WORLD WAR II COMES HOME

When called to serve their country, they answered. When asked to fill a gap, they gave. Recognized decades after they answered the call, the Women Airforce Service Pilots (WASP) of World War II ferried airplanes cross-country and trained on Texas fields (and other places) from 1942 to 1944. The WASPs, who continue to meet throughout the United States and share their stories, will visit TWU on Thurs., April 20, as a group for a special dedication and other activities.

"The WASP will donate a life-size bronze statue of a woman pilot to the TWU library, where the Woman's Collection became the official archives for the WASP organization in 1972," said Elizabeth Snapp (library). "The Woman's Collection has been steadily receiving the records and memorabilia of the WASP organization and individual women pilots ever since that time."

The dedication, scheduled at 2 p.m. on the library's grounds, will give students, faculty, staff and members of the community an opportunity to attend the statue's unveiling and to meet the first women who were assigned to fly government planes. The Pfeifer Estes statue was commissioned by the WASP organization from a bequest left by Ziggy Hunter of Dallas, who worked briefly as a civilian pilot instructor for the WASP. The figure of the woman pilot, sculpted by WASP pilot trainee and Dallas resident Jewel Pfeifer Estes, will stand on a granite base on the second floor of the Blagg-Huey Library, near the Woman's Collection and the rotunda. Noted local sculptor Mike Cunningham, spouse of TWU faculty member Dr. Donna Cunningham (Education and Human Ecology), constructed the statue's base.

Approximately 50 to 75 former WASP members plan to attend the ceremony, and they also will join the campus community at the complimentary picnic hosted by the TWU National Alumnae Association, following Honors Convocation. During the statue dedication, Dr. Carol Surles (president's office) will accept the gift on behalf of the university. Dr. John Flohr (performing arts, music) will play "Taps," and a group of women veterans from TWU led by Alice Curtis will serve as color guard. For more information, call Dawn Letson at ext. 3742.

In 1942, when U.S. planes and pilots were shipped to Europe and the Pacific, a program began that was designed to help alleviate an acute shortage of pilots. The purpose of the program was to train pilots who could ferry airplanes from factories to the coast within the continental U.S. A call went out for women, ages 21 to 35, who held a private pilot's license; 25 of the most experienced pilots immediately joined the WAFS (Women Air Ferrying Squadron) with little training. Another 1,176 progressed through classes during a six-month training program over the next two years.

The WAFS and the women's pilot training program then merged and became the Women Airforce Service Pilots, under the direction of famed aviatrixes Jacqueline Cochran and Nancy Harkness Love. Toward the end of the war, when large numbers of pilots returned from Europe, the WASP program was disbanded in December 1944. During the program's brief history, women aviators proved themselves capable pilots of the U.S. Army's squadrons of airplanes.

HARLAN MILLER LECTURE SERIES SCHEDULED

The TWU department of mathematics and computer science will present the 1995 Harlan C. Miller Memorial Lecture Series in Mathematics April 17 and 18. The two-day event will feature speaker Robert L. Devaney, a professor in the department of mathematics at Boston University. Devaney also directs the Dynamical Systems and Technology Project, sponsored by the National Science Foundation. The schedule includes the following lectures:

- The Chaos Game and Other Fractal Pursuits -- April 17, 9:30 a.m., ACT 501;
- Fractal Geometry of the Mandelbrot Set I -- April 17, 3 p.m., ACT 301;
- Chaos, Fractals and Dynamics -- April 17, 7:30 p.m., Hubbard Hall banquet room (preceded by a dinner at 7 p.m.); and
- Fractal Geometry of the Mandelbrot Set II -- April 18, 9:30 a.m., ACT 301.

The Monday and Tuesday lectures at 9:30 a.m. or 3 p.m. are free and open to the public. Students may attend the Monday evening lecture without dinner at no charge. For dinner ticket information and reservations, call Dr. Rose Marie Smith (mathematics and computer science) at ext. 2166.

Devaney, author of many books and research papers, has lectured throughout the world and has received awards for distinguished teaching. He has produced a number of short films "computed on a variety of supercomputers," according to Smith, that depict the transition to chaos in dynamical systems, with support from NSF.

The Harlan C. Miller Memorial Lecture Series in Mathematics was established in 1982 to honor one of TWU's outstanding faculty and administrators. Miller was professor emeritus and chair of the department of mathematics until her retirement in 1966; she died in 1981. Funding for the series has been provided by the Trammel Crow Family Foundation. Miller earned her bachelor's degree from Wellesley College, her master's degree from Columbia University and her doctorate from the University of Texas at Austin; all were in mathematics. She was a faculty member at TWU from 1942-1968.

HONORS CONVOCATION INVITATION ANNOUNCED

Faculty, staff and students from Denton, Dallas and Houston, as well as members of the community, are invited to attend Honors Convocation on Thurs., April 20, at 10:30 a.m. in Margo Jones Performance Hall. The event -- which celebrates excellence in education and service among members of the campus community -- will feature Dr. Betty L. Siegel, president of Kennesaw State College, as keynote speaker. Classes on the Denton campus will be dismissed from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. "I hope that all students, faculty and staff will attend convocation," said Dr. Carol Surles (president's office) in a memo to the campus. "Offices have the option to remain open."

Siegel, the first woman to head an institution in the 34-unit University System of Georgia, has been president at KSC since 1981. Under her administration, the college continues to achieve record enrollments and national recognition. Noted as a "college on the move" by researchers at George Mason University in 1984-85, KSC has been named several times a "rising star" in its region by U.S. News and World Report. In 1987, the Council for Advancement and Support of Education (CASE) selected Kennesaw State College as one of the top three colleges in its national competition, which focused on "The President and the Public" -- an honor that garnered Siegel special recognition for her contributions to the institution's community service.

The keynote convocation speaker holds a bachelor's degree in English and history from Wake Forest University, a master's degree in education from the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill and a doctorate from Florida State University. Her academic specialities are in the areas of child psychology and administration. She also holds an associate's degree from Cumberland College. Siegel completed two years of post-doctoral study in clinical child psychology at Indiana University and holds honorary doctorates from Cumberland College (Kentucky), Miami University (Ohio) and Eastern Kentucky University. Before coming to KSC, she served as dean of the School of Education and Psychology and professor of psychology at Western Carolina University in Cullowhee, N.C. She also was a faculty member and administrator at several other institutions of higher education.

During the program, recipients of the Cornaro Award (for a senior faculty member) and the Mary Mason Lyon Award (for junior faculty) are recognized for excellence in scholarship, teaching and service. Outstanding staff members are honored, as well as the TWU National Alumnae Association's outstanding seniors and graduate students. Several student leaders and the 1995 distinguished alumni will be introduced.

Faculty and academic administrators are encouraged to march in the procession and to wear academic regalia. Student members of honorary organizations are welcome to join the procession and to be seated in the center section of the hall, directly behind faculty members. The procession line will form at 10:20 a.m. on the Pioneer Woman circle in front of the music building. Program participants, honorees and others who will be seated on stage will precede the academic procession into Margo Jones.

TWU CARES HELPS FIGHT BREAST CANCER

Minority women -- particularly African Americans -- are developing breast cancer at a rate that has increased almost 3 percent from 1989 to 1992, while the rate for white women decreased 6 percent during that same period. National Cancer Institute statistics state that more African-American women (particularly those over age 50) are dying from breast cancer.

Educating the public and providing cancer screenings are both part of National Minority Cancer Awareness Week, which will be observed the week of April 16. The TWU CARES Health Center is joining forces with other health professionals and organizations across the country to fight the disease and to increase awareness about breast cancer among all minority communities, which continue to have disproportionately high cancer mortality rates.

Women in Denton and surrounding communities should know:

- Women age 50 or older are the most likely to develop breast cancer.
- A breast examination and mammogram can help detect cancer early.
- When cancer is detected early, a woman has a better chance for successful treatment.

TWU CARES Health Center offers free check-ups, including a breast exam and mammogram, for women who are age 50 or older and who meet income requirements. For example, a single woman can earn up to $14,720 annually and receive free services; a woman from a family of two can make up to $19,680 per year to receive these services at no cost. For more information, call TWU CARES Health Center at (817) 382-4794. Interested persons who call in the evening or on weekends may leave a message on the center's answering machine.

HOME COMING FUN IS UP FOR BID IN '95

Because traditions do last a lifetime, homecoming activities for April 20-23, 1995, are an extension of the friends, fun and learning that TWU graduates experienced when they were here. Some older traditions will be observed: reunion dinners on Friday and Saturday, plus corn huskin' activities and a lantern parade. New traditions -- special lectures, Honors Convocation, plays and other parties -- also will offer alums, faculty, staff and students an opportunity to be a part of TWU's rich history.

Several new ideas will be incorporated into homecoming festivities this year, too:

■ A silent auction -- The silent auction, part of the TWU National Alumnae Association's annual homecoming boutique, will allow the NAA to provide more financial support to the university (in ways other than scholarship funds).

■ Free Southwest Airlines flight passes -- Paid registrants for homecoming will be eligible to win two free passes good for a roundtrip flight between any two cities on Southwest Airlines. The registration and processing fee for homecoming participants is $20 per person; some homecoming events require additional fees.

■ TWU American Girl doll -- Dressed in TWU's uniform, this nostalgic doll will go home with one lucky person. Money raised from tickets sales for the doll will be used to provide funds for more students to participate in homecoming activities next year.

■ 50-year reunion pin -- Homecoming participants who are members of the 50-year anniversary class and who are paid registrants will receive a complimentary 50-year commemorative pin. Additional commemorative pins are available for $25 each (this price includes postage and handling).

Items up for bid in the silent auction include: a quilt crafted in the 1930s by Artie Myers, mother of TWU donor and alumna Frances deCordova; a wardrobe for the American Girl doll, handcrafted and donated by Dr. Sharon Underwood and Dr. Cindy Istook (both of fashion and textiles); a 14-karat-gold alumnae pendant donated by ArtCarved Master Jewelers; a four-to-five-day vacation in Santa Fe during the summer of 1995 (in the comfort of a two-bedroom, two-bath duplex contributed by TWU NAA's president, Mary Beth Scull); and a gourmet dinner for two with a menu designed especially for the winner, served in that person's home (alcoholic beverages are not included; blackout dates may apply; a $250 value donated by Fremaux Catering and Specialty Foods of Denton).

Registration for homecoming must be received by April 17; no tickets will be sold at the door. For more information, contact Donna Ryan (alumnae office) at ext. 2586.

UPDATE ON PIONEER ATHLETICS

The chant grows louder -- "Three-peat! Three-peat!" -- as members of the TWU Pioneers gymnastics team prepare to defend their two-time national championship title at the upcoming USA Gymnastics Collegiate National Championships this week, April 13-15. Hosted by TWU, the competition will be held in the coliseum at the University of North Texas. Event passes and tickets for individual sessions can be purchased through the department of athletics at TWU; call ext. 2378 for details.

The team's schedule for the week looks like this:

- Mon., April 10 -- practice at TWU, 5 to 9 p.m., DGL;
- Tues., April 11 -- stretching and conditioning at TWU, 3 to 4:15 p.m., DGL;
- Wed., April 12 -- practice at UNT coliseum, 8:30 a.m. to noon;
- Thurs., April 13 -- women's preliminary competition, session II, 7:30 p.m., UNT (including senior Becky Faulkner's defense of her national all-around title);
- Fri., April 14 -- women's collegiate championships, 7:30 p.m., UNT (including TWU's defense of its national team title);
- Sat., April 15 -- women's individual finals, 7 p.m., UNT.

On Wed., April 12, TWU will host the USA Gymnastics National Collegiate Championships banquet at 7 p.m. in the southwest dining room of Hubbard Hall. Tickets are $15 per person and must be purchased through athletics by noon on Mon., April 10 (today). Steve Nunno, Olympic and international gymnastics coach, will be the featured speaker. Other special guests will include Ron Gilmore, newly appointed USA Gymnastics men's program director; Bob Castleberry, mayor of the city of Denton; Dr. Carol Surles (president's office); and Phil Bronkhorst, president of First State Bank and co-chair of this year's Pioneer athletics scholarship campaign.

Nunno, the 1992 U.S. Olympic women's gymnastics head coach, has been involved in the sport for more than 25 years. He currently is the owner and head coach of Dynamo Gymnastics in Oklahoma City and Edmond, Okla.; he started the Dynamo Gymnastics Team program in 1985. Nunno has served on the USA national coaching staff since 1987; has coached American teams against more than a dozen different countries worldwide; and became an Olympic coach for the 1992 games in Barcelona, Spain. Shannon Miller, Nunno's prize pupil of eight years, won five Olympic medals and earned the distinction of being the most decorated U.S. Olympian of both the summer and winter games.

A brief note: The Pioneers tennis team has rescheduled a match against Collin County Community College for 10 a.m. today at 3:30 p.m. on the tennis courts. The match originally was scheduled for April 5 but was rained out.

Alex Spitzer and several members of his dance company will present an informal show of dance works on Tues., April 11, at 5:30 p.m., DGL 210, followed by a discussion. Spitzer, who is confined to a wheelchair, was born with arthrogryposis, a muscle and joint disorder which gives him limited use of his arms and legs. Since 1990, Spitzer has pursued his greatest dream -- dance -- and formed his own company at age 20. He has produced and performed in several concerts and, in February, his dance work "Firedance" was selected for the gala concert at the Southwest Central American College Dance Festival at Southwest Texas State University. The show is sponsored by TWU programs in dance and Gladys Keeton's adapted dance class; the event is free and open to the public. For information, call ext. 2085.

Reminder: The TWU office of admissions will host an open house at the TWU Institute of Health Sciences Houston Center on Tues., April 18, from 7 to 9 p.m., MGJ 724. "Prospective students -- high school seniors and transfer students -- who are considering TWU as part of their future will find this program informative," said Alisa Johnson (admissions). "Representatives from the Denton campus and the Houston center will discuss academic programs, admissions policies, financial aid, housing and other aspects of life as a student at TWU." For more information, call the admissions office in Houston at 8-4-2320.

Booktalk programs for children will be held April 11 and 18 from 6 to 8 p.m., SH first floor (library science library). Presented by the School of Library and Information Studies, the programs for 3rd-, 4th- and 5th-graders will feature four speakers each evening from Dr. Frances Dowd's class, "Youth Programs in Schools and Public Libraries." Each session will last about 25 minutes; for information, call Ruth Dishnow at ext. 2602.

Reminder: The TWU programs in dance will present its annual Spring Festival of Dance in two performances on Fri. and Sat., April 14-15, at 8 p.m. each evening in Margo Jones Performance Hall. "This exciting program contains much diversity and is performed by dancers from both the undergraduate and graduate dance programs," said Gayle Ziaks (performing arts, dance). Ticket prices are $6 for adults; $4 for TWU faculty, staff and alumni, senior citizens and non-TWU students with identification; and $2 for TWU students and children. Tickets will be sold only at the concert. For more information, call Ziaks at ext. 2085.

Diversity Days, sponsored by the office of student activities, will be held the week of April 17. "Mirror of the World" is this year's theme. Festivities kick off on Monday at 11 a.m. with an outdoor cultural festival featuring dishes from other nations; from 6 to 8 p.m., an African American-Latina/Latino workshop will be held in SC 105. On April 18, a cultural fair will be held from 12:30 to 1:15 p.m. in the Student Center. The fair will feature students modeling their native costumes. At 1:15 p.m. in the Underground, a film titled "Japanese American Women" will be shown. A panel discussion titled "International Student Perspectives" will be held at 6 p.m. in SC 106. For more information, call ext. 3611.
