Gent. had at all adverted. This was taking the House by surprize—a surprize which originated in the Hon. and Learned Gent. having declined to communicate to any one, even to his friend near him, the nature of his motion.

MR. R. MARTIN hoped the Hon. Gent. would bring in a Bill to regulate the punishment of forgery, proportioning the punishment to the atrocity of the crime.

SIR J. MACKINTOSH replied, and the House divided. For the previous question, 86—For the resolutions, 76—Majority against the resolutions, 10.

MR. R. MARTIN moved for leave to bring in a Bill to prevent Bull-baiting and Dog-fighting.

MR. BROUGHAM wished to know, whether his Hon. Friend intended to extend this Bill to hunting, pigeon-shooting, and fishing—as he recollected the late Mr. Windham had described the last as the most barbarous of all sports, since it inflicted double torture—it tortured the bait, and it tortured the fish.

MR. MARTIN said it was not his intention to extend the Bill to these sports.

MR. BROUGHAM observed, it would perhaps then be proper to oppose the Bill being brought in.

MR. SECRETARY PEEL said, the subject was not a fit one for legislative regulation.

MR. J. SMITH supported the motion.

MR. W. SMITH thought the sport only nourished a brutal ferocity. He should support the motion.

SIR M. W. RIDLEY would oppose the measure in every stage. If the House encouraged the motion—the next step would be to move for a Bill to prohibit cockchaffing, and catching of flies.

The House divided—For the motion, 18—Against it, 47—Majority, 29.

MR. S. RICE moved for leave to bring in a Bill to amend the law relating to Coroners in Ireland, with a view of giving them adequate compensation for their services.

MR. GOULBURN opposed the motion, as being inexpedient; but he agreed that more compensation was due. The motion was negatived.

The Scotch Sheriff's Court Bill was ordered for a third reading on the 3d of June.

THURSDAY.

Petitions were presented from the Chamber of Commerce in Belfast, from certain Merchants in Liverpool, Greenock, Dundee, the Isle of St. Vincents, Bristol, and Lame, against equalizing the Sugar Duties—from Royston, Diss, Cockermouth, and Ballantyre (Irish) against the Slave Trade—from the Chamber of Commerce in Birmingham, from the East India Company, the Merchants of Calcutta, and from Liverpool, in favour of the Bill for equalizing the Duties on Sugar—from St. Olave, Southwark, against the London Bridge Bill—from certain Table-beer Brewers against the Beer Bill—from the Hon. and Rev. W. Herbert against the Sale of Game Bill—from the Inhabitants of the Parish of Killeady, in Armagh, complaining of the expence they are put to in supporting illegitimate children, and praying that the Churchwardens might be authorized to proceed against the parents—and from the Island of St. Nevis against the four and half per cent. duties.

MR. CALCRAFT presented a petition from the Rev. G. Bereford, and the parishioners of St. Andrew, Holborn, praying to be allowed to bring in a Bill to enable them to make provision for their Clergyman, and thereby take themselves out of the Exchequer, where proceedings had been instituted against them.—The petition was referred to a Committee.

A long conversation took place on a motion of Mr. Hudleston for referring the Standing Order of the 23d of June, 1820, to a Committee to report its effect, which it was contended did not apply to the Spitalfields Bill now before the House. The Standing Order said, that no Bill should be brought relating to trade, or the alteration of laws relating to trade, or apprenticeships, into the House until the petition had undergone the consideration of a Committee of the whole House, and afterwards been referred to a Committee above stairs for them to inquire and report upon. Now, as regarded the present Bill, he contended, this Standing Order did not apply to it.—At length it was agreed to refer the Standing Order to a Committee.

MR. BROUGHAM put a similar question to the one proposed in the Lords by the Marquis of Lansdowne, respecting the occupation of the Swiss Cantons by Austrian troops. The Hon. Member said, that he understood the price they were to receive for complying with an alteration of their Constitution, was an Archduchy and an Archbishop, the power of appointing Catholic and Protestant Bishops, and above all, the cession of Geneva to the King of Sardinia. The proposition had, as he understood, been communicated to the French Minister, and his opinion had been asked. The answer was, that certainly the proposition contained matter contrary to the ancient policy of France, but still the French Government would rather see this proposition adopted than see Switzerland made a focus for jacobinism. He knew not whether all this was true, but if the least part of it was true, it would be quite sufficient.

MR. SECRETARY CANNING.—If the least part of the Hon. and Learned Gentleman's statement is too much, it may be satisfactory to him to hear that it is more than I know of.

MR. HUME said, that information had reached him that one of our cruizers had violated the Greek blockade, and brought out a vessel. The Hon. Member thought such a course unjustifiable.

MR. SECRETARY CANNING had received information to that effect, and orders had been forwarded that strict attention should be paid to the Greek and Turkish blockades.

MR. S. RICE gave notice that on the 27th of June he should bring forward his motion relative to the Lord Chief Baron of Ireland.

SIR R. HERON called the attention of the House to the enquiry into the conduct of the Sheriff of Dublin. There were no less than 80 witnesses in attendance, who were kept at a great expence to themselves, and much inconvenience. He wished the House to urge on the enquiry.

MR. CALCRAFT said he would take the sense of the House on the subject.

A new writ was ordered for Bosinney, in the room of the Hon. J. Ward, now Lord Viscount Dudley and Ward.

GENERAL GASCOIGNE moved an address to the King, to pray that he would not adopt a regulation which had been made by the Secretary at War in the case of half-pay officers residing in Ireland, who, instead of being paid in British currency, as had originally been the case, were now to be paid in the currency of Ireland, in consequence of which they sustained a very considerable loss. The Hon. Member animadverted on the changeable policy of the War-office, in enacting contradictory regulations. He was sure there was no one in the House who would not rather give a bounty to those residing at present in Ireland, than levy a tax upon them for their abode in that distracted country. All those who were serving in foreign powers received their full half pay without any deduction, which it was proposed now to mark as a stigma on Ireland. As a stigma he must consider it, when only 5,000. was to be saved by it. He could not but think that the Noble Lord had been put upon, since a Smithfield bargain had been made of the half-pay by some of the bankers, or others connected with it, to squeeze a few thousands out of the half-pay officers. The Hon. Member concluded, by moving "That an humble Address be presented to his Majesty, praying that the warrant of the 6th of March may be considered, and that the half-pay of the officers of the army and Marines, together with the military pensions and allowances to persons resident in Ireland, may be continued to be paid in British currency."

Lord Palmerston hoped the House would not be led away by the impression of the moment, and coerce government to violate the very principles of economy which they wished to be their guidance. The real question would go into a very small compass. A regulation had existed that if an officer went on half-pay when his regiment was in Ireland, he was paid ever after, whether residing in England or Ireland, in Irish currency, and vice versa. This he thought was without sense, and altered it. It was important to this question that the whole of the troops in Ireland on full pay were paid in Irish currency. If then the House decided in favour of the Hon. Member they must go on to apply the principle to the full pay troops, for surely they were even better entitled to it. This would make a difference in the pay of 12,000. a year; and then they would have to consider how far the civil officers were not entitled to the same benefit. He had no objection to continue to officers who residing in Ireland, had hitherto been paid in British currency, the same rate of payment as before. He thought that due to the faith upon which individual officers might have set aside certain arrangements for expenditure equal to what they had hitherto received. It was not necessary to make this exception with reference to the Widows' Pensions, as they were permanently established on one scale since 1812. He must, however, negative the motion, in consideration of the principle it went to establish.

Sir J. Newport thought that the rule ought to be extended to officers who resided in France and Germany.

Sir H. Vivian hoped the concession of the Noble Lord would also be applied to such Officers as were reduced from English Regiments. Although the troops on full pay received Irish currency, he hoped to see the time when that would cease, and they should be paid in British.

Mr. Hutchinson was of opinion, that since the Union no distinction should be made between Officers residing in England or Ireland.

Mr. Gratan thanked the Gallant General for his motion. No class of men was so much wanted in Ireland as Half-pay Officers.

Mr. Hume could see no reason for keeping up an unjust distinction between residence in Great Britain and Ireland.

Sir C. Lone said, that the vote for Irish Half-pay had always been in Irish money, and the vote for British Half-pay in British currency. He concurred with his Noble Friend in the modification proposed to be made.

Colonel Davies thought the modification of the Noble Lord did not go far enough.

General Gascoyne replied. Though he should withdraw the motion, he reserved to himself the right of renewing it, even in the course of the present Session.—The motion was then withdrawn.

Mr. Whitmore moved for the appointment of a Committee to enquire into the Duties paid on East and West India Sugars. The Hon. Member considered the subject, first, with reference to the consumer; and he thought no doubt could be felt that he was entitled to have his Sugar at the cheapest rate. That was the general principle, unless an exception could be proved. The price of Sugar at present was very low, and 80s. the hundred was regarded as the remunerating price. At a consumption of 160,000 tons, and a duty of 10s. the amount came to 1,600,000. to be paid by the consumer. In the year ending Jan. 1822, the exports of woollens amounted to 1,421,6491. But the most remarkable increase was in the exports of cotton in a manufactured state. The value of these was, in 1815, 109,4861. In 1822, they amounted to 1,122,3351. being an increase within that short period of more than one million in value. It had been argued that the West Indies had a right to the Sugar Trade, and that right was considered as a charter. From 1787 till 1803 there was an ad valorem duty on Sugars from the East of 7l. 10s. per cwt.; but in 1803 it was altered to a duty of 2s. per cwt. on all qualities, brown or white, while the lower qualities of West India Sugar paid 20s. and the higher qualities were raised to 24s. per cwt.

Mr. C. Ellis thought this was a question totally unfit to be sent to a Committee; it was a question of state policy and vested interests. It was whether they should entirely destroy the West India Sugar Colonies, and all the great British interests connected with them, for the purpose of encouraging certain new East Indian speculations. The Hon. Member asked for the equalization of the duties on East and West India Sugars, but he said nothing about taking off the duties on foreign sugars. All that the East India Gentlemen asked for was, not the adoption of the principles of free trade, but for the transfer of a monopoly. With regard to the Colonial system, being established, it would neither be sound policy nor justice to destroy it. The Colonies were established to favour British commerce and manufactures, and the exclusive supply between them and the country was mutual. In the Colonies a capital of 100 millions had been embarked, and the importation of a large population of negroes had been sanctioned by Parliament, who had now prevented the planters from removing them.

Mr. K. Douglas thought the House should pause before they broke down such vast interests, and examine what they really were. The amount paid for manufactures annually exported from this country to the West India Colonies, was three millions and a half; they were carried by 1,585 ships, of 438,000 tons of tonnage, and manned by 20,000 men. The Hon. Member contended, that if the restrictions were removed, East India was not a country whose capacity for trade with this country was equal to that of the West India Colonies.

Mr. Robertson contended that the state of society in India was unsuited to the labour necessary for the cultivation of sugar. He described the lower classes of the Indians as being so abject as to consider life a burden. At the time of the French Revolution the cultivation of sugar in St. Domingo was abandoned, and the price consequently rose to an enormous amount. This induced the East India Directors to encourage the cultivation of sugar, and an affluent company was formed at Bengal, who were to supply this company with sugar. But the fact was, that they were not able to supply themselves, and China and Batavia imported sugars into Madras and Bombay. The Hon. Member opposed the motion at some length.

Mr. Ricardo was convinced that no danger would arise from admitting East India sugars into a competition with West India sugars. At present, East India sugars were competing with West India sugars in every market on the Continent, and yet they could not drive the West India sugars out of the market, and under these circumstances he contended, we could not be justified in excluding East India sugars from our markets. Gentlemen had talked of the restrictions imposed on the Colonies; did they forget that the East Indies laboured under very heavy restrictions. The duties paid by the East Indies, on the importation of British commodities, were enormous. He believed, on enquiry, it would be found, that the East Indies laboured under heavier restrictions than the West Indies. It had been said our vessels and seamen employed in the West India trade would by this measure be turned adrift; then they would be employed in another quarter. So with regard to 800,000 slaves, who were to be thrown out of employ.

Mr. Marryat said, it was very easy for Gentlemen to come down to the House and rail against monopoly, and argue for free trade, whilst they had the profits of monopoly in their pockets. Those Gentlemen would act much more consistently if they would go to Leadenhall-street, and employ their eloquence against the monstrous monopoly which existed there.

Mr. Wilberforce contended, with his Hon. Friend, that the repeal of the 10s. duty would not be at all injurious to the West India Islands, but, on the contrary, a benefit. He admitted with the Hon. Member that the Sugar Trade in the West Indies would not be injured by the introduction of East India sugar, but the fact did not rest upon individual assertion, it was matter of inquiry. As to the argument that it would be injurious to the plan for the abolition of slavery, it would have a contrary effect. When sugar was dear the Negroes were worked night and day. Any change would be better for the slave, the misery of whose situation was sufficiently proved by the decrease which was continually taking place in their numbers. It appeared that under the present system we never should obtain a black population. This would be proved by one circumstance, which he would state. In Jamaica we had about 340,000 slaves, out of about 1,100,000 who had been imported. Let us for a moment reflect on this circumstance, and the mind would shrink back with horror from a contemplation of the sacrifice of human life, which had been the result of this system. He felt most sincerely for the situation of the planter, and he was convinced that the measures now recommended would be for the benefit of the West India planters; but whether for their benefit or not, he must call for inquiry.

Mr. Huskisson could not admit all the benefit which was stated as likely to arise from the adoption of the measure, neither could he consider it so injurious to the interest of the West Indies as had been described. His Hon. Friend said it was a question of inquiry. It might be proper to make inquiry into the relative duties on sugar, but certainly it was not to be made the ground of inquiry into the state of slavery. The Right Hon. Gentleman entered into a review of the question at large, and contended, that the East Indies could not advantageously supply Europe with sugar. The question now was, not where they could get sugar cheapest, but where they could get it fairly; and it was not because a state of things, obnoxious indeed, but still legal, had sprung up in our colonies, that we were to press on individuals already suffering serious inconveniences. He concluded by moving the previous question.

Mr. Money supported the motion.

Mr. C. Forbes contended that a pledge had been given last Session to submit the whole of the question to a Committee.

Mr. Wynn stated, that the pledge which was said to have been given, was only to have decided on the duty of 5s. on clayed sugar.

Mr. Whitmore replied.

The House then divided—For the Motion 34—For the previous question 161—Majority 127.

A Select Committee was appointed to enquire into the claims of Mr. M'Adam.

FRIDAY.

The House went to the House of Lords to hear the Royal Assent (for which see the Lords.)

Petitions were presented from Southwark, praying for a repeal of the Duties on Beer; from the linen-manufacturers of Perth and Dundee, against the Linen Bill; from Hants, against the Game Laws; from Uxbridge, against Slavery.

Mr. Calcraft moved the order for going into a Committee to enquire into the conduct of the Sheriff of Dublin.

Lord Viscount Cranbourne moved, as an amendment, the second reading of the Game Bill.

Mr. Calcraft said, the Hon. Member was certainly making game of the House, and hoped he would withdraw it, as a great number of witnesses were waiting in town at much expence and inconvenience.

Mr. Secretary Peel and Colonel Barry were for proceeding, for the reason stated by the Hon. Member (Mr. Calcraft).

Sir J. Graham was of opinion the enquiry might be stopped without injustice to any party—the House had enough of it.

Lord Milton was astonished his Hon. Friend should wish to stop so solemn an enquiry.

Mr. Sec. Canning did not wish to stop it, but he thought the result, so far as it had gone, did not answer the expectations of the House.

Lord Viscount Cranbourne consented to withdraw his amendment, and the House went into the Committee.

Henry Charles Serr was examined. Witness is Town Major of Dublin, recollected the riots on the 14th December, which were caused by preventing the dressing of the statue. As one of the magistrates, he took an information in which one person was committed for a capital charge under the direction of the officers of the Crown; he had no information before him which he considered bore out the capital charge, informations had been taken against Forbes, and parties had been bound over to prosecute, he believed, before the committals were made out. Witness had been a military man, and not a lawyer. Had not applied for the opinion of the crown lawyers; had been a police magistrate 15 years. It was in political cases that he resorted to the crown officers for instructions, and not in all cases. In the case of a seditious toast would report to them, if the Government recommended committal, he should acquiesce, always reported extraordinary cases as the law required it, for in some instances if he neglected a fine of 100l. would attach; had no doubt of the propriety of crimmittal in the present case, which was conspiracy with intent to murder the Lord Lieutenant.

James Gabbett, a Magistrate, spoke to the irritation respecting dressing the statue. Some individuals were wounded by the military—had committed certain persons charged with conspiracy to murder the Lord Lieutenant. Mr. Townsend, the counsel, was present when he signed the committal. Witness was made a magistrate for a work which he had written twenty years ago.—Confirmed the testimony of former witness as to the committals.

Pascal Steele was examined at Dublin Castle before the Attorney-General, Mr. Carmichael, and several others; was asked if he knew any thing about the riot at the theatre, if he subscribed for tickets, and if he was concerned in throwing the bottle?—Answered he was not, and felt indignant at the questions: was shewn a deposition at the Police-office, which he refused to sign, as it bore no resemblance to what he had said at the Castle.

William Ward, employed in the Office of Town Clerk, on the day the Bill was ignored, did not hear Sheriff Thorpe use the words imputed to him. Mr. Macnamara was not present. Witness asked the Sheriff, if the Bills were thrown out, the Sheriff put his finger on his mouth, and said—Mum! "Is Milliken here?" Knows O'Reilly.

Mr. Macnamara was called in, and the evidence of Ward being read to him, he repeated his former statement, as to what fell from the Sheriff on the subject of the Bills, but could not say it was addressed to Ward.

Mr. O'Reilly was then called in, and he repeated his evidence as to the conversation falling from the Sheriff, which he understood to be addressed to Ward. Did not hear Ward ask the Sheriff any questions.

Mr. Ward was here asked as to the point, and he positively denied the statement of the last witness. The Sheriff stayed about three minutes.

Mr. O'Reilly persisted in his statement as being a correct one. The Sheriff stayed from 15 to 20 minutes.

Colonel Barry then wished to call John Atkinson, whom he believed to be the concocter of the whole conspiracy; but Atkinson was not to be found.

Sir A. Bradley King knew nothing of the pannels—is a member of the Orange Institution—a portion of scripture and a prayer are read on admissions into the lodges. Witness is under an obligation of secrecy. Is not at liberty to state what takes place after the oath is administered. [The witness was here ordered to withdraw, having refused to say what took place. A long conversation arose, if being insisted that the Committee had a right to demand an answer, as the oath was illegal; at length it was resolved that the witness should be called in, and required to answer the question.]

Sir A. B. King was then asked, whether mention was made of the Amalekites in the admission of Orangemen? The witness still demurred to answer, not recollecting the precise words of the oath, but said he rather thought the word Amalekites was not used. Had been Deputy Grand Master some years; the obligation of the oath was more to support the law than binding in any other sense, with this exception, not to divulge any thing which the witness might have sworn to conceal.—(The witness was here pressed to answer as to the word Amalekite, to which he replied, after being warned repeatedly of the consequences of refusal, "I am aware of the responsibility in which I stand; I feel every respect for this great Assembly. I acknowledge every power the House has, but that of standing between me and my Creator. I must take the consequence of not answering.")—He was then ordered to withdraw.

Some conversation then followed with respect to the necessity of enforcing an answer.

Mr. Goulburn considered that the witness, by his last answer, had made himself directly obnoxious to the privileges of the House; and, in that case, there could be no hesitation as to the course they must pursue.

Mr. Secretary Canning said, he thought it would be well for the House to consider what was the course of proceeding they were then engaged in. The question was relative to certain things touching the Amalekites, said to be in the book of Joshua. But it behoved the House to pause in this matter, and consider in what situation they would find themselves after having committed two men to Newgate for not being able to remember a passage about the Amalekites in the book of Joshua, should it turn out, as he apprehended it would, that there was not one word on the subject from one end to the other of the Book in question.

Sir J. Newport stated, that in the 10th chapter of the Book of Joshua, mention was made of the extermination of the Amalekites.

Mr. Butterworth denied that any mention was made of the Amalekites in the chapter referred to.

The witness was then called in, and asked if he was willing, upon reconsideration, to answer the question. The witness said, that he must decline answering the question, as it would be followed by others.

In answer to a question from Mr. Peel, the witness said that the words of Scripture were only used as tokens of recognition among the members of the Orange Lodges, and for no practical purposes.

The Committee divided on the question for reporting progress—Ayes, 72—Noes, 19. The House then resumed and adjourned.

NEW TRAVELLING POCKET ATLAS.

Just published, price 15s. plain, or 1l. coloured, half-bound.

PINNOCK'S NEW TRAVELLING POCKET ATLAS, for ENGLAND and WALES, consisting of neat and correct Maps of EVERY COUNTY, on a novel and improved plan, and an excellent Map of LONDON and its ENVIRONS, for a circuit of twenty-five miles, with a copious and useful Appendix,—London; printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

DR. CHALMERS ON ENGLISH PAUPERISM.—Just published,

THE CHRISTIAN and CIVIC ECONOMY of LARGE TOWNS. By T. CHALMERS, D.D.—No. 14. On the likeliest Means for the Abolition of Pauperism in England.—No. 15. On the likeliest Parliamentary Means for the Abolition of Pauperism in England.—No. 16. On the likeliest Parochial Means for the Abolition of Pauperism in England. These Numbers complete the Second Volume of this Work; and may be had in boards, price 8s. 6d. Also, lately published,

DR. CHALMERS' SPEECH, delivered on the 21st of May, 1822, before the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland, explanatory of the measures which have been successfully pursued in St. John's Parish, Glasgow, for the extinction of its compulsory Pauperism. With an Appendix. 8vo. price 2s. 6d.—Printed for Chalmers and Collins, Glasgow; and G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London.

Just published, price 7s. 6d. boards,

A LETTER, addressed to the Rev. T. S. HUGHES, Fellow of Emmanuel College, Cambridge. By EDMUND HENRY BARKER, Esq. of Thetford, Norfolk. Occasioned by the perusal of the "Address to the people of England in the Cause of the Greeks." Fourth edition, with considerable additions and corrections.

"To relieve the oppressed is the most glorious act a man is capable of; it is in some measure doing the business of God and Providence."—Dean Swift's Thoughts on Various Subjects, Works, iv. 297.

Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

Just published, in Three Vols. 8vo. price 1l. 16s. boards.

A GENERAL and HISTORICAL VIEW of CHRISTIANITY; comprehending its Origin and Progress, the leading Doctrines and Forms of Polity founded on it, and the effect which it has produced on the Moral and Political State of Europe. By GEORGE COOK, D.D. F. R. S. E. Author of the "History of the Reformation of Scotland," the "History of the Church of Scotland," &c. Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London; and Bell and Bradfute, and Oliver and Boyd, Edinburgh.

MAWE'S GARDENER'S CALENDAR.

Just published, in 12mo. price 8s. bound, a New Edition of

EVERY MAN HIS OWN GARDENER; being a new and much more Complete GARDENER'S CALENDAR and GENERAL DIRECTORY than any one hitherto published. Containing Directions for all Work necessary in the Kitchen Garden, Fruit Garden, Flower Garden, Pleasure Garden, Shrubberies, &c. Green-houses, Hot-houses, Vineries, &c. for every month in the year; and best Practical Directions for Raising, Propagating, and Forcing, in each department; and also relative to Soil and Situation. To which is added, a Complete Systematic Catalogue of Plants. By THOMAS MAWE and JOHN ABERCROMBIE.—The Twenty-second edition, brought down to the present state of Horticultural Knowledge.—Printed for C. and J. Rivington; J. Cuthell; J. Nunn; J. Scatcherd; Longman and Co.; T. Cadell; J. Richardson; J. M. Richardson; Baldwin and Co.; G. and W. B. Whittaker; Harding and Co.; J. Mawman; Sherwood and Co.; J. Booker; Harvey and Darton; S. Bagster; W. Stewart; T. Hamilton; G. Cowie; R. S. Kirby; Ogle, Duncan and Co.; R. Saunders; R. Scholey; E. Edwards; and Simpkin and Marshall.

TO SCHOOLMASTERS, TEACHERS, &c.

Just published, and may be had Gratis,

A NEW and Complete CATALOGUE of SCHOOL BOOKS, in various Languages, Alphabetically and Systematically arranged.—Published by G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave Maria-lane.

EARLY EDUCATION.

Just published, dedicated, by permission, to her Royal Highness the Duchess of Kent, in 12mo. price 8s. boards. The Second Edition of EARLY EDUCATION; or, The Management of Children considered, with a View to their future Character. By Miss APPLETON, Author of "Private Education," &c. Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

"No mother will open this Volume without wishing to peruse it throughout; nor can she arrive at the conclusion without being benefited by the author's remarks."—New Monthly Magazine, August 1820.

Also, by the same Author,

The POOR GIRL'S HELP to a KNOWLEDGE of the FIRST PRINCIPLES of the CHRISTIAN RELIGION, and to the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper. Second Edition, price 2s. 6d. boards.

Just published, in 2 vols. 12mo. price 12s. boards,

SELECTIONS of ITALIAN POETRY, from the most celebrated works of Tasso, Arlosto, Dante, and Petrarch; for the use of Students in the Italian language; exhibiting the grammatical order of the words in the original, and illustrated with English Notes. By F. B. DEFERARI.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane. Also, by the same Author,

1. A CATECHISM of ITALIAN GRAMMAR; designed as an easy Introduction to the knowledge of that Language; 18mo. sewed, price 9d.

2. An ELEMENTARY GRAMMAR of the ITALIAN TONGUE; in Twenty-two Lessons; with Dialogues and Exercises. 12mo. bound, price 5s.

Just published, in 3 volumes, 12mo. price 21s. boards,

SEVENTY-SIX. By the Author of "Logan."

"Our country!—right or wrong."

"However successful an author may be, he will be a hypocrite or a fool, if he pretend to feel any gratitude to the public for their favour. He ought to remember that the obligation is as much their's as his, and that they would see him and his family perish, inch by inch, in starvation and wretchedness, before they would buy his book, unless they had their money's worth."—Vide Author's Preface.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

Just published, in 8vo. price 9s. sewed.

AHASUERUS, the WANDERER; a Dramatic Legend; in Six Parts.—By the Author of Sketches in Hindoostan, and other Poems.

"Wherefore is light given to him that is in misery, and life unto the bitter in soul; who long for death but it comes not, and dig for it more than hidden treasure: who would rejoice exceedingly and be glad if they could find the grave?—Job.

Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

Just published, in foolscap 8vo. price 6s. boards,

THE Second Volume of SPECIMENS of the RUSSIAN POETS. Translated by JOHN BOWRING, F.L.S. With Preliminary Remarks and Biographical Notices.—Printed for G. & W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

Just published, in 2 vols. crown 8vo. price 20s. boards,

HERALDIC ANOMALIES; or, Rank Confusion in our Orders of Precedence. With Disquisitions, Moral, Philosophical, and Historical, on all the existing Orders of Society. BY IT MATTERS NOT WHO.

Omne tulit punctum qui miscuit utile dulci

Lectorem delectando pariterque monendo.—Horace.

Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

"The author of this Publication is a man of extensive reading, a classical scholar, a gleaner of choice things, a bit of a humorist, and a very entertaining literary companion."—Literary Gazette, May 10.

Just published, in 2 vols. 12mo. price 15s. boards,

A HISTORY of ANCIENT INSTITUTIONS, CUSTOMS, and INVENTIONS; selected and abridged from the Beytrage zur Geschichte der Erfindungen of Professor BECKMANN, of the University of Gottingen. With various important Additions.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

"These two little volumes present such a mass of the useful and entertaining, that we should be puzzled to name their parallel. Beckmann's great work is rich mines of intelligence on almost every possible subject of research, curiosity, or amusement; and the Editor of the English Abridgment has not only exercised a sound discretion upon his original, but has assembled much interesting information of his own.—Literary Gazette, March 8, 1823.

TO TIMBER-MERCHANTS, BUILDERS, SURVEYORS, AND OTHERS.

Just published, in 12mo. price 8s. bound, a Second Edition of

THE MEASURER'S ASSISTANT; or, Mensuration made Easy; by a new set of Tables, which shew at one point of view the superficial or solid contents in feet, inches, parts, &c. of most kinds of superficies and solids, either square, round, or unequal sided; also the reducing of Deals to the standard, with the standard weight; with other useful and original Tables. By WILLIAM TAYLOR, Land Surveyor.—Printed for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane, London; and Beilby and Knotts, Birmingham.

TO PARISH OFFICERS, &c.

Just published, in a neat size, price 5s. 6d. sewed,

THE CHURCHWARDEN'S and OVERSEER'S GUIDE and DIRECTOR; written and arranged for the Use of Parish Officers and others, desirous of acquiring Parochial Information; on an entirely new System, in which every branch of Parish Business, and other Matters relating thereto, and the various Duties of Parish Officers, are familiarly and minutely explained. By J. ASHDOWNE, Member of the Honourable Society of Lincoln's Inn. Fourth Edition. To which are added, Useful Extracts from the late Vestry Act.—Printed for G and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane. Also, by the same Author,

The PARISH POORS-RATE BOOK, for Overseers of the Poor; being an approved and convenient Plan for the Assessment for the Relief of the Poor; and containing proper Directions for completing the Assessment, the adjusting of Disputes, and the manner of proceeding to recover the Amount of the Rate by Distress, &c. In post 4to. price 3s. in red sheep.

The PARISH OFFICER'S ALPHABETICAL REGISTER, shewing the names of paupers receiving occasional or permanent parochial relief, &c. price 2s. 6d. sewed.

Shortly will be published, in foolscap octavo,

MY NOTE-BOOK, for 1823; or, the Agricultural Question; a Satirical Poem. By WILFRED WOODFALL, ESQ. Author of My Note Book; or, Sketches from the Gallery of St. Stephen's.

"Fery good, I will make a prief of it in my Note-Book, and we will afterwards 'ork upon the cause with as great discreetly as we can."—Shakspeare.

Printing for G. and W. B. Whittaker, Ave-Maria-lane.

PRICE OF STOCKS AT THE CLOSE, SATURDAY.

Thursday was the settling-day for the British Securities, and the close of one of the most extensive accounts that has been known for years, the fluctuations during the time it has been open having been about 7 per cent. Several defaulters have been declared to a considerable amount, and the Bears have been severe sufferers. Consols for Account opened at 80¾ and closed at 80¾. In the Foreign Market, Columbian Bonds have been as low as 57¾.

3 per Cent. Red. . .	79¾ ¾	India Bonds	38
3 per Cent. Consols	80¾	Exchequ. Bills, 2d 1000l.	17 19
3½ per Cent. ditto . .	91¾	Ditto	500l.
4 per Cent.	96⅝ 97¾	Small
New 4 per Cent. . .	100⅜	Con. for Acc.	80⅜ ¾ ¾ ¾
Long Annuities .	20⅛

Letters from Paris quote the prices of French Stock as follow:—

FRENCH FUNDS, May 22.

5 per Ct. Con. 22 Sept. .	88-80	Bank Sh. Div. 1 July
Recon. Div. 22 Sept. . . .		Ex. Lond. 1mo.	3mo. 26-15

The Neapolitan 5 per Cents. Div. were at

THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.—On Monday, Othello—Tuesday, the Lord of the Manor—Wednesday, Venice Preserved—Thursday, The Hypocrite—Friday, Town and Country.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.—Monday, As you like it—Tuesday, The Provoked Husband—Wednesday, School for Scandal—Thursday, Clari—Friday, King John.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.

MISS STEPHENS respectfully informs her Friends and the Public, that her BENEFIT will take place on TUESDAY NEXT, when will be revived Burgoyne's Opera of THE LORD OF THE MANOR. Trumore, Mr. Durham; Rashly, Mr. Horn; Annette, Miss Stephens; Moll Faggon, Mr. Lieton. After which, a Concert by the following eminent Performers, who have kindly offered their services—Mr. Braham, Mr. Horn, Mr. Begrez, Mr. Bochsa, Mr. Puzzi, Madame Camporeze, Miss Stephens, and Mademoiselle Caradori. To which will be added, the Farce of MONSIEUR TONSON. Tonson, Mr. Gattie. Tickets and Places to be had of Miss Stephens, No. 1, Connaught-terrace, Edgware-road; and of Mr. Spring, at the Box Office.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.

FOR the BENEFIT of MR. BLANCHARD and MR. CONNOR, On TUESDAY NEXT, The Provoked Husband, or a Journey to London; Lord Townly, Mr. C. Kemble; John Moody, Mr. Blanchard; after which, The Irish Tutor, or New Lights: Terry O'Rourke, Mr. Connor; Dr. Phill, Mr. Blanchard; to which will be added, The Libertine; Don Juan, Mr. Connor; Leporello, Mr. Blanchard.—Tickets to be of Mr. Blanchard, 22, Broad-court, Long Acre; of Mr. Connor, 4, Bedford-street, Bedford-square; and of Mr. Brandon, at the Box-office, Hart-street.

THEATRE ROYAL, COVENT-GARDEN.

FOR the BENEFIT of MR. YATES and MRS. GIBBS. On WEDNESDAY NEXT, 28th MAY, 1823, The School for Scandal; Sir Peter Teazle, Mr. W. Farren; Sir Oliver Surface, Mr. Fawcett; Joseph Surface, Mr. Yates; Charles Surface, Mr. C. Kemble; Mrs. Candour, Mrs. Gibbs; after which, Tea and Turn Out, or Performers and Fashionables, in which Mr. Yates, Mrs. Gibbs, and Miss M. Tree will perform; to which will be added, Giovanni in London, or the Libertine Reclaimed; Don Giovanni, Madame Vestris; Leporello, Mr. Keeley; Mr. Florentine Finnikin, Mr. Yates.—Tickets to be had of Mr. Yates, 69, Upper Charlotte street, Rathbone-place; of Mrs. Gibbs, 5, Melina-place; and of Mr. Brandon, at the Box-office of the Theatre.

THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.

FOR the BENEFIT of MR. LISTON, on MONDAY, JUNE 2, The Africans, or War, Love, and Duty; Henry Augustus Mug, Mr. Liston. A variety of Serious and Comic Songs. To conclude with Family Jars: Delph, Mr. Liston.—Tickets to be had of Mr. Liston, 27, Soho-square; and of Mr. Spring, at the Box-office.

THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.

MRS. DAVISON'S BENEFIT.—Mrs. Davison has the honour to announce to her Friends and the Public that her Benefit is fixed for Wednesday, June 4th, when will be represented a favourite Comedy, together with a variety of Entertainments, that will be expressed in future Bills and advertisements.—Tickets and Places to be had of Mrs. Davison, Crescent-place, Burton Crescent, and of Mr. Sams, St. James's-street.

NEW THEATRE ROYAL DRURY LANE.

MR. ELLISTON'S NIGHT will take place on THURSDAY, JUNE 5, when a variety of Entertainments will be represented, in which Mr. Elliston, and all the other principal Performers will appear.—Tickets and places may be procured of Mr. Elliston, at No. 9, Stratford-place; and of Mr. Spring, at the Box-office.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT GARDEN.

MISS FOOTE'S BENEFIT, on THURSDAY, JUNE, 5, 1823. By particular desire, the Tragedy of Virginius, Virginius Mr. Macready, Icilius Mr. C. Kemble, and Virginia by Miss Foote; after which, (also by particular desire,) the comic piece of Matrimony, Delaval, second and last time, Mr. Macready, and Clara by Miss Foote, in which character she will introduce a most popular song and waltz; in the course of the evening several songs by Miss Paton and Miss M. Tree. The whole to conclude with a revived and very favourite Melo Drama, the principal characters by Mr. W. Farren, Mr. Abbott, Mrs. Vining, and Mr. Farley, Mrs. Davenport, and Miss Foote; with the very celebrated Dance from the grand romance of Cherry and Fair Star. Private boxes, places for the boxes, and tickets to be had of Miss Foote, 34, Keppel-street, Russel square, and of Mr. Brandon, at the Box-office.

THEATRE ROYAL, DRURY LANE.

MR. TERRY respectfully informs the Public and his Friends, that his BENEFIT is fixed for MONDAY, the 9th JUNE, when will be performed a Favourite Play, in which Mr. Kean and Mr. Young will perform, with a variety of other Entertainments, combining the utmost strength of the Drury Lane Company.—Tickets and Places for the Boxes, to be had of Mr. Spring, at the Box Office; and of Mr. Terry, No. 13, Alfred-place, Bedford-square.

THEATRE ROYAL COVENT-GARDEN.

MRS. CHATTERLEY has the honour of making known to her Friends and the Public, that her BENEFIT is appointed for TUESDAY, the 10th of JUNE, when will be performed a favourite COMEDY, and other Entertainments.—Tickets and Places for the Boxes to be had of Mr. Brandon, at the Box-office, and of Mrs. Chatterley, No. 13, Craven-street, Strand.

THE BRITISH MERCURY and WEDNESDAY'S EVENING POST, is the ONLY WEDNESDAY EVENING PAPER IN LONDON; and as a Companion or Supplement to JOHN BULL, or any of the Sunday Papers is invaluable; giving copious details of all that has transpired from Monday Morning to the Hour of Publication on Wednesday Evening. This Paper is conducted in the same high tone as JOHN BULL, is contributed to by the same writers, and is possessed of the same fearless intrepidity in speaking truth, and calling things by their right names.—Printed and sold by E. Stackwell, 11, Johnson's-court, Fleet street, by whom, and by all Newsmen, orders are received.

NOTICES TO CORRESPONDENTS.

We are greatly in arrears with our corresponding friends, but hope, in our next, to relieve ourselves from the appearance of neglect of their favours.

The child of our adoption, the BRITISH MERCURY, and WEDNESDAY'S EVENING POST, thrives gloriously, and we take leave to thank our friends for the great support it has received.

A MONDAY'S EDITION, containing the LATEST NEWS, the STOCK LIST, the LONDON MARKETS, and the STATE OF THE COUNTRY MARKETS by that Morning's Post, is published at Three o'Clock.

JOHN BULL.

LONDON, MAY 25.

WE are happy to state that HIS MAJESTY is so much recovered as to have announced his Royal intention of visiting ASCOT RACES on the 10th of next month.

WE are compelled to postpone our remarks upon the Somerset House Exhibition till next week, but we cannot hesitate here to acknowledge the receipt of a letter from MR. LONSDALE, the artist who painted the DUKE OF SUSSEX, and of whose application to the hanging committee we took notice, as well as their reply to him.

MR. LONSDALE, in a modest gentlemanly letter, which disarms criticism, informs us that such an occurrence as the one we have described did not take place, and we are of course bound to believe his assertion. When we tell MR. LONSDALE that we had the story from one of the gentlemen who piqued himself upon the answer alleged to have been sent, his surprise will perhaps be greater than it was when he first heard our version of the story. It is quite impossible for us to explain farther, nor is the individual who enjoyed the joke aware when he committed himself. We are everywhere, our eyes and ears are in all circles;—we can only assure MR. LONSDALE of the correctness of our statement, as we received it from the very best authority.

SOME very extraordinary doctrines appear to have been sported in the House of Commons on Friday night, during the examination of SIR ABRAHAM BRADLEY KING, Bart. who, it seems to us—for we know what it is—had a narrow escape from being committed to Newgate—not for using the word apology instead of explanation, but because he resolutely refused to break his oath.

We suppose that the House of Commons has the power to compel a man to violate a sacred obligation most solemnly entered into; first, because MR. CANNING and MR. PEEL say it has—and they are Secretaries of State, and must know; and secondly, because we would not venture to imagine the House of Commons incapable of doing anything it chose to do. But if the same conversation upon oaths had occurred in any other place, and the persons who maintained such conversation any other than Members of the British Parliament, we should take the liberty of characterizing both persons and conversation, in terms very different from those which—(short as the Session may be)—we feel it right to adopt upon the present occasion.

MR. BROUGHAM considered the oaths taken by SIR ABRAHAM BRADLEY KING as "mockery and farce"—SIR ABRAHAM felt the matter differently, and in a fair, manly, and undaunted manner refused to betray the secret he had sworn to keep, or violate the oath he had solemnly taken.

MR. BROUGHAM was for administering a dose of Newgate to the worthy Baronet—the disrespect he had shewn to the House was contained in these words, "I feel every respect "for this great Assembly, I acknowledge every power this "House has, but that of standing between me and my Creator "—I must take the consequence."

MR. BROUGHAM asked whether the witness intended to answer yes or no to the question?—"We don't regard the "oath as a solemnity." said BROUGHAM.

SIR ABRAHAM B. KING answered distinctly—NO!

He was then ordered to withdraw; and it was curious enough to perceive the different modes suggested by different Honourable Members of getting out of the scrape into which the Hon. and Learned Member for Winchelsea had got the Honourable House.

MR. SECRETARY CANNING objected to committing SIR ABRAHAM to Newgate—because it would be fatal to CONCILIATION (that's the word) if he went back a triumphant martyr!!!

The Morning Papers tell us, that MR. PLUNKETT said—pray mark this, ye readers, who happen not to be Lawyers—"that he thought there was a mode of getting rid of the difficulty. The witness supposed he was obliged to answer, yes or no; it did not occur to the witness that he MIGHT SAY—HE DID NOT RECOLLECT!"

